They can not believe themselves liable so that the privilege of carrying on commerce, which has been repeatedly granted to them agreable to the laws and by the Government of this country, could be thus abruptly withdrawn without any reason of reproach therefor. In their legitimate confidence in the established state of affairs, they have established places of business wherein capital of a considerable amount is employed and to which the application of such a measure would be their ruin. It would constitute a violation, disastrous for them, of an acquired right, and would thus be in contradiction to the principle of non-retroactivity universally admitted in the matter of law and administration and particularly proclaimed by the Haitian Constitution (Article 17).

Your excellency sets forth in your letter that: "the license granted by the President of the Republic is only valid for one year and may be granted or refused." But I must observe to you on this subject that it would be absolutely abnormal that the refusal could be made by the fact of the existence of a Presidential prerogative and without any special and justified cause which may be charged against the merchant thus struck by so serious a measure.

Finally, and above all the detailed arguments and discussion of texts, this affair is particularly dominated by the high sense of justice, equity and conformity with international usages, such as affirm themselves more and more in modern civilization. I again invoke, and most earnestly, these considerations for the defense of my fellow-citizens.

Basing myself on what I have just had the honor to set forth to you, it becomes my duty to protest against the possibility of the application of a measure so unfriendly to foreigners. I shall make a report of the situation to my Government and if the decision in question is maintained, I must notify it of the utility of giving the greatest publicity to the fact that the liberty and security of commerce had received a serious blow in Haiti.

Please accept [etc.].

File No. 838.111/54.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

Department of State,
Washington, January 20, 1912.

Sir: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your despatches Nos. 977 and 989, of November 25th, and December 19th, respectively, with regard to the recent action of the Haitian Government in refusing to renew the licenses of Syrian traders and in ordering them to liquidate their business by May 31st of this year.

This question has been under the careful consideration of the Department, which is impelled to conclude as a matter of right, that, if the law of 1903 is to be enforced, you should require that the Syrian firms in Haiti of American nationality be given an adequate time to wind up their affairs. You may also request that the Syrian firms of other nationalities which are acting as agents of or are debtors of American exporting firms be given this adequate time to liquidate their business. The Haitian Government now proposes to allow six months for this process. It has been alleged that this time is wholly insufficient and that it will be impossible to effect liquidation in that time without a great money loss to the Syrian firms and to their American creditors. If upon due investigation and consideration you are convinced that this allegation represents the fact, you will represent that the six month's period is inadequate and request that an adequate and reasonable time be allowed. It may be pointed out that in addition to Haiti's general obligation under the principles of international law to enforce such a law as the one in question reasonably, Haiti has put itself in justice and equity under an additional obligation to grant such a reasonable time for liquidation by its eight or nine years' permission to Syrians to do business in Haiti, notwithstanding the provisions of the law of 1903.

Should you find that discrimination is being exercised in the enforcement of the law of 1903,—that is to say, that the Haitian Government is permitting certain of the Syrians to do business in Haiti and denying the right to others—you are instructed to object to such discrimination and to demand an explanation of the Haitian Government, insisting that the law be uniformly enforced or not enforced at all.

In connection with this Government's general right in the matter your attention is called to a recent case in Panama in which the Government of Panama asserted its right to prohibit the entry into Panama of a naturalized citizen of the United States of Syrian nativity and the Department instructed the Legation that while it might exert all proper effort to obtain for the naturalized Syrian the most respectful and considerate treatment consonant with the necessary enforcement of the Panaman Immigration Law, the Department did not feel it advisable to take issue with the Government of Panama as to its right to enforce against naturalized American citizens of the designated nationalities of origin (Turkish, Chinese and Syrian) such an immigration law as the one in question, assuming that it was enforced without unnecessary hardship to the persons against whom it was directed. The Legation's attention was directed to the fact, referred to by the Panaman Foreign Office, that under its present immigration laws, it is the practice of the United States strictly to enforce the exclusion regulations directed against the Chinese, for example, irrespective of the consideration that the Chinese seeking admission to our territory may, at the time, owe allegiance to a power whose native subjects are insured the freest access to the United States territory.

In reply to your inquiry as to whether the Department entered into an understanding with Mr. Leger when he was Minister to the United States consenting to the exclusion from Haiti of any Americans of Syrian origin, you are informed that a careful search of the archives of the Department has produced no written evidence of such an understanding although it would appear not unlikely the Department may have made some such admission.

For your information and guidance in this matter there is enclosed herewith a copy of a memorandum of the Solicitor of this Department in which the rights of this Government are discussed at length.[1]

---

[1] Not printed.

As a matter of policy, of course, this Government has a deep interest in the present situation because of the fact that a very large percentage of American export trade carried on in Haiti is actually done through merchants of Syrian origin, and the enforcement of the present measures adopted by the Haitian Government would probably more severely injure American trade than any other foreign commerce. You therefore should informally endeavor to discourage the enforcement of this legislation, refraining carefully from asserting any position from which it might be necessary subsequently to recede because of the refusal on the part of the Haitian Government to acquiesce in your views.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 838.111/56.]

The British Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

BRITISH EMBASSY,
No. 42.] Washington, February 8, 1912.

SIR: I am directed by His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to communicate to you immediately the circumstances of the situation which have arisen in Hayti and which have been reported to me by cable. The Haytian Government called upon a considerable number of foreign merchants (more exactly, 114 in number according to a list that has been published) to liquidate their businesses by the end of May next, on the ground that trading licenses have been refused them in virtue of a law precluding Syrians from doing business in Hayti. A time limit which expires tomorrow, has further been fixed for the importation of goods by such firms. These measures have been persisted in, in spite of joint representations of the foreign representatives. It is considered possible that the action of the Haytian Government may have been to some extent influenced by foreign interests desirous of monopolising the Haytian market. Among the firms affected are important British interests and several United States citizens are also said to be concerned.

I am directed by His Majesty's Government to express to you the hope that your Government will at once use its influence with the Haytian Government in inducing them to abandon this policy, and that the United States Government will further instruct its representative in Hayti to join His Majesty's Consul-General in the strong representations which he has been instructed to make. These representations are to the effect that the licenses should be renewed to British firms immediately in every case where British nationality is clearly established; as His Majesty's Government will not submit to withdrawal of a right which British subjects have been accustomed to enjoy and regard the action of the Haytian Government as an offence against international comity. Further, that if redress is refused steps will be taken to secure fair treatment. His Majesty's Consul-General is instructed to make this formal demand with his colleagues, if they receive similar instructions in time, but to act independently if they do not do so.

I am further instructed to inform you that His Majesty's Government cannot submit to such treatment of British subjects and failing compliance of the Haytian Government will be obliged to send ships of war to the Port of Prince. They are desirous, however, of notifying the United States Government beforehand of this possible necessity in order that such action, if it becomes indispensable, may not be open to misinterpretation, and to assure you that His Majesty's Government have no other motive than to obtain the reversal of an unjust order and redress for British subjects.

I have [etc.]

James Bryce.

File No. 838.111/61.]

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

American Embassy,
No. 1026.] Port au Prince, February 12, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inform the Department that upon the receipt of its unnumbered instructions dated January 20, 1912, I took up with the Haitian Government the matter of refusing the licenses to those of Syrian origin.

Secretary Léger called according to appointment on the 7th and I read to him passages from the Department's instructions. I took the ground that as the Syrian Exclusion Act of 1903, which did not become a law until June 8, 1904, when it was promulgated, was not retroactive: in fact, Article 17 of the Constitution expressly forbids such legislation. I read with him the Exclusion Act, Article 2 of which makes provision for licensing those not affected by the law. I appealed to his sense of right and justice and said that at this time, when the Haitian Government is desirous of establishing a good name abroad, it would be unwise to attempt to carry out the decree requiring all of Syrian origin to liquidate their businesses.

As to the effect which the decree would have upon American commerce, he seemed to be interested and after more than an hour spent in talking the matter I suggested that with a view to aiding him it might be well for me to call upon the President and informally discuss the matter with him. Mr. Léger said that he would be pleased to have me do so.

I presented the case to the President in much the same way I had to Secretary Léger at my various interviews. I called the President's attention to the wording of the law, which I read to him, and said it was the intent of the law to prevent the arrival of Syrians after the law became effective and not to operate against those who were in business in Haiti when the law was enacted. I explained to him our method of naturalization and the control which the Department of State exercises over registration of naturalized citizens by consulates, etc. I also read to him passages from the Department's instructions, all of which appeared to have a favorable effect upon him.

The President said that Secretary Léger had talked with him on the question the day before and had told him of his (Secretary Léger's) interview with me. The President said that he desired to be within the bounds of the law and that, since my explanation, he now saw the matter in a different light. He said that, to show his appreciation of my presentation of the matter, he would agree to give licenses to such Americans of Syrian origin as I might certify were in Haiti and were naturalized prior to the enactment of the law.

I pointed out to the President that in accord with our naturalization laws a foreigner must forswear his allegiance to his government upon making application for United States citizenship and that a period of two years at least must elapse before he is given his final papers, and that these are not delivered except after the submission of certain evidence in substantiation of request for the same. As there are one or two Americans of Syrian origin whose final papers are dated 1904, I pointed out to the President that they must have declared their intentions at least in 1902 which was prior to the Exclusion Act; that such persons, therefore, did not become naturalized with an idea of evading the Exclusion Act and should be granted licenses. The President agreed to grant them licenses upon my request.

I then took up the matter of those who are Syrian. I showed the President certified copies of orders given American export houses for goods contracted for delivery late in 1912 and stated that it was impossible to obtain such goods in the open market. As the orders had been given to the factories and arrangements had been made for filling them, it would occasion a heavy loss to our exporters if these goods could not be shipped. I told the President that the execution of the decree refusing licenses would hurt our trade very much; that in reality he was playing into the hands of the German importers in Haiti who imported from Germany and Italy and were not friendly towards his Government; and as the President acknowledged that he realized the friendship of the United States for Haiti, I desired him to show it by granting a more reasonable time in which the Syrians might wind up their businesses if the Government decided that licenses would not be granted to them.

The President said he would grant an extension of time as a matter of justice to such as would prove that there was a necessity for the same. He said, however, that those who are still Syrian, meaning those not naturalized American or otherwise, must leave the country.

As soon as I have a complete list of the Americans of Syrian origin who are on the registers of our various consulates and agencies, I shall take the matter up further with the Haitian Government.

I have [etc.]

H. W. Furniss.

File No. 838.111/56.]

The Acting Secretary of State to the British Ambassador.

No. 1418.

Department of State,
Washington, February 16, 1912.

Excellency: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 8th instant, in which you communicate, as under instructions to do so, the circumstances of a situation that has arisen in Haiti by virtue of the intention of the Haitian Government to enforce certain laws precluding Syrians in that country from engaging in commerce, and that His British Majesty's Consul-General at Port au Prince has been instructed to make strong representations in protest in behalf of certain British interests disadvantageously affected. You express the hope that this Government will use its influence with the Haitian Government to induce it to abandon the policy it has entered upon, and you state, finally, that His Majesty's Government cannot submit to the withdrawal by the Haitian Government of the trading licenses that have been granted such Syrians as are British subjects.

In reply to your excellency I have the honor to say that after mature deliberation on the matter this Government, while always desirous of co-operating with His British Majesty's Government in every way possible, regrets to say that in this case it cannot see its way clear to take the action which His Majesty's Government suggests. This Government does not perceive upon what grounds it would be justified, in view of the applicable principles of international law, in disputing the right of Haiti to exclude from its territory persons classed as undesirable by its local law upon avowed considerations of economic and political necessity. And I would observe in this connection that while the present attempt at the enforcement of the law in question is not in terms a measure of exclusion and aims apparently only at the abrogation of trading privileges of the Syrians now in Haiti, a view of the terms of the law as a whole and of the consequences of the enforcement of the particular provisions now invoked leaves the Department with but little doubt that the law in question is an exclusion law identical, in the main, in principle with the Chinese exclusion law now on the statute books of this Government, and wholly identical in effect with the Asiatic exclusion laws which are to be found among the statutes of many other governments. Moreover, considering only the enforcement of the provisions now invoked there would seem, on principle, to be no difference between the enforcement of such provisions and the enforcement of the ordinary exclusion law.

But even leaving aside the general principles of international law, this Government is compelled to the conclusion stated; first, for the reason that there is at present no treaty between the United States and Haiti prescribing the rights of the citizens of the respective countries in the territory of the other; and, secondly, and more importantly, from the consideration that any different conclusion would, as has been intimated, be quite clearly inconsistent with our law practice and our policy in regard to Oriental immigration. And in view of the fact that the statutes of the United States which prohibit Chinese immigration specifically provide that the prohibitions of the acts shall apply to any Chinese person or any person of the Chinese race, whether a subject of China or of any other power, and the further fact that in practice Chinese are excluded from this country, irrespective of their allegiance at the time they seek admission, even when such allegiance is to a power whose native subjects are granted the freest access to the territory of the United States, it would seem hardly consistent for this Government to demand a suspension of the Haitian law in the case of persons of Syrian nativity who are naturalized American citizens. Moreover, it may not be inappropriate for me here to remark that seemingly the same policy and practice, in regard to Oriental immigration, obtain in the great majority of His British Majesty's colonies,—indeed, the exclusion laws of some of them, notably Australia and New Zealand, are perhaps even more drastic than the regulations of this Government. It would appear, therefore, in view of the established policy and the law and practice of this country as I have just described them, hardly open to this Government to assert that the present action of the Haitian Government is an offense against international comity.

I have the honor to say to Your Excellency, however, that on the 20th ultimo the American Minister at Port au Prince was instructed to require, on behalf of such Syrians as have become American citizens, that the law in question shall be reasonably enforced, and specifically to insist as a matter of right that the American citizens who come within the field of its operation shall be given a sufficient and reasonable time to liquidate their business.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 838.111/63.]

The American Ambassador to Turkey to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
No. 138.] Constantinople, February 16, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copy and translation of a note verbale received yesterday from the Sublime Porte, asking the assistance of the United States Government in securing from the Government of Haiti licenses to vendors of Ottoman nationality residing in the Island of Haiti.

I have [etc.];

WILLIAM W. ROCKHILL.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Ministry for Foreign Affairs to the American Embassy.

SUBLIME PORTE,
Constantinople, February 15, 1912.

The Imperial Ministry for Foreign Affairs is informed that the Haitian Government raises great difficulties in the matter of the renewal of licenses to retail merchants of foreign, and particularly of Ottoman, nationality.

As the Representative of the French Republic has already taken steps towards removing these difficulties, the Imperial Ministry will be obliged to the Embassy of the United States of America if it will kindly use its good offices with its Government to the end that the Representative of the United States in Haiti may be invited to join in these steps.

File No. 838.111/61.]

The Acting Secretary of State to the Minister of Haiti.

No. 7.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 5, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the matter which was the subject of our conversation on the occasion of your recent call at the Department, namely, the questions arising out of the proposed enforcement by the Government of Haiti of its law respecting the rights and privileges of Syrians in Haitian territory, I now have the honor to make more definite reply to your inquiries and to explain the present view of this Government with respect to the general situation.

As indicated in our conversation, this Government is not disposed to dispute, as a matter of right, the general right of the Government of Haiti to exclude from its territory persons classed as undesirable by its local laws, or to make and enforce such regulations concerning the exercise of the privileges granted such persons by Haitian laws as may be reasonable and proper under the circumstances, provided, of course, that the measures adopted by the Haitian Government conform to the applicable rules and principles of international law and to the law of Haiti. It should be stated, however, that aside from what may be termed the purely legal aspect of the matter, that is, the technical rights and obligations of interested Governments and individuals under the applicable rules of law, there would appear to be other phases of the situation caused by the enforcement of the Haitian law in question which the Government of Haiti might well take into consideration in order to arrive at a solution which shall best subserve all interests.

I would first observe that from the Department's information it appears that a large number of American manufacturing firms, who annually export to Haiti products valued at some millions of dollars, employ as their local Haitian agents the Syrian firms of American and other nationalities whose operation must cease if the Haitian law in question is to be enforced. Considering especially the case of American exporting firms, apart from the serious money loss which may easily be suffered by them from the non-fulfillment of contracts by their agents, even if a prolonged period for liquidation of the agents' affairs is granted by the Haitian Government, there is of course the further result that the elimination of the Syrian agents will disrupt this valuable American trade and tend inevitably to divert it eventually to other foreign channels. This circumstance naturally causes this Government to view with great regret the course of the Haitian Government under discussion, and I am loath to believe that a realization of the consequences just described will have no effect on the minds of the Haitian authorities in their deliberation upon the wisdom of that course.

It would seem that note should also be taken of the fact that, as you are informed, other interested Governments not only are as much concerned about the present situation as this Government, but are also apparently decided upon a policy of determined and insistent protest against the enforcement of the regulations in question. As was intimated in our conversation, this seems especially true in the case of the Government of Great Britain. In this connection I must observe in passing that if such protest is effective and the Haitian

Government is persuaded to grant trading privileges to any of the Syrians in Haiti, this Government may not of course suffer any discrimination against its nationals and must accordingly require that persons of the Syrian race of American allegiance shall be put upon the same footing as the nationals of other Governments.

In connection with the matter of the protests of the various foreign Governments concerned, I would further observe that it appears from the Department's information that those Governments and foreigners generally who are interested in Haitian commerce regard the enforcement of the law in question not only an unfriendly act but as an unjust one, and, accordingly, view the present policy of the Haitian Government with considerable animosity. The Department is further informed that this effect of the measures recently initiated seem to have raised some doubt in the minds of the responsible Haitian authorities as to their desirability and wisdom.

In conclusion I would suggest that a consideration of the various aspects of the matter indicated above might well dispose the Haitian Government to the view that the difficulties and injurious consequences of its persistence in the enforcement of the law so widely and so seriously complained of would far outweigh the benefits presumably expected from its operation by the authorities who enacted it and those who now desire its present rigid enforcement.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 838.111/63.]

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to Turkey.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
No. 122. Washington, March 22 1912.

SIR: The Department has received the despatch (No. 138) of February 16th last with which you transmitted a note verbale from the Sublime Porte asking the assistance of this Government in securing from the Government of Haiti the renewal of licenses to retail merchants of Ottoman nationality residing Haiti.

It is suggested that you reply to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, informing him that the Department has given careful and attentive consideration to this request of the Sublime Porte and regrets that it must instruct you to reply that, while this Government is always desirous of cooperating with the Government of the Sublime Porte in every possible way, in view of all the circumstances of the present anti-Syrian agitation in Haiti, and particularly in view of the course which the matter has taken in the discussions between the American Minister at Port-au-Prince and the Haitian authorities, it is reluctantly compelled to believe that it would be impracticable at this time to issue further instructions to the American Minister along the line of the action understood to be desired by the Sublime Porte.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

NOTE.—On April 1, 1912, the message of the President and the report of the Minister for Foreign Affairs were submitted to the Congress (see ante); the latter's report relates in part to the subject of this correspondence.

File No. 838.111/69.]

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Legation,
Port au Prince, May 21, 1912.

On May 18 the French war vessel Descartes arrived here and will remain pending the settlement of the Syrian question, as I am told by an employee of the French Legation, which is protecting Turkish interests. The Haitian Government seems determined to close, on May 31, all stores operated by Syrians, Ottoman subjects.

Furniss.

File No. 838.111/76.]

Port au Prince, May 29, 1912.

Some of the thirty-one Syrian firms here are unimportant retailers who could easily liquidate, but others have stocks which could not be disposed of within the time set, extension of which is refused by the Haitian Government.

Furniss.

File No. 838.111/73.]

The Department of State to the French Embassy.

[Memorandum.]

In response to the inquiry[1] of the Ambassador of France regarding this Government's willingness to join with the French Government in urging the Government of Haiti to accord the Ottoman Syrians in Haiti an equitable extension after June first wherein to wind up their business affairs, the Ambassador of France was informed that the Government of the United States has already independently urged upon the Government of Haiti the desirability and wisdom, with respect to all foreign interests, of foregoing the enforcement of its drastic law. Moreover, inasmuch as this Government has declined to accede to a request similar to the present, made by the Ottoman Government in this matter, it does not see its way clear at the present time to join with the Government of France.

Department of State,
Washington, May 29, 1912.

File No. 838.111/75.]

The Syrian American Club to the Department of State.

[Telegram.]

New York, May 29, 1912.

The Syrian American Club has received reports from Haiti that all Syrians of foreign allegiance who remain in Haiti after May 31st are in danger of attack from Haitian natives upon their lives and property. The majority of the Syrians have departed and only those who had large business establishments are remaining, to close out their business connections. These large merchants are in account largely with United States firms, and a large financial loss will occur if these merchants are not permitted to liquidate. We appeal to you to wire instructions to your Minister in Haiti to obtain further time for these Syrians and protect them in the meantime against uncivilized attacks.

---

[1] This was a verbal inquiry made during a call of the Counselor of the French Embassy at the Department a few days previous to the date of this memorandum.

THE SYRIAN AMERICAN CLUB.

File No. 838.111/75.]

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 30, 1912.

The Department is in receipt of a telegram from the Syrian American Club of New York saying that there is danger of attack upon the lives and property of Syrians who remain in Haiti after May 31. If necessary, you will make representations for the protection of American citizens of Syrian origin. You are reminded, referring to the Department's general instruction of January 20, 1912, to insist upon what shall appear to be an adequate and reasonable time for the liquidation of the affairs of such American citizens of Syrian origin as have not for any reason received licenses. You are also reminded of the Department's general instruction that the law must be uniformly enforced and that any privileges given to Syrians of other nationalities shall be given to those who are American citizens.

KNOX.

File No. 838.111/75.]

The Secretary of State to the Syrian American Club.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 30, 1912.

Your telegram May 29th. American Minister has been instructed that if necessary he shall insist upon the protection for American citizens of Syrian origin. The Syrians of nationalities other than American should of course look in the first instance for protection to their respective Governments. The Minister has already been instructed to insist on what shall appear to be an adequate and reasonable time for the liquidation of the affairs of American citizens of Syrian origin.

KNOX.

File No. 838.111/77.]

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Port au Prince, June 1, 1912.

The stores of Ottoman Syrians, and those of Syrians of other nationalities who have not received licenses, were officially closed to-day. Two Americans were affected by this action, but the Haitian Government yesterday promised that their stores would not be closed and it is probable that adjustment in regard to them can be made.

FURNISS.

File No. 838.111/80.]

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Port au Prince, June 19, 1912.

No. 1086.]

SIR: Referring to my No. 989 of December 19 last and in order to complete the files of the Department I have the honor to enclose herewith the reply of the Haitian Secretary of Foreign Relations to the identic note sent him by the Legation relative to the abrogation of trading privileges of Syrians in Haiti.

I have [etc.]

H. W. FURNISS.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Haitian Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Port au Prince, January 29, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I have had the honor to receive your note No. 560 of the 8th instant, replying to mine of December 28[1] last concerning the notice inserted in the "Moniteur" of the 9th of the same month. This communication, however, like the first which you have taken the trouble to address me on this subject, is identical with the notes of the Ministers of France and the Dominican Republic, the Consuls of England and Cuba, which shows a previous understanding. I can only regret the tendency of the Representatives of the Foreign Powers to profit by the least incident to have recourse to the means of collective or identical notes. In calling your attention to the inconvenience of such practice, I am pleased to hope that I can count on your kind cooperation to aid me to discourage it.

In the meantime, I shall ask of you the permission not to bring into discussion laws actually in force and which the Haitian Government is obliged to execute. I shall take, however, the liberty to remark that the measures of exclusion enacted in the United States and in Cuba especially with regard to the Chinese do not only treat, as your excellency maintains, of the regulation of the conditions of admission of the new arrivals; for the Chinese who are already found on the territory of these two countries can be expelled without considering whether or not the forced departure will prejudice their interests or the interests of third parties. These laws of exclusion have especially for their purpose, as I have previously shown, the protection of nationals against competition deemed prejudicial. The Republic of Haiti, therefore, does nothing contrary to international usage when, in its turn, it strives to safeguard the interests of its citizens. Therefore, it can only be surprised at the menace which is made it to give the greatest publicity to the fact that the liberty and security of commerce has received a serious blow. Strong in its right, the Republic of Haiti will leave such an accusation to the appreciation of all those who have made fortunes in it, as also all those who continue to do a lucrative business therein under a protection which it has never spared.

---

[1] Should be 26.

I wish, consequently, to believe that this will end in the recognition of the good intentions with which it is animated and I take this occasion to renew to you [etc.].

J. N. Léger.

File No. 838.111/84.]

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

American Legation,
No. 1094.] Port au Prince, July 5, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inform the Department that the Haitian Government has signed an agreement with certain of the stores owned by Ottoman subjects which were closed on June 1st last, whereby these stores have been allowed to open until September 30th in order to liquidate their stock. There is inclosed herewith a copy[1] of the agreement taken from the official paper, "Le Moniteur".

These are the important stores and I understand from the French Legation that the arrangement was brought about through the good offices of that Legation.

During the past month more than twenty-five of Syrian origin voluntarily left Haiti so that now there are very few remaining.

I have [etc.]

H. W. Furniss.

VISIT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO HAITI.

File No. 033.1100 K77/222.]

The Minister of Haiti to the Acting Secretary of State.

Legation of Haiti,
Washington, February 15, 1912.

[Translation.]

My dear Mr. Wilson: I have had the honor to receive your letter of the 13th instant,[2] relative to the decision reached by the Secretary of State with the concurrence of the President, to visit the capitals of the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea, as well as those of Venezuela and the Republic of Panama and probably, also those of Mexico and Colombia.

I have lost no time in forwarding the happy intelligence to my Government and I am authorized to say to you even now that it will be quite agreeable to President Leconte and his Minister to receive and honor Mr. Knox, who may also count upon the cordial reception of every class of Haitian society.

I also expect that the visit of the Secretary of State, who as President of the Pan American Union will be at home everywhere, will exercise the most favorable influence on the relations of the two countries.

I beg you [etc.]

Solon Ménos.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] The identic letter printed under Panama: "Visit of the Secretary of State to the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea," p. 1240.

Speech of welcome of M. Jérome Salomon, Mayor of Port au Prince, on the arrival of Mr. Knox, April 3, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: To-day offers an occasion of great joy to the city of Port au Prince. The fame of a fine and active intelligence which preceded your occupancy of the eminent post you now fill would alone have rendered you worthy of the most cordial reception on our part, but to your brilliant personal qualities is added your official title, which renders your visit of infinite value to us.

Often the most profound sympathy takes its origin in a mark of attention. In knowing each other, societies, as individuals, develop and strengthen their bonds of friendship. Therefore, Mr. Secretary, your thought of traveling in certain countries of this hemisphere was a happy one. Within a short time, by a supreme and superb effort of man's genius, the dream which the Indian previously cherished in his native imagination—an interoceanic canal—will become a living reality.

Cities, until now remote, will cease to be such. But with the geographical rapprochement an intercommunication of spirit should be effected in order to attain that excellent relationship of "good neighborliness, mutual aid, consideration, and confidence" of which you spoke two years since in your masterly address at Philadelphia.

Human demonstrations are of supreme worth when directed by the heart. It is indeed the heart which directs at this time the great satisfaction felt in this capital at your presence and that of the interesting personages accompanying you.

We are especially appreciative of the flattering tribute rendered us in affording us the pleasure of greeting, in conjunction with yourself, Madam Philander Knox, whose charming kindliness and courteous grace shine with such splendor in your magnificent Washington receptions, and which were so admired on January 1, last, in the superb dwelling of the Pan American Union.

We hope that your excellency will take the same pleasure in your sojourn here as we do in your friendly testimonial toward the first city of this Republic.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

MR. MAYOR: Speaking for myself, sir, and for the members of my party, I wish to express our deepest sense of appreciation for the cordiality of the reception by the officials of the Republic of Haiti, and I wish to place especial emphasis upon the kindliness and cordiality with which we have been received by the people of Haiti. I can assure you, sir, that this has been no more gratifying to us than it will be to the President of the United States and to the people of the United States when I communicate to them the character of our reception here this morning. You have stated most eloquently one of the main reasons why my visit here is one that ought to be not only of advantage to you but of advantage to us, and that is the necessity, because of the proximate completion of the Panama Canal, for the republics and the peoples that are to be benefited immediately by the opening of that great highway to be brought closer together through the means of a more intimate personal acquaintance. I am more than satisfied in the few moments that I have been in Haiti that my visit here will be eminently agreeable. Before concluding, sir, I beg to express for Mrs. Knox her and my own deep appreciation for the graceful compliments you have paid her in your address of welcome and for all of us our gratitude for your extreme cordiality.

Speech of Mr. J. N. Léger, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Haiti, at a luncheon given by him to Mr. Knox, Port au Prince, April 3, 1912.

[Translation.]

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: Upon me devolves the agreeable duty of welcoming you and of thanking you, in the name of the Haitian Republic, for your esteemed visit.

This is the second time that an American Secretary of State has honored us with his presence. The present, like the past, with the folds of our flags once more intertwined, evokes the undying memory of Savannah, where the heroes of Haitian independence rivaled in bravery the intrepid soldiers of Washington. These are ties which can not be forgotten.

I am particularly happy to be, under the circumstances, the mouthpiece of the people and Government of Haiti, because I recall the tender friendship which marks the relations between our two peoples. And your visit, all the more valued on account of the presence of Mrs. Knox, can not but make these relations the more cordial.

If upon our friendship depends the pleasure of your sojourn among us you will both carry from your short stay in Port au Prince the same remembrance which I retain of my mission at Washington, the delicate attentions and the kindly hospitality of the American people, and I do not think it too much to ask that you please convey to that generous people and to their Government our sincere wishes for the prosperity of the United States.

Permit me to raise my glass in honor of President Taft and to drink to the health of yourself and Mrs. Knox.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

MR. MINISTER: It is always a great pleasure to renew an old acquaintance. You can imagine how much that pleasure is enhanced by renewing it under these delightful auspices. We recall with great pleasure your mission to Washingon, where you were accompanied by your charming wife and young children; and I know of nothing that has occurred since I have been in your hospitable country that has given me more pleasure than when your good wife told me here to-day that some of the happiest moments of her life were spent in Washington. My pleasure is largely increased by hearing one who sustains the same relation to his own Government as I sustain to mine express the deep desire that the sympathies, the friendliness, and the interests of the two countries should become closer and closer. There certainly is no reason why the Republics of this ancient island, which was the seat of American civilization, and their great sister of the north should not be upon the best of terms. I am glad to say that I know of no reason to the contrary. It is a real pleasure for me to propose the health of the President of the Haitian Republic, your own, Mr. Minister, and that of your good wife and your family, and the prosperity and peace of your people; and to express the hope that they may soon reach that point in their development and prosperity which the rich endowments of nature entitles them to attain.

Speech of President Leconte of Haiti at a banquet given to Mr. Knox, Port au Prince, April 3, 1912.

[Translation.]

Mr. Secretary of State: It gives me great pleasure to reiterate, in the name of the Republic of Haiti, our expressions of cordial welcome. And it is also pleasing to feel that your presence, at this time, among us is an unmistakable evidence of the interest which our great sister of the north takes in us.

You, Mr. Secretary of State, have, without doubt, passed through countries of Latin America that are richer, more prosperous, than ours; a wealth and prosperity which consists, to a large degree, in the same conditions existing when those peoples of this continent won their independence.

But here you will encounter the sincere and loyal expression of our high esteem and our keen sympathies for the people and Government of the United States.

Your visit to us, which we shall cherish as a most precious remembrance, will certainly strengthen the bonds of intimate friendship which unite the two countries, tend to make more cordial our relations, and to develop the economic interests of the two nations.

I pray that you deign to convey my personal respects to President Taft, and that you please assure him that the Republic of Haiti earnestly wishes him happiness and the prosperity and greatness of the American people.

I thank you, Mr. Secretary, in the name of the Government and people of Haiti, for the visit you have been pleased to pay us, and I raise my glass in honor of President Taft, to your health and to that of your friends, and to the success of the mission of friendship and concord which you have undertaken.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

Mr. President and Gentleman: A glamour of historical memories hovers over the Caribbean Sea, and all who feel its influence long to visit the spots where the life of the New World began with the landing of Columbus, and where the foundations of government in the Western Hemisphere were first laid. I have long desired to see and become acquainted with the island world of the Indies. My wish has come to pass through the determination of the President of the United States to have me carry to the neighboring American peoples a fresh message of friendship and good will in the name of his and my countrymen. It was especially appropriate that the President should do this now, on the eve of the completion of the Isthmian Canal, and that the theme of his greeting should be the benefits to flow to all the nations of the three Americas from the opening of that stupendous channel of intercourse which, by annihilating the barrier between the oceans, must perforce change the currents of the world's commerce.

At a time when the obligation which my country has assumed as the agent of the interest of all America and of the world in creating a highway for international commerce is about to be realized, we are impressed with the conviction that the fullest success of our work is, to a notable degree, dependent on the peace and stability of our neighbors and on their enjoying the prosperity and material welfare which flow from orderly self-development. A community liable to be torn by internal dissension or checked in its progress by the consequences of nonfulfillment of international obligations is not in a good position to deserve and reap the benefits accruing from enlarged commercial opportunities, such as are certain to come about with the opening of the canal. It may indeed become an obstruction to the general enjoyment of those opportunities.

It is with political communities as with the human organization, body and soul should be alike sound and sane, each attuned to the other, to fit the being for the struggle for existence in which it is the lot of men and states to be constantly engaged. The old Roman adage mens sana in corpore sano is in point for both. Not only must the body politic be healthy, but the public spirit which guides its acts must be equally healthy. Only by the union of these two conditions can a state hold its place in the assemblage of nations, or aspire to win a better station.

It is the fervent desire and the earnest hope of the nation I represent that all its comrades of the American fraternity shall attain to this well-balanced condition, or shall conserve it where already possessed. We wish to see them all independent, contented, orderly, and materially prosperous, each gaining the fullest measure of well-being of which it is naturally and physically capable, each bearing good will for its neighbors and deserving their good will in return. We begrudge the success of none; on the contrary, on the few occasions where helpfulness is possible we have gladly given help.

The relations of the Haitian Republic with the United States have been singularly intimate for many years. The volume of American-Haitian trade is proportionately large. The enterprise of our citizens has contributed to the development of Haitian resources. I look for the time, not far distant, when these relations may be expanded and strengthened, not through any invasive activity on our part, but through the steady self-development of the resources of Haiti under the benevolent sway of peace. Your country has almost incalculable native wealth at command. With a self-respecting energy or purpose; with a contented and thrifty population; with wise counsels in the seats of government, devoting the efforts of the nation to the great work of internal exploitation of natural resources and perfection of agricultural methods; and with the maintenance of peace, without as well as within, you Haitians have a future before you which other less-favored countries might well envy, and which we of the United States would witness with hearty sympathy.

I have a disposition to emphasize the essential condition of peace, at home and abroad, as a need in working out the material improvement of a country. While it is doubtless true that trade and trade extension are the foundation in practical life of most advances in civilization, yet the great modern movements of accord and good understanding between nations are after all the lofty achievements and the crown of all international relations. The controlling principle of these movements is peaceful and beneficial international intercourse and a peaceful settlement by arbitration of differences and controversies—extending that principle, by friendly diplomacy, as rapidly as possible to embrace an increasing number and variety of disputes. The tide of world sentiment is setting strongly toward the accommodation of international controversies by processes of reason and justice; not by defiance and the sword. That tide is sweeping over my own country, where the ideal of universal peace with justice is dear to every heart. Should not we, of the common brotherhood of all the Americas, share alike in devotion to that ideal, and stand mutually helpful toward whatever may assure, by pacific means, peace and good will among brethren?

I thank you for the cordial personal welcome you have given me. I shall long treasure the memory of my visit.

Speech of Mr. Knox at a breakfast given by the Municipal Council at the Bellevue Club, Port au Prince, April 4, 1912, in response to a brief speech of introduction by the Mayor.

Mr. Mayor: I thank you very much, sir, for this additional act of kindness, and we have been the recipients of many acts of kindness since we have been in Port au Prince, in your hospitable country, in your hospitable city, and among your hospitable people. My visit, however, would not, from my point of view, be considered an entire success it it were merely confined to pleasures and the delights of intercourse with the people of this city. I have observed here a thing that makes me very glad, and that is that the Haitians seem to have realized that industry is at the basis of prosperity and that the object of their Government is now undoubtedly to maintain peace at home and peace with her neighbors, so that industrialism, which is the sole foundation of wealth and prosperity, shall proceed uninterrupted. You seem to have discovered, as all nations must discover in their march toward the progress of which they are capable, that the true function of government is not to say to a man, "Work and we will reward you", but to say to all of its citizens, "Work and the Government will secure to you the results of your labor, that it shall not be taken away from you by violence or by injustice". You have discovered, further, I believe, that while the true function of government is not what I have just described, it is this: to honestly collect the revenues, as lightly tax the people as the necessities of the government demands, and then to apply these revenues honestly for the best interests of the country. I am satisfied from a conversation with your worthy President that it is not the intention of this administration of affairs in Haiti to spend the substance of the people upon unnecessary military establishments but extend those great public improvements which make the life of every man better.

These are some of the observations I have made since I have been with you, though the time has been very short and has been occupied very largely with the pleasures of the visit, but I shall carry them home to the President of the United States and to the people of the United States, and I am satisfied that they, with me, will rejoice that everything in Haiti seems to be on the upward move. I beg to pledge the health of the President and people of Haiti and their prosperity.

DEATH OF PRESIDENT LECONTE AND RECOGNITION OF PRESIDENT AUGUSTE.

File No. 838.001/12.]

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Port au Prince, August 8, 1912.

President Leconte was killed this morning in the destruction of the palace by accidental explosion of magazines in which smokeless powder had recently been stored. About one hundred killed. Congress will proceed to elect successor to-day.

Furniss.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Port au Prince, August 8, 1912.

The oath of office as President was administered to Tancrède Auguste this morning.

Furniss.

File No. 838.001 Au 4/2.]

The Minister of Haiti to the Secretary of State.

Legation of Haiti,
Washington, October 3, 1912.

[Translation.]

Mr. Secretary of State: I have the honor of transmitting to you, accompanied by the customary copy, the autograph letter by which Mr. Tancrède Auguste informs the President of the United States of America of his election to the Presidency of the Republic of Haiti.

In begging you to kindly let this letter reach its high destination, I renew [etc.]

Solón Menos.

File No 838.001 Au 4/2.]

The Secretary of State to the American Minister to Haiti.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 28, 1912.

[Translation.]

SIR: I enclose, with office copy, a letter addressed by the President to His Excellency Tancrède Auguste, acknowledging his letter of August 19 last in which he announced his election, on the 8th of that month, to the Presidency of the Republic of Haiti and his entrance upon the duties of that office.

You will forward the copy to the Foreign Office and deliver the original in the manner most agreeable to His Excellency.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

[Inclosure.]

The President of the Republic of Haiti to the President of the United States of America.

DEAR AND GREAT FRIEND: I hasten to inform Your Excellency that the National Assembly, in its session of August 8 current, has honored me with its high confidence in calling me to the Presidency of the Republic. Having taken the 9th of the same month the oath required by the Constitution in order to assume the exercise of the Executive Power, it is peculiarly agreeable to me to inform Your Excellency of this important event and to give you the assurance that in the elevated post to which the esteem of my fellow citizens has just called me I shall use every endeavor to maintain and to develop the friendly relations which so happily exist between our two countries. In the meantime, I express my sincere wishes for the personal happiness of Your Excellency as well as for the prosperity of the Nation whose destinies have been confided to you, and I avail myself, with pleasure, of this occasion to address to Your Excellency the assurances of the high esteem and of the unalterable friendship with which I am [etc.].

T. AUGUSTE.

[Inclosure.]

The President of the United States to the President of Haiti.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: I have received the letter of the 19th of August, in which Your Excellency announced your election, on the 8th of the same month, to the Presidency of the Republic of Haiti, and your entrance upon the duties of the office.

I cordially reciprocate the sentiments you express for the continuance of the friendly relations which have heretofore existed between the United States and Haiti, and I assure Your Excellency of my best wishes for your personal welfare and for the prosperity of the Republic over which you have been called to preside.

Your Good Friend,

WM. H. TAFT.

HONDURAS.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS. PROPOSED LOAN CONVENTION BETWEEN HONDURAS AND THE UNITED STATES. PROPOSED LOAN CONTRACTS. GOOD OFFICES OF THE UNITED STATES; ARBITRATION PROPOSAL.

File No. 815.51/222.

Proposed adjustment of the debt of Honduras by the United States.

[Memorandum prepared by the Department of State about September, 1909. Undated.]

One of the most important provisions of the Washington Conventions of 1907 was that for the maintenance from within and the respect from without of the neutrality of Honduras. The five Central American Republics signed these conventions and the United States and Mexico, as advising and consenting parties, have to them an important relation frequently confirmed in respect to the United States by the acts of the five Republics. Thus the seven Governments concerned put on record their appreciation of the fact that the neutrality of Honduras, which forms a broad band across Central America, would contribute more than any other one thing to the peace, progress, and prosperity which all desire to see in those rich and fertile countries.

To maintain its neutrality Honduras must be strong, and the fact is almost too obvious to state that to be strong and stable a government must have its finances well ordered and upon a sound basis.

For these reasons, for some years the Government of Honduras has greatly desired to place its financial house in order, and for the same reasons the Department of State has, for some years, cherished the hope that an American syndicate would come forward prepared to carry out a plan which should be of such undoubted merit and fairness as to justify its diplomatic support by the Government of the United States and the assumption by this Government of such relations to the arrangement as would supply the lenders with a proper degree of security.

The external debt of Honduras consists of the principal and arrears of interest on four distinct loans issued in 1867–1870. Since 1873 all of these loans have been in default.

Anyone who will consult the published reports of the Council of Foreign Bondholders of London will find that this debt reaches on paper the enormous sum of about $110,000,000. This debt has been rolling up for many years and has been increased through a series of contracts and of abortive efforts at consolidation. Honduras itself has little to show in return but a very few miles of railway. All these transactions seem to have been peculiarly unfortunate. That this was recognized by the British Parliament may be seen from published reports. The British lenders were especially active during the period following our Civil War, when there seemed to be a forward movement of British enterprise on the Mosquito Coast, where, it will be remembered, Great Britain has possessions today. An American syndicate also made several efforts to consolidate the debt, but these likewise failed.

Last year the Council of Foreign Bondholders, representing British creditors, drew up a contract for the funding of the debt, and this was diplomatically supported by the British Government. The terms seemed unnecessarily onerous. The scheme also looked to the raising of the customs duties and the mortgaging of nearly everything in sight to the detriment of commerce and future enterprise. Among the properties to be involved in the British scheme were wharves and railways in which certain American citizens had a direct legitimate interest. These considerations led the American Minister to Honduras, acting on his own responsibility, to advise the Government of Honduras not to ratify the latest British agreement. The same considerations were found so cogent that the Department of State supported the Minister in his position.

In June, 1909, the Legation in Honduras telegraphed that Mr. Washington Valentine, the American actually interested in the railroad and wharves whose hypothecation was contemplated in connection with the British loan, had submitted to the Government of Honduras a plan for refunding all its debts. The Minister for Foreign Affairs had asked the opinion of our Minister as to how the Department of State would view such an arrangement with guaranties somewhat like those afforded in Santo Domingo. The then Secretary of State replied that the Department would not then itself suggest such a plan, but that our Minister might express the opinion that any overtures of the kind in question from the Government of Honduras would be received with the strongest possible desire on the part of the United States to be of service to Honduras and to contribute toward bringing about so satisfactory a result as that attained in Santo Domingo.

Referring to the pending plan of the Council of Foreign Bondholders in London, the American Minister to Honduras reported at the end of April:

> I had the honor of a visit on the 23rd instant from President Dávila, who, in the course of a conversation on this subject, indicated that he now realizes how highly disadvantageous to the interests of Honduras the proposed arrangement would be. President Dávila also stated that his Government would be most grateful if, through the friendly offices of this Legation, a satisfactory arrangement could be made with an American syndicate for the general refunding of the entire debt of Honduras. It is most probable that the proposed arrangement with the British bondholders would never be definitely concluded if a responsible group of financiers should send to Tegucigalpa, in the near future, a special financial agent of experience in such negotiations, fully empowered to make an arrangement for the settlement of the national debt, equally advantageous to Honduras and to the refunding syndicate.
>
> In view of the positive guaranties which the American Government now offers to assure the permanent neutrality of Honduras and its consequent immunity from further external difficulties, it should not be difficult to obtain a financial agreement for the refunding of the Honduran debt, which with the official cognizance of the American Government should afford all necessary and satisfactory safeguards for the faithful compliance of Honduras with its engagements in this respect.

The objection of this Government to the British bondholders' plan was a frequent subject of frank discussion between the Department and the British Embassy, and the Department soon reached the conclusion that the United States must either afford an alternative or else withdraw its opposition to the British bondholders' plan.

This state of affairs naturally made more evident than ever the desirability that an American syndicate should be interested in Honduras. The desirability of this had been fully realized by the previous Administration, but with the rich opportunities of domestic investment there had never seemed to be much hope that American capital would flow into this channel.

The first indication of hope was when Mr. F. B. Jennings called at the Department as attorney for Mr. Valentine and showed great interest in the project and expressed the idea that perhaps Morgan and Company, with whom he was also associated, might be willing to interest themselves. This was on May 24th. On May 26th Mr. Jennings wrote a letter to the Assistant Secretary of State, who had had immediate charge of this whole matter and who conducted all the conversations now being referred to, wherein he stated that he found that Morgan and Company indicated a willingness to purchase Honduran bonds at a fair price if the English plan failed and if Honduras should issue bonds secured by the customs. He went on to suggest as a basis, the assembling under American control of the various outstanding obligations of Honduras, and he intimated that Morgan and Company would be prepared to open negotiations with the Council of Foreign Bondholders. This seemed very hopeful but was not regarded as definitive.

Owing to the Department's keen interest, for diplomatic reasons, in the Honduran financial adjustment, whenever anyone at all likely to be interested happened to call at the Department the Honduran situation was freely discussed on the chance that some one might be willing to go into it. In this way, about the middle of June it was discussed with Mr. Albert Strauss, representing J. and W. Seligman and Company, who had called at the Department in regard to another matter.

Similarly, on June 14th, when Mr. James Speyer called at the Department to express interest in the China loan negotiations, his attention was frankly drawn to the Honduran situation. After a long conversation he expressed great interest, and in the course of the same day said that he was prepared at once to send Mr. Steinhart to Tegucigalpa as his representative.

As showing the Department's great desire to get someone interested in this business and as showing its belief that this had not been definitely assured, that it might be difficult, and that the field was open, it may be interpolated here that on the 8th of June there was prepared a letter asking the Department of Commerce and Labor to circulate among reputable firms likely to be interested a circular on the opportunity in Honduras for an American financial group. However, the stage of the British plan and the feeling of the Department that definite initiative should come from Honduras had caused the issuance of this circular to be delayed for more careful consideration.

Mr. Speyer's proposal to send his representative to Honduras seemed a businesslike one, and what Mr. Jennings had said in his letter of May 26th as to what Morgan and Company might do was not at the time understood to be positive; so the Assistant Secretary concluded that Mr. Speyer was the one who really meant to go ahead at once. Therefore to make sure of this, the same day he saw Mr. Speyer the Assistant Secretary addressed to him a letter referring to the conversation and to his intention of sending his representative to Honduras and adding that within two or three days he would have pleasure in writing Mr. Jennings on the subject, when he would also make further communication to Mr. Speyer.

In answering this letter on June 18th, Mr. Speyer referred to conversations which his representative Mr. Steinhart had also had at the Department and said:

> * * * and in accordance with your desires we have decided to send Mr. Steinhart to Honduras at our expense as soon as it can conveniently be arranged.
>
> As you are aware, I am leaving for Europe next week, and I shall take up in London the matter of a settlement with the foreign bondholders.
>
> We are undertaking this task, which involves much expert service and considerable expense, upon the understanding that the Department will cooperate solely with us and render us all possible assistance, and will also instruct its representative in Honduras to cooperate with Mr. Steinhart.
>
> I would be much obliged to you if you would as you suggest, write to Mr. Jennings, who, I understand, represents some American claims against Honduras, informing him that we have actively taken up this matter in accordance with your desires, and asking him to furnish us all the information which he has as regards American claims.

Accordingly, the Assistant Secretary, on June 21st, addressed the following letters to Messrs. Speyer and Jennings, respectively:

My Dear Mr. Speyer:

Referring to your letter of June 18th, I beg to enclose herewith copy of a letter which I have this morning sent by special delivery to Mr. Jennings, and wherein you will see I have informed him that you have definitely undertaken the Honduran business and concluded to send Mr. Steinhart to Tegucigalpa and are entering on negotiations with the London bondholders, in view of all of which facts I ask him to give you in the most helpful manner all information which will tend to elucidate the situation as he knows it and as it concerns American claims and his clients in particular.

From our conversations the attitude of the Department is, I am sure, fully known to you and you are well aware of my own keen interest in the success of this undertaking on account of the excellent effect it should have upon conditions in the locality concerned. I am very glad that you have determined to approach the undertaking with promptness and energy.

Wishing you every success and with many good wishes for an agreeable trip to Europe, I remain, my dear Mr. Speyer, [etc.]

My Dear Mr. Jennings:

Mr. Speyer called at the Department on the 14th instant and after a long discussion of the financial condition of Honduras and the possibility of the Honduran Government's entering into an arrangement with foreign bankers to fund its whole foreign debt, he informed me that he had concluded at once to send an agent to Tegucigalpa and look into the matter with a view to negotiating if possible an appropriate arrangement for the purpose indicated above. This definite undertaking of Mr. Speyer will, naturally, have the good offices of the Department and of the Legation in Honduras in the manner that such aid is extended in all legitimate and beneficial American enterprises in foreign countries. I may add that Mr. Speyer is simultaneously negotiating with the Council of Foreign Bondholders.

On account of your interest as the representative of Mr. Valentine and, as I understand, of another American syndicate, I advised Mr. Speyer to discuss the situation with you, and I trust that you will in the most helpful manner give him all information which will tend to elucidate the situation as you know it and as it concerns American claims and your clients in particular. Faithfully yours, [etc.]

On June 22nd, Mr. Speyer wrote to express his thanks and added that his partner, Mr. Hans Winterfeldt, would take up the matter within the next few days and that he hoped he would be able to make some progress without too much delay.

On June 25th, Mr. Jennings wrote the following letter to the Assistant Secretary:

> I duly received your letter of the 21st instant advising me of Mr. Speyer's proposed interest in the Honduras matter. As I informed you in our interview yesterday, I was somewhat disturbed, because in May I had presented this matter to Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., as I supposed with your approval, and they were prepared to take it up, as I advised you in my letter of May 26th. They have since undertaken active negotiations with the Council of Foreign Bondholders in London, which are progressing satisfactorily, and unless interfered with, will, I think, result in their shortly getting in a position where they can make a definite proposition to Honduras as the representatives of practically the whole outstanding debt.
>
> It seemed obvious to me, as I stated yesterday, that any competition between rival bankers, either with respect to the representation of the bonds or with respect to the purchase of any new bonds from Honduras, would be likely to seriously interfere with the successful consummation of the plan.
>
> I have seen Mr. Morgan since my return and reported to him the substance of our interview yesterday, and explained to him that the present situation grows out of an evident misunderstanding. He does not desire to put any obstacle in the way of any plan which may be preferred by your Department, but he naturally feels that his firm are entitled to some consideration, in view of the fact that they were the first to undertake this business and that they did so upon the suggestion or with the approval of your Department. He has already made certain propositions to the Council of Foreign Bondholders, and before deciding upon the best course to pursue in the present juncture, he wishes to ascertain the exact position of that negotiation. He will get this information by cable as speedily as possible, and I will then write you again upon the subject. Yours very truly, [etc.]

On July 2nd, Mr. Jennings again wrote to say that on June 26th Morgan and Company had been informed by cable that the London Council of Bondholders was disposed to accept their proposition and wished to confer with the British Foreign Office, and expected to give a definite answer within a few days, and that the Council of Bondholders would meet July 7th for final action. Mr. Jennings hoped, therefore, to be able to report the result in another week.

On July 9th, Mr. Jennings informed the Department that the Council of Foreign Bondholders had accepted Morgan and Company's proposition and recommended the bondholders to deposit their bonds at once; that Morgan and Company were now in a position to make a definite proposition to Honduras.

Thus one American syndicate had, entirely by its own energy, gained control of the Honduran indebtedness to an extent which left it alone in position to be the American instrumentality which it had so long been hoped could, with the support of this Government, bring about the desired reform.

Mr. Speyer had not sent his representative to Honduras. The records of the Department show the following direction given by the Assistant Secretary, who happened to be ill about the middle of July:

> Call up Speyer and Company. Ask for the representative of Mr. James Speyer and say that you have been asked to say, by the Assistant Secretary, that after Mr. Speyer had told the Assistant Secretary he was going in for the Honduran business and after he had gone to Europe the Assistant Secretary learned that contrary to his first impression the Morgans had instantly and energetically taken up the matter and the first thing Mr. Wilson knew he was informed that they had carried out successfully negotiations with the London bondholders and were now practically in control. Mr. Wilson is sorry he was not aware of this before Mr. Speyer became interested, but has no doubt that Mr. Speyer found it out himself before he had taken any particular trouble in the matter. Mr. Wilson asks that you please make explanation to Mr. Speyer on Mr. Wilson's behalf on his return.

(The above was communicated to Mr. Speyer's representative at 3:15 p. m., July 20th. The person talking stated that this was the first intimation that they had received that Morgans had interested themselves in the matter.)

It is obviously impossible that Speyer and Company were seriously interested in this loan and that on July 20th they were still ignorant of Morgan and Company's operations, for it will be recalled that on June 21st Mr. Speyer was frankly referred to Mr. Jennings, and that he himself wrote that he would have his partner see Mr. Jennings promptly.

Meanwhile responsive to the disposition shown by the Honduran Government the Department had informed the Legation at Tegucigalpa of the probable opportunity to interest an American syndicate, and in return the Government of Honduras sent two commissioners to New York to prosecute the negotiations. These gentlemen have not visited the Department, but their negotiations with Morgan and Company are understood to be still progressing.

It is thought that the foregoing will make it perfectly clear that the Department of State has simply sought to find an instrumentality willing to undertake, in response to the desires of Honduras, an undertaking of great benefit to Central America, and, indirectly, to American interests in those countries, and that so far from evincing the slightest partiality the Department dealt with all concerned with the utmost candor, and that if one syndicate rather than another was approached by Honduras, the fact was simply due to that syndicate's prompt action.

File No. 815.51/165 b.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 11, 1911.

On January 10 the loan convention was signed.

KNOX.

File No 815.51/169 b.

The Secretary of State to the British Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 11, 1911.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: As the Counsellor of your Embassy was told last evening, I yesterday signed with General Paredes, the Special Minister of Honduras, a convention to secure the loan which it is expected will in the near future be made to refund the debt of Honduras, and in view of the interest of the Council of Foreign Bondholders, I have cabled our Embassy at London to give this information to the British Foreign Office.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 815.51/169 a.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 16, 1911.

The text of the loan convention sent you January 3 is entirely accurate except last paragraph should read "Done in duplicate at Washington this tenth day of January one thousand nine hundred and eleven" and [the same in Spanish]; and is signed "Philander C. Knox, Juan E. Paredes."

KNOX.

61st Congress, 3d Session. Senate Doc. (Executive Series C.)

Message from the President of the United States transmitting a Loan Convention between the United States and Honduras.[1]

[Read January 26, 1911; Convention read the first time and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and, together with the Message, ordered to be printed in confidence for the use of the Senate. Made public August 5, 1911.]

To the Senate:

I transmit herewith for the consideration of the Senate, with a view to eliciting its advice in regard thereto and obtaining its consent to the ratification thereof, a convention between the United States and the Republic of Honduras concerning a loan which the Republic contemplates making with citizens of the United States, to provide for the refundment of its debt and the placing of its finances on a sound and stable basis.

The weighty considerations of national and international policy which counsel the consummation of such an arrangement are so rational and just as not only to commend themselves to earnest attention, but to call for such elaboration and support as it is my duty to give in the fulfillment of my constitutional obligation to consult the coordinate treaty-making power on a matter so intimately concerning the policies of this country in its relations with the neighboring nations of the Caribbean region.

From a very early period of our history it has been alike the policy and the moral obligation of the United States to lend, when required, appropriate countenance and counsel to the Commonwealths of the

---

[1] See also Nicaragua, Financial affairs, for message of June 28, last two paragraphs, pp. 1076-1077.

West in all that tends to increase their stability, to promote their welfare, and to maintain and fortify their relations with one another. Emulating the example of the people of the United States in establishing independent statehood, the people of Latin America were not slow to achieve in turn independence of colonial control and to mold their schemes of government on the lines of constitutional subjection to the popular will on which the United States had effected its own enfranchisement. Thus bonds of sympathy were created at the outset, between the several other emancipated nations of Latin America and, naturally, between all of them and the United States. The march of Pan American progress has seen this mutual inspiration and confidence signalized in the splendid position attained by several of the great Republics akin to our own. It has been but natural that this community of sympathy and purpose should find expression, at any time of exceptional need, in trustful recourse to the impartial counsels of the United States, and that the successive administrations of this country, obeying the sentiments of the American people, should feel it appropriate in the spirit of reciprocal good will to befriend those States upon fitting occasion, within the necessary limitations of our own sound national policy.

For nearly a century the history of this country affords many examples of the readiness of the United States to lend its moral support to the Latin-American Commonwealths in their great task of promoting individual welfare and common harmony. In this our course has been responsive and sincere and our aim has been to do good for good's sake, ever bearing in mind that the interests of our country are affected by the common well-being of all and benefited by the maintenance of fraternal amity among all.

This dispositon on our part has naturally been more particularly availed of and evidenced with respect to the Central American Republics. Their propinquity, the direct intimacy of intercourse with our shores, the field they afford for the mutually beneficial influence of the enterprise of our citizens, all tend to foster a feeling of interest as well as of sympathy. We can not but feel solicitous for their welfare, inasmuch as the interests of our own people are sensitive to all that may adversely affect Central American stability.

For three-quarters of a century the earnest solicitude of the United States for the well-being of the Central American countries has been shown unhesitatingly, and upon frequent occasions the offices of the United States have been exerted to assure to them the internal and external tranquillity so necessary to their very existence as sovereign Commonwealths. The action of this Government since 1834 in checking and controlling invasive policies in that region culminated in the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and in the coincident treaties of Great Britain in 1859 and 1860 with Guatemala, Honduras, and Nicaragua by which the integrity of those States was affirmed for the future. While the alluring prospect of eventual interoceanic communication across the Central American territory was an obviously important factor in determining the conventional arrangements then effected, it was but a factor in the problem, the principle at stake being that the integrity, stability, and peace of Central America was a world necessity if a highway for the world's commerce were to be made between the Atlantic and Pacific. Now that the linking of the oceans by the Isthmian Canal is nearing assured realization the conservation of stable conditions in the adjacent countries becomes a still more pressing need, and all that the United States has hitherto done in that direction is amply justified, if there were no other consideration, by the one fact that this country has acquired such vast interest in that quarter as to demand every effort on its part to make solid and durable the tranquillity of the neighboring countries.

One of the most practical applications of this policy was the initiation and consummation of the peace pact between the Central American States, which was accomplished by the Washington conventions of December, 1907. By no act of the last half century has the active and impartial friendship of the United States for that neighboring group of Republics and its jealous regard for their integrity, peace, and welfare been more manifest than in the part taken by us with the cooperation of Mexico in those conventions, for the fulfillment of which we thus become morally sponsors and have ever so earnestly striven. It behooves the United States to do all in its power toward the full fruition of the benevolent purposes of those engagements, and in no way can our moral accountability be so potently met as by a practically helpful policy tending to insure peace among all the Central American States.

In the instance of Honduras, the occasions for this have been more numerous and more urgent than in the case of other States in a similar stage of development but more favored by circumstances and better equipped to cope with the difficulties of domestic unrest, political intrusion and financial embarrassment. The kindly counsels and aid of the United States have been frequently invoked in behalf of all of them; but it is Honduras, perhaps more than any other, that we have again and again assisted in the honorable composition of its differences. Outside of its relations with the other Central American States, the path of that Republic has been beset also with more than ordinary obstacles in its intercourse with foreign nations. Although richly endowed with natural wealth, its political weakness, its continual internal disturbance and its frequent unsought controversies with its neighbors have paralyzed its just development and impoverished its resources.

The financial embarrassment of Honduras has long been noteworthy. Insufficient revenue has induced repeated foreign loans, incurred without adequate provision for meeting the high interest exacted thereon, resulting in default of payment and in the incurment of still more onerous debts through still more burdensome loans placed on European markets at a large discount. As a consequence, Honduras is to-day a hopeless debtor to foreign countries, tottering under a heavy obligation which it is not within its power to satisfy. That Honduras is absolutely incapable of acquitting anything like the face value of its indebtedness is fortunately evident to its creditors. They have long been disposed to acquiesce in a compromise for the adjustment of their claims, upon terms which obviously would be the more favorable as the security for the refunded obligations should become more substantial through the acquirement of some tangible assurance that the normal revenues of the State, pledged for the payment of the debt, would be integrally devoted to the assigned purpose without danger of impairment by internal turbulence or external pressure.

That Honduras has long been the weakest link in the hitherto fragile chain of Central American peace is an obvious fact, suggesting an equally obvious remedy. In an address which I delivered in Pittsburg in May last, I said:

> Turbulence and unstable conditions in Central America have been a perennial occupation to the Department of State. By the Washington conventions, to which the United States morally has the relation of a party, it was sought to guarantee the neutrality of Honduras, because it has always been felt that a strong and stable Honduras stretching across the center of Central America would contribute more than anything else to the progress and prosperity of the five Republics, the peaceful welfare of which the United States has always promoted.

The strength and stability, so imperatively needful if Honduras is to play its due part in advancing the interests of all Central America, are incapable of realization if Honduras is to remain in its present condition, paralyzed by poverty and resultant unrest at home and a helpless defaulter to importunate creditors abroad. I had these considerations vividly in mind when, in my Pittsburg address, I said:

> Honduras has a heavy foreign debt and its finances are disorganized. American citizens have now an actual interest in the railways and wharves of the country. An American banking house has finally undertaken to refund the debt, rehabilitate the finances, and advance funds for railway and other improvements contributing directly to the country's prosperity and commerce. Such an arrangement has long been desired and our State Department is cordially supporting the project.

It is high time that Honduras should cease to be the football of the contending elements of unrest and ambition in Central America. Its moral, physical, and financial regeneration, under the strongly helpful influence of the United States, would make its conventional neutrality a positive fact and remove it from its present deplorable position as a focus of Central American disturbances. I feel that I can not do better in this relation than quote the emphatic utterance of the Secretary of State in an address upon "The spirit and purpose of American diplomacy," which he made in Philadelphia in June of last year. Speaking of the constant effort of the United States to assist the weaker Republics of this hemisphere in attaining a stature of equality as real as the equality of their sovereignty and in reaching the high level of stability, justice, moderation, and mutual responsibility which characterizes their more fortunate sisters, Mr. Knox said:

> One of the aims of the diplomacy of the United States has been to contribute as much as possible in helpfulness to these ends. True stability is best established not by military but by economic and social forces. A certain area of Central America has been notoriously racked by revolution, and, by a sad history of turbulence and instability, had been robbed of that flourishing prosperity which should be its natural heritage.
>
> While the greater American Republics have long since acquired an industrial and governmental credit comparable to that of the oldest nations, the treasuries of some of the most backward republics have at times virtually succumbed under the weight of exorbitant foreign loans, which, with improvident financial administration, have sunk them deep into debt. The problem of good government is inextricably interwoven with that of economic prosperity and sound finance; financial stability contributes perhaps more than any other one factor to political stability.
>
> The Republic of Honduras is typical as a country laboring under the disadvantages referred to. It has a heavy bonded debt, held in Europe, for which it has in its national wealth no proportional return. The interest fell in arrears and it became absolutely necessary that the debt be refunded and the finances placed upon a sound basis. At this juncture a group of American bankers came forward prepared to offer terms more advantageous to Honduras than those offered on behalf of the actual creditors. Believing that a strong Honduras would tend enormously toward a stable and prosperous Central America, this Government is heartily supporting the plan for its financial rehabilitation. If the arrangement made proves, upon the closest scrutiny, to be just and equitable, then this Government will be prepared, with the consent of the Senate if a treaty is desirable, to give it such sanction as shall afford the bankers legitimate security for their investment by recognition of such relation as the Government of Honduras may create between the payments due the lender and a proper portion of the customs revenues.

That the domestic welfare of Honduras will be assured by a sound reorganization of its fiscal system is a self-evident proposition. Wastefulness and inefficiency in the collection of revenues can not fail to decrease the income of the State in even greater ratio than economy and efficiency operate to increase it. The good results of effective and safe fiscal reform are shown in the Dominican arrangement under which the augmented revenue not only adequately provides for the governmental needs but now yields a positive surplus actually greater in amount than the total revenue of the State prior to the initiation of the present system of collection. Moreover, the removal of the collecting function from local control takes away one of the main incentives to revolutionary disturbance, when the cupidity of turbulent malcontents is often excited by the material profit to be gained by an even brief control of the customhouses. In its political aspects, too, the Republic is freed from apprehension of intervention on the part of creditor nations. Such intervention is an inherent right of sovereignty and, if unattended by territorial acquisition of American soil by a foreign power, this Government would not necessarily oppose it, especially if our own offers of help had been put aside. It is no part of the broad national policy of the United States to champion repudiation by its neighbors or to encourage them with the prospect of immunity for the irresponsibile contraction of debts which they are not in a condition to discharge; but sound policy counsels our aiding them to get out of debt and keep out of debt. It can in no wise better our good repute to turn a deaf ear to their appeals for a helping hand to lift them from the slough of default into which misfortune may have plunged them; nor could it improve the good will in which we wish to live with our American congeners were we to leave them to make probably harsh terms with their alien creditors, with the alternative of remaining responsible to such international right of redress as the injured parties might invoke.

Besides the considerations of propriety, expediency, and interest which make the present arrangement with Honduras alike desirable and mutually advantageous, its wisdom as an evolution in the direction of far-sighted international policy is to be borne in mind. Honduras is not alone in financial embarrassment. The continual disturbances of other Central American States put them, also, although to a less degree, in the category of prospective borrowers. Within a year past, Guatemala has sought the friendly counsel of the United States regarding the terms of a projected foreign loan, and it is announced, as part of the program of national recuperation put forth by the newly installed constitutional Government of Nicaragua, that the aid of the United States will be asked in effecting a readjustment of the debts of that Republic. It needs no profuse argument to show that the financial rehabilitation of the greater part of Central America will work potential good for the stability and peace of all, and lead to that development of internal resources and expansion of foreign commerce of which they are all capable, and of which they all stand in need.

It is to be observed that the convention now laid before the Senate was drawn, was signed, and now stands binding upon the Governments of the United States and of Honduras, when by them ratified, only in respect to a loan contract when one shall have been negotiated which shall be finally found satisfactory by both Governments and shall consequently be admitted under the protection of the convention.

When the representative of Honduras shall have signed the contract which has long been under negotiation with American bankers, the Department of State will subject it to final scrutiny, whereupon the Secretary of State will furnish the Senate a more detailed account of the negotiations, together with a copy of the contract, in order that the Senate may have available the fullest information for its guidance in the consideration of this important convention.

I commend the submitted Honduran convention, with all earnestness, to the favorable action of the Senate, with a view to the advice and consent of your high body to its ratification at an early day. Taking into account the existing and prospective conditions in Central America, timely action is importantly desirable.

Wm. H. Taft.

The White House,
Washington, January 26, 1911.

Loan Convention between the United States and Honduras.

The Government of Honduras having indicated the desirability of cooperation on the part of the United States for the refunding of its debt and the placing of its finances upon that sound and stable basis recognized as indispensable to assure strength and security of governmental administration, the meeting of foreign obligations, and the tranquility, prosperity, and progress of the country; and the Government of the United States, animated by a desire to promote the peace and prosperous development of all the Central American countries, and appreciating the wish of Honduras to contribute to such development by establishing on a firm footing its own material strength; and it being recognized as necessary, in view of the present conditions of Honduran finances and resources, that, to afford efficient and legitimate security and to obtain the special benefits sought, the Governments concerned should assume a special relation thereto; and the two Governments being convinced that some contract should be negotiated and concluded between the Government of Honduras and some competent and reliable American banking group, said contract to afford a beneficial, just, and equitable accomplishment of the purposes in question, have, with these objects in view, named as their plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States of America, Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State of the United States; and

The President of Honduras, Juan E. Paredes, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Republic of Honduras on special mission;

Who, having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following:

Article I.

The Government of Honduras undertakes to make and negotiate a contract providing for the refunding of its present internal and external debt and the adjustment and settlement of unliquidated claims, for the placing of its finances upon a sound and stable basis, and for the future development of the natural and economic resources of that country. The Governments of the United States and Honduras will take due note of all the provisions of the said contract when made, and will consult, in case of any difficulties, with a view to the faithful execution of the provisions of said contract, in order that all the benefits to Honduras and the security of the loan may at the same time be assured.

Article II.

The loan which shall be made by the Government of Honduras pursuant to the above undertaking shall be secured upon the customs of Honduras, and the Government of Honduras agrees not to alter the import or export customs duties, or other charges affecting the entry, exit, or transit of goods, during the existence of the loan under the said contract, without consultation and agreement with the Government of the United States.

Article III.

A full and detailed statement of the operations under this contract shall be submitted by the fiscal agent of the loan to the Department of State of the United States and to the Minister of Finance of the Government of Honduras at the expiration of each twelve months, and at such other times as may be requested by either of the two Governments.

Article IV.

The Government of Honduras, so long as the loan exists, will appoint from a list of names to be presented to it by the fiscal agent of the loan and approved by the President of the United States of America, a collector general of customs, who shall administer the customs in accordance with the contract securing said loan and will give this official full protection in the exercise of his functions. The Government of the United States will in turn afford such protection as it may find requisite.

ARTICLE V.

This convention shall be ratified and the ratifications hereof shall be exchanged at Tegucigalpa as soon as possible.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention in the English and Spanish languages and have hereunto affixed their seals.

Done in duplicate, at Washington, this tenth day of January, one thousand nine hundred and eleven.

PHILANDER C. KNOX. [SEAL.]
JUAN E. PAREDES. [SEAL.]

File No. 815.51/180.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, January 31, 1911.

The Honduran Congress rejected the Loan Convention to-day, 33 to 5.

MCCREERY.

File No. 815.51/187.

Mr. Charles A. Conant to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, February 6, 1911.

DEAR SIR: I beg to reply herewith to your request for my views of the financial aspects of the proposed loan by American bankers to the Republic of Honduras, made under the convention by which the United States proposes to cooperate with Honduras in the matter of collecting the customs revenue.

After careful examination of the text of the proposed contract, of which copy is enclosed,[1] I am satisfied that its terms are just, equitable and beneficial to the Republic of Honduras and are as favorable as she could reasonably be expected to secure from responsible banking houses in view of the present and recent condition of her finances.

The proposition embodied in the agreement between the Republic of Honduras and the bankers is, in brief, that an issue of $10,000,000 in five per cent. bonds is to be authorized by the Republic, of which a sum of $6,354,000 is to be taken at once by the bankers. In exchange for these bonds the bankers are to deliver to the Republic old debt to the face value of about $19,750,000 and cash to the amount of $2,100,000 (U. S. gold), which is to be applied to the adjustment of certain internal claims, and to the improvement and extension of the Interoceanic Railway and the acquisition of said railroad and of wharf properties, including the adjustment of claims against such properties.

---

[1] Not printed.

Of the remaining $3,646,000 of bonds, the sum of $1,146,000 is to be held for the redemption of old bonds at the rate of $170.46 for each bond of $1,000 face value, this being equivalent to a rate of 15 per cent. in cash, with the bonds at 88; and the balance of $2,500,000 is to be held in reserve, to be issued in future for public improvements, if found advisable.

Put in tabular form, the bonds authorized are to be applied to various purposes in about the following proportions:

Redemption of old debt under existing option	$3, 366, 000
Held for redemption of old debt, when presented (balance after five years may go to improvements)	1, 146, 000
To pay for cash for settlement of internal claims and railway and wharf property	2, 386, 000
To cover expenses and charges	602, 000
Held for future internal development	2, 500, 000
	$10, 000, 000

The essential benefit of the proposal lies in the fact that it would enable the Republic of Honduras to readjust a foreign debt amounting in the original principal to about $26,000,000, and now with accrued interest to more than $124,000,000, by the issue of bonds to the amount of about $4,512,000. The principal of the old debt is reduced, by the offer which has been accepted by a large majority of the bondholders, to about 15 per cent. of its face value, and the reduction of the entire claim is to about four per cent. of its gross amount. It is obvious that a readjustment upon this basis, if it is acceptable to the bondholders and will result in the restoration of order to the finances of the Republic, involves important advantages to the Republic.

The bankers take the new issue of bonds at a rate of exchange which is equivalent to a price of about 88 per cent. of par. The Republic could hardly sell bonds at a price as favorable as this, or anything approximating it, without the friendly cooperation of the United States, in some such manner as is embodied in the proposed convention. This cooperation should contribute to inspire confidence in the payment of the interest and principal of the bonds as they become due, so far as the resources specifically set aside by the convention and by the agreement shall prove adequate for this purpose.

These resources, so far as they consist of receipts from customs, do not appear to afford at present an excessive margin above the requirements of the contract. Estimating the customs receipts at $800,000 per year (U. S. gold), they would be drawn upon to the extent of $375,000 for the interest on $7,500,000 in five per cent. bonds and to the amount of $75,000 for a sinking fund of one per cent. per year. This would leave for the expenses of collecting the customs and for payment to the general Treasury of Honduras about $350,000. If, however, the entire amount of bonds authorized,—$10,000,000,—were issued, the requirements for interest and sinking fund would be $600,000, and the balance for other purposes would be only $200,000. Experience in Santo Domingo seems to show, however, that collections increase materially under a more rigid administration.

The ultimate profits of the bankers and of those through whom they distribute the bonds will depend upon the price at which the bonds can be sold to the public. For the $7,500,000 in bonds to be immediately issued (exclusive of the $2,500,000 reserved for issue in the future), the bankers will pay in cash about $2,961,000 for $19,750,000 (£4,050,000) in old bonds now under option at 15 per cent.; $1,008,500 for old bonds not yet under option; $2,100,000 for the railway and pier and for adjustment of claims; and about $529,900 for legal and other expenses, making a total of $6,600,000. This total is the exact equivalent of $7,500,000 in bonds at 88. For each point of one per cent. above the price of 88 at which the bonds can be sold by the bankers to the public, there will be a profit (if all are sold at the same price) of $75,000.

These figures include, however, the profit to be derived by the bankers from the exchange of $1,146,000 in new bonds for old bonds outstanding, a portion of which will be delayed in presentment and a portion will probably never be presented. Upon the bonds reserved for future issue, to the amount of $2,500,000, the option will remain with the Minister of Finance of the Republic to authorize their issue only when the terms offered by the bankers are satisfactory to him. It is to be considered that, even if a fair ratio of profits is obtained by the bankers, it will be at the expense of much greater labor and delay than ordinary loans at home. An issue of railway bonds for $50,000,000, for instance, if sold at a commission of two per cent., would afford a profit of $1,000,000, with much less labor for investigation, than this issue of $10,000,000 to replace obligations which have been long in default.

While the acceptance and execution of the proposed convention with the United States and of the proposed contract ought ultimately to give to the securities of Honduras a credit and value approximating to those of the Dominican Republic, the conditions under which the bonds are to be issued do not justify the expectation of such results at once. The first offer made for the Dominican five per cent. bonds was 96, and the price at which they were ultimately issued was 98½; but before the first offer the modus vivendi under which an American acted as receiver of customs had already been some time in force and a considerable sum had been deposited in a New York bank for the service of the debt. These events confirmed the belief that the proposed system could be successfully carried out and that the amount realized for the service of the debt would be more than sufficient for the purpose. Remittances to New York on account of the debt service under the modus vivendi of March 31, 1905, down to August 31, 1907, were $3,318,946.97. The amount required to be remitted was 55 per cent of total customs collections and the amount required for interest (exclusive of sinking fund), on the entire loan of $20,000,000 provided for in the agreement of 1908, was $1,000,000 annually. So favorable were the results obtained by American administration that it became possible in 1909 to make important reductions in the tariff, which explains the falling off, for the fiscal year 1910, in the statement of total customs collections as presented in the Annual Report of General Clarence R. Edwards, Chief of the Insular Bureau of the War Department. These figures are as follows:

Revenue of Santo Domingo.

Period.	Total Customs.	Part Allotted to Fiscal Agency Account.
April 1–June 30, 1905	$523,880.12	$254,158.79
Year ending June 30:
1906	2,712,821.55	1,287,158.73
1907	3,300,392.44	1,481,045.12
1908	3,446,448.20	1,630,487.76
1909	3,338,467.57	1,159,890.95
1910	2,893,042.34	1,260,000.00
Total	$16,215,052.22	$7,072,741.35

It is probable that if a modus vivendi were arranged with Honduras similar to that which was arranged in the case of the Dominican Republic, and an issue of bonds were made after it had been several years in operation, a higher price could be obtained for them than at the present time; but it is to be considered that the adoption of such a policy would require the consent of Honduras; that it would require the abandonment of the options now held upon the old loan and perhaps result in larger demands from the holders of this loan; and would postpone for several years, if not indefinitely, the benefits expected by Honduras from the definite adjustment of her debt and the rehabilitation of her credit and the early application of new cash to much-needed internal improvements.

A consideration of importance to the bankers in distributing such a loan is the present state of the investment market. There has been for some time an indisposition to take any risks in regard to securities, which has been evidenced by a great fall in quotations and extreme dullness in the stock market. It is possible that this condition of affairs will tend to send investors into the market for bonds in lieu of stocks; but such a movement has not as yet acquired sufficient momentum to deprive of grave elements of uncertainty a proposed new issue by a government whose obligations have been in default.

In pursuance of your authority to consult with Mr. Frederic B. Jennings, as representative of the bankers, a number of changes have been made in the agreements as first drawn. Several of these were secured at a consultation held on Tuesday, September 6th, between Mr. Jennings on the one hand and Mr. T. C. Dawson and myself on the other, and the others at subsequent conferences between Mr. Jennings on the one hand and representatives of the Department and myself on the other. The more important of the changes which have been thus made are as follows:

1. A more exact definition of the amount to be paid by the Collector General to the fiscal agent for the amortization of the bonds. In the original draft this was ambiguous.

2. The striking out of a paragraph which made the ratification of the convention "in a form satisfactory to the bankers" a condition precedent to the examination of the railway property by engineers on behalf of the bankers.

3. A provision that the new bonds which may not be required for the redemption of old bonds shall be left in the custody of the fiscal agent until their application for other purposes becomes legal and receives the approval of the bankers. The original provision called for the delivery of all these bonds after a term of years to the Minister of Finance, in whose hands they might have remained for a long time and perhaps would never have been required in full for the redemption of old bonds.

4. The fixing of a term of two years for the submission and settlement of old claims, after which time the balance set aside for the purpose will become available for the reconstruction of the railroad. In the original agreement there was no provision as to the time to be taken for settling such claims.

5. The insertion of a provision that the sum of $2,500,000 in new bonds, held in reserve for further improvements in the Republic, shall not be available for issue except with the approval of the bankers, communicated through the Department of State of the United States. This will enable the Department to subject to scrutiny any proposed plans and contracts for the employment of the proceeds of these bonds, and to transmit only such plans as offer substantial advantages to Honduras.

6. The insertion in the proposed fiscal agreement of a provision that the grant by the Republic to the fiscal agent of the Interoceanic Railroad and the wharf at Puerto Cortez shall be only "in trust for the holders of the bonds." The insertion of this clause was required to establish clearly the fact that the grant was in the nature of a mortgage security and not a transfer of the final title.

7. The change in the rate of premium at which bonds may be called for redemption from five per cent. to two and one-half per cent. The time after which such calls may begin is changed from five years to ten years. The fiscal agent is authorized in the meantime to buy bonds at the market price, but not exceeding the proposed rate of premium for called bonds. Under a similar provision of the contract with Santo Domingo, several hundred thousand dollars worth of bonds have been purchased for the sinking fund at a price below par.

In conclusion, I would repeat what was said at the outset—that the opportunity afforded to the Republic to readjust a debt which now represents $124,000,000 by a bond issue of $4,512,000 (exclusive of the amounts applied for other purposes) is an opportunity which comes but rarely to any State, and if all parties are now ready to subscribe the necessary agreements, this fact alone would go far to militate against embarking again upon the possibilities of long delay and uncertainty which the rejection of this adjustment and the effort to find some other would almost necessarily involve.

Yours very respectfully,

CHARLES A. CONANT.

File No. 815.51/192A.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Minister of Honduras.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 8, 1911.

MY DEAR MR. MINISTER: The other day you mentioned to me that you wanted to go to New York to sign the loan contract as soon as this Department had concluded its preliminary examination of that document. Therefore I hasten to write you that we have now done so and to tell you at the same time that Mr. Conant, the financial expert, has made his final statement that he regards the draft contract in its present form as just and equitable and probably the best that could be obtained for Honduras, and that we are likewise informed by a firm of lawyers who were employed by the Department to examine it that they have reached a similar conclusion, as will be set forth in a letter they are to send us in a few days. Copies of these two letters are at your disposition.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 815.51/197.

Mr. Charles A. Conant to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, February 11, 1911.

DEAR SIR: I have examined the copies of the proposed contracts between the bankers and the fiscal agent of the Government of Honduras which are enclosed herewith,[1] with a view to the changes made since my letter to the Department of February 6th last.

I do not find in the changes made any reason to modify the opinions expressed in that letter. The changes appear to be of a nature to add to the protection afforded to the Government of Honduras under the contract, and to give greater clearness to certain minor provisions.

Yours very respectfully,

CHARLES A. CONANT.

File No. 815.51/204A.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Minister of Honduras.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 11, 1911.

MY DEAR MR. MINISTER: Referring to my note of the 8th instant, and to our conversation of yesterday, it gives me pleasure to transmit to you the final copies of the bankers' and fiscal agent contracts relating to the proposed Honduran loan. I am glad to be able to inform you that the Department is now in receipt of a favorable report from the attorneys who were requested by the Department to examine the contracts from the standpoint of Honduras.

The attorney for the bankers informs the Department, in a letter dated yesterday, that these agreements are now satisfactory to the bankers and that they are prepared to execute the same whenever you are ready to do so.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 815.51/209A.

The Secretary of State to the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 13, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor, pursuant to the direction of the President and in conformity with the promise made in his Executive Message of January 26, 1911, with which he submitted to the Senate a Convention, signed January 10, 1911, between the United States and the Republic of Honduras "concerning a loan which the Republic contemplated making with citizens of the United States," to furnish to the Senate, through your Honorable Committee, a more detailed account of the negotiation of that convention than was given in the message of the President, together with a copy of the Contract Agreement in question, which is about to be signed on behalf of the Republic of Honduras, of the first part, and the empowered representative of an American banking group, consisting of Messrs. J. P. Morgan and Company, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, the National City Bank and the First National Bank, all of New York, of the second part. I also furnish a copy of the corollary Agreement to be made between the Republic of Honduras of the first part and Guaranty Trust Company of New York, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, of the second part, as the "Fiscal Agent of the Loan," stipulating the powers and duties of that Company acting as Trustee for the holders of the proposed bonds; as Transfer Agents of such bonds and as Fiscal Agent of the Republic of Honduras in respect of the proposed loan. In thus furnishing the indicated statement and documents, it is my aim to afford the Senate, in available form, the fullest information for its guidance in the consideration of this important convention.

The Government of Honduras has long been cognizant of the need of reorganizing the deplorable financial condition of that Republic by the refundment of its debt, and of the reestablishment of the Honduran national credit through some equitable transaction with its foreign creditors whereby the heavy debt, improvidently contracted during nearly half a century and additionally burdened by the defaulted interest of many years, should be adjusted and consolidated into a single obligation, within the powers of the Republic to discharge and based upon reasonable guaranties for the security of the revenues to be devoted to its acquittance. Efforts in this direction have heretofore been fruitless, lacking in comprehensiveness and operating piecemeal to increase the already insupportable load of debt and thereby to diminish still further the eventual ability to meet the obligation. Each failure but aggravated the situation. Each year's added default but augmented the difficulties, and emphasized the need of some practical as well as equitable general arrangement for the rehabilitation of the Republic's financial status. A renewed effort in that direction became for Honduras an imperative necessity.

The present movement of Honduras toward effecting, with the assistance of the United States, this indispensable reform in the fiscal condition of the Republic began to take shape about a year ago. Preliminary conferences of the European creditors having disclosed their willingness to reach a rational adjustment with the Honduran Government, conditioned upon the negotiation of a refunding loan, and it appearing that financial interests in the United States were not indisposed to consider the negotiation of such a loan, the Government of Honduras, in January 1909, approached the Government of the United States with a view to making a conventional arrangement whereby the sanction of this Government could be obtained to some provision for securing the collection of the customs receipts of Honduras in such manner as to afford adequate revenue for the needs of the Republic and at the same time provide sufficient surplus income to satisfy the obligations of the loan. At the preliminary stage of the renewed Honduran negotiations with the Council of Foreign Bondholders, the Government of the United States was sounded in a necessarily general and vague way, inviting rather assurance of benevolent sympathy in the projected settlement than categorical formulation of a plan of international cooperation. It was not until April, 1909, that the Honduran Executive, realizing the disadvantageous terms then proposed by the foreign bondholders and the probably onerous character of any arrangements which might be made in the financial markets of Europe, sought the good offices of the United States in endeavoring to conclude a satisfactory arrangement with an American financial group for the general refunding of the entire debt of Honduras.

The friendly offices of the Department of State were accordingly used to bring reputable American banking interests into communication with the Government of Honduras, it being understood that the Government of the United States would not participate as a principal in this contractual transaction, but that, the initiative being taken by the Honduran Government, the feasibility of lending moral aid to the Republic in the attempt to reorganize its finances would be considered with every disposition to acquiesce so far as might be practicable and in proper consonance with national policies. Despite the uninviting character of the proposed investment in view of the long-standing default of Honduras toward its national and foreign creditors, the Department of State was fortunate in being able to arouse the interest of responsible financial elements in this country, with a view to bringing about such an arrangement between the Republic and the American bankers as should meet the conditions with due regard to the fiscal situation in Honduras and the sovereign rights of the State in its dealings with citizens of other nations; and in July, 1909, the proposals of Honduras were answered by offering to put that Government in touch with American bankers through any representative whom the Honduran Government might send to the United States with a view to opening negotiations.

The Government of Honduras, deeming the prospect of the terms of an arrangement with American bankers more advantageous to the Republic than those which had been offered by foreign bankers, and the bondholders being also of the same mind, the negotiations theretofore had with a British syndicate, which had seemed liable to lead to an arrangement also objectionable because too regardless of certain important vested American interests, were abandoned by the mutual consent of the Honduran and British Governments, in order to leave the way clear for the proposed American negotiation.

In August, 1909, the American Legation was notified by the Honduran Foreign Office that the Government of the Republic had decided to appoint a commission to visit the United States to confer concerning the settlement of the foreign debt of Honduras. Two commissioners—General Juan E. Paredes, Minister of Finance, and Señor don Paulino Valladares—were thereupon appointed to negotiate directly with the representatives of the American bankers. The commissioners reached New York toward the end of September. Their conferences with the American bankers were had without intervention on the part of the Department of State, the Minister of Honduras being advised (October 7, 1909) that the United States stood absolutely impartial in the matter and had no interest except a natural desire to see the neighboring State enjoy peace and maintain good financial standing.

The ensuing negotiations were perforce protracted, owing on the one hand to the necessity of frequent consultations with the home Government at Tegucigalpa, which at the time was embarrassed by domestic political problems, and on the other to the complex negotiations which had to be conducted between the American bankers and the several associations of Honduran bond-holders in different European countries. As to the latter, an understanding was finally reached by which the foreign debt was to be refunded at about 3½ per centum of the total of its face value, swelled inordinately by the long accumulation of defaulted interest. As respects the former, much time was consumed in bringing about an understanding with the Government of Honduras as to the extent to which the countenance and support of the United States could be lent to the transaction, in a manner and to a degree comporting alike with the sovereign self-respect of the Honduran Republic and with the American interests involved, and yet be confined within the limits of our well-defined national policies.

By the middle of December last, the fiscal agreement between the American bankers and the Government of Honduras had taken definite and mutually satisfactory shape, and a draft of a convention between the United States and Honduras defining the attitude of this Government towards the loan transaction had been considered and accepted. Its signature took place January 10, 1911, and it is now before the Senate for consideration.

In the final stages of the negotiations the Department of State played the part of a disinterested counsellor, scrutinizing all the features of the proposed contract with deliberate care and seeking in every possible way to reduce the almost fantastic indebtedness of Honduras within practical limits, in order to free that State from its intolerable and menacing burdens without imposing any new load beyond its power to carry.

How jealous of the best interest of Honduras and how sensible of its grave responsibility the Department of State has been in responding to the request of Honduras for its good offices in placing a loan in the United States, may be judged from the fact that, not content with the most exhaustive examination of the earlier draft contracts, the Department employed one of the best known American financial experts to subject these draft contracts to a technical examination, especially to determine whether in any respect they might be found inequitable, economically unsound, or short of the most favorable terms that the Government of Honduras was likely to be able to obtain in any quarter. A copy of his analysis of the contracts is herewith submitted for your consideration.[1] Further than this, the provisions of the two contracts, the one with the American financial group for the proposed loan, the second with the Trust Company selected to act as Fiscal Agent of the Loan, were subject [subjected?] at successive stages to competent legal analysis within and without the Department of State. As a result of this searching revision, amendments have been made from time to time, in most instances with a view to making the terms of the engagements entirely equitable to Honduras as well as to bring them in all regards into appropriate conformity with the sovereign rights of the Republic. A copy [2] of the opinion of the attorneys consulted by the Department is also enclosed for the Committee's information. Throughout the entire transaction, the influence of the Department of State has been exerted to establish the cordial friendliness of the United States for Honduras and to ensure just respect for Honduran interests. In so doing, the Department of State has aimed to maintain and affirm the high policy which has ever consistently controlled the intercourse of the United States with Honduras and the other Republics of Central America. It has, from first to last, been mindful of the traditional policy of friendly aid and assistance to the sovereign commonwealths of the northern continent and has been animated by a sense of the moral obligation to promote their wellbeing in all practicable ways. For nearly a century the United States has had this benign purpose constantly in view and it is gratifying to recall that through its timely aid good has been often wrought in composing difference between American countries and in making broader their path to that prosperity which rewards peace.

In its share of the transaction the Department of State has appreciated the merit of the desire alike of the foreign creditors and the bankers that some form of sanction should be obtained from the Government of the United States calculated to remove the execution of the contract from the field of domestic turbulence and political vicissitudes in Honduras and to insure the faithful and honest collection of the revenues pledged for the security of the contemplated loan.

As will be seen, while the Convention in no wise makes the Government of the United States a direct party to the loan-contract, it confirms and continues in regard thereto the kindly counsel and sanction which this Government has accorded since the matter was broached by the Government of Honduras. The two Governments will mutually take note of all the provisions of said contract when it shall be made, and thereafter, in case of any difficulties arising in carrying out its provisions, the two Governments agree to consult with a view to the faithful execution thereof. In like manner the two Governments agree to consult with regard to any change of the Honduran customs duties or other dues calculated to affect the revenues pledged as security for the debt, and it is mutually agreed that each Government shall be, periodically or when necessary, informed of all operations under the loan contract. Unlike the Dominican precedent, the present arrangement stipulates the appointment of a collector-general of the revenues, not by the President of the United States under the sole protection of the United States, but by the Government of Honduras from a list of names to be presented by the Fiscal Agent of the loan and approved by the President of the United States; and this collector-general is to receive from the Government of Honduras full protection in the exercise of his functions, with such additional protection from the Government of the United States as the latter may find requisite.

---

[1] See ante, Mr. Conant's letter of February 6.

[2] Not printed.

As affecting the tranquility of Honduras and through it the tranquility of the five Republics grouped to the north of Panama and the Canal, the importance of the present measure can hardly be overrated. Viewed as a mode in which American capital and enterprise can be most beneficially used and the sanction of this Government can best be accorded in the discharge of the duty of our position in the zone of the Caribbean, it illustrates the principle that the capital of the more advanced nations of the world is better employed in assisting the peaceful development of those more backward than in financing wars.

To maintain its neutrality, Honduras must have strength, stability, and support. Financial rehabilitation is obviously the first necessity to that condition. Hence the great natural interest of the United States in the Convention now transmitted to the Senate.

By the signature of the Washington Conventions was recorded the conviction of all Central America that a neutral Honduras would be the foundation of Central American peace: a conviction evidenced also on the part of Mexico and the United States by their participation in the negotiations, and a conviction which so far as the United States is concerned has by common consent thrown upon us a measure of moral responsibility to do what we properly can to prevent this most important provision of these Conventions from becoming a farce.

Finally, I feel it my duty especially to recommend the consideration and approval of this Convention at the earliest date, because upon it depends the carrying out of the loan which is so vital to Honduras; because the complicated arrangements made by the bankers affecting European creditors cannot much longer be held open, and if this Convention fail it may be difficult once more to interest American capital in a venture which it has not embarked upon without considerable public spirit and patriotic feeling; and because it may not be possible again so well to safeguard vested American rights in Honduras, unliquidated American claims, and foreign bondholders, and withal so well to protect the interests and entity and the political welfare of the Republic of Honduras.

I have [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 815.51/208.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 16, 1911.

Bankers' contracts executed in English February 15, and will soon be signed in Spanish.

Wilson.

File No. 815.51/219.

The Minister of Honduras to the Secretary of State.

LEGATION OF HONDURAS,
Washington, February 20, 1911.

SIR: Pursuant to the convention dated January 10, 1911, between the Republic of Honduras and the United States of America, I have, on behalf of my Government and in accordance with its instructions, made and executed with an American banking group, consisting of J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the National City Bank of New York, and the First National Bank of New York, a loan contract, dated February 15, 1911; and with the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as fiscal agent, a contract securing the said loan, dated the same day; both contracts being in the form already submitted to and approved by your Department. In accordance with the requirements of said contracts, I accompany an original executed counterpart of each contract[1] in English and in Spanish, to be filed with the Department of State of the United States of America.

Kindly acknowledge the receipt of the said contracts as executed and filed in conformity to said convention.

Accept [etc.]

LUIS LAZO A.

File No. 815.51/217.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, February 21, 1911.

Conclusion of any loan contract by Honduras prohibited by the Assembly on February 20, pending report by a Commission of Jurists appointed to study the debt of Honduras and ascertain its amount.

MCCREERY.

File No. 815.51/233.

The Secretary of State to the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 27, 1911.

MY DEAR SENATOR CULLOM: For the convenience of the members of the Committee on Foreign Relations I am taking the liberty of sending herewith fourteen copies of the substance of the remarks made by Mr. Jennings before the Committee on Friday, concerning the Honduras loan convention and contracts.

I am this morning in receipt of a letter[1] from Mr. Jennings in which he points out the urgent necessity for prompt action on this convention. I also enclose fourteen copies of this letter.

Very sincerely yours,

P. C. KNOX.

---

[1] Not printed.

[Inclosure.]

Gentlemen of the Committee:

I had not expected to make any statement, but have come here at the request of the Secretary of State to furnish such information as you may desire in respect to the agreements which have recently been executed, providing for the issue of bonds by the Republic of Honduras and their purchase by a group of New York bankers and the disposition of the proceeds of the proposed loan.

Honduras has an area of about 48,000 square miles and a population of about 500,000, of which about ten per cent. are white of Spanish blood, eighty per cent. are Spanish and Indian, and ten per cent. Spanish and negro, the merchants and farmers, the more intelligent and substantial people of the country, being largely white. Its most important port upon the Pacific is Amapala, and upon the Atlantic side is Puerto Cortes, which is distant about 900 miles from New Orleans and also from Galveston, and about 850 miles from Mobile, with all of which places it has regular steamer connection. It is generally admitted to be one of the richest of the Central American countries in natural resources, which, however, have not been developed because the country has been constantly disturbed by revolutions, largely fomented by neighboring republics, and has been crushed under a burden of debt, and because of the lack of transportation facilities.

The purpose of the proposed loan is to furnish money with which to settle the debt of Honduras, to acquire, improve and extend its railroad and wharf at Puerto Cortes, and for other internal improvements necessary to the development of the country.

The Republic has outstanding bonds issued in 1867, 1869 and 1870 to the amount of about $27,000,000, upon which substantially no interest has ever been paid. These bonds are held largely in England and on the Continent, and the amount due upon them at the present time is upwards of $124,000,000. In addition, the Republic has an internal debt amounting to about $2,000,000 and other indebtedness and claims amounting to upwards of $1,000,000. Arrangements have been made by which the total indebtedness of Honduras, thus amounting to upwards of $127,000,000, can be discharged for less than $5,500,000.

The agreement made with the bankers provides for the ultimate issue of not exceeding $10,000,000 of five per cent. forty-year bonds, with a sinking fund of one per cent. per annum, to redeem the bonds before maturity. $7,500,000 of the bonds are to be issued at once, the remaining $2,500,000 to be reserved for future issue with the approval of the bankers and the Department of State of the United States when the needs and the development of the country are sufficient to justify it, the proceeds of such issue to be used only for the extension of the railroad or other internal improvements necessary to the industrial development of the country. The payment of interest and sinking fund upon the bonds is to be secured by the customs revenues of the Republic, to be collected by a Collector General appointed by Honduras from a list of names selected by the Fiscal Agent of the Loan and approved by the President of the United States, such revenues to the extent necessary to be paid by the Collector General to the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, the Fiscal Agent of the Loan and trustee for the new bondholders. The bonds are also to be secured by the net revenues from the railroad and wharf, which are likewise to be paid to the Fiscal Agent of the Loan.

The $7,500,000 of bonds to be issued at once are to be purchased by the bankers at 88. From the proceeds about $4,050,000 are required to take up the outstanding foreign bonds at fifteen per cent. of the face value of the principal, without interest. It is estimated that about $700,000 will be required to settle the internal debt, the validity and amounts of which are to be determined either by agreement, approved by an assessor appointed by the Secretary of State of the United States, or by three arbitrators, one to be appointed by the Republic, one by the claimants and one by the Secretary of State. It is estimated that about $700,000 will be required for the acquisition of the railroad and wharf and the settlement of other outstanding indebtedness and claims against the Republic connected therewith, such amounts also to be determined by agreement, approved by an assessor appointed by the Secretary of State or by three arbitrators, one to be appointed by the Republic, one by the claimants and one by the Secretary of State.

The remainder of the proceeds of the loan, amounting to not less than $700,000, is to be applied, with the approval of the Fiscal Agent and upon certificate of an engineer to be selected by it, to the improvement and extension of the railroad and the construction of branches which the Republic believes will largely increase its revenues and aid in the development of the country.

Pending the application of these amounts they are to be held by the Guaranty Trust Company for the purposes stated.

The wharf at Puerto Cortes is about 750 feet long, runs parallel with the land and has thirty feet depth of water alongside, so that any ships of whatever size can come up directly to the wharf. It was originally built and maintained and is now owned by W. S. Valentine of the City of New York. The wharfage dues are fixed by law and by the terms of his concession one-half of the earnings of the wharf are paid annually to the Republic. The total net earnings of the wharf amount to upwards of $30,000 per year. The custom-house at Puerto Cortes is situated upon the wharf and the tracks of the railroad run along it within eight feet of ships lying alongside. There is no other entrance to Puerto Cortes.

The railroad known as the Interoceanic Railroad was originally projected to extend from Puerto Cortes across the country to Amapala, a distance of about 220 miles. 57 miles are now in operation; 5 miles additional are substantially completed, but without rails laid; 5 miles additional are graded, and for 10 miles additional the right of way has been cleared. About one-half of the railroad was built from part of the proceeds of the bonds issued more than forty years ago, and the remainder was built by Valentine and the Honduras Syndicate. The Honduras Syndicate is an American corporation, composed chiefly of New York men, who, under a concession from the Honduras Government, operated and extended the road and made advances on account of customs to the Republic until several years ago they were ousted by the Government in part upon representations from the British Government claiming that the foreign bondholders had a lien upon the road. The Honduras Syndicate claims to have actually paid out in such advances to the Republic and in the maintenance and extension of the said railroad upwards of $700,000 in cash and its claim against the Honduras Government is based upon those facts. The railroad is now held under a lease made to Valentine, in which the Syndicate has an interest, which was originally for thirty years and now has about twenty-eight years to run, at an annual rent of about $10,000 per year for four years, regularly increasing every four years up to twelve years, and thereafter $25,000 per year, under which lease the first four years' rent was advanced to the Government. The net earnings of the railroad and wharf amount to about $150,000 per year, on the basis of the actual returns for the last six months of the last fiscal year.

As the result of negotiations between the Honduras Commissioners and the representatives of Valentine and the Syndicate, it was found that the railroad and wharf could be acquired, and all their claims connected therewith or otherwise against the Republic, could be settled for about $750,000, but at the suggestion of the State Department provision has been made in the agreements whereby these claims must all be submitted to and determined by arbitration both in respect to validity and amount.

The credit of Honduras abroad is so bad on account of its continuous default in the payment of interest upon the large amounts of bonds previously issued by it, that the bankers have with considerable reluctance entered into this agreement for the purchase of the proposed issue of bonds and have been largely influenced thereto by the belief that it will be greatly to the public advantage of this country to assure more stable conditions in Honduras which on account of its geographical position will largely tend to tranquilize the entire Central American situation. They also believe, however, that if the customs can be honestly collected and applied that the amount required for the service of the loan can be easily provided without encroaching upon the amount required for the expenses of the Government.

The revenues of the Republic for the year 1909 consisted of

Customs duties	$766, 495 gold
Liquor and powder monopolies stamp tax, etc	887, 873 "
Making total receipts of	1, 654, 818 "
While the total expenses amounted to	1, 643, 360 "

Of these expenses 39% or $643,206 gold were incurred in the War Department.

Payments on account of the internal debt during that year were $251,635 gold.

The superintendent of the railroad and wharf estimates that with the extensions and branches to be built from part of the proceeds of this loan, the net earnings of these properties will be upwards of $300,000 gold per annum.

The Honduras Commissioners estimated that the war expenses under more stable government could be reduced at least one-half, thus saving on the basis of the year 1909, $321,603 gold per annum.

The amount of the annual payments upon the internal debt, which are to be discharged by part of the proceeds of this loan, will be saved, amounting for the year 1909 to $251,635 gold per annum.

In addition to these it is believed that the increase in customs, due to greater stability in the Government and also to an honest and business like administration, will alone amount to sufficient to offset the amount required for the service of the loan.

In the case of San Domingo the customs increased from $1,843,910 gold in 1905 to $3,354,776 gold in 1908.

The service of the loan will require $450,000 per year, and there would seem to be no doubt that under a proper administration that amount can easily be provided without encroaching at all upon the amount required for the expenses of the Government.

The obligation of the bankers to purchase the bonds is conditioned upon the consummation of the proposed arrangement and the delivery of the bonds on or before June 1st.

The old foreign bonds to the amount of $20,000,000 of principal have for more than a year been deposited with the Council of Foreign Bondholders subject to the proposed adjustment, and the bankers are advised that unless the proposed arrangement is consummated without undue delay it will be impossible longer to hold these bonds on deposit, and if they are once returned to their holders, it will be difficult, if not impossible, again to obtain assents and deposits, and that this certainly can not be done without an increase in the amount to be paid.

File No. 815.51/219.

The Secretary of State to the Minister of Honduras.

No. 23.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 4, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge your communication of the 20th ultimo, reciting that pursuant to the convention dated January 10th, 1911, between the Republic of Honduras and the United States of America you have, on behalf of your Government and in accordance with its instructions, made and executed with the American banking group consisting of J. P. Morgan and Company, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, the National City Bank of New York, and the First National Bank of New York, a loan contract dated February 15th, 1911; and with the Guaranty Trust Company of New York as fiscal agent a contract securing the said loan, dated the same day.

I have also the honor to state that these agreements, made pursuant to the provisions of the convention of January 10, 1911, have under date of February 20, 1911, been duly and properly filed with the Department of State as provided in their articles 11 and 12, respectively.

Accept [etc.]

(For Mr. Knox:)
ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 815.51/241.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 161.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, March 25, 1911.

SIR: Referring to my No. 126, of the 2nd ultimo,[1] I have the honor to enclose copy and translation of a "Manifesto of the National Congress to the Honduran People" signed by most of the deputies, dated February 14, 1911, containing the reasons for the action of the Congress on January 31 last in disapproving the United States-Honduras Convention signed in Washington on January 10, 1911.

This manifesto has not yet been published.

I have [etc.]

FENTON R. MCCREERY.

[Inclosure—Translation.]

Manifesto of the National Congress to the Honduran People.

HONDURANS:

In the face of events such as the present ones, which place the autonomy and the independence of the Fatherland in danger, the National Congress, through its regard for the authority with which you have honored it, believes it ought to make known to you the motives upon which it founded Decree No. 20 of January 31st last when it disapproved the Convention submitted for its consideration by the Executive Power, and which was signed in Washington on the 10th of the same month by Señor Juan E. Paredes, Plenipotentiary of Honduras, and Mr. Philander C. Knox, Plenipotentiary of the United States of America.

This Convention which treats of a loan which it is sought to negotiate in the name of Honduras, is a matter of such moment that the Congress opines that it should be understood by the whole country and that all Hondurans should be called upon who are capable of rendering an opinion on a matter which not only is to bind them during the remainder of their days, but also their children and their children's children. As the Convention was not given out by the press, upon its submission for the ratification of the sovereign representatives of the people, the latter were placed in the necessity of studying it with due care in order to accept or reject it freely; but as it was presented to them for consideration in secret session and with the intimation that an early decision was urgent, there remained neither opportunity nor time for a conscientious study. Under these circumstances Congress, desiring to proceed with the greatest zeal and prudence—for its duty was to safeguard the interests entrusted to it by the people as well as the sacred trust bequeathed us by our forefathers and which is symbolized in the words Independence, Liberty, Fatherland—determined not to act immediately concerning the Convention and agreed to name a special committee to report thereon, composed of Deputies Licenciados Leandro Valladares, Pedro A. Medal, Rómulo E. Durón, Timoteo Miralda, Francisco Escobar, Emilio Mazier; Deputies Octavio Ugarte, José Manuel Zelaya, Dr. Eusebio Toledo; Licenciado José María Galves, Licenciado Nestor Colindres Zúñiga and Ines Navarro.

Notwithstanding the fact that this committee was a special one with large membership, the magnitude of the matter and the desire for the most accurate solution impelled the Congress to cause to be heard the most noted jurisconsults as well as other distinguished persons who, though not professional men, could, because of their well-known eminence in the country and their upright judgment, also aid in the best solution with their opinions. It was provided, therefore, that the following lawyers should be heard: Policarpo Bonilla, Angel Ugarte, Pedro J. Bustillo, Rafael Alvarado Manzano, Saturinino Medal, Miguel

---

[1] Not printed.

Oquelí Bustillo, Dionisio Gutiérrez, Alberto A. Rodríguez, Antonio R. Vallejo, César Bonilla, Jerónimo Zelaya, Frederico G. Celés, Crescencio Gómez, Esteban Guardiola and Manuel A. Reina, and Generals Máximo B. Rosales and José María Reina. By consulting the opinions of such varied and intelligent men, Congress sought to enlighten its own opinion with what might be called the national conscience as interpreted by its most eminent and distinguished organs, since it would be composed of individuals of all political creeds and varied social significance.

These measures having been taken, the session was adjourned, and the Deputies having been invited to enter the reception room of the President of the Republic, they were given the opportunity to listen to observations made by this high functionary, and as a result thereof, they returned to the Sessions Hall, declared a continued and secret session, and announced the urgency of decision—a single discussion and during that session—of the matter in question; and, after lengthy consideration, the Convention was disapproved by 32 votes to 4. The above is set forth more fully in the proceedings of the session of January 31, which is herewith attached, together with those of the sessions of January 21, 23 and 24 since they contain data in connection with the negotiations relative to the loan. The decree of disapproval reads as follows:

> Decree No. 20. The National Congress, in view of the Convention signed in the city of Washington on the tenth of this month by Señor don Juan E. Paredes as Plenipotentiary of Honduras and Mr. Philander C. Knox as Plenipotentiary of the United States of America, and in the exercise of the power conferred upon it by Article 90, number 22, of the Political Constitution of the State, decrees:
>
> Sole Article. That the Convention under consideration be disapproved.
>
> Given in Tegucigalpa, in the Sessions Hall, on the thirty-first day of January, one thousand nine hundred and eleven.
>
> Francisco Escobar
> President.
>
> Leandro Valladares, Secretary.
> Ramon Fiallos, Secretary.

The reasons for this decree are at the disposal of all.

In accordance with Articles 2 and 4 of the Political Constitution, Honduras is a free, sovereign and independent nation; all public power emanates from the people; the functionaries of the State have no other powers than those expressly given them by law; and any act of theirs not so given is void.

In accordance with Article 21 of the Constitution, one of the rights of the citizen is to aspire to public office.

In accordance with Article 90, numbers 8, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29, of the Constitution the Legislative Power makes provision for the security and defense of the Republic; approves, modifies or disapproves treaties celebrated with other nations; regulates land and maritime commerce; approves or disapproves the records of public expenditurs; fixes the annual Budget of Expenses, taking as a basis the probable receipts; imposes taxes; regulates the payment of the national debt; orders the alienation of national property or its employment for public uses; and decrees loans.

In accordance with Article 92 of the Constitution, the powers of the Legislative Power are non-transferable.

In accordance with Article 108, numbers 2, 3, 4, and 16, of the Constitution, the Executive Power defends the independence and the honor of the nation and the integrity of its territory; executes the laws, and causes them to be observed, issuing, to that end, without altering the spirit thereof; the official decrees and orders; nominates the Secretaries and the Subsecretaries of State and the other employees of the Executive Department, in conformity with the law; causes the revenue of the State to be collected; and regulates its investment in accordance with the law.

In accordance with Article 109 of the same, the acts of the Executive Power which are not despatched through the appropriate Ministry shall not be fulfilled, and the President and the Minister shall be wholly responsible for acts committed in violation of the Constitution and the laws.

And in accordance with Articles 137, 138, 139 and 140 of the Constitution, all expenditures made without the sanction of law are illegal; the product of the duties, imposts and taxes form part of the national Treasury; the Executive Power shall not be able to celebrate important contracts which may compromise the Public Treasury without previously publishing the proposal in the official publication and receiving public bids; and to conduct the administration of the National Treasury there shall be an Auditor General or a Superior Board of Accounts.

Now, by the Paredes-Knox Convention, the text of which is attached, the sovereignty and the independence of Honduras is assailed: 1. Because, instead of Honduran citizens nominated by the Executive Power or by Congress, as the case may be, without foreign intervention, to take charge of the customs, there will be named by our Government for such purpose, a Collector General under the protection of the Government of the United States, from a list of names which may be Honduran citizens or not, such list to be presented to the Government by the Fiscal Agent for the loan, and to be approved by the President of the United States. 2. Because, although the list were made up of Honduran citizens alone with the right of holding public office as prescribed by the law, the appointment would be void at the outset because of the obligation to make it from a list of persons presented to our Government by a foreign Government, a provision which, under the Constitution, has no place in our administrative régime; 3. Because the Fiscal Agent for the loan, concerning whose appointment nothing is said, does not fill an office of constitutional or legislative creation, for our Constitution creates the office of Auditor General or the Superior Board of Accounts to supervise everything pertaining to the public funds, and to accept the foreign Fiscal Agent is to disregard the provisions of our fundamental law; 4. Because, with the funds of the loan and those of the customs held by functionaries named in violation of the Constitution, the latter, who in reality would not be subject to the Government of Honduras, but to that of the United States, would place in danger the security and defense of the Fatherland, which depends not only on its citizens and its arms but also on its resources. Nothing would be gained by requesting a complete detailed report every year or whenever the Government of Honduras might wish it, if this Government lacked the power to act solely and exclusively in the administration of the funds and in the selection of the persons who administer them; and besides the illegality of a Fiscal Agent, concerning whose appointment nothing is known, and of a Collector of Customs appointed in the manner indicated by the Convention, the fact exists that the clauses referring thereto constitute an offense to Hondurans, by adjudging them morally and intellectually incapable of administering their revenues, of honoring their obligations and of respecting their laws; 5. Because, with Congress possessing the right to regulate land and maritime commerce, it can increase or diminish the import and export duties and those pertaining thereto, as it notes that the one action or the other favors the increase of Treasury receipts, and thereby it would the more quickly fulfill its obligations, whereas by binding itself not to alter its tariff during the existence of the loan, without consulting or coming to an agreement with the United States, it could not obtain these advantages, since by renouncing a constitutional prerogative, its future would not be contingent upon its convenience or its will, and the loan instead of being liquidated in a shorter time, would be subject to the time imposed by the conditions of the Convention; 6. Because the payment of the national debt ought to be adjusted by Congress without foreign intervention, and having at its disposal for that purpose the national wealth and with the power to indicate how it shall be employed for public uses, it has at hand sufficient means to realize this object, by offering them as a guaranty for the obligations contracted, without the necessity of the intervention of any government between Honduras and the lender to effect an agreement and ensure its fulfillment, just as El Salvador, Guatemala, Costa Rica, Chile and other countries have done; 7. Because Congress fixes, approves or disapproves annually the public expenditures, and these should not, either in their entirety nor in part, be indicated by foreign administrators, but should be determined by the Congress in the exercise of its attributes and in conformity with the laws; 8. Because the protection offered by the Convention to the Collector General of Customs who is appointed in accordance therewith, and which will be such as is deemed necessary by the Government of the United States, constitutes a menace, for Honduras being a weak country and the customs receipts managed by an employee of the American Government, every time that this agent clashes with the Honduran authorities protection would be afforded him and not the latter; and by suggesting this protection the regularity and the seriousness of the acts of the Government of Honduras are discredited and it is regarded with hostility as if it were a question not of a country which has lived and aspires to live honorably, but of an uncivilized country against which it is necessary to take precautions, an attitude which is not substantiated by the existence of the record of the loans of 1867, 1869 and 1870, for it is known that this account constitutes in its greater part a scandalous fraud of which Honduras was the victim, in view of which the British Parliament, in 1875, refused to authorize the British Government to uphold the creditors in a coercive claim; and 9. Because the powers of the Legislative Power being non-transferable, the latter cannot consent that the Executive Power should put into practice a Convention which annuls said powers, which violates the Constitution and which transforms Honduras from a free country into an administrative dependency of the United States.

Turning to another side of the question, Congress discovers that the credit, trustworthiness and responsibility of the makers of the loan are not enumerated and that, furthermore, it is not shown that our Administration has calculated what and how great are the benefits accruing to it by contracting a loan destined for the various ends here enumerated: foreign debt, internal debt and the adjustment and settlement of non-liquidated credits. In a certain given case the loan might be justified for one or several of these purposes or ends but not for all. And in this connection, the terms of the Convention declare the union and indivisibility of the various aspects of the economic credit of Honduras.

Our Administration cannot, at the present time, gauge the opportuneness of contracting a loan and of contracting it exclusively with American lenders, thus refusing to avail themselves of competition or unforeseen opportunities offered in the economic world by other than American capital.

But it was not so much economic considerations as those of constitutional character, which are and ought to be in a republican country those of the highest category, that decided the Congress to disapprove the Convention. The Legislative Power of Honduras has from no point of view power to compromise or impair the sovereignty of the nation: it possesses no further powers than those enumerated in the Constitution, and among them does not appear, nor can appear, one of such transcendent moment.

Hondurans:

You now know what the decision of Congress was. We disapproved the Paredes-Knox Convention, because we could not with a clear conscience approve it when it involved such a grave and important matter as that of granting intervention in our internal affairs to interests not accepted nor even foreseen by our Political Constitution. Furthermore, an approval involved also that of another matter of as great importance as the loan and which would of necessity have compromised not only the present but also the future of the country, a thing which could not be done without having at hand all the records in the case and as much data as could aid in ascertaining up to what point the Treasury of Honduras could support the burden which would have to be put upon it. The world will render Congress justice by judging of the impartiality shown in the considerations as set forth and which induced it to disapprove the Convention of Washington.

Our minds were not swayed in the least degree by any consideration of politics, of advantage nor of ill-will or antipathy towards the United States. We had in mind, over and above all, the Fatherland, for we aspire to preserve our own Government and to administer our own affairs without attempting to isolate ourselves from relations with civilized countries but rather to recognize the needfulness of such relations, but on condition that they do not encroach upon the national sovereignty and the existence of the State, for the light by which we should forever be guided is that diffused with such effulgence by the immortal act of September 15, 1821, which gave life to Central American nationality. These and only these are our reasons and we stand so firmly upon them that we hope that neither the present Government nor any other, to-day, to-morrow or ever, will disregard them, if Honduras is to continue as a sovereign, free and independent nation. For any Government which accepts conditions of tutelage under the terms imposed by this Convention or under others, will expose itself not only to the maledictions of history in the future but to the condemnation of popular justice in the present.

Hondurans, meditate on our words and decide whether we deserve your approbation or your censure.

File No. 815.51/250a.

The Secretary of State to certain members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.[1]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 3, 1911.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Senator Cullom tells me that the Honduras Convention, which was favorably reported by the Foreign Relations Committee at the last session, is to be reconsidered by the Committee in order that the important principle involved may receive the study of the new members. I could not overstate the fundamental importance of that principle. Briefly stated it is this:

"Shall the Government of the United States make American capital an instrumentality to secure financial stability, and hence prosperity and peace, to the more backward republics in the neighborhood of the Panama Canal; and in order to give that measure of security which alone would induce capital to be such instrumentality, without imposing too great a burden upon the countries concerned, shall this Government assume toward the customs collections a relationship only great enough for this purpose, a relationship, however, the moral effect and potentialities of which result in preventing the customs revenues of such republics from being seized as the means of carrying on devastating and unprincipled revolutions."

For years the Department of State has had to deal with turbulent conditions in Central America and the Caribbean, which the Panama Canal, the extension of commerce, and the enterprise of our citizens cause to affect this country more and more. After the most mature study this Department is firmly convinced of the wisdom of the policy involved in the Honduras Convention, a policy which in its nature is broad, national and non-partisan. The Government of Nicaragua has asked the good offices of the United States to bring about an arrangement similar to that in the case of Honduras, so that in the near future the principle will have to be passed upon. I feel that upon the decision will depend the question whether the United States can be a useful and beneficent factor north of the Panama Canal, or whether conditions of turbulence will cause this Government, as in the past, frequently to have to take action both futile and troublesome.

Printed copies of the Honduras Convention and of the Bankers' Contract and Fiscal Agreement, which when approved will receive the protection of the Convention, are in the hands of the Committee on Foreign Relations. In earnestly asking your thoughtful consideration of this important subject, I take the liberty of enclosing herewith, as of suggestive value, the following additional materials;[2] editorial from The Washington Post of January 25, 1911; article from The Washington Star of February 26, 1911; a few rough notes prepared by this Department; financial notes concerning the Republic of Honduras; a hearing before your Committee[2]; a memorandum prepared in the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War

---

[1] An identic letter, sent to Senators Borah, Burton, Clarke, Hitchcock, McCumber, and Rayner.

[2] Not printed, except as noted.

Department[1]; an article appearing in The New York Sun of January 28, 1911; and a copy of the Report of the Receiver General of Dominican Customs for 1910.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 815.51/257.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 176.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, May 3, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose copy and translation of an article published in El Nuevo Tiempo, the semi-official organ of the Government of Honduras, on April 25, 1911.

The article mentions the sorry financial condition of Honduras, states the causes, praises the mediation of our Government and the results, speaks well of the efforts of the United States in support of the Monroe Doctrine, and calls upon Hondurans to bring about a new order.

I have [etc.]

FENTON R. MCCREERY.

[Inclosure.—Translation.—Extract.]

A NEW POLITICAL RÉGIME FOR HONDURAS.

The Public Treasury of Honduras is depleted.

The budget scarcely meets the expenses of the administration.

The tariff is out of date. It is not the result of an economic, scientific and well thought-out plan.

For many years our tariff has been in force without the reforms which the movement of commerce and the variations of finance demand.

The Department of Finance does not progress very well.

Money is received in the national coffers without fixed rules and without definite and stable procedure, and, nevertheless, Honduras possesses abundant latent riches.

Its territory, according to calculations more or less exact, covers 156,000 square kilometers, possesses fertile lands, inexhaustible mines, virgin forests abounding in valuable timber and mighty rivers which can fertilize the whole country and give life to every kind of agricultural product.

We believe that, with the Government of Dr. Bertrand, with "the convergence of all political parties" imbued with the spirit of national union and Honduran fraternity, a new historical era for Honduras is inaugurated.

The intervention of the Government at Washington, in the enlightened way in which it was conducted, is a safeguard, entrusting to the honor of great American statesmen not only our political autonomy but also our economic and commercial expansion, which will achieve our credit and our public prosperity.

Erroneous prejudices and local mistrust should not be encouraged.

The Government at Washington has a solemn obligation before the civilized world; that of safeguarding and guaranteeing the autonomy of Spanish America.

The obligation of the United States of America has been fulfilled generously and loyally.

Therefore, there is no reason to fear the United States of America.

Naturally that nation is alive to its interests.

Its commerce and its industries inundate our lands.

Its vessels place us in daily contact with American customs, with American activity and with the astonishing progress of that great country.

Its financial crises directly affect us.

Wall street is well known to us, and its cotton crop interests us as though it were our own.

---

[1] See ante.

An earnest Government in Honduras, then, one that is judicious and loyal to its obligations, with a stable, well-ordered economic system, supported by honest and intelligent patriotism on the part of all Hondurans, permeated with the economic spirit of our neighbors on the North, will form the initiative of a political régime well-grounded on the national credit and the public prosperity.

Dr. Leverich.

File No. 815.51/260.

The Secretary of State to the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

Department of State,
Washington, May 18, 1911.

My Dear Senator: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter[1] of the 17th instant, notifying me of a meeting of the Committee on Foreign Relations to be held on Wednesday next the 24th instant, at which time the treaty with Honduras will be taken up for consideration, and requesting me to be present.

In reply I have the honor to state that I shall be very glad to be present at the meeting of the Committee.

Very sincerely yours, P. C. Knox.

Statement of the Secretary of State before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, May 24, 1911.

The committee met at 11 o'clock a. m. Present: The chairman (Mr. Cullom), Mr. Smith, Mr. Root, Mr. McCumber, Mr. Sutherland, Mr. Borah, Mr. Burton, Mr. Bacon, Mr. Shively, Mr. Rayner, and Mr. Hitchcock.

The Chairman. The Secretary of State is here by invitation. I asked him to come before the committee on the subject of the convention between the United States and the Republic of Honduras. As we have but an hour to work in before the Senate convenes, I will ask the Secretary to proceed.

Whereupon the Secretary made the following statement:

THE SITUATION.

The Central American Republic of Honduras, which in area is about the size of the State of Pennsylvania, contains about 500,000 inhabitants. Its public improvements consist of about 57 miles of railroad and inadequate docks at Puerto Cortes on the Atlantic, and still more inadequate docks at Amapala on the Gulf of Fonseca on the Pacific side. The Gulf of Fonseca, by the way, is the best, if not the only, harbor of value on the Pacific coast between Panama and San Diego if, indeed, it is not the only one between Valparaiso and San Diego. The only other public improvement in the Republic worth noting is the Sierra Road, a highway constructed by President Sierra, but so inadequately maintained that the carrying power of a mule cart on this highway is now less than one-half of what it was 15 years ago.

---

[1] Not printed.

Honduras is bankrupt, famished, and discouraged. The condition of her people is well illustrated by the fact that it is estimated by a reputable writer that the average annual expenditures of its peasantry for clothing amounts to less than $1.50 a year.

"Señor," said an old Honduranean, "why should our people accumulate more than one shirt apiece, when a revolution may come along at any hour and rob them of everything?" (Central America and Its Problems—Palmer.)

A former President of Honduras, speaking of his country's condition and of its dependence upon the United States, is quoted as saying:

> Will you not use your strong arm to give us peace—peace long enough to learn that continual revolution is not the natural order of a nation's existence? There is no act of yours guaranteeing good government which I would not welcome. How can we care for ourselves, how can we rule ourselves under such conditions? And you took away our principal source of income when you made Cuba so prosperous that she raises her own cattle and imports no more of ours.

Honduras has been the scene of seven bloody revolutions within the last 15 years. Within that time the United States has been compelled to intervene, in the interests of universal commerce and civilization, to close or to prevent sanguinary ruinous civil war within her borders.

The debt of Honduras with the interest thereon, which has not been paid for over 40 years, amounts now to about $125,000,000. Her revenue, according to the last available data, is a little more than $1,654,000 a year, of which $766,495 is customs receipts and $887 873 comes from liquor and other monopolies. Thirty-nine per cent of her revenue is absorbed by her military establishment.

In order to relieve the Republic from this crushing weight of debt, the burden of which has depressed her people to a pathetic helplessness, Honduras is endeavoring to borrow, upon the credit of her revenue, a sum of money that will enable her to compromise with her creditors and secure an amount adequate to undertake such internal improvements as will inspire her own people to new courage and establish such stability in her political and fiscal systems as will attract to her borders the enterprise and the capital of the type of immigration necessary to her regeneration.

THE REMEDY.

Realizing the absolute inability to meet her obligations or even to pay the interest thereon, some of which runs at 10 per cent per annum, the Republic of Honduras has endeavored to reach some adjustment with her creditors, and in order to obtain reasonable terms sought the aid of the United States, and the convention which is now before the Senate has really been signed at the instance of Honduras. The reason why a convention has been entered into regarding this matter is that without materially upholding the now shattered public credit of Honduras it would be utterly impossible to obtain a loan sufficiently large to cancel outstanding obligations on terms anything like within the reach of Honduras. Honduras standing alone would have to borrow money at such exorbitant rates of interest, or obtain for its bonds such a low market price that a very much larger issue than that now proposed would have to be made.

The convention has been drawn for the purpose of giving security. That is, for the purpose of assuring the regular payment of interest and sinking fund upon the debt. Its provisions, briefly, are:

1. Honduras engages to place the loan in the United States.
2. Honduras pledges her customs receipts for the payment of the interest and sinking fund.
3. Honduras agrees to appoint a receiver from a list of names prepared by the fiscal agent and approved by the President of the United States.
4. Honduras agrees to afford protection to the receiver and that if necessary the United States may give such protection.
5. The receiver is under obligation to report to the fiscal agent of the loan and to either Government regarding the discharge of his duties.
6. Honduras further agrees not to alter the customs receipts during the existence of the loan.

The convention applies to no specified contract, but any contract, to come within the scope of the convention, must receive the scrutiny of this Government.

That the collection of the customs should be honestly carried on and their receipts properly administered is an obvious necessity, and the provision in the convention as to the appointment of the receiver makes possible the selection of a competent, honest, bonded person. In this regard it will be noted that the Honduras convention differs in this respect somewhat from the Santo Domingo convention in not going quite so far. Under the terms of the latter the receiver general of customs is appointed by the President of the United States direct. That the Government of Honduras should promise to give this receiver adequate protection, and in the absence of which this Government should have the right to protect him in the discharge of his duties, is equally an obvious necessity. It is self-evident that as the customs duties are pledged for the service of the loan, they must be adequate to meet the interest and sinking fund, and that to prevent their being in any wise altered and thereby rendered insufficient, or to allow substituting for them any new duties different in name or collected from a different viewpoint, is likewise self-evident.

That Honduras should agree to permit its customs to be collected in the manner indicated and should further stipulate that such customs duties will not be altered will, from experience, in no wise decrease or interfere with the administration of these funds. When the Government of the United States entered into the agreement with the Dominican Republic, and subsequent to the appointment by the President of a receiver general of customs, the revenues of that Republic increased from about $1,800,000 to the sum of $3,300,000. The cost of the service of the loan negotiated for the Dominican Republic, interest and sinking fund, is $1,200,000 per annum. It will thus be seen that the Dominican Republic is now promptly meeting the payment of its obligations and that it also has more money than heretofore for the maintenance and conduct of the Government. Not only has the Dominican Republic had no difficulty regarding the alteration of its tariff laws, but the duties on staple articles have in almost all cases been subjected to a scaling down, so that goods are now delivered into that Republic at less cost than before the assistance of the United States was invoked. That this would be true in regard to Honduras may be confidently asserted.

Prior to the Dominican convention this Government was constantly having to interpose between clamorous foreign claimants and the Dominican Government and to use its naval forces for the protection of United States property. Since the Dominican convention no such necessity has arisen. The situation in the Dominican Republic prior to the convention is the situation in much of Central America and the Caribbean Republics of to-day.

Then several agreements between the Dominican Republic and foreign creditors existed which specifically pledged a portion of the customs duties of specified ports of the Republic. Some of these agreements, indeed, were protocols negotiated by the representatives of foreign governments with the Dominican Republic. Italy had several such protocols and the Spanish and German Governments also had a protocol assuring the payment of certain claims of their subjects. The Dominican Government was in default and was continuing in default, until finally the Italian Government sent a war vessel to Dominican waters, and had it not been for the action of the United States in extending a helping hand the Dominican customhouses would have been taken possession of by the Italians and the administration of the revenues of that Republic would have fallen into the hands of a European power. I am satisfied that if the present arrangement can not be carried out a similar situation may confront the Republic of Honduras.

In fact, at the time when the negotiations were begun for the purpose of refunding the Honduranean finances a proposition had been made by the representative of Great Britain in Central America on behalf of the foreign bondholders, and was about to be consummated, which was highly objectionable. This plan contemplated the possible raising of the import duties in Honduras, and made absolutely no provision for the settlement of large American claims which were being asserted against the Government of Honduras and left the internal indebtedness of that Republic absolutely unsettled. It also contained provisions which might have placed the railroad running out of Puerto Cortes under the control of a foreign syndicate.

During the course of a year it is many times necessary for the United States to send forces to the ports of some of the Central American Republics in order to afford adequate protection to foreign life and property. This is done at an enormous expense, an informal estimate from some of the naval officers showing that the annual cost to this Government amounts to over $1,000,000. Twice in the past six months this Government has had to interfere in Honduras. Should the convention be put into operation, no such necessity will be likely to arise. The revolutions in Central America are in most instances unprincipled, the main—in fact, the only—object being to gain control of the collection of the customs duties. The removal of such a possibility from the revolutionary horizon would go far toward an effective dampening of the aspirations of adventurers.

The convention would have the effect of affording security to the bondholders; of assuring to Honduras the punctual and complete discharge of her obligations practically without cost to the Government; the enjoyment of continued peace, and the consequent internal development; and to the United States the saving in expense to this Government would alone seem to be a sufficient inducement.

Subsequently to the signing of the convention detailed negotiations were undertaken with a representative of four of the largest banking houses in this country, with a result that contracts, the text of which have already been submitted to the committee, have been drawn and signed. These contracts cover the details that have been worked out for the financial rehabilitation of Honduras. It may here be said that without such convention as has been negotiated none of the banking houses concerned would have been willing to loan Honduras money on anything like the same terms as have now been agreed to, if, indeed, they would have been willing to accept the obligations of that Republic at all. In this connection the benefit of the convention to Honduras is at once apparent. The details of the loan are, roughly, as follows:

The bankers have by previous agreement been able to obtain an option on about $20,000,000 principal of the outstanding foreign debt of Honduras and are confident that the balance will be surrendered upon terms as favorable as those offered to the bondholders now pledged.

Honduras agrees to issue $10,000,000 worth of bonds, $7,500,000 of which are to be issued now, the other $2,500,000 to be issued for the purpose of internal improvement and only when the revenues of the Republic justify it. These bonds the bankers agree to take at 88. The cash thus obtained will be sufficient to provide for the payment of all expenses, for the cancellation of the old outstanding bonds at the rate of 15 per cent of the principal and for the establishment of a cash fund of $2,100,000. This cash fund will be used for three purposes:

(a) Approximately $700,000 for the cancellation of the internal debt of Honduras, which amounts, roughly, to $1,700,000.

(b) To the provision for the payment, under direct settlement by approval of the State Department or impartial arbitration, of the claims of American citizens.

(c) The immediate investment of about $700,000 for the improvement of the Interoceanic Railway which runs from Puerto Cortes inland and which traverses one of the richest Central American banana zones.

Besides the customs revenues which are pledged for the payment of the interest and sinking fund of Honduras's debt on the new bonds, the Government of Honduras has further agreed with the bankers that the railroad at Puerto Cortes shall be extended as stated above, operated under expert management, and that after the proper expenditure of funds for the further development of the road any sums remaining over shall be paid to the fiscal agent for the service of the loan and shall thus partially relieve the customs receipts. The revenues for the road for the last year are calculated to have been about $140,000, and it is believed that with the expenditure above provided they will easily amount to $300,000. The interest cost of service of a loan of $7,500,000 at 5 per cent interest and 1 per cent sinking fund per annum is $450,000. War expenses in Honduras annually average not less than $600,000, and it must be assumed that these will be reduced by at least one-half. In other words, aside from the increase of the customs receipts under an honest and competent administration, sufficient funds would result from the earnings of the railway and decrease of the war expense to service the loan without cost to Honduras.

The price to be paid for the bonds by the bankers, that is, 88, in comparison with the price paid for the Dominican bonds, 98.5, both at 5 per cent interest, may perhaps cause surprise. Bearing in mind, however, that when the Dominican loan was taken there was already on deposit in New York the large sum of $3,800,000 collected under the modus vivendi, and the success of the loan was assured, besides the fact that the Dominican bonds were used to the extent of 80 per cent for the extinguishment of the claims outstanding against the Republic; and considering the woeful condition of Honduras's present financial status, her depleted credit, and the fact that the success of the loan has not yet been fiscally demonstrated, the price is not surprising. The price, comparatively speaking, is higher than any prices obtained for bonds by any Central American State. Salvador, which has the best credit of all, commands a price of 99 for 6 per cent bonds, thus paying $1 per annum for the use of $16.50. Nicaraguan bonds, also 6 per cent, have been quoted as high as 93. They were taken by the bankers at 75, so that Nicaragua paid $1 per annum for the use of $15.50. The Guatemalan 4 per cent bonds were sold in the neighborhood of 44, thus Guatemala pays $1 per annum for the use of $11. Costa Rican 5 per cent bonds have been averaging about 45, thus Costa Rica is paying $1 per annum for the use of $9. Honduras 5 per cent bonds will be taken at 88, thus Honduras will be compelled to pay $1 per annum for the use of $17.60.

From past experience of the United States in Central America it is manifest that either with or without a convention we must to some extent exert influence for peace and order. With the convention as it stands any intervention that may occur will be by virtue of a treaty right. Without the convention any intervention there may be must be of an armed and forcible character. Without the convention we must, when unfortunately necessary, intervene. With the convention intervention will probably be rendered unnecessary.

Whether rightfully or wrongfully, we are in the eyes of the world and because of the Monroe doctrine, held responsible for the order of Central America, and its proximity to the Canal Zone makes the preservation of peace in that neighborhood particularly necessary.

Aside from the purely altruistic motives which have been pointed out above, it must be borne in mind that there is another and a selfish motive which counsels the adoption of the present convention. The development and peace of all Central America must result in a direct and very substantial benefit to the southern ports of the United States—Galveston, New Orleans, Mobile, etc.—as they will all have more frequent intercourse and be able to cultivate a more extensive market for their products, while the Central American Republics, with their production increased, will find a ready market in these gateways of the United States. Railways leading to them must carry this freight for distribution throughout the Southern States.

For the fiscal year 1908–9 the total imports of the Republic of Honduras amounted to $2,581,553, of which the United States alone furnished $1,769,876, or over 68 per cent.

The amount of the export trade of Honduras for the same period was $1,990,601, of which the United States alone took $1,834,565, or more than 92 per cent.

As stated above, most of this trade is carried on with Honduras from the Gulf ports of the United States.

The principle involved, therefore, in this convention, which will enable the maintenance of peace in Central America, is in reality most important from a material standpoint to the South. In short, the matter may be summed up as follows:

Shall the Government of the United States make American capital an instrumentality to secure financial stability, and hence prosperity and peace, to the more backward Republics in the neighborhood of the Panama Canal? And in order to give that measure of security which alone would induce capital to be such instrumentality without imposing too great a burden upon the countries concerned, shall this Government assume toward the customs collections a relationship only great enough for this purpose—a relationship, however, the moral effect and potentialities of which result in preventing the customs revenues of such Republic from being seized as the means of carrying on devastating and unprincipled revolutions?

I here desire to invite the attention of the committee to this important feature of the policy so wisely adopted by the last administration, which it is now desired to extend to Honduras. This feature is that the more this plan of assistance to some of the more backward republics is extended, the less becomes the degree of intimacy established between the Government of the United States and that of the country to which the aid is given. I refer in particular to the fact that the provision in the Dominican convention made the general receiver of customs an appointee of the President of the United States, whereas the Honduras convention makes the collector of customs an appointee of the Government of the Republic of Honduras, the degree of intimacy in connection therefore being to that extent lessened. It may possibly be necessary to sign one more convention with provisions practically identical with this for the purpose of assisting the Government of Nicaragua, but in regard to the other Central American States it may be confidently stated that such a degree of intimacy will not be necessary. In the case of Costa Rica, which has just refunded its foreign debt, any possible relation on the part of this Government becomes effective only in case of default. In regard to Guatemala, which has recently indicated its desire to enlist the helpful support of this Government in rehabilitating its finances, the degree of intimacy will probably be even less. And in regard to Salvador no relation between this Government and the Government of that Republic concerning its foreign debt exists. In other words, the intimacy decreases in proportion as the ability and readiness of the country to meet its obligations increases. This, therefore, is not a policy of which the end can not be seen. The adoption of this convention is not setting such a precedent as might be desired to apply subsequently to all of the Caribbean Republics. This and the Nicaraguan convention will probably be the only two that it will be necessary for this Government to negotiate.

The contracts negotiated between the bankers and the Government of Honduras, in order to insure their fairness with regard to that Republic, have been subjected to the careful scrutiny of the Department of State, and have, further, been submitted to be examined from the standpoint of Honduras by financial and legal experts in New York, who have passed them as fair and equitable and probably the best that can be procured for Honduras under all the circumstances.

OBJECTIONS TO THE TREATY.

Objection has been raised to this treaty because Honduras "agrees not to alter the import or export customs duties or other charges affecting the entry, exit, or transit of goods during the existence of the loan under the said contract without consultation and agreement with the Government of the United States."

This is not an unusual provision. I beg to file with the committee a memorandum which I have had prepared, showing numerous instances in which Governments have obligated themselves by treaty to other Governments not to change their customs tariffs. As stated in this memorandum, these instances may be classified under three heads:

1. Cases where favored treaty rates that are set forth in a schedule annexed to the treaty have been granted by countries without reciprocal obligation on the part of the other party to the treaty. The United States has three treaties in force of this nature binding China, Korea, and Siam, respectively, to accord to it favored rates without any reciprocal obligation on its part.

2. Cases where one Government agrees that its tariff legislation shall be subject to the approval of one or more foreign Governments. A most striking instance of this kind is the relation between the Ottoman Empire and the Powers. Another case is the relation between the United States and Santo Domingo under the convention of February 8, 1907.

Under Article III of this convention, which is substantially similar in effect to Article II of the Honduras convention, the Dominican Government covenants that an agreement between itself and the United States shall be necessary in order to enable it to modify the import duties.

3. Tariff concessions exchanged between governments in reciprocity treaties or agreements.

Morocco also belongs among the countries mentioned under the first head, since it is bound in its treaties to impose only certain specific duties mentioned therein on exports and imports for no reciprocal consideration. The whole of these customs duties have now been pledged to the payment of interest under two loans made in 1904 and 1910 under the auspices of the French Government between Morocco and certain bankers. The collection of these customs revenues is "controlled" by agents of the loan.

Persia also comes under this head, as I believe that that Government also grants in its treaties specific customs duties for no reciprocal consideration. These customs revenues have also been pledged to pay the interest on certain loans.

In addition to these three classes, an instance of quasi-restraint in respect to tariff legislation on the part of one government over another government is afforded by the tariff relations between the Isthmian Canal Zone and the Republic of Panama. The order of the Secretary of War of the United States (Circular No. 45 of Jan. 9, 1911) establishes free entry for goods imported from Panama into the Canal Zone, "provided, however, that this order shall cease to be operative" if Panama should increase the rates of duty on certain imported articles or should alter certain other legislation.

Somewhat analogous to the preceding instances is the provision in Article II of our treaty with Cuba of 1903, known as the Platt amendment, by which Cuba obligates herself to the United States that she will "not assume or contract any public debt to pay the interest upon which and to make reasonable sinking-fund provision for the ultimate discharge of which the ordinary revenues of the island after defraying the current expenses of the Government shall be inadequate."

Also analogous is the protocol of agreements of 1903 between Venezuela, Great Britain, Germany, and Italy, to which the United States and other powers are parties, by which Venezuela agrees to set aside 30 per cent of the customs revenues of La Guaira and Puerto Cabello for the payment of the claims of all nations against Venezuela.

There also existed in Greece, at all events up to quite recently, a certain international control over the Hellenic finances, which was granted by Greece in view of the pressure of the powers on account of her then practically insolvent condition.

The above are instances of obligations taken by one government to one or more others in regard to their customs tariffs. The cases where governments have pledged their customs revenues or a certain percentage of such revenues to foreign banks or corporations especially to secure loans are extremely numerous. It may indeed be said that except in the case of governments whose credit is of high standing it is practically the usual course in making loans for them to pledge specific revenues for their payment.

As the loan which Honduras undertakes to make by Article I of the convention is stated in Article II to be secured by the customs of the country, it seems clear that some covenant of the nature of that in Article II of the convention is absolutely necessary in order to insure that the interest on the loan shall be fully paid; otherwise, by altering these duties or placing other charges affecting the entry, exit, or transit of goods, the Government of Honduras would be able to reduce these revenues so that they would no longer suffice for the purpose intended by the convention. There is certainly no inequity in the lender requiring that the security of his loan shall be properly protected and that it shall be sufficient. Moreover, if Americans are not able to obtain this proper security in order to enable them to take this loan, foreign bankers will do so with a customs guarantee which might later involve the Monroe doctrine.

You will observe that the contract between Honduras and the fiscal agent of the loan contains, in Article III, a somewhat similar covenant, providing substantially that unless and until the customs revenues have exceeded a certain amount they can not be changed without the written consent of the fiscal agent. The reason why, in addition to this covenant, the somewhat similar covenant was introduced into the convention was chiefly in the interest of Honduras. It is believed that the fiscal agent in considering whether he will agree to any alteration of the duties which might be desired by Honduras will be actuated solely by considerations affecting the security of the bondholders' interest, while by adding this covenant to the United States in the convention an opportunity will be afforded to Honduras to have any such request on her part considered upon broader ground, involving not only the bondholders' interest but those of Honduras as well.

It may be noted in this connection that the provision substantially similar in effect in Article III of our treaty with Santo Domingo in 1907 already mentioned has operated satisfactorily in the interests of Santo Domingo in this respect, the United States having consented, subsequent to its becoming effective, to a number of reductions in tariff dues, including one entire downward revision of the tariff, after convincing itself that such was for the benefit of Santo Domingo and not injurious to the proper security of the bondholders.

Nor does it seem that the execution of such a provision is likely to cause difficulty, for upon a request to alter any duty made by Honduras it will readily be possible for this Government, through its Legation in Honduras and the fiscal agent of the loan, to ascertain what effect this alteration will presumably have upon the revenues of the country, and thereupon to assist in an agreement equitable alike to Honduras and the bondholders. It would not seem that such a provision, which in effect merely enables this Government under these circumstances to use its good offices in favor of both parties, could relate this Government too intimately with the Government of Honduras.

It thus results that the provision of the convention necessitating the advice and consent of this Government to the change in customs duties by Honduras is a help rather than a hindrance to that Republic, and is largely designed to safeguard its interests and to enable it to effect changes in its customs tariff when it otherwise might be unable to persuade the fiscal agent, whose interests are somewhat opposed, as to the advisability of any alteration.

It is also objected that we should not interfere with the internal affairs of Honduras.

Are such limited good offices and protection that Honduras invites us to lend her in this case such an interference with her internal affairs that they should be denied under the general policy of this Government to keep aloof from the internal affairs of other countries, and is it not true that for many years past, sometimes with and frequently without, the invitation of the Central American Republics, we have been compelled to interfere with their affairs, in order to keep the peace in the Western Hemisphere?

Another objection arises out of the character of the indebtedness of Honduras. It is alleged that she is neither morally nor legally bound for the enormous sums represented by her outstanding obligations.

It is probably true that Honduras never received anything like a fair share of the face of her bonds and that an equitable adjustment of her debt is a necessity.

Well, that is just the matter in hand, and in such a matter some one must decide what is fair and right under all the circumstances, and the obvious parties to do that are the debtor and creditor. Who else can do it, and if this proposition fails how can the United States prevent Honduras from making a similar or some other arrangement with her foreign creditors without such an interference in her affairs and the affairs of the nationals of other governments of a nature far more serious in its possibilities than the contemplated supervision of her customs collections by her invitation? Moreover, what steps will the United States take to prevent the seizure of Honduran customhouses if she makes no settlement with her creditors?

I suppose it is no exaggeration to say that fraud and usury are common incidents to Central American public debts.

The San Domingo treaty recites that her debt was partly fraudulent and this is probably why her creditors stood the reduction demanded. If it is conceded that 75 per cent of the Honduras debt should not be paid, it is answered that broadly speaking it is proposed to reduce it over 90 per cent.

The situation in Honduras is not to be cleared up by railing at the methods which brought it about. It is no excuse for refusing to pull an injured man out of a pit that his unfortunate position is the result of his own misconduct. Surely we are there confronted with a most deplorable condition.

We can not blink the fact that there is no hope for peace and prosperity for Honduras except through the United States. All she now asks is, Will you assist us to make the security good which we offer for the debt we are incurring, at a reasonable rate of interest, by helping us to secure an honest collection of our revenues, or will you, by withholding that assistance, drive us back upon the usurers and plunderers who have brought us to our present stagnation?

It is well here to recall again that the debt of Honduras falls under two classifications: The foreign debt, which can be liquidated for about $4,050,000, and the internal debt, which it is estimated will be liquidated for about $700,000. But the validity and the amounts of this internal debt are to be determined either by agreement, approved by an assessor appointed by the Secretary of State, or by three arbitrators, one to be appointed by the Republic of Honduras, one by the claimants, and one by the Secretary of State. This insures the closest scrutiny of that part of the debt in which American citizens are interested. Indeed, how could the equity of the amounts to be paid by Honduras to meet these debts be more circumspectly safeguarded?

The Minister of Salvador, who has recently returned from his country, a few days ago informed me that the result of the signing of this convention, even before its ratification, had already been felt in Central America, and that the Republic of Salvador, in view of the prospect that a stable government was about to be maintained in Honduras, had been able to reduce its military expenses by 75 per cent, and to devote the money thus saved to the extension of public improvements. The decision of the Senate as to its consent to this convention with Honduras involves the parting of the ways in the policy of the United States in Central America and the zone of the Caribbean. This is especially true because however good conditions might become in the northern and southern Republics of Central America, there can be no general stability unless the countries of Honduras and Nicaragua, which form a wide belt across Central America, are placed upon a firm basis. It will be recalled that this principle was unanimously recognized by all of the representatives of the five Central American Republics at the peace conference held in Washington during the months of November and December, 1907, when a convention was adopted which included the following language:

ARTICLE III.

> Taking into account the central geographical position of Honduras and the facilities which, owing to this circumstance, have made its territory most often the theater of Central American conflicts, Honduras declares from now on its absolute neutrality in event of any conflict between the other Republics; and the latter, in their turn, provided such neutrality be observed, bind themselves to respect it and in no case to violate the Honduranean territory.

It carries with it the question of the ability of the Executive of this Government properly to protect and to safeguard and promote not the troublesome and meddling adventurers who go to those countries for unworthy motives, but our citizens who are engaged in the laudable and deserving enterprise of endeavoring legitimately to expand American interests and enterprise in that region; to destroy the industry of the soldier of fortune and convert into a field for commerce and economic development what has been the happy hunting ground of the American adventurer.

In response to the invitation of the Government of Nicaragua, which, after 17 years of disorder and rapine in that country, now seeks to put its house in order, I am now prepared to sign with the Nicaraguan plenipotentiary a similar convention between the United States and that country. Nothing definite has been done, I believe, as to a contract between Nicaragua and American bankers. The idea of the Department of State is that when, with the assistance of the Americans who have been employed by Nicaragua as claims commissioners and financial adviser, the financial strength of the country and the sum of its needs have been calculated, such contract will be drawn up, then the contract would naturally be given to whatever responsible bankers would take the bonds at the most favorable price, other advantages being equal. As in the case of the present convention, no contract would come under the shelter of the protection of the proposed convention with Nicaragua unless it had been sanctioned as the best obtainable both by the Department of State and by the Government of Nicaragua.

Before signing this convention with Nicaragua, I desire to give this information to the committee as still further emphasizing the importance of the convention now before the Senate.

The Executive being charged with the conduct of our foreign relations and the protection of our citizens' interests abroad, and having, after years of study, become convinced that the policy now recommended to the Senate is the way adequately to meet his heavy responsibilities, I can only say, in closing, that in laying this whole situation before the committee I feel that the responsibility of the Executive has been shifted to the Senate, and that if the policy advocated by the Executive be rejected, then, however unsatisfactory the situation of those Republics, their relations to our own national interests, and the condition of the interests of American citizens may hereafter become in the regions referred to, if the Executive finds himself deprived of the best means to cope with the situation thus brought about it will be a deplorable fact, but it will not be due to a failure to study out and to recommend a mode of forestalling such results.

[Appendix to the Secretary's statement.]

MEMORANDUM OF CASES WHERE THE CUSTOMS TARIFF OF ONE COUNTRY CAN NOT BE CHANGED WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF ONE OR MORE FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS; IN OTHER WORDS, CASES WHERE TARIFF CONCESSIONS GRANTED BY ONE COUNTRY TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES TIE THE HANDS OF THE LEGISLATIVE BODY OF THE COUNTRY MAKING THE CONCESSIONS DURING A CERTAIN PERIOD PROVIDED FOR IN THE CONVENTION.

These cases may be classified under three heads:

(1) Cases where favored treaty rates that are set forth in a schedule annexed to the treaty have been granted by countries without reciprocal obligation on the part of the other party to the treaty. The following examples may be cited among the treaties in force of the United States, viz:

China.—Treaty as to commercial relations signed October 8, 1903; proclaimed January 13, 1904. Lengthy import tariff of Chinese duties annexed, applicable to imports into China from the United States. Article V provides that the tariff duties to be paid by citizens of the United States on goods imported into China shall be as set forth in the schedule annexed thereto and made a part of the treaty, subject only to such amendments and changes as are authorized by Article IV of the treaty or as may thereafter be agreed upon by the parties. Article XVII provides that the treaties shall remain in force for a period of 10 years beginning with the date of the exchange of ratifications (Jan. 13, 1904) until a revision is effected at the end of 10 years. If no revision is demanded before the end of the first term of 10 years, then the treaty remains in force unchanged for a further term of 10 years and so on for successive periods of 10 years. In this way the Chinese tariff rates are bound during a long period of years.

Korea.—Treaty of peace, amity, commerce and navigation, signed May 22, 1882; proclaimed June 4, 1883. This treaty provides, in Article V, that the tariff duties upon such imports into Korea from the United States as are articles of daily use shall not exceed 10 per cent ad valorem; those upon luxuries shall not exceed 30 per cent ad valorem; and those upon native produce exported shall not exceed 5 per cent ad valorem. The tonnage duties on United States merchant vessels are also limited. Provision is made in the treaty for its revision after an interval of five years. This treaty was in effect when Japan took over the complete administration of Korea, and, while Japan has notified the United States of its termination, the treaty features continue in force for a period of 10 years from August 29, 1910, the date of Japan's formal declaration on the subject.

Siam.—Treaty of amity and commerce, signed May 29, 1856; proclaimed August 16, 1858. There is annexed to this treaty the general regulations under which American trade is to be conducted in Siam, including the tariff of export and inland duties to be levied by Siam on articles of trade. This treaty is still in force. Article X provides that after the lapse of 10 years from the date of ratification of the treaty upon the desire of either Government, and on 12 months prior notice, there may be a revision. No revision seems to have been made.

Morocco.—Treaty of peace and friendship, signed September 16, 1836; proclaimed January 3, 1837. Article 14 of this treaty provides that "the commerce of the United States shall be on the same footing as is the commerce of Spain or as that of the most favored nation, for the time being." Other treaties between Morocco and foreign powers bind Morocco to impose only certain specific duties mentioned therein on imports and exports for no specific consideration. The benefit of these duties accrues to the United States through article 14 of the treaty of 1836. Article 25 of this treaty, which is still in force, provides that it shall continue in force for 50 years.

Persia.—Treaty of friendship and commerce, signed December 13, 1856; proclaimed August 18, 1857. Article 4 provides that merchandise imported or exported by citizens or subjects of each country shall not pay other duties than those charged to the citizens of the most favored nations. Until 1903, other treaties between Persia and foreign powers bound Persia to impose only certain specific duties mentioned therein on imports and exports for no specific consideration. The benefit of these treaties up to 1903 when they were denounced and a regular tariff law was put in force by Persia, accrued to the United States through article 4 of this treaty. Article 8 of this treaty provides that it shall continue in force for 10 years or until within one year after denunciation.

Practically all the European powers have unilateral tariff treaties of this kind with China, Korea, and Siam.

(2) Cases where one government agrees that its tariff legislation shall be subject to the approval of one or more foreign governments. The most striking instance of this kind is the relation between the Ottoman Empire and the powers. No change in the import tariff of Turkey may be made without the consent of the powers first secured. For many years the uniform import duty was 8 per cent ad valorem. The consent of the powers was obtained by Turkey and she raised the rate to 11 per cent, at which rate it now remains. She is now in process of obtaining the consent of the powers to a further increase in the rate to 15 per cent ad valorem.

Another case is the relation between the United States and the Dominican Republic, in virtue of the convention of February 8, 1907, between the two countries. Under Article III of this convention the Dominican Government agrees not to change its import duties, before obtaining the consent of the United States Government, this consent being an indispensable condition for the modification of such import duties.

(3) Tariff concessions exchanged between Governments in reciprocity treaties or agreements. These are either (a) preferential tariff reductions reserved exclusively for the products of the contracting countries, or (b) conventional tariff rates that are given wide application through the operation of the most-favored-nation clause in pursuance of the European construction of that clause.

At the present time the United States has in force only one reciprocity treaty and no reciprocity agreement. Our reciprocity treaty with Cuba, signed December 11, 1902, proclaimed December 17, 1903, illustrates very well the cases in this category. In this treaty the two contracting parties mutually bind in favor of each other their respective free lists. The United States agrees to admit all dutiable imports from Cuba at a flat preferential tariff reduction of 20 per cent below the regular rates, while Cuba reciprocates by preferential tariff reductions ranging from 20 per cent to 40 per cent according to the classes of American products.

This treaty was made for a period of five years, and continues in force from year to year thereafter until the expiration of one year from the date of notice of termination on the part of either party. It contains a provision, however, that it may be terminated on six months' prior notice by either party in the event of adverse tariff legislation on the part of the other. The restraining effect of the treaty on our legislation might be illustrated by assuming that Congress were to transfer from the free list to the dutiable list some article that was on our free list at the time the treaty was signed; for example, bananas. The United States, in order to avoid violating the treaty, would be obliged to admit Cuban bananas free of duty, while those from the rest of the world would be subject to duty. According to our jurisprudence, however, neither a commercial treaty nor the enabling legislation based upon it and duly enacted stands upon a higher plane than any other tariff legislation. Hence, strictly speaking, Congress may, at any time, and without notice, pass legislation which will abrogate the provisions of a reciprocity treaty. While this is the strict legal point of view it is not the equitable international viewpoint, and Congress recognized it by making a special reservation in favor of the Cuban treaty in the Payne-Aldrich law (sec. 3). Notwithstanding the legal point mentioned it can not be denied that the preferential tariff concessions made by the United States in the Cuban treaty or any similar treaty impose the strongest kind of a moral restraint upon the freedom of action of Congress to the extent of constraining it to enact no legislation that will prevent complete observance of the treaty on the part of the United States so long as it shall remain in force in conformity with its provisions for termination.

The second class of reciprocity concessions is by far the more numerous. The following countries employ the general and conventional tariff system, using a dual tariff, consisting of the general tariff adopted by the legislative body and a lower scale of duties representing the aggregate reductions of duty made in a series of reciprocity treaties with other members of the group—viz, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Russia, Italy, Switzerland, Servia, Roumania, Bulgaria, and Japan. To this list might be added Belgium, which enters freely into tariff treaties of this kind, but follows the practice of immediately generalizing the treaty reductions of duty by act of Parliament, thereby leaving the country with a single tariff system at all times. Greece also follows the general and conventional tariff system to a limited extent. The unconditional interpretation of the most-favored-nation clause is an essential feature of this tariff system. The treaties which create the conventional tariffs are accompanied by schedules of reductions of duty below the regular rates on imports into one contracting country from the other contracting party; but by the operation of the most-favored-nation clause, following the European interpretation of the same, the benefit of one and all tariff concessions is extended to all members of the group and to countries outside the group which have treaty relations containing the most-favored-nation clause with the contracting parties to the reciprocity series. Thus the benefits of reciprocity are extended beyond the immediate contractors.

All the existing German reciprocity treaties, and most of the like treaties between other European countries, are made for a period of at least 12 years, and will terminate on December 31, 1917, provided a year's prior notice shall be given by either contracting party; if no notice of termination shall be given the treaties will continue indefinitely from year to year until the expiration of one year after notice of denunciation by either party. During this long period of 12 years the legislative bodies of the respective countries are restrained very effectively against increasing the tariff rates above the treaty rates on goods imported from the contracting countries; but not, of course, on goods imported from nontreaty countries—that is, those that do not have even most-favored-nation guaranties. To show the wide application of this system it may be mentioned that there are about 40 different countries in the world whose imports enjoy the benefit of the complete conventional tariff of Germany on their importation into that country by virtue of treaty stipulation, although there are only about eight or nine countries with which Germany has made reciprocity treaties that remain in force.

The following list shows the existing reciprocity treaties of European States—that is, treaties with tariffs annexed where restraint is imposed on the legislative bodies in respect of tariff legislation during the conventional terms:

GERMANY.

The new general tariff, although adopted December 25, 1902, did not come into effect until March 1, 1906. The present conventional tariff, created by the following treaties, came into force on the same date, the interval being employed in the treaty negotiations:

Austria-Hungary, January 25, 1905.
Belgium, June 22, 1904.
Italy, December 3, 1904.
Roumania, October 9–21, 1904.
Russia, July 28, 1904.
Sweden, May 8, 1906.
Switzerland, November 12, 1904.
Servia, November 16–29, 1904.
Bulgaria, August 1, 1905.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

The new general tariff came into effect March 1, 1906. The present conventional tariff was created by the following reciprocity treaties:

Germany, January 25, 1905.
Belgium, February 12, 1906.
Italy, February 11, 1906.
Russia, February 15, 1906.
Switzerland, March 9, 1903.
Servia, July 14–27, 1910.
Roumania, April 23, 1909.

RUSSIA.

The present autonomous tariff for the European trade entered into operation March 1, 1906, by imperial decree. The present conventional tariff has been fixed by the following reciprocity treaties:

Austria-Hungary, February 15, 1906.
Germany, July 28, 1904.
Italy, June 28, 1907.

ITALY.

The present general tariff of Italy entered into effect on March 1, 1906. The present conventional tariff has been established by the following reciprocity treaties:

Austria-Hungary, February 11, 1906.
Bulgaria, January 13, 1906.
Germany, December 3, 1904.
Roumania, December 5, 1906.
Russia, June 28, 1907.
Servia, January 14, 1907.
Switzerland, July 13, 1904.

SWITZERLAND.

The present general tariff of Switzerland went into effect January 1, 1906. The present conventional tariff is based on the following reciprocity treaties:

Austria-Hungary, March 9, 1906.
France, October 20, 1906.
Germany, November 12, 1904.
Italy, July 13, 1904.
Servia, February 28, 1907.
Spain, September 1, 1906.

BELGIUM.

(For explanation of the Belgium tariff system see supra.)

Austria-Hungary, February 12, 1906.
Germany, June 22, 1904.
Roumania, June 5–23, 1906.
Servia, April 11–24, 1907.

SERVIA.

The present general tariff of Servia is the law of 1899 as amended in 1900 and 1902. The present conventional tariff is based on the following reciprocity treaties: Belgium, Germany, France, Italy, Switzerland, and Austria-Hungary.

ROUMANIA.

The present general tariff of Roumania went into effect March 1, 1906. The present conventional tariff is based on reciprocity treaties with Austria-Hungary, Belgium, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, and Turkey.

BULGARIA.

Bulgaria even before independence enjoyed tariff autonomy. The present tariff as modified by convention went into effect January 14, 1906. Reciprocity treaties have been concluded with the following countries: France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, and Turkey.

An instance of quasi restraint in respect of tariff legislation on the part of one government over another government is perhaps afforded by the tariff relations between the United States and Panama. The nature of this restraint exercised by the United States is disclosed in the appended circulars issued by the Isthmian Canal Commission on the following dates: June 25, 1904; December 30, 1904; January 10, 1905; and January 9, 1911. The last-mentioned circular will explain the situation. The order of the Secretary of War of the United States, dated at Panama December 3, 1904, and promulgated by the Isthmian Canal Commission in Circular No. 4, December 30, 1904, defined the tariff relations between the Canal Zone and the Republic of Panama, establishing free entry for goods imported from that Republic into the zone, subject to an important condition that the Government of Panama should make reductions in her tariff on certain goods and not increase the rates on other schedules. This proviso has been modified by Circular No. 4, of January 9, 1911, so far as relates to the tariff feature, as follows:

> Provided, however, that this order shall cease to be operative:
>
> First. If the Republic of Panama should at any time increase the rate of duty on imported articles described in class 2 of the act of the National Convention of Panama passed July 5, 1904, and effective October 12, 1904, above 15 per cent ad valorem, provided for in said act; or if the said Republic should increase at any time the rates of duty on the imported articles described in the other schedules of said act, except on all forms of imported wines, liquors, alcohols, and opium, upon which the Republic may fix higher rates.

Copies of the circulars to which I have referred are annexed hereto.

Another instance of quasi restraint existed in Greece up to quite recently, where, on account of the practically insolvent condition of the Hellenic finances, the great European powers intervened to assist Greece to settle her debt in return for a certain international control of her finances.

In the foregoing memorandum I have made no reference to reciprocity arrangements entered into by double-tariff countries like France and Spain, which employ the maximum and minimum tariff system. These need not be considered in this connection for the reason that both the maximum tariff and the minimum tariff are enacted simultaneously by the legislative body, so that the system permits, at all times, complete national autonomy in the evolution of the dutiable schedules and eliminates the question of diplomatic interposition on the part of foreign Governments in the construction of conventional tariffs. France may, and sometimes does, enter into reciprocity treaties with foreign Governments, engaging to grant her minimum tariff in whole, or in part, in return for reduced tariff rates on the part of the other contracting party. France, however, does not engage not to increase the minimum tariff, but merely to grant minimum tariff treatment, without discrimination.

[Inclosure 1.]

Circular No. 1,
Isthmian Canal Commission.

Office of the Isthmian Canal Commission,
Washington, D. C., June 25, 1904.

The following order of the Secretary of War is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

War Department,
Washington, June 24, 1904.

To the Chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission.

Sir: The necessities of the inhabitants and the due administration of the affairs of government in the Canal Zone at Panama require the establishment of post offices and postal service in that territory.

It is therefore ordered that a post office be established in each of the following-named towns of the Canal Zone, to wit: Cristobal, Gatun, Bohio, Gorgona, Bas Obispo, Empire, Culebra, La Boca, and Ancon.

The post offices at Cristobal and Ancon shall be money-order offices.

The Governor of the Canal Zone is hereby authorized to appoint postmasters for the post offices herein established and fix the compensation therefor, subject to the approval of the Isthmian Canal Commission.

The Governor of the Canal Zone is directed to formulate a plan for a practical and efficient postal service in said Canal Zone, and including such measures and provisions of the postal service of the United States as are not inapplicable to the conditions of law and fact existing in the Canal Zone, and to report said plan to the chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission for such action as the discretion of the commission shall approve.

Pending the establishment of the postal service by act of the commission or other competent authority, the Governor of the Canal Zone is hereby authorized to establish post offices at such additional places in the Canal Zone as in his judgment the interests of the public require, and to appoint postmasters therefor and fix their compensation, subject to the approval or other action thereon by the Isthmian Canal Commission.

The Governor of the Canal Zone is also authorized to adopt and enforce such temporary rules, regulations, provisions, and requirements as may be necessary to secure a practical and efficient postal service in said Canal Zone; and to employ such temporary assistants and employees as the exigencies of the service require.

By direction of the President:

Wm. H. Taft,
Secretary of War.

This order will be duly published and enforced.

J. G. Walker,
Chairman Isthmian Canal Commission.

[Inclosure 2.]

Circular No. 4,
Isthmian Canal Commission.

Office of the Isthmian Canal Commission,
Washington, D. C., December 30, 1904.

The following order of the Secretary of War is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

Panama, December 3, 1904.

By direction of the President it is ordered that, subject to the action of the Fifty-eighth Congress as contemplated by the act of Congress approved April 28, 1904:

Section 1. No importation of goods, wares, and merchandise shall be entered at Ancon or Cristobal, the terminal ports of the canal, except such goods, wares, and merchandise as are described in Article XIII of the treaty between the Republic of Panama and the United States, the ratifications of which were exchanged on the 26th day of February, 1904, and except goods, wares, and merchandise in transit across the Isthmus for a destination without the limits of said Isthmus, and except coal and crude mineral oil for fuel purposes to be sold at Ancon or Cristobal to seagoing vessels, said coal and oil to be admitted to those ports free of duties for said purposes:

Provided, however, that this order shall be inoperative, first, unless the Republic of Panama shall reduce the ad valorem duty on imported articles described in class 2 of the act of the National Convention of Panama passed July 5, 1904, and taking effect October 12, 1904, from 15 per cent to 10 per cent and shall not increase the rates of duty on the imported articles described in the other schedules of said act except on all forms of imported wines, liquors, alcohol, and opium, on which the Republic may fix higher rates; second, unless article 38 of the constitution of the Republic of Panama as modified by article 146 thereof shall remain in full force and unchanged so far as the importation and sale of all kinds of merchandise are concerned; third, unless the consular fees and charges of the Republic of Panama in respect to entry of all vessels and importations into said ports of Panama and Colon shall be reduced to 60 per cent of the rates now in force; and, fourth, unless goods imported into the ports of Panama and Colon consigned to or destined for any part of the Canal Zone shall not be subjected in the Republic of Panama to any other direct or indirect impost or tax whatever.

SEC. 2. In view of the proximity of the port of Ancon to the port of Panama, and the port of Cristobal to the port of Colon, the proper customs or port official of the Canal Zone shall, when not inconsistent with the interests of the United States, at the instance of the proper authority of the Republic of Panama, permit any vessel, entered at or cleared from the ports of Panama and Colon, together with its cargo and passengers, under suitable regulations for the transit of the imported merchandise and passengers to and from the territory of the Republic of Panama, to use and enjoy the dockage and other facilities of the ports of Ancon and Cristobal, respectively, upon payment of proper dockage dues to the owners of said docks:

Provided, however, that reciprocal privileges as to dockage and other facilities at Panama and Colon, together with suitable arrangement for transit of imported merchandise and passengers to and from the territory of the Canal Zone, shall be granted by the authorities of the Republic of Panama, when not inconsistent with its interests, to any vessel, together with its cargo and passengers, entered at or cleared from the ports of Ancon and Cristobal: Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall affect the complete administrative, police, and judicial jurisdiction of the two Governments over their respective ports and harbors, except as hereinafter provided in section 6:

Provided, also, that vessels entering or clearing at the port of Panama shall have the absolute right freely to anchor and lade and discharge their cargoes by lighterage from and to Panama at the usual anchorage in the neighborhood of the islands of Perico, Flamenco, Naos, and Culebra though included in the harbor of Ancon under the provisional delimitation as amended under section 5 hereafter, and to use the said waters of said harbor for all lawful commercial purposes.

SEC. 3. All manifests and invoices and other documents in respect to vessels or cargoes cleared or consigned for or from the ports of Panama and Colon shall, as heretofore, be made by the officials of the Republic of Panama. All manifests, invoices, and other documents in respect to the vessels and cargoes cleared or consigned for or from the ports of Ancon or Cristobal shall be made by officials of the United States.

SEC. 4. No import duties, tolls, or charges of any kind whatsoever shall be imposed by the authorities of the Canal Zone upon goods, wares, and merchandise imported, or upon persons passing from the territory of the Republic of Panama into the Canal Zone, and section 5 of the executive order of June 24, 1904, providing that duties on importations into the Canal Zone are to be levied in conformity with such duties as Congress has imposed upon foreign merchandise imported into ports of the United States is hereby revoked, but this order shall be inoperative unless the authorities of the Republic of Panama shall grant by proper order reciprocal free importation of goods, wares, and merchandise and free passage of persons from the territory of the Canal Zone into that of the Republic of Panama.

SEC. 5. The provisions of this order also shall not be operative except upon the condition that the delimitation of the cities and harbors of Colon and Panama, signed on the 15th day of June, 1904, by the proper representatives of the Governments of the Republic of Panama and of the Canal Zone, shall be provisionally enforced, and while the same shall remain in force with the consent of both parties thereto the provisional delimitation shall include not only the terms set forth in the writing thereof, but also the following, viz: That the harbor of Panama shall include the maritime waters in front of said city to the south and east thereof, extending 3 marine miles from mean low-water mark, except the maritime waters lying westerly of a line drawn from a stake or post set on Punta Mala through the middle island of the three islands known as Las Tres Hermanas, and extending 3 marine miles from mean low-water mark on Punta Mala, which waters shall be considered in the harbor of Ancon.

SEC. 6. This order also shall be inoperative unless the proper governmental authorities of the Republic of Panama shall grant power to the authorities of the Canal Zone to exercise immediate and complete jurisdiction in matters of sanitation and quarantine in the maritime waters of the ports of Panama and Colon.

SEC. 7. The executive order of June 24, 1904, concerning the establishment of post offices and postal service in the Canal Zone is modified and supplemented by the following provisions:

All mail matter carried in the territory of the Canal Zone to or through the Republic of Panama to the United States and to foreign countries shall bear the stamps of the Republic of Panama properly crossed by a printed mark of the Canal Zone Government, and at rates the same as those imposed by the Government of the United States upon its domestic and foreign mail matter, exactly as if the United States and the Republic of Panama for this purpose were common territory. The authorities of the Canal Zone shall purchase from the Republic of Panama such stamps as the authorities of the Canal Zone desire to use in the Canal Zone at 40 per cent of their face value; but this order shall be inoperative unless the proper authorities of the Republic of Panama shall by suitable arrangement with the postal authorities of the United States provide for the transportation of mail matter between post offices on the Isthmus of Panama and post offices in the United States at the same rates as are now charged for domestic postage in the United States, except all mail matter lawfully franked and inclosed in the so-called penalty envelopes of the United States Government concerning the public business of the United States, which shall be carried free, both by the Governments of Panama and of the Canal Zone; provided, however, that the zone authorities may, for the purpose of facilitating the transportation of through mail between the zone and the United States in either direction, inclose such through mail properly stamped or lawfully franked in sealed mail pouches, which shall not be opened by the authorities of the Republic of Panama in transit, on condition that the cost of transportation of such mail pouches shall be paid by the Zone Government.

SEC. 8. This order also shall not be operative unless the currency agreement made at Washington June 20, 1904, by the representatives of the Republic of Panama and the Secretary of War of the United States, acting with the approval of the President of the United States, for the establishment of a gold standard of value in the Republic of Panama, and proper coinage shall be approved and put into execution by the President of the Republic of Panama, pursuant to the authority conferred upon him by law of the Republic of Panama, No. 84, approved June 20, 1904, and unless the President of the Republic of Panama, in order that the operation of the said currency agreement in securing and maintaining a gold standard of value in the Republic of Panama may not be obstructed thereby, shall by virtue of his authority conferred by law No. 65, enacted by the National Assembly of Panama on June 6, 1904, abolish the tax of 1 per cent on gold coin exported from the Republic of Panama.

SEC. 9. Citizens of the Republic of Panama at any time residing in the Canal Zone shall have, so far as concerns the United States, entire freedom of voting at elections held in the Republic of Panama and its provinces or municipalities at such places outside of the Canal Zone as may be fixed by the Republic and under such conditions as the Republic may determine, but nothing herein is to be construed as intending to limit the power of the Republic to exclude or restrict the right of such citizens to vote as it may be deemed judicious.

SEC. 10. The highway extending from the eastern limits of the city of Panama, as fixed in the above-mentioned provisional delimitation agreement of June 10, 1910, to the point farther to the eastward where the road to the "Savannas" crosses the zone line (which is 5 miles to eastward of the center axis of the canal) shall be repaired and maintained in a serviceable condition at the cost and expense of the authorities of the Canal Zone, and also in like manner the said road from the said eastern limits of the city of Panama to the railroad bridge in the city of Panama shall be repaired at the cost of the authorities of the Canal Zone, but this order shall not be operative unless the Republic of Panama shall waive its claim for compensation for the use in perpetuity of the municipal buildings located in the Canal Zone.

SEC. 11. The United States will construct, maintain, and conduct a hospital or hospitals either in the Canal Zone or in the territory of the Republic, at its option, for the treatment of persons insane or afflicted with the disease of leprosy, and indigent sick, and the United States will accept for treatment therein such persons of said classes as the Republic may request, but this order shall not be operative unless, first, the Republic of Panama shall furnish without cost the requisite lands for said purposes if the United States shall locate such hospital or hospitals in the territory of the Republic, and, second, unless the Republic shall contribute and pay to the United States a reasonable daily per capita charge in respect of each patient entering upon the request of the Republic, to be fixed by the Secretary of War of the United States.

SEC. 12. The operation of this executive order and its enforcement by officials of the United States on the one hand, or a compliance with and performance of the conditions of its operation by the Republic of Panama and its officials on the other, shall not be taken as a delimitation, definition, restriction, or restrictive construction of the rights of either party under the treaty between the United States and the Republic of Panama.

This order is to take effect on the 12th day of December, 1904.

WM. H. TAFT, Secretary of War.

This order will be duly published and enforced.

J. G. WALKER,
Chairman Isthmian Canal Commission.

Circular No. 5,
Isthmian Canal Commission.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 30, 1904.

The following order of the Secretary of War is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

PANAMA, December 6, 1904.

Executive order of December 6, 1904, explanatory of executive order of December 3, 1904.

SECTION 1. Consignments of goods, wares, and merchandise which by virtue of section 1 of the above-mentioned order of December 3, 1904, can not be entered for importation at the ports of Ancon or Cristobal may, nevertheless, at the option of the consignor, if accompanied by the proper consular invoices of the consul of the Republic of Panama at the port of consignment, be landed at Ancon or Cristobal, respectively, in transit to any part of the Canal Zone or the Republic upon payment of the proper duties to the Republic of Panama, under suitable arrangements similar to those provided for by section 2 of said order of December 3, 1904.

But such goods, wares, and merchandise not accompanied by consular invoice of the consul of the Republic shall not be permitted to land at Ancon or Cristobal.

SEC. 2. The order of December 3, 1904, shall be construed to permit free exportation and consignment of goods, wares, and merchandise and free transit of persons and vehicles from the Republic through the Canal Zone and from the terminal ports thereof.

By direction of the President.

WM. H. TAFT,
Secretary of War.

This order will be duly published and enforced.

J. G. WALKER,
Chairman Isthmian Canal Commission.

Circular No. 6,
Isthmian Canal Commission.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 30, 1904.

The following order of the Secretary of War is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, December 16, 1904.

To the Chaiirman of the Isthmian Canal Commission:

By direction of the President, the order of June 24, 1904, relating to the establishment and administration of the customs service in the Canal Zone of the Isthmus of Panama, is hereby revoked.

WM. H. TAFT,
Secretary of War.

This order will be duly published and enforced.

J. G. WALKER,
Chairman Isthmian Canal Commission.

Circular No. 7.
Isthmian Canal Commission.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 30, 1904.

The following order of the Secretary of War is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

WAR DEPARTMENT, December 28, 1904.

SIR: By direction of the President, it is ordered that there shall be substituted for the order of June 24, 1904, relating to the establishment and administration of the customs service in the Canal Zone of the Isthmus of Panama, which was revoked by the order of December 16, 1904, the following:

SECTION 1. For the purpose of customs administration in the Canal Zone there is hereby established a customs district, which comprises all the lands and waters within the control and jurisdiction of the United States on the Isthmus of Panama and the maritime waters contiguous to the shores of the said Canal Zone extending to the distance of 3 marine miles from mean low-water mark, but not including any maritime waters that pertain to the harbors of the cities of Panama and Colon in the Republic of Panama, the harbors of which are sufficiently defined under the provisional agreement of delimitation signed by the proper representatives of the Governments of Panama and of the Canal Zone on the 15th day of June, as modified by the consent of the parties in accordance with the description contained in section 5 of the executive order of December 3, 1904.

SEC. 2. There shall be two ports of entry in the Canal Zone, to wit: Ancon, at the Pacific terminus of the canal, and Cristobal, at the Atlantic terminus, at which goods, wares, and merchandise may be imported or exported and vessels may be entered or cleared in accordance with the Executive Orders of December 3, 1904, and December 6, 1904.

SEC. 3. The subdivision of the executive branch of the Government of the Canal Zone, known as the department of revenues, shall include the administration of the customs laws and tariff regulations in force in the said zone. The collector of revenues, who by act of the Isthmian Canal Commission is ex officio the collector of customs, shall receive the salary which may be allowed by law, and shall perform the duties of collector of customs as required by the laws now in force in the Canal Zone or that may hereafter be enacted.

SEC. 4. The deputy collectors and inspectors of customs, the health officers, and port captains at the ports of Ancon and Cristobal shall receive such compensation as may be allowed by law, and will perform their duties at said ports as required by the laws and regulations in force in the zone.

SEC. 5. The order of December 16, 1904, revoking the order of June 24, 1904, together with this order, shall be proclaimed in the Canal Zone, Isthmus of Panama, and shall be in force from the date of the promulgation.

Very respectfully,

WM. H. TAFT,
Secretary of War.

The CHAIRMAN OF THE ISTHMIAN CANAL COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C.

This order will be duly published and enforced.

J. G. WALKER,
Chairman Isthmian Canal Commission.

[Inclosure 3.]

Circular No. 8.
Isthmian Canal Commission.

OFFICE OF THE ISTHMIAN CANAL COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C., January 10, 1905.

The following order of the Secretary of War is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., January 7, 1905.

EXECUTIVE ORDER.

By direction of the President, it is hereby ordered that—

1. To entitle goods, wares, and merchandise to entry at Ancon and Cristobal, the terminal ports of the Isthmian Canal, Canal Zone, Isthmus of Panama, it is necessary that it be established by the certificate of a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission, or of the chief engineer of the Isthmian Canal Commission, or of the chief of the department of material and supplies, that said goods, wares, and merchandise are necessary and convenient for the construction of the Isthmian Canal, or for the use and consumption of certain officers and employees in the service of the United States and of the Government of the Canal Zone and their families stationed on the Isthmus of Panama, and are to be devoted to that purpose exclusively.

2. The certificates above required shall be granted only when the goods, wares, and merchandise to be certified are (1) the property, including live stock and forage, of or under contract of purchase by the United States and intended for use in the work of constructing the canal or the sanitation of the Isthmus, or for the service of the Government of the Canal Zone; (2) the property, including live stock and forage, of or under contract of purchase by a contractor with the United States or the Government of the Canal Zone for work on the construction of the Isthmian Canal, the sanitation of the Isthmus of Panama, provided that any goods, wares, or merchandise that are to be offered for sale by any contractor to his employees or otherwise shall not be entitled to such entry; (3) the property of the Government of the Canal Zone or of any municipality of said zone; (4) property and provisions intended for sale in commissaries established and operated by the Isthmian Canal Commission to officers, employees, and contractors of the Isthmian Canal Commission, of the Panama Railroad Co., or of any contractor with the Isthmian Canal Commission for work on the Isthmus (together with the families of such persons), who are citizens of the United States or who received compensation on what is known as the gold pay roll of the commission, of the railroad company, or such contractor; (5) household furniture of such officers and employees of the Isthmian Canal Commission stationed in the Canal Zone, or Republic of Panama, including such articles, effects, and furnishings as pictures, books, musical instruments, chinaware, bed and table linen, and kitchen utensils; also wearing apparel, toilet objects, and articles for personal use; books, portable tools, and instruments; jewelry and table services, in quantities and of the class suitable to the rank and position of such officers and employees and intended for their own use and benefit and not for barter or sale, imported from the United States.

3. This order contemplates the exclusion from benefits of the commissaries established and maintained by the commission of all employees and workmen who are natives of tropical countries wherein prevail climatic conditions similar to those prevailing on the Isthmus of Panama, and who therefore may be presumed to be able to secure the articles of food, clothing, household goods and furnishings, of the kind and character to which they are accustomed, from the merchants of Panama, Colon, and the towns of the Canal Zone, and whose ordinary needs may be supplied without recourse to the Government commissaries. Should it develop hereafter that said merchants charge prices in excess of legitimate profit, or practice other extortion, the United States, for the protection and assistance of all is employees, whether from the Tropical or Temperate Zone, will supply its commissaries with such staple articles as are required and desired by the inhabitants of tropical countries, and permit all its employees and workmen and those of its contractors to avail themselves of the benefits and privileges afforded by said Government commissaries.

This order is to take effect on the 7th day of January, 1905.

Wm. H. Taft, Secretary of War.

The Chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission,
Washington, D. C.

This order will be duly published and enforced.

J. G. Walker,
Chairman Isthmian Canal Commission.

[Inclosure 4.]

Circular No. 45.

The Isthmian Canal Commission,
Washington, D. C., January 9, 1911.

The following order of the Secretary of War is published for the information of all concerned:

War Department,
Washington, January 5, 1911.

ORDERS.

1. By direction of the President, it is ordered that the first proviso of section 1 of the order issued by the Secretary of War, by direction of the President, on December 3, 1904, which was promulgated in Circular No. 4, Isthmian Canal Commission, December 30, 1904, be amended to read as follows:

"Provided, however, That this order shall cease to be operative—

"First. If the Republic of Panama should at any time increase the rate of duty on imported articles described in class 2 of the act of the National Convention of Panama passed July 5, 1904, and effective October 12, 1904, above 15 per cent ad valorem, provided for in said act; or if the said Republic should increase at any time the rates of duty on the imported articles described in the other schedules of said act, except on all forms of imported wines, liquors, alcohols, and opium, upon which the Republic may fix higher rates.

"Second. If article 38 of the constitution of the Republic of Panama, as modified by article 146 thereof, is repealed or modified at any time in so far the importation and sale of all kinds of merchandise are concerned.

"Third. If the consular fees and charges of the Republic of Panama, in respect to the entry of all vessels and importations into the said ports of Colon and Panama, are increased beyond the rates now in force, which rates are understood to be 60 per cent of the rates in force prior to the promulgation of said order of December 3, 1904; or,

"Fourth. If goods imported into the ports of Colon and Panama consigned to or designated for any port in the Canal Zone are at any time subjected in the Republic of Panama to any other direct or indirect impost or tax whatever."

2. Paragraph 3 of the order issued by the Secretary of War, by direction of the President, on January 7, 1905, which contemplates the exclusion from the benefits of the commissaries established and maintained by the Canal Commission of all employees and workmen who are natives of tropical countries is hereby revoked.

J. M. Dickinson,
Secretary of War.
F. C. Boggs,
Captain, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, Chief of Office.

File No. 815.51/301.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 232.]

American Legation,
Tegucigalpa, August 30, 1911.

Sir: I have the honor to report that, by an executive order dated August 29, 1911, Mr. Zemurray is empowered to negotiate in the United States, for the Government of Honduras, a loan of $500,000 in gold, the proceeds thereof to be used to defray the expenses of the recent war, which the Provisional Government considers itself bound to liquidate in accordance with the bases of peace signed at the Conference in Puerto Cortes in May last.

Mr. Zemurray left Tegucigalpa immediately thereafter, for Puerto Cortes and Ceiba. Thence he intends to go direct to Washington to acquaint the Department with the terms of the matter.

I have [etc.]

J. Butler Wright.

File No. 815.51/326.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 85.]

American Legation,
Tegucigalpa, February 4, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor herewith to enclose the terms of the contract which this Government proposes to make with the Whitney Central National Bank of New Orleans for a loan of $500,000 American gold, cut from La Gaceta of the 15th ultimo (Series 391, No. 3905), published yesterday. This clipping is accompanied by a translation.[1]

---

[1] Not printed.

In this connection it may be of interest to know that Mr. Samuel Zemurray (Mr. Wright's Nos. 229 and 232, of August 14th[1] and 30th last, respectively) returned from the United States about two weeks ago and has called at the Legation. He stated to me that he negotiated the above-mentioned loan; that he was negotiating a second loan of from six to ten millions gold to take the place of the Morgan loan; that this loan was to be protected by a convention which would replace the Knox-Paredes Convention; that he had a copy of this new convention with him and that if I had not already received a copy of it I could shortly expect to receive it with instructions from the Department. Mr. Zemurray said, as I recall, that this loan was underwritten by Mr. Sheldon, President of the Bethlehem Steel Company, that Mr. Sheldon had been in communication with the Department and had arranged with it the terms of the convention that was to protect the loan and that he (Mr. Zemurray) had therefore found it unnecessary to go to Washington. I understood from his conversation that he had obtained from Mr. Sheldon the copy of the convention which he claims to have. He described to me certain provisions of this convention which, he said, removed certain features of the Knox-Paredes Convention that he considered objectionable to the Government and people of Honduras and added that Mr. Lamar C. Quintero was on his way to Tegucigalpa in connection with the matter.

In the absence of instructions in so important a matter I can not give credence to Mr. Zemurray's statements concerning this large loan. It seems evident that he would like to make this loan for Honduras and he appears to have felt the pulse of the Administration and people and in the loan and convention as described to me to have conceived a proposition which he believes more acceptable to them than the pending ones.

I have [etc.] CHARLES D. WHITE.

File No. 815.51/324.

The Secretary of State to the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 6, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my letter to you of February 13, 1911, wherewith I transmitted to your honorable committee at the direction of the President copies of the draft agreements negotiated by the representative of the Republic of Honduras with Messrs. J. P. Morgan and Company, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, the National City Bank, and the First National Bank of New York for a loan of $10,000,000, I now have the honor to inform you that as the time specified for fulfilling certain of the covenants in that agreement has expired the bankers above mentioned have notified the Department, through their attorney, Mr. F. B. Jennings, that the agreement has lapsed and that they have withdrawn their proposal to make a loan to the Government of Honduras at this time.

It is now hoped that other American financial institutions will be persuaded to undertake the task of rehabilitating the finances of Honduras, but I fear that unless prompt action on the convention be had it will be very difficult to induce American enterprise to enter into the field, and I therefore hope that you may find it convenient to have the convention, which has already been favorably reported by your committee, promptly brought up and considered in the Senate.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 815.51/327.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 105.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, February 27, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the loan of $500,000.00 negotiated by Mr. Samuel Zemurray on behalf of this Government with the Whitney Central National Bank of New Orleans (my No. 85, of the 4th instant and previous correspondence) was approved yesterday with the alterations recommended by the Committee on Finance and Public Credit in its report on this contract which goes to the Department as clipping No. 57 cut from El Nuevo Tiempo, No. 270, of to-day's date.[1]

The changes in the contract are significant. The more important affect Articles IV and VI, altering the powers of the agent to be appointed by the bank to administer the customs at Puerto Cortes in case of failure on the part of this Government to make the payments to the bank and eliminating the restraints put on this Government in the matter of tariff legislation.

I have [etc.]

CHARLES D. WHITE.

File No. 815.51/326.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 55.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 6, 1912.

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your despatch No. 85 of the 4th ultimo in which you enclose a clipping from La Gaceta giving the terms of a proposed contract between the Government of Honduras and the Whitney Central National Bank of New Orleans for a loan of $500,000, and report on the information given you by Mr. Samuel Zemurray.

The correct title of the bank in New Orleans is now the Whitney Central Trust and Savings Bank of New Orleans. With this bank in their negotiations with Honduras are associated Messrs. William C. Sheldon and Company of New York. The Department was not informed until January 29th of the intention of these bankers to negotiate with Honduras a loan contract to replace the agreement entered into with Messrs. Morgan and Company, which has lapsed and from which Morgan and Company have withdrawn, according to an announcement made through their attorney, Mr. Jennings, to the Department on the 3rd ultimo. On February 3 a letter of introduction to you was sent by the Department to Mr. Lamar C. Quintero, who has gone to Honduras to represent the bankers in conjunction with Mr. Samuel Zemurray, which letter authorized you to tender Mr. Quintero such unofficial and informal assistance as you properly might.

---

[1] Not printed.

The Department supposes that Mr. Quintero has communicated fully to the Legation the bases of the arrangement which the above-mentioned bankers propose to negotiate with the Government of Honduras, especially as the Department has seen recent press reports to the effect that the Honduran Assembly has approved the contract, copy of which was transmitted in your despatch No. 85, for a preliminary loan of $500,000.

A copy of a letter from Mr. George R. Sheldon, summarizing the plan of the bankers for a preliminary loan to be followed by one for $10,000,000, is enclosed for your confidential information.[1]

The Department shares the hope expressed by Mr. Sheldon that the Loan Convention will now be approved both by the Senate of the United States and the Assembly of Honduras, and you will devote all your efforts, in so far as is proper, to obtain the ratification thereof by the latter. Should Honduras formally approve the Loan Convention, the effect here would undoubtedly be very favorable.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 815.51/328 a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 18, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the Department's letter to you of the 6th ultimo relative to the United States-Honduras Convention now awaiting consideration by the Senate, I have the honor to inform you that negotiations with the Government of Honduras for a Government loan have now been commenced by the Whitney Central Trust and Savings Bank of New Orleans, with which the firm of Messrs. Wm. C. Sheldon and Company, Bankers, of 62 Cedar Street, New York, is associated.

The proposed loan is to be based upon the following terms:

1. The total authorized issue is not to exceed $10,000,000 of bonds, payable in forty years, with interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and with a sinking fund after five years of one per cent. per annum sufficient to redeem the bonds before maturity;

2. Of these bonds not exceeding $6,000,000 are to be issued at once, and the bonds or their proceeds are to be used for the purpose of retiring (a) the outstanding funded debt of the Republic, amounting with interest at the present time to £23,933,156; and (b) a temporary loan of $500,000, made to meet the immediate pressing needs of the Republic, which was approved by the Congress of Honduras on February 26th last;

---

[1] Not printed.

3. The bonds are to be secured by the customs duties and revenues of the Republic from exports and imports, from which an amount sufficient to meet the monthly instalments of the interest and sinking fund is to be paid over monthly to the fiscal agent of the loan by the Collector to be appointed pursuant to the provisions of the Convention between Honduras and the United States of America, now pending before the Senate for ratification.

The contract does not deal with questions of disputed claims or with the internal debt, and matters of railroad, wharf or other concessions are not touched upon. Since those features of the previous contract, which gave rise to a certain amount of doubt and discussion, are thus eliminated, and since the amount required for the service of the loan is reduced from $450,000 per annum to $300,000—a sum which would seem to be well within the resources of Honduras—it is believed that the contract will meet with favorable consideration by the Government of Honduras to whom it has already been submitted.

It is therefore sincerely hoped that the Convention may again be favorably reported out by your Committee and brought to the earnest attention of the Senate.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 815.51/333.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, April 13, 1912.

I am authorized by the President of Honduras to state that he will not again submit to Congress the loan convention now pending in the United States Senate, even if ratified by that body, considering the rejection by the Congress of Honduras as final. He is however disposed to make a loan convention, since a large loan is necessary but cannot be made except under such a guaranty.

WHITE.

File No. 815.51/335.

Memorandum of the Division of Latin-American Affairs of the Department of State on the status of the loan negotiations.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
DIVISION OF LATIN-AMERICAN AFFAIRS,
April 16, 1912.

The relation which recent and current political developments in Honduras bear toward the pending loan negotiation appears to be as follows:

President Manuel Bonilla, at the time of his election, carefully assured the public through the semi-official Government organ of the Bertrand administration that he was in no way connected with or pledged to any foreign powers, capitalists or interests. This served to allay the prevalent suspicion that his last revolutionary expedition was supported by the United States. He was elected and this "plank is his platform" was skilfully used to increase his popularity.

During the interim between election and inauguration, while Bonilla practically controlled the Government although not yet in office, the Foreign Office seemed inclined to receive information regarding the loan. Meanwhile political refugees centered in Salvador and began a systematic arraignment of Bonilla in the press of Salvador and elsewhere, accusing him of partiality to the loan, etc. and fomenting several revolutionary attacks from Salvadoran territory. While easily repulsed, this military activity served to coalesce the opposition and to enhance in the eyes of General M. B. Rosales (present Minister of Fomento) the importance of holding himself ready to embrace any presidential opportunity that might present itself.

Almost immediately after his election Bonilla began to turn from his former adherents and to show a vacillating policy quite foreign to his attitude during his previous administration, and his popularity evidently began to wane. In addition his health is far from good (compare Mr. White's recent despatches) and at one time he was so near death that only the persistent efforts of a German-American physician pulled him through. This physician, Doctor G. A. Walther, has just left Honduras for the United States (see Mr. White's telegram and despatches) and the effect of his absence upon Bonilla will undoubtedly be great, for there is no other physician there who understands his condition.

Samuel Zemurray who had successfully completed the preliminary negotiations for the $500,000 loan and who enjoyed the confidence of the people and the marked friendship of Bonilla, expressed himself, in interviews at the Legation in July, 1911, and February, 1912, as being confident of negotiating a larger loan provided certain features of the Morgan instrument be eliminated. Recent reports from various sources appear to establish the fact that Zemurray, who apparently weakened his standing by a simultaneous request for a large concession of too great scope, which has recently been disapproved by the Government, left Honduras dissatisfied with the failure of his loan negotiations.

The opposition, with whom Juan Angel Arias is in direct communication, is aware of all these facts, and is awaiting any indication of weakness on the part of Bonilla or his death, at which time Honduras will undoubtedly become the field of a personal struggle among them. Arias states, according to advices received by counsel for Mr. W. S. Valentine, that he will willingly lead this opposition in a peaceful campaign and has expressed himself in favor of immediate settlement of the Honduran foreign debt.

In this present state of affairs it would appear to be almost political suicide for Bonilla to favor a loan convention that had already been rejected by the Congress of Honduras. It does not follow, however, that the country is not ready and willing to consider the reorganization of its finances. The recent telegram from Mr. White (817.51/424) seems to confirm this and the preamble of the recent report of the financial committee of the national Congress would appear to indicate a trend in this direction. I quote two paragraphs thereof.

> It is likewise easy to understand that if, by means of a financial arrangement with a responsible banking institution, upon conditions similar to those accepted by countries having a well established credit, this country proves its claim to a confidence secured by its pecuniary resources and its honor, the way lies open to it for strengthening its good name by the faithful fulfillment of its promises, and this will have the further result of unlocking to it the doors of the financial world where it will find easy and advantageous means wherewith to work out a solution of the problems which upon various occasions have placed it in a most embarrassing situation.
>
> Finally, we are of the opinion that the conditions of the country make a foreign loan necessary and that we ought to hope that those in charge of our national properties will know how to respond to the confidence reposed in them.

While it is possible that the pending convention, if ratified by our Senate, might be reconsidered by the National Congress of Honduras at its next session (January to April, 1913), provided a willing administration adroitly handled it, I am of the opinion that the failure of the Senate to ratify the present instrument would in no wise defeat the desired ends. In fact the presentation to Honduras of a new convention, differing in however small detail from the present one and supporting a contract as favorable as the present one appears to be, would entirely remove the chief and almost insurmountable objection that now exists in Honduras, i. e., the reconsideration of a convention that has once been emphatically disapproved. The manner of its rejection and the unfortunate circumstances attending its presentation to Congress are neither remembered nor considered in the present temper of the Honduran Government. (Mr. White's telegram and the committee report, above referred to, would appear to sustain this view.)

I strongly believe, however, that a representative of the bankers who shall have no conflicting interests in Honduras and who may work in close harmony and understanding with the Legation at Tegucigalpa would succeed in his negotiations for a satisfactory loan contract far better than has Mr. Zemurray.

J. B. Wright.

File No. 815.51/334.

The Minister of Honduras to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

Legation of Honduras,
Washington, April 16, 1912.

Mr. Secretary: It has come to the knowledge of the Government of Honduras that the Convention signed in this capital on the tenth day of January of the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven by his excellency the Secretary of State, Mr. Philander C. Knox, as Plenipotentiary of the Government of the United States, and Don Juan E. Paredes, as Plenipotentiary of the Government of Honduras, is pending in the Senate of this Republic for its ratification. In this connection I have received instructions from the Department of State of the Government of Honduras to apprize your excellency that the said Convention having been submitted to the National Congress for its ratification, by the Government over which General

Don Miguel R. Dávila presided, was disapproved by Decree No. 20, issued on the thirty-first day of the month and year above stated, which I have the honor to transcribe to your excellency:

> Decree No. 20. The National Congress, having before it the Convention signed in the city of Washington on the tenth of this month, by Señor Don Juan E. Paredes, as Plenipotentiary of Honduras and Mr. Philander C. Knox as Plenipotentiary of the United States of America, and in the exercise of the powers conferred upon it by Article 90, number 22, of the Political Constitution of the State—Decrees: Sole Article. The Convention under consideration is disapproved. Given in Tegucigalpa, in the Hall of Sessions, the thirty-first day of the month of January, one thousand nine hundred and eleven. Francisco Escobar, President; Leandro Valladares, Secretary; Ramón Fiallos, Secretary.

I avail [etc.]

F. DÁVILA.

File No. 815.51/336.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 118.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, April 18, 1912.

SIR: Supplementing my cablegraphic reply of the 13th instant, I have the honor to report that in compliance with instruction No. 55 of the 6th ultimo I have discussed the question of the loan convention pending in the Senate with both the Minister for Foreign Affairs and the President. As will have been observed from references made to this matter in previous despatches, it has been so constantly and persistently evaded by both the Foreign Office and the Executive as to make it evident that its discussion was not desired. In conversation with the President previous to the arrival of the Secretary of State at Amapala, he refused to commit himself in the matter, stating that the convention had been rejected here and withdrawn, according to report, from the Senate of the United States, and pleading the need of time to study the whole question of a loan and convention. Upon receipt of the cablegram above mentioned I had a further interview with the President, who has been confined to his bed since the 9th instant, and, by insisting upon a statement from him, secured his authorization of my reply above mentioned to said cablegram. The present Minister for Foreign Affairs has from his assumption of office as elsewhere reported, professed great friendship for the United States and has repeatedly stated to me that this country needs their assistance. He has talked more frankly and has seemed to see the needs of his country more clearly than any one else with whom I have discussed the matter. But he, too, has shown a certain disposition to avoid the question of a loan convention and to look for expedients to cure ills of the moment rather than an arrangement that will terminate the general situation.

This reluctance to take up again the loan convention need not be considered as due to any hostile disposition toward the United States. When it is recalled what feeling was displayed at the time of its rejection by the Honduran Congress and how the four deputies that voted for it were insulted and threatened with personal violence in the streets at the close of that session it will be understood that fear of public opinion may be, and probably is, the occasion of this attitude.

Both the President and the Minister for Foreign Affairs have always admitted the need of a settlement of the foreign debt and have both admitted to me that a loan for this purpose is necessary and cannot be made except under cover of a convention. I am tempted to hope, while careful not to permit myself to be too sanguine, that with patience and tact they can be convinced of the disinterested good faith of the United States and lead to make an arrangement advantageous to themselves and acceptable to us.

I have [etc.]

CHARLES D. WHITE.

File No. 815.51/337.

Wm. C. Sheldon and Company, Bankers, to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, May 15, 1912.

My dear Mr. Secretary: It gives me great pleasure to introduce herewith Mr. Sol Wexler, Vice President of the Whitney-Central National Bank of New Orleans, who is associated with us in the loan to Honduras. The Whitney-Central National Bank is proposing to advance to Honduras $500,000, and Mr. Wexler is anxious to submit the papers to you.

Thanking you for any courtesies you may extend to Mr. Wexler, I am [etc.]

GEORGE R. SHELDON.

NOTE.—Mr. Wexler called at the Department on May 17 and spoke with Mr. Doyle and Mr. Wright.

File No. 815.51/338.

The Vice President of the Whitney-Central National Bank of New Orleans to the Solicitor for the Department of State.

[Telegram.]

NEW ORLEANS, June 8, 1912.

Referring to our conversation on the subject of the $500,000 temporary loan to Honduras—in which you suggested that any differences pertaining to the loan agreement should be arbitrated by one selected by the Bank and one by the Republic, with the Secretary of State as umpire—President Bonilla cables as follows:

> We would accept as supreme arbitrator the President of the Supreme Court of Justice of the United States of America.

Please wire me if, after consultation with Mr. Knox and others, in your opinion this would have the same effect as if arbitrator were the Secretary of State, and if it will furnish us all of the safeguards which you stated would be furnished under this plan. Please answer by wire at our expense.

SOL WEXLER.

File No. 815.51/339.

Memorandum of Mr. Pierrepont of the Division of Latin-American Affairs of the Department of State concerning an interview with the Agent of Honduras.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
DIVISION OF LATIN-AMERICAN AFFAIRS,
June 11, 1912.

Mr. Samuel Zemurray, who spends most of his time in Honduras, called at the Division today and talked with Mr. Doyle and myself, and later with Mr. Clark. What he wished to find out was the Department's answer to the inquiry made in Mr. Wexler's telegram to Mr. Clark,[1] in which it was suggested that the Chief Justice should be named as the umpire in the arbitration clause of the contract with Honduras regarding the $500,000 loan, and also to discuss the same proposition with regard to the larger loan which the Whitney Bank and others proposed to make to Honduras.

Mr. Clark explained to Mr. Zemurray that Mr. Wexler had misunderstood him in claiming that he suggested that the Secretary of State himself should be the umpire, Mr. Clark having actually said his personal idea would be to have the umpire named by the Secretary of State. Mr. Zemurray continued to discuss the plan of having the Chief Justice act as umpire, and in this connection Mr. Clark suggested unofficially that the best way would be to have some of his New Orleans friends ascertain personally from the Chief Justice whether he would be willing to act in such a capacity, and if he should answer in the affirmative, to have the President of Honduras make a formal request of him through the Department of State. Mr. Zemurray thought this would be the best way. Mr. Clark added, however, that he thought the arrangement of having the umpire named by the Secretary of State would perhaps be slightly preferable as it would lend more political significance to the arbitration clause in the loan contract.

Mr. Zemurray then sought to find out whether the Department thought that such an arbitration clause in the contract for the large loan, which would have to be approved by the Honduran Congress, would have nearly the same weight as the convention. In reply to this Mr. Clark called Mr. Zemurray's attention to the Hague Convention respecting the limitation of the employment of force for the recovery of contract debts, which provides, in Article I, that the undertaking not to use force is not applicable " when the debtor State refuses or neglects to reply to an offer of arbitration, or, after accepting the offer, prevents any compromise from being agreed on, or, after the arbitration, fails to submit to the award ", the inference being clear that this Government would have the right, should any of those exceptions arise, to use force in behalf of the Americans making the loan.

Mr. Clark also said unofficially that the action this Government would take would depend entirely upon the policy of the Administration, and that in his opinion this Hague Convention would give the Government just about as good a right to use force as the original loan convention. Mr. Zemurray seemed very pleased upon learning of this Hague Convention, and seemed to think that it afforded a satisfactory guaranty.

---

[1] See ante, telegram of June 8.

Mr. Zemurray told me, regarding the $500,000 loan, that the Whitney Bank put up $100,000; that he himself put up $100,000; Mr. Bradley Palmer $100,000; Mr. Wexler and some other man $50,000 each; and the other $100,000, I think, by some parties in Chicago. He said that so far as he knew Sheldon did not put up any of the money for this preliminary loan, unless he had a share of that put up by the Whitney Bank.

Mr. Clark made a point of the fact that he was speaking informally and unofficially: that what he said was in no way binding upon the Department; and that it could not be regarded as the views of the Department. Mr. Zemurray said he understood this.

File No. 815.51/340.

The Vice President of the Whitney-Central National Bank of New Orleans to the Solicitor for the Department of State.

New Orleans, June 11, 1912.

Dear Sir: I telegraphed you on Saturday last, as follows: [see ante, telegram of June 8] which I now confirm, and to which I am still without reply.

I have therefore wired to Mr. Zemurray to call on you with a view of ascertaining if the Department of State would assume the same attitude toward the $500,000 of bonds of the Republic of Honduras as it would have assumed if the Secretary of State had been made the ultimate umpire in any controversy which might arise?

It appears to me as if the selection of the Chief Justice of the United States rather adds strength than otherwise; and I would particularly like to know now what kind of a letter we might expect from the Department with the Chief Justice as umpire, so I may be able to close the matter up by cable with Honduras and proceed to have the bonds engraved.

Hoping to be favored with an early reply, I am [etc.]

S. Wexler.

File No. 815.51/341.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

American Legation,
Tegucigalpa, June 13, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to enclose herewith, as of possible interest in the matter of the financial condition of this country and the various loan proposals which have been been made in the past, a copy[1] of El Nuevo Tiempo, of Saturday the 8th of June last, No. 356, in which appeared two diplomatic notes, the one from the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Salvador addressed to the Minister of Foreign

---

[1] Not printed.

Affairs of this country and the other from the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Honduras in reply to the former in regard to the matter of the financial condition of Honduras.

In his letter to Dr. Vásquez the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Salvador states that his Government, actuated by the highest motives of friendship and fraternity and appreciating the present financial crisis which faces the Government of Honduras, is desirous to be of assistance to that Government with a view of ameliorating this condition and offers its financial assistance.

In reply to the note from the Salvadoran Government the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Honduras, expressing the appreciation of his Government of the generosity of this offer on the part of Salvador, states that his Government is in the midst of a very difficult interior economic situation which it is laboring to overcome and states that his Government is resolved to improve the internal conditions and to eventually take up seriously the matter of the foreign debt, considering many proposals which have been and are being made to it with this in view. He refers to the loan proposal which the Government of General Dávila contracted in the United States and which he states that the present Government found too burdensome, and that his Government would keep in view the friendly proposal of Salvador for the time when it will be prepared to definitely consider the matter of the foreign loan.

I have been informed from sources which I consider reasonably reliable that the Salvadoran proposal, although emanating from Salvador, is made in cooperation with financial interests of the Argentine Republic, but this I cannot confirm. Recently, in a conversation with the Salvadoran Minister near this Government, I was informed that the Minister was under instructions from his Government to discuss the matter of a loan with the Honduran Government and that the Salvadoran Government was very anxious that the matter of the financial situations in Honduras and Nicaragua should be settled, if possible, through the assistance of Salvador because it was believed it would be better for the Governments of Central America to be the first to assist each other in time of difficulty, such as the present, rather than that these Governments be compelled to accept assistance from Governments beyond Central America.

An identic note to that which was addressed by Salvador to the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Honduras has been presented to the Government of Nicaragua.

I have [etc.]

PERRY BELDEN.

File No. 815.51/338.

The Secretary of State to the Vice President of the Whitney Central Trust and Savings Bank of New Orleans.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 18, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your telegram of the 8th instant, and your letter of the 11th of the same month, in regard to the proposed temporary loan of $500,000 to Honduras, and begs to say in reply that it has already taken up the matter to which you referred with Mr. Zemurray, who has doubtless already advised you of the substance of the interview.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

EXTRADITION CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND HONDURAS.

Treaty signed at Washington, January 15, 1909; ratification advised by the Senate, January 20, 1909; ratified by the President, March 1, 1909; ratified by Honduras, May 20, 1912; ratifications exchanged at Washington, July 10, 1912; proclaimed, July 10, 1912.

By the President of the United States of America.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS a Convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Honduras, providing for the mutual extradition of fugitives from justice, was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at Washington on the fifteenth day of January, one thousand nine hundred and nine, the original of which Convention, being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

The United States of America and the Republic of Honduras, being desirous to confirm their friendly relations and to promote the cause of justice, have resolved to conclude a treaty for the extradition of fugitives from justice between the United States of America and the Republic of Honduras, and has appointed for that purpose the following Plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States of America, Elihu Root, Secretary of State of the United States; and

The President of the Republic of Honduras, Doctor Luis Lazo A., Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Honduras to the United States;

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon and concluded the following articles:

Article I.

It is agreed that the Government of the United States and the Government of Honduras shall, upon mutual requisition duly made as herein provided, deliver up to justice any person who may be charged with or may have been convicted of any of the crimes specified in Article II of this Convention committed within the jurisdiction of one of the Contracting Parties while said person was actually within such jurisdiction when the crime was committed, and who shall seek an asylum or shall be found within the territories of the other, provided that such surrender shall take place only upon such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive or person so charged shall be found, would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime or offense had been there committed.

ARTICLE II.

Persons shall be delivered up according to the provisions of this Convention, who shall have been charged with or convicted of any of the following crimes:

1. Murder, comprehending the crimes designated by the terms of parricide, assassination, manslaughter, when voluntary; poisoning or infanticide.

2. The attempt to commit murder.

3. Rape, abortion, carnal knowledge of children under the age of twelve years.

4. Bigamy.

5. Arson.

6. Willful and unlawful destruction or obstruction of railroads, which endangers human life.

7. Crimes committed at sea:

(a) Piracy, as commonly known and defined by the law of nations, or by statute;

(b) Wrongfully sinking or destroying a vessel at sea or attempting to do so;

(c) Mutiny or conspiracy by two or more members of the crew or other persons on board of a vessel on the high seas, for the purpose of rebelling against the authority of the captain or commander of such vessel, or by fraud or violence taking possession of such vessel;

(d) Assault on board ships upon the high seas with intent to do bodily harm.

8. Burglary, defined to be the act of breaking into and entering the house of another in the night-time with intent to commit a felony therein.

9. The act of breaking into and entering into the offices of the Government and public authorities, or the offices of banks, banking houses, saving banks, trust companies, insurance companies, or other buildings not dwellings with intent to commit a felony therein.

10. Robbery, defined to be the act of feloniously and forcibly taking from the person of another, goods or money by violence or by putting him in fear.

11. Forgery or the utterance of forged papers.

12. The forgery or falsification of the official acts of the Government or public authority, including courts of justice, or the uttering or fraudulent use of the same.

13. The fabrication of counterfeit money, whether coin or paper, counterfeit titles or coupons of public debt, created by national, state, provincial, territorial, local, or municipal governments, banknotes or other instruments of public credit, counterfeit seals, stamps, dies, and marks of state or public administrations, and the utterance, circulation, or fraudulent use of the above mentioned objects.

14. Embezzlement or criminal malversation committed within the jurisdiction of one or the other party by public officers or depositaries, where the amount embezzled exceeds two hundred dollars (or Honduran equivalent).

15. Embezzlement by any person or persons hired, salaried, or employed, to the detriment of their employers or principals, when the crime or offense is punishable by imprisonment or other corporal punishment by the laws of both countries, and where the amount embezzled exceeds two hundred dollars (or Honduran equivalent).

16. Kidnapping of minors or adults, defined to be the abduction or detention of a person or persons, in order to exact money from them or their families, or for any other unlawful end.

17. Larceny, defined to be the theft of effects, personal property, or money, of the value of twenty-five dollars or more.

18. Obtaining money, valuable securities or other property by false pretenses or receiving any money, valuable securities or other property knowing the same to have been unlawfully obtained, where the amount of money or the value of the property so obtained or received exceeds two hundred dollars (or Honduran equivalent).

19. Perjury or subornation of perjury.

20. Fraud or breach of trust by a bailee, banker, agent, factor, trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, director, or officer of any company or corporation, or by any one in any fiduciary position, where the amount of money or the value of the property misappropriated exceeds two hundred dollars (or Honduran equivalent).

21. The extradition is also to take place for participation in any of the aforesaid crimes as an accessory before or after the fact, provided such participation be punishable by imprisonment by the laws of both Contracting Parties.

ARTICLE III.

The provisions of this Convention shall not import claim of extradition for any crime or offense of a political character, nor for acts connected with such crimes or offenses; and no person surrendered by or to either of the Contracting Parties in virtue of this Convention shall be tried or punished for a political crime or offense. When the offense charged comprises the act either of murder or assassination or of poisoning, either consummated or attempted, the fact that the offense was committed or attempted against the life of the sovereign or head of a foreign state or against the life of any member of his family, shall not be deemed sufficient to sustain that such a crime or offense was of a political character, or was an act connected with crimes or offenses of a political character.

ARTICLE IV.

No person shall be tried for any crime or offense other than that for which he was surrendered.

ARTICLE V.

A fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered under the provisions hereof, when, from lapse of time or other lawful cause, according to the laws of the place within the jurisdiction of which the crime was committed, the criminal is exempt from prosecution or punishment for the offense for which the surrender is asked.

ARTICLE VI.

If a fugitive criminal whose surrender may be claimed pursuant to the stipulations hereof, be actually under prosecution out on bail or in custody, for a crime or offense committed in the country where he has sought asylum, or shall have been convicted thereof, his extradition may be deferred until such proceedings be determined, and until he shall have been set at liberty in due course of law.

ARTICLE VII.

If a fugitive criminal claimed by one of the parties hereto shall be also claimed by one or more powers pursuant to treaty provisions, on account of crimes committed within their jurisdiction, such criminal shall be delivered to that state whose demand is first received.

ARTICLE VIII.

Under the stipulations of this Convention, neither of the Contracting Parties shall be bound to deliver up its own citizens.

ARTICLE IX.

The expense of the arrest, detention, examination, and transportation of the accused shall be paid by the Government which has preferred the demand for extradition.

ARTICLE X.

Everything found in the possession of the fugitive criminal at the time of his arrest, whether being the proceeds of the crime or offense, or which may be material as evidence in making proof of the crime, shall, so far as practicable, according to the laws of either of the Contracting Parties, be delivered up with his person at the time of the surrender. Nevertheless, the rights of a third party with regard to the articles aforesaid shall be duly respected.

ARTICLE XI.

The stipulations of this Convention shall be applicable to all territory wherever situated, belonging to either of the Contracting Parties or in the occupancy and under the control of either of them, during such occupancy or control.

Requisitions for the surrender of fugitives from justice shall be made by the respective diplomatic agents of the Contracting Parties. In the event of the absence of such agents from the country or its seat of government, or where extradition is sought from territory included in the preceding paragraph other than the United States, requisition may be made by superior consular officers.

It shall be competent for such diplomatic or superior consular officers to ask and obtain a mandate or preliminary warrant of arrest for the person whose surrender is sought, whereupon the judges and magistrates of the two Governments shall respectively have power and authority, upon complaint made under oath, to issue a warrant for the apprehension of the person charged, in order that he or she may be brought before such judge or magistrate, that the evidence of criminality may be heard and considered: and if, on such hearing, the evidence be deemed sufficient to sustain the charge, it shall be the duty of the examining judge or magistrate to certify the same to the proper executive authority, that a warrant may issue for the surrender of the fugitive.

If the fugitive criminal shall have been convicted of the crime for which his surrender is asked, a copy of the sentence of the court before which such conviction took place, duly authenticated, shall be produced. If, however, the fugitive is merely charged with crime, a duly authenticated copy of the warrant of arrest in the country where the crime was committed, and of the depositions upon which such warrant may have been issued, shall be produced, with such other evidence or proof as may be deemed competent in the case.

Article XII.

If when a person accused shall have been arrested in virtue of the mandate or preliminary warrant of arrest, issued by the competent authority as provided in Article XI hereof, and been brought before a judge or a magistrate to the end that the evidence of his or her guilt may be heard and examined as hereinbefore provided, it shall appear that the mandate or preliminary warrant of arrest has been issued in pursuance of a request or declaration received by telegraph from the Government asking for the extradition, it shall be competent for the judge or magistrate at his discretion to hold the accused for a period not exceeding two months, so that the demanding Government may have opportunity to lay before such judge or magistrate legal evidence of the guilt of the accused, and if at the expiration of said period of two months such legal evidence shall not have been produced before such judge or magistrate, the person arrested shall be released, provided that the examination of the charges preferred against such accused person shall not be actually going on.

Article XIII.

In every case of a request made by either of the two Contracting Parties for the arrest, detention, or extradition of fugitive criminals, the legal officers or fiscal ministry of the country where the proceedings of extradition are had, shall assist the officers of the Government demanding the extradition before the respective judges and magistrates, by every legal means within their or its power; and no claim whatever for compensation for any of the services so rendered shall be made against the Government demanding the extradition, provided, however, that any officer or officers of the surrendering Government so giving assistance who shall, in the usual course of their duty, receive no salary or compensation other than specific fees for services performed, shall be entitled to receive from the Government demanding the extradition the customary fees for the acts or services performed by them, in the same manner and to the same amount as though such acts or services had been performed in ordinary criminal proceedings under the laws of the country of which they are officers.

ARTICLE XIV.

This Convention shall take effect from the day of the exchange of the ratifications thereof; but either Contracting Party may at any time terminate the same on giving to the other six months' notice of its intention to do so.

The ratifications of the present Convention shall be exchanged at Washington as soon as possible.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the above articles, and have hereunto affixed their seals.

Done in duplicate, at the city of Washington, this 15th day of January, one thousand nine hundred and nine.

ELIHU ROOT [SEAL.]
LUIS LAZO A. [SEAL.]

And whereas the said Convention has been duly ratified on both parts, and the ratifications of the two governments were exchanged in the City of Washington, on the tenth day of July one thousand nine hundred and twelve;

Now, therefore, be it known that I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, have caused the said Convention to be made public, to the end that the same and every article and clause thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this tenth day of July in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve, and [SEAL.] of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

W. H. TAFT.

By the President:
P. C. KNOX,
Secretary of State

VISIT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO HONDURAS.

File No. 033.1100 K77/7.]

The Minister of Honduras to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF HONDURAS,
Washington, February 15, 1912.

MR. SECRETARY: I have had the honor to receive the obliging note dated the 13th instant[1] by which your excellency is pleased to inform me that the President, impressed with the importance of the relations between the United States and the Republics of Central America, happily so friendly and which will grow closer and more intimate with the approach of the opening of the Panama Canal from which are hoped so many mutual benefits to our countries, has directed the Secretary of State to visit the capitals of the Republics referred to, stopping also at the capitals of Venezuela and Panama, and probably visiting Mexico and Colombia.

---

[1] The identic letter printed under Panama: "Visit of the Secretary of State to the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea," p. 1240.

Your excellency is pleased to say that the final decision of the President was reached so shortly before the departure of Mr. Knox for Florida that it was not possible to give me previous private information thereof, and even now you must reserve for a later communication the pleasure of informing me of the precise date of the visit of the Secretary of State to Honduras.

Your excellency adds that before his departure Mr. Knox asked you to assure me of the great pleasure with which he looks forward to visiting my country and personally knowing the members of the Government and signalizing in that way the particular importance attached by the President to those relations of the most cordial amity which it is the aim of the United States to cultivate with Honduras.

In reply I am glad to express to your excellency the satisfaction with which I have received the announcement of the visit of his excellency the Secretary of State to Central America and the other countries named, and, more particularly, to Honduras; and I may assure your excellency that my Government and the people of Honduras will in grateful acknowledgment fittingly respond to this signal honor and evidence of friendship from the Government of the United States.

The personal acquaintance made by the Secretary of State with the Governments in the countries to be visited by him will undoubtedly strengthen the relations that are now happily existing and must grow closer and closer with the opening of the Panama Canal on account of the benefits from that great undertaking to which all America looks forward.

I beg your excellency to be so good as to convey my thanks to Mr. Knox for his courteous communication, to assure him in my behalf of the loyal response he will receive from my Government and to express to him my very sincere wishes for the best success of his visit.

With [etc.]

F. DÁVILA.

File No. 033.1100 K77/2a.]

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.
Washington, February 15, 1912.

How long will it probably require for the Secretary to make the trip from Amapala to Tegucigalpa and return?

WILSON.

File No. 033.1100 H77/12.]

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, February 16, 1912.

The round trip will require at least six days. The road is not passable for automobiles, of which indeed there are none here in proper condition; carriages are uncomfortable and in bad condition. Less time would be required by coming horseback, but this would be exhausting.

WHITE.

File No. 033.1100 K77/63.]

TEGUCIGALPA, February 27, 1912.

This Government needs to know at once whether the Secretary will come to Tegucigalpa or only to Amapala, in order to make the plans for his reception.

WHITE.

File No. 033.1100 K77/64.]

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 29, 1912.

The Secretary regrets to find that the limited time and his duty to return home by a fixed date unfortunately prevent his going to Tegucigalpa. He will arrive on the eighth and remain the ninth, and plans to invite Government officials and others to entertainment on board the Maryland.

WILSON.

Speech of Señor Don Mariano Vásquez, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Honduras, at a luncheon given to Mr. Knox at Amapala, March 8, 1912.

[Translation.]

MR. SECRETARY: The people of Honduras feel a very great satisfaction at your arrival in its national territory.

We, the members of the Government, delegates of the National Congress, and representatives of the judiciary, have come to offer you most cordial reception and to state to you that the visit that you are making to our country gives us pleasure.

We esteem it an honor to our small Republic to have here the illustrious Secretary of State of the great Republic of America.

The American Nation has always attracted the attention of the world by the tremendous progress it has made in advancing civilization. We have learned, from childhood up, to admire it; every triumph which it has won in its phenomenal march has a grateful echo in our little republics and makes us feel proud to be, like it, sons of the New World.

We have learned likewise to pronounce with veneration and affection the names that render illustrious the history of your nation, the model of republican virtues.

Washington, the glory of America, will always be recognized as one of the greatest leaders of the nations; his words are maxims of political morality. He who said "the best and only road that leads surely to honor, glory, and true dignity is justice" is, indubitably, not only the father of the American people but of all humanity. His wise counsel will continue to resound through future ages.

We honor Franklin, the genius that imprisoned the destructive lightning, the apostle who preached the gospel of peace to all nations; Lincoln, the liberator, and all the founders of America; and we admire, too, those who, continuing the great work, are likewise benefactors of humanity.

We honor Elihu Root, who, from the high tribune of Rio de Janeiro in the Third American Conference, declared, to the glory of the great Republic, the universal principle of the equality of the nations, when he said:

> We deem the independence and equal rights of the smallest and weakest member of the family of nations entitled to as much respect as those of the greatest empire.

We honor Roosevelt, President Taft, and his worthy Secretary of State, Mr. Knox, who, in the midst of their wise and fruitful labors in their own country, began yesterday and will to-morrow terminate so colossal an undertaking as the Panama Canal, which will fill the world with admiration and will open new and broader highways for the civilization and progress of the American Continent.

Accept, sir, from the Government of Honduras expressions of keenest appreciation of the cordiality shown by you in coming to our territory accompanied by your distinguished family and prominent persons of your country, and permit me, on this happy occasion, to extend in the name of the Government of Honduras most sincere wishes for the increasing prosperity of the great Republic and for the personal welfare of President Taft and his illustrious Secretary of State.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

Mr. Minister: In the name of my Government and my fellow citizens I thank you for your cordial hospitality and friendly reception.

It is with sincere regret, Mr. Minister, that I am forced, through circumstances over which neither of us has any control, to forego the pleasure of visiting the capital city of Honduras, which I had hoped to be able to accomplish but which I found to be impossible within the limited time at my disposal. Much as I should have enjoyed the beauties of the journey to the capital over the rugged face of nature, it is nevertheless a great pleasure to meet you here and have the advantage of your personal acquaintance.

The importance of the geographic position of Honduras, which borders on three of the other Republics of Central America, has long been recognized, and experience has shown that most of the unrest that has disturbed Central America, and particularly Honduras, has been due to the fact that Honduras lies conveniently in the track of any armies of other contending Central American states and it has been impossible for Honduras to resist their passage without itself becoming engaged in the quarrel on one side or the other. So much has the Republic of Honduras suffered in this regard and so often has the peace of Central America been easily disturbed, owing to the exposed position of this country, that when the Central American Peace Conference met in Washington in 1907, under the auspices of the United States and Mexico, an article was incorporated in one of the conventions there signed whereby all the other powers concerned pledged themselves to respect the neutrality of Honduras. The importance and wisdom of the provision has been fully demonstrated, and an eloquent testimonial as to its practical value is that since the adoption of these conventions, although other of its provisions may have been disregarded, there has been no international war in Central America.

Probably one of the most important matters to be considered by the Honduran Government is how to make this guaranty, which is all important to the peace of Central America, still more effective and permanent. It is manifest that it is only as strong as the stability of the country and the good will of its neighbors combined, and that the surest means of insuring its continued respect and resultant benefits is to assure the stability of the Government of Honduras itself and thereby to permit the development of its wonderful store of natural resources.

Possessed, as it is, of a fertile soil and healthful climate, as well as of probably the best natural harbor between San Diego, California, and Concepcion, Chile, the development of Honduras would seem to be a matter which it should require but a short time to accomplish. In Honduras, all the elements of great national prosperity are but awaiting development. The great needs of the country, so great in natural wealth, are facilities of transportation, which will at once stimulate foreign and domestic commerce, and an economic administration.

Central American tranquillity and security have from the first been matters of the deepest concern to the United States, and repose in Honduras, which will always be the key to Central American peace, has ever awakened the keenest interest among Americans. When the transcontinental railroad from the Atlantic to the Pacific was first undertaken the sovereignty of Honduras over the railroad was guaranteed by the United States, and my Government has always stood ready to assist in any proper manner the preservation of order and the promotion of peace in this country. The Marblehead treaty, the convocation of the Central American Peace Conference in Washington, and the part played by my Government in the Peace Conference at Puerto Cortes in February, 1912, are all eloquent testimonials of our good will toward Honduras.

It is the desire of my Government to perpetuate upon the foundations of closer friendship and acquaintance the good will we have received from the past, to promote our common interests by developing a better mutual understanding, and to frown down any and every attempt to disturb by calumny and baseless suspicion the peaceful and friendly relations between the United States and Honduras.

Speech of Mr. Knox at a luncheon given by him on board the "Maryland" at Amapala, Honduras, March 9, 1912.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I wish, on my own behalf and on behalf of my party, to express our appreciation of the friendliness and hospitality that we have received since we have been here, and this afternoon I want to especially acknowledge our appreciation of that test of good will which is evidenced by the long journey that those among you have made from the capital city to the coast under most trying circumstances. I do not know of a higher test of friendship than the one which you have thus given us. Our reception in Honduras has been especially pleasing. Indeed, I might almost say that nothing could excel the kindliness that has been shown to me and to my party since we reached Central America. There is one thing that I can imagine might excel it, and that is the malice and wickedness with which those who desire to prevent closer relations between the United States and Central America have, through false reports, endeavored to create the impression that the Central American people have not received this mission with kindliness and with sympathy. When I get back to my Government my report shall be that up to the time that we have left Amapala not a single incident has marred the pleasure of our visit, not a single thing in the way of bounteous and generous hospitality has been lacking, and that we shall all feel that this visit has been worth much to us and we hope it has been worth something to you. As I started out to say, I want this afternoon to express my special appreciation to those who have come from Tegucigalpa here to meet us, and I propose their health, their long life, their prosperity, and their happiness.

Reply of Mr. Vásquez, Minister for Foreign Affairs.

[Translation.]

MR. SECRETARY: With enthusiasm I have transmitted to the President of the Republic the expressions of cordiality addressed by you to him and to Honduras.

The entire country will receive with satisfaction your friendly words, which reveal the wise policy of the acts of the Government of the United States.

The convention written on board the Marblehead, which put an end to a conflict among the States of Central America; the treaty of Washington, which stipulated the neutrality of Honduras and removed the dangers of fresh international disturbances; and the Puerto Cortes conferences, which extinguished the civil war recently kindled in our country—all through the amicable mediation of your country—prove that you are interested in our welfare, which naturally must emanate from peace, and that on all occasions you have advised us well.

At the very moment that you hear the tumult of our fruitless strife we hear your voice urging us toward concord and peace.

With such antecedents it is impossible for Honduras to welcome any malevolent propaganda which might disturb the relations it cultivates with the United States or the gratitude it owes to your Government.

On the contrary, we are endeavoring to make those relations even more intimate and to attract a useful immigration, which, by establishing business interests, will strengthen them day by day.

Honduras, sir, desires peace, a stable and lasting peace, in order to develop by means of salutary work all the elements of life which it has in abundance. Consequently, in order to attain this desired end, it must not look to those countries for inspirations which, more or less, have always lived under the scourge of war, but it must take its example from your Republic, which is rich, powerful, and great, owing to the peace and order so wisely maintained since the first days of its independence.

I bear special instructions from the President of the Republic to express these sentiments of frank cordiality and of the mutual interest of our countries. And both he and each one of us are deeply sorry that you have been unable to observe our country at closer range. Our land is essentially mineralogical and is likewise capable of growing productive plants of every zone; therein are forests rich in precious woods, rivers flowing over sands of gold. With your sagacious eye you would have seen the land where a people now debilitated by misfortune will soon be transformed, through the efforts of its sons, into a rich and prosperous nation by the fruitful agency of toil, and then you would have been convinced of the sincerity of our desire of peace.

With unfeigned regret we learn the news of your proximate departure. So numerous have been the demonstrations of cordiality with which you have distinguished us, and such the affection you have awakened in each one of us, that in pressing your hand for the last time we shall truly regret the separation.

We wish you, your family, and party a happy voyage, and it is a pleasure for me to assure you that we shall ever remember the happy moments when we had the satisfaction of having on our shore the cultured and distinguished Mrs. Knox and the trained diplomat who guides the destinies of the great Republic.

File No. 033.1100 K77/212.]

The President of Honduras to the President.

Great and Good Friend: The Government of Honduras, gratified with the visit which his excellency the Secretary of State of the United States of America, Mr. Philander C. Knox, made to this Republic last March, which Honduras considers to evidence the perfect harmony and friendly relations existing between the two countries; and desiring to express to the Government of the United States the grateful appreciation by Honduras of that significant display of cordiality—I have accredited Doctor D. Alberto Membreño as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Honduras, on Special Mission to the Government over which Your Excellency presides.

The commendable qualities that distinguish Doctor Membreño, and his sympathies for that great Republic, cause me to hope that he will be cordially received by Your Excellency's Government.

With the heartiest wishes for the increasing prosperity of that Republic and for the personal welfare of Your Excellency, I am
Your Excellency's Loyal and good Friend,

MANUEL BONILLA.

NATIONAL PALACE,
Tegucigalpa, June 5, 1912.

File No. 033.1100 K77/212.]

The President to the President of Honduras.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 5, 1912.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: I have received from the hands of Señor Doctor Alberto Membreño Your Excellency's letter of the 5th of June last, in which you gave expression to the pleasure which the people of Honduras felt at the recent visit to your capital of Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State of the United States of America.

I cordially reciprocate the sentiments of friendship and good will which you in the name of the people of Honduras conveyed to me, and I assure you that the Government and people of the United States appreciate the friendly spirit shown towards the United States by the kindly and courteous manner in which Mr. Knox's visit was received.

WM. H. TAFT.

ITALY.

TERMINATION OF THE WAR BETWEEN ITALY AND TURKEY.[1] SOVEREIGNTY OF ITALY OVER LIBYA. EXTRATERRITORIAL RIGHTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

File No. 765.67/409.

The Italian Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

ITALIAN EMBASSY,
No. 1635.] Washington, October 18, 1912.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: By order of the King's Government I have the honor to announce to your excellency that the state of war between Italy and Turkey has terminated by the conclusion of a treaty of peace signed at Lausanne on October 18th instant between plenipotentiaries of the two nations.

The Turkish Government having pledged itself by this treaty to immediately withdraw its troops from Tripoli and Cyrenaica, which by the law of February 25, 1912, have been subjected to Italian sovereignty, I have the honor to ask your excellency on behalf of my Government to have the United States recognize the sovereignty of Italy over Tripoli and Cyrenaica.

Please accept [etc.]

G. CATALANI.

File No. 765.67/397.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Ambassador of Italy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 21, 1912.

SIR: I beg to acknowledge and to thank you for your note of October 16th,[2] informing the Department of the signing of preliminaries of peace between Italy and Turkey, and your note of October 18th, announcing, by order of the Italian Government, that the state of war has been terminated by the conclusion of a treaty of peace.

The Government of the United States is much gratified to learn that the difficulties heretofore existing between Italy and Turkey have been concluded by a treaty of peace signed at Lausanne on October 18th, between the plenipotentiaries of the two nations.

Accept [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

---

[1] See For. Rel. 1911, p. 308.

[2] Not printed.

File No. 765.67/410.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
No. 111.] Washington, December 5, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received the despatch (No. 247, of October 30th)[1] in which you report a conversation with the Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs on the subject of the recognition of Italian sovereignty over Libya.

There are enclosed herewith for your information in this connection copies of a note from the Italian Chargé d'Affaires under date of October 18th, requesting this Government to recognize the sovereignty of Italy over Tripoli and Cyrenaica; of the Department's acknowledgement of this note under date of October 21st; and of a memorandum[1] of a conversation on this subject between Mr. Adee and the Italian Chargé d'Affaires on October 19th.

The Department will in the near future instruct you further as to the attitude to be adopted on the question of the relinquishment of its extraterritorial rights in Tripoli and Cyrenaica in consequence of the extension of Italian sovereignty to those regions.

Copies of the present instruction and of its enclosures are being transmitted to the American Embassy at Constantinople and to the Consulate at Tripoli for their information.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

---

[1] Not printed.

JAPAN.

DEATH OF EMPEROR MUTSUHITO. ACCESSION TO THE THRONE OF EMPEROR YOSHIHITO.

File No. 894.001 M98/9.

The Ambassador of Japan to the Secretary of State.

Imperial Japanese Embassy,
Washington, July 29, 1912.

Sir: I am profoundly grieved to inform you that I have received a cable message from Viscount Uchida, His Majesty's Minister for Foreign Affairs, announcing the demise of His Majesty the Emperor at the Imperial Palace at Tokio at 12:43 Tuesday morning, July 30th.

It is my melancholy duty to request that you will bring this sad intelligence to the knowledge of the President and his Cabinet.

Accept [etc.]

J. Chinda.

File No. 894.001 M98/9.

The President to the Empress Dowager.

The White House,
Washington, July 29, 1912.

[Telegram.]

I beg Your Majesty to accept the condolences and sincerest sympathy of Mrs. Taft and myself in the great loss which you have sustained in the death of your illustrious husband for whom I entertained sentiments of the highest personal esteem and regard.

Wm. H. Taft.

File No. 894.001 M98/9.

The President to the Emperor.

The White House,
Washington, July 29, 1912.

[Telegram.]

On the sad occasion of the death of His Majesty the Emperor Mutsuhito, your illustrious father, I offer to Your Majesty my most profound sympathy and that of the Government and people of the United States.

Accept my good wishes for a long and prosperous reign and the continuance of the welfare of the Japanese Empire.

Wm. H. Taft.

File No. 894.001 M98/9.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, July 29, 1912.

You will make to the Government of Japan appropriate expressions of the sympathy of the President, the Government and the people of the United States in the loss by the Japanese Empire of a ruler whose reign has been so beneficent and distinguished. This will be in addition to the messages which the President has sent to the new Emperor and to the Empress Dowager, and my own cable to Viscount Uchida.

Knox.

File No. 894.001 M98/9.

The Secretary of State to the Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, July 29, 1912.

I offer to your excellency the expression of my personal sympathy and sorrow in the great loss which has been sustained by the Japanese nation in the death of His Majesty the Emperor Mutsuhito.

P. C. Knox.

File No. 894.001 M98/9.

The Secretary of State to the Ambassador of Japan.

Department of State,
Washington, July 30, 1912.

Excellency: I have had the honor to receive with great regret your note of the 30th instant by which you officially communicate to me the sad intelligence of the demise of His Majesty the late Emperor Mutsuhito at 12:45 o'clock in the morning of July 30 (Japanese time).

I did not fail to bring this melancholy news at once to the knowledge of the President who, greatly shocked by the death of this beneficient and distinguished ruler for whom he entertained the highest esteem and regard, has conveyed directly by telegraph to the new Emperor and the Empress Dowager his own sincere condolence and those of the Government and people of the United States under their present affliction.

I have in like manner offered to his excellency Viscount Uchida the expression of my personal sympathy and sorrow in the great loss which has been sustained by the Japanese nation.

Accept [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 894.001 M98/27A.

The President to the Emperor.

Great and Good Friend: Desiring not only to give evidence of the high personal esteem and regard which I entertained for His late Majesty the Emperor Mutsuhito, your dearly beloved father, but to show as well the friendship borne by the Government and the people of the United States for Your Majesty and the Japanese nation, I have made choice of the Honorable Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State of the United States of America, with the rank of Ambassador Extraordinary, for the special purpose of representing the President and people of the United States at the ceremonies incident upon the funeral of His late Majesty.

My knowledge of his high character and ability gives me entire confidence that he will perform this duty of respect in a manner entirely agreeable to Your Majesty.

I therefore request Your Majesty to receive him favorably and to give full credence to the expression of sympathy of the Government of the United States of America with that of Japan in the ceremonies, which I have charged him to convey to Your Majesty with the assurance of the best wishes of this Government for the welfare of Your Majesty and the prosperity of Japan.

Mr. Knox will be assisted by Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., and Rear Admiral Alfred Reynolds, U. S. N., representing the War and Navy Departments of the United States, respectively, and will be attended by Mr. Ransford S. Miller as his Secretary.

Written at Washington this thirteenth day of August, nineteen hundred and twelve.

Your Good Friend,

Wm. H. Taft.

File No. 894.001 M98/26.

The Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs to the Japanese Ambassador.

[Read and presented by the Ambassador, August 14.]

The appointment of Mr. Knox has been duly confirmed by the United States Ambassador. You are consequently requested to say to the President that I hastened to inform His Imperial Majesty of the President's appointment of Mr. Knox, Secretary of State, as his Special Ambassador to attend the funeral of His late Majesty. His Imperial Majesty was much gratified to learn of this very exceptional manifestation of high esteem and regard in which His late Majesty was held by the President, and His Imperial Majesty commands that you express to the President his cordial appreciation of this mark of respect and sympathy. You will also assure the President that the appointment of the Secretary of State to this special mission has greatly pleased the Government and people of Japan. You will also assure the Secretary of State that I am sincerely gratified to hear of the appointment.

Uchida.

August 12, 1912.

File No. 894.001 M98/37.

The Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

[Translation.]

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
No. 14.] Tokio, August 17, 1912.

MR. AMBASSADOR: In reference to the appointment of Mr. Knox, the United States Secretary of State, to be Special Ambassador to attend the funeral of His late Majesty, which your excellency was good enough to communicate to me when you called at this Department on the 12th instant, I have now the honor to inform your excellency that upon my reporting the matter at once to His Majesty my August Sovereign, His Majesty expressed high appreciation of this courtesy and charged me to convey His cordial thanks to your excellency's Government. The appointment of Mr. Knox has also given great pleasure to the Government and the people of Japan; and although the Japanese Ambassador at Washington has already been instructed by telegraph to convey to His Excellency the President of the United States the thanks of the Imperial Family and the Government and the people of Japan, I beg to request that your excellency will be good enough also to transmit a similar expression of thanks to His Excellency the President.

I avail [etc.]

VISCOUNT Y. UCHIDA.

File No. 894.001 Y8.

The Ambassador of Japan to the Acting Secretary of State.

IMPERIAL JAPANESE EMBASSY,
No. 44.] Washington, October 11, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acquaint you that I have received from my Government, for presentation to the President of the United States, an autograph letter of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan announcing the much lamented demise of His Majesty the late Emperor, and the consequent Accession of my present August Master to the Throne.

As the President is, I understand, actually out of town, I beg to forward to you, under separate sealed cover, the Imperial communication addressed to the President and to enclose herewith a copy of its English translation, in the hope that you may be so good as to cause the said letter to be submitted to its high destination.

Accept [etc.]

S. CHINDA.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Emperor to the President.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: It is with the most profound grief that I announce to You the demise of My Greatly Revered and Beloved Father, His Majesty Emperor Mutsuhito, which took place at the Palace in Tokio, on the thirtieth ultimo in the forty-fifth year of Meiji. I feel convinced that You will participate in the great sorrow which has befallen Me and the Imperial Family and the whole Nation.

In acquainting You, at the same time, with My accession to the Throne, I assure You that it will ever be My earnest desire to foster and to draw still closer the bonds of sincere friendship and good accord which so happily subsist between Our respective Countries.

I avail Myself of this occasion to tender to You, Mr. President, My cordial wishes for Your happiness, as well as the assurances of the profound esteem and invariable affection with which I am,

Your sincere Friend,

YOSHIHITO.

THE PALACE, TOKYO,
This thirtieth day of the eighth month of the first year of Taisho.

File No. 894.001 Y8.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Ambassador of Japan.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 16, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 11th instant, enclosing under separate sealed cover, for presentation to the President of the United States, an autograph letter addressed to him by His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, announcing the lamented demise of His Majesty the late Emperor, and the consequent accession to the Throne of His Majesty the present Emperor.

In reply I have the honor to inform you that the Imperial communication has been laid before the President, whose reply will be delivered through the American Ambassador at Tokyo.

Accept [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 894.001 M98/44A.

The Special Ambassador to the President.

[Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 15, 1912.

MR. PRESIDENT: I have the honor to submit to you herewith my report as Special Ambassador to represent the President and people of the United States at the funeral ceremony of His Majesty Mutsuhito, the late Emperor of Japan.

The Special Embassy consisting, in addition to myself, of Mr. Ransford S. Miller, Secretary, and Rear Admiral Alfred Reynolds, Naval Attaché, representing the United States Navy, sailed from Seattle August 22 on the cruiser Maryland, Captain John M. Ellicott in command. Brigadier General John J. Pershing, Military Attaché, representing the United States Army, joined the Embassy at Yokohama. In compliance with your request Mrs. Knox also accompanied me.

The Maryland stopped at Honolulu for coal August 29 and * * * left for Yokohama the following day. * * * We arrived off the coast of Japan on Monday morning, September 9, a day in advance of the scheduled time of our arrival. In compliance with the request of the Japanese officials we anchored in Yokohama harbor at three o'clock that same afternoon, being the first of the special foreign embassies to arrive.

We were met aboard the Maryland by the full staff of the American Embassy at Tokio and by the special Japanese reception committee headed by his excellency Viscount Kurino, once representative of the Imperial Japanese Government in Washington, and escorted with the usual marks of honor to the landing where we were welcomed by the local Japanese officials and a company of American residents of Yokohama. Proceeding to Tokio by special train, we were greeted by a large concourse of Japanese officials, business men and American citizens, headed by his excellency Viscount Uchida, Minister for Foreign Affairs and late Japanese Ambassador to the United States. From the station we were formally escorted to the residence which had been assigned to us, the official residence of the Minister of the Imperial Household, adjoining the premises of the American Embassy in Tokio.

In view of the baseless reports current in many quarters that the Special Embassy might have also some ulterior political mission, I took occasion immediately upon my arrival in Tokio to set these reports at rest by making a public statement of its true object, which was to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of the late Emperor and to express the interest of the American people in the progress of Japan under His Majesty's remarkable reign. A copy of this and of all other public or official statements made by me in connection with the Special Mission will be found annexed hereto. * * *

On Wednesday the 11th, accompanied by my staff and escorted by a guard of honor, I proceeded to the Palace to present my letter of credence to His Majesty the Emperor of Japan. In presenting my letter I took occasion to make a few remarks voicing the respect, sympathy and friendship of the American nation. The Embassy, accompanied by Mrs. Knox, was also received in audience by Her Majesty the Empress and later given an opportunity of paying its respects to the memory of the late Emperor, whose body was lying in state in the Throne Room of the Palace. The formalities ended with a breakfast given by the Court to the members of the special embassies and resident diplomatic representatives.

The funeral services of the late Emperor, who will be known in history as Meiji Tenno, were held on Friday evening, September 13, in the Aoyama district of Tokio, where the special embassies, foreign representatives and a large concourse of Japanese and foreign officials and residents convened to await the arrival of the Imperial cortège, which left the Palace at eight o'clock. The funeral services, conducted according to the Shinto ritual, were most impressive in their simplicity. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, after paying their last respects before the bier, the foreign representatives withdrew. * * *

The Special Embassy took its formal departure from Tokio on Saturday September 21, with the same marks of courteous attention that had characterized its arrival, and proceeded to Yokohama. That evening, at a quiet dinner given in our honor by the American Asiatic Association of Japan, I took occasion to make a few remarks to my fellow-countrymen, expressing my conception of the true relations that exist and should exist between Japan and the United States.

The Embassy sailed from Yokohama by the cruiser Maryland on Saturday, September 22.

In conclusion I wish to record my conviction, based upon my personal observations while in Japan as well as upon the unanimous expressions of the Jananese officials and press, that the sympathetic purpose of the Special Embassy was truly interpreted and deeply appreciated by the Japanese Court, Government and people alike and did much to emphasize and strengthen the ties of ancient friendship existing between the two nations.

Respectfully submitted.

P. C. Knox.

[Inclosure 1.]

Public announcement made by the Special Ambassador on arrival in Tokyo, September 9, 1912.

The President, as Chief Executive of the American Nation, has sent me as his special representative to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of your late Emperor; to manifest the appreciation of the American people of the wonderful achievements for Japan and humanity under His Majesty's benign reign; and to express the sympathetic, continuing and unabated American interest in united Japan and in the new life of equality of right and opportunity of her people for which his late Majesty's name will be forever revered. This is my mission and this my message to Japan, her Emperor, and her people. That I should have been selected as its bearer is an honor and privilege which I unfeignedly prize and appreciate.

[Inclosure 2.]

Remarks of the Special Ambassador on presenting Letter of Credence to His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, September 11, 1912.

Your Majesty: I very keenly appreciate the honorable privilege that has been vouchsafed to me by the President in accrediting me, by the letter I bear, as his personal representative and ambassador charged with the special mission of bringing to Your Majesty and the Imperial family, the Government and people of Japan the sympathetic message of the American Commonwealth on this sad occasion. Not the least of the ties of true friendship that join the nations of the earth in the higher brotherhood of affectionate esteem is the bond of common sorrow. The people of the United States share in the grief which the people of the great Empire of the Orient feel in presence of the bereavement that has befallen them in the death of their beloved Ruler; and the President, in obedience to the sentiment of his countrymen no less than in response to his own personal feeling, has charged me to voice the condolence of his countrymen, and in so doing to express to oYur Majesty his own sincere sympathy with you in the loss of your distinguished father.

It is right that I should accomplish this mission in a spirit befitting the intimacy that has so long existed between the Republic of the West and the Empire of the East. First among the nations to greet the entrance of your Island Commonwealth into the family of the modern nations, and constantly since that memorable epoch an interested and applauding spectator of the marvelous progress of your gifted people in every walk of material progress and national advancement, the United States owes it to itself as well as to Japan to demonstrate adequately on this mournful occasion the closeness of the association of the two Commonwealths by partaking of your sorrow as earnestly as we admire your prosperity, and by rendering heartfelt tribute, at the bier of your lamented Ruler, to the memory of one whose skill in statecraft and wisdom in governance were potent factors in setting Japan in the high place won by earnest effort and unwearying achievement.

[Inclosure 3.]

Remarks of the Special Ambassador made at a farewell dinner tendered by the American Asiatic Association, Yokohama, September 21, 1912.

In taking leave of this beautiful land and of you, my countrymen, who have shared with me the responsibility of making due expression of the sincere sympathy entertained by the American people in the great sorrow of Japan, my mind instinctively turns to some of the most conspicuous accomplishments for the general good of the reign that has just closed.

The present solemn grief of Japan, so sympathetically shared by the other civilized powers and which to many of you must in a sense seem personal, may surely be assuaged by the proud contemplation of the inestimable blessings of the Meiji era. Whether measured by the peculiar inherent difficulties overcome, the radical nature of reforms accomplished, or their effect upon the progress, happiness, and prestige of the people, it seems not too much to assert that the record of real accomplishment during the beneficent reign of the late Emperor is not excelled by any other chapter in human history.

The character and tastes of the Japanese people and the nature of their institutions have been largely molded and virilized by contact with the natural forces of their environment and softened by contemplation of the beauties of the land in which they were developed and matured.

Unaffected by external forces and influences for so many generations, Japanese institutions became deep rooted and seemed unchangeably fixed and the characteristics and temperament of the people apparently reflected a permanent result of their long isolation and a self-reliance well adapted to meet the conditions of the national life.

The relations of the United States and other western powers to the marvelous changes that have taken place in Japan during the past sixty years have been intimate and direct. If the Japanese horizon has been expanded it is largely because we have urged her to open the door for the ingress of our civilization and the egress of her own. If the dual system of government that for hundreds of years seemed to meet the demands of Japanese conditions has now been permanently abolished and the Empire unified and strengthened, through self-sacrificing patriotism that has no historic precedent, it is because such changes were necessary to enable Japan to meet the responsibilities and protect herself against the danger of the new relations to the world's progress to which the West invited her. We have applauded the zealous and intelligently directed efforts and the rapid success attained under the late Emperor in the adjustment of Japan to new responsibilities. When he insisted upon respect for and gave protection to productive labor, eliminated feudalism and its attendant special privileges, established and promulgated equal and humane laws for the government of his people, the West looked on with admiration and recognized a highly intelligent and assiduous preparation to faithfully perform an important part in the work of advancing a higher world civilization.

The renascence of Japan has occurred in the "Meiji Era" of international intercourse. There is to-day a decided impulse towards social coordination that must become a real cosmic force. Through the marvelous modern development in the means of communication each nation promptly feels the influence of the public opinion of all nations. As nations understand each other better and the world draws closer together in the recognition of a common humanity and conscience, of common needs and purposes, there is carried into the international field the insistent demand for greater unity in enforcing everywhere the principle of a high humanity and, by restraints mutually applied and observed, all the human ameliorations without which both national and international life would soon fall into anarchy and decadence.

At all times recalling with satisfaction the special and important part taken by America in urging Japan to take her proper place upon a broader stage of the world's activities, we, logically, are prepared to rejoice with her in her progress towards the attainment of her maximum development and usefulness to the civilization of the future.

[Inclosure 4.]

Statement to the Press on return of the Special Ambassador to the United States.

As publicly announced before I left Washington and repeated on my arrival in Japan, the purpose of my recent mission was, on behalf of the President and the people of the United States, to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of the late Emperor; to manifest the appreciation of the American people of the wonderful achievements under His Majesty's benign reign; and to express the sympathetic American interest in the new Japan.

In fulfilling that high mission I was received on all sides by the Court, the officials, and the people of Japan in the spirit in which I came. I have the pleasantest recollections of the kindly reception that was everywhere accorded me in Japan, both personally and as representative of the American people, at a time of profound national mourning.

LAND LAWS OF CHOSEN. VALIDITY OF CONSULAR REGISTRATION OF TITLE.

File No. 895.52/10.

The Vice Consul General at Seoul to the Secretary of State.

American Consulate General,
No. 334.] Seoul, April 22, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to enclose herewith translations,[1] made in this office, of ordinances of the Government General of Chosen, as follows:

Ordinance for Certification of Immovables in Chosen (effective April 1, 1912).
Ordinance for Registration of Immovables in Chosen. (Date of enforcement to be determined by the Governor General.)
Registration Tax Ordinance (effective April 1, 1912).

These ordinances in no wise affect the validity of titles which have already been certified. They merely provide for the maintenance by local officials of comprehensive land records, and all future transactions must be carried out in accordance with them.

Viewed broadly, these laws appear to be the latest move on the part of the Government General to complete the work which has occupied the attention of the Japanese authorities ever since their arrival in this country, i. e., to establish some authoritative record of land rights. The first land laws were promulgated by the then Korean Government on October 31, 1906, and supplemented by numerous other laws regarding the certification and registration of rights in land. Finally, on August 24, 1910, a law providing for a thorough investigation of the lands of the peninsula was enacted.[2] This investigation will, when finished, furnish a complete cadastre of Chosen. These new ordinances provide a means of keeping the cadastre up to date. They have, moreover, the advantage of compelling uniformity of land records throughout the country, a condition which has not obtained hitherto.

While these ordinances place considerable power in the hands of local officials, there is provision for appeal to the courts, and it is not anticipated that any injustice will result.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] For. Rel. 1911, p. 328.

I respectfully direct attention to the Registration Tax Ordinance, (Enclosure No. 3) which provides, upon certification of land rights, for the payment of fees ranging from one half of one per centum to two per centum of the value of the land or of the rights therein. This provision appears to mark the first attempt on the part of the Government to levy an equitable land tax. Provision is also made for the payment of fees by juridical persons. Article 7, paragraph 3, provides that upon certification of the sites of shrines and temples and tomb lands registration taxes shall not be paid. I have asked whether this category would include Christian churches, but have not, as yet, received a reply.

I have [etc.]

EDWIN L. NEVILLE.

File No. 895.52/11.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
No. 86.] Tokyo, June 14, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the Embassy's despatch No. 1295[1] of February 7, 1911, in regard to the rights of American citizens claiming title to land in Chosen (Korea), with which were enclosed notes exchanged with the Foreign Office on the subject, I have the honor to transmit, in duplicate, a copy of a despatch No. 3582E. of June 7, 1912, from the Consul-General at Seoul, enclosing a circular[2] issued on that day to foreign owners of land and their agents by the Land Investigation Committee of the Government-General at Seoul.

I would respectfully call the Department's attention to the provisions of the first paragraph of the circular, entitled "Matters to be paid attention to by Foreign Land-Owners," which is as follows:

> Land-owners shall present reports of their lands or copies of consular registrations of their lands directly to the Land Investigation Bureau or officials of the same office. It is better for them to send reports of their lands than to send copies of Consular registrations.

The investigation into land titles which is now being conducted by the office of the Government-General at Seoul is of great interest to American citizens resident in Korea, many of whom are land owners.

Inasmuch as the provisions of the first paragraph did not seem to be in accord with the assurance that Consular registrations would be considered as prima facie evidence of title, which was expressed in Count Komura's note of February 4, 1911, a copy of which was enclosed with the Embassy despatch of February 7, 1911, herein referred to, I today addressed a note to the Foreign Office referring to the circular and requesting that the probative value contemplated in Count Komura's note be accorded registrations of land from the archives of the American Consulate-General at Seoul. I beg to enclose a copy of this note.

I have [etc.]

CHARLES PAGE BRYAN.

---

[1] Should be 1297; see For. Rel. 1911, p. 333.

[2] Not printed.

[Inclosure 1.]

The Consul General at Seoul to the American Ambassador.

American Consulate General,
Seoul, June 7, 1912.

No. 3582 E.]

Sir: Referring to my letter of December 9, 1910, (No. 1754), addressed to Mr. Schuyler,[1] and to Mr. O'Brien's reply thereto, of February 7, 1911, (C. No. 1514),[2] relating to the investigation of lands by the Government of Chosen, I have the honor to enclose herewith circulars, which have been this day issued to foreign owners of land and their agents by the Land Investigation Committee at Seoul, containing instructions to aid in said investigation.

I have [etc.]

Geo. H. Scidmore.

[Inclosure 2.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

American Embassy,
Tokyo, June 14, 1912.

No. 54]

Excellency: Referring to this Embassy's note[3] of December 15, 1910, and to the reply of your excellency's predecessor, Count Komura, of February 4, 1911,[4] in regard to the investigation of land titles in Chosen, I have the honor to request your excellency's attention to the circular "Matters to be paid attention to by Foreign Land-owners" which was on June 7 issued to foreign owners of land and their agents by the Land Investigation Committee of the Government-General.

The provisions of the first paragraph of this circular require that land owners shall present to the proper officials "reports" of their lands or copies of Consular registrations of their holdings, and continues, "It is better for them to send reports of their lands than to send copies of Consular regulations."

In the note herein referred to, Count Komura assured the Embassy that the Consular registrations would, in the investigations undertaken by the Government-General, be taken as prima facie proof of the ownership of the land recorded.

I am confident that your excellency under these circumstances will take the necessary steps to the end that the records of registration from the archives of the American Consulate-General at Seoul shall be accorded the probative value contemplated in Count Komura's note.

I avail [etc.]

Charles Page Bryan.

File No. 895.52/12.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

American Embassy,
Tokyo, August 2, 1912.

Sir: Referring to my despatch No. 86 of June 14, 1912, in regard to the rights of American citizens claiming title to land in Chosen (Korea), I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy of a note (No. 1) received this day from the Japanese Foreign Office in reply to my note No. 54 of June 14.

I have [etc.]

Charles Page Bryan.

---

[1] For. Rel. 1911, p. 328.

[2] Not printed.

[3] For. Rel. 1911, p. 330.

[4] For. Rel. 1911, p. 333.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

Department of Foreign Affairs,
No. 1.] Tokyo, August 1st, 1912.

Mr. Ambassador: In acknowledging the receipt of Your Excellency's note No. 54 dated the 14th ult., in which you deem it necessary to call my attention to certain provisions of the circular "Matters to be paid attention to by foreign land-owners" which was issued by the Land Investigation Bureau of the Government-General of Chosen, I have the honor to state that having at once communicated the above to the Government-General, I am now in receipt of a reply therefrom to the following effect:

> With a view to make known the necessary formalities in connection with the land investigation in Seoul to all foreigners owning land there, the Temporary Land Investigation Bureau detailed in the beginning of June last some of its members to foreign Consulates in Seoul with the request that the two circulars "Matters to be paid attention to by foreign land-owners" hereto appended might be distributed to the land-owners interested; and the expression "It is better for them, etc." cited in Your Excellency's note under acknowledgment is merely an English rendering of the Japanese 「便利トス」. The purport of the circulars was to show that either formal reports relating to land tenure or copies of Consular registrations would be sufficient; but as blank forms hereto appended (marked C) for writing reports on had been prepared by the said Bureau, it would be more convenient both for presenters of reports and the authorities concerned to fill up the same according to Form B.; and the circulars were not intended to affect in any way the validity of Consular registrations.

In communicating the above to your excellency, I avail myself on this occasion to renew to you, Monsieur l'Ambassadeur, the assurances of my highest and most distinguished consideration.

Viscount Y. Uchida.

File No. 895.52/13.

The American Consul General at Seoul to the Secretary of State.

American Consulate General,
No. 367.] Seoul, August 23, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith a translation of an ordinance,[1] with subsidary regulations,[1] promulgated by the Government General of Chosen on August 13, 1912, relating to land surveys and titles.

These measures supplement and in a few particulars modify the law No. 7, promulgated August 24, 1910, a translation of which was forwarded by me to the Department through the Embassy at Tokyo in December, 1910.[2]

Article 2 of this ordinance provides for numbering and classifying holdings.

Article 3 gives as the unit for areas the "tsubo" or "bu", equivalent to nearly 36 square feet. There are about 1200 tsubos to an acre.

Articles 4 and 5 relate to information to be furnished to the Land Investigation Bureau by land owners or lessees.

Article 6 relates to appointment of representatives of owners to assist in investigation and survey.

Article 7 relates to attendance of parties, and witnesses and production of muniments of title.

Article 8 authorizes entry upon lands by officials, after notification, and for compensation for damage arising from such entry.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] See For. Rel. 1911, p. 328.

Under Articles 9, 10, and 11 the President of the Special Land Investigation Bureau shall decide as to ownership and boundaries of land, and publish the same during 30 days, after which, and within 60 days following, dissatisfied parties may appeal to the Higher Land Investigation Committee.

Articles 12, 13, 14, and 15 relate to procedure on appeal.

Under Article 16 a rehearing before the Higher Land Investigation Committee may be applied for within three years from the date of its decision in cases of misconduct of the parties or fraud.

Article 17 provides for land registers and maps.

Articles 18 and 19 prescribe penalties.

The appended regulations give further details as to the application of these articles.

I have [etc.]

GEO. H. SCIDMORE.

File No. 895.52/12.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 7, 1912.

No. 43]

SIR: The Department is in receipt of your despatch (unnumbered) of August 2, 1912, transmitting copy of a note from the Japanese Foreign Office relating to certain provisions of the circulars issued by the Japanese Government concerning the rights of American citizens claiming title to land in Chosen.

Your action in this matter has the approval of the Department, and it notes with satisfaction the statement in the communication from the Foreign Office, dated August 1, 1912, that the circulars were not intended to affect in any way the validity of consular registrations.

I am [etc.]

ADVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 895.52/14.

The American Consul General at Seoul to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN CONSULATE GENERAL,
Seoul, November 2, 1912.

No. 382.]

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith a clipping from this morning's edition of the semi-official "Seoul Press," entitled "Suspension of Issue of Land Title Deeds," in which it is stated that the issue of title deeds or land certificates will be unnecessary under present arrangements, "the ownership of land in Chosen being fully ensured by means of the registration by owners in the official land ledger," and that "copies of the land ledger will, on application, be given to land owners, after the investigation work has been concluded."

Article X of Korean Law No. 7, promulgated August 24, 1910, a translation of which was forwarded from this office through the American Embassy at Tokio under date of December 9, 1910,[1] provides:

"The Government shall provide registers of lands and maps, record affairs concerning lands, and issue title deeds for lands."

I have [etc.]

GEO. H. SCIDMORE.

[Inclosure.]

Suspension of Issue of Land Title Deeds.

It was originally planned to issue title deeds to ensure the possession of land to land owners in Chosen, on the conclusion of the investigation of land now being carried out by the Government-General. Subsequently, however, the Chosen Civil Law as well as the Law for Registration of Immovable Assets in Chosen was promulgated, and by virtue of these two laws the ownership of land in the peninsula has come to be fully ensured. In consequence it has now been considered that the issue of land certificates is unnecessary and the plan has been cancelled, the ownership of land in Chosen being fully ensured by means of the registration by owners in the official land ledger. Copies of the land ledger will on application be given to landowners, after the investigation work has been concluded.

ABANDONMENT OF THE PROPOSED INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION AT TOKYO.[2]

File No. 894.607A/231.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Tokyo, March 5, 1912.

No. 44.]

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 17, of January 8,[3] reporting that I had been informally advised by the Department of Agriculture and Commerce of the Japanese Government that the proposed holding by the Government of an International Exposition at Tokyo in 1917 had been abandoned, I have the honor to transmit herewith copy of a note, dated February 29, from the Foreign Office, stating officially that the Government have, to their deep regret, been compelled by unavoidable circumstances to abandon the project.

Some reference has been made in the local press to the possibility that those countries, including America and Mexico, which had arranged for participation in the exposition, might feel offense in the abandonment of the enterprise, but it should be viewed simply as an economy made necessary by the present Government's policy of retrenchment in national finance.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs, in my last interview with him, said the chief regret of himself and his colleagues at the abandonment of the exposition was on account of the generous appropriation made by our Government, granted as a bounteous evidence of friendliness and encouragement.

I have [etc.]

CHARLES PAGE BRYAN.

---

[1] For. Rel. 1911, p. 328.

[2] See For. Rel. 1908, p. 515.

[3] Not printed.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
No. 20.] Tokyo, February 29, 1912.

MR. AMBASSADOR: Referring to our former communication in regard to the Grand Exhibition of Japan which was to be held in Tokyo in 1917, I beg leave to inform you that the Imperial Government have to their deep regret been compelled by unavoidable circumstances to abandon that project.

I avail [etc.]

VISCOUNT Y. UCHIDA.

File No. 894.607 A/230.

The Japanese Department of Foreign Affairs to the Japanese Ambassador.

[Left by the Ambassador at the Department of State, March 6, 1912.]

IMPERIAL JAPANESE EMBASSY,
Washington. (Undated.)

On submitting the question of the proposed exhibition in 1917 to a new examination and considering all the surrounding circumstances and the advantages as well as disadvantages of holding such an exhibition in Japan at the time appointed, the Imperial Government have persuaded themselves of the inexpediency of carrying out the project. They have accordingly decided, with much reluctance and deep regret, to abandon the scheme. You are instructed to bring the decision to the attention of the United States Government and at the same time express to the Secretary of State the sense of high appreciation on the part of the Imperial Government of the very friendly encouragement and generous support which the Government of the United States had given to the undertaking.

LIBERIA.

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT TO THE LEGISLATURE.

File No. 882.032/4.

NOTE.—The message of President Daniel Edward Howard was communicated to the Liberian Legislature December 12, 1912, and was transmitted to the Secretary of State by the American Chargé d'Affaires, Mr. Ricard C. Bundy, December 19, 1912.

[Extracts.]

The first item I desire to call your attention to is the commission appointed by my predecessor to delimit the Anglo-Liberian boundary between Liberia and the Colony of Sierra Leone. Mr. J. E. Barnes, the then director of public works, was appointed as chief commissioner, with instructions to proceed to the field of operations of the commission and associate with himself Mr. J. W. Cooper, commissioner for the Tengea district, and the chief of said district. He was advanced £200 sterling for expenses and equipment, and instructed that he would be furnished with carriers and laborers by Commissioner Cooper, to whom orders to that effect had been sent. Mr. Barnes left for Sierra Leone in November, 1911.

On January 1 of the present year he wrote your Executive that the previously reported unrest of the natives on the boundary had apparently subsided and the Sierra Leone Government desired that the work of the commission begin at once. On the 4th of the same month the whole commission proceeded to their work, as from the reports of Commissioner Barnes, and continued up to about the middle of February.

About this time it was reported that some of the cairns erected by the commission had been destroyed by Liberian officials, which caused a cessation of the work and created a very serious and acute situation, the details of which need not here be gone into. I may mention, however, that, growing out of the demands made upon us at the time to have Messrs. Lomax and Cooper off the Anglo-Liberian boundary within a given time, as it was alleged that they were determined to prevent by force the prosecution of the work of delimitation, we despatched the Honorable Isaac Moort to the border for the purpose of hastening the return to Monrovia of Messrs. Lomax and Cooper, who had, previous to any complaint being filed by the British Government, been recalled on January 27. Upon the arrival on the border of Colonel Moort it was discovered that these men were at Vonjama, on the Franco-Liberian boundary, and had been away from the Anglo-Liberian boundary since February 27, shortly after the arrival of the Secretary of State, who had been sent to that section for the purpose of inquiring into the alleged killing of eight native chiefs by Lomax and Cooper.

It was alleged by the British Government, owing to misrepresentations of Commissioner Barnes, that the Liberian Secretary of State, then on the border, had countenanced the destruction of the cairns already mentioned. The truth of the matter, however, is that, three or four days after the arrival at Kolahun of the Secretary of State, while at dinner one evening with the officers, he was inquiring as to the progress the delimitation commission was making, and Lieutenant Morris mentioned about the destruction of the cairns. He said that one of the British commissioners alone erected a cairn within six feet of a town where he had an outpost and that he had ordered its removal, since the Liberian commissioner was not present to sanction its erection. When the Secretary of State heard this he censured Lieutenant Morris and ordered him to return and immediately replace the stones he had caused to be thrown down.

In keeping with your resolution approved January 27, 1912, I despatched the Honorable C. D. B. King up to the Anglo-Liberian boundary to investigate the alleged killing of eight chiefs, as well as to inquire into conditions generally, and sent letters by him to Messrs. W. D. Lomax and J. W. Cooper, recalling them from their respective missions.

On March 23 I was informed by the British Government that unless Colonel Lomax and Commissioner Cooper were removed from the Liberian-Sierra Leone boundary within ten days, the Governor of Sierra Leone would be instructed to occupy all the territory claimed by Great Britain on the frontier in question; if necessary, repel force with force and the Liberian Government would be held responsible for all consequences. This issue was lengthily discussed by the British representative here and myself. Two days afterward Colonel Isaac Moort was sent to hasten the return of the officials complained of and already recalled. This step, together with the very friendly representations made by the Acting Consul General of the energetic steps the Government was already making to adjust the disordered state of affairs on the border, did much to relieve the tension then existing and to maintain that friendly feeling which obtains up to the present.

Secretary King, who, as I have stated, was sent on the border and who was represented as countenancing the destruction of cairns, was also required to return to Monrovia to make explanations, for I felt quite certain that he was innocent of the charge. My letter found him at Vonjama, whither he had returned from Zinta, on the Franco-Liberian boundary, to meet an appointment with Captain Le Mesurier. He wrote that he and both Lomax and Cooper left for the Franco-Liberian boundary on February 27, and that the latter two had not been on the Anglo-Liberian boundary since that date.

February, March, April and May passed and yet Lomax and Cooper did not present themselves at Monrovia. Distressing representations concerning the actions of Lomax and Cooper on the boundary were then made by the British Government to the American Government, who realizing that this unrectified state of affairs would inevitably imperil the loan negotiations then pending, urged your Executive to fulfill the promise to the British Government and have Lomax and Cooper to immediately return to Monrovia. I again despatched for them on May 23, sending the Honorable J. L.

Morris who took with him Honorable J. J. Sharp and Captain A. A. Browne of the Frontier Force. By forced marches they reached Loma in the Belleh country, in fourteen days, where it was reported that Lomax and Cooper were, but on reaching there it was found out that Lomax was at Labalaba, a day's journey further up. Mr. Cooper was leisurely wending his way to Monrovia by another route, but was overtaken by Messrs. Morris and Browne, with Colonel Lomax. This special commission reached Monrovia with Messrs Lomax and Cooper on the 26th of June.

On the 1st day of August, in keeping with your resolution referred to, Lomax and Cooper were arrested, their cases examined, and they incarcerated to wait the September term of the circuit court. At the said term of court they were tried and acquitted by the jury of the charge of murder. The killing of the chiefs was proven and also admitted by the defendants, but a plea of justification in a military emergency was claimed.

The negotiations for the consummation of the loan agreement have been obstructed and delayed by many complex influences, which at times threatened to defeat the loan altogether. It has been no easy task on the part of those responsible for the launching of the loan to harmonize the various interests to whom the Government has been obligated. This task has been rendered the more delicate in view of the fact that these interests were more or less supported by their Governments.

The dilatory progress of the loan, with the consequent lateness of the organization of the receivership, is to be regretted by everyone. At times this suspense engendered discouragement in the minds of the people and has, moreover, mitigated [sic] against the inauguration of many of the plans of the Administration contingent upon the active institution of the receivership. It was fondly hoped that the loan negotiations would have been consummated on April 1 and the receivership in smooth working by the time your honorable body met. As it is, the actual completion of the negotiations is only a few weeks old and the receivership was only definitely organized on November 26.

Our internal affairs have played a part in arresting temporarily these developments, or at least threatening to do so. The disturbances on the Anglo-Liberian boundary in connection with the delimitation of that boundary, and the failure of Messrs. Lomax and Cooper to promptly return to Monrovia, already detailed, caused the bankers to doubt for a while the wisdom of proceeding further with the negotiations, believing, from reports given out, that investments here were insecure. Almost simultaneously with this alarm came a fresh rumble of fear from the bankers relative to what they considered an unreasonable increase in our floating debt, apparently accumulated since the report of the Internal Debt Commission. This debt, of something over one hundred thousand dollars, could in nowise be accurately determined, as it was not only made up of current accounts with the merchants, but of frontier force and miscellaneous claims unregistered by the Internal Debt Commission. We are glad to say, however, that explanations furnished the bankers were satisfactory.

In February your Executive sent out a circular letter, together with acceptance forms, to all citizens who held claims against the Government, apprising them of the terms of settlement which the bankers had agreed upon as the most equitable adjustment of these claims. We urged that these terms be accepted, and it is to be regretted that there was not a larger percentage of acceptances. It may be that many of our citizens were deterred in this instance by the thought that foreign creditors would be given more for their claims, but I can assure you now that the same classes of certificates held by foreigners and Liberians will be settled upon exactly the same terms; there is to be no differential treatment.

The loan of 1912 is now a fact, and without concerning ourselves with its history we can look forward hopefully for the accomplishment of those beneficial results contemplated at the time of seeking the loan. I feel certain that your honorable body will do all in your power to see that the Government faithfully comply with the obligations imposed upon it by this agreement.

The Secretary of War's report shows an enrollment of twenty commissioned officers, including the three American officers secured to organize an adequate Frontier Force and Patrol Guard, in conformity with the stipulations of the loan agreement, and 540 enlisted men, stationed on the frontiers and elsewhere.

I desire to draw your special attention to the scheme for the reorganization of the Frontier Force which has been drafted by the commanding officer of the Frontier Force, Major Ballard, and which will be presented to you by the Secretary of War. This plan will give us a Frontier Force according to our needs and one whose efficiency can not be doubted, and I trust it will have your instant approval.

DISTURBANCES ON THE ANGLO-LIBERIAN FRONTIER.

File No. 882.00/443.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.[1]

No. 25.] American Legation,
Monrovia, January 8, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to herewith transmit, for the information of the Department, copies of the correspondence bearing on an incident which took place on January 1, 1912, on the Sierra Leone-Liberian border, in which it is alleged that the Liberian Frontier Force was about to attack the town of Behlu in the neutral zone along the frontier and was repulsed by British troops; four Liberians being killed in the action.

Since the subject might become one of international importance, I have thought it fitting to furnish the Department with this information.

In this connection I have to add that a general state of unrest is acknowledged to exist along the Franco-Liberian border as well as the Sierra Leone-Liberian border, and it is very doubtful whether the

---

[1] For the Department's reply to this dispatch, dated February 13, 1912, see "Reorganization of the Liberian Frontier Force under American officers," p. 664.

Liberian Frontier Force, under the officers now having command, are able to effectively cope with the situation.

The Liberian-British Commission which was sent out some two months ago to actually delimitate the new Sierra Leone-Liberian frontier, incident to the exchange of the Kanré-Lahun district,[1] has been unable to leave Freetown, Sierra Leone, to engage in the work delegated to it on account of the unsettled condition of the frontier country.

The Liberian Government has intimated its readiness to request the designation of the ex-United States Army officers by the President of the United States, for the purpose of reorganizing the Liberian Frontier Force, if in the opinion of the Department the time has arrived when this can be appropriately done. Present conditions would seem to indicate that there is pressing need for the reorganization of the Liberian Frontier Force at as early a date as possible.

Any additional information which I may be able to obtain with reference to conditions on the frontier I will transmit immediately to the Department.

I am [etc.]

Wm. D. Crum.

[Inclosure.]

The Liberian Secretary of State to the American Minister.

Department of State,
Monrovia, January 5, 1912.

Dear Mr. Minister: By direction of His Excellency the President, I have the honor to inclose herewith, for the information of your Government at Washington, copies of the correspondence between the Acting British Consul-General and the Liberian Secretary of State touching certain recent incidents on the Anglo-Liberian frontier as reported by the Government of Sierra Leone.

The Liberian Government has not yet received a report from its agent on the spot, but hope to communicate the same to you when it is received.

I have [etc.]

C. D. B. King.

[Subinclosure 1.]

The Acting British Consul-General to the Liberian Secretary of State.

British Consulate General,
Monrovia, January 4, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inform your execellency that I am just in receipt of a telegram from his excellency the governor of Sierra Leone reporting that on the 1st instant the Liberian troops attacked the town of Behlu, which is in the neutral zone of the frontier. The attack was repulsed by British troops, four Liberians being killed in action, and I beg to state that I am urgently requested to approach you excellency's Government to take immediate steps to prevent further bloodshed and encroachment by the Liberian troops in the neutral zone pending the arrival of the boundary commissioners, who are expected to leave for the frontier to-day.

I beg to point out that if the instructions dispatched by the previous Liberian President, the Honorable Arthur Barclay, which he assured me had been sent, had been received and faithfully carried out by Colonel Lomax, in command of Liberian Frontier troops, and Mr. Cooper, the Liberian Frontier Commissioner, this unfortunate encounter would in my opinion never have taken place; and that after the serious troubles and misunderstandings so recently reported from the Liberian-Sierra Leone frontier wherein the names of Colonel Lomax and Mr. Cooper figured so prominently through their arbitrary actions in the neutral zone, these two Liberian officials plainly show to all concerned that they do not comprehend the great importance of keeping the peace during the operations of the boundary commission in the delimitation of the boundary.

---

[1] See For. Rel. 1911, pp. 398 et seq.

The seriousness of the boundary commission being again delayed in their work under the deplorable circumstances mentioned may cause a prolonged postponement of the delimitation of the Liberian-Sierra Leone border, and would therefore beg to earnestly request your excellency to urge the Liberian Government in their own interest to take all possible preventive means against this happening.

I beg that your excellency will be good enough to furnish me with an early reply to this communication so as to permit me to transmit the same by cable to His Britannic Majesty's Government of Sierra Leone.

I have [etc.]

M. Y. H. Parks.

[Subinclosure 2]

The Liberian Secretary of State to the Acting British Consul General.

Department of State,
Monrovia, January 5, 1912.

Sir: Your dispatch of yesterday, informing me that you were just in receipt of a telegram from the Government of Sierra Leone reporting that on the 1st instant the Liberian troops attacked the town of Behlu, and that the attack was repulsed by British troops, four Liberians being killed, has been laid by me before His Excellency the President, who now directs me to say that he exceedingly regrets the incident on the frontier between British and Liberian troops as alleged by His Britannic Majesty's Government of Sierra Leone, as well as the delay which must necessarily attend the work of the boundary commission in consequence thereof, and to assure you that instructions will be immediately sent to the Liberian officials on the frontier to observe most strictly the terms of the provisional agreement entered into between the Government of Sierra Leone and the Republic of Liberia in the month of May last year pending the boundary delimitations.

I am further directed by His Excellency the President to say, that he is most anxious to put forth every effort to facilitate the work of the boundary commission, yet he can not permit the incident of the killing of Liberian subjects by British troops within the neutral zone on the frontier to pass without recording the solemn protest of his Government against such actions on the part of the British troops.

The President, however, hopes that these occurrences on the Anglo-Liberian frontier will not in any way mar the most friendly relations which so happily exist between the Sierra Leone and Liberian Administrations at the present moment.

With assurances [etc.]

C. D. B. King.

File No. 741.8215/40.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 28, 1912.

The American Ambassador at London has received a note from the British Foreign Office stating that the officials of Liberia have refused to carry out the terms of the Anglo-Liberian Agreement negotiated last year with the assistance of the United States Minister at Monrovia, and that they have destroyed the boundary marks erected by the delimitation commissioners.

In a memorandum attached to the British note the following facts are recited: That in last November information was received from the Governor of Sierra Leone that in the neutral zone on the northeastern boundary of Liberia, in Districts Tungia and Tengea, which districts were among those, according to the provisional agreement of May 15, 1911, to be protected by both British and Liberian commissioners pending a meeting of the commission, Liberian troops had been destroying property. The Government of Great Britain has learned that Mr. Cooper, in charge of boundary commission, and Colonel Lomax, commanding Liberian troops on the frontier, have been acting in most extraordinary and arbitrary manner and were entirely responsible for these disturbances, Mr. Cooper having repudiated the provisional agreement. Upon representations thereupon made by the British Government Liberia promised on January 16 to recall both Cooper and Lomax and gave assurances that the provisional agreement should be strictly observed and the Liberian Secretary of State, Mr. King, was sent to Sierra Leone to investigate the disturbances.

Toward the end of February last the British Government was informed that Liberian troops at Foya had removed cairns which had been erected by British and Liberian commissioners jointly and that the commanding officer refused positively to recognize the boundary fixed by the commissioners. It appeared, moreover, that Mr. King had countenanced these acts.

Furthermore the British Government has received numerous reports from the frontier concerning the unsatisfactory behavior of both Cooper and Lomax. On the 14th of this month the situation on the frontier having grown worse, the British Government was compelled to inform the Government of Liberia that the British commissioners had been withdrawn and that colonial authorities would occupy and administer such territory on the frontier as they deemed proper and that the British Government would demand reparation for the insult offered them.

Subsequently a full report of the circumstances was received by the British Government showing that notwithstanding the Liberian Government's promise, neither Cooper nor Lomax had left the frontier and that the situation there had gone from bad to worse.

In view of these facts the British Government has decided to advise the Government of Liberia that unless Cooper and Lomax and also Morris, an officer commanding Liberian troops at Foya, are withdrawn within ten days, the Governor of Sierra Leone will be directed to occupy territory claimed by Government of Great Britain with a force adequate to deal with any aggression from Liberian side and in case such aggression takes place to follow the aggressors into Liberian territory as far as may be necessary to deprive them of the power of further aggression. (End of British note.)

You will bring this matter instantly to the attention both of the President and the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Liberia, urging that Cooper, Lomax, and Morris be withdrawn at once and the incident satisfactorily closed; otherwise both the bankers and this Government may well feel justified in dropping at once all further negotiations regarding loan. Cable as soon as possible results of your protests.

WILSON.

File No. 741.8215/40.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to Great Britain.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 28, 1912.

The substance of your telegram of the 27th instant[1] has been cabled to the American Minister at Monrovia and he has been instructed to urge upon the Government of Liberia the absolute necessity of an immediate compliance with the demands of the British Government. Advise the Foreign Office of the action of this Government, and, in view of the present status of the loan negotiations, intimate our hope that the British Government will feel inclined to the utmost patience to bring about a satisfactory solution of the difficulty.

WILSON.

File No. 741.8215/41.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, April 1, 1912.

Department's March 28. President Howard and Liberian Government repudiate unreservedly actions of Cooper, Lomax and Morris on Sierra Leone-Liberian boundary. Secretary King was sent to boundary January thirty-one with letters of recall for Lomax and Cooper, dated January twenty-seven. Recalls ignored by them. President Howard then sent cables on February twenty-three, March fifteen and March twenty-three repeating their immediate recall and on the latter date added recall of Secretary King and Morris. Failing to obtain removal of these officials from the boundary President Howard sent Colonel Moore[1] on March twenty-seven to boundary to bring insubordinate officials to Monrovia at once and secure immediate return of Secretary King. March twenty-nine Col. Moore[2] cabled President Howard that Secretary King in company with insubordinate officials had left Sierra Leone-Liberian boundary and gone to Zinta on Franco-Liberian boundary and could not be reached by April first. Liberian Government requests extension of ten day period set by British Government for Liberian officials to leave boundary and promises their removal in reasonable time. If, after Colonel Moore[1] has communicated with Cooper, Lomax and Morris, they persist in further disobedience President Howard proposes to declare them outlaws and treat them as such. President Howard is grievously disappointed at the failure of Secretary King to successfully handle the situation and is doing his utmost to bring the unhappy incident to a satisfactory conclusion.

CRUM.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] Moort.

File No. 741.8215/41.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to Great Britain.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 1, 1912.

Transmits substance of above telegram and instructs to inform the British Government thereof and to state that this Government hopes that, taking into consideration the efforts of the Liberian Government to correct the unfortunate state of affairs on the boundary and the state of the loan negotiations, the British Government will be patient and show leniency before taking any action adverse to Liberian interests.

WILSON.

File No. 741.8215/43.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to Great Britain.

No. 1687.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 11, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your dispatch No. 1952, of March 30, 1912,[1] in which you transmit copies of correspondence exchanged by your Embassy with the Foreign Office concerning the disturbances that have taken place during the last few months on the Anglo-Liberian frontier, and thanks you for the action taken by your Embassy in the matter.

It appears from Minister Crum's telegram, the substance of which was cabled to you on the first instant, that the Liberian Government has made earnest efforts to correct the unfortunate state of affairs existing on the Sierra Leone border. The American military attaché and the three American ex-Army officers are now on their way to Monrovia for the purpose of reorganizing the Liberian constabulary and the Department feels sure that when this is accomplished conditions on Liberia's frontiers will show a marked improvement.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 741.8215/44.

The American Ambassador to Great Britain to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
London, April 12, 1912.

Replying to my request for leniency in dealing with the Liberian boundary troubles, the Foreign Office has assured me that the British Government will exercise all possible forbearance. The Governor of Sierra Leone has been instructed to suspend action until he receives further instructions.

REID.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 741.8215/44.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to Great Britain.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington April 15, 1912.

Your April twelve. Express to Foreign Office high appreciation of this Government regarding forbearance British Government in Liberian boundary troubles.

Wilson.

File No. 741.8215/48.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

American Legation,
Monrovia, May 9, 1912.

British Government objects to G. Mason, alleging incompetency. [Appointment on the boundary commission.] Appointment another surveyor imperative. Boundary Commission ready to proceed. Expense delay chargeable to the Liberian Government. Liberian President requests me to ascertain whether Captain Young may serve as Liberian Commissioner. Believe British Government would appreciate such service.

Crum.

File No. 741.8215/48.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 14, 1912.

Your May 9. Impossible for Young, officer United States Army and Military Attaché, to accept position under Liberian Government. Would not Ballard, Browne, or Newton possess qualifications to perform duties?

Wilson.

File No. 741.8215/49.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

American Legation,
Monrovia May 16, 1912.

Department's May 14. Captain Young says Ballard capable of performing duties and recommends his appointment on boundary commission. Liberian Government accepts recommendation.

Crum.

File No. 751.8215/60.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

American Legation,
Monrovia, May 16, 1912.

British Consul complains of nonappearance of Cooper and Lomax at Monrovia. Whereabouts unknown but it is supposed near the coast. Not on Sierra Leone boundary since February. King and Morris here.

Crum.

File No. 741.8215/52.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 21, 1912.

Your May 16. Telegram received from Ambassador at London states Foreign Office informs him that in spite of promises given by Liberian Government that their officials on the Anglo-Liberian boundary would be recalled, on April 29 Lomax and Cooper were still in neighborhood of frontier and that Government of Sierra Leone has reported three cairns destroyed by soldiers of Liberia who are crossing boundary line and making use of road passing through British territory.

It is feared that this Government can no longer induce Great Britain to refrain from taking harsh measures against Liberia. Urge immediate action in restoring order. Cable what is being done.

Knox.

File No. 741.8215/52.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to Great Britain.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 21, 1912.

The American Minister at Monrovia reports that the whereabouts of Cooper and Lomax are unknown, that they have not been on the Sierra Leone boundary since February and that they are supposed to be near the coast. The American ex-Army officers engaged by the Liberian Government for the reorganization of the frontier force have arrived at Monrovia. The Liberian Government has appointed one of them on the Anglo-Liberian boundary commission. It is believed that conditions will soon improve. Request the British Government to refrain from taking harsh measures until results of the reorganization become evident.

Knox.

File No. 741.8215/55.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

American Legation,
Monrovia, May 23, 1912.

Referring to your May 21. Liberian Government doing its utmost to bring Lomax and Cooper to Monrovia. Conferred with President Howard yesterday, he realized gravity of the situation. Strenuous methods being used. Lomax and Cooper are reported to be within six days walk of Monrovia. Morris, Cabinet officer, and Captain Brown with instructed escort left to-day to bring them in. Messenger relay arranged. Will keep Department informed.

Stuart, Liberian Commissioner on Anglo-Liberian boundary, reports cairns were not destroyed by Liberian soldiers but washed out by freshets.

Liberia begs continued good offices of the Government of the United States and with forbearance of British Government I believe incident can be satisfactorily closed.

Crum.

Note.—The above telegram was communicated to the American Embassy to Great Britain May 25, 1912.

File No. 741.8215/58.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

American Legation,
Monrovia, June 26, 1912.

My May 23. Cooper and Lomax brought to Monrovia to-day.

Crum.

File No. 741.8215/59.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, June 29, 1912.

Telegram received from Ambassador at London reports that Foreign Office in note of twenty-sixth instant transmits statements of various witnesses received from Governor of Sierra Leone relative to execution of eight native chiefs by Liberian officials at Kolahun. Taking these statements as a whole Foreign Office is of opinion that cruel and cold blooded murder was committed and that Lomax and Cooper were present and connived. Witnesses swear that Lomax himself shot many persons. Ambassador also informed that documents have been forwarded to British Consul General Monrovia with instructions to communicate them to Liberian Government.

You will immediately bring this matter to attention of Liberian Government expressing confidence of this Government that these reports will receive a searching investigation and if found to be true to any degree that guilty parties will be dealt with according to law.

KNOX.

File No. 741.8215/61.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, September 22, 1912.

Lomax was only indicted for murder of two of the eight chiefs he is charged with killing. He was acquitted Friday after trial lasting just two days. Cooper was indicted for murder of one chief, tried separately, acquitted Saturday after trial lasting one day.

Government made very weak cases, important witnesses not summoned. It is alleged that material evidence was suppressed. Foreign representatives and local unbiased opinion regard trial as farcical.

President very feebly supported by several members of his Cabinet and influential Government officials. Public gratification over acquittals shows general unpopularity of all efforts of Administration to bring accused officials to justice.

BUNDY.

File No. 741.8215/63.

The American Chargé d'Affaires at London to the Secretary of State.

No. 2127.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
London, October 16, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the Liberian Minister called upon me this morning and left with me a memorandum in regard to the case of Messrs. Lomax and Cooper, who have recently been acquitted by the Court of Quarter Sessions and Common Pleas at Monrovia.

It appears that there was a widespread conspiracy instigated by the late chiefs to overthrow the power of the Liberian Government in the interior, and that but for their timely and drastic actions, there would have been a repetition of the Sierra Leone raid of 1898.

I beg to inclose a copy of the memorandum.

I have [etc.]

WILLIAM PHILLIPS.

[Inclosure—Memorandum.]

The Liberian Minister to the American Chargé d'Affaires at London.

The case of Lomax and Cooper came up for hearing at the last term of the Court of Quarter Sessions and Common Pleas.

After a trial of three days the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal in their behalf. Of course the Executive Government have done all that was in their power to do and placed before the courts all the evidence which they had.

The defense set up the plea of justification stating that there was a widespread conspiracy instigated by the late chiefs to overthrow the power of the Government in the interior, and that but for their timely and drastic actions, there would have been a repetition of the Sierra Leone Raid of 1898. Shortage of ammunitions, distance from Monrovia, lack of railway or other quick traveling facilities and the arrears of pay of most of the soldiers suggested to them the course of action which they pursued.

LIBERIAN LEGATION,
London, October 16, 1912.

NOTE.—For a statement of the President of Liberia on this subject see "Message of the President," ante, p. 649 et seq.

REORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERIAN FRONTIER FORCE UNDER AMERICAN OFFICERS.

File No. 882.20.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 10.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, April 17, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to herewith transmit a copy of a dispatch received from the Liberian Government, concerning the assistance which the President of the United States has intimated to the Liberian Government it was his intention to lend it,[1] in its military department.

I most respectfully request that this matter receive from the Department whatever action seems appropriate to it in the premises.

I am [etc.]

WM. D. CRUM.

[Inclosure.]

The Liberian Secretary of State to the American Minister.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Monrovia, April 17, 1911.

EXCELLENCY: The President of the United States having intimated to the Government of Liberia his intention to assist Liberia by appointing military officers for service in the Liberian Frontier Force, I have been directed by His Excellency President Barclay to request the Government of the United States to nominate officers for service in said force.

I am further directed to request that Lieutenant B. O. Davis, Military Attaché to the American Legation at Monrovia, be detailed for such service as senior officer, if not incompatible with the regulations of the United States Army.

I have the honor to request that your excellency will transmit these requests to the State Department at Washington at your earliest convenience.

I have [etc.]

F. E. R. JOHNSON.

---

[1] See the President's message, p. xxiii.

File No. 882.20.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 10.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 25, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 10 (Diplomatic) of the 17th ultimo, in which you transmit copy of a note received by you from the Liberian Secretary of State reminding this Government of its intention to appoint United States Army officers for service on the Liberian Frontier Force and requesting that Lieutenant B. O. Davis, Military Attaché to the American Legation at Monrovia, be detailed for such service as senior officer, if not incompatible with the regulations of the Army.

In reply you are informed that the matter will receive due consideration at the proper time.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 882.20/2.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, January 10, 1912.

The President of Liberia requests, if opportune, that United States Army officers be designated. Exigencies existing on English and French boundaries call for immediate action.

CRUM.

File No. 882.20/2.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 10, 1912.

War Department thinks, on account of climate, at least four officers necessary to rehabilitate border police. Has found four ex-noncommissioned officers who are ready to undertake the work, provided they receive from Liberian Government commissions as follows: One major, one captain, two lieutenants, with salaries respectively of $2,500, $2,000, and $1,600 with housing. This must be definitely settled before their departure. Cable decision Government.

KNOX.

File No. 882.20/3.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, January 13, 1912.

Department's January 10. Liberian President submitted Department's proposition to Legislature and obtained its approval as to number of ex-noncommissioned officers for border police and amount of their respective salaries with housing.

CRUM.

File No. 882.00/443.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 21.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 13, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your dispatch No. 25 (Diplomatic Series) of the 5th instant,[1] in which you transmit copies of correspondence concerning the recent disturbances on the Sierra Leone-Liberian border, and suggest the necessity for an early reorganization of the Liberian Frontier Force.

In reply you are informed that Captain Charles Young, Ninth Cavalry, United States Army, who has recently been designated as Military Attaché to your Legation, expects to leave for Monrovia as soon as the loan agreement is signed which, it is now anticipated, will be in the near future. The War Department has selected three ex-Army officers who also expect to leave shortly for Monrovia to take up their duties in connection with reorganizing the constabulary.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.20/5a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 7, 1912.

Ask that authority be cabled Consul General Lyon to sign, for Liberian Secretary of War, after consultation with this Department, temporary contracts for one year with former American Army officers, as follows: Major at two thousand dollars and two captains at sixteen hundred dollars each per annum. Salaries to commence when officers leave homes and to be paid by General Receiver. Actual traveling expenses and free quarters allowed.

WILSON.

File No. 882.20/6.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, March 12, 1912.

Department's March 7. Liberian Government requests Department to forward the following telegram to Consul General Lyon:

> You are hereby authorized to sign for Secretary of War temporary contracts for American Army officers. Consult State Department. Howard.

CRUM.

---

[1] See "Disturbances on the Sierra Leone-Liberia boundary," p. 652; the date above given is wrong; it should be January 8.

File No. 882.20/6.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Liberian Consul General at Baltimore, Md.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 12, 1912.

[Transmits above telegram.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 882.20/8.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

American Legation,
Monrovia, May 2, 1912.

Young and officers arrived yesterday.

Crum.

File No. 882.20/9.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 54.]

American Legation,
Monrovia, October 12, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the information of the Department copy of a report made by Major Charles Young, Military Attaché, on the present state of the Liberian Frontier Force.

It is my belief that conditions in Liberia are becoming constantly more involved, and feeling that the Department ought to have the fullest and best information on every important factor entering into the situation, I have requested Major Young to make a report on the present state of the Liberian Frontier Force.

His relation to the Frontier Force since coming to the country has given him ample opportunity to acquire full knowledge of its condition. His views, I thought, would be valuable to the Department. It was with this idea in mind that I asked for this report, a copy of which accompanies this dispatch.

I am [etc.]

Richard C. Bundy.

[Inclosure—Extract.]

The American Military Attaché to the American Minister.

American Legation,
Monrovia, October 9, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor, pursuant to your request, to make a report on the present state of the Liberian Frontier Force, the connection and doings of the American officers therewith, and their progress in its reorganization, as follows:

These officers, three in number, arrived here May 1, 1912, and were given sleeping rooms in a furnished house by the President, and have taken their meals at my mess.

The first week after their arrival they made an official call upon the President in company with the American Minister and myself. The next day a similar call was made upon the Secretary of War. To both the President and the Secretary of War these officers expressed their willingness to go immediately to work. But they were informed that their commissions would be first issued, and that they would thereafter be duly notified as to the pleasure of the Secretary of War in this regard. The Liberians, following the custom of all tropical peoples, are given to tedious delays. Accordingly the issue of the commissions to these officers was delayed until the end of the month, and thereafter nothing was given them to do until nearly two months later. Fortunately I had upon arrival laid out a course of study for them, which they took up and thus broke the tedium of waiting.

In the month of June, pursuant to the request of the President and the Secretary of War, I drew up a plan for the complete rehabilitation of the Frontier Force, which force, upon all sides, was confessedly demoralized and the soldiers of that part of it which were at the camp and about town, their officers having lost complete control of them, were on the verge of mutiny. I found that they were neither fed nor paid. This nonpayment dates, for some of them, three years back. The money for their pay had been "jobbed" by the Interior Commissioners and their officers. Both the President and the Secretary of War were unable to tell the number of men, officers, or guns, or even the whereabouts of the forces. The Secretary of War frankly avowed that he was a preacher and knew nothing of his duties as Secretary of War, and that the portfolio had been thrust upon him. It would be thought that he would have welcomed someone to get the affairs of his office going for him, as he had only two assistants, neither of whom knew his duties as such. I volunteered my services to him upon this confession of his lack of knowledge of how to fit up his office and get things moving right. He seemed extremely glad of such proffer of my services, but aside from my rehabilitation scheme and making some tracings of frontiers and a model pay roll for him, he has delayed this office matter until this date. Although under the new scheme the Government would be saved money both in rations and clothing, there seems to be pressure being brought to bear somewhere to delay things and make the same "jobs" as of old with the resident foreign merchants in this regard. The noneffectiveness of the American loan agreement, a dislike of Americans, and the leaning toward the English on the part of many influential Liberians, all have contributed to the delay of things necessary to put this force fully on its feet, as I desire to see it. The commission of Colonel Lomax, as such in the force, has never been revoked. * * *

Despite the instructions given by letter by the President to the Secretary of War to that effect, Major Ballard is only tacitly in command of the entire force, his instructions from the Secretary of War being that he was to assume charge of Camp Johnson and the troops there according to the scheme submitted. It should be here stated that the President of the Republic has shown every possible interest in the plan for rehabilitation of the force, and has lent all encouragement possible, so far as the exigencies of his position would permit. The failure of the American loan to go into effect has paralyzed his plans, and has had a depressing effect generally upon every project for the betterment of the country. Still they are waiting and hoping for the new receivership, and allowing the undertaking of everything not absolutely obligatory to delay from month to month.

The American officers have received, all told, since coming into the Liberian service last March, less than $200 American gold each; and it must be borne in mind that living expenses are perhaps greater here than anywhere else in the world. Everything in the way of staple foodstuffs must be imported into the country; bread, butter, meat, sugar, coffee, tea, milk, sometimes even cabbage and potatoes. Add to this the fact that these officers have families in the United States, it can be felt how very discouraging are the circumstances under which they have had to work. They were, by terms of their contract, to be paid by the General Receiver, and what they have received has been through his kindness in making overtures to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The trip of Captain Brown into the interior with Secretary Morris; the taking over, reenlistment and reorganization of the Frontier Force, and the training and bringing some order into it by Major Ballard, assisted by Captains Brown and Newton; the second trip of Captain Brown, in August, from Grand Bassa to the interior, under the most trying circumstances, and where he now is with 52 men; the replacing of the mutinous troops commanded by a worthless and disobedient officer at Cape Palmas by Captain Newton, with 100 men, in the month of September; the preparatory departure of Major Ballard for the different frontiers with 100 more, are some of the things accomplished by the American officers which mark the progress made in its reorganization. I submit that this is much, with soldiers that were not really such formerly, but, rather, a set of brigands under officers who were wholly without professional knowledge and who were alone bent on plundering the people.

The force at present consists effectively of a battalion having three American officers (one major commanding and two captains commanding the companies), four Liberian lieutenants (of doubtful efficiency), and a rank and file of 354 enlisted men. There are about 400 Mauser carbines and a very little ammunition in the hands of the force at present.

The force lacks much yet in the shape of getting it supplied from its regular staff departments conducted with system and according to business methods. It must have guns and ammunition, regular pay, food and clothing; it must have sufficient material for officers who have at least ability to read and write well, good bodies, good common sense, and good intentions. There is a dearth of men from whom to make such officers in the Republic. The old Liberian officers of the old force can not be trusted in it again for service, either on the frontiers or elsewhere. I believe the future officers must come from young men of perfect honesty and having the other qualities before mentioned. Again the separation of the military officers from the purely simple functions of commissioners is a thing that must be brought about right early. Such a dual position is altogether damaging to the Republic, in that it places too much authority in the hands of the same man and brings about the oppression of the tribesmen who are to-day the best asset to the Republic. These officer-commissioners have stolen from the natives their women and children, killed their men, purloined their food, ivory and other possessions; and have in general brought about all the dissensions and wars waged on the frontiers, together with the defection of the natives. The reforms needed in this regard will never and can never be brought about unless the United States undertakes it, and the loan agreement goes into effect.

Pursuant to the spirit of my orders, my connection with the force has been that of helper and adviser. I have done everything short of taking actual command of troops in aiding this reorganization. I can promise everything for it if the American loan agreement goes into operation. If the loan doesn't take place, I submit that but little can be hoped for either with respect to the force or anything else that looks to the betterment of things in the Republic. * * *

No man can lift himself by his own boot-straps, neither can a nation or people. Liberia must be essentially and materially aided, and that right early, or we shall all be made ashamed, while the English, French, and Germans rejoice at our weakness and discomfiture.

Roads must be built, the country explored and surveyed, and I can only see the United States charged with the direction of these things, if they are to be accomplished, for Liberia has not the means nor the men to do so.

I am [etc.]

Charles Young,
Major, 9th Cavalry.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.—CONCLUSION OF THE REFUNDING LOAN OF 1912, TO REFUND THE REGISTERED EXTERNAL AND INTERNAL DEBT OF LIBERIA AS OF DECEMBER 31, 1910.—CONSTITUTION OF THE CUSTOMS RECEIVERSHIP.[1]

File No. 882.51/286.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, January 11, 1912.

Disquieting rumors have reached New York bankers of continued deterioration of Liberian finances, concerning which a full and frank statement is necessary if the loan is not to be imperiled. Mail to Department as full a statement as possible of receipts and expenditures during last twelve months, especially as to what additions have been made to the floating debt of Liberia certified on December 31, 1911.

---

[1] Continued from For. Rel. 1911, pp. 342–347; see also the references in the "Message of the President," ante, page xxiii.

KNOX.

File No. 882.51/287.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, January 13, 1912.

Your telegram of 11th instant. Investigation shows an increase of duties collected and larger importations. Treasury report for fiscal year ending September 30, 1911, shows receipts from all sources $478,000; disbursements, $490,000. Floating debt since the finding of the Debt Commission, $201,000. These are the latest authentic figures available. The disquieting rumor was caused by those who would reap large profits from danger to or failure of the loan. The General Receiver's presence would stop further misrepresentation, and he is anxiously expected by the Government, which has absolute confidence in its ability to meet the requirements of the new loan.

CRUM.

File No. 882.51/287.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 17, 1912.

Your cable of January 13 makes no explanation of the enormous increase of $200,000 in the floating debt since January 1, 1911, which Department regards as conclusive evidence of extravagance and bad management. The Loan Act makes no provision for the payment of any new debt; the present one will result in serious embarrassment and may constrain the Government of the United States to withdraw its sanction of the loan agreement, especially if the debt is increased.

KNOX.

File No. 882.51/289.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, January 23, 1912.

Your telegram January 17. The increase of the floating debt is explained to me as follows by the Government: (1) The Debt Commission's findings did not include all claims against the Government to December 30, 1911, by $54,000 (estimated), withheld by merchants and others, and included in the floating debt. (2) Drafts amounting to $35,000, and returned as paid, were not received in time to be credited in the fiscal report. (3) Large expenditures were required to equip expeditions to quell boundary disorders. The real debt for the year was $111,000. The Legislature contemplates issuing certificates of indebtedness to liquidate floating debt, with the interest and redemption fund chargeable to internal revenue. Retrenchment and reform measures have been introduced.

CRUM.

File No. 882.51/290.

The Secretary of State to Dr. Roland P. Falkner, Financial Representative of the Republic of Liberia.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 26, 1912.

SIR: Referring to previous correspondence relative to the negotiations for the rehabilitation of the finances of Liberia, you are informed that a note has been received from the French Ambassador at this capital in which he advised the Department that his Government has appointed Mr. Frédéric Wolf, Deputy Colonial Administrator of the Second Class, as the French Receiver of Liberian Customs, in accordance with the provisions of the Liberian Loan Agreement.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 882.51/297.

The Acting Secretary of State to Dr. Falkner.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 23, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your letter[1] of the 15th instant in which you state that on January 11 last you addressed a letter[1] to the President of Liberia advising him that the terms of settlement proposed by the bankers who are to finance the Liberian Loan should be announced to the holders of the internal debt certificates, and that they should be given a period of two weeks within which to signify their acceptance of the terms proposed. You also state that you have received a cable from the President of Liberia notifying you that these terms of settlement have been accepted.

In reply you are informed that the Department on the 16th instant sent a cablegram to the American Minister at Monrovia which reads in substance as follows: President Howard's cable has been received by Dr. Falkner, and the Department is gratified to learn that the Government of Liberia accepts the terms of settlement proposed; but the acceptance of terms by individual creditors is also needed. The terms of settlement should be communicated to each holder of internal debt certificates in accordance with Dr. Falkner's letter dated January 11, 1912, with notice that terms should be accepted within period specified. A uniform form of acceptance should accompany each notice.

---

[1] Not printed.

The American Legation was also instructed to cable the Department what per cent of total registered amount of each class of debt is represented by creditors who accept terms.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.51/303B.

The Acting Secretary of State to Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 29, 1912.

GENTLEMEN: In confirmation of the Department's telegram to you of this date,[1] I will say that a letter[1] has been received from Dr. Roland P. Falkner, Financial Representative of Liberia, inclosing copies of the revises of the several Liberian loan agreements, dated February 23, 1912. Dr. Falkner also incloses copy of his letter to you[1] confirming the last amendments to the contracts.

The Department has examined the agreements as now amended in accordance with suggestions made by you and by Dr. Falkner. In their present form they appear to be satisfactory to the Department. We shall depend upon you to communicate them to the Governments concerned through the other bankers, and also to send us copies to give, as a matter of courtesy, to the French, German and British Embassies here.

It is hoped that it may be your pleasure to have Dr. Falkner come to New York City at an early date in order that the agreements may be signed.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.51/307A.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Special Representative of Dr. Falkner.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 7, 1912.

MR. ROBERT P. SKINNER,
American Consul General, Hamburg, Germany:

You are to be detailed for not exceeding two months as Special Representative of Dr. Roland P. Falkner, Financial Representative of Liberia. Cable whether you can meet Reed Paige Clark, General Receiver of Customs of Liberia, at Embassy in London on March 25, who will have full instructions.

WILSON.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 882.51/307B.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram—Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 12, 1912.

All loan agreements signed March 7. General Receiver Reed Paige Clark sails 14th for Europe and expects to reach Monrovia about May 1.

Negotiations with creditors in Europe will be undertaken by Mr. Robert P. Skinner, American Consul General, Hamburg, as Special Representative of Falkner, immediately upon Clark's arrival in London.

WILSON.

File No. 882.51/308C.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Ambassador of the French Republic.[1]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 13, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to enclose herewith for your information a copy of the loan agreement[2] between the Republic of Liberia and the bankers, for the refunding of the Republic's bonded debt, which was signed on the 7th instant. A duplicate original of this loan agreement will be transmitted to the French Government through the diplomatic representative of Liberia to the Republic of France.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.51/313B.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram—Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 27, 1912.

Falkner has received notice that the Liberian Government will probably default on interest of the 1871 loan unless he secures aid. He has been unable to do so. Bankers can not understand why, with the receipts as reported, the Government has not provided for this payment. They are skeptical as to whether correct reports of receipts have been made. They want statement of receipts in the last six months, and also want to know whether receipts reported for the last fiscal year were actual cash receipts. Immediate action necessary, as bankers have suspended further action pending such report. Impress upon the Government that this matter is urgent and vital to the continuation of the loan negotiations.

---

[1] Mutatis mutandis to the Ambassador of Great Britain and the German Ambassador.
[2] Not printed.

WILSON.

File No. 882.51/313C.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Special Representative of Dr. Falkner.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 27, 1912.

Referring to yesterday's cable,[1] Liberian Government is probably about to default on interest on 1871 loan due April 1. If this should occur it will change the situation as regards negotiations with bondholders. Have cabled Monrovia for explanation; until this is received you will await in London further instructions from Department. In Department's opinion this situation means merely slight delay and need not interfere with the plans of General Receiver Clark.

WILSON.

File No. 882.51/314.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, March 28, 1912.

Department's March 27. Liberian Government to-day cabled £1,700 to their Consul General at London in payment of interest on 1871 loan. Investigation desired by bankers is proceeding on lines indicated by the Department.

CRUM.

File No. 882.51/319.

The Ambassador of the French Republic to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

EMBASSY OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC,
Washington, March 30, 1912.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: The loan contract signed by the Republic of Liberia with a group of foreign bankers, of which your excellency was pleased to communicate a copy to me in your letter of the 13th instant, provides for the appointment of a general receiver of customs designated by the Government of the United States, and three receivers designated by the British, German, and French Governments.

---

[1] Not printed.

As the said contract does not specify the residence of the several receivers, but on the other hand stipulates that in cases of absence or disability of the general receiver, that officer will be replaced by the receiver residing at Monrovia or the place nearest the capital, my Government asks that the office of receiver of the port of Monrovia or, if there be no receiver at that port, the office, no matter where, whose incumbent will be called upon to act as general receiver in the absence of the last-named officer, be successively assigned to each one of the three receivers for a definite term.

Under the instructions I have received from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Republic, I have the honor to lay before your excellency this request of the French Government, which has, no doubt, in view of its object, which is to place all interested parties on a footing of perfect equality, of its gaining the approval and support of the Federal Government.

Accept [etc.]

JUSSERAND.

File No. 882.51/322.

The General Receiver to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

LONDON, April 5, 1912.

I understand from Falkner's memorandum[1] that German Receiver must be stationed permanently at or near Monrovia. Attitude here, as stated by Minister Cromelin, is that receivers should rotate, and that any other arrangement would be unfortunate. Am convinced that agreement affecting German Receiver would necessarily become public eventually, and that effect of such agreement would be to split receivership into two factions, thus making success difficult. Await instructions in the premises.

CLARK.

File No. 882.51/322.

The Acting Secretary of State to the General Receiver.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 8, 1912.

This Government stated to German Ambassador in July last that its intention was to cause the General Receiver to designate Monrovia as residence of German Receiver. Nothing was said as to duration of such designation. The French Government now asks that receivers be successively assigned for fixed periods to Monrovia, the receiver at which place is to assume the duties of General Receiver when the latter is absent. This seems equitable, and the subject of giving the German Receiver the first term at Monrovia can probably be worked out in due course through consultation of the four Governments with the Government of Liberia. This must be discreetly handled and should be arranged after you have been some time at Monrovia and the whole arrangement and the receivership has been installed.

---

[1] Not printed.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.51/323.

The Special Representative to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

LONDON, April 9, 1912.

Department's March 27. Creditors are pressing me for prompt settlement, as it is stated here that the interest has been paid.

SKINNER.

File No. 882.51/323.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Special Representative.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 9, 1912.

Your April 9. Department learns from the Minister at Monrovia that the Liberian Government cabled £1,750 to pay interest on 1871 loan, on March 28, to the Liberian Consul General at London. But the Department's instructions of March 27 are for the present not changed thereby.

WILSON.

File No. 882.51/361.

The German Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Memorandum.]

The French Government has, through its Embassy in Berlin, expressed to the Imperial Government the desire that the post of receiver at Monrovia, or, if there should be no receiver at this port, the post of the receiver who will be entitled to replace the General Receiver during temporary absence, should in turn be given to the receivers appointed by Germany, England, and France.

The Imperial Government intends answering the Embassy:

(1) that according to the loan agreement (article 4a, par. 3, phrase 1) the General Receiver, who is appointed by the President of the United States, is to direct the Receivers and therefore has the right to assign them to the different places;

(2) that the Government of the United States has, prior to the conclusion of the agreement, given the assurance that it would, owing to Germany's large share of trade in Liberia, cause the General Receiver to designate Monrovia as the residence of the German Receiver;

(3) that the claim of the German Receiver to residence in Monrovia and to the right of representing the General Receiver, which the agreement has combined with the residence in this port, was for the German bankers and merchants an essential condition for their taking part in the loan and can therefore now not be given up by the Imperial Government.

The Imperial Government would be very much obliged for an answer, whether the Government of the United States sees any objection to such a reply being given to the French Embassy in Berlin.

German Embassy,
Washington, April 22, 1912.

File No. 882.51/350.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Special Representative.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 6, 1912.

Department's March 27 and April 9. The bankers are satisfied with the report from Monrovia, and you may now proceed with negotiations with the bondholders.

Wilson.

File No. 882.51/319.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Ambassador of the French Republic.

No. 1014.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 15, 1912.

Excellency: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the note upon a point connected with the loan contract between the Republic of Liberia and a group of American bankers and British, French, and German bankers, which your excellency addressed to the Secretary of State March 30, and which has been receiving most careful consideration, as I had the honor to indicate to your excellency in conversation on the 9th instant, in connection with other considerations entering into this Liberian arrangement which the Government of the United States has so much at heart.

As your excellency points out, the contract provides for nomination of a General Receiver of Customs by the Government of the United States and of three Receivers of Customs, one each by the Governments of France, Germany, and Great Britain, and provides also that during the absence or inability to act of the General Receiver, or during a vacancy, the receiver located at or nearest Monrovia shall act as General Receiver. Your excellency then communicates the suggestion of the Government of France that this incidental duty be given in turn and for a fixed period to each of the three Receivers of Customs, at the same time expressing the view of your Government that such an understanding would contribute to a régime of complete equality amongst all the interests affected by the question thus raised.

As your excellency is well aware, the earnest aim of the Government of the United States has been the discharge of its historic obligations to the Republic of Liberia—a moral purpose to the accomplishment of which it has been willing to give perhaps disproportional efforts. It has been peculiarly gratifying to have in this work the cooperation of British and French bankers and of two Governments whose neighboring territorial interests have made their assistance so valuable. The cooperation of Germany, whose commercial interests undoubtedly predominate at the present time, was likewise welcome; and it is a cause of much satisfaction to the United States to contemplate the success of this whole plan as now so nearly achieved.

As your excellency is aware, the negotiations of the past two years have not been without difficulties. It has been the steadfast purpose of this Government to pursue perfect equality of consideration among the Governments and the Nationals whose cooperation we so highly value. To this end, for example, when the Government of France made the settlement of its boundary controversy with Liberia a condition precedent to its approval of the contract and imposed the additional condition that the French surgeon in the employ of Liberia should be retained, the Government of the United States, as is well known, used its good offices, both directly and indirectly, to cause Liberia to meet the demands of France. Similarly this Government brought Liberia to settle the northwest boundary dispute with Great Britain in accordance with the desires of that Government.

It will be recalled that when the Government of the United States initiated the steps which have led to the present arrangement, there was on foot and not without some prospect of consummation, a plan for the relief of Liberia through a financial reorganization under German auspices which would incidentally have given a particularly advantageous position to the German interests in that country. When the arrangement proposed by the United States was brought forward, this earlier plan was no longer pressed, but it was evidently felt that German interests, being purely commercial and largely centered at Monrovia, should in turn receive a certain measure of special consideration, the more so, no doubt, because the Imperial German Government, after timely acquiescence in the abandonment of the plans of the German bankers and in accepting in general terms the proposition of the United States had, after a full interchange of views, relinquished a number of points which it originally deemed of importance and yielded to the views of the United States on matters which the American Government deemed essential to the plans in which the Governments of France and Great Britain had already joined their efforts to our own.

The General Receiver of Customs, although of course an official of Liberia, is nominated by the Government of the United States and so is, without doubt, measurably under the influence of this Government. According to the loan contract the three Receivers are to act under the direction of the General Receiver. Doubtless having in mind these provisions, the Imperial German Government in July, 1911, in approving the draft loan agreement, expressed the expectation that, owing to Germany's large share of the trade of Liberia, the General Receiver would place the German Receiver at Monrovia.

Recognizing the relatively greater centering at Monrovia of the, at present, preponderant commercial interests of the German Empire in Liberia, and reflecting upon the whole course of these negotiations, your excellency can hardly be surprised that the Government of the United States was not unimpressed by the equity of this suggestion. Apart from the fact of substitution in the absence of the General Receiver, the post of Receiver at Monrovia might be regarded as less desirable in many respects than those at other ports. For example, that officer would have less scope for independent action, being more directly under the supervision of the General Receiver. The Government of the United States would always expect the General Receiver to be guided in the exercise of his authorities by all equitable considerations, but appreciating the fact that in the first instance the General Receiver would not be cognizant of all the circumstances, the Government of the United States did not hesitate to express the opinion that, under present conditions, it would be equitable and proper that the German Receiver should be designated for the post at Monrovia. I may add that the propriety of such a course seemed to be accentuated by the fact that in approving at this time this slight preference to the representative of the German Government, in so far as the action of the General Receiver is concerned, the Government of the United States was availing of the only opportunity which had occurred for any special consideration of Germany, whereas other occasions had been offered and availed of in which this Government was able to manifest its consideration in matters more intimately concerning the Governments of France and Great Britain.

I am very sensible of the fact that, looked at apart from the history of the negotiations, the proposal of your excellency's Government appears a peculiarly equitable one; and I think it quite possible that at some later date conditions may be so altered as to lead to another arrangement. Still, in the present circumstances, I must adhere to the view that it is not unfair that the German Receiver be assigned to the post at Monrovia.

As to another point which I had the honor to discuss with your excellency last Thursday, I take this opportunity to reiterate my concurrence in the view of your excellency's Government that in objecting to the German Consul as a Receiver the Liberian Government should have the support of the other Governments concerned, and I might add that instructions in this sense have been sent to the Legation at Monrovia.

Having thus elaborated and supplemented what I sought to explain to your excellency in the course of our conversation, I permit myself in conclusion to express the confident hope that the Government of the United States, which has so much at heart the success of the Liberian plan, may count upon the collaboration of the French Government in meeting these really not very important questions and in certainly preventing them from affecting the success of a project upon which we have so successfully cooperated.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.51/361.

The Acting Secretary of State to the German Ambassador.

No. 656.]
DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 15, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the confidential memorandum of the 22d ultimo in which your excellency was good enough to indicate the gist of a communication from the French Government and of the proposed reply and at the same time to express the desire of the Imperial German Government to consult the Government of the United States as to the latter.

Without venturing any comment upon the terms of paragraph 2 of the proposed reply of the Imperial German Government, which is designed to reflect the attitude of the Government of the United States, upon the subject of the location of receivers of customs in Liberia, and in order that your excellency's Government may be the more fully and frankly informed of the views of the American Government, I have the honor to enclose herewith for the confidential information of your excellency's Government copy of the reply of the Department to a representation on the part of the Government of France.[1] I may add that a copy of the same communication has been transmitted to the British Government, which has manifested an interest in the point under discussion, in order that the views of the United States may be equally known to the three Governments immediately concerned in the subject of your excellency's memorandum.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.51/361.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 27.]
DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 15, 1912.

SIR: Referring to Mr. Reed Paige Clark's cable from London of April 5 and the Department's telegraphic reply of April 8, 1912, upon the subject of the designation of the three Receivers to the different customs posts in Liberia, I transmit herewith for the confidential information of your Legation and Mr. Clark, duplicate copies of the correspondence on this subject recently exchanged by the Department with the German and French Ambassadors at this capital.[2]

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] The note of May 15, supra.

[2] All the inclosures with this instruction are printed, ante, in their chronological order; they are: The note from the French Ambassador, March 30; the memorandum from the German Ambassador, April 22; the Department's reply to the French Ambassador, May 15; the Department's reply to the German Ambassador, May 15.

File No. 882.51/377.

The Secretary of State to the Financial Representative of Liberia.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 18, 1912.

SIR: Referring to previous correspondence relative to the negotiations of Mr. Skinner with the European creditors of Liberia, you are advised that a telegram dated the 17th instant[1] has been received from Mr. Skinner asking that you be given the following information:

Agreement ninety-five, 1871 bonds, certificates, thirty-nine hundred and twelve pounds, ten shillings, cash or bonds, holders' option, council itself receiving one per cent additional to effect transaction and paying expenses thereof. Erlanger[2] requires application contract, three months' notice, this proviso stated on bonds. Will withdraw collector on deposit anticipated payment, recommending that bondholders accept new bonds if issued publicly.

A telegram dated to-day has been received from Mr. Skinner in which he states that a slight extension of 60 days will probably be necessary to conclude negotiations in England and Holland. The Department proposes to reply to Mr. Skinner's later telegram, unless you offer some reason to the contrary, by saying that while it expected that a slight extension will be necessary, the Department hopes that in view of the fact that Mr. Clark expects to take active charge of his office on July 1, Mr. Skinner may conclude his negotiations at as early a date as possible.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 882.51/398.

The Special Representative to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

HAMBURG, June 22, 1912.

Liberian loan negotiations have been concluded. German creditors will accept 90 for their scheduled debts, after payment of which the same terms for subsequently created debts. The bankers should provide for prompt disbursement if they are satisfied.

SKINNER.

File No. 882.51/399.

The Financial Representative of Liberia to the Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, June 22, 1912.

SIR: The Department has communicated to me unofficially the substance of a cablegram received from Mr. Skinner in regard to the debts of the German merchants. I note the fact that the German merchants request the same settlement for debts created since December 31, 1910, as for those in existence at that time as nominated in the schedule.

---

[1] File No. 882.51/376.

[2] In behalf of loan of 1906–7.

I am sure I do not know whether this can be done, but if the proceeds of the loan are adequate to meet this amount I should personally use every effort to wipe out these debts so as to have the receivership start with a clean slate. I would respectfully urge that Mr. Skinner be authorized to intimate that if it can be done under the contract, the Financial Representative would urge the Liberian Government to settle these later debts. A first step toward so doing would be the ascertainment of their amount.

I was informed yesterday by telephone by Mr. Warburg that there was a claim of the German Post Office against the Liberian Government in the amount of about $12,000. I concur in Mr. Warburg's view that if possible under the contract to settle this debt it would be wise to do so. I would therefore respectfully request that Mr. Skinner be authorized to inquire into the nature and amount of this claim.

I have [etc.] ROLAND P. FALKNER.

File No. 882.51/399.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Special Representative.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 25, 1912.

Your June 22. Falkner assumes that you have promised nothing concerning debts not scheduled, as he does not know whether they can be settled out of the proceeds of the loan, but if it is possible he will urge such settlement. You will so state to the German creditors and you will if possible ascertain the amount of such debts growing out of direct relations of the firms to the Government, but not including Government paper which they have discounted for individuals.

There is a claim by the German Post Office against the Liberian Government not included in schedule, the nature and amount of which you will ascertain; Falkner will try to have it settled from the loan proceeds if possible.

WILSON.

File No. 882.51/400.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, June 25, 1912.

Clark, General Receiver, awaits official notification that loan is effected by July 1 before taking steps to assume control of revenues.

CRUM.

File No. 882.51/400.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, June 29, 1912.

Your June 25. Receivership can not enter into full operation until terms of settlement are approved by bankers and the bonds definitely issued. It is recommended that the receivership be established in form on July 1. Receivership could be constituted and given all functions provided in the contract not inconsistent with the collection of revenue under the present Erlanger agreement, provided that on withdrawal of the collectors appointed under Erlanger agreement the customs receivership should enter into all of the functions provided by the contract.

Knox.

File No. 882.51/405.

The Secretary of State to Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Department of State,
Washington, July 10, 1912.

Gentlemen: In accordance with the request of Dr. Roland P. Falkner, Financial Adviser of the Republic of Liberia, the Department urged upon the Government of Liberia the formal establishment on July 1 of the Receivership provided by the loan for the rehabilitation of the finances of Liberia. It is learned from the reports received from Monrovia that this proposition was favorably considered by the Government of Liberia which was disposed to act in the manner suggested. It appears that a conference of the Liberian Cabinet with the Chief Inspector of Customs, Mr. R. Sharpe, and the future General Receiver at Monrovia, Mr. Reed Paige Clark, was held at once and reached the opinion that the functions of the new Receivership were inconsistent with the terms of the Erlanger agreement. It further appears that Mr. Sharpe, who has been designated as British Receiver, but who has not yet received his commission, is opposed to the assumption of duties as General Receiver by Mr. Clark before the loan is concluded and bonds issued and it is to be inferred that Mr. Sharpe holds to a literal interpretation of the Erlanger agreement that moneys received by him on account of the Liberian Government shall after satisfaction of the Erlanger loan series be paid directly to the Liberian Government and not to any other body.

While the Department has urged the establishment of the Receivership in form it has not felt very strongly that this was in any way an indispensable requisite to the continued execution of the loan contract and it is of the opinion that under existing circumstances the only establishment of the Receivership possible would have been a mere declaration that the Receivership existed, leaving to a future date the inauguration of operations. Such an action, however, would be obviously a formality that the Department can not believe it to be in any way vital.

The Department has expressed to Mr. Clark that there can be no real authority conferred upon the Receivership until the actual issue of the bonds provided in the contract.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 882.51/412A.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 11, 1912.

Inform Clark negotiations in Europe promise successful results and bankers expect to issue bonds as soon as formal authority for their execution is received from Monrovia. Papers to be signed were mailed here by Falkner June 15. Bankers have prepared form of provisional bonds and will execute them without delay when authorizations requested have been received.

KNOX.

File No. 882.51/411.

The Special Representative to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

HAMBURG, July 11, 1912.

Falkner should be informed that interest at five per cent is demanded by the creditors from July 1.

SKINNER.

File No. 882.51/413.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 12, 1912.

Grave embarrassment must ensue unless Liberia makes provision immediately for the retention of monthly sums due Fiscal Agent under loan agreement, which will go into effect as of July 1, 1912. If full receivership not established, have Clark enter into these functions of General Receiver. Insist that Government make the necessary reservations from current income and that these sums be turned over to Clark for eventual transmission to Fiscal Agent.

KNOX.

File No. 882.51/417.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION.
Monrovia, July 16, 1912.

Department's July 12. Liberian Government will place monthly sums to Clark's credit provided assurance is given that no interest on outstanding loans will be required after June 30.

CRUM.

File No. 882.51/417.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 19, 1912.

Your July 16. Inform Clark that interest on old loans will continue to run until date of eventual adjustment, but that bankers are obligated to pay at time of purchase of new bonds accrued interest thereon from July 1, 1912. If Liberian Government places sums due by new loan agreement to Clark's credit, no other payment of interest will be necessary. Reservations under Erlanger agreement can not be discontinued until that agreement is cancelled. When this is done by conversion or payment of Erlanger bonds, the sums reserved will not be paid as interest, but will revert to Liberian Government.

ADEE.

File No. 882.51/418.

The Chargé d'Affaires of the French Republic to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

EMBASSY OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC,
Washington, July 19, 1912.

Mr. SECRETARY OF STATE: Mr. Jusserand did not fail to forward to the Government of the Republic your excellency's letter of May 15 last relative to the assignment of the post of Monrovia to the German Receiver of Liberian Customs who would, as a result, act for the American General Receiver in the latter's absence.

The President of the Council, Minister for Foreign Affairs, informs me that after acquainting itself with that communication, the French Government readily concurs in the view of the Federal Government and, that, in compliance with the wish expressed by your excellency, it will do nothing to check the reforms to be carried out in the Republic of Liberia as mapped out by the United States.

Mr. Poincaré, however, can not refrain from noting that this assignment of the Monrovia post to the German Receiver does away with the equality the Federal Government was intent on maintaining in its entirety between France, Great Britain and Germany as far at least as their representation in the supervision of Liberian customs is concerned. The result is that the conditions under which the Govment of the Republic joined in the aforesaid scheme of reforms have been materially modified.

In consideration of the detriment suffered from this disturbance of the equipoise, in which it acquiesces, my Government hopes that the Federal Government will kindly admit the propriety of granting to France, when the time comes, by way of compensation for the advantage conceded to Germany, such facilities as may be required for a rectification favorable to us of the boundary line laid down by the Franco-Liberian agreement of 1911.[1] Pourparlers have already been opened on the subject at the request of and on the bases indicated by the representative of Liberia at Paris.

The Government of the Republic further hopes that the Government of the United States will be in favor of having the post nearest to the Franco-Liberian boundary assigned to the French Receiver of Customs.

I should be thankful to your excellency if you would kindly enable me to transmit to Mr. Poincaré the assurance that, on these points, the Government of the United States will act as desired by us.

E. DE PERETTI DE LA ROCCA.

File No. 882.51/421.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, July 29, 1912.

Written statement has been made by Lange that he will not resign until after receivership has been actually established, and he has held post of Receiver and Vice Consul together for some time. This caused Liberian Government to instruct Dinklage, Liberian Chargé d'Affaires at Berlin, by mail July 17, to urge again German Foreign Office to withdraw Lange's appointment as Vice Consul. Should this fail he is to intimate to German Foreign Office that Liberian Government will be compelled to revoke Lange's exequatur whenever receivership becomes actually operative.

CRUM.

File No. 882.51/422.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, July 31, 1912.

Department's July 19. Under bank agreement, Erlanger's interest for current quarter will be advanced to Sharp August 15 for immediate transmission. Clark urges that bankers arrange with Erlanger to hold advance here, or, failing this, he be permitted to offset payment against interest on new loan. Receivership crippled if Liberian Government forced to pay double interest. Ready money imperatively needed.

---

[1] See For. Rel. 1911, page 342.

CRUM.

File No. 882.51/422.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 14, 1912.

Letters of authorization having been received, the loan issue should now proceed rapidly. Meanwhile it is impossible to prevent, provisionally, double payment of interest. Until the Erlanger loan is finally terminated, remittance must be made as usual. This advance will ultimately be returned to Liberia. Double payment is provisional only.

KNOX.

File No. 882.51/434.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, August 19, 1912.

Department's August 14. Clark requests me to say have $7,000 gold July account, balance payable on receipt of further July returns from out ports. Erlangers paid 15th. Interest 1871 loan due September. Liberian Government states compelled to offset all payments account outstanding loans against further payments to fiscal agents. Liberian Government can not understand, if assurance that payments outstanding loans will be returned is expected to be satisfactory to it, why bankers will not accept an assurance that these moneys will be paid them when returned.

Monrovia revenues pledged for bank advance. Only revenues out ports available and inadequate supervision prevents collection of full amounts in gold though marked improvement shown. Revenues of all ports decrease in rainy season.

Liberia can easily meet all charges contemplated in refunding loan agreement but under present conditions probable that gold revenues collected will be insufficient to pay double interest and urgent current expenses. Double interest demand works hardship upon Liberia and is unjust to foreign officials who can not exist indefinitely without pay.

CRUM.

File No. 882.51/439.

The German Chargé d'Affaires to the Acting Secretary of State.

GERMAN EMBASSY,
Newport, R. I., August 23, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. WILSON: Permit me to call your attention to the following information which I have just received from Berlin:

Mr. Lange, the German Consul at Monrovia, Liberia, has spontaneously declared his intention to retire from the German consular service as soon as he should enter upon his duties as customs receiver at Monrovia. My Government, favoring his decision, advised the Liberian Government accordingly. The Liberian Chargé d'Affaires at Berlin, however, has now addressed the formal demand to my Government that Mr. Lange retire from the German consular service before he takes up his duties as receiver, adding that otherwise Mr. Lange would be denied the exequatur as consul to the Liberian Government, because the English and French receivers would also claim consular authority, which double functions might cause conflicts.

It would certainly be harmful to the status of all great powers in Liberia if my Government should yield to such demands. Besides, Mr. Lange will only temporarily hold both offices, viz, until a suitable successor can be found and appointed German consul at Monrovia.

My Government would not object to other receivers holding consular positions. There is also no fear that this might lead to conflicts, since other international arrangements have successfully been made in which consuls hold similar positions, e. g., the International Financial Commission at Athens, the European Danube Commission, the Whangpoo Regulation at Shanghai, etc.

The German Government trusts that the Government of the United States shares this opinion and consequently will take the necessary steps to prevent the Liberian Government from adopting undue measures, as the denial of the exequatur to the German consul at Monrovia would be.

Thanking you [etc.]

HANIEL.

File No. 882.51/439.

The Acting Secretary of State to the German Chargé d'Affaires.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 11, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. HANIEL: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your note of August 23, stating that your Government has advised the Liberian Government of Mr. Lange's spontaneous declaration of intention to retire from the German Consular Service as soon as he should enter upon his duties as Customs Receiver at Monrovia. I note with pleasure this expressed intention of Mr. Lange to retire from the Imperial German Consular Service because it has from the first been the view of the Government of the United States, as already expressed to all the other Governments concerned, that the Receiver General and the Receivers of Customs, being alike officers of the Republic of Liberia, the preference of Liberia to refuse to recognize in that capacity persons who would hold the dual positions of customs officials and consular officers would be so reasonable as to enlist the moral support of the Government of the United States.

In your letter under acknowledgment you are good enough to inform me that the Imperial German Government, favoring the decision of Mr. Lange, has so advised the Liberian Government; that the Government of Liberia has asked, rather, that Mr. Lange's retirement from the Consular Service should precede his assumption of his duties as Receiver of Customs, making it a point that there should be no interim during which he would be recognized in both capacities. It is evident, then, that the question is merely one of whether Mr. Lange shall retire from his consular functions before or after entering upon his duties as Receiver of Customs.

I must say frankly that the Government of the United States is not inclined to share the view that it would be unobjectionable to establish a precedent for having consular officers also occupy posts as Receiver General or Receiver of Customs in Liberia and that this Government would find it difficult in these circumstances to view as unreasonable the substance of the position taken by the Liberian Government or to ask that Government to depart from the principle for which it is contending.

Since the Imperial German Government has declared its approval of Mr. Lange's intention to divest himself of his consular capacity upon his assumption of the receivership, I can only assume that what concerns your Government is merely the question of having a successor to Mr. Lange reach Monrovia to assume his consular functions before Mr. Lange is obliged to undertake his duties as Receiver of Customs. I therefore venture to suggest that if the Imperial German Government should find it convenient either temporarily to appoint some resident of Monrovia or promptly to send a new consular representative to Liberia, there could easily be avoided any considerable interregnum during which Germany need be unrepresented either in the receivership or in the Consular Corps at Monrovia.

In view of the extreme deference which, as you will readily recall, has been shown the Imperial German Government by the Government of the United States throughout the preliminary arrangements of this Liberian matter, I can not but feel confident that you will be good enough to bespeak your Government's cooperation in order that the receivership may now begin to function without any delay and that your Government in lending such cooperation will be glad to acquiesce in a purpose which the Government of the United States is so well known to have so much at heart.

I am [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 882.51/418.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Chargé d'Affaires of the French Republic.

No. 1059.] Department of State,
Washington, September 11, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 19th of July, wherein the Department is informed that the Government of France readily concurs in the views of the Government of the United States in regard to acquiescence in the assignment at the present time of the German Receiver of Customs to duty at Monrovia.

I find it difficult, however, to share the present impression which the French Ministry for Foreign Affairs appears to have formed that either in spirit or in substance this present disposition is susceptible of interpretation as any departure from that substantial basis of equal cooperation upon which the Governments of the French Republic, of Germany and of Great Britain have joined their invaluable support to that of the United States in its effort to respond to its traditional relation to the Republic of Liberia.

I may be permitted to advert to the previous effective efforts of the United States to influence Liberia toward removing all causes of frontier inconvenience to France and to invite your attention to the resultant careful frontier delimitation so recently made by your own and the Liberian Governments, and understood to be satisfactory to all concerned.[1]

As to pourparlers, which you are good enough to inform me had been initiated at Paris upon bases indicated by the representative of Liberia, the Government of the United States trusts that with the recent appointment by Liberia of three former Army officers of the United States for the reorganization of the frontier police, and with funds from the new loan so near at hand for the carrying on of this work, disturbances along the boundary and the consequent inconvenience will disappear.

The Department would, moreover, be surprised to find the view seriously entertained that territorial compensation would be a proportionate counterpoise to a matter of no graver import than the present location of the respective Receivers. Furthermore, owing to the extreme importance of the prompt and speedy operation of the receivership, this Government would greatly deprecate the raising of any further questions of frontier rectification at this time. I need, in conclusion, hardly assure you that this Government, at some later date and with the opportunity for full knowledge of all the facts and circumstances, would be not averse to a discussion of the question whether any further rectification of the Franco-Liberian boundary would be equitable and reasonable and consequently fair to Liberia, in case the situation in that territory should reveal any conditions substantially detrimental.

As to the preference of your Government to having the French Receiver of Customs stationed at the post nearest the Franco-Liberian boundary, I can assure you that if such plan should meet with the acquiescence of the other Governments concerned and should give rise to no valid objection now unforeseen either on the part of the Liberian Government or on the part of those responsible for the efficiency of the receivership, the Government of the United States would be most happy to find in this further matter another opportunity to give its support to something regarded as desirable by the Government of the French Republic.

Counting upon you to assure the Government of France of the great importance attached by the Government of the United States to the prompt operation of the receivership, I avail [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] For. Rel., 1911, p. 345.

File No. 882.51/439.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to France.

No. 54.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 11, 1912.

SIR: With reference to previous correspondence relative to the negotiations entered into by the Governments of France, Germany. Great Britain and the United States for the rehabilitation of the finances of Liberia, I transmit herewith for the information of your Embassy copy of a note[1] which has been received from the Chargé d'Affaires of the French Republic at Washington, asking in the way of compensation for his Government's assent to the appointment of a German receiver of customs of the Republic of Liberia at Monrovia, that the Government of the United States grant to the French Republic such facilities for a rectification of the Franco-Liberian boundary as may be deemed requisite by the Government of France. The Department's attitude on this proposition is made known to you through the enclosed copy of the Department's reply to Mr. de Peretti's note.[2]

A note has also been received from the German Chargé d'Affaires in Washington asking that this Government exert its good offices in approving the plans of the Imperial German Government to the end that the German Vice Consul at Monrovia continue for a time in that capacity should the customs receivership go into operation before the appointment of a new German consular officer at Monrovia. A copy of this note is also enclosed.[3] The Department's views, expressed from time to time to the effect that the refusal of the Liberian Government to recognize Mr. Lange in a dual capacity meets with the moral support of the Government of the United States, is set forth in the Department's reply,[4] a copy of which is appended herewith.

It is expected that the receivership of customs of Liberia will go into active operation at an early date and the Department would be glad if, at the opportune time, you would express this Government's confidence in the continued support and cooperation on the part of the Government of France in arriving at a saitsfactory conclusion of the loan arrangements.

I am [etc.],

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.51/439.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to Germany.

No. 142.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 11, 1912.

SIR: With reference to previous correspondence relative to the negotiations entered into by the Governments of France, Germany, Great Britain and the United States for the rehabilitation of the finances of Liberia, I transmit herewith for the information of your

---

[1] The note of July 19, ante.

[2] Dated September 11, ante.

[3] Dated August 23, ante.

[4] Dated September 11, ante.

Embassy copy of a note which has been received from the Imperial German Chargé d'Affaires at Washington, asking that this Government exert its good offices in approving the plans of the Imperial German Government to the end that the German Vice Consul at Monrovia continue for a time in that capacity should the customs receivership go into operation before the appointment of a new German consular officer at Monrovia. The Department's view, expressed from time to time to the effect that the refusal of the Liberian Government to recognize Mr. Lange in a dual capacity meets with the moral support of the Government of the United States, is set forth in the Department's reply, a copy of which is appended herewith.

A note has also been received from the Chargé d'Affaires of the French Republic at Washington, asking in the way of compensation for his Government's assent to the appointment of a German receiver of customs of the Republic of Liberia at Monrovia, that the Government of the United States grant to the French Republic such facilities for a rectification of the Franco-Liberian boundary as may be deemed requisite by the Government of France. A copy of this note is also enclosed. The Department's attitude on this proposition is made known to you through the enclosed copy of the Department's reply to Mr. de Peretti's note.

It is expected that the receivership of customs of Liberia will go into active operation at an early date and the Department would be glad if, at the opportune time, you would express this Government's confidence in the continued support and cooperation on the part of the Imperial German Government in arriving at a satisfactory conclusion of the loan arrangements.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.51/439.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to Great Britain.

No. 1764] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 11, 1912.

SIR: I transmit herewith for the information of your Embassy copy of a note which has been received from the French Chargé d'Affaires at Washington, asking that this Government grant to the Government of France such facilities favorable to that country as may be required for a rectification of the Franco-Liberian boundary. I also enclose copy of a note which has been received from the German Chargé d'Affaires in this city, asking this Government's good offices in approving the plans of the Imperial German Government that the Vice Consul at Monrovia retain that position as well as the position of German Receiver should the receivership go into active operation before a new German consular officer is appointed. The Department's attitude on these two questions is fully set forth in the replies which have been sent to Mr. de Peretti and Mr. Haniel, copies of which will also be found as enclosures.

It is expected that the receivership of customs will go into active operation at a very early date and the Department would be glad if you would, at an opportune time, express to the British Government this Government's deep appreciation of the hearty cooperation of Great Britain throughout the loan negotiations and the earnest hope that this cordial support will continue.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 882.51/439.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 12, 1912.

Your July 29. Department has informed German Chargé d'Affaires here that, the General Receiver and the Receiver of Customs being alike officers of Liberia, its unwillingness to recognize in that capacity persons holding dual position of Receiver of Customs and consular officer would be so reasonable as to enlist the moral support of this Government and that this Government would find it difficult to ask the Government of Liberia to depart from the principle for which it is contending.

Department has informed French Chargé d'Affaires that if plan to have French Receiver at post nearest Franco-Liberian frontier meets with acquiescence of other Governments concerned and should give rise to no valid objection now unforeseen on part of Liberia or those responsible for receivership, this Government will lend its support.

French Government has asked as compensation for its assent in designation Lange Monrovia that this Government approve such facilities favorable to France as may be required for rectification Franco-Liberian boundary. Department's position expressed in reply is that it would be surprised to find the view entertained that territorial compensation would be a proportionate counterpoise to matter no graver than Lange's location and that this Government would greatly deprecate reopening any question of boundary at this time.

WILSON.

File No. 882.51/489.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 23, 1912.

The three Receivers having been appointed, Clark should proceed at once to constitution of Receivership. He should, without delay, make remittance of all sums received for the service 1912 loan and make a full report concerning Receivership to National City Bank, New York.

WILSON.

File No. 882.51/503.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 65.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, November 29, 1912.

SIR: The Department's cablegram of November 23 respecting the constitution of the Receivership having reached me on Sunday, I was unable to officially advise Mr. Clark, the General Receiver, and the Liberian Government of its contents until Monday, November 25.

Enclosure No. 1 is copy of the reply of Mr. Reed Paige Clark, General Receiver of Customs, dated November 26, 1912, advising me that he had on that day, in behalf of the Customs Receivership, assumed control of the Liberian Customs.

Enclosure No. 2 is copy of a communication from the Secretary to the President, dated November 25, 1912, in which the President acknowledged receipt of my communication of November 25 informing him that Mr. Reed Paige Clark had received instructions to proceed at once to the constitution of the Receivership.

Enclosure No. 3 is copy of a proclamation by the President, issued November 26, 1912, proclaiming that the Refunding Loan Agreement was of full force and effect from and after that date.

Enclosure No. 4 is copy of administrative circular No. 1, dated November 26, 1912, issued by Mr. Reed Paige Clark, General Receiver of Customs, in which he, in behalf of the Customs Receivership, assumed official control and possession of the Custom House and Customs Service at each and every port of entry of the Republic.

These documents are transmitted to the Department in order to furnish it with a record of the steps taken to constitute the Receivership. The first formal meeting of the Receivers was held on November 28, at 10 a. m. The Receiver General and all Receivers were present.

I am [etc.]

RICHARD C. BUNDY.

[Inclosure 1.]

The General Receiver of Customs and Financial Adviser of the Republic of Liberia to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

CUSTOMS RECEIVERSHIP OF THE REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA,
Monrovia, November 26, 1912.

SIR: In reply to your communication of yesterday transmitting a cablegram received on the 24th instant from the Department of State, I beg to say that, by direction of the President, the Chief Inspector of Customs having relinquished his post, I have this day in behalf of the Customs Receivership assumed control of the Liberian Customs. A formal meeting of the Receivers will be called this week at the earliest date practicable.

I shall make remittance of all sums received for the service of the 1912 Loan, to the London City and Midland Bank, London, and shall make a full report concerning the Receivership to the National City Bank, New York, by the next outgoing mail.

I am [etc.]

REED PAIGE CLARK.

[Inclosure 2.]

The President of Liberia to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Monrovia, November 25, 1912.

SIR: I am directed by His Excellency the President to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch of even date informing him that Mr. Reed Paige Clark has been instructed to immediately constitute the Receivership and transmit all sums received on account of the service of the 1912 Loan, as well as to make a detailed report concerning the Receivership to the National City Bank of New York City.

The President wishes me to thank you for this information and to say that he rejoices that the last touches have been put to the loan negotiations which make the Refunding Loan of 1912 an established fact. This sets at rest the uncertainties and misgivings that have for a long time infested the minds of the Administration and the people as a whole.

Further, the President desires to record his appreciation for the untiring efforts essayed by your Department of State to bring about this successful termination of the delicate negotiations by which the history of the loan has been marked, and to express to you his gratitude for your personal exertions in connection therewith.

I have [etc.]

WALTER F. WALKER,
Secretary to the President.

[Inclosure 3.]

A PROCLAMATION

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA.

Whereas the Legislature at a called session in the month of November, 1911, approved the Form of Agreement for a loan of One million seven hundred thousand dollars, as is set forth in the "Final Revise, September 7, 1911, Agreement for Government Refunding Loan," provisionally signed by the Financial Representative of Liberia, to refund the registered external and internal debt of the Republic as of December 31, 1910; and

Whereas the bankers, J. P. Morgan and Company, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, the National City Bank of New York and the First National Bank of New York, acting for themselves and others, have agreed to refund said debts under the provisions of the Agreement for Refunding Loan, signed on the seventh day of March, in the year one thousand nine hundred and twelve;

Now, therefore, I, Daniel E. Howard, President of the Republic of Liberia, by virtue of the power in me vested, do hereby declare and proclaim that the said Agreement for Refunding Loan is of full force and effect from and after this date.

In accordance with the terms of said Agreement the following officials have been designated by their respective Governments and duly commisisoned by me:

General Receiver of Customs, Reed Paige Clark;
Receiver of Customs, Gustav Lange;
Receiver of Customs, Emile Frédéric Wolf;
Receiver of Customs, Richard Sharpe.

These officials are invested with all the rights, powers and privileges conferred upon them by the said Agreement and by the several Acts of Legislature relating thereto.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the Republic of Liberia to be affixed.

Done at the City of Monrovia, this 26th day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve, and of the Republic the Sixty-sixth.

(L. S.) D. E. HOWARD,
President.

By the President:
C. D. B. KING,
Secretary of State.

[Inclosure 4.]

Administrative Circular No. 1 of the Customs Receivership.

OFFICE OF THE GENERAL RECEIVER OF CUSTOMS FOR THE REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA,
Monrovia, Nov. 26, 1912.

ADMINISTRATIVE CIRCULAR NO. 1.

NOTICE TO ALL CONCERNED.

ASSUMING CONTROL AND TAKING POSSESSION OF THE CUSTOMS SERVICE.

PARAGRAPH I. The undersigned having been duly designated and appointed General Receiver of Customs for the Republic of Liberia in accordance with the provisions of the Refunding Loan Agreement dated March 7, 1912, does hereby, agreeably to the terms of that Agreement and in behalf of the Customs Receivership, assume official control and possession of the customhouse and customs service at each and every entry port of the Republic.

PARAGRAPH II. All customs dues upon imports and exports are payable solely in current gold, and no document or evidence of indebtedness of any kind whatsoever will be received in lieu thereof. Collectors of Customs will be held to strict accountability in this respect.

PARAGRAPH III. All customs duties paid in on November 26, 1912, and thereafter, will be held INTACT, subject only to the order of the General Receiver of Customs. No expenditures whatever will be made from such duties except, and until, specific authorization therefor be received from this office.

PARAGRAPH IV. All appointments, orders, rules, and regulations now in force, except in so far as modified by this circular, will remain in force until officially revoked or amended in writing by the General Receiver of Customs.

REED PAIGE CLARK,
General Receiver.

File No. 882.51/504.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
No. 66.] Monrovia, November 30, 1912.

SIR: In confirmation of my cable to the Department dated November 28, 8 a. m.,[1] concerning the attempt of Mr. Lange to exercise the functions of Receiver of Customs and at the same time continue to act as German Consul, I have the honor to make the following report.

On November 27 the General Receiver, Mr. Reed Paige Clark, issued a formal notice to all the Receivers that the first official session of the Receivership would be held on November 28 at 10 a. m. At the appointed time all three Receivers met the General Receiver at the office of the Receivership. I am informed by Mr. Clark that he, as General Receiver, read a formal notice opening the meeting, and declared that from this date, November 28, the Receivers had entered upon the active performance of their duties under the Refunding Loan Agreement, and asked if the Receivership should proceed to business. At this juncture Mr. Sharpe, English Receiver, and Mr. Wolf, French Receiver, inquired whether or not the General Receiver and each Receiver was present solely in his capacity as Receivers [sic]. A poll of the Receivership brought out the fact that Mr. Lange was still exercising the functions of German Consul and retained his position as German Vice Consul under an exequatur granted by the Liberian Government. It was then suggested by the General Receiver that the Receivership might consider purely formal questions and leave all matters of reorganization to a future meeting. Mr. Sharpe, English Receiver, asked what formal business the General Receiver purposed taking up at this meeting. The General Receiver stated his program and by mutual consent the meeting proceeded in accord with that program.

---

[1] Not printed.

I have been reliably informed that both the English and French Receivers had asserted their intention to leave the meeting if it developed after its opening that the German Receiver still retained his consular functions. This break was probably avoided by the General Receiver keeping the meeting purely formal in its nature.

I am further informed that the English and French Receivers were acting under instructions from their respective Governments, and that the Liberian Government had been advised by the British and French consular officers here of the position of their Governments with respect to this matter, sometime before the first meeting of the Receivership was called.

Immediately after the meeting Mr. Reed Paige Clark, General Receiver, officially advised the Liberian Government of the meeting and of the presence of all the Receivers. (See inclosure No. 1.) Upon receipt of this information the Liberian Government transmitted a despatch to Mr. Lange in which it pointed out the failure of Mr. Lange to comply with the conditions of the understanding between the Imperial German Government and the Government of Liberia with respect to his relinquishing his consular functions, and advised him that in view of what had transpired the Liberian Government would be constrained to regard him as having surrendered his consular functions from that day, November 28. Inclosure No. 2 gives the complete text of the Liberian Government's despatch.

As defining his position with respect to this matter, Mr. Lange had filed a communication on November 28 with the Liberian Government in which he stated "that after the Receivership had been called together this a. m. I am sending my resignation as Imperial German Vice Consul to my Government. The Imperial German Consul Freiheer von Grote will, as your Government has already been informed, arrive on the 8th of December and until that time I can not give up to act, as I was ordered by my Government, as Imperial German Consul." (See inclosure No. 3.) The Liberian Government regarded this statement as totally unsatisfactory and proceeded without any reference to it to forward Mr. Lange the communication referred to above as inclosure No. 2.

Inclosure No. 4 is a copy of Mr. Lange's second communication to the Liberian Government dated November 28, 1912, with respect to the exercise by him of the dual functions of Receiver and Consular Officer. In this communication Mr. Lange states that he has not received any orders from his Government with respect to relinquishing his consular position and interprets the Liberian Government's despatch (inclosure No. 2) to mean that he will not be recognized any longer as Acting Imperial German Consul. It is interesting to note that in inclosure No. 3 Mr. Lange has signed himself as Receiver of Customs, Republic of Liberia, and in inclosure No. 4 he has signed himself as Acting Imperial German Consul.

With this evidence in hand it can not be doubted that Mr. Lange intended to retain his functions as Consular Officer while performing his duties as German Receiver of Customs. This, of course, the Liberian Government regarded as a complete violation of the understanding and proceeded to take the action referred to above (inclosure No. 2) as that measure of self-defense which the situation seemed to require.

I am [etc.]

RICHARD C. BUNDY.

[Inclosure 1.]

The General Receiver of Customs to the President of Liberia.

CUSTOMS RECEIVERSHIP OF THE REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA,
Monrovia, November 28, 1912.

MR. PRESIDENT: I have the honor to inform Your Excellency that, in response to a formal call issued by the General Receiver yesterday, there was a full meeting of the Liberian Customs Receivership at 10 o'clock this morning and, by mutual consent, the three Receivers, Messrs. Lange, Wolf, and Sharpe, entered upon the active performance of their duties as Receivers of Customs.

Only formal business was transacted at to-day's meeting, which adjourned, after an harmonious session, at 11.30. Regular meetings will be held daily hereafter. I consider that the Liberian Customs Receivership is now fully constituted.

I have [etc.]

REED PAIGE CLARK.

[Inclosure 2.]

The Secretary of State of Liberia to the Acting Imperial German Consul at Monrovia.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Monrovia, November 28, 1912.

No. 617.]

SIR: I am directed by His Excellency the President to say that in view of the fact that the Liberian Government has ascertained that you were present at a meeting of the General Receiver and Receivers of Customs this morning, in response to a formal notice issued by the General Receiver for the purpose of convening all of the Receivers at their first official session, it has become necessary for the Liberian Government to point out that it is compelled to regard your presence at the aforementioned meeting as an assumption on your part of the official duties of German Receiver of Customs under the Refunding Loan Agreement.

In consonance, therefore, with the understanding between the Imperial German Government and the Government of Liberia to the effect that you would relinquish your position as Imperial German Vice Consul on or before your assumption of the duties of Receiver the Liberian Government is constrained to regard you as having surrendered your Consular functions from to-day.

I have [etc.]

C. D. B. KING.

GUSTAV LANGE, Esq.,
Acting Imperial German Consul, Monrovia.

[Inclosure 3.]

The German Receiver of Customs to the Acting Secretary of State of Liberia.

MONROVIA, November 28, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform your Government that after the Receivership has [sic] been called together this a. m. I am sending my resignation as Imperial German Vice Consul to my Government.

The Imperial German Consul Freiheer von Grote will, as your Government is already informed, arrive on the 8th of December and until that time I can not give up to act, as I was ordered by my Government, as Imperial German Consul.

I beg to express the hope that my explanation will be in accordance with the views of your Government.

I have [etc.]

LANGE,
Receiver of Customs, R. L.

The Hon. JOSEPH J. SHARP,
Acting Secretary of State, Monrovia.

[Inclosure 4.]

The Acting Imperial German Consul at Monrovia to the Secretary of State of Liberia.

IMPERIAL GERMAN CONSULATE,
Monrovia, November 28, 1912.

SIR: I beg to refer to my despatch as Receiver to the Hon. Acting Secretary of State of this a. m. and at the same time I acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 618 [617] and noted that according the [sic] understanding between the Imperial German Government and your Government I had to relinquish my position as Imperial German Vice Consul on or before my assumption of the duties as Receiver and that therefore your Government is constrained to regard me as having surrendered my Consular functions from to-day.

In reply I beg to say that I have not yet received any such orders of my Government, but that I understand that your Government does not recognize me from to-day as Acting Imperial German Consul. Of the decision of your Government I have informed my Government.

I have [etc.]

LANGE,
Acting Imperial German Consul.

The Hon. C. D. B. KING,
Secretary of State, Monrovia.

File No. 882.51/487.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, December 4, 1912.

Clark requests me to say: "Receivers unanimously demand immediate settlement location and deny my right to locate them. Have taken stand on inclosures Department's No. 27, May 15. Each Receiver seeking to be sustained by his Government. Shall insist on exercise of right to designate location. Vital principle involved. Serious disagreement imminent."

BUNDY.

File No. 882.51/487.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 4, 1912.

Your December 4. Inform Clark Department approves his stand regarding location of Receivers. His right in this matter seems fully covered under Agreement for Refunding Loan, article 4, section A, paragraph 3.

He should bear in mind special agreement regarding location of German Receiver at Monrovia without making any mention of same.

KNOX.

File No. 882.51/507.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 67.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Monrovia, December 9, 1912.

SIR: At the request of the General Receiver of Customs for Liberia, Mr. Reed Paige Clark, I have the honor to transmit herewith for the information of the Department a report by him with reference to an issue which has arisen in the Receivership.

It will appear from the inclosed documents that the three Receivers have unanimously denied the right of the General Receiver to assign them to their respective locations. I do not think it necessary to enlarge upon the report of the General Receiver, as it gives a clear record of the case, except to say, in my opinion, that the relation which the German and British Receivers have borne to Liberian affairs accounts in a large degree for their attitude in the present controversy.

Mr. Sharpe, the British Receiver, suffers a reduction under the new régime and is naturally reluctant to give up to the General Receiver power that he was wont to exercise without hindrance. His experience makes him a valuable man to the Receivership, but he approaches his new duties in a manner which creates the impression that it is possible that he can never adjust himself to the new order, and should the General Receiver be sustained in the position he has taken I believe that he will resign as soon as he can arrange to do so without a too great personal sacrifice.

Of Mr. Lange, the German Receiver, I think it may be said, from what I have ascertained, that he attaches an exaggerated political and representative significance to his position as Receiver, and he apparently feels that to be subject to the direction of the American General Receiver is beneath his dignity as the agent of the Government he represents. Having been the German Consular Officer in Liberia for a considerable time, he seems to be unable to divest himself of certain attributes of his former representative character. Mr. Lange, like Mr. Sharpe, will therefore find it difficult to adjust himself to the authority of the General Receiver, guaranteed by the loan agreement, if he, the General Receiver, is finally sustained in the stand he has taken. It is not at all improbable that Mr. Lange under such circumstances would also resign.

Mr. Wolf, the French Receiver, I believe would, if left to himself, never have raised the issue and quite likely will remain in the Receivership should the point go against the Receivers. The amount of divergence between the interpretation of the General Receiver and the Receivers as to the meaning of the loan agreement gives one the feeling that its spirit and purport is thoroughly misunderstood or purposely misconstrued by the Receivers. Whether or not a working basis can be reached with the present personnel is extremely doubtful. In my opinion, the General Receiver would gain immensely in power and prestige if the resignations foreshadowed actually take place.

I am [etc.]

Richard C. Bundy.

[Inclosure.]

The General Receiver to the Secretary of State.

Customs Receivership of the Republic of Liberia,
Monrovia, December 7, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inclose herewith extracts from the approved minutes of the meetings of the Liberian Customs Receivership held on December 3, 4, 5, 1912.[1] In order that the Department may come to a clear understanding of the issue, I am also taking the liberty of submitting a brief report thereon.

On December 3d, Mr. Sharpe, who, in common with Mr. Wolf, the French Receiver, is extremely anxious to know whether the General Receiver will keep the promise to locate the German Receiver at Monrovia (both the British and French Receivers are well aware of the promise) suggested that the Receivership proceed to discuss the location of Receivers. I objected strongly to the form in which the suggestion was made, holding that the Receivership, as such, had nothing to do with the location of Receivers, inasmuch as the Receivers were acting under the direction of the General Receiver.

At first Mr. Lange took no active part in the discussion, but Mr. Sharpe speedily and very cleverly enlisted his sympathy by obscuring the real point in question and enlarging upon the fact that the General Receiver, to put it baldly, was claiming the right to issue orders to the Receivers. The word "orders" seems to have been especially nauseous to Mr. Lange; but, even so, his action in aligning himself against the General Receiver on the present issue is, to say the least, astonishing. Surely he must know that the promise above referred to is not that the American Government will cause the General Receiver to vote for the location of the German Receiver at Monrovia, but will cause the General Receiver to locate him there. By taking issue with the General Receiver on the question of his authority in this particular, Mr. Lange, I believe, is treading upon exceedingly dangerous ground—for him.

Personally, I may say in passing I should welcome an opportunity to escape honorably from this embarrassing promise affecting the location of the German Receiver. It has occasioned, and is destined to occasion, the major part of our difficulties in the Receivership. The British and French Receivers are convinced of the existence of a working agreement between the General Receiver and the German Receiver, and will seize upon any pretext to declare that the General Receiver is showing favor to their German colleague.

To my mind, the question as to the authority of the General Receiver to designate the location of Receivers admits of no argument. The meaning of the phrase in article 4 (a), paragraph 3, of the Loan Agreement is, I believe, unmistakable. Article 7 implies clearly that there are questions that do not require a Receivership vote.[2] From the first there has been a tendency among the Receivers toward independence of action. This tendency, I respectfully submit, must be checked, for a body like the Receivership can have but one responsible head; it would lead to endless confusion, for example, if the Receivers were permitted to issue, in their own names, orders affecting Receivership matters generally, even though acting in behalf of the Receivership.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] The passage of Article Fourth referred to reads as follows: "By the terms of such arrangement, in order to assure the faithful and efficient administration and collection of the Assigned Revenues and their application in accordance with this Agreement, the Customs Receivership shall be administered by a General Receiver so designated, and three Receivers so designated who shall act under the direction of the General Receiver." Article Seventh reads as follows: "Any question herein required to be passed upon jointly by the General Receiver and Receivers may, pending such joint action, be provisionally decided by the General Receiver, and such provisional decisions shall be of full force and effect unless and until finally disposed of by such joint action. The General Receiver and Receivers shall meet at least once a year, before the convening of the Legislature, or may hold special meetings upon the call of the General Receiver or upon the unanimous request of the Receivers, for the purpose of considering and finally determining such questions requiring their joint action. At such meetings the General Receiver and Receivers shall each have one vote and all questions requiring their joint action shall be decided by a majority of the votes of those present and voting, and in case the votes shall be equally divided the vote of the General Receiver shall be final and conclusive."

In our discussions we have mutually agreed that the word "construe" is used in the legal sense of "finally determine the meaning of." It is obvious that it is not within the province of the Receivership to construe the Loan Agreement. As will appear from a perusal of the minutes, I have prevented the Receivership from voting upon any question involving the construction of that instrument, more especially upon any question relating to the prerogatives of the General Receiver. The Receivers are clearly entitled to a voice in shaping the policy of the Receivership, but, quite as clearly, they have no control over the designation of individuals to carry out that policy.

Mr. Sharpe's questions and motions were carefully prepared in advance, while my rulings were necessarily in the main extemporaneous. The Department can judge whether or not my course in shutting off debate and forcing the Receivers to take their arguments elsewhere was justifiable under the circumstances. A vital principle is involved in the controversy, and the sooner it is conclusively settled the sooner the Receivership can proceed in an orderly manner.

In arguing his motions Mr. Sharpe had but little assistance from Mr. Wolf, who has some difficulty in following English when rapidly spoken, and but little from Mr. Lange, who, I fear, has never had a very clear idea of the true meaning of the proceeding. Mr. Sharpe has since confessed to me that he desires not so much a settlement of the question as to the General Receiver's authority in the premises as a record of the attitude of the General Receiver and of each Receiver in the matter of location. I am willing enough to have myself and Mr. Lange on record, but I can not waive a prerogative of the General Receiver to accomplish this result. If his authority in this respect is recognized by the Receivers, the General Receiver will make the designations, in which event, of course, the responsibility will be entirely his. I hope for an early settlement of the question.

The Department's cablegram of December 4 was a source of considerable gratification to me. If I hear nothing further from the Department, I shall proceed to make designations whenever, in my opinion, the time is ripe.

I am [etc.]

Reed Paige Clark.

File No. 882.51/494.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, December 21, 1912.

Repeat following to Clark: "Referring to Legation's cable, December 4, and Department's cable reply same date, French Government urgently insists French Receiver be assigned French border. French Ambassador gives assurances such assignment need not be considered as injecting international politics into the conduct of the Receivership or an attempt to create any spheres of influence, Franco-Liberian boundary having already been settled. In view of the fact that French Government acquiesced after protest in the establishment of German Receiver at Monrovia, its present request can not be ignored. You will accordingly see the necessity of assigning French and British Receivers to their respective boundary ports. Such assignment does not mean these two Receivers can not be transferred from time to time to other ports along the coast nearest their respective borders as the requirements of the Receivership may dictate. Am informing French Ambassador to-day of this request that you comply with the desires of his Government.

"The Department is aware of the objections you have to the above arrangement, as stated in your report to the American Minister at Monrovia on September 16 last,[1] but feels the circumstances are such that compliance with the French request is essential to continuance of the Receivership."

KNOX.

---

[1] Not printed.

LUXEMBURG.

DEATH OF THE GRAND DUKE WILLIAM ALEXANDER AND ACCESSION TO THE THRONE OF THE GRAND DUCHESS MARIE ADELAIDE.

File No. 850a.001.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

American Legation,
The Hague, February 25, 1912.

Grand Duke Luxemburg died this evening seven o'clock.

Bryce.

File No. 850a.001.

The President to the Grand Duchess.

[Telegram.]

The White House,
Washington, February 26, 1912.

I deeply regret to learn of the death of your illustrious father, His Royal Highness William, late Grand Duke of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, and I offer the profound sympathy of the Government and people of the United States to the Government and people of your country in their national bereavement. Pray accept for yourself the expression of my personal sympathy and high regard.

Wm. H. Taft.

File No. 850a.001/2.

The Grand Duchess to the President.

[Telegram.]

Colmarberg, February 28, 1912.

I thank you most sincerely for the expression of sympathy so kindly offered by yourself and the Government and people of the United States on the occasion of our sad bereavement.

Marie Adelaide.

File No. 850a.001/6.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 6, Luxemburg series.]

American Legation,
The Hague, April 4, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith, together with the office copy thereof, a letter[1] addressed to the President of the United

---

[1] Not printed.

States of America, which I have this day received from the Minister of State, President of the Government of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, whereby her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess, Regent of the Grand Duchy, notifies the President of the United States of the decease of His Royal Highness the Grand Duke William, and of the continuance of the Regency until the attainment of majority of Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide.

I have, etc.

LLOYD BRYCE.

File No. 850a.001/6.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 23.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 8, 1912.

SIR: Referring to your dispatch No. 6 Luxemburg series of the 4th ultimo, transmitting a letter from Her Royal Highness Marie Anne, Regent of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, in which she notifies the President of the death of His Royal Highness the Grand Duke William and that the Regency will be continued until the attainment of majority of Her Royal Highness Marie Adelaide, I inclose, with office copy, a letter addressed by the President to Her Royal Highness Marie Anne, acknowledging her letter.[1]

You will forward the copy to the Foreign Office of Luxemburg and deliver the original in the manner most agreeable to Her Royal Highness.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 850a.032.

Speech from the Throne by Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide on the occasion of her attainment of majority, June 18, 1912.

[Translation.—Extracts.]

My first duty is to comply with the desire expressed in Article 5 of the Constitution:

> I swear to observe the Constitution and the Laws of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, to maintain the national independence and the integrity of its territory, as also public and individual liberty and the rights of all and of each of my subjects, and to use for the preservation and the growth of general and private prosperity, as a good sovereign should do, all the means which the laws put at my disposal. I swear it. So help me God.

It would be assumption on my part to wish to sketch to-day the program of a whole reign; I will limit myself, gentlemen, to telling you my aspirations and my hopes.

My desire is to merit the name of a good sovereign, as expressed in the oath I have just taken. I promise to take an interest in the weal of all and to be helpful to all with kindness and benevolence. Is not the endeavor of the sovereign to attain to the utmost the good, the true and the beautiful the most precious jewel of his crown?

---

[1] Not printed.

The wish to judge according to the demands of justice and equity shall inspire all my actions. The rights and well being of the country shall be my only guide. Righteous judgment means equal justice for all, especially justice which protects the humble and the feeble. The steadily increasing economic inequality between men is the serious problem of our age. Social peace, which is sought after so earnestly, remains to this day an unattained ideal. May we not hope that the consciousness of justice, which is so deeply rooted in human nature, may equalize all contrasts, and that the constantly active, eternal laws of justice may at last bring to us rest and peace?

My father wished to reign for the people and with the people. He said that hand in hand with the people we shall approach the serious problems which the future has in store for us. I assume this paternal inheritance, which involves so great a responsibility. Your enlightened patriotism will sustain me and Heaven will reward our joint endeavors.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the numerous Heads of State and the foreign Governments for their warm interest in the country and the Sovereign Family at the time of our recent affliction. We shall gratefully remember the sympathy shown us.

The Grand Duchy owes its prosperity principally to the international treaties which guarantee its independence and neutrality, but they also impose obligations on us in the interest of Europe. Our strength lies in the Right. A brotherly bond connects Right and Duty. In the frank performance of our duties we will always act in such a manner that not the least doubt as to the directness and integrity of our intentions may ever arise.

Filled with love of country, I am happy and proud to bear its name and its crown. I aspire to no other joy than to serve it always, and with your help, gentlemen, to work for its interest.

The standard of Luxemburg is placed to-day in the weak hands of a young girl. I will bear it on high unflinchingly, and with the help of God I will fight for its honor.

As a daughter of the House of Nassau, like my ancestors, I will be faithful to the noble motto of our ancient House, "Je maintiendrai!"

File No. 850a.001M33.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State,

AMERICAN LEGATION,
The Hague, August 7, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith inclosed, at the request of the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Luxemburg, a letter[1] with office copy and translation thereof, by which Her Royal Highness, the Grand Duchess of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, notifies the President of the United States of her accession to the throne.

I have [etc.]

LLOYD BRYCE.

File No. 850a.001M33.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 28, 1912.

SIR: I inclose, with office copy, a letter[1] addressed by the President to Her Royal Highness, Marie Adelaide, acknowledging the letter of June 18 last, by which Her Royal Highness announced that, having attained her majority, she had taken possession of the Sovereign Power of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg.

You will forward the copy to the Foreign Office of Luxemburg and deliver the original in the manner most agreeable to Her Royal Highness.

I am [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

---

[1] Not printed.

MEXICO.

MESSAGES OF THE PRESIDENT, FRANCISCO I. MADERO, TO THE CONGRESS.

File No. 812.032/8.

Note.—The message of the President, Francisco I. Madero, was read to the Congress April 1, 1912, and transmitted to the Secretary of State April 17, 1912, by the American Ambassador.

[Extracts pertaining to relations with the United States.—Translation.]

Our relations with foreign countries continue singularly cordial. All the Sovereigns and Executives of the great powers, and of almost all the other powers, have answered in flattering terms the autograph letters which I addressed to them, informing them that I had taken possession of the Supreme Magistracy of the Republic.

In our relataions with the United States incidents have occurred to which, on account of their interest, I must refer, notwithstanding that they are already matters of common knowledge.

THE CHAMIZAL AFFAIR.

I will begin with the Chamizal affair, which has been the subject-matter of long-standing and frequent negotiations between the two Governments.

In June, 1910, there was signed at Washington by the Ambassador of Mexico and the Secretary of State of the United States of America a convention[1] in which, after definition and description of the territory in dispute, known as El Chamizal, it was agreed that the difference between the two countries with respect to the eminent domain over that territory should be submitted to the International Boundary Commission, with a third member, who was to be a Canadian jurist, added. In compliance with the stipulations of the convention, and after hearing the case, the Arbitral Tribunal decided by a majority vote that the eminent domain over a part of the territory of El Chamizal appertained to the United States of America, and over the other part, the more extensive of the two, to the United Mexican States.[2]

Within the period of time fixed by the convention for the execution of the award, the Government of the United States of America informed the Government of Mexico that it could not regard that award as valid or binding, and the President of the United States, in his Message to Congress on December 7, last, made the following declaration: "Our arbitration of the Chamizal boundary question with Mexico was unfortunately abortive, but, with the earnest efforts on the part of both Governments which its importance commands, it is felt that an early practical adjustment should prove possible."[1]

---

[1] For. Rel. 1911, p. 565.

[2] Id., p. 586.

This is not the occasion to set forth in detail the reasons which the American Government adduces to maintain that the award was abortive. The Mexican Government has maintained the reverse, notwithstanding the objections publicly made as to the difficulties that might arise in the incorporation under the domain and jurisdiction of the Mexican Republic of a tract which, de facto, forms part of the city of El Paso and which is separated from Ciudad Juárez by the present bed of the Bravo River.

Both Governments being animated by the most earnest desire to solve the difficulty, the Mexican Government, at the invitation of the Government of the United States, has informed the latter that, without foregoing the position which it occupies by virtue of the arbitral award, it will receive and study such propositions as the American Government may see fit to make.[2]

INTERVENTION.

The armed agitation that exists in some parts of the Republic has given rise to rumors as to the possibility of intervention in Mexico by the United States. These rumors, fomented in the United States by certain unscrupulous journals, have not sufficed to occasion differences between the two Governments nor has the Washington Government allowed itself to be influenced by the ignoble propaganda. The great and respectable American dailies, the most prominent American statesmen, the ablest American thinkers, as well as all Americans having legitimate interests in Mexico, know well that the word "intervention" is only an euphemism for war, seeing that the Mexican people, whatever political defects may characterize or be attributed to them, prize the independence and honor of their country more than life itself. The Government of the United States has been the first, by its own acts, to discourage the insensate idea of intervention and has given repeated proofs to the Government of Mexico of its high spirit of justice and its sincere respect for the rights of this country as a sovereign nation. A patent proof of this spirit is to be found in the recent action of the American Congress, in empowering the President to prevent American territory serving as a source of supply of arms and ammunition to individuals who rise in rebellion against the Governments of the other nations of this continent, and the consequent proclamation of the President of the United States,[3] prohibiting armed rebels in Mexico being supplied with war material in the neighboring Republic. The President of the American Union has been actuated in this instance, as stated in an official note addressed to our Foreign Relations Department, by his earnest desire that the Mexican nation may at an early date enjoy once more the blessings of peace and prosperity.

File No. 812.032/10.

NOTE.—The second message of President Madero was read to the Congress September 16, 1912, and transmitted to the Secretary of State September 18, 1912, by the American Ambassador.

---

[1] Id., p. xi.

[2] Id., p. 603.

[3] See post under date of March 2, 1912, p. 732.

[Extracts pertaining to relations with the United States.—Translation.]

Public attention has been occupied greatly by the public disorders which have occurred during the last semester, since they might have had an influence in some manner on the cordial relations which up to date we have maintained with foreign nations.

As a matter of fact the criminal depredations committed in various parts of the Republic by armed groups which have placed themselves outside the law, committing acts now of rebellion, now of brigandage, have brought about on the part of victims of foreign nationality claims against the Mexican Government, directed by the representatives of their respective nations. The form in which the complaints have been presented has in nowise inspired any doubt or the least fear that our relations of friendship with foreign nations could suffer any alteration from this cause. Prudence, discretion, and serenity have been the characteristic mark of the conduct of the diplomatic agents accredited to Mexico in taking up these affairs, showing once more the esteem which their Governments and they themselves have for our country.

The Mexican Government, anticipating the investigation ordered by the united houses of the American Congress to fix and estimate the personal damages caused by the revolution of 1910 to citizens resident in El Paso, Texas, and Douglas, Arizona, ordered two of its consuls to compile with the greatest zeal the data for appraising the real damage and to set the amounts of the indemnities which should be forthcoming. The result was that only eleven persons presented claims in El Paso and six in Douglas for injuries received—in some cases because of acts imputable to their own negligence or their curiosity to witness a battle; in equity and in view of the damages suffered indemnities were fixed, the amounts of which were similar to those fixed by the American courts and by the Mexican and American chancelleries in cases where the damages, in part at least, are the fault of the victims. The matter is not yet ended, due to the exaggerated pretensions of those interested, who have thought to find in the commission appointed by the American Congress an unconditional support.

POLITICAL AFFAIRS.—REVOLUTION.—MEASURES TAKEN BY THE UNITED STATES TO PREVENT BREACH OF NEUTRALITY LAWS AND TO PROTECT AMERICAN LIFE AND PROPERTY IN MEXICO.[1]

File No. 812.00/2665.

The Secretary of State to the Attorney General.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 3, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith for such action, if any, as you may see fit to take thereon, a copy of translation of a note dated the 30th ultimo from the Mexican Embassy at this capital,[2] requesting that the local and Federal authorities of Arizona be instructed to maintain with greater vigilance the observance of the neutrality laws of the United States. The Embassy adds that adherents of Flores Magón are near the international border in Arizona and

---

[1] Continued from For. Rel. 1911, pp. 348–525.
[2] See For. Rel. 1911, p. 525.

California ready to support or cover up any movement against the Mexican Government.

In communicating to you this and other requests of a similar character, the Department has no other intention than to call to your notice the particular request or complaints that may be made in order that the facts and circumstances involved may be thoroughly investigated and such action, if any, taken as may be necessary to secure the enforcement of our neutrality statutes as well as of the treaty and other international obligations under which this Government may rest toward foreign powers with which it is on terms of amity and peace. In this connection it should be observed that the Department of State draws a clear distinction between, on the one hand, a vigorous enforcement of our so-called neutrality statutes and the due and proper observance of the rules governing international neutrality, and, on the other hand, activities such as are seemingly desired by the Mexican Government and which would, if carried out, amount in effect to cooperation and participation with a foreign government or with its agent in measures calculated to assist such foreign government in putting down revolution or in maintaining peace and tranquillity within its borders. These latter undertakings, in the absence of duties, rights or obligations arising from treaty, from conditions threatening the welfare of a foreign power, or from the interests of aliens requiring protection by their own Government, are quite obviously matters calling for action by the local sovereign rather than by a foreign power, which under normal conditions owes in general no international duty other than to be neutral and impartial.

I have [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 812.00/2665.

The Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

[Memorandum—Translation.]

The Secretary of State presents his compliments to his excellency the Mexican Ambassador, and has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of his note No. 799, dated December 30, 1911,[1] requesting the good offices of the Department of State to cause the local and Federal authorities of Arizona to tighten the vigilance they have been instructed to maintain for the observance of the neutrality statutes of the United States, and stating that recent reports to the Mexican Government indicate that both in Arizona and in California adherents of or sympathizers with the Flores Magón faction constitute a disturbing element, ever ready to cover up or to support a movement against the Mexican Government.

The Department of State has taken pleasure in transmitting to the Attorney General for such action, if any, as he may see fit to take thereon, a copy of the translation of the Mexican Embassy's note under acknowledgment.

Department of State,
Washington, January 4, 1912.

---

[1] See For. Rel., 1911, p. 525. This is the note referred to in the communication to the Attorney General above.

File No. 812.00/2692.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1203.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, January 6, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for such action as the Department deems necessary to take, a copy of an informal note, with its inclosures, from the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs, relative to certain seditious propaganda being carried on by Dr. Emilio Vázquez Gómez from his present home in San Antonio, Texas.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure—Translation.]

The Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

[Private correspondence of the Minister for Foreign Affairs.]

MEXICO, January 3, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: Referring to the conversation which we had last Monday regarding Mr. Emilio Vázquez, who is commonly known by the name of Emilio Vázquez Gómez, I have the honor to send to you herewith a copy of a circular letter which the same Emilio Vázquez sent to all the governors of the States under date of the 10th of November last. The President of the Republic received various copies of the letter mentioned, which were sent to him by the governors of the States, and one of these copies was sent to our Ambassador in Washington, in order that he might make representations to the American Government, which up to the present time have had no result.

If you will read the letter in question, you will find it very astutely written. Vázquez in a very indirect manner makes invitation to the revolution, avoiding, nevertheless, any expression which would directly compromise him.

The principal newspapers of this city published yesterday another letter of Emilio Vázquez, which shows his decision to continue agitating this country. I inclose a copy of El Imparcial, in which you may see the letter, and I beg very earnestly that you give particular attention to the final paragraph thereof in which the so-called Plan of Tacubaya is set forth, this being the plan upheld by Vázquez and his partisans.

I beg you, Mr. Ambassador, to accept my thanks for your kind cooperation with us to prevent conspiracies on American territory, and again expressing to you my best wishes,

I am [etc.]

MANUEL CALERO.

[Subinclosure 1.—Translation.]

Emilio Vázquez to the Director of El Imparcial.

501 SOUTH PRESA STREET,
San Antonio, Tex., December 29, 1911.

MY DEAR SIR: Yesterday a reporter of a local paper came to visit me, and in the afternoon published an account of the interview; but, through the lack of knowledge on his part of Spanish and on mine of English, he published in his newspaper various mistakes of some importance, which I ought to rectify in the possibility that they have been telegraphed to Mexico City and published there.

He affirms that I stated that with the imprisonment of Gen. Reyes peace would return to the Republic, and, by way of rectification, I should express my opinion in this regard.

I believe that peace will not return to the country, and much less tranquility, while Mr. Madero and his followers govern, as they are governing, in a manner entirely apart, unfortunately, from the noble ideals of the revolution of 1910. The glorious revolutionary spirit never considered using our heroic army for the killing of our brothers and for the shedding of their blood, which is our own blood, and often simply for asking justice; nor did it ever think to use the army to occupy the halls of the legislators to impose, with fixed bayonet, chosen governors and to insult the sovereignty of the States and of the constitution of the Republic. Very different, and very high and patriotic, are the ideals which our revolution of November of 1910 has for our army, for the States, for Mexicans, and for the Fatherland.

Some of my partisans in Mexico, in order to continue the revolution on the Plan of San Luis, took my name when they signed the Plan of Tacubaya, honoring me with the belief that I am the true representative of the ideals of the revolution, in order that when the revolution should triumph, I may be elevated to the provisional presidency to satisfy there the high aims which are defined in that Plan of Tacubaya. The interview to which I refer states that I have disowned my partisans. That is not the truth and never will be; never will I disown my partisans; the voice of my own conscience demands that I do thus; the salvation of the ideals of the revolution which constitute peace, tranquility, and the salvation of the Fatherland impose it upon me, and I am not the one to betray either my conscience or the ideals of the revolution, let the consequences to me be what they may.

All by the Fatherland and for the Fatherland.

Thanking you in advance, I am very sincerely, yours,

Emilio Vásquez.

[Subinclosure 2.—Translation.]

Circular to all Governors of Mexican States, from Emilio Vásquez.

501 South Presa Street,
San Antonio, Tex., November 10, 1911.

My Dear Sir and Friend: I have received word that there is a movement on foot in Mexico to bring to a head a revolution in my favor. When explanations were asked for, it appears that a revolutionary plan has been elaborated in which, with a basis principally in the supreme political errors of Mr. Madero and above all in the arbitrary and sudden imposition of the Vice President, the general elections of the 1st and 15th of October and the results emanating from them are declared null. The Chambers of Congress are declared dissolved, and it is said that, although I have always recommended peace, in spite of that I am declared chief of the revolution in order to elevate me to the Presidency of the Republic, where I shall enjoy, according to the plan, all the powers necessary to call and hold the elections for President, Vice President, Deputies, and Senators, in order to commence to put in force at once the ideals of the revolution and to restore to the country the peace and tranquility which are now lacking.

Such are the principal points of the plan, according to my information, as well as the following: The elections of governors and officials of the States, held since June last, are acknowledged as valid, and it is ordered that the already commenced movement to replace authorities shall continue without interruption, for the revolution is not against the governors of the States and the officials thereof, but against him who imposed the Vice President and against the Vice President imposed, in order that in the future there may not remain to any powerful person a desire to again coerce officials elected by popular vote, for they say that if they tolerate this imposition, identical at base and in form with that which caused the past revolution, those impositions will be continued indefinitely and with them Mr. Madero has broken and will continue to break the political ideals of "Effective suffrage, no reelection."

As may be seen, the object of the revolution is perfectly defined, and, on the other hand, is not for vengeance or cruelty; it is solely for the salvation of the revolutionary principles in the exact moment in which the former chief is wrecking them.

I consider it my duty to give you this news for your information and guidance.

As ever [etc.]

Emilio Vásquez.

File No. 812.00/2693.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1204.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, January 10, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the information of the Department copies in original and translation of an article which appeared in "El Diario Oficial," the official organ of the Mexican Goverment, with reference to the relations between the United States and Mexico. I have to suggest the advisability of furnishing a copy of this article to the President, as it may perhaps be useful to him to know that the administration's policy regarding the enforcement of the neutrality laws is warmly appreciated by the Mexican Government and by its Executive.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

Mexico and the United States—The Integrity of the Nation.

Several newspapers of the capital have published in their columns an extensive letter written by Licentiate Andrés Molina Enríquez, addressed to the Ambassador of the United States, in which he prefers certain charges against the latter country on account of its attitude in preventing General Reyes and his associates from violating the laws of neutrality; stating in said letter, moreover, that the present Chief Executive, Francisco I. Madero, received the assistance of the Government of the United States in overthrowing General Díaz, and insinuating the idea that such action implies undue obligations on the part of our President toward said nation, and affirming that the present administration has not initiated a genuine national policy. The charges are unfounded and the insinuations are malicious.

It is not true that the Government of the United States gave the leader of the revolution, Francisco I. Madero, freedom to conduct any operations within its territory. As soon as it was known there that it was the intention of Mr. Madero to cross the frontier to press the revolutionary movement a warrant of arrest was issued against him and the vigilance displayed was so active that the greater part of the expeditions organized in that country were prevented, a large number of the sympathizers with the revolutionary cause incarcerated, and important shipments of arms and ammunition confiscated.

International law provides that no country may permit the organization of an armed expedition against a friendly nation.

The cordon of American troops placed along the frontier line during the revolution against General Díaz did not exist during the attempt of General Reyes, probably because it was not considered necessary, and it is unjust to affirm that more rigor was displayed against Reyes than against Madero. It is, however, a fact that during the revolutionary movement headed by Madero vigilance was difficult in spite of the large number of troops employed to watch the frontier, because the residents of the other side, whether Mexicans or Americans, sympathized with the revolutionary cause. This popular sentiment could not be avoided, and not only is it beyond criticism but it has been the cause of appreciation on the part of these Mexicans of the truly fraternal affection shown to them during the critical condition of our country by the great people of the United States.

That a few Reyistas and ex-Porfiristas may regret the unsuccessful venture of General Reyes is something we can easily understand, but such is not the feeling of the nation.

The statement made by Mr. Madero when he arrived at San Antonio, Texas, as a political refugee, was very clear; in order to end the revolution several loans were offered by private persons, but as they were considered burdensome for the country they were not accepted and it was decided that the struggle should continue under difficult conditions rather than incur inadmissible obligations.

The Government regrets that this open letter has been addressed to the American Ambassador, because its purpose is to disturb the very cordial relations which exist between the two countries; and it regrets that the attention of the Ambassador has been called in such an impertinent manner, as the personality of this high representative is most pleasing to the Mexican Government, due to the many proofs of friendship he has given to it, and as his mission has been discharged to this day in the most satisfactory way for both countries.

File No. 812.00/2710.

American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 1224.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, January 23, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. KNOX: Since my dispatch of November[1] 30, 1911, the revolution inaugurated by Gen. Bernardo Reyes has run its course and to the infinite relief of all factions has come to a most ignominious, undignified, and grotesque end. The leader of this revolt, after invading Mexican territory without a single supporter, now languishes in a common jail, and the cause which he espoused is a subject for ridicule and jest. It must be understood, however, that the Reyes revolutionary movement failed not because of universal satisfaction with the Government of President Madero; nor need it be confidently inferred from the failure of this enterprise that another under a more daring, popular and able leader might not succeed. The truth is that at this moment Mexico is seething with discontent—principally among the higher and educated classes, who in the final analysis must rule this country either through a gradual conversion of the present administration or by open revolution; and but for the economic exhaustion, the imperative needs for peace and the general feeling that it is better to bear present evils than to rush blindly to those of an unknown future, it would be entirely possible for a strong leader to organize a formidable rebellion of wide extent against the Government. * * *

At this present moment the area of actual and open rebellion against the Government is not inconsiderable. On Friday last the Madero administration passed a bill through Congress suspending the constitutional guaranties (martial law) in the States of Morelos, Tlaxcala, Guerrero, and parts of Puebla and Vera Cruz. This is equivalent to a confession of that which has been for some time known to the Embassy: that in this large section of the country the Government was unable to assert its authority. But the extent of the territory in a state of practical revolt against the central Government is even greater than this, for the States of Chiapas and Tabasco and a part of the State of Yucatán are the seats of organized resistance to the Federal authority and of lawlessness and brigandage upon a vast scale. * * * A vast Federal force has been concentrated in the States of Morelos and Guerrero, but the existence of this force has only served to reveal its utter impotency, as, notwithstanding their presence, bodies of brigands under the nominal leadership of Zapata are seizing towns and villages, attacking haciendas, and committing acts of vandalism and barbarity. In some other States, like Sinaloa, Michoacán, Sonora, Guanajuato and San Luis Potosí, where the local governments have largely passed into the hands of ignorant and untrained peons of the Indian race, although the power of the Central Government is not challenged and there is no state of armed revolution, yet the decrees of the Government and its orders are ineffectual and it is unable in many cases to discharge its international and domestic obligations. I am at this present moment having to deal with numerous questions of this character and my attention is being constantly called not only to the reviving tendency to illegally confiscate American property or to deprive Americans of possession through legal methods which would be a disgrace to the civilization of the Middle Ages, but I am besieged with complaints from Americans who have been arrested on frivolous charges and confined in insanitary and loathsome jails. For the larger part of these cases I have endeavored to secure redress on my own initiative without reference to Washington, and not infrequently I have been obliged to use methods and an urgency not at all agreeable to me and perhaps not acceptable to the officials with whom I had to deal. * * *

---

[1] Should be December; see For. Rel. 1911, p. 525.

The two things which are most affecting public opinion at this time—and especially foreign, financial and commercial public opinion—and increasing the distrust felt toward the Madero administration are:

First. The failure to enforce the law and the spread of lawlessness and license. * * *

Second. The dangerous tendencies toward impracticable and absurd economic measures sanctioned by the Government. * * *

Coupled with these two grave causes of discontent are the dangers resulting from the constant excitation of the public mind by the virulent and irresponsible press, which daily agitates the popular passions with exaggerated stories of political and financial intrigues, with venomous attacks on the President and his Cabinet, and, I regret to say, the United States in its relations with Mexico and other Latin-American Republics.

As the situation here develops, I am inclined to attribute the unsatisfactory conditions which exist throughout the country very largely to certain weaknesses in the character of the President, which undoubtedly affect his immediate associates and from them dilute through the entire Republic. I believe the President to be an absolutely honest man, sincere in his convictions, and devoted to his country. But he unfortunately lacks stability of character, capacity for continuous and unremitting labor, and undeviating fixed policy. He is unfortunately prone to accept the advice and seek the counsel of some relatives and some associates who have no experience in public affairs, and is also most unfortunately disposed to play, not intentionally, the demagogue, and for reasons relating to his personal popularity to deal leniently with the enemies of public order. He is, I believe, a sincere friend of our country at this time, but his environment, ideas and associations may eventually place him in a position of antagonism. At the present moment he seems to desire to deal justly, and even generously, in all matters which are brought to his direct attention by the Embassy, but as time goes on it may be doubted whether this attitude will be preserved.

I am [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 312.112R56/9.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1247.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 2, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the information of the Department a copy of a letter from this Embassy to the American Consul General in this city, relative to the protection desired by Mr. G. P. Robinson of the Suriana Mining and Smelting Company, as indicative of the attitude of the Embassy towards requests for protection by American citizens in districts which the Mexican Government has declared as subject to martial law.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.]

The American Ambassador to the American Consul General at Mexico City.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 1, 1912.

SIR: I have to acknowlege the receipt of your letter of the 30th ultimo transmitting a copy of a letter addressed to you by Mr. G. P. Robinson, Superintendent of the Suriana Mining and Smelting Company, situated at Acotla, State of Guerrero.

This Embassy, upon the request of Mr. Westlund, of the Suriana Mining and Smelting Company, some time ago secured the dispatch of a number of soldiers to the neighborhood of its properties for the purpose of furnishing protection to it in the event of the retirement of the forces of Jesus Salgado in that direction before the advancing Federal forces. The Suriana Mining and Smelting Company, therefore, not only had anticipatory knowledge of the possibility that their property would be placed in a position where the Federal Government would not be able to render adequate aid but it had evidence of the Government's good intentions in the force which was furnished and which has recently been attacked and dispersed by the Salgado forces. Under the existing circumstances Mr. Robinson and the Suriana Mining and Smelting Company are entitled to the same measure of protection which the Mexican Government can afford to its own citizens in a district which has been declared subject to martial law. Clearly it was the duty of Mr. Robinson some time ago to have sent his family to a place of perfect security, and it is his duty now so to do if possible. Americans in Mexico are entitled under the rules of international law to the same rights and treatment as are accorded by the Government to Mexican citizens, and as the Mexican Government has declared a state of siege in this district it has virtually confessed that it can not afford adequate protection to Mexican citizens. This Embassy greatly regrets Mr. Robinson's unfortunate situation and will make proper representations to the Mexican Government in his behalf, but it is manifest that the aid which the Government can render will be inadequate pending the reassertion of its authority and the installation of responsible representatives of the law.

I am [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2731.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 3, 1912—11 p. m.

Partial order restored in Ciudad Juárez, though rebels seem still in control. No further disturbances in Chihuahua. Great uneasiness and apprehension in Torreón, from which place I have requested that no troops be withdrawn. Consul at Durango reports great uneasiness and secret meetings. In territory in southern Mexico hitherto described, situation grows worse. Zapatistas are now practically in control of all territory between Cuernavaca and Chilpanzingo. Cuernavaca cut off and surrounded by Zapatistas. Twenty-six Americans there. The general situation may be greatly complicated by a strike of the 1,200 American employees on the Mexican railways, who justly believe Government has deliberately adopted a policy aiming at their elimination. Such action would tie up the national railways and produce most deplorable situation.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2727.

The Secretary of State to the President.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 3, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: For some time past the political situation in Mexico seems to have been getting more disturbing, especially in the southern portion of the Republic, and, as you know, the outbreak in Ciudad Juárez—on the north—a day or two ago has made the situation still more acute. Ambassador Wilson reports from Mexico City by telegraph as follows. [See supra, telegram of February 3.]

In view of the fact that the present Government of Mexico seems unable to control the country districts to any great degree, and that brigandage seems to be spreading, I feel that if the present movement grows, which seems at present most likely, our citizens in Mexico will suffer infinitely more in their persons and property than was the case during the recent Madero revolution, when neither side was at all willing to incur the displeasure of this Government. I think, therefore, that as a measure of precaution the War Department should be asked to strengthen the guard along the border, which has been withdrawn from time to time until but a comparatively small force now remains.

In the sending of the troops to the border I feel that it would be wise to do so quietly, so that no unnecessary animosity may be aroused.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 812.00/2740.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 5, 1912—6 p. m.

Torreón situation better. Danger of complications at Ciudad Juárez appears to have passed for the moment. Situation in Chihuahua very bad; State government apparently helpless and governor has resigned. Orozco will be made military dictator if he remains faithful; he has the President's entire confidence. Much brigandage and lawlessness in Durango with prospects of an organized outbreak at any time. No improvement in southern Mexico. There is some excitement here on account of sensational press dispatches from the United States announcing prospective intervention. At the celebration of constitution day to-day an enormous crowd was present but the President was received without any demonstration and in silence.

WILSON.

File No.2812.00/2742.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, February 5, 1912—2 p. m.

The State is a unit against the Federal Government, and open war will follow entrance any Federal troops into the State. Control of leaders over soldiers problematical and civil authorities helpless.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/2744.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, February 6, 1912—1 p. m.

Orozco elected governor by State congress. No action taken with reference to secession. Remarkable change in the situation within a few hours, undoubtedly attributable to fear of intervention; prospects rather more favorable.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/2754.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 7, 1912—1 p. m.

It is possible that in case of a sudden emergency the patrol along the border may be strengthened; the Army has been notified to be prepared for border patrol duty. But these are only precautionary steps, and the President's attitude is identical with his attitude as expressed in his message to Congress last year.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/2746.

The Secretary of War to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

War Department,
Washington, February 7, 1912.

Following telegram, dated El Paso, Texas, February 6, 1912, from Colonel Edgar Z. Steever, Fourth Cavalry, commanding Fort Bliss, Texas, repeated for your information:

> Thirteen mounted and armed Mexicans invaded United States territory at Noria, New Mexico, thirty miles west of El Paso today. Immediately sent detachment by train which captured the whole outfit and sixteen horses. Prisoners now in guard house. Railroad officials afraid the Mexicans intended to hold up express trains; Noria only two miles north of international boundary. Juárez continues tranquil.

H. L. Stimson.

File No. 812.00/2755.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, February 7, 1912—10 p. m.

There are indications of common action in the border States excepting Tamaulipas. Casas Grandes has rebelled against Government; Government anticipates worse situation at Ciudad Juárez; 1,500 insurgents threaten Santa Rosalía; strikes at the Madero establishments at Parras; unconfirmed reports of troubles in Matamoros, opposite Brownsville; Federal authority nonexistent in Chihuahua. In the south the same situation prevails: outbreaks in State of Vera Cruz; practical anarchy in Michoacan; disturbances in Hidalgo. In this city there is almost universal lack of confidence in the Government; unrest and apprehension are profound; press violent and inflammatory in its attitude toward Government, and portions of it anti-American.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2751.

The American Consul at Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate,
(Juárez) El Paso, Tex., February 7, 1912.

Casas Grandes local authorities have declared against the Government. Railroad communications between Juárez and that section abandoned. That portion of my district is reported to be wholly in the control of the anti-Madero followers, who are making demonstrations against the Americans. They have made a demand of the people of the colonies (Mormons) to surrender their firearms (their private property). This demand the Americans will resist, and serious trouble is feared. I will send a written protest to said local officials, using to some extent the language of one year ago as given by the Ambassador.

Thos. D. Edwards.

File No. 812.00/2751.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Juárez.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 10, 1912.

Department approves your proposed action, as stated in your telegram February 7, concerning protest to anti-Maderists now in power at Casas Grandes against taking firearms from Americans. You should make your protest emphatic, and base it on the ground that Americans must not be left without means of defense to protect themselves during the present unsettled conditions against marauding robbers.

Knox.

File No. 812.00/2751.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 10, 1912—2 p. m.

Report received from our consul at Ciudad Juárez that at Casas Grandes anti-Madero followers are making anti-American demonstrations, particularly Mormon colonists, and demand surrender of their arms. You will bring this information at once to the attention of the Mexican Government, and, making all necessary reservation regarding injuries and damages, emphatically protest against the taking of firearms from American citizens in Mexico, either by Federals or revolutionists, on the ground that American citizens would be left without means of protecting themselves from marauding robbers during the prevailing widespread lawlessness. You will make an especially urgent request for whatever alleviative action is possible at Casas Grandes.

Knox.

File No. 812.00/2771.

The Secretary of War to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

War Department,
Washington, February 12, 1912.

Following telegram * * * from commanding general central division dated Chicago, Ill., February 11, 1912, repeated for your information:

> Steever wires to department headquarters, 10th: "Turned Mexican prisoners, captured Noria, over to proper civil authorities. Retained arms and mounts at request Mexican consul, who claims belong to his Government. Recommend they be delivered to him. * * *"
>
> Potts, Commanding.

Henry L. Stimson.

File No. 812.00/2782a.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 12, 1912.

The following instruction has to-day been sent to all consular officers in Mexico:

> Through the local press and otherwise, and as under instructions to do so, you are authorized officially to deny all foolish stories of intervention. Nothing could be further from the intention of the Government of the United States, which has the sincerest friendship for Mexico and the Mexican people, to whom it hopes will soon return the blessings of peace. This Government is not concerned with Mexico's internal political affairs, and demands nothing but the respect and protection of American life and property in Mexico. You will use the language of this instruction.
>
> You will observe the strictest impartiality and in nowise interfere between contending forces, counseling Americans in your district to act likewise. You will, however, make it entirely clear to the local authorities and all factions that American citizens and their property must be protected.
>
> Knox.

Inform the American Consulate General, Mexico City.

Knox.

File No. 312.11/94a.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 12, 1912—5 p. m.

The Department receives occasional inquiries whether it is safe for Americans to remain in particular parts of Mexico. The policy of the Department now is to leave all Americans to follow their own judgment on this question, unless at any time a well-defined part of Mexico should become sharply differentiated from the rest of the country as peculiarly perilous. In that case Americans might be advised to leave that locality.

If later on, contrary to the hopes of this Government, the situation grows steadily worse, the Department will consider the question of instructing all consular officers in Mexico to give public notice, through the press and otherwise, to all Americans in their district that, because of the prevailing lawlessness and the failure of the Government to preserve order and tranquility, all American citizens are advised to return for the present to their own country and that claims for all losses sustained by this action, or through injury to American citizens or their property, will at the proper time be presented to the Mexican Government.

Knox.

File No. 812.00/2800.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juárez (via El Paso, Tex.), February 15, 1912.

The Madero Government is recognized here, but conditions very unsettled. The Casas Grandes section (western Chihuahua), however, is still against the Government. They control and refuse to allow the operation of the Northwestern Railroad out of this city. They have undisputed control of that country to the United States line and are passing goods of every kind into Mexico via Palomas at one-half of the regular tariff duties.

A street car here loaded with United States soldiers, fully armed, after crossing the international bridge, continued its course in Mexico until stopped by the Mexican custom guards. Demonstrations of protest have continued during the day and much feeling against the Americans is in evidence. All Americans have crossed the line.

THOS. D. EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/2814.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 16, 1912—7 p. m.

Desperate condition in State of Durango, with conditions of anarchy throughout and Durango City defenseless. I have made appropriate representations in this connection in person, and am promised Federal troops. Saw the President this morning; he informed me that he intended to abandon his policy of conciliation and to exercise the utmost severity.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2820.

February 18, 1912—12 noon.

Serious conditions in Sinaloa, with many complaints from Americans and no protection outlying cities. Messengers arriving at Saltillo report 3,000 mounted rebels before Torreon. Armed revolution exists States of Pueblo and Tlaxcala, and some towns have been taken. Condition in Morelos and Guerrero the same.

Government will probably ask Congress to suspend constitutional guaranties throughout the Republic.

Vásquez Gómez, by proclamation from San Antonio, assumed provisional presidency to-day.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2840.

February 20, 1912—5 p. m.

Railroad destroyed 40 miles south of Guadalajara, and frequent revolutionary rumors throughout State of Jalisco. Increase of local garrison urgent, and representations have to-day been made to the Mexican Government. A well-known American resident on the Isthmus of Tehauntepec reports a state of affairs there which may at any moment result in a general uprising dangerous to life and property. This has been informally brought to the attention of Minister for Foreign Affairs, as have conditions in Oaxaca, where a general uprising is feared.

WILSON.

Fie No. 812.00/2833.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 20, 1912—6 p. m.

Department informed by American Smelting & Refining Co. of an especially serious condition at their plants at Velardena and Asarco. Asarco is in the hands of a drunken mob, and lives of Americans there in constant danger. Make urgent representations to Mexican Government, with usual reservation of reclamation rights, and earnestly request that sufficient troops be sent to the disturbed district to insure order. If the Mexican Government is unable to afford protection, you may in your discretion advise Americans to leave that particular locality.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2889.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 1270.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 20, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. KNOX: Since my January 23, 1912, events in Mexico have moved with startling rapidity over a wide extent of territory, indicating in the most forceful way the great measure of discontent, the general unrest, and the fulfillment in no inconsiderable degree of the predictions which I have made in former despatches relative to the inability of the present administration to carry out the political program under which it assumed the Government. * * *

At the beginning of the Madero administration the supporters of General Diaz, the leading members of the Catholic Party, the representatives of old families, and the commercial, financial, and foreign interests, realizing that Madero had been honestly elected to the presidency and eagerly desirous of the maintenance of peaceful and orderly conditions, were inclined to give him a formal though reluctant support, but his weak and vacillating policy in the suppression of lawlessness and his disposition to compromise with crime and disorder rather than to punish them have caused the profoundest feeling of disgust and distrust among these elements, and from what I am able to ascertain they would gladly assist in his downfall but for the fear of the anarchy which would most likely ensue and the possible intervention of the Government of the United States, to which most, but not all, of them are opposed. * * *

In the midst of all these difficulties the economic situation grows steadily worse. Haciendas are suffering for want of laborers to till the soil and tend the flocks. Factories are closing on account of strikes or the interruption of railway traffic. Mines are closing down on account of marauding bandits, and merchants are carrying stocks for which there are no buyers. * * * Another impending difficulty in the economic situation is the threatened strike of the 1,200 American employees on the Mexican National Railways. This strike is being considered and may be precipitated at any moment unless the Mexican Government positively recedes from the position it recently assumed requiring all railway employees to pass an examination in the Spanish language. As not 5 per cent of these American employees can speak sufficiently well to pass an examination in the Spanish language, they correctly interpreted the announcement of this requirement as the signal of the Government's determination to gradually eliminate them from the service. A strike at this moment would be appalling in its consequences, as it would close factories, interrupt all traffic with the United States, raise the price of foodstuffs, and prevent the transportation of troops. Realizing this, I went to the President with Mr. Calero and persuaded him to take my view of the situation, and he finally promised that he would recall the obnoxious order. This, however, has not yet been done, and the railway men are becoming increasingly impatient and will soon pass beyond the influence which I have been able to exert over them.

I have recently been so deeply impressed with the danger of the situation and so profoundly apprehensive of the responsibilities which the downfall of the Madero Government would place upon our Government that in addition to affording this Government every particle of information and advice which I thought of use or benefit, I have most discreetly and carefully, through reliable persons generally, but directly in two instances, endeavored to induce leading members of the Catholic Party, of the old régime, and of the commercial elements of the city to make some demonstration of a public character, coupled with a tender of service and support as might have a moral effect on the country at large. I believe such a movement is now under contemplation.

Most of the people in the south are Zapatistas, though I understand there are followers of Vásquez Gómez. In the States of Chihuahua, Durango, and a part of Coahuila, in the north, there is active rebellion, and in the States of Sonora, Zacatecas, Jalisco, and Guanajuato there is unrest and widespread lawlessness. These people call themselves adherents of Vásquez Gómez.

In the meantime the President remains serene and optimistic—an honest man, a man of high ideals and patriotic purposes, dealing with a situation which he comprehends very slightly.

I am [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2865.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, February 21, 1912—5 p. m.

With reference to your telegram of yesterday, 6 p. m., I am informed by the manager of the American Smelting & Refining Co. that all children and women have left Asarco and Velardena. With regard to the conditions in those places I have made urgent oral representations to the Mexican Government, but if the Department considers it advisable that the American men should leave as well as the women they will be so advised by me.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2856.

American Embassy,
Mexico, February 22, 1912—8 p. m.

Situation in Sinaloa is graver; entire Culiacan district has risen. Consul reports Americans being mistreated and robbed and have applied to the American consul at Mazatlan (Alger) asking when, in the absence of protection by the Mexican Government, they can expect it from the Government of the United States. Consul has been notified of the sending of this telegram, and also instructed to advise Americans where possible to remove to a place of safety. The American interests in this section are very great in property, and I believe some energetic action necessary.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2871.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate,
Ciudad Juárez (via El Paso, Tex.), February 23, 1912.

Discontent and disorganization growing. A general exodus to the United States continues and attack on Juárez expected. Railroad traffic not attempted.

Edwards.

File No. 812.00/2884a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 24, 1912—11 a. m.

The President feels that his duty and public opinion absolutely forbid toleration of any repetition of injury to Americans on American soil, as now threatened at Juárez, and he is disposed to give public warning that in such emergency he would be obliged to order troops to cross the line, as a police measure, and to disarm or drive away from Juárez any fighting forces threatening life in El Paso, thereafter returning.

Inform the Department of your judgment in reference to the proposed action for the safety of Americans in Mexico generally, and also your judgment whether or not to advise them to withdraw at this time.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2884.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, February 24, 1912—3 p. m.

Department's February 24, 11 a. m. Should the President deem it necessary for the protection of American lives to order troops across the line at Ciudad Juárez as a police measure, such action should be accompanied by a full statement of the reasons and necessities therefor, indicating the intention to immediately withdraw troops after the restoration of order. What effect this action would have with reference to the safety of Americans in Mexico generally can not be certainly stated, though in all probability there would be attempted attacks in besieged portions of the Republic, notably Guadalajara and this city, from which places there would be echoes in other parts of the Republic.

It is perhaps wise to risk the error on the side of safety and advise the withdrawal of Americans from Mexico. Department should consider the advisability of handling the matter in such manner as may procure a speedy and effectual withdrawal should attacks on Americans become wholesale and the Government unable to afford protection; and whether a large number of Americans leaving the country would not bring on the attacks which the Department desires to prevent.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2888.

American Embassy,
Mexico, February 24, 1912—9 p. m.

Supplementing my February 24, 3 p. m., I suggest the wisdom of making it clear in any possible declaration relative to the crossing of the frontier at Ciudad Juárez that it is a part of Mexico in rebellion against the Federal Government and that our action is not unfriendly but friendly in character to the constituted authorities. Further, that in case the action contemplated is taken, demonstrations in force be made on the frontier and war vessels be immediately despatched to Guaymas, Mazatlan, Manzanillo, Acapulco, and Salina Cruz and on the Atlantic to Tampico and Vera Cruz. Americans throughout the Republic are generally armed, and it will be possible to organize a force of Americans and other foreigners in this city sufficient to afford protection. I shall take steps in that direction when the necessity appears in the Department's telegrams.

Ciudad Juárez will probably be taken without a contest, but it should be well understood that if we cross the frontier line there the possibilities are that we shall ultimately have to go farther.

Intervention which is not thorough and which will not secure permanent guaranties will be resented by Americans in Mexico. The feasibility of instructing me to warn Mexican Government against any contemplated action at Ciudad Juárez which might involve the loss of American lives in El Paso should also be considered.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2825.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

No. 121.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 26, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's note No. 1041, of the 16th instant,[1] written in pursuance of telegraphic instructions from your Government, in which you request this Government to give a precise explanation as to the passage of 25 American soldiers across the frontier at Ciudad Juárez and into Mexican territory.

In reply I have the honor to say that this Government desires to express to you its sincere regret for this unfortunate occurrence and to request that your excellency will be good enough to convey this expression to the Mexican Government.

The full details of this untoward incident are not now available, but a recital of the facts as they are at present known will be sufficient, it is believed, to satisfy your excellency's Government in its desires for an explanation. It appears that on the morning of the 15th instant, Lieutenant Feild and 19 men of the Eighteenth Infantry were ordered to proceed to the Santa Fé Street Bridge, in El Paso, to relieve a detachment already stationed there. In carrying out these orders Lieutenant Feild started for his destination in a street-railway car. The route of the car line is south on Stanton Street, across the Stanton Bridge, and into Ciudad Juarez, where it turns to come north to Santa Fé Bridge and the American side. Being ignorant of the topography of El Paso and the route of the car line, and assuming that he was entitled to ride all the way to his destination, Lieutenant Feild did not heed the notification of the corporal stationed at the Stanton Street Bridge that he should dismount and walk to the Santa Fé Bridge, and so remained in the car and thus crossed into Mexico. Colonel Steever, who is in command of the United States forces at El Paso, has made an appropriate apology to the Mexican consul at El Paso for the error of Lieutenant Feild, who has been subjected to the action of a court-martial and will be suitably punished for his unfortunate action.

---

[1] Not printed. See consul's telegram from Ciudad Juárez, Feb. 15, second paragraph.

In conclusion I have the honor to again express to your excellency the regret of this Government and to say that it is hoped, in view of the explanation herein made, that the incident may be considered closed.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2865.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 26, 1912—1 p. m.

The Department's February 20, 6 p. m., referred to in your February 21, 5 p. m., contemplated American citizens, that is, men as well as women and children.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2942.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 27, 1912—5 p. m.

A member of the National Permanent Commission stated to a member of this Embassy staff last night that if American troops crossed the boundary at Ciudad Juarez, Americans here would be generally massacred. I called upon Foreign Minister Calero this morning and asked for guaranties for the protection of Americans and other foreigners in Mexico, informing him that unless this was done I should feel obliged, with the greatest regret, to publicly warn Americans of their danger. At the same time I called his attention to the danger to which this would subject Mexicans from intemperate elements in the border States. Mr. Calero said that the most minute precautions had been taken for the protection of Americans and other foreigners in this city and other places, but that his great fear was of what might occur at isolated points. He promised to confer with the President and the governor of the Federal District and see me later in the day.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2943.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 27, 1912—6 p. m.

Emilio Vásquez Gómez, who is now in San Antonio, is apparently the leader of the revolutionary movement directed against this Government. It is evident that in our interests as well as in the interest of the Mexican Government he should either be expelled from American territory or, under a liberal interpretation of the present neutrality laws, subjected to imprisonment. Either course would have a beneficial effect.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2940.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 27, 1912—10 p. m.

Consular agent at Torreón reports conditions throughout the Laguna district very critical, with provisions hardly sufficient for two weeks. Situation dangerous at mines and haciendas, which are now completely isolated. More than 1,500 foreigners in Torreón and no railway and infrequent telegraph service. Says 53 Americans are holding the Velardena mining camp against insurgents and have driven them off, but expect them to return in larger force, and ask protection. I have made vigorous representations and have advised the German minister, who is deeply interested.

In the State of Vera Cruz situation grows worse generally and a band of insurgents, estimated from 1,000 to 2,000, is invading the Tamaulipas and Vera Cruz oil district, where millions of American money are invested and a large American population resides. Have made representations.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2959.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 28, 1912—10 p. m.

Mr. Calero asks me to inquire whether the open telegraphic letter of Emilio Vásquez Gómez to President Madero,[1] sent him San Antonio, and published in the Associated Press here and in the United States, would not constitute sufficient grounds to justify the Government of the United States in taking immediate action against him.

I am also requested to ask our Government to exercise full rigor with reference to the importation of arms and ammunition at Ciudad Juárez.

WILSON.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

File No. 812.00/2956.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juarez (via El Paso, Tex.), February 28, 1912.

Ciudad Juárez is now in the hands of the anti-Maderists. They call themselves Liberalistas. The forces of General Salazar and

---

[1] [From the New York Times of February 25, 1912.]

When you became President only part of the State of Morelos was in rebellion. To-day, on account of the action of the Government, this rebellion has spontaneously extended to the greater part of the country and will continue to extend. This is true.

In the conscience of citizens, foreigners, and yourself and for reasons we will not discuss, this condition makes the return of peace impossible. The result, if you continue resisting the numerous revolutionary movements by military force, will not be in pursuit of a peace already impossible; and your resistance will oblige all Mexicans to continue killing each other without other result, for you, than to assume the grave responsibility of causing the shedding of more Mexican blood, to prolong and make more intense the state of disorder, and each day to make more distant the return of peace, which all desire so urgently. In this respect your responsibility to the country, the world, and history is immense.

To obviate such great evils and the perils which such things can only engender, I believe it to be my patriotic duty to appeal to your patriotism, inviting you, as I have, in the name of the country to return to the revolution the power which it gave to you, and which return of power I ask to-day, according to the "plan of Tacubaya," in the name of and to comply with the "plan of San Luis Potosi." In this way there would be no further killing of our brothers, these armed revolutionary movements would cease at once, and peace would descend on the country, with tranquillity and confidence for all interests, and for all consciences, which it is urgent to obtain and assure.

Will your patriotism give the country this great blessing? Upon you it exclusively depends.

Rojas have now joined General Campa, making about 1,200 men and 300 horses here. They have set up a local government and will collect duty on imports. They are orderly and commit no depredations.

It is rumored that General Villa, with his command of 500 men, sent out by the Government to quiet the disturbance, have declared against Madero and will in a few days join those now in this city and march against Chihuahua.

EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/3004.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 29, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: Referring to our conversation on the 28th instant, when you again urged that this Government take some drastic action in relation to Mr. Vásquez[1] at San Antonio, Texas, it is my duty to inform your excellency that, although the greatest circumspection is being exercised, there has not, up to the present time, been proven on the part of Mr. Vásquez any act which falls within the statutes of the United States.

I may remark that your excellency will gain a clear idea as to the legal aspects of such cases by referring to the correspondence of the Department with your Embassy during the Madero revolution; for example, the letter of December 1, 1910,[2] aide-mémoire of January 23, 1911,[3] and the letter of June 7, 1911.[4]

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.000/3005.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 29, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: When I had the pleasure of seeing you yesterday you said that the Mexican Government had decided to close Juárez to international commerce, and that you were instructed to request that the Government of the United States give orders to the Federal authorities in El Paso absolutely to prevent shipments of contraband of war to the insurrectionists in Juárez.

It will at once be evident to your excellency's Government that the suggestion now made regarding contraband of war would immediately involve such considerations as that whether, in fact, there was a state of belligerency in the present situation.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] Vásquez Gómez.

[2] See For. Rel. 1911, pp. 370–371.

[3] Id., p. 303.

[4] Id., pp. 501–502.

File No. 812.00/2973.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, February 29, 1912—7 p. m.

Your February 20, 6 p. m. The President of Mexico expressed his opinion to-day that the situation in Mexico was improving greatly. He said that soldiers had arrived at Velardena and that all Americans in that place are safe. He stated that in Morelos and the south the situation was rapidly improving and that he expected that soon there would be in the Laguna district ample troops to restore order. He added that he would give his immediate attention to the situation in the oil district and that he would send a gunboat to Tuxpan. While I have no information to corroborate the optimistic views of the President, the Department is entitled to them, I believe, in drawing its own conclusions.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2959.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 1, 1912—7 p. m.

The Department has addressed two notes to the Mexican Embassy relating to your February 28, 10 p. m. One states that no act has been proved on the part of Vásquez Gómez which falls within the statutes of the United States; the other, that the suggestion of the Mexican Government as to the prohibition of the exportation of "contraband of war" raises considerations as to whether a state of belligerency exists in Mexico. Otherwise this Government can find no ground for altering the position it assumed last year when Maderistas were in control of Juárez—namely, that exportations to Juárez can not be prohibited.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2990.

Department of State,
Washington, March 1, 1912—5 p. m.

A telegram from consul at Chihuahua via El Paso, dated February 29, states Americans at Velardena, besieged since 23d, had a fight with rebels on 27th, driving them off, but that the need of immediate protection or escort to Torreón is imperative.

Immediately and most urgently represent to Mexican Government that the needs of Americans at Velardena must be given preference and that an adequate force be sent at once to their relief.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 312.112 R 56/11.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, March 1, 1912—6 p. m.

Nine American citizens, including G. P. Robinson, wife and son, and one British subject, fled before threatened assaults at the Suriana mine in the State of Guerrero, took refuge in Telolcapan and urgently requested aid. I made urgent personal representations to the Department of Gobernacion, which sent instructions to General Vego to furnish an escort. British Minister has made similar representations. I will also make usual representations to Foreign Office.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2994.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 1, 1912—10 p. m.

I answered Department's March 1, 5 p. m., in my February 29, 7 p. m. Representations were made several days ago, and the best information I have now is that a military force is at Velardena and found the Americans all well.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3008.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 2, 1912—12 noon.

Refugees arriving at Acapulco report intolerable conditions in Chiapas. Many American planters in Tabasco without protection are preparing to leave. Our military attaché believes conditions not improved in Morelos or Guerrero. The situation grows steadily worse in Tlaxcala and Puebla and there is now organized rebellion in Vera Cruz, where great devastation is being committed. For the first time I have to report disorders and armed movements in Tamaulipas. Practically all of the States of Chihuahua and Durango, with a part of Coahuila and a large portion of Zacatecas, have apparently passed out of the control of the Federal Government. In Sinaloa and Michoacan there are armed movements and in Hidalgo trouble in anticipated. The American emigration from all parts of the Republic, and especially from this city, continues to be very heavy.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3005d.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 2, 1912—2 p. m.

Referring to all recent telegraphic correspondence, you are now instructed in your discretion to inform Americans that the Embassy deems it its duty to advise them to withdraw from any particular localities where conditions or prospects of lawlessness so threaten personal safety as to make withdrawal the part of common prudence, specifying localities, if any, from which withdrawal may at any time seem advisable, and stating that in any such cases consuls may take such charge of abandoned effects as may be possible under the circumstances.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3005c.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 2, 1912—3 p. m.

The following proclamation by the President is promulgated to-day:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas serious disturbances and forcible resistance to the authorities of the established Government exist in certain portions of Mexico; and

Whereas under these conditions it is the duty of all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States to refrain from the commission of acts prohibited by the law thereto relating and subversive of the tranquility of a country with which the United States is at peace; and

Whereas the laws of the United States prohibit under such circumstances all persons within and subject to their jurisdiction from taking part contrary to said laws in any such disturbances adversely to such established government; and

Whereas by express enactment if two or more persons conspire to commit an offense against the United States, any act of one conspirator to effect the object of such conspiracy renders all the conspirators liable to fine and imprisonment; and

Whereas there is reason to believe that citizens of the United States and others within their jurisdiction fail to apprehend the meaning and operation of the applicable laws of the United States as authoritatively interpreted and may be misled into participation in transactions which are violations of said laws and which will render them liable to the severe penalties provided for such violations;

Now, therefore, in recognition of the laws governing and controlling in such matters as well as in discharge of the obligations of the United States towards a friendly country, and as a measure of precaution, and to the end that citizens of the United States and all others within their jurisdiction may be deterred from subjecting themselves to legal forfeitures and penalties;

I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, do hereby admonish all such citizens and other persons to abstain from every violation of the laws hereinbefore referred to, and do hereby warn them that all violations of such laws will be rigorously prosecuted; and I do hereby enjoin upon all officers of the United States charged with the execution of such laws the utmost diligence in preventing violations thereof and in bringing to trial and punishment any offenders against the same; and finally I do hereby give notice that all persons owing allegiance to the United States who may take part in the disturbances now existing in Mexico, unless in the necessary defense of their persons or property, or who shall otherwise engage in acts subversive of the tranquillity of that country, will do so at their peril and that they can in no wise obtain any protection from the Government of the United States against the appropriate legal consequences of their acts, in so far as such consequences are in accord with equitable justice and humanity and the enlightened principles of international law.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this 2d day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-sixth.

[SEAL.] Wm. H. Taft.

By the President:
Huntington Wilson,
Acting Secretary of State.

The foregoing proclamation is not a declaration of neutrality, nor a recognition of a state of belligerency in Mexico; it is merely an admonition and warning to all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States and to American citizens generally to obey carefully and strictly the laws of the United States and to hold themselves wholly aloof from all participation of whatever kind in the present disturbances in Mexico. You will make all this quite clear to the Mexican Government.

Coincidental with this promulgation the Department is giving to the press this afternoon the following, not as a statement but for their guidance:

> The following telegram was made public by the Department of State to-day [Department's telegram of March 2, 2 p. m.]:
>
> Strong hope is expressed that the Government of President Madero will soon be able to put an end to the brigandage and disorder in those parts of Mexico where these factors are the most serious aspects of the insurrectionary outbreaks and that in this way Mexico will gradually return to normal conditions.
>
> The President's proclamation adjuring Americans and all other persons within American jurisdiction to hold aloof and to make no use of American territory for the disturbance of the neighboring Republic is fresh evidence of the determination of the administration to let the Mexicans settle their own difficulties, without influence, one way or the other, from outside. It is hoped that good may result through making this clear and through breaking up, so far as possible, various propaganda being carried on in this country.
>
> It will be observed that the proclamation is not a declaration of neutrality nor is it in any way a recognition of a state of belligerency in Mexico; it is merely an admonition and warning to all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States, and to American citizens generally, to obey carefully and strictly the laws of the United States, and to hold themselves wholly aloof from all participation of whatever kind in the present disturbances in Mexico.
>
> The situation in Mexico changes from day to day, conditions being fairly good in large areas, but there have been so much lawlessness and so many depredations upon property in certain localities that a good many Americans have left the worst districts, and a great many inquiries and representations are reaching both the Department of State and the Embassy at Mexico City. It has, therefore, been thought best to authorize the Ambassador, who has the best opportunities to know the local situation, to advise any Americans, when he thinks it wise to do so, to leave this or that particular locality where the lawless element may have gained temporary ascendancy.
>
> As is well known, it has always been and is the determined purpose of the President absolutely to avoid any intervention in Mexico. This fact is understood to have actuated the Department of State in thinking it right that any Americans in Mexico who may be resident in really dangerous places should be placed in a position to consider their temporary removal to be a measure of prudence.
>
> The attitude of the administration, as shown by the President's proclamation, and by the instructions published to-day, is taken as fresh evidence of the fixed policy of nonintervention, and it is hoped that there will now be an end to foolish rumors of intervention.

This is communicated to you so that you may cause the friendly, patient, and considerate attitude of this Government to be fully appreciated and prevent misinterpretation.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3053a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 2, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: I inclose for your excellency's information a copy of a proclamation by the President of the United States which is being promulgated to-day, which will make evident to your excellency the great desire of the President to prevent any improper use of American territory as a basis for participation in anyway whatsoever in the present Mexican disturbances.

I beg leave to inclose also, for your excellency's information, copy of what I shall give to the press to-day, not as a statement but for their guidance.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3027.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua (via Eagle Pass, Tex.), March 3, 1912—3 p. m.

All the reports from border are alarming. Excitement high here on account intervention rumors resulting from meager news arriving by telegraph from Paso del Norte of President's proclamation advising Americans to keep out of danger zone. This is construed as warning to leave country, and private messages give color to this construction. Governor has disappeared. Villa is attacking Orozco, a few miles from town, this morning. Former for Government and the latter against.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/3005d.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 3, 1912—8 p. m.

In a press report dated March 2 from Mexico City there is what purports to be a quoted statement from the American Embassy specifying certain localities as dangerous. The quoted statement says "the Department of State deems it its duty to advise all Americans," etc., instead of "the Embassy deems it its duty," etc. The alleged statement also quotes the Embassy as implying that our action reduces the responsibility of the Mexican Government. The Department fears that the Mexican press, especially along the border, may be misinterpreting the President's proclamation and the Department's telegram to the Embassy and printing distorted versions. You should secure public emphasis of the absence of any intention whatsoever on the part of this Government to intervene in Mexico, and if there is any chance of misunderstanding in the consular districts the Embassy should send telegrams to make absolutely clear to the consular officers a situation which is so clear in the light of the Department's telegram of yesterday.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3018.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.—Paraphrases.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, March 4, 1912—4 p. m.

I gave to the press the following statement on March 2, which may serve as response to Department's March 3, 8 p. m.:

> Owing to the disturbed condition in Mexico and the lawlessness prevailing in many sections with which the Government, with the best intentions, can not at all times cope, the Department of State at Washington deems it its duty to advise all Americans at present residing in localities known to be dangerous or in isolated spots where protection can not be afforded to remove without delay therefrom, leaving in all cases, where possible, their property or abandoned effects in charge of the nearest American consular officer.
>
> For the present the American Embassy indicates specifically as dangerous localities in the north the States of Chihuahua, Durango, a part of Coahuila, and a part of Zacatecas; and in the south, the States of Morelos, Guerrero; the district of Culiacan, in the State of Sinaloa, and certain undefined districts in the States of Vera Cruz and Puebla. Americans residing in these localities should immediately withdraw therefrom, pending the reestablishment of order and the procurement of guaranties for the safety of their lives and property.
>
> The purpose of this notice is not only to secure the safety of American lives, but also to reduce in some measure the responsibility of and demands upon the Mexican Government.

The word "responsibility," as the Department will see, is not used in the sense of the press reports referred to. The explanation of the Department contained in the Department's March 2, 3 p. m., I had inserted verbatim in the leading papers here, along with the proclamation. I have not heard of any misinterpretations or criticisms of this Embassy's notice, and I think the President's proclamation is now fully understood by the Mexican Government and public generally.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3033.

American Embassy,
Mexico, March 4, 1912—10 p. m.

The Mexican Government understands and appreciates in its right sense the President's proclamation and has authoritatively said so in the press. Unfortunately there are many foolish Mexicans and Americans who construe the proclamation wrongly, and these misconceptions I am endeavoring to correct. A very large emigration of American women and children from Mexico City is taking place, due to malicious rumors and publications that Mrs. Wilson was leaving Mexico. This also I am endeavoring to correct. The news throughout the country is not reassuring.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3027.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 4, 1912.

Your March 3, 3 p. m. Make the widest and most emphatic public denial of any intention whatsoever on the part of this Government to intervene in Mexico. Make this statement as under express instructions to do so.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3016.

The Secretary of War to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, March 4, 1912.

SIR: Brigadier General Duncan, commanding Department Texas, telegraphs from Fort Sam Houston, Tex., March 4, the following:

> From Colonel Steever:
>
> "Fighting in Chihuahua began this morning. Villa, loyal to Madero, attacked Orozco, who quit Madero 1st instant. Salazar, appealed to by Orozco, is entraining men to go south to Orozco's assistance. Probably over 4,000 rebels in Juarez, largely mounted. Additions daily. More disorder in Juarez not improbable."

H. L. STIMSON.

File No. 812.71/8a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 4, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: Referring to Señor de la Cueva's call at the Department this morning, when he saw Mr. Dearing and asked him whether Mexican mails routed through Ciudad Juárez could be delivered to the Mexican consul at El Paso, Tex., for distribution, I beg to inform you that under the rules of international law a foreign port in the hands of insurgents (except where ingress or egress from such port is physically prevented by blockade or otherwise by the parent government) is regarded as if it were still in the hands of the parent government and so open to the intercourse and commerce of other nations.

This Government does not feel, therefore, that it has any legal basis for prohibiting the routing of mail through Ciudad Juárez when that is the only point through which mails destined to that section of the country can be dispatched. Moreover, as it would be manifestly improper for a postmaster of a foreign country to exercise his functions within the territory of the United States, still more would it be improper for such functions to be exercised by a foreign consul; and accordingly mail pouches can not properly be delivered to a consul. I may add, however, that official mail addressed to officials of the established government can probably be delivered to a consul, and that if mail can reach its destination through any other point than Ciudad Juárez it may be so routed.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3057.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua (via El Paso, Tex.), March 5, 1912—11 a. m.

The warning to leave isolated points issued to Americans by Ambassador can not be communicated to the hundreds of Americans in remote mining sections without special messengers. I request definite instructions. Railway communications closed nearly everywhere. Dictatorship exists here now. Communications closed south in order to prevent apprehended advance Federals against Chihuahua.

MARION LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/3054.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 5, 1912—2 p. m.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs has again called my attention most urgently to the circumstance that the Mexican Government is imperiled by the enormous importation of arms and ammunition through the port of Ciudad Juárez, and asked me to call the attention of my Government to the fact that the belligerency of the Madero revolutionary movement was practically recognized by the Díaz Government at a certain stage of its progress, but that the present Mexican Government has no intention of treating with the rebels in arms but intends fighting to the bitter end, realizing that they are fighting not only for the maintenance of the present Government but for the integrity of Mexico, as the President's advisers believe that only anarchy could follow the fall of this Government; in that event they doubt that the Government of the United States could deny protection to its great interests in Mexico and its duty to civilization by refusing to intervene. Mr. Calero asked that our Government might find a way to stop the importation of arms and ammunition in some thoroughly effectual manner.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3059.

The Mexican Ambassador to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

MEXICAN EMBASSY,
Washington, March 5, 1912—8.30 p. m.

In compliance with instructions I have received from my country I have the honor to say to you that my Government does not advert to contraband of war, but only asks that, since the rebels are not belligerents, the introduction of arms and war material through the port of El Paso be prevented, as said introduction would involve a violation of the neutrality laws of the United States. I beg you kindly to apprize me of the decision of the Government of the Nation of which you are a part, and I can not but expect that, in justice and in view of this Government's friendship for that of Mexico, it will be favorable, so that I may forward it by telegraph to my Government.

GILBERTO CRESPO Y MARTÍNEZ.

File No. 812.00/3057.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 6, 1912—4 p. m.

Your March 5. The Embassy, in advising Americans to leave Chihuahua, is acting upon information from your Consulate as to conditions in your district, and must, from the very nature of the case, therefore, depend upon your discretion both as to the necessity of warning Americans to leave particular localities and the means of conveying this warning to them.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3087a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 6, 1912—7 p. m.

All Latin-American missions have been instructed as follows:

> The Department desires that in case the disturbed conditions in Mexico which have prevailed for the past year or more attract public attention or become the subject of conversation you will not neglect any suitable occasion in conversation to promote appreciation of the friendly and patient attitude of this Government. Conditions in Mexico are undeniably bad and both Americans and foreigners are in a precarious situation. The United States has been obliged to station some troops on the frontier, but merely[1] as a deterrent to prevent a repetition of the occurrence of last year, when firing into American territory from Mexico resulted in the killing and injuring of American citizens on American soil, a repetition of which, as was recently threatened at El Paso, could hardly be tolerated.
>
> This Government is continuing to exercise the greatest forbearance under the great difficulties presented. The President has issued a proclamation warning and admonishing all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States and to American citizens generally strictly to obey the law by holding absolutely aloof from the disturbances in Mexico and the Embassy at Mexico City was authorized in its discretion to advise American citizens to leave such most dangerous places as the Embassy might specify. The President's determined purpose of no intervention has been again emphasized.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] For an amendment to this sentence see, post, telegram of March 20 to the American Minister to Cuba.

File No. 812.00/3068.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 6, 1912—10 p. m.

The municipal council of Mexico City has issued a call to all friends of order, foreign or native, to arm themselves for the purpose of assisting the Government in maintaining order. I do not myself regard the danger here as immediate or great, but precautionary measures may be wise in preventing what many fear. I therefore intend taking the same action, but more effectively, which the Department instructed me to take during the revolution against General Diaz.[1] In the discussion with my European colleagues they expressed disapproval of the course of our Government in permitting the shipment of arms and ammunition across the frontier to the revolutionists.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3090.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 7, 1912—10 p. m.

The American colony in Mexico City held a meeting to-day and appointed a committee to act in conjunction with the committees of other colonies for the protection of foreign interests. As the local authorities have advised all foreigners to arm for protection and as the governor of the Federal District has advised me of his willingness to arm the foreigners, and as other diplomatic representatives are attending the meetings of their nationals, I deemed it my duty to be present and during the meeting, which was attended by from 500 to 1,000 men, I counseled all Americans to a strict observance of the law, obedience to local authorities, avoidance of participation in Mexican politics, and to tender their services to the local government solely in the interest of law and order and for the protection of life and property. This rule will be strictly observed by all foreigners. I think it advisable that the Department should advise me exactly what my course should be in this situation.

WILSON.

File No. 312.115D69.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Juárez.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 7, 1912.

The Department has received from the Dolores Mines Co., El Paso, a request[2] that you take charge $51,000 worth silver and gold bullion and harbor in consulate until it can be legally exported. They have been informed that under existing conditions Department can not authorize or permit you to receive on deposit bullion or money.

---

[1] See For. Rel. 1911, pp. 477, 479, 481, 489, 492–493, 497–498, 506.

[2] Not printed.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3103.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 8, 1912—10 p. m.

The representatives of the great powers met at the Embassy to-day and requested me to ask the Mexican Government for definite guaranties of safety for foreigners in Mexico City.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/221.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 8, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's telegram of the 5th instant, in which, in connection with your excellency's memorandum of February 28[1] and my informal reply thereto of February 29, regarding the introduction of arms and munitions of war into the Mexican port of Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, you state that your Government does not refer to contraband of war but wishes only, in view of the fact that rebels are not belligerents, that the introduction through the port of El Paso of arms and munitions of war be prevented, since their introduction would involve a violation of the neutrality statutes of the United States.

In reply I have the honor to inform your excellency that notwithstanding the fact that the Government of the United States entertains the most friendly regard for the Government of Mexico, and is actuated in the present situation by a sincere desire to fulfill every obligation resting upon it by the utmost demands of justice, it is not able, after a very careful consideration of the matter, to take the same view regarding the introduction of arms and ammunition into Ciudad Juarez as, it may be inferred, is held by your excellency's Government. The Government of the United States has the sincerest desire and intention of enforcing the laws relating to such transactions not only with the utmost impartiality, but with the greatest rigor, and to that end it has taken, is now taking, and will continue to take every legal available means to see that its duty in the premises is fully met, but your excellency will, of course, appreciate that it would be most unwise and unsafe, as well as repugnant to morality, for this Government or its agents to attempt to take any action which was not warranted by law.

---

[1] Not printed.

In this connection I am constrained to call to your attention the obvious fact that since there is now no recognized state of belligerency in Mexico the rules and laws governing warfare and the conduct of neutrals are not involved. In other words, under the present situation, so far as the commerce of Mexico with other countries is concerned, the status is one of peace and no interdiction of any kind exists against commerce in any form outside the jurisdiction of Mexico. If any commerce now actually carried on is contrary to the laws of Mexico, as now existing and in force, it seems quite obvious that the Government of Mexico must itself enforce such laws within its own jurisdiction. But even if there were now a state of recognized belligerency, I beg to call to your excellency's attention the fact that commercial traffic in arms and ammunition would be in no wise prohibited. This is shown by the provisions of The Hague convention "Respecting the Rights and Duties of Neutral Powers and Persons in case of War on Land," which provides in article 7 that—

> A neutral power is not called upon to prevent the export or transport, on behalf of one or other of the belligerents, of arms, munitions of war, or, in general, of anything which can be of use to an army or a fleet.

An earlier article provides that—

> Corps of combatants can not be formed nor recruiting agencies opened on the territory of a neutral power to assist the belligerents. (Art. 4.)

But, as a still later article stipulates—

> The responsibility of a neutral power is not engaged by the fact of persons crossing the frontier separately to offer their services to one of the belligerents. (Art. 6.)

Your excellency will thus observe that even if a state of war existed the acts concerning which representations are made would not be contrary to the rules of international law, and, as your excellency is aware, it is the well-known practice of merchants of neutral countries to furnish munitions of war to one or both of contesting belligerents.

The situation is somewhat different, however, with reference to the so-called neutrality statutes which have been enacted by this Government, which, going beyond the provisions of international law, as set forth in the above-quoted extracts of the convention, do make illegal certain acts specified in the statutes, even when no state of belligerency exists, such acts being directed against the established government of a country with which this Government is at peace. But, as your excellency will at once recognize, and as has been heretofore declared by this Department, the duties of neutrality under the law of nations can not be either expanded or contracted by national legislation. The United States, for instance, has here in excessive caution required from its citizens duties more stringent than those imposed by the law of nations; but those statutes, while they may make offenders penally liable in this country, do not themselves put either these persons or this Government under any extraterritorial obligation. Our own statutes bind only our own Government and citizens and those within our jurisdiction. If they impose on us a larger duty than is imposed upon us by international law, they do not correspondingly enlarge our duties to foreign nations. Since, therefore, these statutes only qualify as offenses certain specified transactions which would not otherwise have such character, and, therefore, since under these circumstances only those acts are bad which are really prohibited, it is evidently necessary that the act complained of should clearly fall within the statutes in order that it may be regarded as illegal.

Your excellency will observe that these so-called neutrality statutes do not, any more than the general laws of neutrality, prohibit the mere commercial exportation of arms and ammunition, and, that being true, the Executive is, under them, powerless, however much it might in any given case wish to do otherwise, legally to prevent this traffic so long as it remains purely commercial and is unconnected with any other act prohibited by the statutes.

It will therefore be quite clear that, under the principles of international law, as above indicated, as well as under the so-called neutrality statutes of this country, the mere commercial sale of supplies in El Paso to Mexicans, whether insurrectos or supporters of the Government, and their simple delivery across the border, can not be looked upon as a violation of international law or of the so-called neutrality statutes. This Government can not but admit that the possession of a border port like Ciudad Juarez by insurrecto forces gives the insurrectos a great advantage; but the duties and rights of this Government and of persons within its jurisdiction to carry on legitimate business are in nowise changed.

I therefore, have the honor to inform your excellency that unless guns and ammunition and any other merchandise are sent to Ciudad Juarez under circumstances showing that their transportation is within the inhibitions of the law and the statutes above referred to, the Executive has no option but to allow them to pass into Mexican territory as the subject of legitimate commerce.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3090.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 9, 1912—7 p. m.

Inform Department more precisely as to matters mentioned in your March 6, 10 p. m., and March 7, 10 p. m., as to reason why local authorities are advising foreigners to arm for protection, as to ability of authorities to prevent or control mob outbreaks, and as to what is the particular danger feared.

The Department approves the course you have followed as reported and perceives no necessity for instructing you specifically. It will continue to depend upon your discretion in such new situations as may come about, and will expect you as usual to confer with it whenever circumstances demand explicit instructions. For the present the Embassy should confine itself to admonishing Americans who are perfecting their plans for defense that they are taking these measures solely to protect themselves against the lawlessness of possible mob outbreaks, and particularly that except for the absolute protection of their lives they should most carefully guard against being drawn into the doing of any acts which may be construed as partisan, pointing out the disastrous effects such acts would undoubtedly have upon the lives and property of Americans elsewhere in Mexico.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3124.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 10, 1912—11 a. m.

The injunctions contained in the second paragraph of the Department's March 9, 7 p. m., have already been carried out in precisely the manner suggested. An international organization will be perfected as soon as possible. A representative committee has been formed, which will take no step, either in policy or action, except after consultation with me, and I shall only permit them the most unquestionably correct procedure. The British, German, Spanish, French, and Italian colonies and the Mexico City Chamber of Commerce are organizing.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3154.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 11, 1912—10 p. m.

The German Minister called to-day to inform me that he had been instructed to pursue a course analogous to that of our Government in removal of Germans from dangerous localities and if necessary from the country.

The organization of Americans and other foreigners in Mexico City is going forward with great success.

The President's proclamation, after being fully read and understood, has had a most beneficial effect.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3194.

The Mexican Ambassador to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

No. 1143.]

MEXICAN EMBASSY,
Washington, March 11, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: In compliance with instructions received by telegraph from the Department of Foreign Relations of my country, I have the honor to say to your excellency that the Government of Mexico is making energetic efforts, with every means at its command, to suppress the revolutionary movement of the low classes of the country, the only ones that Emilio Vázquez Gómez has succeeded in stirring up from San Antonio, Tex., for the great majority of public opinion has no desire but the earliest restoration of peace. If the agitation has found any echo, chiefly among a portion of the people of the State of Chihuahua, it is due solely to the ease with which arms, munitions, and war material can be obtained from private persons in this country, find their way into Ciudad Juarez, and fall into the hands of the said rebels, no way having yet been found to stop that trade. The result is that while the Mexican Government is concerning itself, as in duty bound, with the tranquillity of the country and all its inhabitants, among whom are a number of citizens of the United States, and with looking after the inviolability of the property belonging to each one, those who rebel against its authority easily obtain from this country all the elements necessary to inflict direct or indirect injury upon the residents of Mexican territory.

It is to be deplored that the neutrality laws of this country do not duly answer their purposes, because there are many important points they do not cover; but this does not and can not afford sufficient ground for the Government and people of the United States, great and good friends of Mexico, not to take any measure calculated to prevent the consummation of acts which, like those above pointed out, come within the province of international duties. The United States, through its Secretary of State Hamilton Fish, said to the British Minister Motley (7 Moore's International Law Digest, 1015): "No sovereign power can rightfully plead the defects of its own domestic penal statutes as justification or extenuation of an international wrong to another sovereign power."

Wherefore, invoking the same principle laid down by this country when it found itself in a similar case, it is to be hoped, and the Government of my country has warrant to hope, that measures will be ordered by this country's Government, of which your excellency forms part, intended to prevent the continuance of the acts above noted, in view of the cordiality and good friendly relations existing between the two countries.

Awaiting your honorable answer, I have [etc.]

GILBERTO CRESPO Y MARTÍNEZ.

File No. 812.00/3226.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 14, 1912—11 a. m.

Following telegram from Consul Alger at Mazatlan:

MARCH 13—11 A. M.

Americans, also Mexicans, arriving; some barely escaped death. Many robbed and quite destitute. Government powerless except in cities; entire southern district invaded by bandits. War vessel Mazatlan would relieve the situation and be welcomed by all nationalities, including Mexicans.

Will Department please telegraph me or Consul Alger its decision?

WILSON.

Joint resolution of Congress.

[Public Resolution.—No. 22. S. J. Res. 89.]

JOINT RESOLUTION To amend the joint resolution to prohibit the export of coal or other material used in war from any seaport of the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the joint resolution to prohibit the export of coal or other material used in war from any seaport of the United States, approved April twenty-second, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, be, and hereby is, amended to read as follows:

That whenever the President shall find that in any American country conditions of domestic violence exist which are promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to export except under such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to such country until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress.

Sec. 2. That any shipment of material hereby declared unlawful after such a proclamation shall be punishable by fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both.

Approved, March 14, 1912.

Proclamation by the President.

By the President of the United States of America.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a Joint Resolution of Congress approved March 14th, 1912, reads and provides as follows: "That whenever the President shall find that in any American country conditions of domestic violence exist which are promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to export, except under such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe, any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to such country until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress";

And whereas it is provided by Section II of the said Joint Resolution "that any shipment of material hereby declared unlawful after such a proclamation shall be punishable by fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both":

Now, therefore, I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, acting under and by virtue of the authority conferred in me by the said Joint Resolution of Congress, do hereby declare and proclaim that I have found that there exist in Mexico such conditions of domestic violence promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States as contemplated by the said Joint Resolution; and I do hereby admonish all citizens of the United States and every person to abstain from every violation of the provisions of the Joint Resolution above set forth, hereby made applicable to Mexico, and I do hereby warn them that all violations of such provisions will be rigorously prosecuted. And I do hereby enjoin upon all officers of the United States, charged with the execution of the laws thereof, the utmost diligence in preventing violations of the said Joint Resolution and this my Proclamation issued thereunder, and in bringing to trial and punishment any offenders against the same.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this fourteenth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-sixth.

Wm. H. Taft.

[seal.]

By the President:
Huntington Wilson,
Acting Secretary of State.

File No. 312.112 R56/9.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 762.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 14, 1912.

Sir: The Department has received your No. 1247 of the 2nd ultimo, transmitting a copy of a letter addressed by you to the Consul General at Mexico City in regard to the protection of Mr. G. P. Robinson, in which you indicate the attitude of your Embassy toward requests for protection by American citizens in districts in which the Mexican Government has declared martial law.

The Department notes your statement to the Consul General that > Americans in Mexico are entitled under the rules of international law to the same rights and treatment as are accorded by the Government to Mexican citizens, and as the Mexican Government has declared a state of siege in this district it has virtually confessed that it can not afford adequate protection to Mexican citizens.

In this connection your attention is invited to the following statement of the law on this point as it is set forth by Mr. Blaine, Secretary of State, to the American Chargé d'Affaires at your post, in instruction No. 430, dated January 5, 1891:

> To sustain this denial of redress Mr. Mariscal has invoked the familiar rule that the measure of protection and of privilege to which foreigners residing in a country are entitled is that which the government of the country accords to its own citizens. As a general proposition, this rule is undoubtedly acceptable; but its applicability is by no means universal. Where the question to be determined is the measure of private rights and remedies under the municipal law, the rule above stated may, with certain well-settled exceptions, readily be adopted. But, where a government asserts that its citizens in a foreign country have not been duly protected, it is not competent for the government of that country to answer that it has not protected its own citizens, and thus to make the failure to perform one duty the excuse for the neglect of another.
>
> It is true that in this way foreigners may enjoy an advantage over the citizens of a country. This, however, is not a matter for foreign governments to consider. They have no power to regulate the relations of another government to its citizens; nevertheless, they are bound to ask that their own may be protected.
>
> (Moore's Digest, vol. vi, pages 803–804.)

I am [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.113/218.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 15, 1912—5 p. m.

It is impossible for the arms and ammunition committee of the American colony organization to secure sufficient arms and ammunition for their purposes. They have formally requested me to ascertain from our Government whether 500 rifles, with necessary ammunition, can be sold, loaned or given to the organization, and, if sold, at what price. Are there not some Krag-Jorgensens out of use at San Antonio? The governor of the Federal District is well disposed.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/216a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 16, 1912—7 p. m.

Your March 5, 2 p. m., and March 6, 10 p. m. In conveying the text of the following proclamation to the Mexican Government you will say:

> As an evidence of the deep and abiding friendship of the American nation for Mexico and the Mexican people, for whose welfare this Government wishes to show its sympathetic concern, and for your excellency's information, I have the honor to convey to your excellency the following proclamation which has been issued under date of March 14, 1912, by the President of the United States, whose earnest desire is that the blessings of peace and prosperity shall soon return to the Mexican nation.
>
> [Here follows the proclamation of March 14, ante.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/216.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

No. 134.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 16, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's note No. 1143, of the 11th instant, in which, in view of the cordial and amicable relations existing between our two countries, you express the hope, as you have been instructed by your Government to do, that prompt measures be taken by the Government of the United States to prevent the exportation of arms and munitions of war by private individuals in this country through the port of Juarez, now in the control of rebel forces, into Mexican territory.

In reply I have the honor to refer your excellency, in so far as the applicability of the governing rules of international law and the provisions of the statutes of the United States are concerned, to the Department's note to your excellency of the 8th instant, which sets forth the position taken by this Government not only under and in accordance with the principles of international law (which remain now, as heretofore, entirely unaffected by legislation of this Government), but also the position which, under our so-called neutrality statutes, it was necessary for this Government to take prior to the passage by Congress of the joint resolution dated March 14, the substance of which was communicated to your excellency personally on the evening of the same day. However, the Congress of the United States, voicing the desire of the President and of the American people that the Mexican nation shall be restored to conditions of domestic tranquility, desiring to do everything this Government might properly do to contribute to such a state of tranquility, and in the hope that the present unrest in Mexico shall soon pass away, has so modified existing statutes germane to the exportation of arms and munitions of war from this country as to inhibit, under conditions named, the exportation of any such materials from any place in the United States to any country specified until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress. This action was taken not because of any obligation so to do resting upon this Government by reason of the rules and principles of international law, which obligations were already far more than met by the existing so-called neutrality statutes of the United States, but solely from a sincere desire to promote the return of peace to Mexico and the welfare of a neighboring nation.

In pursuance of the powers conferred upon him, the President, on the 14th instant, by proclamation, gave the force of law to the provisions of the joint resolution so that at the present moment the exportation, within the meaning of the statute, of any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States into the Republic of Mexico is prohibited and is therefore unlawful, and penalties for engaging in such exportation are prescribed.

In requesting that your excellency will be good enough to transmit to the Mexican Government the copy of this proclamation which will be found accompanying this note it is hoped that your excellency will have the kindness to point out that it is an evidence of the deep and abiding friendship of the American nation for Mexico and the Mexican people and an earnest of its constant and impartial determination against even negative participation in the domestic difficulties of Mexico, to which it is the sincere and earnest desire of the President that the blessings of peace and prosperity may soon return.

This action should be construed, therefore, not only as an act of friendship, but should be considered as a strong incentive to every possible and proper effort to reestablish throughout Mexico at the earliest possible time the reign of law and order.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/218.

The Acting Secretary of State to the President.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 16, 1912.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Since the issuance of your proclamation of the 14th instant by which it is made unlawful to export arms and munitions of war from any place in the United States to Mexico, with the proviso that such exportation can be lawfully made only in accordance with such exceptions and limitations as you may deem it necessary to make, the question of exceptions, as was foreseen, has come before the Department, up to the present time, only in three aspects.

In so far as shipments of arms and munitions to the Madero Government are concerned the Department feels that any exception at the present time would be most unwise, as it would tend to imply that this Government specifically desires to favor the Madero Government and would thus cause reprisals on the part of the revolutionists, and possibly some overt act which would lead to most serious consequences.

The Department also feels that it would be, for the present certainly, unwise to permit special shipments of large amounts of explosives to private enterprises in Mexico, as they would be subject, just as they have been all along, and particularly in disaffected districts, to seizure by rebel or Federal forces or by both, and if so seized would tend to defeat the purpose of the joint resolution of Congress and of your proclamation.

In the third instance, however, which is one arising in connection with a telegram from the Embassy at Mexico City, reading substantially as follows:

> Finding it impossible to secure sufficient arms and ammunition for their purposes, the arms and ammunition committee of the American colony organization have formally requested me to ascertain from the Government of the United States whether 500 rifles, with the necessary ammunition, can be loaned, sold, or given to the organization. If the rifles and ammunition can be sold, they desire to know the price thereof. Are there not at San Antonio some Krag-Jorgensens out of use? While the governor of the Federal District is well disposed, he has few arms and what he has are inferior.

the Department feels most strongly that a due regard for the safety of American citizens at that place makes it incumbent upon this Government, in spite of the evident possibility that the transportation of the arms and munitions that may be sent to the Americans in Mexico may be attended with danger, to make an exception to the general order declaring the exportation of arms and munitions of war from any place in the United States to Mexico unlawful and to permit their shipment. They should, however, be consigned to the American Ambassador in Mexico City, and he should be required to satisfy himself before turning them over to the committee of the American colony organization that they will not be used nor be liable to be used in any way so as to promote domestic disorder. It may be observed in this connection that if Americans in other sections or places should require arms and ammunition, shipments thereof could be sent to them by having the arms in question consigned to the nearest consul, who shall then, in the same way as in the case of the arms consigned to the Ambassador, assume the responsibility for the use that is to be made of them.

In order to carry out and make effective the exception which this Department believes desirable in the case of the Embassy, it is submitted that you will doubtless wish to follow the form of the orders issued in the case of Santo Domingo in pursuance of the provisions of joint resolution No. 25,[1] Fifty-fifth Congress, second session, April 22, 1898, and I therefore have the honor to inclose a suggested draft of such order [2] prepared to meet the requirements of the situation in Mexico and specifically the case of the American colony organization in Mexico City. All action of this character presupposes, of course, the consent or acquiescence of the Mexican authorities, which, in the instance of Mexico City, has already been given.

The importance of this matter prompts me to request that you will be good enough to give it such early consideration as your other duties will allow.

I have [etc.] HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/218.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 17, 1912—10 p. m.

Your March 15, 5 p. m., and Department's March 16, 7 p. m. I quote for your information presidential order governing the exportation from this country of coal and other munitions of war to the Republic of Santo Domingo, in accordance with joint resolution 25, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session, April 22, 1898:

> It is ordered that the export of the articles below described be, and is hereby, permitted under the terms of, and notwithstanding the proclamation of October 14, 1905,[3] prohibiting the export of arms and munitions of war from any port in the United States or Porto Rico to any port in the Dominican Republic. [Here follows the enumeration of arms or ammunition.]

It is probable that similar procedure will now be followed in the case of Mexico.

The possibility of obtaining rifles and ammunition for the arms and ammunition committee of the American colony organization is being investigated. If they can be secured they will be consigned directly to you, with the understanding that you are to deliver them only to such Americans as shall satisfy you that the use to which they are to be put is wholly that of their personal defense, and that there is no possibility of their falling into the hands of anyone or of their being used in any way that would promote domestic disorder in Mexico.

The President's proclamation of March 14 applies impartially to all shipments of arms and munitions of war from this country destined to Mexico, and for the present, for obvious reasons, no exceptions are being made. It is feared that shipments, even for industrial purposes, might be seized and used to promote domestic disorder.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] See Department's March 17, 10 p. m., to the American Ambassador, below.
[2] Not printed.
[3] See For. Rel. 1905, p. 399.

File No. 812.00/3263.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, March 17, 1912—10 p. m.

The optimistic feeling which prevailed in this city at the beginning of the week has changed for the worse and the American and foreign exodus has recommenced. This situation is due, I think, to the following causes:

First. The dangerous situation to the south and the engagements in the immediate suburbs of this city;

Second. The public protests by the followers of Madero against the return of de la Barra, which reveal possibilities of violence;

Third. The accentuation of the economic crisis; and Fourth. The graphic descriptions in the daily press of vandalism and savagery throughout the Republic.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3286.

The American Consul at Acapulco to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate,
Acapulco, March 18, 1912—9 a. m.

There are now twenty-seven Americans in Acapulco and five more coming in a few days. A great many will shortly leave for the United States on vessel due next Friday, and all would do so if previously advised. What shall I advise? Presence of relief vessel as suggested would inspire confidence, I believe. I regret to inform you that even all the Government officers are commencing to betray unfriendliness. They are skeptical about intervention, and any step our Government takes will be subject to misinterpretation.

Edwards.

File No. 812.00/3280.

The American Consul at Frontera to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate,
Frontera, March 18, 1912—4 p. m.

If I may circulate in the form of a circular letter the President's proclamation, dated the 2d March, relative to disturbances in Mexico, I believe it will create an excellent impression among the authorities and all classes. The State is entirely peaceful and Americans not molested.

Lespinasse.

File No. 812.00/3063.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 18, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: Referring to previous correspondence with regard to Mr. Emilio Vásquez Gómez, I beg to inform you that in a letter dated March 3 the Attorney General reported to the President that the Department of Justice has had Mr. Gómez under careful observation for some time past, but that he has been carefully advised by counsel and up to the present time that Department has been unable to discover any violation by him of the so-called neutrality statutes of the United States. The Attorney General adds that the writing of letters in this country and the forwarding of them through the United States mails into Mexico, inciting an uprising in Mexico against the Government there, is not a violation of our neutrality laws. The Attorney General states that he will continue to follow Mr. Gómez carefully and should any provision of our statutes be violated his arrest will immediately be ordered.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3280.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Frontera.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 19, 1912—5 p. m.

You may circulate the President's proclamation, March 2, as you propose, but its language should be in nowise altered and great discretion should be used.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3068.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Extract.]

No. 769.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 19, 1912.

SIR: In connection with all correspondence relating to the matter of the exportation of arms and munitions of war from the United States into Mexico, and with particular reference to the statement in your telegram of March 6, 10 p. m., that in the discussion with your European colleagues they "expressed disapproval of the course of this Government in permitting the shipment of arms and ammunition across the frontier to the revolutionists," the Department deems it necessary to remark that the Department's study of this question appears quite clearly to indicate that their Governments in a like situation would probably not take a position materially different, if indeed so strong.

The principles of international law, which remain now, as heretofore, entirely unaffected by the legislation of this Government, did not require the prohibition of such exportation, no matter what administrative means other Governments might, as a matter of grace in any given case, have recourse to, as a practical expedient, and the so-called neutrality statutes of this Government as they existed prior to March 14, although they appear to go far beyond the neutrality statutes of other nations, would just as little have justified such prohibition.

I am [etc.] HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3087a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister to Cuba.[1]

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 20, 1912—6 p. m.

After the words "but merely," last sentence first paragraph, of Department's March 6, 7 p. m., insert the words "to prevent smuggling and any other infractions of our so-called neutrality statutes and."

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3365.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 1320.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 20, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. KNOX: Since the date of my February 20, 1912 [No. 1270], the area of revolution and disorder has materially increased in some parts of the Republic and decreased in others. On the whole, I think the Government's position is less secure and its authority more restricted than they were a month ago. Since that time the State of Chihuahua has passed entirely out of the control of the Government; a new State organization has been created there and from within its territories a militant force has been recruited, with the sympathy and assistance of adjoining States, to march upon the capital of the Republic. It will probably be able to retain control of the State of Chihuahua and perhaps ultimately of the State of Sonora and remain a menace and a threat to the existence of the present Government of the Republic. * * *

Coming south from these border States, which with the exception of the State of Nuevo León are all affected by the revolutionary movement, we find in the States of Guanajuato, Zacatecas, and

---

[1] Same to all Latin-American missions.

Aguascalientes many disorders, and in some parts a strong revolutionary movement.

In the State of Mexico and the south, southeastern, and southwestern States, stretching to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, the Government in its strenuous efforts to save the situation in the north has visibly weakened its effectiveness and given an opportunity for a revival of the revolutionary movement under Zapata and various other rebel chiefs. * * *

Americans, believing that they had nothing to fear here [Mexico City] except mob violence, have, since the perfection of their organization for the defense of their homes and property, been inclined to look more cheerfully on the situation. According to the reports made to me they will in case of necessity be able to concentrate within a fairly short time a well armed and equipped body of 1,200 men. The Germans are also well organized, and have succeeded in securing two machine guns. The Spanish, French, and English colonies are also organized and armed. I have carefully advised our nationals to avoid everything which could possibly give offense to Mexican public opinion, to indicate clearly that they wish simply to be aids to the officers of the law in the protection of property and their own homes, and that under no circumstances must they allow themselves to be drawn aside from the clearly defined purpose of their organization. I anticipate no difficulties on this score.

The President's proclamation of March 2, 1912, and the notice to Americans by this Embassy, which was issued in conformity therewith, at first produced considerable excitement and some misinterpretation, which I believe was due almost entirely to the deeply rooted belief which had been in the mind of everyone that whenever intervention had been determined upon it would be heralded by a presidential proclamation. After a few days, however, the real intent and true meaning of the proclamation was understood and its reassuring effect on Americans and its sobering one on Mexicans can not be doubted or questioned. The President's proclamation of March 14, 1912, had a most excellent effect in official and diplomatic circles, where our alleged contribution to the strength of the rebellion has been a matter of frequent and severe criticism. But I have yet to note a single expression of appreciation from the press or from any prominent man in unofficial life. This singular lack of comprehension of our benevolent and patient attitude under most trying circumstances toward the Mexican Republic and the almost national tendency to forget great and substantial benefits conferred, and to loudly call attention to trivial offenses, is a psychological condition which it is wise to understand and to always anticipate, and in our dealings with Mexico it will be well to be satisfied with the knowledge that our actions will stand the test of impartial history and may not be impeached in the wider domain of Latin-American public opinion.

I am [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 812.113/235a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 21, 1912—11 a. m.

Refer to Department's March 17, 10 p. m. There are no available arms at San Antonio, but the War Department states that all arms and ammunition needed can be shipped via New York and Vera Cruz at once, consigned military attaché, who shall sell them only as directed by you. Price, Krag-Jorgensen carbines, War Department's preference, $6.40 gold; rifles, same make, $7.40 gold; and ammunition $15 per thousand rounds. You will arrange for necessary permit for entry of shipment, and inform Department quantity needed, and whether desired at once.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.113/236.

The Mexican Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

No. 1170.]

Mexican Embassy,
Washington, March 21, 1912.

Excellency: In compliance with telegraphic instructions received from my Government, I have the honor to apply for your excellency's good offices to obtain from the President of the United States of America a declaration under the head of exceptions spoken of in his proclamation of the 14th instant permitting the shipment to Mexico of the following arms and ammunition intended for my Government: Three hundred carbines and 40,000 cartridges that are detained at Presidio, Texas; 15 cases with 150 rifles and 70 cases with 70,000 cartridges that are also detained at Shafter, Texas; and the armament and park which the consul of Mexico at El Paso, Texas, forwarded to General Sanjinés at Ojinaga, and which were detained by the authorities of this Government at Marfa, Texas.

I thank your excellency for such action as you may be pleased to take on this request and beg [etc.]

Gilberto Crespo y Martínez.

File No. 812.113/239.

The Mexican Ambassador to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Translation.]

Mexican Embassy,
Washington, March 21, 1912.

I have just received telegram from Department of Foreign Relations of my country which says it is urgent for General Sanjinés at Ojinaga to receive as soon as possible arms and ammunition that are now detained at Marfa, Tex., so that he may make prompt and vigorous preparations for any emergency.

I shall be obliged to you if you would obtain from His Excellency the President the special permit therefor, which will be duly acknowledged by my Government.

CRESPO.

File No. 812.113/237.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 21, 1912—10 p. m.

Mr. Calero, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, has called to request the Embassy to recommend that the President, in the exercise of powers conferred upon him by the recent amendments to our neutrality laws, issue instructions that a shipment of arms transmitted by the Mexican consul at El Paso to General Sanjinés at Ojinaga and detained at Marfa, Texas, be allowed to pass the frontier. This will prevent an engagement at Ojinaga on the Rio Grande and maintain a force in opposition to Orozco, according to the Minister.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/241.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 22, 1912—12 noon.

I am informed by the American colony committee that they desire 1,000 Krag-Jorgensen rifles at price stated and 250,000 cartridges therefor, to be shipped by Ward Line steamer leaving New York [next Thursday?].

Attention is called to the fact that the military attaché has no right of entry, and I request instructions as to course resulting therefrom.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3348.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua (via El Paso, Tex.), March 22, 1912—3 p. m.

There are press reports of prohibition entry foodstuffs through Paso del Norte, which will cause much bitterness toward Americans. In this event mines can not continue beyond two weeks at any rate, and so think better close at once and Americans withdraw. It seems to me that such action coupled with strict enforcement the President's proclamation will effectively stifle the revolution. Unless otherwise instructed will counsel withdrawal Americans and closing mines immediately upon notice of the President's approval of action prohibiting exportation food through Paso del Norte.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.113/242.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 22, 1912—6 p. m.

Department's March 21, 11 a. m., and my March 22, 11 a. m.[1] The committee of the American colony desire me to add to the order 1,000 field-service belts and to increase the number of rifle cartridges from 250,000 to 1,000,000.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/243.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 22, 1912—9 p. m.

Government candidate Obregón was elected president of Congress to-day by 30 majority out of 178.

Representatives of many American mining companies have called at Embassy to-day to advise me that the prohibition of the importation of dynamite will soon cause the shutting down of all mines and the discharge of some 20,000 employees, who will immediately join the forces of disorder.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/249a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 24, 1912—7 p. m.

Would it be impossible by shipping dynamite through Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico to supply the needs of the mines?

The President's proclamation does not affect clothing, dry goods, hardware, and foodstuffs, and Treasury Department has issued orders to its officers on the Mexican border to admit properly invoiced and manifested shipments.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/249b.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.[2]

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 24, 1912—7 p. m.

The President's proclamation of March 14 does not affect clothing, dry goods, hardware, and foodstuffs, and Treasury Department has issued orders to its officers on the Mexican border to admit properly invoiced and manifested shipments.

---

[1] See Mar. 22, 12 noon.

[2] Same to consuls at Nogales, Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, Ciudad Juárez, Laredo, and Ensenada.

Exemption of dynamite for mines and other industrial purposes is still under consideration by the Attorney General. Keep Department closely informed about this.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/251.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 25, 1912—11 a. m.

Mr. George W. Cook and Mr. Emanuel Beck, wealthy and responsible Americans in Mexico City, desire from patriotic motives and on their own responsibility to order an additional 1,000 rifles, 1,000 field-service belts, and 1,000,000 cartridges, to be shipped with and in the same manner and for the same purpose as represented in the order sent through the Department by telegram dated March 22, 12 noon, and March 22, 6 p. m. This should leave New York City on next Thursday and as part of the original order.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/242.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 25, 1912—4 p. m.

Referring to your March 22, 12 noon, and March 22, 6 p. m. War Department despatching via Ward Line steamer sailing New York 28th, arriving Vera Cruz on or about April 5, 1,000 Krag-Jorgensen rifles, 1,000,000 cartridges, 1,000 field-service belts. Although consigned to you they are invoiced to the military attaché, whom the War Department's Bureau of Ordnance desires to act as disbursing officer.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/250.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 25, 1912—10 p. m.

I have asked representatives of mining companies here to advise me about dynamite, as per your March 24, 7 p. m.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/291.

The Attorney General to the President.[1]

Office of the Attorney General,
Washington, March 25, 1912.

Dear Mr. President: You have referred to me some correspondence with the Acting Secretary of State regarding the practical interpretation to be given to the prohibition contained in the joint resolution of Congress passed March 14, 1912, and the proclamation issued by you in pursuance thereof making it unlawful to export, except under such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe, any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to any American country in which conditions of domestic violence are found by the President to exist, etc.

You ask my opinion as to the proper interpretation to be given to the words "arms or munitions of war." There is no dispute as to the meaning of the word "arms," but a question arises as to the precise import of the phrase "munitions of war." The word "munition" is defined in Skeat's Etymological Dictionary as "materials used in war." It is derived from the verb munire, to fortify, and perhaps its nearest antecedent is munitionem—the accusative of munitio: a blockading, defending, or securing; hence its analogy to ammunition, store for defense. Accordingly the Standard Dictionary defines it as "ammunition and all necessary raw material, including stores of every kind; all requisites for warfare exclusive of money and men." The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia defines it as "materials used in war for defense or for attack; war material, military stores of all kinds; ammunition, provision." Webster's International Dictionary, as "whatever materials are used in war for defense or for annoying an enemy; ammunition; also stores and provisions; military stores of all kinds; hence necessary equipment or provision in general."

Although many of these definitions embrace in the definition of the word munition not only materials for attack or defense, but stores or provisions, a distinction is drawn by the writers on international law between munitions of war proper and those articles which from their particular use may become munitions of war. The phrase is used in connection with definitions of the term "contraband of war." Articles which are contraband of war have been classed under two heads:

> Those that are primarily and ordinarily used for military purposes in time of war—e. g., arms and munitions of war, military material, etc.—articles of this kind being usually described as absolutely contraband. (7 Moore's Digest, 666.)

In the instructions given by Mr. Cass, Secretary of State, to Mr. Mason, Minister to France, in June, 1859, speaking of the term "contraband of war," Mr. Cass wrote:

> "Some of the later and approved writers upon the law of nations, such as Hautefeuille and Ortolan * * * and the former particularly, confine the list"—of contraband of war—"to objects of first necessity for war, and which are exclusively useful in its prosecution, and which can be directly employed for that purpose without undergoing any change—that is to say, to arms and munitions of war." (7 Moore's Digest, 661.)

---

[1] This opinion of the Attorney General was adopted by the Department of State, and the last two paragraphs were quoted textually by the Department in answering inquiries for a definition of "munitions of war" under the President's proclamation of Mar. 14, 1912.

Among articles absolutely contraband, according to the orders of the Navy Department, given June 20, 1898, are "ordnance, machine guns, and other articles of military or naval warfare." Among those conditionally contraband are coal, "when destined for a naval station, a port of call, or ship or ships of the enemy," and provisions "when destined for the enemy's ship or ships or for a place that is besieged." (7 Moore's Digest, 687.)

Articles which, like arms and ammunition, are, by their nature, of self-evident warlike use, are contraband of war if destined to enemy territory. (Mr. Hay to Minister McCormick, August 17, 1904, 7 Moore's Digest, 692.)

Ortolan considers "que les armes et instruments de guerre quelconques, et les munitions de toute sorte servant directement à l'usage de ces armes, sont les seuls objets qui soient généralement et nécessairement contrebande de guerre * * *." (3 Hall Int. Law, 649.)

"L'idee de la contrebande," says Heffter (le Droit, 160), "est une idee complexe, variable selon les temps et les circonstances, et qu'il est difficile de déterminer d'une manière absolue et constante * * *. D'après les usages internationaux universels, la contrebande est exclusivement limitée aux armes, utensiles et munitions de guerre, en d'autres termes aux objets façonnés et fabriqués exclusivement pour servir dans la guerre, non pas aux matières premières propres à la fabrication de objets prohibés * * *." (3 Hall, 649.)

Lord Lansdowne, in writing to Lord Hardinge in August, 1904, refers to the first class of articles contraband of war as—

Those that are primarily and ordinarily used for military purposes in time of war—e. g., arms and munitions of war, military material, etc.—articles of this kind being usually described as absolutely contraband. (7 Moore's Digest, 666.)

At the international conference held in London during the winter of 1908–9 a list of articles which without notice may be treated as absolutely contraband was prepared, as follows:

1. Arms of all kinds, including arms for sporting purposes, and their distinctive component parts.
2. Projectiles, charges, and cartridges of all kinds and their distinctive component parts.
3. Powder and explosives specially prepared for use in war.
4. Gun mountings, limber boxes, limbers, military wagons, field forges, and their distinctive component parts.
5. Clothing and equipment of a distinctively military character.
6. All kinds of harness of a distinctively military character.
7. Saddle, draft, and pack animals suitable for use in war.
8. Articles of camp equipment and their distinctive component parts.
9. Armor plates.
10. Warships, including boats, and their distinctive component parts of such a nature that they can only be used on a vessel of war.
11. Implements and apparatus designed exclusively for the manufacture of munitions of war, for the manufacture or repair of arms, or war material for use on land or sea.

This list includes substantially all of the articles which may be considered as absolutely within the definition of "arms and munitions of war."

Food and clothing may become contraband of war when destined to a port of naval equipment or an enemy, or for the supply of his army (7 Moore's Digest, 679); but they are classed as conditionally contraband and not as absolutely contraband, and do not fall within the usual definition of arms and munitions of war. The case of United States v. Sheldon (2 Wheaton, 119), which is sometimes cited in support of the inclusion of provisions with other articles under the definition of munitions of war, turned upon a statute which prohibited the transportation of "naval or military stores, arms or munitions of war, or any articles of provision from the United States to Canada," etc.

The substance of the joint resolution of Congress itself emphasizes the construction which is here suggested of the phrase in question. It provides that whenever the President shall find that in any American country conditions of domestic violence exist which are promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States, he may, by proclamation, make it unlawful to export arms or munitions of war. Therefore, it is such arms or munitions of war as are used in promoting conditions of domestic violence the export of which is forbidden; that is to say, weapons used for the destruction of life, together with ammunition and equipment useful in connection with them, and explosives and other equipment of a military character, or articles used for the construction of such equipment. These are the things the use of which promotes conditions of domestic violence and the export of which the President's proclamation is intended to prohibit.

As a practical working definition for the use of the officials on the border, without embracing all of the items enumerated in the first list adopted at the conference of London, I suggest the following as embracing all that is within the practical purpose which the joint resolution and the proclamation are intended to accomplish, namely:

Articles primarily and ordinarily used for military purposes in time of war, such as weapons of every species used for the destruction of life, and projectiles, cartridges, ammunition of all sorts, and other supplies used or useful in connection therewith, including parts used for the repair or manufacture of such arms, and raw material employed in the manufacture of such ammunition; also dynamite, nitroglycerin, or other explosive substances; also gun mountings, limber boxes, limbers, military wagons; field forges and their component parts, comprising equipment of a distinctively military character; articles of camp equipment and their distinctive component parts; and implements manufactured exclusively for the manufacture of implements of war, or for the manufacture or repair of arms or war materials.

Foodstuffs, ordinary clothing, and ordinary articles of peaceful commerce are not included in the prohibition.

I am transmitting this definition to the Departments of State, War, and the Treasury.

Respectfully,

GEO. W. WICKERSHAM.

File No. 812.113/259.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 26, 1912—12 noon.

Department's March 24, 7 p. m.; Embassy's March 25, 10 p. m. Conference between American mine owners and Minister of Hacienda last night. It was agreed that Mexican Government would make every effort to bring out under Federal escort the supply of dynamite now at Dinamita (the Government factory, about 40 miles north of Torreón), and ship it south. This supply would satisfy the demands of northern Mexico for about two months. There are also ten carloads of dynamite consigned to the Mexican Dynamite Co. against which no governmental prohibition exists. It is en route, via Laredo, from Wilmington, Del., and California. These can be safely permitted to cross our frontier. If Dinamita stores can not be shipped south, Government will admit dynamite properly consigned at any port.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3389.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 26, 1912—9 p. m.

The press censorship is rigid, and it is evident that consular telegrams are being refused upon some pretext. I receive no reports from consuls either on Pacific coast or the south.

Acting on consular reports from Tampico I have directly requested the governor of San Luis Potosi to protect Americans and have his telegram in agreement.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3443.

No. 1334.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 26, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of correspondence exchanged between this Embassy and the Mexican Foreign Office relative to the guaranties of protection of foreigners in Mexico City. This correspondence was initiated by the Embassy at the request of the Ministers of Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany, Spain, and Japan, and, with the exception of the final note of March 25, has received their approval. The note of March 25 was not addressed to Mr. Calero in the name of my colleagues but solely in the name of this Embassy. All other concurring diplomatic representatives are addressing similar notes to the Foreign Office. The correspondence is submitted to the Department for its approval or criticism.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Informal.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico March 11, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. CALERO: I beg to inform your excellency that at the request of several of the foreign representatives here having large colonies in this city there was last Saturday afternoon an informal meeting of several chiefs of mission at this Embassy. The object of this informal meeting, which was in no sense a conference of the diplomatic corps, was the discussion of the safety of the foreign colonies here in the event of any disorders occurring in this city. The question of the number of Federal troops now on duty here was brought up, and the ministers expressed their positive opinions as to the obligation of the Mexican Government to keep a sufficient force in the capital to secure adequate protection against any possibility of trouble. The statement was made that during the administration of President Diaz there were never less than 5,000 troops stationed in Mexico City, excluding police, and the assertion was made on reliable information that the number now here is less than 2,000.

I should be very glad to receive any information which your excellency can give me as to what number of troops the proper authorities consider sufficient for the adequate protection of the capital, and how many men there are actually in this city or its vicinity at the present time.

Believe me [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

Informal.]

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Mexico, March 13, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: I refer to your informal note of the 11th instant, No. 56, Serial 1968, and in reply I have the honor to confirm what I said to the first secretary of the Embassy, Mr. Schuyler—that is, that you, as well as the chiefs of mission with whom you have spoken concerning the maintenance of order in this city, may be sure that the Government has sufficient means to guarantee the lives and interests of its residents, natives as well as foreigners. The garrison of regular troops is not the only force at the disposal, and, therefore, the data concerning the number of such garrison is not essential, moreover, when its number is variable, according to the necessities of the service in the city and elsewhere.

The officers in charge of the maintenance of order in this city are the governor of the Federal District, the military commander, and the inspector general of police. The persons who occupy these positions are worthy of the full confidence of the Government and of society.

Believe me [etc.]

MANUEL CALERO.

[Inclosure 3.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Informal.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 14, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. CALERO: I have your informal note of March 13 last, written in reply to mine of the 11th, and beg to express my regret that you have not been able to furnish the information relative to the military dispositions in this city which was clearly and courteously asked for therein at the request of a number of my colleagues of the Diplomatic Corps.

Realizing that many of our nationals were leaving Mexico, in many cases because of unfounded apprehensions concerning the ability of the authorities to cope with the elements of disorder, my colleagues and I desired to communicate to them through their societies and organizations information of a concrete and specific character relative to the dispositions made by the general and local government in the City of Mexico for the preservation of order and for the protection of life and property. We believed, and still believe, that the exodus which is constantly going on, and which is contributing in a very large measure to the acute economic situation which exists here, would be a matter of grave concern to the Mexican Government and that it would be glad to take advantage of an opportunity to make known through responsible channels the exact number of Federal troops of all arms which the Government estimates as sufficient for the preservation of order in this city and what force is at present maintained here. My colleagues and I are aware that your excellency's Government is alive to its responsibilities and conscious of its obligations and duties, but mere assurances of a general character have no weight with our nationals, a great many of whom are alarmed and skeptical as to the resources at the command of the Government and many of whom have abiding confidence only in Federal troops as guardians of public order.

Do you not think, my dear Mr. Calero, that under these circumstances it would be the part of wisdom to enable us to furnish specific information and in this way afford us the privilege of rendering practical and useful assistance to the Mexican Government?

Believe me [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 4.—Translation.]

The Minister of Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

Informal.]

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Mexico, March 19, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: I refer to your informal note of the 14th instant, in which you insist on a categorical reply concerning the following questions: What is the number of Federal troops in the City of Mexico at the present time, and what is the exact number of Federal troops, of the different arms, which the Government considers sufficient to maintain order in this city?

Your excellency is of the opinion that my reply to the above-mentioned questions will serve the purpose of quieting unfounded fears, to which, in your excellency's opinion, is due the exodus of foreigners and much to be deplored.

Although my opinion and that of other Mexican officers is not in accord with your excellency's upon the principal causes of the exodus, almost exclusively of American citizens, I would gladly satisfy your excellency's wishes, but I am unable to do so for the following reasons:

In the first place, and referring to the number of the Federal troops in this city, I must say that the capital has never had a fixed garrison, and neither this Government nor that of General Díaz have ever kept here a fixed number of soldiers. Therefore, the data on the importance of the numerical capacity of the garrison on this date would be of no interest, as such data would vary the very next day either one way or the other.

In the second place, and for reasons which can not escape your excellency's keen perception, I can hardly say which would be the number of troops of all arms which the Government would consider sufficient to preserve order in this city. This data would also be subject to variation, because when the city is quiet and the spirit of the people is not worked up by agitators, nor is there any extraordinary event in sight which could excite a public feeling, the garrison may be relatively small. In the contrary situation the garrison has to be more numerous. It should also be borne in mind that if because the necessities of service the cavalry force of the city is increased and the infantry forces are diminished, or vice versa, the number of soldiers which the Government may consider proper to preserve order would vary, according to the arm to which the troops may belong.

If your excellency will thoughtfully consider the above, you will agree that the reply I had the honor to give you in my letter of the 13th was in accordance with the circumstances and the one which corresponds to my official position. I will not hesitate to give this same reply to each one of your excellency's colleagues which constitute the section of the diplomatic corps in the name of which your excellency has had the kindness to address me.

The public officers of this city and myself consider the manifestation that took place on Sunday, the 10th instant, shows that the inhabitants of this capital are moved by a feeling entirely favorable to the Government, which, of course, is no reason why the necessary vigilance should be decreased. We are cognizant of our responsibilities and are decided to maintain order, not only to protect foreigners but also for the safety of our own families and interests.

Feeling grateful to your excellency for the kind spirit which you have shown, the purposes of which you have referred to in the last paragraph of your note under acknowledgment, I am, my dear Mr. Ambassador [etc.]

MANUEL CALERO.

[Inclosure 5.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Informal.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 25, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. CALERO: Referring to the correspondence which I have had the honor to exchange with you relative to my desire and that of some of my colleagues to be precisely informed as to the measure of protection which under certain emergencies the Government will be able to afford to foreigners residing in this city, I beg to again express my regret that you have not felt it advantageous to supply us with the information which we believed to be very necessary in calming the apprehension of our nationals and to that extent a great benefit to the Mexican Government. I have referred the correspondence in this matter to my colleagues, the Ministers of France, Spain, Germany, Great Britain, and Japan, for such action in the premises as their excellencies may think proper, and on my own account I shall have the honor of addressing you an additional note relative to the same question.

Believe me [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 6.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Informal.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 25, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. CALERO: Referring to the correspondence which I have had the honor to exchange with your excellency on behalf of some of my colleagues of the resident diplomatic corps, who are deeply concerned for the safety of their nationals in this city in the event of disorderly demonstrations by the lawless elements. I beg to express my regret that your excellency, doubtless for what seem to you good and sufficient reasons, has not found it expedient to furnish me with the information which I expressed a desire to have.

Under the circumstances, having in mind the strict fulfillment of my duty to such American nationals as still remain here, I beg to say to you that, in the absence of any satisfactory evidence beyond general and reassuring statements which, however laudably conceived and securely relied upon, do not meet the necessities of the abnormal situation which exists here, my Government reserves the right, according to the established principles of international law, to make reclamation for the loss of American life or for damages to person or property of American nationals which may occur in the City of Mexico or this Federal District through the acts of mobs or organized or unorganized elements of disorder and lawlessness.

Believe me [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 812.113/236.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

No. 137.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 26, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's note No. 1170, of the 21st instant and of your excellency's telegrams of the 21st, 22d, and 23d,[1] respectively, relative to the matter of excepting from the operation of the President's proclamation of the 14th instant certain shipments of arms and munitions of war destined for the use of your excellency's Government.

I have the honor to inform you that the President has this day decided to except the shipments in question from the operation of the proclamation mentioned, and has ordered released for exportation into Mexico the arms and munitions of war specifically mentioned in your note No. 1170 under reference.

---

[1] Not printed.

In this connection I also have the honor to say to your excellency that whenever from now on it is represented to the Department that specific consignments of arms and ammunition are intended for the use of your excellency's Government, the consignor will be informed that he should take the matter up with the Embassy under your excellency's worthy charge, and that upon submittal by the Embassy to the Department of the necessary particulars relative to the consignments the matter will be given prompt attention and placed before the President as soon as possible for his final decision as to whether or not they may be exported.

Accept [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3389.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 28, 1912—2 p. m.

Regarding censorship, as per your March 26, 9 p. m. Protest vigorously if necessary against refusal to receive consular or other official telegrams for Embassy or Department.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.113/251.

Department of State,
Washington, March 28, 1912—3 p.m.

Department is disinclined to accede to the request of Cook and Beck, conveyed in your March 25, 11 a. m., without more specific information as to how urgently this large amount of arms and ammunition is needed and the purpose to which they are to be put. Department will not recommend shipments of rifles, cartridges, etc., except upon your own assumption of responsibility. To establish a precedent of this kind appears unwise because others may make similar requests, with which for some reason it would be found impossible to comply. Noncompliance would then be pointed out as adverse discrimination.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.113/237.

Department of State,
Washington, March 28, 1912—6 p. m.

Your March 21, 10 p. m. The President on March 26 authorized by formal order to the Treasury Department exceptions granting permission for the exportation of the shipments, mentioned in your said telegram, to the consignee in Mexico designated by the Mexican Embassy.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.728/2.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, March 28, 1912—9 p. m.

Department's March 28, 2 p. m. I have protested verbally, but can not do so effectively because have no direct evidence. Government says consular reports are refused only when line is burdened with official business. Will protest when have positive evidence.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3427.

American Embassy,
Mexico, March 28, 1912—10 p. m.

Press censorship severe and Associated Press line leased from Government has been taken away. Will Department consult with Stone as to action by Embassy?

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3427.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 29, 1912—7 p. m.

Your March 28, 10 p. m. Informally inquire whether or not continuance of Associated Press service can be arranged. Investigate the general policy of the Mexican Government in this matter. In view of the conservatism of Associated Press dispatches there appears to be no reason why their service should be stopped.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3430.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, March 29, 1912—9 p. m.

Associated Press wire is still refused. The cutting of telegraph lines and the undoubted connivance of the Government through indirect methods has arrested all news except from immediate vicinity. Mexican railway cut twice, and cable line cut last night. Mexican press reports surrender of Torreón without resistance. Situation grows worse in Puebla and Vera Cruz.

A new exodus of Americans from the city will begin and continue all through next week, as it is generally believed now that the Governernment is likely to fall.

The Orders of American Railway Conductors and Engineers submitted their ultimatum demands to President Browne to-day. In the event that these are not acceded to about 900 men will cease work on the National Railways.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3487.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1337.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, March 29, 1912.

Sir: For the information of the Department, I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of an informal note to Mr. Calero, Minister for Foreign Affairs, relative to the return of Mr. de la Barra to Mexico.

I have [etc.]

Henry Lane Wilson.

[Inclosure.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

American Embassy,
Mexico, March 27, 1912.

My Dear Mr. Calero: Mr. E. N. Brown informed me yesterday that the report was being insistently circulated through banking and commercial circles that the Washington Government had encouraged the return to Mexico of Mr. de la Barra and that I was conducting an active propaganda in his behalf.

I am amazed and disgusted that such utterly absurd stories could find lodgment in the minds of sensible and serious men, and I hasten to assure you that there is not a scintilla of truth in the story, neither as it relates to the Washington Government nor to me. My earnest hopes and desires—sentiments which I know are shared by the Government at Washington—are that the present legally elected Government of Mexico shall be maintained, and, as you are doubtless conversant, we are, to the fullest extent compatible with a dignified abstinence from intrusion in Mexican affairs, giving every day evidence of our deep sympathy with the administration of President Madero, which is our duty to the de jure and de facto Government as a friendly nation.

I have known Mr. de la Barra many years and esteem him a most worthy Mexican and a sincere patriot, and if he is returning to his country as reported, I am obliged, from my knowledge of his character, to assume that he comes hither to discharge the duties of a Mexican citizen and to be of service to his country.

Believe me [etc.]

Henry Lane Wilson.

File No. 812.113/269.

The Mexican Ambassador to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

Mexican Embassy, Washington.
(Received March 30, 1912—10.50 a. m.)

Consul of Mexico at New York tells me that a cargo of arms and ammunition has gone out on the steamship Monterey of the Ward Line, bound for Mexico, and that the shipper assured him that he was duly authorized by the Government of which your excellency forms part, notwithstanding that proper steps were not taken in the manner referred to in your excellency's note dated the 26th instant, which was received to-day at 1 p. m., and to which an answer is now being duly prepared with the appropriate expressions of thanks. In virtue thereof, and owing to the urgency of the case, I permit myself to trespass upon your excellency's attention in order that you may be pleased to tell me whether the aforesaid consul's asseveration is accurate.

CRESPO.

File No. 812.00/3416.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 30, 1912—6 p. m.

Great fear at Durango that in case Federal soldiers are withdrawn that place will be at mercy of bandit bands. Request that sufficient troops be retained adequately to protect Americans and American interests at Durango.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3441.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 30, 1912—11 p. m.

Train from here to Cuernavaca was fired on by rebels to-day and the engineer was killed. Conductor, an American, was beaten into insensibility. Also a number of passengers are reported fatally wounded. Train between Atlixco and Puebla held up by Zapatistas, but they were driven off and 15 killed by soldiers on board train.

Situation in Puebla and Vera Cruz continues to grow worse. Alarm in this city is very great, and foreigners are agitating the question of calling upon their diplomatic representatives to ask for the introduction of legation guards to protect colonies. There is some agitation in our own colony on same subject.

I think I shall be able to secure a Federal guard for the arms shipment from Vera Cruz here.

Rigorous censorship still prevails and I have no consular advices. Will make additional representations on Monday to the President.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/269.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 30, 1912.

Your telegram March 30. Invoices of shipment in question were not presented to Mexican consul on account of shortness of time. It is a consignment of rifles and ammunition specially exempted by the President from the operation of his proclamation of March 14 sent to the American Ambassador at Mexico City, with the knowledge and consent of Mexican authorities, for the use of Americans in that city in protecting their lives and property in case of possible mob outbreaks. The Embassy at Mexico City has been informed of the circumstances under which the consignment was shipped and has been instructed to request that special arrangements be made for its entry. As the shipment is not intended for your excellency's Government, it naturally does not fall within the cases contemplated in the Department's note to you of March 26, which refers only to arms and munitions of war destined to the Mexican Federal Government.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.918/20.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 1, 1912—11 p. m.

Your March 29, 7 p. m. A censor is sitting in the Associated Press office to-night, and it is not yet determined whether a report will be sent or the office closed. Mexican Government will not permit any agency to distribute news harmful to it, whether true or not. As the Government complains of things I know to be true and alleges reports which have never been made, I judge its course neither consistent nor just.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/284.

The President to the Acting Secretary of State.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, April 1, 1912.

DEAR MR. WILSON: By direction of the President I send you the inclosed copy of a letter from the Attorney General which explains itself. The President concurs in the conclusions of the Attorney General and directs that the aeroplane referred to be not permitted exportation into Mexico.

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES D. HILLES,
Secretary to the President.

[Inclosure.]

The Attorney General to the President.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., April 1, 1912.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: The Secretary of War transmits to me the following telegram:

"Col. Steever reports 'Mexican consul has requested holding up of French aeroplane about to be exported from El Paso to Mexico for purpose of dropping dynamite and other explosives upon Federals. Have requested collector of customs to prevent exportation. Ask early decision as to whether under circumstances cited aeroplane is not an engine of war and therefore under ban of President's proclamation.' Request instructions soon as possible.

"DUNCAN, Commanding."

In the practical definition of "arms and munitions of war" which was formulated in my opinion to you dated March 25, 1912, and in the letter of advice to the heads of the State, Treasury, and War Departments, no mention was made of aeroplanes, but the list of articles which without notice may be treated as absolutely contraband of war, adopted at the conference of London, includes a number of articles primarily used for military purposes in time of war. An aeroplane sought to be transported into Mexico for the express purpose of being used as an engine of war to carry dynamite in the air in order that it may be dropped upon soldiers of the established Government for their destruction is as clearly within the intendment of the first list of articles absolutely contraband of war, and as clearly a munition of war, as gun mountings, military wagons and their distinctive component parts, which are specifically included in the list adopted at the London conference. But if not, per se, included in the definition "munitions of war," an aeroplane specifically acquired for the purposes specified (that is, to serve as an engine of destruction of human life), clearly becomes a munition of war and is within the purposes which gave rise to the Congressional joint resolution, and should be brought within the embargo created by your proclamation under that joint resolution.

I have, therefore, the honor to advise you that the Departments of State, Treasury, and War should be advised that the French aeroplane referred to in the telegram of the Secretary of War should not be permitted exportation into Mexico.

Respectfully,

GEO. W. WICKERSHAM,
Attorney General.

File No. 812.00/3481.

Emilio Vásquez Gómez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Translation.]

HONORABLE SIR: In a manifesto to the Mexican people, of the 17th of February last,[1] I made the following declarations: I continue and will continue to reside in this city without taking, as I have not heretofore taken, any part whatsoever in the armed movement that is going on in the country; but I permit myself, as nothing more than a plain citizen, to recommend to-day to all my partisans who are or may be under arms, the greatest possible order in all their acts, profound respect for and even protection of the life of every peaceable person, be he native or foreign. All just, noble, and patriotic causes are thus conducted; civilization, self-respect, and the dignity of the nation demand it. And at all times and under all circumstances do I specially recommend this in regard to foreigners. They have contributed and will continue to contribute effectively and powerfully, with the capital and beneficial teachings they bring us, to the prosperity of Mexicans and to the progress of the country, and it is necessary that they find in our honest and dignified conduct a sure guaranty and protection for their lives and interests. This must be our invariable course for the justification and credit before the other peoples of the earth, of civilization, and dignity of our nation.

---

[1] Mentioned in the American Ambassador's telegram of Feb. 18, 12 noon.

On yesterday, March 31, I addressed to the press of the City of Mexico a telegram, which I sent to that capital, reading as follows:

> Citizen Francisco I. Madero, President of Mexico:
>
> Although revolutionary movements are respecting lives and interests of men of peace, especially foreigners, I call upon you, the press, and the League for Social Defense, for the good of the mother country and mankind, to recommend to both contending parties order and true respect and protection of the lives and interests of all, especially foreigners, including every prisoner of war; further, that when towns are entered it be done in orderly manner, energetic measures being ordered to extend to all the inhabitants, property, and work true and immediate guaranties of order, respect, and protection and assurance of peace and tranquility.
>
> My humble name is the only one under the revolutionary standard in the whole country which affords full security for immediate peace at the moment of triumph. In the meantime, in view of that uniformity, I avail myself of the influence of my name as a plain Mexican citizen to make these recommendations to the contestants and this sincere call for the good of the motherland and mankind. I beg you, the press, and the League for Social Defense to publish, reproduce, and propagate these sound, patriotic, and humanitarian ideas. It is our common supreme duty to alleviate and remove the sufferings of the motherland.

I may give assurance that the whole united Mexican people will work with resolution and zeal to meet the deep necessities that have caused the present revolution and to maintain the peace, integrity, honor, and independence of the nation, as well as its relations of friendship and sincere cordiality with all the people of the earth, upon the same firm basis of mutual respect of justice and of the respective rights of all. I take pleasure in offering the assurances of my respect and consideration.

San Antonio, Texas, the 1st of April, 1912.

Emilio Vásquez.

Note.—The first message of President Madero to the Congress was delivered on April 1, 1912. It concerns this correspondence only in regard to the rumors of intervention. See pp. 706–707.

File No. 812.113/299.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 2, 1912—12 noon.

Your March 25, 4 p. m. The Government has agreed to take entire charge of shipment of American arms from Vera Cruz, furnishing a Federal guard therefor. Minister of Hacienda thinks the usual duty should be paid. Under the circumstances it perhaps ought to be waived, but I think it good policy to accede and pay the duty.

Wilson.

File No. 812.113/304.

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 2, 1912—11 p. m.

Duty on the shipment of arms and ammunition on steamer Monterey is estimated by Minister of Hacienda at about $16,000 gold, based on weight according to invoice. American colony will find it extremely difficult to make this payment. Perhaps Government here could take part of arms and ammunition in payment of duties. Please instruct.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3492.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, April 3, 1912—10 p. m.
(Received, via El Paso, Tex., April 4, 1912—7.40 p. m.)

New regulation by the military authorities requires passports all persons leaving city. On account censorship my last cipher telegram to the Department was kept by the military authorities an hour before forwarding; another a few days since several hours. Protests seem unavailing.

Money-order service in State discontinued a month ago. Postmaster suggests general warning against the issue of international orders payable here.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.113/281.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 3, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 30th ultimo,[1] inclosing a copy of a letter dated March 28 from Mr. W. R. Morris, assistant traffic manager, American-Hawaiian Steamship Co., 8 Bridge Street, New York City, stating that there has been offered to that company a consignment of metallic cartridges for transportation to the port of Acajutla, in Salvador, Central America, via Mexico.

In reply to your request for an expression of the opinion of this Department relative to this matter, I beg to say that the Department agrees with you that the shipment of cartridges referred to is not in violation of the President's proclamation of March 14, 1912, that instrument expressly putting into operation the joint resolution of Congress with reference to Mexico only.

I have [etc.] HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/355.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1341.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 3, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my March 15, 5 p. m., March 22, 12 noon, April 2, 12 noon, and April 2, 11 p. m., and to the situation which has developed here as a result thereof I have the honor to explain details more fully than was possible within the limits of telegraphic communication.

---

[1] Not printed.

In conveying the wishes of the American colony for arms and ammunition I did so in the knowledge that the authorized committee of this organization had consulted, with reference to their contemplated action, with the Governor of the Federal District and with the Minister of Interior, and I felt further fortified by the fact that Mr. Calero, Minister for Foreign Affairs, had said to me that this Government had no objection to Americans or other foreigners arming themselves for the defense of their persons or property against mob violence. It is well known and established that the Government, and especially the municipal authorities, are desirous of having the foreign elements of the population well armed, not only for reasons relating to their safety but for the moral effect which such organizations would have upon the disorderly elements of this city. I assumed therefore that this Government, in the absence of reassuring and convincing statements to foreigners of its ability to protect them, would be glad to aid in furnishing all foreign organizations with arms or to aid them in obtaining such from elsewhere. Under the influence of these views and because of a desire to avoid newspaper and public comments upon our plans, I deferred asking for the permit for the entry of the arms until Monday, the 1st, when Mr. Madero, the Minister of Hacienda, agreed to take entire charge of the shipment from Vera Cruz to Mexico City and mentioned the probable duty as about $1,000. Following this I arranged for Captain Burnside, the military attaché of this Embassy, to see Mr. Madero the next day and furnish the invoice of the shipment. At this interview, Mr. Madero, who, it appears, had either misunderstood or miscalculated the weight of the arms and the quantity of the ammunition, informed Captain Burnside that the amount of the duties on the total shipment would be in the neighborhood of $15,500. Upon receipt of this information I immediately sent the Department my April 2, 11 p. m., and this morning, realizing that the American colony in its present straitened circumstances would be unable to raise the amount necessary to pay the duties within a practical period, I saw Mr. Calero and said to him that, while I quite understood that the Government was exercising its rights in levying the duties, the abnormal situation which prevailed here, and the widespread belief that the Government might not under certain circumstances be able to afford protection to foreigners, would appear to warrant the Government in lessening the rigidity of its regulations, more especially as these arms were addressed to the Embassy. Mr. Calero replied in substance that the French and German ministers had made requests similar to mine, which had been denied, and that he saw no way in which the Government could consistently depart from the established regulations in behalf of the American colony. I then asked him if the Government would consider the proposition to take a certain number of arms and ammunition in lieu of the duties. This tentative proposition, which I made without knowledge as to the Department's views, he agreed to lay immediately before the President and the Minister of Hacienda with his recommendation and to notify me of their conclusions later in the day. In the event that the Government indicates no disposition to relax from the position which it has taken, I shall then, with the Department's approval, submit a proposal that the Mexican Government take the entire shipment to its own account and immediately turn the arms and ammunition over to the American colony for their free and absolute use for a stated period.

I have [etc.] HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 812.113/304.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 4, 1912—1 p. m.

Referring to shipment of arms and your April 2, 11 p. m. The Department believes that if the duty must be paid it should be done in the regular way. However, in view of the special regard that has recently been shown for the welfare of the Mexican nation by this Government it would be very little for that Government to do to permit the entry of this shipment of arms and ammunition for the American colony free of duty. The Department is under the impression that a recent shipment for the German colony at Mexico City was admitted duty free. If that was the case, request similar treatment for American colony. The Department does not favor giving Mexican Government part of shipment in payment of duty.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/343.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 5, 1912—9 p. m.

The Government seems under the impression that we are not considering Mexico as a civilized nation, which view, however, erroneous, will be dissipated by accepting their program in regard to duty on shipment of arms, which, as far as I can see, involves no principle. Therefore it has this evening been agreed that the consignment of arms and 250,000 rounds of ammunition should be admitted subject to duties, which will be paid by American colony; that the bill of lading should be assigned to a committee of the American colony named by me to receive and distribute the arms; and that I shall direct the return of the remaining ammunition to consignor at New York City.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3519.

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 6, 1912—10 p. m.
(Received April 7, 1912—1 p. m.)

A tremendous ovation for De la Barra, just arrived. He is speaking in favor of peace and maintenance of law and order, but is rather vague in his attitude toward the Government.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3533.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate,
Chihuahua, April 7, 1912—10 p. m.
(Received, via El Paso, Tex., April 8, 1912—8.45 p. m.)

Reported Haberiline,[1] American, arrested for attempting leave Jimenez contrary orders rebel commander last Friday. Still incarcerated incommunicado. Contrary statement newspapers; no appeal received from prisoner this office and, inferring refusal permission on the part of rebels, I wrote Orozco to-day urgently requesting immediate statement, but communication apparently ignored. Rebels all sullen because of accepted belief partiality of United States for established Government.

Rebel chiefs issued manifesto yesterday repudiating Vásquez Gómez entirely.

Orozco has taken no action repudiating Gonzalo Enrile's letter abusive of the United States, addressed to the President, reprinted and circulated here. But he repudiates the likewise abusive manifesto circulated at the same time.

Letcher.

File No. 812.113/350.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 9, 1912—5 p. m.

Department desires permission for importation into Mexico of additional 100 rifles, 20,000 rounds ammunition for consul, Tampico. Also 150 rifles, 50,000 cartridges, consul, Guadalajara; 600 rifles, 400,000 cartridges, consular agent, Guaymas. Also whatever amount may be needed by Americans Los Mochis, and consular agent, Guaymas. Request issuance proper orders to customhouses Tampico, Vera Cruz for Guadalajara, Nogales for Guaymas, and consul, New York, for Tampico and Vera Cruz.

Huntington Wilson.

---

[1] Spelled Heberlein in later telegrams.

File No. 812.918/24.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 9, 1912—7 p. m.

Department's March 29, 7 p. m. Inquire whether any relief can be expected as to censorship of very conservative Associated Press service. What answer has Mexican Government made as to its general policy in the matter?

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3547.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 9, 1912—9 p. m.

A censor placed in the Associated Press Bureau again to-day. Under instructions from Mr. Stone the local representative refused to make use of the line. Censorship on all press telegrams to the United States exists.

The newspapers here are filled with elaborate articles, purporting to show our plan of invasion of Mexico. Maps illustrate the articles. These reports are having a dangerous effect in arousing resentment, which may at any time take the form of violence. I am endeavoring by moderate utterances to calm the excitement.

The anticipated strike on the National Railways is giving a great impetus to the emigration of Americans and other foreigners.

The revolutionary movement in the south grows stronger each day.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/364.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 9, 1912—10 p. m.

The shipment of arms for the American colony will leave Vera Cruz to-night. Owing to the duties—about $7,500 gold, and the charge for the special train and escort, about $750 gold—the price of each rifle, with 100 rounds of ammunition, will amount to about $20 gold.

No guns or ammunition will be delivered by the military attaché except upon payment either by the committee or by individuals.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3548.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, April 9, 1912—10 p. m.

Military authorities have confiscated a large lot of private mail sent by American passenger last night. There is every reason to believe my letter to the Consul at Paso del Norte, containing telegram to the Department, was included. Said telegram reported the expected shooting of American named Fountaine[1] at Parral this morning. Protested against the act last night and instructed consular agent protest before the military authorities Parral. The newspapers say that Fountaine was shot 5 this morning notwithstanding.

Attitude rebel authorities insolent toward this office and Americans generally.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.002/23.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1351.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 9, 1912.

SIR: I beg to transmit herewith copies of my letter to Mr. Calero of the 8th instant and his reply of the 9th instant on the occasion of his relinquishing the duties of Minister for Foreign Affairs for Mexico.

I have to-day telegraphed[2] the Department that Mr. Pedro Lascurain took the oath of office as Minister for Foreign Affairs to-day, and at once took up the duties of his office.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 8, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. CALERO: Mr. Schuyler advised me yesterday of your announced intention to lay down the portfolio of the Mexican Foreign Office on the 9th. It will of course be a great satisfaction to know that in surrendering this post, the affairs of which you have managed with such distinguished ability and marked success under most difficult circumstances, you are to pass to another of a different character but not inferior importance.

Before your official character as Minister for Foreign Affairs ceases I wish to express to you in this informal and personal way my high appreciation of the considerate, helpful, and sincere attitude which you have maintained toward this Embassy and toward the international matters which it has brought to your attention.

I shall hope to continue in private life the pleasant and cordial relations which I have formed with you in your official character and I wish you all happiness and success in whatever sphere of life the interests of your country or your own interests may call you.

I am [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Mexico, D. F., April 9, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: I have just received your kind informal note of yesterday in which you are pleased to express generous sentiments of sympathy toward me and of estimation of my labors as Minister for Foreign Affairs. I am deeply grateful for this manifestation of friendship, and I wish that you may know that, in the very frequent visits which we have had by reason of our official posts, I have always found in you an excellent disposition toward the Mexican Government, breadth of views, and a most just purpose of aiding the country to satisfactorily dispose of its difficulties of an international character.

---

[1] Elsewhere spelled Fountain.

[2] Not printed.

For the cooperation with which you have aided me and for your reiterated proofs of friendship, I express to you my deepest appreciation.

With the lively desire that our private and official relations may continue to be as pleasing as they have been up to the present, I am [etc.]

Manuel Calero.

File No. 812.918/25.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 10, 1912—11 a. m.

Regarding censorship; Department's April 9, 7 p. m. The Government's attitude seems to have been explicitly reported in my April 1, 11 p. m. I have made no categorical and formal inquiry relative to Associated Press or other news agencies, but the President and Mr. Calero have indicated to me their intention not to permit sending of news prejudicial to the Government. Government will probably forbid Associated Press the free exercise of its independence. Please instruct definitely whether or not to make formal representations.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3546.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate, Chihuahua.
(Received April 10, 1912—2.30 p. m.)

Parral taken 4th instant without struggle by rebels, Villa retreating. Violence prevailed; none was respected. Americans suffered less than other foreigners. Salazar commanded rebels. I suggest that occurrences at Parral, which will circulate among Americans here, offer reason for quiet suggestions from this office to Americans to leave as fast as may be consistent with good order. Request instructions as to discreet steps this direction.

Letcher.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.

[Telegram in care of Consul at Ciudad Juárez.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 10, 1912—4 p. m.

Immediately renew insistent demand for the prompt release of Heberland.[1] The Department is informed that he is a consulting engineer of good standing, that he was conforming to all local regulations; and that on no ground whatever he was thrown into a filthy prison and is still detained there. Telegraph result.

---

[1] Spelled Heberlein elsewhere.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Ciudad Juárez.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 10, 1912.

Press reports that rebels have taken from George Drake official despatches which he was carrying to El Paso for Consul at Chihuahua. Investigate, and, if true, discreetly but vigorously endeavor to secure despatches.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3538.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 11, 1912—2 p. m.

Following telegram signed Pascual Orozco, dated April 5, has been received by the President. The Department naturally can not recognize Orozco and no acknowledgment can be made. The telegram is accordingly quoted to you as useful information only.

> I have received a copy of a letter sent to you last February by Gonzalo Enrile from El Paso, Tex., and which he has just had reprinted and recirculated in the city of Chihuahua. As Mr. Enrile is employed in some of the offices of the revolution in Chihuahua, and it might therefore be supposed that I had authorized the republication of said letter, which I characterize as highly offensive, I protest, as a Mexican and as supreme head of the present revolution in this country, against the ideas expressed therein, for they are unpatriotic, tending to break friendly relations between two great peoples, who, being united geographically and by colossal interests, ought to further consolidate this union by means of the bonds of mutual respect and confraternity.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 11, 1912—3 p. m.

Your request for instructions as to informing Americans they should leave Chihuahua received in undated telegram.[1] Department must depend upon you and Americans themselves in the first instance to decide whether or not local conditions warrant their departure for a place of safety; but it feels that you may make quiet suggestions to Americans to leave as soon and as unobtrusively as possible in case you still believe it necessary.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] See telegram received April 10.

File No. 812.918/25.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 11, 1912—3 p. m.

No formal representations desired in matter presented in your April 10, 11 a. m.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3576.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate,
Chihuahua, April 11, 1912—8 p. m.
(Received, via El Paso, Tex., April 13, 1912—2.18 a. m.)

Orozco, rebel military commander, has just sent me a most remarkable letter saying that in view of nonrecognition belligerency on the part of the United States the rebel government would refuse to recognize consular representatives of the United States, and that henceforth I should not address the military commander on behalf of my Government. This letter was received an hour after delivery my note respecting detention American engineer at Jimenez and purports to be in answer to my protest against the seizure of mail.

Letcher.

File No. 812.113/388.

The Attorney General to the Secretary of State.

Department of Justice,
Washington, April 11, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th instant,[1] and its inclosures, relating to the general matter of exceptions to the prohibition of the President's proclamations of March 14, 1912.

I have advised those interested in procuring orders making such exceptions that the President will deal with each particular case as it arises, and that the application should state the facts showing the necessity for the exception and that the dynamite or powder will reach its destination in safety and not fall into the hands of the insurrectionists or otherwise contribute to the disorder in Mexico. And in each instance, in making my recommendation to the President, I have been guided by your advice on the condition of that part of the Mexican territory through which the shipment must pass.

It seems to me that there is no need for action in this Department, and I have the honor to suggest that you will hereafter advise the President directly on these requests. This will render it unnecessary for me to suggest answers to the several inclosures of these letters.

Respectfully,

Geo. W. Wickersham.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 812.113/393.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 13, 1912—9 p. m.

Arms have arrived. Military and customs authorities at Vera Cruz are delaying shipment of ammunition, as they have no military escort. I sent the consul at Vera Cruz the following telegram:

> Say to the collector of customs and to military commander that their excuses for not forwarding ammunition are regarded as entirely frivolous, as the ammunition needs no guard, being utterly unsuited for any arms except those with which it came; that their attitude is regarded here with the gravest suspicion, and in my name and in the name of the President of the United States insist emphatically that this ammunition shall at once be forwarded to its destination. Use the utmost diligence and report immediately.

Alarm at the delay is very great in the American colony here.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/388.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Attorney General.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 13, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th instant, relative to exceptions to the prohibition of the President's proclamation of March 14, 1912, of shipments of dynamite, powder, and other articles that would naturally come within its purview when exported to Mexico for industrial purposes, and beg to say that this Department is entirely willing to take charge of the matter of such exceptions and to prepare the necessary correspondence in connection therewith.

As your letter under acknowledgement gives no indication that the President has been informed of the action thereby taken, I beg to suggest that it would not be inappropriate for your Department to forward to the President, for his information, a copy of this letter, together with a copy of the letter to which it replies, in view of the fact that the matter was referred to your Department by him.

In the meantime this Department will submit to the President all matters of shipments of the character above mentioned.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/388.

The Acting Secretary of State to the President.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 13, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for your information, a copy of a letter dated April 11 from the Attorney General requesting that, in the future, this Department handle the correspondence relating to exceptions from the prohibition of your proclamation of March 14, 1912, of shipments to Mexico of dynamite for industrial purposes.

I also have the honor to inclose a copy of the reply which this Department is making to the Attorney General to-day.

This Department is entirely willing to handle this matter and to prepare the correspondence relating to individual exceptions of shipments of dynamite that has heretofore been prepared by the Attorney General, provided this arrangement meets with your approval.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/366.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 13, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Referring to my letter to you of March 16, 1912, stating that the question of exceptions to your proclamation of March 14, 1912, prohibiting the exportation of arms and ammunition from any place in the United States into Mexico had come before this Department in three aspects, namely, (1) shipments of arms and munitions of war to the established Government in Mexico; (2) shipments of large amounts of explosives to private enterprises in Mexico; and (3) shipments of arms and ammunition for the protection of American citizens in Mexico, I beg to mention in connection with the last-stated classification that the Southern Pacific Railroad of Mexico has now requested that an exception be made in their behalf of about 600 guns and about 120,000 rounds of ammunition to be shipped for the use of the Southern Pacific Railroad in the defense of their American employees and of Americans along the line of their railroad. These arms and this ammunition are to be shipped by the Southern Pacific Railroad of Mexico, via Nogales, to either Epes Randolph or Charles Hine, the latter being vice president and general manager of the railroad.

The information before this Department leads me to believe that this shipment is likely to reach its destination in safety, as the territory through which it must travel is under the control of the established Government of Mexico. In view of this circumstance, it would appear that there would be no objection to making an exception in this case and to granting permission to allow the shipment in question to be sent forward to its destination through the United States customhouse at Nogales.

I inclose herewith for signature by you, should it meet with your approval, a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury[1] with regard to this shipment, prepared along the lines of previous letters transmitted to you by the Attorney General.

For your information and reference, I inclose a copy of the letter[1] addressed to the Department by the Southern Pacific Railroad, from which you will note that the company desires that action be taken upon this request with as little delay as your other duties will permit.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 812.00/3610.

The Acting Secretary of State to the President.

Department of State,
Washington, April 13, 1912.

My Dear Mr. President: The practical murder by the insurrectionists of Fountain, an American citizen who was fighting with the Federals; the conspicuous increase of truculence on the part of Orozco and the insurrectionists generally, as witnessed by Orozco's absurd attitude toward our Consul at Chihuahua; his seizure of American mails, etc.; the killing or wounding of several American railroad employees; and the continued depredations upon American property, appear to the Department to make it opportune now to make not only to the Mexican Government but to the Mexican people a strong protest and warning. Whether or not such action shall prove at all efficacious, at any rate it appears to the Department prudent to make such a record at this time.

I therefore have the honor to submit herewith a draft telegram to the embassy at Mexico City[2] and one to the Consulate at Chihuahua.[1] It is suggested that the textual representations therein contained be telegraphed plain; that the telegram to the Embassy be repeated for the information of all consular officers in Mexico, and that the textual representations be given to the press here.

Under separate cover I submit for your signature, if you approve them, and with explanatory letters, orders[2] looking to the permission of exportations of arms, first, to Americans on the west coast, notably at Guaymas, Los Mochis, and Mazatlan (these arms are understood to be intended for the employees of the Southern Pacific Railroad, any surplus to be given to such other American citizens as may need them), and, second, for British residents in the northern part of Sonora, notably at Izabal.

There have been for months serious complaints by Americans in the neighborhood of Los Mochis, in the State of Sinaloa, where, roughly, a couple of hundred of our citizens are engaged in agriculture and truck farming. This is the most important group of Americans, except the employees of the Southern Pacific Railroad, to be found on the west coast. Los Mochis is near the port of Topolobampo. American citizens there have long been clamoring for the sending of an American warship. The Department has hesitated to recommend that step because it was feared it would excite ill-disposed Mexicans to reprisals upon our citizens upon some false idea that the sending of a ship was a sign of intervention. The Department has, moreover, pointed out to the citizens in question that if they wish to leave they can do so by taking the railroad to Guaymas, and thence north by rail into the United States, or to Mazatlan, from which port there are frequent steamers to San Diego and San Francisco. In the last two or three days, however, the situation has changed. The railroad has now suspended service in that locality. The American citizens in the neighborhood of Los Mochis are thus left isolated, unable to leave, and, indeed, out of communication, the telegraph being apparently out. Their situation gives the Department serious concern, and we have debated the question of sending an army transport to get news of them and to give them an opportunity to leave, the expense to be defrayed, if necessary, from our emergency fund; but since their departure from their small properties will mean their almost complete and perhaps irreparable ruin, it is doubted whether they would avail of the opportunity to leave, and therefore an armed vessel capable of protecting them would seem more appropriate. Here, however, one encounters the fear of wounding Mexican susceptibilities and thus increasing the danger of reprisals, however unreasonable and unwarranted. Indeed, the Mexican feeling in these matters seems to be so morbid that perhaps the Government itself might be affected by the same unreasonable feelings.

---

[1] See post, telegram to the American Ambassador dated April 14, 3 p. m.
[2] Not printed.

The other day the French Ambassador told me that he had a cruiser at Guadalupe awaiting orders. In our dilemma it occurs to me that if we are likely to have to send ships the shock might be broken and the Mexicans might be, to some extent, estopped from raising the cry of intervention, with its disastrous consequences to our people, if some European nations should be the first to have ships drop in at Mexican ports. If this idea should commend itself to you, I might be able to arrange, very confidentially, to have the French and also possibly the British and German Ambassadors each have a ship go to some Mexican port merely to observe the situation. If this course were approved, of course it would have to be carried out with the utmost circumspection and so with the avoidance of the slightest appearance of suggestion from the United States. As to the best manner of dealing with this particularly very difficult situation, I have the honor to await your directions.

Another disquieting element in the Mexican situation to-day is the fact that the American railway employees are going to walk out on the 17th instant. The Embassy thinks that this will much hinder passenger traffic. I considered suggesting on this ground that the time was ripe for a reiteration of the warning to American citizens to withdraw. Because probably the great majority of those disposed to withdraw have already done so and because a reiterated warning might cause too much excitement and revive dangerous rumors of intervention, I concluded not to make the suggestion at this time, although I think it not unlikely that it may be well some time later on to give fresh warning to withdraw if conditions continue to grow worse.

Beyond what is indicated herein the Department is not aware of any radical changes in the Mexican situation. We are still awaiting news of some engagement in the neighborhood of Torreon, and if this engagement should be decisive either way it would probably render the whole situation much easier for this Government to deal with.

The delay in the taking place of the expected battle is noteworthy and may indicate a lack of energy on the part of the Government. If it does, then the representations recommended in this letter are, I believe, calculated to increase the feeling of the Mexican Government that it must restore order. As for the truculent attitude of Orozco, beyond the causes which suggest themselves, it may, of course, be symptomatic of discouragement or desperation on his part. Indeed, his attitude appears so rash that one can not help suspecting that he may even be courting trouble with the United States as a last resort in his desire to ruin Madero at any cost.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/386.

The Acting Secretary of State to the President.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 13, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: In pursuance of your general instructions relative to the matter, I have the honor to submit herewith a letter addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury,[1] prepared in substantially the same manner as the two letters which accompanied my communication to you of the 11th [1] instant, directing exception under your proclamation of March 14, 1912, in the case of a specific consignment of arms and munitions of war for the use of British subjects resident on the estate of the Sonora Land & Timber Co. (Ltd.), at Yzabal, State of Sonora, Mexico, referred to in the note of April 12, 1912 (and inclosures), from the British Ambassador at this capital, copies of which are inclosed herewith.[2]

This Department favors excepting the arms and ammunition asked for from the operation of your proclamation of March 14, 1912, and if the exception of the above-mentioned shipment meets with your approval I shall so notify the British Ambassador in order that he may take the necessary steps to have the arms and ammunition go forward, stating, however, that this Government can assume no obligation or responsibility with regard to them.

I beg to request that when you sign the inclosed letter to the Secretary of the Treasury it be returned to this office so that proper information and particulars can be supplied to the Treasury Department for the issuance of orders to the customs officers concerned.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/387.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 14, 1912—2 p. m.

You will request Mexican Government to grant permission for entry into Mexico 150 rifles via Nuevo Laredo, and to telegraph immediately appropriate instructions to officials concerned. Was it possible to secure from Vera Cruz the 50,000 rounds ammunition desired?

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] April 13?

[2] Not printed.

File No. 812.00/3593a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 14, 1912—3 p. m.

Communicate the following without delay to the Minister for Foreign Affairs:

> The enormous destruction, constantly increasing, of valuable American properties in the course of the present unfortunate disturbances, the taking of American life contrary to the principles governing such matters among all civilized nations, the increasing dangers to which all American citizens in Mexico are subjected, and the seemingly possible indefinite continuance of this unfortunate situation compel the Government of the United States to give notice that it expects and must demand that American life and property within the Republic of Mexico be justly and adequately protected, and that this Government must hold Mexico and the Mexican people responsible for all wanton or illegal acts sacrificing or endangering American life or damaging American property or interests there situated.
>
> Meanwhile, it should be apparent to all sections of the Mexican people that those who spread baseless rumors or provoke just resentment by attacks upon Americans or other foreign persons or property are working against the best interests and the honor of their country, for which the United States is known to hold, and in the present grave situation is manifesting, the greatest and most sincere friendship, and are seeking for their own selfish ends to burden the future of their countrymen with heavy obligations of enormous damages for their wrongful acts.
>
> How strongly the Government of the United States deprecates even the very few cases of participation by its citizens in the present insurrectionary disturbances is well known to the people of Mexico, and was shown by the President's proclamation of March 2 and the various other acts of this Government looking to the same end. The Government of the United States must insist and demand that American citizens who may be taken prisoners, whether by one party or the other, as participants in the present insurrectionary disturbances, shall be dealt with in accordance with broad principles of equitable justice and humanity, as well as in accordance with the principles of international law which may be involved, and to which the people of Mexico have given their assent and adherence in numerous international engagements. This Government must hold the Mexican people strictly responsible for any departure from such principles.
>
> Notwithstanding press reports that certain Mexican officers have announced a contrary policy, the Government of the United States has every confidence in the disposition of the Government of Mexico in the premises, and must request that appropriate instructions be immediately issued to the proper military officers and officials in the sense indicated.

The Consul at Chihuahua, Mr. Letcher, reports receiving a letter[1] from Orozco which states that in view of nonrecognition belligerency on the part of the United States the insurrectionary heads would refuse to recognize consular representatives of the United States, and that henceforth he should not address the military leader of the insurrection on behalf of this Government. In this connection the Department is sending to Letcher a copy of the above communication to the Foreign Office, directing him to deliver copy to Orozco, with statement that it sets forth the attitude which must be assumed by this Government, and directing him to make further representations as follows:

> The Government and people of the United States have viewed with grave concern the practical murder under the positive order of one of your chief lieutenants of an American citizen who is reported to have been taken prisoner during or at the end of a regular engagement, the prisoner said to have been dressed in regular uniform and obviously one of the regular forces of the established Government of Mexico. The Government of the United States must insist, in so far as the treatment of American citizens taken prisoners by whatever force is concerned, that the rules and principles accepted by civilized nations as controlling their actions in time of war shall be followed and observed, and the Government of the United States must give notice that any deviation from such a course and, indeed, any maltreatment of any American citizen will be deeply resented by the American Government and people, must be fully answered for by the Mexican people, thus tending to difficulties and obligations which it is to the interest of all true Mexican patriots, as it is the desire of the United States, to avoid.

---

[1] See his telegram to the Secretary, dated April 11, 8 p. m.

When you address the Minister for Foreign Affairs, point out that the press reports received here state that General Villa has threatened that if Orozco murders American citizens taken prisoners from the Federals he will retaliate by murdering American citizens taken prisoners from the rebels. Point out the utter inhumanity of such action, and say that retaliation by the Federal forces should certainly never be used against American citizens.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3593c.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.[1]

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 14, 1912—3 p. m.

Following telegram sent to Embassy [see telegram to Ambassador Wilson, April 14, 3 p. m., supra].

Immediately present this matter to Orozco, informally and unofficially, according to above instructions, and point out that you are instructed by your Government informally to say that you must continue to exercise your functions and to make representations whenever occasion demands, being an American Consul charged with the protection of American citizens and interests in Mexico and holding an exequatur from the Mexican Government as representing the Mexico people.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3593b.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 14, 1912.

You will communicate the Department's telegram sent you April 14, 3 p. m., to the Consulates General at Mexico City and Monterey for repetition, merely for their information, to all consular officers under their respective supervisions. Add that the Consuls at Chihuahua and Juárez have already been informed, and the former was further instructed as follows [see telegram April 14, 1912, 3 p. m., supra.].

---

[1] Forwarded through American Consulate at Ciudad Juárez.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/405.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Nogales.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 14, 1912—8 p. m.

Arms and ammunition are being shipped in your care, via Nogales, for the defense of the American employees of the Southern Pacific Railroad of Mexico and other Americans along its lines. This shipment is of about 600 guns and about 120,000 rounds ammunition consigned to either Epes Randolph or Charles Hine, the latter being vice-president and general manager of the Southern Pacific Railroad of Mexico. You will deliver these arms and this ammunition only to such Americans as shall satisfy you that they are to be used solely for personal defense, and that no possibility exists of their falling into the hands of persons or of their being used in any way that would promote domestic disorder in Mexico.

This shipment is made in pursuance of permission granted by the President, and will constitute an exception under the provisions of the President's proclamation of March 14. Your distribution of the arms should therefore be in the highest measure cautious and discreet, as the purposes of the President's proclamation would be to that extent frustrated if any of the arms and ammunition sent to you should be used in any way to promote domestic disorder.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 312.11/237a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 15, 1912—8 p. m.

The Department feels uneasy about the 200 or more Americans resident in Los Mochis and vicinity. Ascertain whether Mexican Government can send a ship with troops for their protection, and also gain authentic information as to their situation. What does the Mexican Government propose to do to afford protection on the west coast? Is Mexican opinion still so sensitive that the sending of one or two naval vessels to relieve the fears of the American citizens concerned and to afford them refuge if necessary would be misinterpreted to the peril of Americans in Mexico generally?

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3602.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 15, 1912—9 p. m.

Department's April 14, 3 p. m., has produced a deep but confusing effect upon public mind. It is not generally understood and is variously construed.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3613.

Pascual Orozco to the President.

[Telegram.]

EL PASO, TEXAS, April 15, 1912.

Fountain was executed because he was fighting us, handling a rapid-firing machine in Villa ranks. It was done without consideration what nationality he was. We want the strongest possible friendship with your wonderful people and have no prejudices against them. We mail you full explanation in the matter and feel confident you would approve it.

PASCUAL OROZCO.

File No. 312.112F821.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 15, 1912.

Thoroughly investigate circumstances killing of Fountain and matter of his presumed American citizenship.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/405.

The Acting Secretary of State to the British Ambassador.

No. 1479.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 15, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's note marked "Immediate" of April 12[1] requesting that the President except from the prohibition of his proclamation of March 14, 1912, relative to the exportation of arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States into Mexico, ten Winchester 30-40 rifles and 500 rounds of ammunition to be shipped by the Sonora Land & Timber Co. (Ltd.), of Yzabal, State of Sonora, Mexico, from Douglas, Arizona, via Agua Prieta, to the company's estate at Yzabal for the protection of British subjects there.

---

[1] Not printed.

In reply I am glad to inform you that on April 14 the President granted the permission desired, and the appropriate customs officers of the United States have been duly informed.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/407.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Extract.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 16, 1912—8 p. m.

Governor Jalisco will probably resign soon, and Consul Guadalajara requests 30,000 rounds ammunition as soon as possible, fearing serious disorder after resignation. War Department is to-day issuing orders for despatch 50,000 rounds to him. If in the meantime the need becomes urgent and the colony at Mexico City can spare the ammunition, have sufficient supplies sent from Mexico City.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3616.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams. —Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 16, 1912—9 p. m.

At his own request I sent to the Minister for Foreign Affairs my note based on Department's April 14, 3 p. m., late in the evening, as the Minister wished to avoid public expression. Comments on the alleged undiplomatic character of the note and its publication appear in the press, with report that the Minister will not accept the conclusions of the note. The Cabinet is now considering the Government's reply.

The arms and ammunition for the American colony are now in the hands of the committee.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/420.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 17, 1912—12 noon.

Arms, ammunition, as per your April 9, 5 p. m. I am informed that the matter of importation of arms for Guadalajara, Guaymas, and Tampico has been referred by Foreign Office to the governors of Jalisco, Sonora, and Tamaulipas, respectively, whether for the purpose of delaying action or with a view toward ultimate refusal of requests for entry or in good faith the Embassy can not now determine. Consuls at Guadalajara, Hermosillo, and Tampico instructed to make representations directly to the governors.

Large American emigration during the last few days. The committee of the American colony consequently has more guns than it can dispose of. Consul at Guadalajara advised he can have 150 rifles, with 250 rounds of ammunition each, by paying the duties and price.

WILSON.

File No. 312.112F821/2.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE, Chihuahua.
(Received April 17, 1912—7.30 p. m.)

Department's 15th. Fountain born in Lamesella, New Mexico. Family well known there. Execution plain murder and over protests made to military headquarters here by me personally and to Salazar at Parral by consular agent, according to instructions. Other prisoners captured but only Fountain executed, and there is every reason to believe that execution was because of nationality. There is nothing to show that Fountain had acquired Mexican citizenship. He was executed in full knowledge part of rebels that he was American. Naturalization records are kept at Mexico; it will doubtless be easily ascertainable if Fountain applied for Mexican citizenship papers.

Informal conference with Orozco this morning. Apology made for the tone of correspondence with this office and for seizure mail and delay telegrams.

Basis for unofficial recognition consular functions accepted without reservation as follows:

First. Relief from espionage, person and consulate.

Second. Transmission telegrams cipher or open without delay.

Third. Right of informal conference with commander in chief at any hour.

Fourth. Noninterference with mail.

Fifth. Americans to have a right to appeal to consul at all times regardless of offense.

Sixth. General recognition the right to visit imprisoned Americans whether incomunicado or not.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/3634.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 17, 1912—9 p. m.

Your April 14, 3 p. m. Minister for Foreign Affairs has sent lengthy reply to my note based on its instructions.

The Minister recapitulates my note under five heads, and continues:

> In reply and under express directions from the President of the Republic, I have the honor to say the following to your excellency:
>
> The Mexican Government is fully cognizant of its duties, and neither by its acts nor by manifestation of its officials has given occasion to doubt the sincerity of its decision to enforce respect for the generally accepted principles of international law and the rules which govern the conduct of every civilized nation. Your excellency's Government has recognized this in the note I have the honor to answer and by other reiterated proofs of friendship toward the Government and people of Mexico which have been so highly and so cordially appreciated in this country. For these reasons the Government of Mexico says to your excellency that it finds itself under the painful necessity of not recognizing the right of your Government to give the warning which the aforesaid note contains, since it is not based upon any action imputable to the Mexican Government signifying that it has departed from the observance of the principles and practices of international law.

Since one part of the country is in a state of revolution the Mexican Government holds as its principal duty the suppression of the rebel movement, and if in the regions which have removed themselves from obedience to the legitimate authorities attempts are made against the lives and property of foreigners the legitimate Government of the Republic will not be liable in this regard except under the same conditions as the Government of the United States or that of any other country would be if a rebellion arose in its own territory.

The Government of the United States may rest assured that it is the firm purpose of the Mexican Government to observe, and cause to be observed, the principles of international law and the laws of the country, which are quite in harmony with the former in respect to American citizens and other foreigners who may be among prisoners taken from the rebel forces, and although there does not exist sufficient information for the supposition that the commanders of forces in the service of the Government have declared that they would summarily execute Americans whom they may take prisoners and who are fighting on the side of the rebel forces, orders have been sent to the military commanders that if the case arises of their taking as prisoners of war foreign citizens or subjects the latter will be treated conformably to the laws of the Republic and to international practice.

The Government and the people of Mexico lament that order is still disturbed in a part of the territory of the Republic, and on this account are making continued and earnest efforts to reestablish it, which the Government hopes to accomplish by means of accumulation of military forces, and relying upon the opinion, clearly expressed, of a large majority of the Mexican people, which, your excellency and other foreigners who reside among us must realize, decidedly supports the legitimate Government of the Republic.

Far from disowning any responsibilties incurred by illegal acts committed against the lives and property of foreigners the Government unhesitatingly accepts such responsibilties as long as they by their character pertain to governments in accordance with the principles of international law, but rejects and will always reject any responsibilities of any other character which anyone may attempt to force upon it beyond such principles. My Government recognizes with true pleasure that the Government of the United States would never attempt to force upon it the latter kind of responsibility. The high culture and spirit of justice of the people and Government of your excellency guarantees this, as do the constant proofs of great friendship which have been given to this country under the present circumstances.

It is to be deplored that some Mexicans spread baseless rumors or injure the property and interests of foreigners; nevertheless, concerning the first point, the fault is not exclusively of Mexico, but of all countries whose press delights in publishing sensational and frequently false rumors, and in the second place the authorities of the Republic have always endeavored to punish according to law those causing the injuries to which your excellency alludes.

My Government has taken note of the communication addressed to the rebel Orozco by order of your excellency's Government, through Consul Letcher in Chihuahua, not without lamenting that it has been obliged to proceed thus by force of circumstances, as you say, since this invidual, who is guilty of flagrant violation of the laws of the country in having risen in arms against the legitimate Government, is responsible solely before Mexican tribunals.

The Government and the people of Mexico can not be responsible consequently for the acts of this rebel leader in the form in which the communication addressed to him by order of your excellency's Government indicates.

My Government also deplores the fact that it was informed of the tenor of the instruction to Consul Letcher, of Chihuahua, in the same official note which I have the honor to answer. I avail, etc.,

(Signed) PEDRO LASCURAIN.

The Foreign Office gave the text of the foregoing note to the press to-day.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3690.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1364.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 17, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of the Embassy's note sent to the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs on April 15 last in compliance with the Department's telegraphic instruction of April 14. In the first, second, third, and fourth paragraphs the language of the Department's instruction has been adhered to except in the case of some alterations made to give the document greater clearness. The fifth paragraph has been entirely made over, but the Department's idea has been retained therein, and I therefore think the change should be approved. I believe the Department's idea has been carried out in quoting to the Foreign Office the instructions sent to Consul Letcher.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 15, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to inform your excellency that I am in receipt of telegraphic instructions from my Government to bring the following considerations to the attention of your excellency's Government:

The enormous and constantly increasing destruction of valuable American properties in the course of the present unfortunate revolutionary disturbances, the taking of American life contrary to the principles governing among civilized nations, the increasing dangers to which all American citizens in Mexico are subjected, and the seemingly possible indefinite continuance of this unfortunate situation, compel the Government of the United States to give notice that it expects and must demand that American life and property within the Republic of Mexico be justly and adequately protected and that it must hold Mexico and the Mexican people responsible for all wanton or illegal acts sacrificing or endangering American life or property interests there situated.

Meanwhile it should be apparent to all sections of the Mexican people that those who spread baseless rumors or provoke just resentment by attacks on Americans, or other foreign persons or property, are working against the best interests and the honor of their country—for which the United States is known to hold, and in the present situation is manifesting, the greatest and most sincere friendship—and are seeking for their own selfish ends to burden the future of their countrymen with heavy obligations of enormous damages for their wrongful acts.

How strongly the Government of the United States deprecates even the very few cases of participation by its citizens in the present insurrectionary disturbances is well known to the Government and to the people of Mexico; this disposition has been further evidenced by the President's proclamation of March 2, 1912, and the various other acts of my Government looking to the same end. The Government of the United States must insist and demand that American citizens who may be taken prisoners as participants in the present revolutionary disorders shall be dealt with in accordance with the principles of international law which may be involved, to which the people of Mexico have given their assent and adherence in numerous international engagements. My Government must hold the Mexican people strictly responsible for any departure from such principles.

I must also, in compliance with my instructions, call the attention of your excellency to the fact that certain newspapers report that some Federal officers, notably General Villa, have announced an intention to execute summarily any Americans belonging to the forces of Orozco who may fall into their hands. My Government hesitates to give credence to these reports, but, in view of the pressing urgency of the matter and the possibility of the commission of some act in defiance of international practice, I have the honor to request that appropriate instructions be issued to the proper military officers directing, in cases where Americans are concerned, strict conformity with established and civilized usage.

In concluson I quote to your excellency a copy of an instruction sent by my Government to Consul Letcher at Chihuahua, of which he is directed to furnish a copy to the rebel leader Orozco, as follows:

"The Government and people of the United States have viewed with grave concern the practical murder under the positive order of one of your chief lieutenants of an American citizen who is reported to have been taken prisoner during or at the end of a regular engagement. The prisoner is said to have been dressed in a regular uniform and obviously one of the regular forces of the established Government of Mexico. The Government of the United States must insist, in so far as the treatment of American citizens taken prisoners by whatever force is concerned, that the rules and principles accepted by civilized nations as controlling their actions in time of war shall be followed and observed, and the Government of the United States must give notice that any deviation from such a course, and indeed any maltreatment of any American citizen, will be deeply resented by the American Government and people and must be fully answered for by the Mexican people, thus tending to difficulties and obligations which it is to the interest of all true Mexican patriots, as it is the desire of the United States, to avoid."

I avail myself, etc.,

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3670.

Pascual Orozco to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

EL PASO, TEXAS,
(Received April 20, 1912—9 a. m.)

I have the honor to address you and to say that Mr. Marion Letcher, the American Consul accredited to Mr. Madero's Government, has delivered to me, unofficially, a note sent by the Department of State to the American Embassy in Mexico for communication to Mr. Madero and me. I hasten here to declare that the revolution has been actuated by no sentiment antagonistic to the Government or people of the United States but by the natural desire to occupy the place that belongs to it under the provisions of international law that we have fully observed in every act of ours. The American consuls accredited to Mr. Madero's Government and residing within the territory controlled by the revolution I am leading are not also accredited to us, and on account of these conditions I have thought there was no regular and reciprocal agency for official acts which in my opinion should already be openly recognized, owing to the fact that this revolution meets all requirements for recognition as a de facto government in accordance with international law. The American consuls on the territory occupied by the revolution and the citizens of your country and other nations nevertheless enjoy every protection and guaranty they merit, and I shall pay the best attention to all complaints and petitions they may see fit to lay before me in behalf of their nationals, for it has been my special care to recommend my associates and subordinates to make it their rule to hold the lives and interests of foreigners in the most profound respect. Therefore, and even though the commissions which accredit the consuls of the United States to Mr. Madero's Government should be operative with his Government, by which alone the formal exequatur was issued to them, I am resolved on extending to them the same consideration and on listening to all their applications and requests, wishing thus to perform a pleasant duty of courtesy and demonstrate our desire to maintain the most cordial relations with all the foreign powers. To that end, sir, I beg leave to say to you that the armed movement I am leading meets all the conditions required by international law as condensed at the meeting held at Neuchatel by the Institute of International Law on September 8, 1900:

I. The revolution has conquered a well-defined territorial area by holding a definite part of the national territory.

II. The revolution has been given the elements of a regular government which actually exercises over that part of the territory the apparent and virtual rights of sovereignty, for it possesses a federative entity under its control, a constituted government that has adhered to the revolution, a legislative chamber that has recognized it, and the regular operation of all public services, such as the mails, railways, telegraphs, etc.

III. The contest I am conducting is carried on by organized troops subjected to military discipline and obeying the laws and usages of war.

IV. Throughout the territory occupied by the revolution, the most perfect order and morality prevail and the lives and property of nationals and foreigners are respected, as may be certified by all the consuls residing in that territory.

V. There are no conditions of anarchy in the territory occupied by us, but all the political, civil, and judicial authorities are regularly officiating and the courts are administering prompt justice. Under all these conditions, I think I am in position to obtain the recognition of belligerency, which act, on the part of your Government, would be the first step toward the initiation of frank relations with the present de facto government represented by the revolution, which will beyond a doubt triumph over Mr. Madero's Government, because it is supported by public opinion and justice. Neither about the proceedings of the revolution nor about the true expression of public sentiment has the truth been told by the press, and it becomes necessary to have it reported to their Governments by the foreign consuls themselves.

I deem it an honor, sir, to avail myself of this opportunity to say to your excellency that I have accredited as confidential agent to enter upon relations with your Government Señor Licenciado Don Manuel L. Lujan, who is now in the United States accompanied by a secretary and a military attaché. I should be highly gratified if I could receive through him your Government's reply, even though it were unofficial. But as it may be that in the prosecution of the campaign it will be impossible to avail myself of that channel, I take pleasure in saying that I am ready to listen and attend to all suggestions, requests, or claims that your Government may be pleased to bring before me through any channel that your Department may deem most appropriate.

Offering to your excellency the assurances of my highest and most distinguished consideration,

Reform, liberty, and justice.

P. OROZCO, H.

CHIHUAHUA, April 18, 1912.

File No. 312.11/252.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 19, 1912—1 p. m.

I have no satisfactory answer to Department's April 15, 8 p. m. I have had two interviews with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, but have been unable to get any definite reply. I advise the Department to act according to our own obligations and the pressing necessities of the case, sending a small gunboat or a transport if possible.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3662.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate, Chihuahua.
(Received April 19, 1912—3.30 p. m.)

Two Americans have been imprisoned here since March 16 by the military authorities without any excuse whatever; the detention has just come to my notice. One of them is an honorably discharged sailor of our Navy. Have demanded their immediate release.

Letcher.

File No. 812.113/420.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Hermosillo.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 19, 1912—7 p. m.

The Department quotes, for your information, following telegram received from Embassy. [See telegram from the Ambassador to the Secretary, April 17, 1912, 12 noon.]

Is this matter now in the hands of the Governor, or must it be referred to the Central Government? If the former, immediately make arrangements for the entry of 100 rifles and 20,000 rounds of ammunition for the Richardson Construction Co. and of a shipment not to exceed 300 rifles and 30,000 rounds of ammunition which the War Department is sending to you for distribution to Americans in the Yaqui region other than those who will be provided for by Richardson Construction Co., and to Americans in the vicinity of Los Mochis in case they can be reached.

Knox.

File No. 312.112H35/2.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate,
Chihuahua, April 19, 1912.

Full mail report to-day re Heberlein, including his declaration, follows by mail. He was released 10th instant; now in United States.

Letcher.

File No. 812.113/447.

The American Consul at Guadalajara to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate,
Guadalajara, April 20, 1912—11. a. m.
(Received April 21, 1912—11.30 a. m.)

State and War Departments' promptness in shipping arms almost nullified by the failure Minister for Foreign Affairs to send permits to admit them. Am still uninformed.

Magill.

File No. 312.11/260a.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 20, 1912—1 p. m.

Department's April 15, 8 p. m. To forestall misinterpretation of sending vessel, the Mexican Government should heartily cooperate. Explain to the Minister for Foreign Affairs and then very carefully give currency through the press to the following ideas:

"Suspension of railroad communication and interruption of telegraph service have caused the isolation of American citizens on the west coast, especially at Los Mochis and Mazatlan, where there are large numbers of them. There are, moreover, many reports of increased lawlessness on the west coast. These facts are causing much anxiety to people in the region affected, as well as to their friends in the United States. In view thereof the President will probably send a vessel to get news of the American citizens in the localities referred to and to afford an opportunity to leave the disturbed districts to those who may wish to do so. This seems necessary, because otherwise there is no way to learn of the safety of those Americans who are at present entirely cut off from communication from the outside world, and also of any means of leaving."

Your action should be simultaneous with that of the Department, which will make the same intimation to the press here to appear in the morning papers of the 21st.

Knox.

File No. 812.113/442.

The Mexican Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

Mexican Embassy, Washington, D. C.
(Received April 20, 1912—1.30 p. m.)

With reference to the note of this Embassy No. 1229 of 30th March,[1] your note 155, 6th April,[1] and further correspondence relative to the exportation to Mexico of war materials detained at Marfa, Texas, I have the honor to inform you that the Consul of Mexico at El Paso has informed me that Marshal Nolte, who is detaining said materials, says permission of the Department of Justice is required in order to release said materials. Therefore I request that you be pleased to direct what is necessary.

Gilberto Crespo y Martinez.

File No. 812.113/440.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Hermosillo.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 20, 1912—5 p. m.

Shipment of arms to you are made as exception to provisions of the President's proclamation of March 14. Your distribution of the arms should therefore be in the highest measure cautious and discreet, as the purposes of the President's proclamation would be to that extent frustrated if any of the arms sent to you should be used in any way to promote domestic disorder. Sell arms and ammunition only to such Americans as shall satisfy you that they are to be used solely for personal defense and that no possibility exists of their falling into the hands of persons, or of their being used in any way, that would promote domestic disorder in Mexico.

Knox.

File No. 812.00/3674.

Manuel L. Luján to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

New York, April 20, 1912.

As delegate from General Pascual Orozco, commander in chief of the Mexican revolutionary army, I beg to convey to you the respects of General Orozco. Should the United States Government see fit to honor General Orozco with any communication I, as his representative, with full powers, am instructed to receive such communication and to make known to you my place of residence in this country. I shall be honored to present to your excellency my personal respects and credentials whenever your Government feels so disposed.

Manuel L. Luján,
225 West 80th St., New York City, N. Y.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 812.00/3673.

The American Consul-General at Monterey to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate-General, Monterey.
(Received April 21, 1912—10.40 p. m.)

Much talk about American intervention, which has been twice declared foolish by our Government. There are strong reasons why there ought not to be any military intervention and not one in favor of it.

Hanna.

File No. 812.00/3685.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 22, 1912—9 p. m.

Mr. de la Barra to-day indicated in conversation the opinion that the present Government could not continue to exist, though personally he hoped it might. I advised him to use the utmost diligence in supporting the present Government to the point where it was apparent it could not live and then to use his influence with Congress.

Conditions in Morelos, Guerrero, Sinaloa, and Puebla growing worse. Bodies of revolutionists of from 100 to 300 in different groups have practically surrounded Mexico City.

Wilson.

File No. 312.11/270.

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 23, 1912—2 p. m.

Press reports that the U. S. S. Maryland is now on the way to Los Mochis are giving Minister Foreign Affairs much concern. He says Mexican Government has no objection to Americans there being taken away by the United States, but on account of effect upon public opinion earnestly hopes that vessel may be revenue cutter or transport.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/3700.

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 23, 1912—8 p. m.

The Mexico City press is malignantly denunciatory of the supposed attitude of the Government of the United States. Some papers contain sensational articles practically provocative of attacks on Americans.

Wilson.

File No. 812.113/467a.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 24, 1912—11 a. m.

You may intimate to the Minister for Foreign Affairs that unless a more obliging disposition is shown and permission is soon given for importation of arms, ammunition, for Americans at Guadalajara, Tampico, and in Sonora, this Department will not recommend further exceptions to the President's proclamation of March 14, 1912, in favor of the Mexican Federal Government.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/3707.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 24, 1912—8 p. m.

I am holding Department's April 24, 11 a. m., until to-morrow in the hope that a better disposition may be shown by the Government.

Rebels have completely beleaguered Cuernavaca City and the probabilities are that it will be surrendered before long. The rebels will then hold practical control of the States of Morelos, Guerrerro, and a part of Puebla and will be in a position to move in strong and increasing numbers toward Mexico City. A defeat in the north in addition would produce a serious situation for this city.

The Government, which suppressed an American paper for publishing the news, though giving the Government editorial support, makes no effort to modify the provocative utterances of the local press.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/471.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 25, 1912—3 p. m.

Department's April 24, 11 a. m. Minister this morning stated his utmost good disposition in the matter, but that he was suffering from a lack of cooperation in matters affecting his Department and from antiquated methods of dispatching public business. I believe that the Minister is sincere in his expressions, but I believe that a spirit of obstruction exists in the War Department and perhaps elsewhere.

The exact language of the Department's telegram was read to him but no memorandum was asked for or left, nor shall I treat the matter formally unless otherwise instructed.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3721.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 25, 1912—9 p. m.

A British war vessel will go to Mexican Pacific coast to aid British colonists. This will probably be the signal for visits on both sides by other nations.

Isthmus situation bad; also Oaxaca. Consul at Saltillo reports capture of Cuatro Cienegas by rebels. General situation the same, with signs of unrest in this city.

WILSON.

File No. 312.11/293a.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 25, 1912.

SIR: In order to secure information at first hand as to conditions affecting Americans and American interests on the west coast of Mexico, and to provide a means of escape from the serious situation in which many Americans at various points along the coast have been represented to be by our consular officers, as well as by private persons, I have the honor to request that one of the Army transports now out of commission, of which this Department understands there are two in the harbor of San Francisco, be at once made ready to proceed to the west coast of Mexico for the purposes above mentioned.

The vessel, when ready for sailing, should touch first at the port of San Diego, Cal., there to take on board Mr. Claude E. Guyant, who has been designated by this Department to act as American consular agent at Los Mochis, Sinaloa.

It should then proceed directly to the Bay of Topolobampo, in Sinaloa, and, after having taken on board there such Americans as desire to come away, proceed as soon as possible successively to the ports of Altata and Mazatlan, in the State of Sinaloa; San Blas, in the Territory of Tepic; Manzanillo, in the State of Colima; and then to Acapulco, Guerrero, and Salina Cruz, Oaxaca, at which last place the vessel should await orders as to its return trip. It may be necessary to request that it be ordered to come back up the coast, touching at various ports, to relieve any other Americans who may have been able to come into the ports by that time from interior places.

The Department does not anticipate, from the consular reports it has received, that the number of refugees will be very large, and a ship with capacity for from five to six hundred persons would, it is thought, be adequate for all needs. The vessel should carry, in addition to her regular crew, a good physician, as it has been reported that some of the refugees are ill. It should also be supplied for a cruise to extend over a period of six weeks certainly, and possibly for a longer period, as it may be found necessary to wait at some ports for Americans on their way from the interior, and even to visit some places along the coast other than those mentioned on account of the inability of Americans to reach the ports at which the vessel is now scheduled to stop.

The Department of State can probably arrange to meet the expenses of this trip from its emergency fund, but would prefer not to do so, as the fund is small, in case there are funds at the disposition of the War Department with which the expenses can properly be defrayed.

In the opinion of the Department of State it would be better not to charge the Americans who are taken on board either for passage or for subsistence. The question of the disposition of those who have no homes or friends to go to upon arrival in the United States will be taken up by the Department with the American National Red Cross.

I have [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 312.11/288a.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 26, 1912—2 p. m.

The transport Buford, accommodations about 1,000 persons, ordered to Mexico for the purpose of getting in touch with conditions on the west coast as they affect Americans and their interests and to provide transportation for such Americans as can reach the ports of Topolobampo, Altata, Mazatlan, San Blas, Manzanillo, Acapulco, and Salina Cruz. At San Diego the Buford will take Guyant on board. The Department desires that the Embassy endeavor to have all Americans who may want to come away adequately informed. You may inform the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the foregoing and say in addition that the newspaper reports relative to orders to the Maryland are untrue and that it is hoped the Mexican authorities will do whatever they properly can to aid the Buford on its mission, and to have appropriate orders issued to the various officials concerned at the ports en route, and that no misconstruction will be placed upon its movements

On the afternoon of the 24th the gunboat Yorktown, accompanied by the collier Prometheus, sailed from San José de Guatemala in pursuance of orders issued to her prior to the receipt of your April 23, 2 p. m. It was thought that her small size and the fact that she was near by would keep her mission, which is to get in touch with the situation and to report, from seeming to have any offensive character. Out of deference to the Mexican Government and after a full and satisfactory report from you as to the advisability of such or any other action involving warships, the Department is prepared to have the Yorktown instructed not proceed to Topolobampo, but to continue to San Diego.

It seems likely that the French cruiser Descartes will arrive at some port on the east coast within the next few days. It is hoped that its arrival will break the shock to the Mexican mind of sending even a warship in case of necessity to the west coast.

Knox.

File No. 312.11/304.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 27, 1912—11 a. m.

The British warship Algerine will visit Pacific coast of Mexico and the cruiser Melpomene will visit Tampico and Vera Cruz with a purpose identical with our own. I think our course in sending Yorktown should not be altered on account of expressions of concern of the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs. My opinion is that the coming of our ships, as well as those of other nations, will have a restraining effect upon the public mind. We have about a thousand distressed nationals on the Pacific coast and I advise that they be relieved without apologies in the exercise of our full rights as a friendly nation to dispatch war vessels to the waters of a nation with which we are at complete peace.

If the Department's views agree with those here expressed I should be instructed to advise the Mexican Government that the Yorktown will visit Mexican ports in conjunction with the Buford and to request that its reception by Mexican officials be similar to that of the Buford. The public now knows that British and French ships are en route for Mexico and I discover no signs of resentment except in a few petty newspapers.

WILSON.

File No. 312.11/302.

The Governor of Florida to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

TALLAHASSEE, FLA., April 27, 1912.

Citizens of Florida now in Mexico City have to-day wired me requesting that I ascertain immediately whether United States will intervene Mexico and give them warning. Such information as you can consistently furnish me will be appreciated for this purpose.

ALBERT W. GILCHRIST.

File No. 312.11/302.

The Secretary of State to the Governor of Florida.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 27, 1912.

Your telegram of April 27. The President has positively no intention of intervening in Mexico.

KNOX.

File No. 312.11/306e.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Hermosillo.[1]

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 27, 1912.

The U. S. transport Buford sails April 28 from San Francisco to get first-hand information as to conditions affecting Americans and American interests along the west coast of Mexico and to provide a means for bringing to the United States those Americans who wish to leave. The vessel has no offensive character whatsoever, but to avoid misinterpretation among thoughtless Mexicans you will exercise discretion in making the Buford's mission known to all Americans you can reach. Cooperate in every possible way with officers of the transport, especially in preventing any persons not entitled to this Government's assistance from embarking.

Knox.

File No. 312.11/306d.

The Secretary of State to Claude E. Guyant, American Consul at Los Mochis.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 27, 1912.

Board United States transport Buford at San Diego as soon as it arrives. You will primarily act for a time as American Consul at Los Mochis if local conditions permit; you will have to decide on the spot the question of staying or leaving. If the greater part of Americans there come away and if all means of telegraphic communication are interrupted, little would be gained by remaining. But it may be advisable to remain in order to get a comprehensive report as to the nature and extent of American properties, the damage done to them, etc., in the sense of the Department's circular instruction to consuls in Mexico of March 21.[2] On the Buford's return from the southern ports, it will again touch at Topolobampo. You will then report, with recommendations, upon ways by which communication, particularly telegraphic, can be kept up with the United States, and specifically as to the desirability of establishing special despatch-boat service between Topolobampo and Guaymas or Topolobampo and San Diego.

If there is no need of your remaining at Los Mochis, of course the Department would regard it as a great advantage to have you remain with the Buford and make careful report on conditions at all places visited by that vessel.

The foregoing instructions are, of a necessity, general in nature. The Department will therefore have to depend upon your judgment and to rely upon you to decide how best to act.

Knox.

---

[1] Same to American Consuls at Mazatlan, Salina Cruz, Manzanillo, and Acapulco. The telegram to the Consul at Mazatlan not delivered owing to interruption of telegraphic communication.

[2] Printed under "Claims," p. 959.

File No. 312.11/310a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Los Mochis.

[Telegram in care of Collector of Customs at San Diego.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 29, 1912—6 p. m.

Communication with the American Consul at Mazatlan is cut off and the Department therefore desires you or commanding officer Buford to deliver to him the following telegram from the Department dated April 27, 1912:

> The Department has informed the British Ambassador, in compliance with request of British Government, that if there is room the Buford will be glad to extend assistance to any British subjects who seek it after all Americans have been cared for.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 312.11/304.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 30, 1912—1 p. m.

Your April 27, 11 a. m. The Department will let the British and French warships arrive at Mexican ports before passing finally upon the question of the advisability of sending an American warship.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 312.11/324.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 30, 1912—10 p. m.

I am requested by Americans on west coast to ask that some foreigners, especially Spaniards, be taken on board Buford in case of necessity, as they have suffered enormous losses and will be in the greatest danger in the event of trouble.

Wilson.

File No. 312.11/324.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 1, 1912—4 p. m.

Your April 30, 10 p. m. Since the Buford sailed the British Embassy here has requested that British subjects be assisted when possible. Department replied that if there is room after Americans have been cared for Buford will be glad to extend assistance to British subjects, and has so instructed the Buford. You may inform the Americans who approached you and the consulates on the west coast that Department will endeavor to have Buford similarly instructed regarding Spaniards and refugees of other nationalities.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3771.

Manuel L. Luján to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

NEW YORK, May 1, 1912.

I have the honor to transmit to your excellency the following, being the contents of a telegram received by me from General Orozco:

> You can assure State Department that revolutionary party is giving Americans and other foreigners friendly and absolutely fair treatment. Have guaranteed the safety of all foreigners and their property. Every case of an individual outrage against a foreigner or his property is being punished to the full severity of the law. Deny absolutely that we have forced foreigners or Mexicans to make loans to us. Only public loan we have secured is one of 200,000 pesos, raised by voluntary subscription among bankers, merchants, and property owners of Chihuahua. Chamber of commerce of city of Chihuahua secured this loan. Expect important battles soon south of Jimenez. Have perfected organization of our forces. Now have 12,000 men armed and completely equipped with ammunition and rations in State of Chihuahua alone. In other sections of country there are 40,000 more men equally well armed, allied with revolutionary party and loyal to me. Revolutionary party completely controls States of Chihuahua, Sinaloa, Morelos, Guerrero, part of State of Mexico, and almost all of Federal District. New campaigns under way in Tamaulipas, Nuevo Leon, Coahuila, Zacatecas, and Sonora. There is sympathetic feeling for revolutionary party throughout country. Newspapers in City of Mexico strongly inclined in our favor. Public opinion strong against Madero—that, too, despite fact his answer to United States note was designed to stir sentiment in his favor. Madero has held several public meetings which he has crowded with paid shouters. Last night there was big public demonstration in city of Chihuahua in favor of revolution.

MANUEL L. LUJÁN.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 1, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note No. 1397,[1] of the 29th ultimo, in which, in compliance with instructions received by you from your Government, you state that on April 25 foreign concerns operating in the interior of the State of Chihuahua advised the Department of Foreign Relations of Mexico that they have enough coal to last but a short time, and express the opinion that if coal were imported at Ciudad Juárez and other points in the State of Chihuahua from the United States the rebels might seize the fuel for the operation of their trains between Chihuahua and Ciudad Juárez. You state that communication will soon be cut off in that vicinity, and request, as a means of effective assistance to the Federal forces of Mexico, that instructions be issued to the Northern Railway to suspend all traffic between El Paso, Texas, and Ciudad Juárez, Chihuahua.

---

[1] Not printed.

The Department has given careful attention to your note under acknowledgement and regrets that it can not entertain the request contained therein.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3690.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 804.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 1, 1912.

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your despatch No. 1364, of the 17th ultimo, with which you transmit a copy of a note to the Mexican Government which you presented to the Minister for Foreign Affairs in pursuance of the Department's instruction of April 14, 3 p. m., relative to the responsibility of Mexico and the Mexican people for American lives and property in Mexico and the treatment of Americans captured as prisoners of war.

Inasmuch as the representations which the Department desired to make had received the approval of the President in the form in which they were telegraphed to you, and were given to the press textually and undoubtedly so reached the Mexican Government through that medium, and as the copy of your note to the Mexican Government which accompanies your despatch under acknowledgment shows you to have made certain alterations and omissions in the text quoted to you in the Department's telegram, the Department desires you to file at the Foreign Office, in addition to your original note, a note communicating to the Mexican Government textually the instructions quoted to you above referred to.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 312.11/359.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, May 4, 1912—1 p. m.

The Embassy is constantly receiving urgent appeals from American citizens who, on account of the widespread disturbances and business depression, have lost all their property through no fault of their own. In many cases they are unable to remain longer in the interior. Are there any funds, Red Cross or other, which could be placed at the disposal of the Embassy to be used with the greatest discretion and only after thorough investigation of each case for temporary relief of such persons and for returning them to the United States?

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3801.

The American Consul at Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juárez, May 4, 1912.

Special envoy of Pascual Orozco to-day formally appointed Vásquez Gómez Provisional President of Mexico at Ciudad Juárez, where the seat of government will for the present remain.

EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/3834.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico City, May 7, 1912—8 p. m.

The original text of Department's instruction of April 14, 3 p. m., has to-day been transmitted to the Foreign Office in pursuance of Department's instruction No. 804 of May 1.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3828.

The American Consul at Nuevo Laredo to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nuevo Laredo, May 7, 1912—8 p. m.

Emilio Vásquez Gómez has been ordered by Orozco to leave Mexico. Orozco is dissatisfied with the policy of Vásquez Gómez during his brief provisional presidency.

GARRETT.

File No. 812.00/3963.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 1410.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, May 15, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. KNOX: Quickly following the transmission of my despatch of March 20 came the Federal defeats in the battles fought about Torreón, a development of worse conditions throughout the Republic, and especially in the States of Sinaloa, Guerrero, Morelos, and the isthmian part of Oaxaca. The Government's marked inefficiency and [sic] the conduct of its campaign in the north, and its apparently inadequate and blundering methods in meeting emergencies in other parts of the Republic have had the effect of producing here and perhaps generally a profound skepticism as to its ability to successfully meet the hourly increasing dangers which are encompassing it.

There are foreigners who take a more cheerful view of the situation than this, and who believe that, with the triumph of the Federals in the north, the backbone of the revolution will be broken and order will be restored. I wish that I could share in these views, and I shall be the first to adopt them when assured that they are well founded; but, believing as I do that the disease in the Mexican body politic is inherent, I can see no cure for the situation until the Mexican people as a whole become aroused to the fact that the nation is rapidly drifting into anarchy and until its ablest and best citizens join in active and patriotic support of the present administration. Of this I see no signs at present.

I have noted with some surprise Ambassador Calero's statement in the American press that conditions in Mexico were improving and that at the present time only one State, viz, Chihuahua, was in rebellion against the Government. No one knows better than Mr. Calero that his optimistic views of the situation here are not justified by the facts. Mr. Calero's additional statement that there is no anti-American sentiment in Mexico is, I regret to say, not founded on fact. The existence of this sentiment has been the cause of great concern to this Embassy for the past year and a half and the subject of frequent formal and informal discussions with the Foreign Office. The anti-American sentiment has been created by the Mexican press and is largely artificial, but it exists and must be reckoned with. It is true that the sentiment is political and not personal, as Americans treat their Mexican employees better than any other foreigners or Mexicans, and are honest and just in their dealings with them; but considerations of this character are all swept away by the hostile attitude of the press and the violent expressions of many public men. There is no disposition whatever on the part of either the press or of public men to render either justice or proper consideration to our motives, and there seems to be a complete lack of appreciation of the frequent and valuable services which we have rendered from time to time. I do not believe that this anti-American sentiment can be conjured away by a conciliatory attitude, but it may be repressed and possibly finally obliterated by the maintenance by our Government of a just but firm and stern attitude.

The economic situation in the country grows steadily worse. Some American merchants have closed their concerns and left the country. Others inform me that it is only by the utilization of all their resources and heavy reduction in expenses that they have been able to ward off failure. Banks have great difficulty in maintaining their reserves and at the same time keeping down abnormal rates of exchange. The Government's securities held abroad, as the Department will perhaps have noticed, have suffered a considerable depreciation and the paper currency issued by the banks under the Mexican banking law is not only being discounted heavily on the American border but is regarded with a certain amount of suspicion in the interior. Considerable suffering has also been caused by the closing of coal mines, smelters and factories and by a marked disposition on the part of the peons to abandon their work on the great estates for the purpose of pillaging and looting on a large or small scale with small or large bands. These conditions must naturally, unless soon cured, bring on a financial crisis which would add heavily to the burdens of the present administration and perhaps imperil its existence.

I ought to call the special attention of the Department to the many irresponsible representations of conditions in Mexico which are being made in some cases by persons with authority, knowledge and prestige, and by others who either hold a brief from the Government or from the revolutionary party or are governed by gratitude for past governmental favors received and anticipation of others yet to come. Some want intervention for selfish consideration and some are opposed to it for similar reasons. The information which these people supply to the press, members of Congress, the President and the Cabinet is with rare exceptions biased by their own interests, influenced by ulterior motives, or originates in an abnormal appetite for the temporary glory of the limelight. There also seem to be some irresponsible representatives of the press here whose attitude appears to be either to influence public opinion in Mexico and the United States with lurid and imaginary outrages or for reasons of self-interest to portray Arcadian conditions which do not exist. I presume the Department estimates the class of people which I am discussing at their true value, and my only purpose in referring to them is that it may be known that the Embassy is fully conscious of the existence of a semiorganized movement both by the Government and by the revolutionists to influence American public opinion.

I am [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 312.11/446.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 17, 1912—5 p. m.

Inform all deserving Americans who may wish to return to the United States and have no other means to do so that the Buford will touch at Manzanillo on or about May 22, San Blas May 23, and Mazatlan May 24. It is desired to give the trip northward as great publicity as possible, and in time to inform all Americans who need assistance and transportation.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/4007.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, May 24, 1912—5 p. m.

Zapata has by letter announced to Consul General Shanklin his intention to attack the City of Mexico and asks that Americans be advised in order to remove from the city. I desire the Department's instructions, and meantime have instructed the Consul General to make no reply to Zapata.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4007.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 25, 1912—1 a. m.

If you believe the letter to be really from Zapata, and representing his real intentions, immediately inform President Madero, in strict confidence. Also tell the Defense Committee of the Society of the American Colony quickly and quietly to circulate the news among all Americans so that if the attack is made they may gather at the selected concentration points, where the American flag should be flown. No reply should be made to Zapata. No part should be taken by Americans in disorders unless urgently necessary for self-protection. Use your discretion in informing other foreign colonies.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/4025.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, May 25, 1912—10 a. m.

Zapata's communication mentioned in my May 24, 5 p. m., has been addressed to all consuls general here and the evening papers have published its substance; I learned this after sending my telegram. Perfect arrangements for concentration of American colony have for some time been in effect. Consul General made no reply to Zapata, whose letter caused but little alarm here; it is believed his forces are insufficiently armed to undertake a considerable movement.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4070.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, May 29, 1912—12 noon.

A proclamation addressed jointly to the Mexican and American Governments has been prepared for publication by the rebel authorities, calling attention to the aid given by the American Government to the Mexican, and declaring that the continuance of such acts will make it impossible to protect Americans, however much the leaders may wish to do so. This threat is so bold and insolent that it seems hardly safe for Americans to remain within rebel jurisdiction any longer; to do so would practically invite to acts of violence. I suggest demanding trains and safe conduct for Americans, and such other foreigners as may care to go, to the American border.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/4070.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington May 30, 1912—3 p. m.

Your May 29, noon. Make unofficial but firm demand of Orozco for an explanation of his proclamation in so far as it affects Americans. Informally, but vigorously protest against any effort on his part, direct or indirect, to evade the obligation to protect noncombatants imposed by the rules of civilized warfare and by civilization. Remark upon the disastrous consequences of departure from proper procedure in such cases. Demand ample protection to all American citizens and their interests and safe conduct and transportation facilities to the Texas border for any who may wish to leave Mexico. Suggest safe conduct for other foreigners. Discreetly inform Americans of any danger you believe to exist; also suggest to them the desirability of their withdrawal as soon as possible from rebel territory, whenever you think it requisite.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/4091.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, May 31, 1912—1 p. m.

Headquarters sought my opinion as to proclamation referred to in my May 29, noon. I told them the document was extremely vicious and would be taken as an invitation to violence, and in the United States would be taken as a threat against Americans unprecedented among civilized peoples. In consequence of my representations the proclamation will be issued in greatly modified form. At interview mentioned safe conduct was promised for Americans. I am, however, to-day making additional representations as per Department's May 30, 3 p. m. Much bitterness among rebels toward Americans because they claim that if the laws relating to introduction of munitions of war had not been executed they would have been victorious. Situation somewhat better, however.

LETCHER.

File No. 312.11/572.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, June 3, 1912—noon.

Residence of William H. Craft sacked by squad of rebels last night in defiant disregard of my repeated representations. Fifty cases of powder, heretofore forcibly taken, not yet returned. Later shipment 102 cases short. Protests from this office receive no consideration. Few Americans have left. Desirable first to have concerted action by the various industries. It seems now prudent to secure this because of rebels' obstinate disregard of all warnings and absence of any kind of guaranty. General sacking of commercial houses expected if rebel cause grows desperate.

LETCHER.

File No. 312.113/572.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 5, 1912.

Department approves your course, notwithstanding rebels' failure to heed your representations. Instructions already sent you believed sufficient.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/4134.

The American Consul at Nuevo Laredo to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nuevo Laredo, June 5, 1912—11 a. m.

Huerta has arrested Villa and sent him to Mexico City for trial. Family of Orozco en route to Europe, he to follow, it is believed.

GARRETT.

File No. 812.00/4152.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, June 7, 1912—10 a. m.

Conference with Orozco June 4. He totally denied responsibility for threats against Americans made in the recent manifesto reported in my May 29, noon; he made apologies therefor, promised to rectify all pending complaints. Little to be expected therefrom, however.

Rebels announce intention to negotiate a loan $10,000,000 (Mexican) New York. Unlikely story, intended to cheer up partisans.

All Americans prepared to leave if danger appears imminent.

Small arms, 50,000 rounds, received from Paso del Norte by rebels yesterday

LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/4246.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 879.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 28, 1912.

SIR: There are enclosed herewith for the information of the Embassy copies of two letters from the Department of Justice, of June 13,[1] with enclosures, and of June 19,[1] and a copy of a letter addressed by this Department to the Attorney General[1] relative to the alleged recruiting of soldiers for the Mexican Government, in the American border States, and the apparent connection therewith of Mr. E. C. Llorente, the Mexican Consul at El Paso.

The laws of this Government are peremptory in their provision that no person shall within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States enlist or enter himself, or hire or retain another person to enlist or enter himself or to go beyond the limits or the jurisdiction of the United States with intent to be enlisted or entered in the service of any foreign State as a soldier; and the unmistakable object of these laws is to prevent every such act. Moreover, these laws are in strict conformity with the law of nations, which declares that no State has a right to raise troops for service in another State without its consent, and that whether forbidden by the municipal law or not the mere attempt to raise troops without such consent assails the national sovereignty.

If, then, agents of the Mexican Government have enlisted or attempted to enlist military recruits, their action would appear to be either in studied evasion of the law or in violation thereof; and in either alternative it is alike injurious, and if the former is the case and these agents have escaped punishment as malefactors such successful evasion only serves to increase the degree of wrong that has been done to the United States. (See Moore's Digest, vol. vii, p. 879 et seq.)

You are instructed to invite the attention of the Mexican Government to this matter in the above sense and to say that in view of the public rights and the municipal law of the United States it is a matter of surprise to this Government to find that the investigations of the agents of the Department of Justice seem to show that the engagement of persons within the United States to proceed to Mexico there to serve as soldiers of the established Government has been going on and that it is difficult for this Government to understand how the raising of troops in this country could be reconciled with a due regard for the sovereignty of a friendly neighbor.

You are also directed to say that this Government, while it is loath to believe that the recruiting which the investigations of the Department of Justice seem to show has been taking place is being carried out with the knowledge or under the direction of the Mexican Government, trusts that the Government of Mexico, realizing the injurious character of such activity, will at once take steps to have recruiting for Mexican Federal forces, whether authorized or not, cease immediately, and will at once give to all persons concerned who may be under the control of the Mexican Government—particularly to the Mexican Consul at El Paso—instructions of such a character that they will desist from any attempt to recruit soldiers on American soil. You may say finally that the Department of Justice has been requested by this Department thoroughly to investigate all apparent infractions of the so-called neutrality statutes of this country, and to proceed in accordance with the law against all who may be found guilty of such infractions, and so to put an end to action infringing the municipal law of this country and derogatory to the sovereignty of the United States.

---

[1] Not printed.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 312.111 Ad 11.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consuls at Ciudad Juárez and Chihuahua.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, July 5, 1912—8 p. m.

Information received of the murder of an American citizen, William Adams, at Colonia Diaz, by rebel soldiers. The Department also learns that the retreat of the rebels toward that section will probably place American citizens and American property there in the most serious danger. You will call the case of Adams and the general situation of American colonies immediately to the attention of the rebel authorities, and with the utmost seriousness unofficially represent to them that insurrectionists must not disturb Americans nor their property.

The probable breaking up of the rebel forces as they move northward into small marauding bands causes the Department grave apprehension, and you are instructed to do your utmost to protect American life and property.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 312.111 Ad 11.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, July 5, 1912—8 p. m.

The following to American Consuls at Ciudad Juárez and Chihuahua:

[See next above.]

Make immediate urgent representations to the Mexican Government regarding absolute necessity of protection of American life and property by that Government to the utmost of its power.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/4422a.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

Department of State,
Washington, July 13, 1912.

Sir: This Department has been informed by the American Ambassador at Mexico City, who was recently in Washington under orders to confer with the Department regarding the political situation in Mexico, by Mr. Claude E. Guyant, the Department's special representative on board the Army transport Buford during its mission to the west coast of Mexico to bring American refugees back to the United States, and various other persons whose recommendations and opinions are worthy of respect, that the presence of a United States war vessel in Mexican waters at this time on a friendly visit would be productive of a desirable moral effect upon the minds of the local population, would add to the prestige of this Government, and would cause greater respect to be shown in the future both to this Government and to the citizens of the United States resident in Mexico.

Accordingly I have the honor to request that the Navy Department will, at its convenience in the near future, order a war vessel to make such a visit to the west coast of Mexico. This Department understands that the U. S. S. Annapolis is at present at San José de Guatemala, and if that vessel is available it is suggested that upon the termination of its duty at San José de Guatemala it be ordered to proceed northward along the west coast, touching at Salina Cruz, Acapulco, Manzanillo, San Blas, Mazatlan, Altata, Topolobampo, and Guaymas, remaining a day or two at each place, or longer in the event the commander thinks that any good will be accomplished thereby, so that the populace may learn of the presence of the ship and take notice of it and the ship's officers may get in touch with local officials, both civil and military.

It is requested that the commander be fully acquainted with the Department's purpose in having his ship undertake this visit, and that he be given broad instructions so as to enable him to promote in every way possible good feeling between our two Governments and to impress upon the local population the strength and power of the vessels of our Navy.

The Department has no decided preference as to the order in which the west-coast ports shall be visited [etc., regarding the details of the itinerary].

The Department begs to observe in this connection that the visit of an American warship to the east coast of Mexico, where British, German, and French war vessels are frequently seen, would be no less impressive and would be even more valuable than a visit to the west coast. It is accordingly suggested that shortly after the completion of the west-coast visits a powerful battleship, if it can be spared (and if it can not, the largest and most impressive ship available), be despatched for a series of visits similar to those just suggested for the west coast, to the Mexican Gulf ports of Tampico, Vera Cruz, Puerto Mexico (Coatzacoalcos), and possibly Frontera and Progreso, since the presence of a really formidable vessel at these places would not only attract much attention locally but would indeed be noticed much more by people in the interior of the country than a vessel visiting the west coast, which is a much more isolated section.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 812.00/4438.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 907.]

Department of State,
Washington, July 19, 1912.

Sir: Acting upon a suggestion made by you during your recent visit to Washington, to the effect that casual and friendly visits to Mexican ports by vessels of our Navy would have a beneficial moral effect upon the Mexican people, this Department has requested the Navy Department to detail vessels to make such visits, both to the west and east coasts of Mexico.

The Department's letter of July 13 to the Navy Department and the latter's reply of July 18,[1] copies of which are enclosed herewith, will make clear to you the arrangements that have been made. You are instructed to bring the proposed visits—to which the Department assumes no objection will be urged—to the attention of the Mexican Government, and to point out that the despatch of these vessels to Mexican waters is merely for the purpose of making a casual visit, such as vessels of all nations are accustomed to make from time to time to foreign ports, and that their mission is entirely friendly and without ulterior purpose. Request that the Mexican officials at the various ports to be touched be duly informed, and notify consular officers at the various ports so that such arrangements as are necessary can be conveniently made.

I am [etc.]

Alvey A. Adee.

File No. 812.00/4511.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1545.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, July 24, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's instruction No. 879 of the 28th ultimo, relative to the alleged violation of the neutrality laws of the United States by certain persons supposed to be agents of the Mexican Government, particularly Mr. E. C. Llorente, Mexican Consul at El Paso, Texas, and to transmit herewith copies of my note to the Foreign Office and of its reply thereto, together with a communication[1] written by the Military Attaché of this Embassy, all having a bearing on the subject mentioned.

I have [etc.]

Henry Lane Wilson.

---

[1] Not printed.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Ambassador to the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs.

American Embassy,
Mexico, July 17, 1912.

Mr. Minister: Through information furnished by the agents of the Department of Justice, my Government has learned that ostensible agents of the Government of Mexico have been and are at the present time engaged in recruiting soldiers for the Mexican Army in American border States. The reports of the agents of the Department of Justice are specific as to the time and place of these illegal enlistments alleged to have been encouraged, aided, and abetted by agents of the Mexican Government, and the name of the Mexican Consul at El Paso, Mr. Enrique C. Llorente, is connected therewith by strong circumstantial evidence, numerous witnesses having testified to having been paid for their services in the Mexican Consulate at El Paso.

The laws of the Government of the United States are peremptory in their provision that no person shall, within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States, enlist or enter himself or hire or retain another person to enlist or enter himself or to go beyond the limits or the jurisdiction of the United States with intent to be enlisted or entered in the service of any foreign State as a soldier, and the unmistakable object of these laws is to prevent every such act. Moreover, these laws are in strict conformity with the law of nations which declares that no State has a right to raise troops for service in another State without its consent, and that whether forbidden by the municipal law or not the mere attempt to raise troops without such consent assails the national sovereignty.

If, then, agents of the Mexican Government have enlisted or attempted to enlist military recruits, their action would appear to be either in evasion of the law or in violation thereof; and in either alternative it is alike injurious, and if the former is the case and these agents have escaped punishment as malefactors, such successful evasion only serves to increase the degree of wrong that has been done to the United States.

I am also directed to say that my Government, while it is loath to believe that the recruiting which the investigations of the Department of Justice seem to show has been taking place is being carried out with the knowledge and under the direction of the Mexican Government, trusts that the Government of Mexico, realizing the injurious character of such activity, will at once take steps to have recruiting for Mexican federal forces, whether authorized or not, cease immediately and will at once give to all persons concerned who may be under the control of the Mexican Government—particularly to the Mexican Consul at El Paso—instructions of such a character that they will desist from any attempt to recruit soldiers on American soil.

I am instructed to say, finally, that the Department of Justice has been requested by the Department of State thoroughly to investigate all apparent infractions of the so-called neutrality statutes of the country, and to proceed in accordance with the law against all who may be found guilty of such infractions, and so to put an end to action infringing the municipal law of the Government of the United States and derogatory to the sovereignty of that Government.

I avail [etc.]

Henry Lane Wilson.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

Department of Foreign Relations,
Mexico, July 20, 1912.

Mr. Ambassador: Having noted the contents of your excellency's note No. 5379 of the 17th instant,, received yesterday, in which you inform me that, according to reports which have been obtained by the Department of Justice of the Government of the United States, agents of the Government of Mexico have been recruiting soldiers in frontier American States, the Mexican Consul at El Paso, Mr. Enrique C. Llorente, having aided in that recruiting, I have the honor to inform you that my Government has taken especial care to observe strictly the international neutrality laws and has not authorized the recruiting of troops for the Mexican Army on American territory.

Even though I had all confidence that the Mexican Consul, on his part, had not transgressed his duties, yesterday he was asked to report under the strictest responsibility, and has answered in the terms of the following message, which I have the honor to transcribe:

"I beg that you will please assure the American Ambassador at that place that neither I nor agents of this Consulate have ever recruited persons in American territory for the Mexican army, a thing which I can prove to the authorities at this place should they make an investigation, which I invite them to do. If any person has violated the neutrality laws I have ever been the first to become active in punishing him. You may be assured that the asseveration against me or against agents of this Consulate proceeds from enemies who are searching for means of provoking trouble for our Government."

It is, therefore, a satisfaction for the Mexican Government to answer on this occasion that its international obligations have been complied with, and to respectfully beg your excellency to make known to your Government the content of this note. In the same manner I beg that there may be communicated to my Government, if it is not found inconvenient, the reports which you may have relative to violations which should be suppressed, in order to direct Consul Llorente, once more, to proceed with the necessary activity to impede such recruiting, for the Mexican Government affirms that it proposes to maintain itself within the limits of the strictest legality and avoid all those acts which might bring, even indirectly, as a consequence, a complaint of a nation so friendly as the United States.

It is pleasing to me to reiterate [etc.], PEDRO LASCURAIN.

File No. 812.00/4481.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, July 24, 1912—11 a. m.

Suspension of constitutional guaranties decided on yesterday. This is practically a declaration of martial law in the States of Sonora, Morelos and Chihuahua, and parts of Durango, Puebla, Tlaxcala and Mexico. The reason given by the Government is the increase of atrocities, violation by rebels of laws of civilized warfare in said States. Commanding general in the zone publicly states that he is unable to deal with the situation, not having strong enough forces. There is a simultaneous revival of rebel activity in both north and south. It may be a movement toward cohesion.

WILSON.

File No. 312.11/755a.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 26, 1912—3 p. m.

In a speech in Congress, Senator Fall, of New Mexico, declares that the American citizens whose names are given below have either been killed, or robbed, or have suffered indignity—it is not clear from his speech just which; and that El Paso citizens have been arrested in Juárez and shot. He also alleges the killing, January 22, 1911, of an American woman citizen of the United States, in some colony (not named), and the outrage of her young daughter (name not given), presumably in an American colony near the border (location not given); also that a little girl named Mabel Richardson was outraged, neither time nor place given. He also alleges that $5,000 worth of flour belonging to American citizens was seized in Juárez while under the seal of the American Consulate.

The persons first above referred to are named J. P. Brown, Guy Taylor, Leslie Combs, John Tilford, B. L. Croft, Rulon Peterson, Daniel Skousen, James Skousen, Joseph Jackson, Loran Taylor, Harvey Taylor, George Romney, James Young, James Memmott, Ernest Goldner, Mr. Hollingsworth.

The Department has no record of any of these alleged occurrences. Investigate and report immediately.

KNOX.

File No. 312.11/759.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, July 28, 1912—11 a. m.

Department's telegram of July 26, 3 p. m. The persons mentioned by Senator Fall have never been heard of at the Embassy, and it is believed that any American consular officer in Mexico would be sure to report such indignities to the Embassy and to the Department if known. The allegations of Senator Fall cannot be investigated in the absence of reasonably specific data concerning time and place. If there is any truth in the allegations at all it is more than likely that they may be traced to retaliatory border raids between Americans and Mexicans.

No case presented to this Embassy, either directly by a claimant or through official channels, has failed to be supported by the necessary diplomatic representations to the Mexican Foreign Office. Senator Fall ought, it appears to me, in the interest of the relations between the United States and Mexico, to be answered by a senator conversant with the facts.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4500.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 28, 1912—midnight.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez telegraphs:

> In the Casas Grandes district the rebels are disarming American citizens. American rights, it is said, will receive in the future no more consideration than Mexican. Rebels very bitter against American Government; their desperation is such that I fear they will do what they can to cause intervention. Nothing more that I can think of to Orozco to influence rebels to improve situation. A demand should be made on the Mexican Government to at least draw the attention of the rebels part of the time from their devastations.

Bring this extremely urgent matter to the attention of the Mexican Government and say with all possible earnestness that this Government expects the Mexican Government immediately to make every possible effort to relieve the situation and protect American life and property.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/4519.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, July 29, 1912—4 p. m.

I submitted a copy of Department's July 28, midnight, to the Minister for Foreign Affairs this morning, calling his attention to the extreme gravity of the situation, the possibilty of extensive and appalling outrages to American persons and property, the consequent profound indignation in the United States, and the difficulties of controlling the border population under such circumstances. Mr. Lascurain showed great concern and promised to act immediately to alleviate the situation. He immediately consulted with the Minister of War and General Huerta, and wrote me that Huerta said the Federal forces will occupy Casas Grandes district probably within two days and will immediately give preferential attention to Americans and their interests. The Minister expressed his deep regret that the seditious and revolutionary elements are so lost to patriotism and humanity as to harm foreigners, particularly Americans, and declared that their acts are strongly repugnant to the Mexican people.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4500.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 29, 1912—4 p. m.

Lay Department's July 28, midnight, before American Consul at Chihuahua; instruct him to send Department his recommendations as soon as possible, and to do all he can to alleviate situation in rebel territory. See Department's March 2, 2 p. m., and telegraph your recommendations concerning advisability of Americans leaving their present residences.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/4500.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Ciudad Juárez.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 29, 1912—7 p. m.

Your telegram July 28.[1] Point out to the insurrectionary authorities that any willful molestation of the persons and property of American citizens in territory now occupied by insurrectionary forces will be intensely resented by the Government and people of the United States. Informally and unofficially demand that there be no maltreatment of Americans or their property. Say to Orozco that he must at once so inform subordinate insurrectionary leaders. See the telegram from Department to Consul at Chihuahua, dated April 14, 3 p. m., forwarded by you.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/4514.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juárez, July 29, 1912.

Mexican consul at El Paso, who is in charge of Federal troops north of Casas Grandes, promises to give immediate orders to crowd rebels in that section. I would suggest curtailment of importations at this port to the United States, as well as exports. Rebels are gathering funds from collections on imports and exports, which induces them to remain; curtailment would weaken them and hasten their departure. Great alarm caused by statements of subordinate rebel officers of intention to force intervention. Conditions will improve with Federal advance.

EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/4522.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, July 30, 1912—6 p. m.

In accordance with your July 29, 4 p. m., I have forwarded your July 28, midnight, to the Consul at Chihuahua, and added following:

> The Department subsequently instructed the Embassy to instruct you to do all you can to alleviate conditions and to send Department your recommendations as soon as possible. The authority lodged in you hereby should be used without hesitation if conditions exist with you similar to those reported by Consul Edwards. When and where necessary act on Department's March 2, 2 p. m.

---

[1] Quoted in Department's July 28 to the Ambassador.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4511.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, July 31, 1912—7 p. m.

I am replying to instructions of July 30 from Ambassador as follows:

> I believe Federals will not occupy Casas Grandes district for two or three weeks. Campaign perfectly incompetent and no relief for Americans in northwestern part of the State for a considerable time. Occasional squads of rebels reported, but impossible to communicate specific warning of them to Americans. Madera cut off two weeks.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/4531.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juárez, July 31, 1912.

Your July 29, 7 p. m. General Orozco informed me to-day that he would listen to me personally but not officially. He denies that his following welcome intervention; claims it was imperative to disarm American colonists as his forces needed the arms and ammunition. He made no promise of compliance with Department's message but strongly deprecated the fear that Americans would encounter injury from his men.

EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/4614.

AMERICAN CONSULATE, CIUDAD JUÁREZ,
(Received August 12, 1912—11.26 p. m.)

According to General Orozco, President Madero is to resign in pursuance of a basis for cessation of hostilities which he claims has been agreed upon, to be concluded with General Huerta soon. Casas Grandes district now in control of Federals; conditions better.

EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/4636.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 15, 1912—1 a. m.

Revolutionary situation greatly aggravated. Frontier conditions causing greatest anxiety account international dangers involved.

There seems to be, however, less bitterness, and if our nationals in States of Sonora and Chihuahua urgently require relief, it could be given without arousing much agitation. But in southern Mexico conditions are very distressing, great increase in number of marauding rebel bands, whose attacks are accompanied by unspeakable barbarities, mutilations, burnings. Evidence of increasing inability of Government to cope with the situation.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4643.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juárez, August 16, 1912.

Last remnant of Orozco's army evacuated Juárez this morning. Federal forces expected within two days, with restoration of normal conditions.

EDWARDS.

AMERICAN CONSULATE, CIUDAD JUÁREZ,
(Received August 20, 1912—11.45 p. m.)

Federals occupied Juárez to-day. Civil government to be established to-morrow and railroad traffic resumed. General belief that revolution is ended in State of Chihuahua; refugees will now return to their homes. General rejoicing.

EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/4686.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 20, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 19th instant[1], informing me that in compliance with the request of this Department that a naval vessel be ordered to make a cruise to the west coast of Mexico, the Vicksburg has been substituted for the Denver, which it was originally intended to send, and will proceed as soon as practicable first to the port of Guaymas, there to await further orders.

In response to your request for an expression of opinion as to what special instructions should be given the commander of the Vicksburg, in view of the change that has lately come about in Mexican conditions I have the honor to say that, although the Department thinks the instructions which it was orginally requested should be given the Denver should not be materially altered, it would nevertheless be glad to have the commander of the Vicksburg informed that upon arrival at Guaymas he should put himself in touch with the American consular agent at that place and the American Consul at Hermosillo; that in conjunction with them he should carefully observe the local situation, reporting thereon from time to time; and that in case of sudden or great emergency, seriously menacing American life and property, he should take such steps to afford them protection as may commend themselves to his discretion under the circumstances.

---

[1] Not printed.

For the information of the commander of the Vicksburg, the Department begs to state that the scene of Mexican revolutionary activity seems at the present time to be rapidly shifting to the western section of the country, this movement being most noticeable in the State of Sonora, where two large bodies of rebels in conjunction with the Yaqui Indians have crossed the Yaqui River near Tonichi and are making their way via San Javier and Alamos toward Hermosillo, the capital of Sonora, with the object of capturing it and of later capturing Guaymas. The Consul at Hermosillo reports the general situation to be serious, since there are practically no Government troops with which to oppose this advance.

There are many American interests in the vicinity of Hermosillo and Guaymas, as well as in the Yaqui River valley and elsewhere in Sonora, which would be seriously jeopardized if insurrectionists secure control of Hermosillo and Guaymas and the southern part of Sonora; and it is chiefly for this reason that the Department begs to request that the Vicksburg, after its arrival at Guaymas, shall remain there until the future course of events can be foreseen with more or less certainty and a definite course of action can be outlined.

I have [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 812.00/4692

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 22, 1912—1 p. m.

In the States of Morelos, Mexico, Puebla, Oaxaca, Michoacán and Guerrero conditions are as bad as at any time during the two revolutions, if not worse; disorders becoming more general; violence of the most barbarous character daily occurring. The Government, apparently incompetent to meet the situation, is losing what little prestige it gained from victories in the north. I urge the most rigid precautions relative to the State of Sonora where the Chihuahua barbarities will doubtless be repeated in worse forms and on a larger scale.

WILSON.

File No. 312.11/811.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 22, 1912—3 p. m.

The President's attention should, I believe, be called to the growing anti-American spirit of the Madero administration, which not only shows a decided preference for European markets in all lines but is harrassing and discriminating against American interests, at the instigation of a group of corrupt men who surround the President, and manifested recently in the lockout of the American employees of the railways, in the persecution of the Associated Press, and the one American newspaper in Mexico, in the Government's suborned decision in the Tlahualilo case, in the discriminatory and almost confiscatory tax placed on the oil products at Tampico, and in the present attempt to annul the concession of the Mexican National Packing Co. in spite of the protests of the Embassy and the British Legation, which annulment would involve a loss of several million pesos to the United States Banking Co. trust. The Embassy will do all it can to prevent these unjust acts, but it is respectfully suggested that a positive stand in all Mexican matters is advisable, in view of the services we have rendered to Mexico and our patience with the Government.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4692.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.—Paraphrases.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 24, 1912—2 p. m.

Your August 22, 1 p. m. The Vicksburg will watch the situation from Guaymas and the War Department has taken steps to deal with any situation that may arise along the Sonora border.

The situation has also been brought to the attention of the Mexican Ambassador, who states that there are 3,600 Federal troops in Sonora but that he does not know how they are distributed. He admits the present governor's incapacity for dealing as a military commander with present conditions, of which the Minister seems to be uninformed. It was intimated to him that this Government regards the situation as serious and one that should be handled energetically, and it was suggested that additional troops could doubtless be sent to Sonora via Manzanillo or Mazatlan, and the Ambassador said he would immediately telegraph his Government about it.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4708b.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 24, 1912—3 p. m.

Department's 907, of July 19. Vicksburg, which sailed from San Diego August 22, will proceed first to Guaymas, arriving there about August 28, and later proceed to the other west-coast ports in her itinerary. So inform Mexican Government.

In view of the situation that has arisen in Sonora the Vicksburg has secret orders to remain at Guaymas for the protection of American citizens and American interests in that region until it is possible to foresee with more or less certainty what will be the course of events.

The Des Moines will make a casual visit to the east-coast ports similar to that outlined for the west coast, and will start some time during the first week in September, going first to Tampico, and touching later at Vera Cruz and Progreso, and possibly at Coatzacoalcos. You will be informed of itinerary later. Make same representations to the Mexican Government for her as for Vicksburg.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4718.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 26, 1912—10 a. m.

Foreign Office will be informed to-day of contemplated visits of Vicksburg and Des Moines to Mexican ports, imparted in Department's August 24, 3 p. m. Visits will have good moral effect.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4719.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 26, 1912—12 noon.

Mexican Government is most vague and unsatisfactory with reference to conditions in Sonora. I doubt its ability to dominate situation in Sonora. I shall, however, make renewed efforts to-day. Capt. Burnside greatly doubts ability of the Mexican Government to send a force of any degree of efficiency except from the immediate command of Gen. Huerta in Chihuahua.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4720.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 26, 1912—5 p. m.

A suspension of constitutional guaranties equivalent to martial law took effect to-day over about one-third of the Republic. Press censorship exists at all interior points. Between Torreon and Chihuahua all communication has again been cut, communication with the city alone remaining undisturbed.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4899.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 1618.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 28, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. KNOX: During most of the time since my last despatch of May 15 the more important and significant events of the revolution have occurred in a theater remote from the capital, and therefore susceptible of more accurate observation and prompter relation than the Embassy could possibly give. Some recent events and tendencies, however, and the continued activity of the revolutionary movement in the south and in some sections hitherto free from disturbances seem to call for more extensive recital than is possible within the limits of cablegraphic communication.

In the north, in the States of Durango and Chihuahua and along the frontier, the uniform and decisive victories of the Federal armies, due almost entirely to their possession of abundant and modern artillery, rather than to their general efficiency, equipment, and fighting qualities, have resulted in a practical dispersal of the organized revolutionary army and the recovery to the National Government of the capital of Chihuahua and the important port of entry, Ciudad Juárez. These victories and this recovery of territory, however, while lending a temporary prestige to the National Government, have apparently produced no other substantial results. The organized revolutionary army has split up into numerous small bands ranging in size from 100 to 1,000 men, which have scattered over the territory in the rear and to the west of the Federal army, carrying on a work of destruction, robbing, murdering, and committing all sorts of savage and abominable crimes. With these roving bands the Federal army seems utterly incompetent to deal and conditions, therefore, with the peaceful and law-abiding elements of society, are even more distressing than they were before the disintegration of Orozco's forces. As American interests are very large through all this section, extending from Torreón to Alamos, the existence of these guerilla bands and the apparent inability of the Federal Government to afford adequate protection produce a situation full of menace to American lives and property and calling for the active vigilance of our Government. To the inconveniences and dangers growing out of these predatory guerrilla movements may be added the exactions, the petty tyrannies of the officials recently installed by the Mexican Government, many of whom seem to think that they must earn their right to popular favor and the confidence of their Government by the persecution and harassment of foreign and especially American interests. This is notably the case with Abraham González, the present governor of Chihuahua, whose exactions and malevolent attitude toward Americans is arousing a deep resentment which may at some future time render necessary our active interposition.

Coming south and east from the section of country which has been the field of military operations we find the States of Nuevo Leon, Tamaulipas, San Luis Potosí, Hidalgo, Aguascalientes, Querétaro, Guanajuato, Jalisco, and Zacatecas with no organized revolutionary movement against the Government but with abundant cases of brigandage and violent offenses against the more prosperous elements of society, especially the foreign elements, and with political organizations which may at any time take the form of open and organized rebellion. In the States of Sinaloa and Michoacán there is apparently no organized revolutionary movement at the present time, but it is reported, apparently with truth, that Orozco's agents are busy there and there are indications, in the murder of wealthy and prominent planters, that the day is not far off when these States will renew the disturbances which afforded such great concern to the Federal Government some months past. In the extreme south the States of Yucatán, Chiapas, and Campeche seem to be peaceful, supposedly because of their complete isolation from public affairs and perhaps also because of the absolute physical control of the situation by large proprietors. In the State of Vera Cruz there is apparently no organized movement, but in large sections of the State there is no security for human life nor for property and conditions exist which do not in any way differ in their practical results from those produced by a revolutionary movement.

In the States of Puebla, Oaxaca, Morelos, Guerrero, and Mexico the revolution is a tangible and formidable fact, as is proven by the devastation of thousands of homes and the taking of thousands of human lives. Over this wide area human life is not safe and property rights have no value whatsoever. Entire villages have been burned, their inhabitants—men, women, and children—slaughtered and mutilated indiscriminately; plantations have been ravaged and burned, trains have been blown up and derailed, and passengers slaughtered like cattle; women have been ravished and men mutilated with accompaniments of horror and barbarity which find no place in the chronicles of Christian warfare. It is impossible to accurately estimate the number of these savages which are under arms, nominally under the command of Zapata. With this situation, as far as my observation goes, the Government is either wholly incompetent or wholly impotent to deal. The peaceful inhabitants of this vast district, the men who own homes or plantations and are occupied in peaceful pursuits, have abandoned all hope of assistance from this Government or of protection to their property or persons. Planters have abandoned their estates, foreigners have fled to other and more peaceable regions, and there is very little else left except Federal soldiers and revolutionary soldiers, both of whom are objects of dislike and fear to the law-abiding elements.

In the midst of this appalling situation in the north and in the south the Federal Government sits apathetic, ineffective, and either cynically indifferent or stupidly optimistic. This peculiar phase of the situation I believe to be largely due to the character of the President, who is one day a Díaz come again and the next day an apostle of peace; the apologist for important bandits and criminals, and the enemy of monopolies, landholders, and privileged characters and classes. To such an extent has this wavering and unsettled policy been carried that it has lost the President the confidence and support of all classes, and to-day he stands practically alone, sustained only by the sympathy of his numerous family, the administration officeholders, and the useful and established apprehension that the evils which exist are less than those which might be anticipated with his downfall. In important questions vitally involving American interests I have found him sometimes indifferent, sometimes cold and unsympathetic, and frequently unreliable, giving promises with facility but performance economically and sometimes not at all. This circumstance has rendered the protection of our interests, always difficult, increasingly so, as the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Lascurain, while a most able, courteous, and just officer, apparently has but little influence with the administration, and his protests and promises, while abundantly and I believe sincerely given, rarely produce concrete results. I am discussing thus frankly the character of the Chief Executive, for whom I should have unwavering respect, and to whom I owe unvarying courtesy and sympathy, in order that the Department may fully understand the difficulty of securing justice and protection for our interests in Mexico.

One phase of the situation which is at present giving me most concern is the inability of the Federal Government to enforce its views and wishes on local governments throughout the Republic. Whether this circumstance is due to lack of respect for the Federal Government or to indifference, ignorance, or anti-Americanism on the part of these local officials I am not able to say, but I am deeply impressed with the actual situation and I am acutely sensible of the necessity of taking some step in this particular direction which will end a situation which bids fair, if not ended, to become intolerable. The Department is fully conversant with the number of outrages committed against American citizens, with the increasing frequency of the taking of American lives, with the arrest and imprisonment of Americans on frivolous charges, with their deprivations through the courts of justice of rights and property on pleas devoid of the most elemental merit, but it has had very few, if any, reports from this Embassy, nor, I think, from the consular representatives, of a disposition in the courts to grant exact justice, of the Government to afford ample protection, or with the authorities charged with the execution of the law, to arrest, detain, and fairly try Mexican criminals suspected of the murder of American citizens. I have remonstrated in season and out of season, sometimes in words not compatible with my diplomatic character, but, though promises have been profuse and courtesy uniform, the murderers and the robbers go at large, boasting of their crimes and inviting by their immunity from punishment the commission of other and similar crimes. This phase of the situation here is arousing profound indignation among the Americans resident in Mexico and, if I may judge by the number of letters received by the Embassy and by the utterance of the American press, criticism and a dangerous public opinion in the United States. I can not speak too strongly on this point, as I feel that usual diplomatic methods have failed in impressing this Government with its responsibility, and I fear that, unless some well-defined and positive course is adopted the injustice, abuses, and murders of American citizens will increase in number.

It must be understood, also, that this administration, while nominally pro-American and suffering to some extent in public opinion because of its supposed pro-Americanism, is really conducting a campaign against American interests in Mexico, and this campaign seems aimed to make the members of the Madero family and the personal and political adherents thereof the beneficiaries of American loss. I know of no American interests in this country which are being attacked by the Executive or the courts which were not legitimately and honestly acquired, but I foresee confiscation, harassment, and dislodgment through suborned judicial decrees of many of our important interests, unless this Government is taught in due season that every American and every American interest in Mexico expects and must receive the same measure of justice that a Mexican or Mexican interest would receive in the United States.

To the confusion and uncertainty as to the future may be added a vague fear as to the attitude of the new Congress which has just been elected. Notwithstanding its protestation of a "hands off" policy, it can not be doubted that the Madero administration has exerted its influence to secure the election of friendly candidates, and that these interferences, as well as some interferences in gubernatorial elections, have aroused a vast amount of resentment which will probably find vigorous expression soon after the convening and organization of the new legislative body. At present the only tangible fact which I have been able to note with certainty is the formation of a definite alliance between the Catholics and the Independents, in opposition to the Government, though what numerical strength this combination will possess is unknown.

The economic situation throughout the country shows no evidence of improvement and in my opinion will grow steadily worse. The Government is reported, and is generally believed to be in severe straits, with rapidly diminishing cash assets, and in the opinion of many competent and well-advised persons its ability to maintain its credit will be, unless conditions greatly change, seriously threatened. Merchants are suffering because there are few buyers; farmers, because their fields have not been sown or cultivated; the poor, because their sources of employment have been cut off; and the foreign commercial element, because of diminishing trade and the timidity of European and American houses.

Our duty and policy in the presence of the distressing situation which exists in Mexico can not, it appears to me, be fully defined at the present time further than that we should assume the distinct position that we can not, in view of our international obligations and our obligations to our nationals resident in Mexico, permit an increase in the intolerable conditions which now exist without challenge or protest. The inability to secure adequate protection for American citizens, the unprovoked murder of many Americans, and the failure on the part of the National Government to secure the arrest, detention, and punishment of the murderers, the disposition to attack legally acquired American interests by the Executive and through trumped-up court processes, the arbitrary arrest and imprisonment of Americans on frivolous charges and the failure of local governments to actively remedy such abuses, the savage and barbarous character of the warfare which is being waged should admonish us, it seems to me, that our immediate attitude should be firm, alert, and severe, and that the slightest invasion of American rights or the unprovoked assaults on or killing of Americans should be met with such positive and vigorous protest as will leave no doubt in the minds of the Mexican Government and of the Mexican people as to our intention to see that there shall be no misconception as to our determination, under certain emergencies, to secure prompt justice for every crime committed, and to insist upon fair treatment of very American interest.

I am [etc.]

Henry Lane Wilson.

File No. 812.00/4785a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 2, 1912—1 p. m.

Say to the Mexican Government that now that it is again in control of the entire northern frontier of Mexico the Government of the United States would view with concern any failure on the part of the Mexican Government to make that control secure, and begs to express the earnest hope that no effort will be spared to prevent the advent of a situation similar to the unfortunate state of affairs that has existed along the Chihuahua frontier for months past during the rebel occupation of Ciudad Juárez—a state of affairs which not only tends seriously to jeopardize the good relations between the United States and Mexico, but operates as a direct annoyance to the American Government, to the people of the State of Texas, and to many Americans in the interior of Mexico. You are instructed to request officially and most earnestly that the Mexican Government place at all strategic and other important points along the boundary garrisons adequate to deal with any untoward incident that may arise, and to say that in the opinion of this Government garrisons should be placed as follows: At Ciudad Juárez at least 1,500 men; at Aguaprieta, 700; at Naco, 500; at Nogales, 500; at Piedras Negras, 500; at Ojinaga, 500; at Nuevo Laredo, 300; at Mexicali, 300; at Matamoros, 300—the numbers being increased as occasion requires. You may intimate that the Governors of Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico have unofficially expressed their willingness to consent to the passage of Mexican Federal troops over their respective territories, and that if the Mexican Government so desires the Department will favorably consider a request to allow the transportation of Mexican troops across United States territory for the immediate establishment of these garrisons. In addition to these frontier garrisons the Government of the United States requests that a sufficient number of men be kept in the immediate vicinity of the Mormon colonies in northwestern Chihuahua and in Sonora to afford them from now on prompt and adequate protection. Request a reply as soon as possible.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 312.11/1354b.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 965.] Department of State,
Washington, September 4, 1912.

Sir: I transmit herewith a brief account of the gist of the President's interview this afternoon with Mr. Calero, the Ambassador of Mexico, who leaves this evening to return to the City of Mexico.

I am [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

[Inclosure.]

WEDNESDAY, September 4, 1912.

It had been intimated to Mr. Calero, the Mexican Ambassador, that the President would probably desire to see him to-day. Mr. Calero, it appears, also wished to see the President, to transmit from President Madero a few words of appreciation of the President's policy toward Mexico as indicated particularly in his letter of acceptance of the Republican nomination.

The President received Mr. Calero quite informally, the Acting Secretary of State being present. Mr. Calero delivered his message briefly and at the first pause the President said just a word of acknowledgment and forthwith spoke very earnestly and energetically, pointing out, first, how exceedingly patient and friendly and helpful this Government had been to the Madero administration. The President referred to the new law about the exportation of arms and ammunition, emphasizing its application as a most signal act and as one of the most vital and essential importance to the very existence of the Madero administration. The President went on to say that in return for all this we had a right to expect a more hearty consideration for all American interests in Mexico.

The President referred to the Alamo case, where Federal troops were responsible for a murder, and to the great number of killings of American citizens, in every case of which there had been nought but a very superficial investigation and no satisfactory action.

Mr. Calero attempted to interpose some arguments of defense by doubting whether there were specific cases of negligence on the part of Mexico. The President immediately rejoined that we were sending a long note to be presented by our Ambassador, which recounted a very great number of such instances. The President also said that those were matters of fact simply and that our information, both from the Embassy and from all the consuls, was unsatisfactory and discouraging.

The President spoke solemnly of his duty to the American people and of his responsibility for the policy of the United States and also of the duty of the Madero administration to vindicate his policy by a satisfactory attitude. The President went so far as to say that, however patient he might be and however strong was his friendship for the Madero administration, if things went on from bad to worse there would be no course open to him in the discharge of his duties but to summon Congress and to ask them to consider how the situation should be dealt with.

Mr. Calero was evidently a good deal worried by the seriousness of the President's tone from the very beginning. He spoke energetically about the bad feeling caused by Senator Fall's speech and by the Magdalena Bay legislation. The President disavowed any sympathy for either and remarked that, after all, it was not the Senate but the Executive which conducted our foreign relations. I remarked that, anyhow, that had nothing to do with the subject and said that the Ambassador doubtless understood that, as the President had said to me this morning, aside from specific instances there were the three facts, that murderers went unpunished, second, that there was much evidence of the hostile attitude toward American interests generally, this attitude even extending into the most surprising quarters, and, third, that we were unable to see that the general action of the Madero administration was really sufficiently energetic and zealous.

Mr. Calero mentioned the Tlahualilo case as if perhaps it was the crux of the note. I said that it was not, although it was mentioned among other instances, and thus again the divergence of the discussion into contentious details and questions of fact was avoided.

The President combined extreme earnestness with a broad and kindly tone, both toward the Madero Government and the Ambassador himself, and the Ambassador seemed to appreciate this. He spoke of Calero's influence at home and of his hope that he, when he returned to Mexico, would be able to do a great deal of good. The President remarked that because he was so exceedingly patient he feared people in Mexico thought that it was not necessary to heed the representations of this Government and that he, the President, desired it to be understood that this was by no means so.

Mr. Calero said with much energy that when he got back he was going to stir up the Mexican Government and make a campaign for better understanding. The Ambassador spoke with quite unusual frankness as apology for conditions in Mexico, even speaking rather disparagingly of their Indian population, their inheritance of Spanish and Indian traits, their unfitness for democratic institutions, and the consequent enormously difficult problems they had to face.

File No. 312.11/856b.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Extract.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 5, 1912—2 p. m.

Your despatch No. 1618, of August 28. A note which treats fully of the three points brought forward by the President in a conversation that he had with the Mexican Ambassador yesterday is being forwarded to you to-day. If you deem some alteration advisable in policy or otherwise you will telegraph your suggestions and recommendations immediately. Otherwise you will at such early time as appears to you most opportune officially present the note textually to the Mexican Government, informing the Department by telegraph simultaneously of its presentation.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 312.11/834a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 966.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 5, 1912.

Sir: With reference to the Department's telegraphic instructions of September 5, I have the honor to inclose to you herewith presentation copy of the note therein discussed,[1] which the President directs you to present textually to the Mexican Government.

You will, when presenting the note, state officially, but orally, that such are your instructions.

As stated in the Department's telegram under reference, the Department desires from you, by telegraph, such suggestions and recommendations as to policy or substance as you think it necessary to give, or in case there are any points in the text herewith transmitted to you which do not seem to you well stated or apposite.

I am [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.113/907.

The Acting Secretary of State to the President.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 6, 1912.

The American Consul at Nogales recommends that 500 rifles and 150,000 rounds ammunition be supplied to consular agent, Cananea, immediately for protection of American life and property. I respectfully request your telegraphic authorization to forward this shipment.

Alvey A. Adee,

---

[1] See revised draft, the American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, September 15.

File No. 812.00/4893.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1643.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 6, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the Department's telegraphic instruction of September 2, 1 p. m., I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of my note to the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs, and copies of two notes from him, dated September 5, in reply thereto.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
MEXICO, September 3, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I am instructed in the most urgent way by my Government to submit to your excellency's Government the following expression of its views relative to the situation now existing on the boundary line between Mexico and the United States resulting from the present revolutionary movement against the established Federal Government. My Government directs me to say that, now that the Federal Government has again established its control over the northern frontier of the Republic, it would view with lively concern a failure to make that control secure, and begs to express the earnest hope that the most active and persistent efforts will be made to prevent the advent of a situation similar to the distressing state of affairs which has existed on the Chihuahua frontier during the rebel occupation of Ciudad Juarez—a state of affairs which not only tends seriously to jeopardize the good relations between the United States and Mexico, but operates as a direct annoyance to the Government of the United States, to the people of the State of Texas, and to many American citizens in the interior of Mexico. Deeply apprehensive of the situation which may develop along that portion of the frontier which is at present infested by irresponsible revolutionary forces, my Government instructs me to most earnestly request that your excellency's Government shall place at all strategic and now important points along the frontier military garrisons adequate to cope with any untoward incident that may arise. I am directed to say that in the opinion of my Government military garrisons should be placed by your excellency's Government at the following places and in the following numbers: At Ciudad Juarez, at least 1,500 men; at Aguaprieta, 700; at Naco, 500; at Nogales, 500; at Piedras Negras, 500; at Ojinaga, 500; at Nuevo Laredo, 300; at Mexicali, 300; and at Matamoros, 300. I have, moreover, to prefer the request that in addition to these frontier garrisons your excellency's Government will, for the purposes of affording prompt and adequate protection, place a sufficient number of Federal soldiers in the immediate vicinity of the Mormon colonies in northwestern Chihuahua and in Sonora. In thus advising your excellency of the deep apprehension entertained by my Government relative to the situation on the border and in conveying to your excellency the expression of its opinion relative to the military dispositions necessary to in some measure guarantee protection to life and property, I am directed also to say that my Government will favorably consider a request from your excellency's Government to permit the passage of Mexican troops, designed for the immediate establishment of these garrisons, across the territory of the United States.

As the note which I am now addressing to your excellency urgently concerns the safety of many American lives and a vast amount of capital invested in property on Mexican soil, I have the honor to request that it may have preferential attention and that your excellency will be good enough to furnish me with a reply within as reasonable a period as may be compatible with proper consideration of the matter, as I have been requested to send a telegraphic reply.

I avail [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

Republic of Mexico,
Department of Foreign Relations,
Mexico, D. F., September 5, 1912.

Mr. Ambassador: In reply to your excellency's note of the 3d instant, I beg to say that my Government has taken note of the ideas of the Government of the United States relative to the situation which exists on the frontier between the two countries resulting from the present disturbances, which, although real, have been exaggerated by the Mexican press and principally by the American newspapers, for the rebels have been dispersed, and it is a natural result that they should have separated and be causing trouble at various points. But this state of affairs will soon disappear, and my Government can not believe that, after the great efforts which it has made to reestablish order and afford guaranties for the lives and property of American citizens and when it is on the point of obtaining the result it has desired—that of restoring peace to the country—the good relations which it maintains with the Government of the United States can be endangered, especially since the disturbances of the moment are the last effort of the rebels in their fight, soon to be subdued.

That my Government has made and is continuing to make constant efforts to reestablish order is a fact which your excellency knows through the good and constant relations which you have with this Department, and your excellency's Government recognizes this fact in acknowledging in its note that the Mexican Government has regained control of the State of Chihuahua.

In its proposal to guarantee life and property, and giving preferential attention to the situation on the frontier, my Government yesterday gave orders that adequate forces should go to various places, such as Cananea, Nacozari, Aguaprieta, Frontera, Nogales, and Imuris, orders which have already been executed. General Sanjines is marching with one column from Ojitos to the State of Sonora and General Huerta has been directed to occupy with cavalry the district from Aguaje to Palomas.

By express direction of the President I beg to express to your excellency the most sincere thanks of the Mexican Government for the favorable reception on the part of your excellency's Government which would be given to a request on the part of my Government that our troops might pass over the territory of the United States for the purpose of establishing garrisons at certain points, a request which is not made because the constitution empowers only the Senate to permit the passage of troops outside of the national territory. The Senate is not now in session and its convocation in special session would be a motive of alarm which should be avoided; but my Government believes that the sending of the troops referred to above will bring safety to the region in the north which has been threatened with disturbances.

I avail [etc.],

Pedro Lascurain.

[Inclosure 3.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

Ministry of Foreign Relations,
Mexico, D. F., September 5, 1912.

My Dear Mr. Ambassador: Although it appears from the official note which I have to-day addressed to your excellency that a request for the passage of troops over American territory will not be made, the President has thought it proper to solicit this authorization in order to demonstrate once more the interest which he takes in the protection of the lives and properties of Americans, and to this end he has given the orders for the convocation of the Senate in extraordinary session.

I have also communicated this to the Mexican Ambassador at Washington to the end that the orders necessary to permit the passage of Mexican troops over the territory of Texas and Arizona may be transmitted in the United States.

This measure, as I have said above, is due to the interest taken by the Mexican Government for the lives and properties of Americans and to prevent disagreeable incidents.

I am [etc.]

Pedro Lascurain.

File No. 812.113/911.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Douglas.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 7, 1912—12 noon.

The President has excepted the arms and ammunition referred to and shipment is already en route. Meet shipment at Douglas and make necessary arrangements for its immediate and safe transshipment to destination under escort if possible via Naco, where customs officials have been appropriately instructed.

ADEE.

File No. 812.113/911.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 7, 1912—12 noon.

Following to Consul Dye, at Douglas, to-day: [Quotes Department's telegram of September 7, 1912, 12 noon.]

The arms and ammunition are being forwarded to the consul for the use of seriously endangered Americans for the protection of their lives and property. Immediately make all necessary arrangements with the Mexican Government for the entry of these arms and ammunition, so that there will be no delay upon arrival.

ADEE.

File No. 812.113/926a.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 7, 1912—12 noon.

Department has requested the War Department to place at Naco, as a reserve supply, 1,000 rifles and 200,000 rounds of ammunition.

ADEE.

[Same to Dye at Douglas.]

File No. 812.00/4824.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 7, 1912—1 p. m.

There appears to be a movement of concentration among the revolutionary elements in disturbed southern States. I have to-day received a notice sent to me as dean of the diplomatic corps, to be communicated to my colleagues, of the intention of the revolutionary forces to attack Mexico City at an early date. Notice is well drawn and sent for the purpose of reassuring the people of Mexico City of the intention of the revolutionists to maintain order and protect all noncombatants. I shall take no action relative thereto.

WILSON.

File No. 812.113/930.

The American Consul at Nogales to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DOUGLAS ARIZ., September 8, 1912—4 p. m.

I have just forwarded to Naco the arms and ammunition for consular agent Cananea by the same train it arrived on; it can not be forwarded immediately to Cananea from Naco because about 200 rebels have taken possession of railroad. There are now 500 Federals at Cananea, with 400 more en route to Cananea from Nogales; apparently there is no danger of Cananea being captured, and arms and ammunition can remain in the possession of United States troops Naco for the present.

DYE.

File No. 312.11/862.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 10, 1912—6 p. m.

Department's No. 966, September 5, transmitting note to be delivered to Mexican Foreign Office. I recommend reference in the note to the arrest and imprisonment of Americans in filthy jails on frivolous charges, and the refusal of bail in such cases; also reference to the case of the American railway men. If Department does not think these changes advisable I shall present note without alteration.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4880.

The American Consul at Nogales to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

NACO, ARIZ., September 11, 1912—12 noon.

Rojas, Mascarenas, and Rafael Campa with about 600 men are about 10 miles south of Aguaprieta and have demanded its surrender, saying they would attack in the morning.

Entire shipment of arms and ammunition sent in my care has now reached here, and I have placed it temporarily in charge of commanding officer United States troops, who, for greater safety, has placed entire shipment under military guard at Bisbee, 8 miles from the boundary.

DYE.

File No. 312.11/862.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 12, 1912—5 p. m.

Before passing upon the additions suggested by your September 10, 6 p. m., the Department desires to see the complete text and context of such additions, as it feels that before assenting to any changes they should be submitted to the President, who has approved the note sent you as it stands.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 312.11/868.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, September 12, 1912—10 p. m.

Department's September 12, 5 p. m., and instruction 966, relating to the note to the Foreign Office. At the end of paragraph terminating on page 5,[1] the following has been interpolated: "Nor can my Government further tolerate with patience the repeated arrest of American citizens, in many cases on frivolous and inadequate charges, and their long imprisonment in insanitary jails in consequence of the refusal of local authorities to admit them to bail. My Government fully understands that Americans resident in Mexico who offend against its laws must expect commensurate punishment therefor, but it can not in justice to its nationals permit them to be continuously made the objects of the tyranny of petty local authority or of intrigue or antiforeign sentiment. Cases of this kind are continually occurring and remonstrances have been frequent and urgent, but, unfortunately, generally without result." On page 7[2] the following has been interpolated immediately after the words "is an asset": "The instances here cited of the disposition of the Mexican Government, either inadvertently or otherwise, to permit wrongful acts against legitimately acquired American rights do not by any means constitute all which might be made the subject of remonstrance. Those cited, however, are the most recent and are illustrative conditions which appeal insistently to the attention of my Government."

Henry Lane Wilson.

File No. 812.113/964a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul and Vice Consul at Nogales, the Consular Agent at Cananea, and the Consul at Hermosillo.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 13, 1912.

Say to the Americans who have been supplied with arms for their self-defense that the arms are furnished them solely for the protection of their lives and that they should most carefully guard against any indiscreet acts; point out the disastrous effects such acts would undoubtedly have upon their own interests and upon the lives and property of Americans elsewhere in Mexico; remind them finally of the responsibility resting upon them in this respect.

---

[1] See foot of p. 841 and foot of p. 843.

[2] See p. 842 and foot of p. 843.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.113/965.

The American Consul at Nogales to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DOUGLAS, ARIZ., September 14, 1912—4 p. m.

Department's September 13. In order to make situation in regard to arms perfectly clear, Department is hereby informed that no arms have been passed into Mexico or supplied to Americans anywhere in this consular district by any consular officer except such as were passed last April for the use of the Consul at Hermosillo and those sent to Empalme for the use of employees of the Southern Pacific Railway, which went through the port of Nogales in my care. The 500 carbines and the 100 rifles from Tucson which were in my care at Naco, together with the 150.000 rounds of ammunition, were by me, when at Naco recently, placed under the control of the commander of the United States troops at Naco, I taking memorandum receipt for the same from his adjutant. When I arrived at Naco I found arms which were the subject of Department's instruction 162 in dangerous proximity to border, so for safety I paid express charges from Tucson and placed them as above stated.

DYE.

File No. 812.00/4933.

The American Consul at Nuevo Laredo to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nuevo Laredo, September 15, 1912—11 a. m.

I have found that a simultaneous uprising has been planned at Mexico City, Puebla, San Luis Potosi, Saltillo, Monterey, and probably other of the principal cities. It includes also the turning of the entire Federal army in northern Mexico from Madero, including General Huerta, who will be commander in chief of the new rebel army, with Orozco second in command.

GARRETT.

File No. 312.11/868.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 15, 1912—11 p. m.

Your September 12, 10 p. m.

After paragraph ending on page 5 insert the following as separate paragraph: "In this connection the Government of the United States observes, for the information of the Mexican administration, that it is just as little of a disposition to tolerate the arrest of American citizens on frivolous and inadequate charges, and their imprisonment in insanitary and filthy jails in consequence of the refusal of local authorities to admit them to bail. Such arrests have, most regrettably, been numerous and continue to occur, and although frequent and urgent remonstrances have been made they have almost always, unfortunately, been without satisfactory result. The Government of the United States fully understands that Americans resident in Mexico who offend against the laws of Mexico must expect commensurate punishment therefor; but it can not in justice to its nationals permit them constantly to be made the objects of the tyranny of petty local authorities, or of intrigue or anti-American sentiment."

After the words "is an asset," on page 7, insert the following as two sentences: "The instances here cited of the disposition of the Mexican Government, either through inadvertence or otherwise, to permit wrongful acts against legitimately acquired American rights do not by any means constitute all which might be made the subject of remonstrance. Those set down, however, are the most recent instances of the kind, and are illustrative of conditions which appeal insistently to the attention of my Government."

In the sentence referring to The Tlahualilo Co., after the words "was rendered," substitute for "under the influence of the Federal Department of Fomento" the words "under adverse influence upon the court from official quarters."[1]

Immediately prepare final draft of note with the foregoing changes, and await further instructions.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 312.11/834a.

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 15, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: The Government of the United States is officially informed that three American citizens have recently been murdered in Mexico under circumstances of revolting barbarity—Mr. W. H. Waite, at Achotal, Vera Cruz, on April 4, 1912; Mr. Henry Crumbly, near Peruandiru, Michoacán, on July 21, 1912; and Mr. Rowan Ayres, at Sierra San Andrés, Michoacán, on August 13, 1912—and that the respective local authorities, who have done practically nothing toward apprehending and punishing the murderers seem disposed to treat these crimes with indifference. Such conduct, in the opinion of the Government of the United States, is not only contrary to law but betrays a callousness for which it would be difficult to find a parallel and is altogether subversive of the ends of justice.

The Government of the United States does not expect the Mexican Government to assume responsibilities not incumbent upon that Government in accordance with the applicable rules and principles of international law; but it does expect that the Federal administration at present in control in Mexico City shall live up to its obligations toward the citizens of the United States within Mexican borders, the most fundamental of which is their protection and the punishment of those who injure them. Mere reference to the cases of Samuel Hidy, murdered at the Los Plátanos colony, in the State of San Luis Potosí, in May, 1911; George W. Crichfield, shot from ambush near Tuxpán, in the State of Vera Cruz, and who died on April 7, 1911; William W. Fowler, who died as the result of wounds inflicted by a Mexican peon near Tuxpán, in the State of Vera Cruz, June 18, 1911; John R. Lockhart, apparently assassinated on or about November 8, 1910, between Ventana and San Dimas, in the State of Durango; Joseph O. Ellick, killed near Badiraguato, in the State of Sinaloa, September 30, 1910; Caradoc Hughes, killed on September 17, 1910, between Durango and Llano Grande; Thomas Green, shot on September 11, 1910, at Tampico, and who died the following day; Emilie A. Krause, cut with machetes on December 12, 1910, at Tampico Alto, and who died on July 2, 1911; James M. Reid, shot and killed by a policeman in Mexico City on November 20, 1910; W. L. Randell, robbed and murdered at Chamal on or about March 1, 1910; and of [sic] other cases (which need not here be set down) that have repeatedly been urged upon the attention of the Mexican Government without anything effective ever having been done to capture or punish the authors of the crimes, will serve to remind your excellency that the Government of the United States has been, to say the very least, long-suffering and forbearing in the face of grievous and unrighted wrongs. And the case of the Americans, Patrick Glennon, A. L. Foster, and John G. D. Carroll, who were killed at Alamos, Lower California, on June 11, 1911, by Mexican Federal soldiers acting, seemingly, under the orders of their superiors, for which atrocious crime the Government of the United States has never been able to secure, by means of diplomatic representations, even so much as a proper investigation by the Mexican Government, in spite of an unceasing insistence to this effect, will throw into still higher relief the supineness of Mexican authorities and, in this instance, of the Federal Government itself, and of the tolerance and patience of my Government.

---

[1] See middle of p. 844.

The Government of the United States therefore informs the administration now discharging the duties of government in Mexico, so that due note may be taken thereof, that it is in no disposition to allow the indifference and shortcomings of local officials in Mexico to continue to defeat the ends of justice where American citizens are concerned, and that, in addition to the redress and punishment of the other crimes of which the Government of the United States complains, the Mexican administration must immediately institute, under its own direct supervision, an investigation of the murders of Waite, Crumbly, and Ayres and a prosecution of the murderers which will produce satisfying results in the way of finding those guilty of these barbaric outrages, of capturing them, bringing them to justice, and dealing with them in accordance with their deserts.

And in this connection the Government of the United States observes, for the information of the Mexican administration, that it is just as little of a disposition to tolerate the arrest of American citizens on frivolous and inadequate charges, and their imprisonment in insanitary and filthy jails in consequence of the refusal of local authorities to admit them to bail. Such arrests have, most regrettably, been numerous and continue to occur, and although frequent and urgent remonstrances have been made they have almost always, unfortunately, been without satisfactory result. The Government of the United States fully understands that Americans resident in Mexico who offend against the laws of Mexico must expect commensurate punishment therefor; but it can not in justice to its nationals permit them constantly to be made the objects of the tyranny of petty local authorities, or of intrigue or anti-American sentiment.

The Government of the United States desires to make it known to the present administration in Mexico that to its surprise and misgiving it has been informed that certain men—Mexican citizens and officials—seemingly overcome by greed and inimical to American interests on account of their nationality, are, without the least hindrance from the administration—to which Americans in Mexico must naturally look for protection in their rights—persecuting and preying upon these interests at every favorable opportunity. The Associated Press, it is stated, has been repeatedly hampered by unnecessary and irksome restrictions for which the administration can not be held entirely unresponsible. The Mexican Herald, an American paper, is alleged, on what appears to be credible authority, to have been the victim of treatment altogether unfair. American interests in the Tlahualilo Co. assert that they have failed to receive justice in the litigation in which they are engaged with the Mexican Government through a court decision which, it is claimed, was rendered under adverse influence upon the court from official quarters. American oil interests in the vicinity of Tampico proffer evidence that they are taxed almost beyond endurance, and assurance is given that there is on foot at Mexico City at the present time an attempt to annul the concession of the Mexican National Packing Co., in spite of the protests of the American Embassy and the British Legation at Mexico City, an act which would entail a loss of millions of pesos to the twelve hundred odd American stockholders in the defunct United States Banking Corporation, of which the Packing Co., with its business and property, is an asset. The instances here cited of the disposition of the Mexican Government, either through inadvertence or otherwise, to permit wrongful acts against legitimately acquired American rights do not by any means constitute all which might be made the subject of remonstrance. Those set down, however, are the most recent instances of the kind and are illustrative of conditions which appeal insistently to the attention of my Government. The Government of the United States must insist that this predatory prosecution, amounting practically to confiscation, shall cease forthwith and it expects immediate assurance from the Mexican administration that it will promptly bring this about.

The people of the United States have profoundly at heart the fate of their countrymen in Mexico. They desire that the wrongs described shall terminate, and that the untold hardships endured by innocent and unoffending American noncombatants in Mexico during the revolutions of the last two years, and still being endured, shall cease. They have confidently anticipated throughout a long period that the present Mexican Federal administration would make the amelioration of conditions throughout Mexico its foremost aim, and have thought that the great substantial fact of the needless and illegal endangering and sacrificing of American lives and property by disorders throughout Mexico among the Mexican people would be dealt with swiftly, determinedly, and adequately. But their hopes have been vain, and the Government of the United States finds itself compelled to say on behalf of the American people that its faith in the effectiveness of the Mexican Government has been shaken to its base, and that it can not longer, out of an unavailing regard for the amour propre of Mexico, view without the greatest concern a continuance of a state of affairs so calamitous in its effect upon the lives and interests of American citizens in Mexico, which has become well-nigh intolerable. The time has come when the administration at Mexico City, which has thus far persistently asserted that it was able to and possessed the means to administer the affairs of government, must either demonstrate its determination and ability to handle the present situation by the early establishment of order and the effective administration of law, or frankly confess that conditions are such that it is powerless to do so. In the latter case it would evidently become necessary for the Government of the United States to consider what measures it should adopt to meet the requirements of the situation.

The President of the United States directs me to say to your excellency, and to His Excellency the President of Mexico, that the indifference to if not the active persecution of Americans and American interests in Mexico, on the one hand, which I have been at pains to describe, and the failure of the Mexican administration to exert the efforts it would seem capable of exerting to bring about an improvement in the deplorable state of affairs that continues to exist throughout Mexico, and which so disastrously affects American life and property, on the other hand, are observed with growing concern and uneasiness by the Government of the United States, and that it would appear that in the face of conditions which should evoke the most vigorous efforts and single-hearted endeavor the administration is either apathetic or incompetent, or both. I am enjoined to say that no intention exists on the part of the Government of the United States to derogate in any way from the rights or the dignity of the Mexican Government or to interfere unduly in Mexico's domestic affairs, but that the conditions in which Americans in Mexico now find themselves are such that it must be plainly and frankly stated that the situation as it exists can not be allowed to go on indefinitely, and that the administration in Mexico must bestir itself to fulfill its international duties toward American citizens and their interests.

I am directed to say to your excellency that this statement is made in all friendliness, but soberly and seriously and in the expectation that it will carry conviction, and that the admonition it contains is delivered after mature deliberation upon the situation, in which the facts and the rights and duties of the Mexican Government on the one side and of the Government of the United States on the other have been taken fully into account. In the absence of such an effort on the part of that administration the Government of the United States will have no recourse but to consider whether it would not be better to abandon a policy which, while highly advantageous to the present administration at Mexico City on account of its pronounced friendliness, apparently fails to accomplish (as it should accomplish if the administration fulfilled the obligations incumbent upon it as the head of a civilized country in the family of nations) anything adequate toward the alleviation of the distressing plight of many American citizens in Mexico who are murdered and preyed upon before an indifferent administration and subjected by conditions of revolution to practically all of the horrors of war.

The Government of the United States desires from your excellency as promptly as possible a comprehensive and categorical statement as to the measures the Mexican Government proposes to adopt: (I) To effect the capture and adequate punishment of the murderers of American citizens; (II) to put an end to the discriminations against American interests, such as those which have been referred to above; and (III) to bring about such an improvement in general conditions throughout Mexico that American settlers in that country will no longer be subjected to the hardships and outrages attendant upon a more or less constant state of revolution, lawlessness, and chaos.

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 312.11/868.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 16, 1912—12 noon.

See Department's September 15, 11 p. m. Date note September 15 and officially present it to the Minister for Foreign Affairs in accordance with the Department's instruction No. 966, of September 5. The Department regards it as of the greatest importance that this note should be presented at the earliest possible moment and be a matter of record prior to the occurrence of any possible coup d' état, of which several rumors have recently reached the Department.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 312.11/877.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 17, 1912—10 a. m.

Note delivered this morning. Impossible last night.

WILSON.

File No. 312.11/882.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 17, 1912—6 p. m.

In the interview with the Minister for Foreign Affairs he asked if the note delivered to him, which he inferred from my manner was serious, was the same referred to by the President in his interview with Mr. Calero on September 4. I replied that it was. He then asked me if this Government could depend upon me to make representations to Washington of a sympathetic and helpful character. I replied that the character of my office placed upon me the obligation of always [laboring?] in the interest of amicable feeling between Mexico and the United States, but that he must understand that in order for me to be helpful his Government must show a disposition to do justice to mine and actively bestir itself in the matters treated of in the note. He said that he would formally acknowledge the note at once and make adequate reply in four or five days.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/5001.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 20, 1912—11 a. m.

The importance of either retaining Pasqual Orozco, sr., on American soil or returning him to Mexico at a point held by revolutionists is a matter I wish to bring urgently before the Department. Ernesto Madero says it had been arranged for Governor González, of Chihuahua, * * *[1] and that he will be immediately shot. González is implacably anti-American, a menace to American interests, who should be treated with small courtesy. The surrender of Orozco to the Federal Government's man under any guise or pretext would work incalculable harm to defenseless Americans and American interests in districts held by the revolutionary forces.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/5063.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 25, 1912—11 a. m.

I am in receipt of a very urgent request from the Minister for Foreign Affairs that Gen. Emilio Campa, now in custody of our Government officers at Tucson, be indefinitely detained and not permitted on any account to return to Mexico. My recommendation with reference to all of these rebel leaders who may be taken into custody by American authorities is that their extradition be refused, but that they be kept in custody as long as possible. This policy will furnish us with some guaranties for protection of Americans in exposed places and at the same time will not give cause of complaint to this Government.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/5131a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 1016.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 27, 1912.

SIR: With reference to the Department's telegram to you of September 16, 12 noon, you are informed in explanation of the rumors of a coup d'état referred to therein, that for more than a week previous reports had been reaching the Department to the effect, first, that the friends of Pino Suárez are busily engaged upon a plan whereby Madero will be caused to resign the Presidency in favor of Pino Suárez. The Department is disinclined to believe that there is a real foundation for this report. Second, that Felix Diaz is to head a movement on the part of the Serrano Indians in Oaxaca in an endeavor to duplicate the course of his illustrious uncle. The Department believes that for this report also there can be but little basis in truth. Third, that there is widespread disaffection in the Federal army in the north and that some sort of an understanding exists between General Huerta and the various insurrectionary leaders operating in northern Sonora. The Department was inclined to think that there might be something in this report, since there was much circumstantial evidence tending to show that an arrangement existed and American consular officers in northern Mexico and American army officers along the Mexican border expressed themselves as believing that some sort of an understanding has been arrived at between the Federal and insurrectionary chiefs.

---

[1] Omission in transmission.

I am, [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 812.00/5168a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.
Washington, October 2, 1912.

SIR: With reference to the various informal conversations had by the Judge Advocate General with Mr. Clark, the Solicitor, and Mr. Dearing, of the Latin-American Division, of this Department, on the matter of the detention of Mexican insurrectionists who enter American territory, I have the honor to say that the Department of State would be glad to have the Department of War arrest and detain any and all such insurrectionists who, for any purpose whatsoever, may enter American territory. It is believed that ample authority for such a course is to be found in section 14 of the United States Penal Code, neutrality laws.

For the purpose of assisting the Department of War in the discharge of its functions in the matter of the enforcement of this law the Department of State will be glad, whenever information comes to it regarding the presence in the United States of any Mexican insurrectionists, immediately to transmit such information to the War Department for its intelligence and use.

The course above mentioned appeals to this Department as being particularly desirable for the reason that members of the insurrectionary forces would in all likelihood, if they were free to go back to Mexico, immediately reengage, upon their return there, in the wanton destruction of American property and the unnecessary and unjustifiable molestation of American citizens, which has been so baneful and disastrous a feature of their activity since they first rose in arms.

I have, [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/5168b.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

Department of State,
Washington, October 2, 1912.

Sir: With reference to this Department's letter to you of to-day's date, relative to the detention of Mexican insurrectionists who enter American territory, I have the honor to inform you that there are at present in the United States the following insurrectionary leaders: Pascual Orozco, sr. (and possibly some of his lieutenants, notably one Cordova, who is supposed to have served as a secretary of Pascual Orozco, jr., during the occupation of Chihuahua, mentioned in your telegrams to this Department of September 16, 18, 19, and 21), who is now in the custody of the agents of the Department of Justice at El Paso, Tex.; Emilio Campa, who is in the custody of the agents of the Department of Justice at Tucson, Ariz.; Rafael Campa, Huerta, Escandón, Bermúdez, and Joaquín Esquer, whose presence in Douglas, Ariz., was brought to the attention of your Department by this Department's letter of September 30[1]; and Major Azcarate and Captain de la Fuente, of the staff of insurrectionary leader Salazar, whose capture at Candelaria, Texas, has been reported to your Department by General Steever. With reference to Pascual Orozco, sr., and Emilio Campa, the Department begs to state that it has informed the Department of Justice in the sense of the two letters which are being addressed to you by the Department of State and is requesting it to cooperate with the War Department so that when these men are released by the agents of the Department of Justice the War Department will be in a position to take such action as it may deem appropriate.

I have, [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/5168c.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Attorney General.

Department of State,
Washington, October 2, 1912.

Sir: With reference to the various telephone conversations had by the Bureau of Investigations of the Department of Justice and Mr. Clark, the Solicitor, and Mr. Dearing, of the Latin-American Division, of this Department, I have the honor to inclose to you herewith, for your information, copies of two letters[2] which this Department is to-day addressing to the War Department relative to the detention of Mexican insurrectionists who enter American territory.

As was stated in the letter to the Secretary of War, such detention appeals to this Department as being particularly desirable for the reason that members of the insurrectionary forces would in all likelihood, if they were free to go back to Mexico, immediately reengage, upon their return there, in the wanton destruction of American property and the unnecessary and unjustifiable molestation of American citizens, which has been so baneful and disastrous a feature of their activity since they first rose in arms.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] See above.

I have the honor, therefore, to say that the Department of State would be glad if the Department of Justice will be good enough to cooperate with the Department of War in the matter of the detention of such insurrectionists as are now in the custody, or may in future be taken into the custody, of agents of the Department of Justice. In this connection I beg to refer particularly to Pascual Orozco, sr., who, the Department understands, is now held at El Paso, and Emilio Campa, who is reported to be confined at Tucson.

Referring to the process of extradition in the case of the insurrectionary leaders in question, I have the honor to say that the Department is instructing the Ambassador at Mexico City to-day to inform the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs that it is doubtful whether insurrectionists captured in this country can be surrendered to the Mexican Government on charges arising in connection with or growing out of the present revolutionary disturbances in Mexico, since the extradition treaty in force between Mexico and the United States provides that individuals shall not be surrendered for political offenses. The Embassy was also advised in this connection that, even if the extradition of these men should be demanded on account of civil crimes committed in Mexico, as long as such leaders are under detention pursuant to our own laws the requirements of those laws will have to be satisfied before a request for extradition could be met.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/5063.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 3, 1912—2 p. m.

Your September 20 and September 25. The Department is of the opinion that insurrectionary leaders captured in this country can not be surrendered to the Mexican Government on charges arising in connection with or growing out of the present revolutionary disturbances in Mexico, since the extradition treaty between Mexico and the United States provides that individuals shall not be surrendered for political offenses. You may informally bring this to the attention of the Minister for Foreign Affairs and add that this Government expects to have such leaders taken into military custody under the provisions of our so-called neutrality statutes, and that naturally the requirements of the laws of this country, under whose operation they fall, will have to be completely satisfied before a request for extradition could be acceded to.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/5324.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 274.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, October 16, 1912.

SIR: I have lately had the opportunity to gain an insight into the animus which at present moves the Mexican army and which will, in a large measure, explain the peculiar indifference and lack of spirit in the campaign against the rebels in the north.

In the first place, frankly and without concealment, the army has no love for nor patience with the new régime. General Huerta shared this attitude completely and was in full accord with the army's feelings until the northern campaign was begun. This officer, then a brigadier, was first put in command of field operations against the Zapatistas in Morelos, and, loyal to the constituted Government and an enemy of rebellion as a means of bettering conditions in the Republic, while still by no means a partisan of the new régime, planned a campaign against the rebels which undoubtedly would have been effective had not Mr. Madero interfered at the moment when victory was within reach and ordered a change in plans which resulted in the escape of the rebels. This interference occurred during the operations in the neighborhood of Cuautla, Morelos, in the past year. As a consequence of Mr. Madero's interference General Huerta asked to be relieved from command, and was retired to Mexico City, where he remained, sulking and disgruntled, until placated by Mr. Madero and sent to put down the northern rebellion, among the considerations offered him in connection with the command having been the promise of promotion, free rein in the conduct of the campaign, and, extra-officially, and possibly from the private purse of the Executive, a fixed lump gratuity for the successful conclusion of the campaign. The second of these considerations was practically broken when Villa, the Maderist partisan and ex-bandit, was ordered shot by General Huerta for serious crimes committed during the campaign and for insubordination. Mr. Madero interfered to revoke the order, a stay in the summary execution of the ex-bandit until the matter could be submitted to the President having been secured through the intercession of the President's two younger brothers, who were serving as volunteer officers under General Huerta. Villa was subsequently ordered to Mexico City, where he yet remains in prison. This episode came near being serious in results and causing an unhealable breach between General Huerta and the President, but the former's pride was finally placated and the campaign went on. Granting even General Huerta's full adherence to the Government it is probably true that he, conscious of the army's attitude, was quite unable to drive his troops more than he did, and we thus find accounted for the perplexing and disappointing inactivity of the Federal army after entering Chihuahua in July. Up to the present time almost the entire campaign has been left to the irregular Government partisans, such as those commanded by Generals Sanjinés and Blanco, and the regular forces have rested completely idle.

Another cause of disgust for the army is that since arriving at Chihuahua General Huerta and the civil authorities have joined in a policy of pacification, undoubtedly in obedience to higher authority, which the officers of the army know to be impracticable and visionary. This lack of firmness in dealing with the situation not only is disappointing to loyalists but earns, as well, the contempt of the erstwhile rebels. General Huerta himself does not appear any longer to have the entire confidence and the cordial respect of his officers which were formerly his. The official personnel of the army, without exception, believe that he degraded himself in submitting to the various slights and affronts to his dignity which were offered by Mr. Madero as described.

I am reminded to say that the Federals have been almost ignored socially since their arrival here, and their position has not been very different from that of a conquering army in a conquered foreign territory. This ostracism is keenly felt by the officers, to whom such treatment is all the more embarrassing because of their realization that they are observing only a perfunctory loyalty to the Government and that only in compliance with a sense of duty and against their own inclinations. The Government adherents are drawn almost exclusively from the middle classes, between whom and the officers there is very little sympathy. The aristocracy, formerly Porfiristas and Orozquistas, at present almost to a man treat them with coldness, and the common people, after the manner of their kind, side with the upper classes or remain indifferent.

Reiterated references in certain quarters to American aid to the revolution justify a general denial on my part in so far as local nationals are concerned. If this has been the case on the American side of the border and even in other parts of Mexico, certainly grounds for such a charge with respect to Chihuahua do not exist. The writer of this dispatch has come into intimate contact with Americans of all classes, and with a certain few exceptions the sentiment of Americans in this section has been strongly condemnatory of the revolution. I think, however, that under the circumstances they have been singularly guarded in the matter of public expressions of opinion and free from the suspicion of interference in political affairs in any way. It is worthy of note that the exceptions are mostly naturalized citizens, or those whose social and business associations are with other groups of foreigners. The Germans and English have been notably friendly to the revolutionary cause. What is said herein applies only to Americans residing in this district; for others I can not presume to speak.

Among Americans and other foreigners here there is but one opinion, and that is that sooner or later intervention of the United States must come, or, if not actual intervention, at least the open threat of it. They realize that the crafty and able persons who have fought and are still fighting the Government from ambush embrace the greater part of the intellectual and material power of the nation, and, knowing perfectly well the weaknesses of the administration, the teetering loyalty of the army, and counting on the indifference, ignorance, and stupidity of the lower classes, and believing that the United States regards intervention in the light of a true calamity and therefore something to be avoided to the last degree of patient forbearance, they will plot and conspire and secretly further the operations of the semibandits remaining in the field until the country is absolutely ruined. The writer does not rejoice in the conditions that seem to warrant the expression of these views on the part of his countrymen and other foreigners; in fact, he deplores them heartily and wholly, and has steadily hoped that things would take a different turn.

I have [etc.]

MARION LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/5258.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 17, 1912—7 p. m.

Felix Diaz, rebel general, with less than 1,000 men, expects hourly attack by Federals. Consuls named committee who called upon Diaz, requesting avoid fighting within city. He promised or would advise, if unavoidable, unless surprised. Gunboats against Diaz, under command Azueta, threaten bombard barracks located center city. This evening consuls requested me hold American steamer Monterey await arrival next boat and Des Moines be sent back here at once. Telegraph communications interrupted.

CANADA.

File No. 812 00/5271.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 17, 1912—10 p. m.

Minister of War having announced that Government forces were about to bombard Vera Cruz, I at once visited the President and told him in the strongest possible manner that there must be no such bombardment endangering the lives of innocent foreigners and that he must immediately communicate with his commander there to see that no mistake was made. He insisted that the foreign consuls there had been warned to remove their countrymen from danger, a statement which I can not believe, although he later repeated it to the British Minister.

If the Des Moines is at Vera Cruz it should be held there until situation clears. German Chargé d'Affaires asked if Germans could, in case of necessity, take refuge on board, and I replied that the captain would doubtless do everything possible under the circumstances.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/5347a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 17, 1912.

SIR: The Department is in receipt of information from private sources, from the American Consul at Vera Cruz, from the American Embassy at Mexico City, and from the Mexican Embassy in this city to the effect that the city of Vera Cruz has been taken by Mexican insurrectionists, acting under the orders of Felix Diaz, a prominent Mexican and a nephew of former President Diaz. While the Embassy at Mexico City and the consul report the situation as quiet, the Department learns from the Mexican Embassy that a strong effort will be made at once by Government forces to recapture the city, and it seems likely that if fighting takes place in Vera Cruz the many Americans and American interests there will be placed in a position of serious danger.

The Department of State accordingly requests that the U. S. S. Des Moines, which recently visited Vera Cruz and is believed to be now at Progreso, be ordered to return to Vera Cruz immediately to observe and report upon the situation and, in such ways as commend themselves to the discretion of the commanding officer, to afford protection to the Americans and American interests that may be in need thereof.

Since the policy of this Government with regard to Mexico and the revolution at present in progress in that country is one of nonintervention, the Department desires that the commander of the Des Moines be instructed to observe a strictly neutral attitude in his dealing with the Federal or rebel de facto officials, and that he take no action which could be construed as favoring either one side or the other in the present controversy. It would be glad to have him report frequently upon the developments in the political situation and begs to say that it would also be glad to have him, after Americans and American interests have been adequately provided for, to afford such assistance and protection to foreigners and foreign interests as may be possible under the circumstances.

The Department regrets that it is not possible to give anything more than the above general indications as to the instructions which should be sent to the commanding officer of the Des Moines. The information it has so far received is meager and it is practically impossible to foresee what will occur in the immediate future. It desires accordingly that the commander shall, with the general position of the Department in mind, act in all instances and at all times in accordance with his own discretion. He will doubtless find it advantageous to consult with the consul from time to time.

The Department understands that the U. S. S. Tacoma may soon be released from its duty at Bluefields on the Nicaraguan coast, and begs to suggest that in this event she also be ordered to the port of Vera Cruz to cooperate with the Des Moines. The instructions given her commanding officer should be the same as those given the commanding officer of the Des Moines. The principal reason for asking for her detail is the likelihood that communication between Vera Cruz and the outside world may be cut (the Department is informed by the consul at Vera Cruz that insurrectionists refused to permit the use of the cable from 11 o'clock on the night of October 16 until 10 o'clock the following morning) and the desire to have some channel of communication if this occurs. The Tacoma's wireless plant, in conjunction with that of the Des Moines, could probably relay messages either to Texas or to Cuba with sufficient accuracy to make this a trustworthy means of communication.

I have [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

Department of State,
Washington, October 18, 1912—2 p. m.

In view of the presence of the large number of Americans, foreigners, and noncombatants in Vera Cruz, and their important interests there, and the difficulty, if not the impossibility, of their being able to protect themselves, you are directed to say to the Foreign Office that the Department hopes that no fighting, either in the streets of Vera Cruz or elsewhere which would seriously endanger the persons and interests referred to, will take place.

Adee.

File No. 812.00/5276.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, October 18, 1912—7 p. m.

On account of general excitement of people here over her supposed mission, Minister for Foreign Affairs strongly urged me to request Department not to allow Des Moines to enter port of Vera Cruz for the present. I replied that I would transmit his request.

In view of my remonstrances there will be no bombardment of city, but opposing forces will engage outside.

Schuyler.

File No. 812.113/1183c.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Department of State,
Washington, October 18, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inform you that this Department has received definite information through its Consular Service that Vera Cruz, Mexico, is now in the hands of insurrectionary forces.

In view of the shipments of arms and munitions of war that are likely to be excepted by the President for routing via Vera Cruz, or that have already been so excepted, I have the honor to request that your Department take such action as may be necessary to hold up all shipments which are to enter Mexican territory through that port until this Department can satisfy itself that conditions are such as to warrant forwarding such articles by the route referred to.

I have [etc.]

Alvey A. Adee.

File No. 812.00/5287.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

American Consulate,
Vera Cruz, October 19, 1912—10 a. m.

General Felix Díaz, in command in this city, requests that I forward the following:

General Felix Díaz to the Secretary of State.

Secretary of State Knox,
Washington, U. S. A.:

On account of my occupancy of a place which is the principal port of the Republic, I beg that the belligerency of the armed movement which I have initiated be recognized. My program, which I have fully made known, is no other than that of the reestablishment of peace in the Republic, counting upon it that all insurrectionists are in accord with me and will abandon their attitude (i. e., the way they are conducting their independent campaigns against the Government) if I intervene as a third in the dispute. A great part of the chiefs of the army are with me—almost all, I may say, of the officers and soldiers. It is clearly to be seen, therefore, that the combatants on both sides are worn out by the shameless war they find themselves obliged to carry on as a result of the infamies and shortcomings of the present Government. I have given my word of honor before the world that I have no personal ambition whatsoever and wish only to set the feet of my country again in the paths of peace, of order, and of labor. Accordingly, I shall assume supreme command only until national life shall be completely normalized, at which time I shall call elections throughout the country so that in calmness and a right mind the people may freely elect whomever shows the greatest evidence of fitness. To him who triumphs I will lend the aid of all my powers, so that he may take quiet and peaceful possession of his office, and when I shall have retired from active politics I will continue to give him my moral aid. I also solemnly declare that I will not directly aid any other candidate whatsoever, no matter of what party he may be, since he who triumphs will owe his success exclusively to the ballot boxes.

The time during which I have been in occupation of this port has demonstrated what are the methods of procedure that I think ought to be followed by any chief in authority—not the slightest attack upon either property or persons, no exaction upon business, industry, or investment; public funds scrupulously and perfectly accounted for, profound respect for the partisans of the Madero Government in so far as their ideas have, as until now, translated themselves into inviolable guaranties of liberty of thought within the law and morals, for not one of them has been arrested, despite the vehemence of certain of them, who formed the only discordant note in the peace and harmony which has reigned in this port since my arrival.

Begging you to pardon me for the omission of certain customary forms, which is due to the abnormal circumstances by which I am surrounded, I beg you to communicate the substance of this communication to the honorable the President of the United States of America, whose reply I anxiously and respectfully await. I beg to assure you of my most high and distinguished consideration.

Felix Díaz.

Canada.

File No. 812.00/5271.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

Department of State,
Washington, October 19, 1912—2 p. m.

Second paragraph of your October 17, 10 p. m. Des Moines sailed 18th for Vera Cruz from Progreso; will arrive daylight October 20.

Orders were given that after Americans and their interests have been cared for the commander may give such assistance and protection as is possible to foreigners and their interests and to noncombatants. You may so inform the German Chargé d'Affaires.

Adee.

File No. 812.00/5276.

Department of State,
Washington, October 19, 1912—5 p. m.

Your October 18, 7 p. m. You will say to the Minister for Foreign Affairs that while the Department is glad to accede to his wishes whenever possible, it can scarcely justify itself in doing so in the present instance, since, in ordering a gunboat to Vera Cruz, which is admitted by the Mexican Federal Government to be under rebel control, it is fulfilling a perfectly obvious and imperative duty on its part toward Americans and American interests in that port. Hence, this Department not only deprecates but much regrets that any other purpose should be perceived in its presence there than the one which you have communicated to the Mexican Government and which the Mexican Government may, if it deems it necessary, make public in order to calm whatever excitement may exist. It would seem quite superfluous to add that this Government, of course, has no other purpose whatsoever in dispatching the Des Moines to Vera Cruz.

Adee.

File No. 812.00/5294.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, October 20, 1912—9 p. m.

Minister for Foreign Affairs informs me that the policy of this Government is to do nothing for the present in a military way except to surround Vera Cruz and to prevent escape of Diaz. He thought that every day of delay and of inaction on the part of Diaz would strengthen the position of the Government and alienate the people from the rebel movement. He assured me that no bombardment or other fighting in Vera Cruz was in contemplation.

Schuyler.

File No. 812.00/5293.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 20, 1912.

Department's October 19, 5 p. m. I have found no excitement concerning arrival of Des Moines except on the part of administration, and I so informed Minister for Foreign Affairs just now. He declared that the Government had no objection to the arrival of the vessel now, but that there had been fears as to the effect which its arrival would have at the outbreak of uprising at Vera Cruz.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/5297.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 21, 1912—10 a. m.

I transmit the following, just received, from the Federal General Beltrán:

General Beltrán to the American Consul at Vera Cruz.

WILLIAM W. CANADA,
Chief of the Consular Corps, Vera Cruz:

In obedience to the orders of my Government to regain possession of the city of Vera Cruz, in which you are, in addition to being the representative of your country, the worthy chief of the consular corps, and in view of the presence in the harbor of the Des Moines, I have the honor, in compliance with article 17 of the laws of war, to inform you that the city will be taken by force of arms. I hope, Mr. Consul, that you will be good enough to take, in the matter of your nationals, and with the consuls over whom you preside (so that they in turn may do so for their nationals), the necessary precautionary measures for avoiding the consequences which unfortunately are usually attendant upon an engagement at arms. Hospitals, scientific establishments, and buildings over which the Red Cross flag is displayed will be places of refuge. It is impossible for me to inform you of the hour at which the attack upon the city will commence, but I assure you that it will not be earlier than 24 hours from the time you receive this communication. I am glad that one of the steamers of your Nation is in the bay, and I trust that it will facilitate the matter of dealing with the material difficulties which might be met by those of your nationals who might desire to leave the city in haste. If you deem it in order, I beg to request you to be good enough to present my respects to the senior officer of the Des Moines.

Accept [etc.]

JOAQUÍN BELTRÁN,
General of Brigade, Territory of Vera Cruz.

OCTOBER 20, 1912.

CANADA.

File No. 812.00/5306.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 21, 1912—12 noon.

Diaz is hourly losing strength and prestige. The failure of the army to declare for him immediately after the capture of Vera Cruz has greatly weakened his position and helped the Government, which is now stronger than for some time. Diaz counted on prestige of his name and position as an army officer and did not sufficiently plan capture or revolt of other important strategic centers.

There is a great drain on the Treasury caused by the immense sums of "pacification money" constantly being paid by Madero to individuals all over the country, ranging from 1,000 pesos. These payments can not be indefinitely continued and when they cease beneficiaries will doubtless make trouble.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/5297.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 21, 1912—11 p. m.

Consul, Vera Cruz, telegraphs October 21, 10 a. m., that Federal commander Beltran has given notice that he will endeavor to regain possession of Vera Cruz by force of arms within 24 hours from the receipt of his message by the consul. Reiterate to the Mexican Government the hope expressed in the Department's October 18, 2 p. m., that no fighting which would endanger American life and property will take place. Consul has been instructed to confer with commander of Des Moines and his colleagues and to take all necessary precautions.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/5315.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 22, 1912—10 a. m.

Foreigners and noncombatants are between consulate and the Des Moines, which lies 2,000 feet away. This zone has been designated by myself and colleagues as neutral. Commanders on both sides promise to respect and to protect it, being convinced that if they do not Commander Hughes will, even if he has to land armed forces. I have taken all possible steps to protect life and properties, even established hospital in free zone, and have mounted messengers to be able to act quickly when battle commences at 12 o'clock a. m., as promised.

CANADA.

File No. 812.00/5317.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 22, 1912—3 p. m.

Your October 21, 11 p. m. The most stringent orders were given yesterday and reiterated after Cabinet meeting to-day to do as little damage as possible to the city of Vera Cruz and especially to foreign interests. There is no intention of bombarding the city; fighting will take place outside of city, fire being directed at barracks.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/5319.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 23, 1912—7 a. m.

The battle has already commenced all around city.

CANADA.

File No. 812.00/5333.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 23, 1912—1 p. m.

Felix Diaz has been made prisoner. This collapse of his revolt greatly complicates the general situation. Temporary success of the Government will only result in prolonging trouble. We should have warships in every Mexican port, prepared to remain indefinitely, as the Madero administration is absolutely impotent to bring about even a semblance of peace and order.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/5333a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 23, 1912.

With reference to the message dated October 22, 10 p. m.,[1] from Commander Hughes at Vera Cruz, in which he requests instructions with regard to inquiries that have been made of him as to asylum for Felix Diaz, I have the honor to say that, while this Department understands that the subject of asylum is covered by standing instructions furnished by the Navy Department to all American naval officers, this Government does not claim what is technically known as the right of asylum in the strictest sense. There is, however, an evident distinction between cases of this kind and cases in which temporary refuge is given in order to preserve innocent human life; in cases of the latter kind this Department finds it expedient to give a certain latitude to the judgment of the officer who is called upon to determine within his discretion the course recommended by broad considerations of humanity in each individual case. It is accordingly the general rule of the Department to place all emphasis upon the responsibility of the official concerned and to permit him within these limitations, at his discretion, to afford temporary refuge where such is necessary to preserve innocent human life.

---

[1] Not printed.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/5424.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

No. 768.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 23, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith a series of documents and reports referring to the taking of the city of Vera Cruz and the subsequent happenings.

I have [etc.],

WM. W. CANADA.

[Inclosure 1.]

[Not printed; consists of a minute account of events, October 15-21, in diary form.]

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

Copy of Memorial sent to General Joaquín Beltrán by the Consular Corps.

The consular corps accredited in this port, desirous of avoiding as far as possible the shedding of blood, and above all to assure the safety of the lives and interests of their countrymen as well as of the peaceful citizens of the city, especially the lives of women and children, take the liberty of requesting that the combat with the troops commanded by Brigadier General Díaz, who are in possession of the city, do not take place in the interior of the city.

The committee of the consular corps desire to have a conference with you in a place which you may indicate, as near as possible to the city, confiding in your protection of their persons during the discharge of that commission.

We are [etc.],

W. W. CANADA,
American Consul.
A. BROUZET,
French Consul.
M. BAYON,
Spanish Consul.
C. GERTZ,
German Consul.
L. J. NUNN,
British Consul.
FRCO. P. DE COS,
Portuguese Consul.

[Inclosure 3.—Translation.]

General Beltrán to the American Consul.

EJERCITO NACIONAL,
SECCION DE OPERACIONES MIXTOS,
Tejeria, October 19, 1912.

No. 273.]

SIR: Gen. Agustín Váldez has put in my possession the communication in which you, as dean of the consular corps, have requested an interview.

As chief, which I am, of the forces which operate in this district, I inform you that it will be a pleasure to have the interview take place.

For the purpose, I request that you and the consuls and vice consuls who so desire come to Tejería at 4 p. m.

I will be at the entrance to the town at your orders.

JOAQUÍN BELTRÁN.

[Inclosure 4.]

Commander Hughes to the American Consul.

OCTOBER 20, 1912.

DEAR MR. CANADA: Both you and the captain know that if active trouble arises about the discharging of the Seguranza[1] I am the one that will have the final trouble.

The captain said to-day that under no circumstances would he allow arms or ammunition to be landed, and I wish he would give us that assurance in writing and state whether any arms or ammunition are in the cargo.

If arms or ammunition are landed I shall refuse action in time of trouble. I am fairly well assured that if no arms or ammunition are landed there will be no trouble. I will see you in the morning.

Sincerely,

C. F. HUGHES.

[Inclosure 5.—Translaton.]

General Beltrán to the American Consul.

NATIONAL ARMY,
SECTION OF MIXED OPERATIONS,
Tejeria, Vera Cruz, October 20, 1912.

No. 280.]

Having to obey the orders of my Government to the end of retaking the plaza of Vera Cruz, in which, in addition to being the representative of your country, you are the worthy dean of the consular corps, and the U. S. S. Des Moines being in the bay, I have the honor, in compliance with Article XVII of the Articles of War, to inform you that that place will be taken by force of arms.

I expect, Mr. Consul, that you will take with your countrymen and with the consuls over whom you so worthily preside, in order that they may in turn do so with their countrymen, the measures of precaution necessary to avoid the consequences which unfortunately an armed combat brings with it.

It is impossible for me to manifest to you the hour at which the attack on the city will commence, but I guarantee that it will not be in less than 24 hours, counting from the time at which you receive this communication.

The hospitals, scientific building, and edifices which fly the Red Cross flag will be places of refuge.

I am glad that a ship of your Nation is in the bay, because I am confident that this will assist in solving the material difficulties of those of your countrymen who wish to leave the city.

If you consider it proper, I take the liberty of requesting that you present my respects to the Commander of the Des Moines.

Please accept, etc.,

JOAQUÍN BELTRÁN.

[Inclosure 6.—Translation.]

The American Consul to General Beltrán.

Your attentive communication, No. 280, of yesterday, and which was delivered to me at a quarter past 10 this morning, leaves me advised of the resolution of your Government to retake the plaza of Vera Cruz by force of arms.

---

[1] See pp. 900 et seq.

The consular corps was advised of the contents of the communication at the meeting which was held at 11 this morning. At this meeting the consuls unanimously agreed to send you this answer to your communication and to say to you, in addition, that by common accord they have agreed to use the bodegas which are on wharf No. 4 as a place of refuge for the families of foreigners in this port, and permit themselves to request very earnestly that you give your orders to the end that this place be respected by your forces, and at the same time extend their request to include the buildings where their respective flags fly, as in them are their own families.

I have paid your respects to the Commander of the warship Des Moines.

I subscribe myself, etc.,

WM. W. CANADA.

File No. 812.00/5380b.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 25, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that the effects of the recent developments in the situation in Mexico, as reported by the Embassy at Mexico City and the consular officers throughout Mexico, are such as to cause this Department concern as to the course of affairs in that country in the near future.

It seems the part of wisdom, therefore, and the Department has been confirmed in its opinion by conferences with the American Ambassador to Mexico, who has recently been in Washington, to be adequately prepared promptly to afford protection to such Americans and American interests as may stand in need thereof.

I accordingly have the honor to request that in addition to the Des Moines and Tacoma, which are now at Vera Cruz and Tampico, respectively, two other vessels, one to be of very light draft, be held in readiness for service in Mexican east-coast waters (the light-draft vessel being necessary in the event of any disturbances in the Yucatan Peninsula, where all the harbors are shallow), so that any emergency that may arise may be quickly and effectively dealt with.

With regard to the situation on the west coast it is requested that vessels be kept in readiness for dispatch, in case of need, to the four principal ports and railway terminals on the west coast of Mexico—i. e., Salina Cruz, Manzanillo, Mazatlan, and Guaymas—since there are large American interests at all of these places and they are the ports which Americans who might be forced to flee from interior points would endeavor to reach in attempting to leave the country. The Department has reason to believe that the port of Manzanillo, which is the gateway to the city of Guadalajara, the second in importance in Mexico, should be kept particularly in mind, since it would appear that the most serious of the revolutionary activities that may break out in the interior of Mexico will probably occur in the State of Jalisco.

This Department realizes that the early dispatch of the Denver to Mexican west-coast waters, which has already been determined upon, and which will probably remain indefinitely in Mexican west-coast waters, makes it necessary for the Navy Department to be prepared to send only three additional vessels to west-coast ports.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/5480.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

No. 770.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 25, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose a series of reports and documents referring to the taking of Vera Cruz by the rebel general Felix Diaz and the retaking from Diaz by the Federal general Joaquin Beltrán.

I have [etc.]

WM. W. CANADA.

[Inclosure 1.]

[Not printed; consists of a continuation of inclosure 1 of the Consul's No. 768, ante.]

[Inclosure 2.]

Commander Hughes to the German Consul.

UNITED STATES CRUISER "DES MOINES,"
Vera Cruz, October 21, 1912.

SIR: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 21st instant, requesting me to take under my protection the following properties belonging to German subjects, namely: House Miguel Lerdo No. 8, belonging to Mr. During y Cia. Sucs.; House Benito Juarez No. 14-28, belonging to Sommer, Herrmann y Cia. Sucs. (site of the German Consulate); House Cinco de Mayo No. 6, belonging to Guillo. Büsing y Cia. Sucs. In case the city is bombarded, I shall afford the same protection to the above properties as I shall afford protection to property of American citizens.

I have [etc.]

C. F. HUGHES.

[Inclosure 3.]

The German Consul to Commander Hughes.

GERMAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 21, 1912.

In addition to the request made this morning, asking for protection of German properties upon indication of the German Minister in Mexico City, I herewith beg you to extend the protection of your flag equally over the German steamer Steigerwald, now in port, which serves as a refuge for German and foreign families who deem themselves in danger.

If you consider it necessary that said steamer change its anchorage please advise the captain.

C. GERTZ.

[Inclosure 4.]

Commander Hughes to the German Consul.

UNITED STATES CRUISER "DES MOINES,"
Vera Cruz, October 21, 1912.

SIR: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 21st instant requesting that I furnish protection to the German steamer Steigerwald.

I beg to inform you that I will afford all the protection within my power to the above vessel, the same as if she flew the flag of the United States, and I have so informed the senior Mexican naval officer and the master of the Steigerwald.

I have [etc.]

C. F. HUGHES.

[Inclosure 5.]

Commander Hughes to General Felix Díaz.

UNITED STATES CRUISER "DES MOINES,"
Vera Cruz, October 21, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of this date,[1] forwarding a copy of your letter of the same date to the dean of the consular corps, in regard to military operations and the necessary succor in this vicinity.

I have the further honor to accept your assurance that no act of yours will cause me to land an armed force. Such assurance was to be expected from a man of honor and an officer and a gentleman of your reputation.

Having assumed the protection of the foreign residents, I trust that the act of no person will cause me to land a force on the soil of Mexico.

I desire to assure you [etc.]

C. F. HUGHES.

[Inclosure 6.]

Commander Hughes to General Beltrán.

UNITED STATES CRUISER "DES MOINES,"
Vera Cruz, October 21, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of your communication[1] to the dean of the consular corps at Vera Cruz, No. 280, and dated October 20, 1912, in which you give the notice, as required by the congress of nations, that you will make an attack on the city of Vera Cruz not earlier than 24 hours after the receipt of said communication.

In the above-mentioned communication you do me the honor of stating your pleasure at the presence of the ship under my command in Vera Cruz, and I thank you for the consideration. That you would fully conform with the civilized usages of warfare was only to be expected from an officer and a gentleman of well-known reputation and high attainments.

I have the honor to inform you that I have assumed the protection of the foreign citizens now resident in Vera Cruz, and, while well knowing that no act of a soldier of Mexico would cause trouble to a foreign noncombatant. I trust that no person will so act, or be allowed to act, as to cause me to use force on the soil of Mexico.

Allow me again to extend my thanks for your great courtesy and consideration and to assure you of my highest regard and esteem.

Very respectfully,

C. F. HUGHES.

[Inclosure 7.—Translation.]

General Beltrán to Commander Hughes.

MIXED SECTION OF OPERATIONS,
GENERAL IN CHIEF,

No. 307] Encampment in Front of Vera Cruz, October 22, 1912.

HONORABLE SIR: I highly appreciate the courteous phrases in your favor of yesterday, and I take note of your just opinion with respect to the Mexican soldiers, who will not permit themselves and will not permit to others any unworthy acts against any foreigners.

---

[1] Not printed.

The hospitality of the Mexican nation and the justification of the acts of the Government of the North American Republic move me to this acknowledgment of your letter, which I shall communicate to my Government.

I repeat [etc.]

JOAQUÍN BELTRÁN.

[Inclosure 8.]

The American Consul to Commander Hughes.

On motion of Mr. Brouzet, the French Consul, which was passed and adopted unanimously in to-day's meeting, I was directed, as Dean of the Consular Corps, to convey to you the following vote of thanks:

The Consular Corps of Vera Cruz thanks Commander C. F. Hughes, of the United States cruiser Des Moines, for his able and efficient work in protecting life and property in the city of Vera Cruz during the storming of said city on the 23d instant by the Government troops."

And it is my pleasure to comply with the request of said Consular Corps, begging to add my own personal expressions of gratitude to you for your humanitarian service in behalf of all residents of Vera Cruz.

WM. W. CANADA.

VERA CRUZ, October 25, 1912.

[Inclosure 9.]

The German Consul to Commander Hughes.

No. 554/12.]

GERMAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 25, 1912.

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letters Nos. 368 and 369 appreciating highly your kind offer to protect German properties in this city and equally the German steamer Steigerwald.

At the same time I beg to express my thanks in the name of myself and of all residing German subjects here for your courtesy and readiness to afford us your protection.

C. GERTZ.

File No. 812.00/5333.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 26, 1912—10 a. m.

Your October 23, 1 p. m. Navy Department requested to hold in readiness for east-coast waters two vessels in addition to the Des Moines at Vera Cruz and the Tacoma at Tampico, one of light draft for service along the Yucatan Peninsula, the other a larger vessel; and four vessels to cover the west-coast ports of Guaymas, Mazatlan, Manzanillo and Salina Cruz. The Department does not feel justified in requesting the Navy Department to order these vessels at once to Mexico, as there would appear to be nothing in the local situation at any of the ports named to warrant the sending of vessels there for the protection of Americans and American interests and they could not plausibly be sent for any other purpose. You will continue to keep the Department closely informed as to the situation, however, so that action may be taken without delay if necessary.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/5433.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

American Consulate,
Vera Cruz, November 7, 1912—9 p. m.

Profuse expressions of friendship for the United States are being made by citizens and residents of the State and city of Vera Cruz; Commander Hughes is virtually their hero now, and he is entitled to all the praise and credit given him.

Canada.

File No. 812.00/5438.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, November 8, 1912—12 noon.

Government reports that the rebels around Cuernavaca have been dispersed. Rebel activities in the State of Mexico increasing.

Schuyler.

File No. 812.00/5441.

The American Consul at C. P. Diaz to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Consulate, Ciudad Porfirio Diaz.
(Received November 8, 1912—6.10 p. m.)

About 1,000 rebels in the southern part of this district, in bands of 50 or less. Impossible to say who leads them. In the northern part, about 1,000 have operated during the past month, but are supposed to have crossed into Chihuahua.

Luther T. Ellsworth.

File No. 812.00/5448.

The American Consul at Durango to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

American Consulate,
Durango, November 9, 1912—10 a. m.

Northeastern portion of Durango in rebel possession, estimated 2,000; also as many more in extreme eastern part of State of Durango; numerous other small rebel and bandit bands nearly all sections.

Hamm.

File No. 812.00/5467.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, November 11, 1912—12 noon.

Rebels have about 300 near railroad 50 miles north and about 200 in two or three detachments in western part of State.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.51/48.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, November 12, 1912—5 p. m.

Finances of Mexico in hopeless confusion and bankruptcy seems rapidly approaching.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/5482.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, November 13, 1912—12 noon.

Rebels now control entire coast of Guerrero, most of Michoacán and the State of Mexico, and are increasing in northern Chiapas.

Many political arrests and domiciliary visits by the police are being made.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/5494.

The American Consul at Acapulco to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Acapulco, November 14, 1912—3 p. m.

Rebel leader Padilla controls all coast region to north of Acapulco. All Government troops have retreated to Acapulco.

HARRY K. PANGBURN.

File No. 812.00/5504.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, November 15, 1912—2 p. m.

All communications north of Acapulco are in rebel hands. Conditions in Guerrero are very serious and increasing. Maryland has left. I advise immediate dispatch to Acapulco of a war vessel to remain until Federal Government regains some semblance of control.

Congress is apparently firmly determined to be independent of Executive control. Gustavo Madero is strengthening himself in every way. Cabinet is split over latest political developments, and recent apparent strength of administration is disappearing.

Minister of Trade and Commerce is informing Americans that it is impossible to protect their interests, as he naturally prefers to protect Mexican interests rather than foreign, and that everyone's first duty was to protect himself instead of relying on the Government.

SCHUYLER.

File. No. 812.00/5502.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, November 15, 1912—2 p. m.

Large rebel forces in the northern, numerous small bands in the central and southern part of the State which will scatter all directions on the approach of Federals.

CANADA.

File No. 812.00/5513.

The American Consul at San Luis Potosí to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
San Luis Potosí, November 17, 1912—8 p. m.

Cuidad Maiz, town 4,000 inhabitants, 90 miles east, taken by rebels.

BONNEY.

File No. 312.11/992.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 20, 1912—1 p. m.

Last paragraph of your November 15, 2 p. m. Calling his attention to the statements that are being made by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, you will say to the Minister for Foreign Affairs that the Department is astonished to learn that a member of the Cabinet is making statements so ill considered and so unfriendly to this country, and takes it for granted that his opinions are not shared by the Minister for Foreign Affairs nor the Mexican Government; that the Minister of Trade and Commerce will be immediately and appropriately cautioned and that the Government of Mexico will exert every effort to afford ample protection to the persons and property of American citizens.

KNOX.

File No. 312.11/998.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, November 27, 1912—12 noon.

The spread of anti-American feeling is especially noticeable in the failure to take prompt and adequate measures in the increasing number of cases of minor Mexican officials guilty of offenses against American citizens or their property. The momentarily heightened prestige of the Government due to the Vera Cruz incident may account for this feeling; the idea seems to prevail that it is less dangerous than it was to annoy Americans. The President is informing people that he is delighted with the election of Mr. Wilson as President of the United States.

I am to-day transmitting to the Department a long note from the Mexican Government replying to this Embassy's note of September 15.

Schuyler.

File No. 812.00/5662.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 775.]

American Consulate,
Vera Cruz, November 27, 1912.

Sir: * * * The actual capture of Diaz at the municipal palace was an act of treachery, pure and simple. The first Federal troops to arrive there showed a white flag and called on Diaz and his men not to shoot, as they were friends and had come to join him, at the same time asking for orders. In view of this he refrained from harming them and as his men came down from the roof of the palace to embrace their friends their guns were taken away from them and Diaz was left helpless and alone. General Beltrán's men came through and took advantage of the neutral zone, which both commanders had agreed to respect. * * *

People all over the State are murmuring and discontented and are expressing their disapprobation and censure at the conduct of General Beltrán over Diaz, who has probably many times as many adherents as at the time of the taking of Vera Cruz. In fact the whole State seems to have come to be in sympathy with him.

It would not in the least surprise me to see Beltrán himself rise against the Madero Government. He has lost much prestige with the people and the army by the treachery practiced on Diaz and the only way to redeem himself with the people is to join Diaz and help him win out. * * *

The present feeling toward the United States, so far as the State of Vera Cruz and the isthmus country is concerned, continues to be more friendly, in my opinion and in that of competent judges among the foreigners, than ever before. The conduct of the American Government in its protection of the lives and property of foreigners and natives, and that of Commander Hughes of the Des Moines in particular, is lauded, and expressions of gratitude and approval are heard on all sides.

I am [etc.]

Wm. W. Canada.

File No. 312.11/1001.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 1792.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, November 27, 1912.

Sir: With reference to my telegram of November 24, 12 noon,[1] I have the honor to transmit herewith a translation of the note which I have received in reply to the Embassy's strong note of September 15 last.

I have [etc.]

Montgomery Schuyler.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

Department of Foreign Affairs,
Mexico, November 22, 1912.

Mr. Chargé d'Affaires: I have taken cognizance of the note dated in this city on the 15th and received on the 17th of September last, numbered 5576-300, which the Government of the United States addresses to the Mexican Government through his excellency the Ambassador, Mr. Henry Lane Wilson, in which, after a full expression of its opinion concerning the conditions of American citizens in Mexico and the situation of the country, it asks for an adequate and categorical reply regarding the measures which the Government of Mexico may decide to adopt, first, to arrest and properly punish the authors of murders of American citizens; second, to cause a supposed hostility toward the American interests mentioned to cease; and, third, to ameliorate the general conditions of the country so that American citizens residing therein may not suffer on account of the state of revolution, anarchy and chaos in which Mexcio is said to be.

I must in the first place confess that the tone of the above-mentioned note has been a source of great surprise to the Mexican Government, because it had never expected from the Government of the United States reproaches so severe, so much at variance with the spirit of amity invoked in said note and so pessimistic in their conclusions, many of which are based on a manifest error or an inexplicable misunderstanding.

With the fullness of consideration required by the importance and number of the cases mentioned, with the sincerity and honesty which guide the Mexican Government, without susceptibilities of amour propre, and in pursuance of the instructions I have received from the President, I now have the honor to make an exact and abundant reply to the Government of the United States, concerning the above-montioned points, admitting the evil wherever it may exist, and trusting that that Government will regard this answer and estimate its details with a calm and impartial judgment, and consider it as the expression of the purposes of the Mexican Government in matters concerning foreign residents.

With reference to the first point, the Mexican Government, under and in spite of the present conditions of the country, has fulfilled its international obligation toward American citizens. A hasty review of the cases mentioned in the note I have the honor to answer will prove the above statement. According to the documents on file in the Foreign Office the following extracts appear on record:

---

[1] Should be November 27, 12 noon.

Case of Wm. H. Waite. April 4, 1912, judicial investigation was made. Frequent requests were sent to the court urging action, and the data furnished by several persons have been sent to it, among which are the data furnished by Mr. A. B. Coate, a resident of the State of Veracruz. This person does not dare to affirm that the persons he has pointed out as presumable authors are guilty, and only because the judge and the secretary did not look at him squarely in the face, he believes in the guilt of both the accused and the authorities. There appears on file a record from a revolutionary court, according to which Agustín and Macedonio Rodríguez were sentenced to death by said court and their execution ordered, because among other crimes they committed the murder of Mr. Waite. The investigation is still pending.

Case of Henry Crumbley. July, 1912. His death was due to a fight he had with a peon, who wounded Crumbley because the latter was making love to the peon's wife. The investigation has been concluded; but the defendant, Santiago Alvarado, is at large and his whereabouts are not known.

Case of Rowan Ayres. August 15, 1912. The investigation of this horrid crime having been commenced, the Foreign Office has been actively urging the local authorities with a view to the prosecution and punishment of the guilty parties. The authorities of Puruándiro and Uruapam have been directed to arrest Rafael Espinosa, presumably the author of the crime. As in that place there have been several bands of bandits who flee upon the approach of the federals, the arrest has not been possible.

Case of James W. Reed. November, 1910. The investigation was commenced in the City of Mexico; and Sebastián Varela, who murdered Reed, was sentenced to nine years in prison and is serving his term.

Case of Geo. Critchfield or Bishop. Tuxpam, Veracruz, April, 1911. Antonio Balderrabano, the guilty party, has been sentenced to 15 years in prison and is serving his term.

Case of Emil Alex Krause, alias Roth. Tampico Alto, December, 1910. The investigation having been commenced, the same is still in course because the guilty parties have not been found.

Case of J. C. Ellick. Badiraguato, October, 1910. The presumably guilty men having been arrested, were afterwards released for want of evidence. The public prosecutor appealed from the above decision. During one of the revolutionary movements the accused escaped and their whereabouts are not known.

Case of J. R. Lockhart. November, 1910. Killed in an uninhabited place. Donaciano Molina and Pedro Mena having been arrested as presumably the authors of the crime, the case has been slowly handled because the court is far from the place of the occurrence, which is situated in the mountainous regions of the Sierra Madre. The rebels have prevented a fruitful investigation.

Case of Wm. W. Fowler. Tuxpam. The guilty man has been arrested; the case is pending.

Case of Sam. Hidy. Los Plátanos, San Luis Potosí. Killed in an uninhabited region. Investigation has been commenced, without results on account of lack of data.

There are no data in the Foreign Office concerning the cases of Caradoc, Hughes, Thomas Green, and W. L. Randell.

With reference to the ten cases which have been reviewed, four of which occurred prior to the revolution of 1910, three in 1911, and three more during the present year, judicial investigation, as may be seen, has been instituted in each case; the culprits have been convicted in three cases; in two cases the accused have been released for want of evidence, and in two cases the investigation has produced no results.

In connection with the above cases it is advisable to invite attention to the following circumstances: The great extent of the country and the scanty population in the places in which nine of the above-mentioned American citizens have been murdered, have made the judicial investigation very difficult, in some instances because of the lack of data, and on other occasions because of the reluctance of the lower classes, now as at all times, to reveal the names of the authors of crimes, some men carrying their reluctance to the extent of dying without giving the name of the person who has wounded them.

The scanty population in the places in which the above-mentioned murders have been committed and their distance from important centers do not always permit the courts to obtain a satisfactory result from the investigations undertaken by them. The American Secretary of State, Mr. Bayard, on September 18, 1886, in referring to violence suffered by Chinese subjects, made the following statement: "Chinese laborers voluntarily carry this principle of isolation and segregation into remote regions where law and authority are well known to be feeblest, and where conflicts of labor and prejudices of races may be precipitated on the slightest pretext and carried without check to limits beyond those possible where the power of law may be better organized."[1]

In that case, and in others which we could mention, precisely this point has been emphasized: that the scarcity of population and the difficulty in having duly organized tribunals in remote places, are the cause for the delays in the decisions of the courts and favorable results of the investigations.

Case of Foster, Carrol, and Glennon. The fact that this case has been treated separately must have been intentional, as the same is attended by circumstances absolutely different from those of the others. Messrs. Foster, Carrol, and Glennon operated as filibusters in Lower California, near the boundary line of the United States. They were pointed out as pernicious foreigners and the authorities were ordered to prosecute them.

The character of the crime committed by them places them beyond the protection of their Government, because they voluntarily assumed the risk of their action, which was in violation of the sovereignty and peace of the country in which they were received under the protection of its laws. Notwithstanding, when the Government was informed that the above-mentioned men had been killed, orders were given for the courts to open the proper investigation.

Therefore, the attitude of the Mexican Government with reference to the prosecution and punishment of persons guilty of violence against American citizens has been adjusted to the law and it can not be made the subject for reproach, except as the result of an eminently partial and adverse judgment, which is not in keeping with the proofs of amity previously received and with the course followed by the Government of the United States with reference to crimes committed within its territory against Mexican citizens. By way of an example I may refer to the following among other cases which could be mentioned, to wit: Antonio Rodriguez, burnt alive in Rock Springs, on November 9, 1910; Celso Cervantes, murdered by an American policeman in Los Angeles, California, the murderer having been acquitted; Damián Ríos and another Mexican, murdered in Texas in November, 1910; Cruz Rodriguez, murdered in Del Rio by an American customs officer. The latter was acquitted because it was said that the victim was drowned in the river while escaping from his pursuers. Nicanor Trevino, murdered in Galveston in June, 1911; Antonio Gâmez, a boy, lynched in Thorndale in November, 1911. The above are a few of the many cases which prove the procrastination or indifference of the American authorities. The Mexicans arrested at Seguin on August 5th of this year, wounded by the constables and sheriffs of Marion, Texas, and placed without medical treatment in a dungeon, where one was found dead on the following day and the other lost his reason, prove the injustice of the imputation of cruelty and insensibility on the part of the Mexican judicial authorities.

On the other hand, it is not strange that such a crisis as the one suffered by Mexico, which has caused the death of so many Mexicans, should also have injured foreign residents; but it is to be hoped that the evils suffered may be compensated by the benefits which should result from the establishment of an organic peace based upon respect for the law. In any case, I beg to invite your attention to the fact that last year only three Americans were the victims of violence, and three more during the present year. On the other hand, during the month of September alone, of 1910, there were three American victims and one in the month of November of the same year, prior to the commencement of the revolution.

From the above it can be clearly seen that the outrages committed are those which occur under normal conditions. The American colony being so numerous and having so many interests in Mexico, it is inevitable that conflicts of one class or another should occur with the natives of the country; but it can be declared that such conflicts occur not because the victims may be of American nationality, but because they happen in all the countries of the world.

---

[1] The date September 18, 1886, above given as that of the text quoted from Secretary Bayard, is incorrect; it should be February 18, 1886; the text is contained in a note directed to Mr. Cheng Tsao Ju, the Chinese Minister, "touching the treatment of Chinese subjects in the United States." (See For. Rel. 1886, p. 167; Moore's Digest, vol. vi, p. 834.)

With reference to the cases in which the courts have not granted release under bond to prisoners of American nationality accused of crimes of a common order, it must be said that the laws of the country, in view of its peculiar conditions, do not grant this privilege except when aside from other circumstances the penalty for the crime charged is less than seven years imprisonment. The laws of penal procedure of Mexico are in this respect more severe than those of the United States, and therefore American citizens who have to submit to them find a disadvantage when comparing them with the procedure which obtains in their country. The Government is at the present time studying the amendment to this law in the Federal District and the Territories in order that natives and foreigners may enjoy the benefits of freedom; but until the law is repealed in the Federal District and the States, the same will have to be applied indiscriminately to foreigners and Mexicans alike.

In each particular case which reaches the knowledge of the Government, the latter endeavors to act prudently by recommending that the release under bond be granted, if permitted by the terms of the law and justified by the good behavior of the accused prior to their incarceration, as shown by the investigation.

II.

The Mexican Government most earnestly rejects the imputation that it has acted with or manifested any hostility to American interests. In fact, it fails to know what authorities may have taken advantage of their position to satisfy their greed or animosity by persecuting and robbing American interests at a favorable opportunity, as alleged by the Ambassador in the note I now answer. The vagueness of the charge and its enormity relieve this Government from insisting on this point.

With reference to the concrete cases mentioned, to wit: The Associated Press; The Mexican Herald, an American newspaper; the Tlahualilo Company; the oil interests in Tampico, and the Mexican Packing Company, I have the honor to say that the Mexican Government has in no way shown any hostility to the above-mentioned interests, as may be seen from the following:

Associated Press. This concern had daily use, from 6 p. m. to 1 a. m., of a telegraph wire from Laredo to Mexico, dating from October 10, 1906, through a verbal agreement with the Director of Telegraphs, and for a period of three years. In October, 1909, the Government insisted, as had been done before, upon the necessity of entering into a formal contract, to which the representative of the Associated Press was opposed, making objections to the various projects submitted to him. In June of this year, the Government again insisted upon the contract, giving the company on two occasions a term of one month to accept the project or to express its objections.

The last project, dated August 1 of this year, consisted in that the company, aside from the amount it was paying, should pay the sum of $200.00 per month for each additional journal which should receive its service; that the observance of the contract should be governed by the laws of Mexico; that the Government should reserve its right to suspend the service in case of an interruption of the telegraph wires or when public order and the safety of the constituted Government should demand it, without the latter incurring any other liability than that of the refund of the amounts paid in advance. The messages of the Associated Press should be transmitted and received in Spanish, English or French. The agreement would not imply a monopoly and the Director of Telegraphs could, if he saw fit, enter into agreements of the same character with other companies. Practically, these conditions were those of the verbal agreement, therefore the Associated Press did not suffer any injury.

The general office of the above concern declined to accept these conditions which constitute the substance of the contract, and which had been accepted by their representative in Mexico; and for this reason, since the 1st day of September the company makes use of the telegraph wire, paying for such service the rate especially granted to the press.

The Mexican Herald. This journal received a subsidy from the past administration. The present Government has outlined as its policy not to subsidize the press, and for this reason the manager of The Mexican Herald, after unsuccessfully insisting with the Minister of Gobernación upon a new subsidy, started through El Heraldo Mexicano, written in Spanish, and controlled by the above-mentioned concern, a terrific campaign against the Government, publishing false reports of an extremely alarming character which caused panic throughout the country. The chief editor, a Mexican citizen, was incarcerated because he had infringed the penal laws.

The Mexican Government has a perfect right to suppress the abuse of the press, it being no obstacle thereto that the guilty person may seek refuge under the patronage of a foreign mercantile concern which speculates with the peace of the country. The peaceful residents of Mexico, the American colony included, applauded with gratification the measure dictated by the Government restricting "El Heraldo Mexicano."

The directors of this journal took advantage of the opportunity to suspend the publication of the daily, which was not yielding any profits, and they now seek to make charges against the Mexican Government for the supposed losses caused by the suppression of the journal. The Mexican Government, however, has not dictated any order preventing the publication of the above-mentioned paper.

The Tlahualilo Company. This company brought suit against the Mexican Government for the payment of damages because it had failed to receive a determined amount of water from the Nazas River to irrigate its property in the State of Coahuila. The Mexican Government, during the administration of President Díaz, denied the company's right to lay upon it that liability and brought a counter-suit claiming the nullity or expiration of the concession under which the company received the water. The decision of these questions having been entrusted to the Supreme Court of Mexico, the highest tribunal in the country, the attorneys for the claimant and those for the Government have argued the questions at length, very complicated questions indeed, that arise from the examination of the rights alleged; the decision of the court of first instance, pronounced before General Diaz left the presidency, was adverse to the claims of the company; and the decision of the court of second instance confirms the decision of the lower court. The present Government, which from the time it came into power, announced its firm purpose not to interfere in judicial matters, has faithfully kept its word. The briefs presented by the parties and the arguments set forth in the decisions of the Supreme Court of Justice fully demonstrate that the contentions of the Tlahualilo Company are not beyond discussion, but they do not seem to be so unquestionable as to bar any opinion to the contrary; rather, it can be said that they serve to show that the company did not comply with the obligations imposed upon it by the concession, and that the company having acquired by this concession the surplus of certain amounts of water of the Nazas River, now claims that it has preferential rights over the other riparians, much older possessors, of the above-mentioned river. The company from its incipiency was a Mexican corporation and it agreed that it could not transfer its rights to any company of a different nationality, or to a foreign company not organized according to the laws of this country.

The Tampico oil companies. The Mexican Government has not decreed any taxes on oil out of an anti-American sentiment. In order to meet its expenses it has to tax such national sources of wealth as can stand taxation, and oil, one of the wealths of Mexico, did not pay any tax. The contracts entered into with several companies exempt them from all sorts of taxes, excepting the one paid by means of revenue stamps.

Before the enactment of the stamp tax of twenty cents per ton, which is the equivalent of three Mexican cents per barrel—in no way an exorbitant tax, inasmuch as it is less than the rate paid by oil in California—a meeting was held with the representatives of the various companies engaged in the oil industry, and the majority accepted it without protest. Therefore, the Government in decreeing this tax has shown no anti-American spirit nor any special hostility against any particular company, because it has afforded identical treatment to companies representing English and Mexican interests, many of them very powerful, which have accepted the tax without discussion.

Popo Packing Company. The Government had under consideration the concession of the above-mentioned company with a view to declaring it revoked, provided the stipulations under which the concession had been granted had not been observed, and for the purpose of preventing the monopoly sought by the grantees. The case has been favorably decided for the company and the latter has transferred its rights by means of a contract authorized by the Government.

The Mexican Government does not forget the proofs of sympathy it has received from the American people in times of national distress, such as the French Intervention and the Revolution of 1910, which meant for Mexico the acquisition of its political rights, and which on this account aroused the sympathy of the American people. The Mexican Government can not note without surprise that it has been accused of an anti-American sentiment and of a spoliating persecution of American interests. It feels certain that an impartial and careful investigation of all the other cases, which, according to the note I have the honor to answer, could be mentioned and be the subject for protest, would be satisfactory, as the Mexican Government is clearly unaware of any act of its own which with serene and unprejudiced judgment could be the basis of the above imputation. It invites your honor to disclose those other cases which might be the subject for protest, in order to show its impartiality and justice, inasmuch as the Government has adopted as its rule of action to respect the law and consequently all rights legitimately acquired.

III.

The Mexican Government, as is known throughout this country and as is also known by the Government of the United States, had hardly assumed the direction of public matters when it was attacked by revolutionary movements, the first of which, initiated by General Reyes failed in its incipiency. The second, initiated by Pascual Orozco, who revolted with the volunteer forces he had in charge, succeeded, through his treason, in taking possession of the State of Chihuahua and advancing rapidly toward the south with the intention of overthrowing the constituted Government.

The Mexican Government with the scanty means it received from the previous administration, but having the support of public opinion, was able to face this new movement so successfully that it now has sixty thousand armed men distributed throughout the country, and to repel the enemy from its positions and reestablish its authority in the State of Chihuahua. At the same time that it obtained this success over the rebels in the north, it has had to fight the vandal movement lead by Zapata in the south, in the State of Morelos, and it has been able to suppress it to such an extent that during the last few months it seemed almost completely reduced and about to disappear, although during recent days it has again increased. The Government has also suppressed those minor movements which have occurred in Michoacán, Puebla, and other places; it has had to afford assistance to the governors of the various States, where public order has been disturbed on account of local questions, and at the present time it is endeavoring to suppress in the most efficient way the brigandage which has followed the political crisis. Its efforts in the north to protect American interests in Sonora have to this day been crowned with success.

The Government does not fail to see that the bands which are scattered and pursued by the Federal troops will, as a measure for self-preservation and for the purpose of causing the Government new difficulties, cause injuries not only to the interests of Americans, but also to those of other foreign residents of the country, even as they do particularly against the interests of the natives; but the Government is also confident that the Government of the United States will see that the above results are not caused by a neglect on the part of the Mexican Government to correct such evils, which it is the first to deplore.

All the countries of the world have passed through similar crises. The United States has not been an exception to this rule. After its war of Independence and the Confederate war, it had to suffer long periods of internal difficulties of all kinds, more severe perhaps than those which are suffered at the present time by the Republic of Mexico.

The Mexican Government can not be made responsible, without committing an injustice, for the present status of the country.

The present Government of Mexico has decided to adopt the law as the rule of its action in every case. This determination has caused it to appear weak in the opinion of a portion of society which was accustomed to a despotic régime; but there is no doubt that the real strength of the Government depends upon such action. The Mexican Government begs to invite attention to the fact that the American Government has not been able to prevent the organization of armed expeditions within its territory, that Mexican revolutionaries import arms and ammunition and continue to hold with perfect freedom and regularity revolutionary meetings in American territory. It is indubitable that if the United States had expelled all such Mexicans from its territory, or if they had been removed from the frontier States, the Mexican Government would have been able with less difficulty to bring about peace in the Republic. If the Government of the United States has not adopted the above measures, it is not through a lack of good will, always shown, towards Mexico, nor because of weakness, but because it is a Government whose principal prestige and strength are based upon the observance of law. Can the Government of Mexico be blamed because it is inclined to follow the same rule of conduct?

This note was already written when a new revolutionary movement headed by Brigadier General Felix Díaz broke out, and stirred the minds of people in Mexico and abroad; but it was checked and annulled by the Mexican Government within just eight days from the date on which it broke out.

This brief statement will show to any calm judgment the important task of organization and pacification undertaken and accomplished by the Mexican Government.

IV.

I have given a reply in the preceding pages to the note from his excellency Henry Lane Wilson concerning matters which affect American interests established in Mexico. The preceding explanation shows in the opinion of this Government that it does not spare any effort to prove its decided purpose to comply, to the full extent of its ability, with its international duties, and that it recognizes at the same time the right of the Government of the United States to inquire into the way in which the above duties are performed with reference to its citizens.

I should, therefore, consider this note as closed if it were not that the one I have the honor to answer, sent by the express instructions of your Government, contains, principally in its last paragraphs and in phrases interlined in the body of the note, expressions concerning the personnel of the Mexican Government by which that Government is seldom addressed, the term "the administration which in Mexico controls business,"[1] or another of similar nature being substituted. Such expressions compel me to state that such a form of address is inexplicable after the American Government has officially recognized the Mexican Government as legitimate and addresses it as if it alone governed in the City of Mexico.

Without aspiring to unusual consideration, the Mexican Government believed that it might expect from a friendly Government that the latter would avoid reference[2] to what the note under acknowledgment calls an unavailing regard for the amour propre of Mexico, and that if it considered it necessary to refer to the personnel of its Government it would employ a form less harsh than the one used—probably without precedent to this day in diplomatic courtesy and so at variance with the always just, calm and honest attitude of President Taft, the recognized friend of Mexico.

The personnel of the present Government deplores the incident and forgets it; and as a token of its true friendship for the American people, and in consideration of the high esteem and respect it has for the American President and for his Government, it prefers not to reply to that portion of the note in the terms in which it is written.

I avail myself of this occasion [etc.]

PEDRO LASCURAIN.

File No. 812.113/1479.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, December 15, 1912—10 a. m.

The Embassy has just received from the Foreign Office a note dated December 12 replying to my request for permission to import arms and ammunition, as follows:

> This Government has followed the invariable rule of not allowing foreigners residing in Mexico to be armed by their Governments; therefore, I beg that when

---

[1] There is no such expression in the Ambassador's note; the reference is probably to "the Federal administration at present in control in Mexico City," "the administration now discharging the duties of government in Mexico," etc.

[2] In order to adhere more closely to the probable meaning of the Mexican Government, the translation of this paragraph departs considerably from the copy of the Spanish text received by the Department (File No. 312.11/1005), which is manifestly corrupt, as the following verbatim quotation from that text will show:

> Sin pretender entrar en consideraciones inusitadas, creía esperar de parte de un Gobierno amigo que éste no [sic] prescindiera como expresa la citada Nota, de una inútil consideración al amor propio de México y empleara, ya que lo creyó necesario, para calificar el personal de su Gobierno, una forma menos dura, quizá sin precedente hasta ahora, en la cortesía diplomática, y tan ajena al espíritu siempre justiciero, sereno y honrado del Señor Presidente Taft, el reconocido amigo de Mexico.

you think it proper to ask that any American citizen domiciled in this Republic should procure arms, you will make your request as if it concerned a transaction between private individuals, so that the Mexican Government may have the satisfaction of granting it in all cases where it is possible.

I do not see how the change desired by the Foreign Office can be made by the Embassy, which has already stated that the arms had been shipped consigned to the Consul at Hermosillo.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.113/1479.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 16, 1912—5 p. m.

Your December 15, 10 a. m. You will say to the Mexican Foreign Office that although arms and ammunition are for convenience consigned to the Consuls at Hermosillo and Durango, they are intended for the protection of individual American citizens, calling attention to the fact that the Mexican Government permitted the entry of similar shipments to Hermosillo, Tampico and Guadalajara, and in the case of the two Hermosillo shipments provided military escort.

KNOX.

MEASURES TO PREVENT FIRING ACROSS THE BOUNDARY LINE BY MEXICAN TROOPS.

File No. 812.00/2729.

The Secretary of War to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, February 3, 1912.

Colonel Edgar Z. Steever, Fourth Cavalry, commanding Fort Bliss, Texas, sends the following:

> Mexican authorities in Juárez, also Mexican consul in El Paso, notified to prevent any firing into United States territory in case of further disturbances or disorder in or about Juárez The Governor of Texas has sent similar message to military commander in Juárez in connection with my notification, and invite [sic] attention to the fact that last spring similar warnings were sent to General Navarro, the Federal commander, and General Madero, the insurrectionary chief. However, this warning did not prevent numerous shots falling upon United States territory, killing and wounding in El Paso some twenty-five persons. In case of bullets or other projectiles falling upon United States territory in spite of my warnings, what further action, if any, does the Secretary of War desire me to take?

H. L. STIMSON.

File No. 812.00/2888a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 25, 1912—7 p. m.

Newspapers report that there are at Juárez only 100 Federals to oppose a large insurrectionary force. Would not the Mexican Government, understanding that further firing into El Paso would be intolerable, be disposed spontaneously to give such orders as would preclude the possibility of fighting in Juárez or its immediate vicinity?

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2914.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 26, 1912—1 p. m.

I shall see the Minister for Foreign Affairs to-day in regard to your February 25, 7 p. m.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2903.

The Mexican Ambassador to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Translation.]

MEXICAN EMBASSY, Washington, D. C.
(Received February 26, 1912—2.45 p. m.)

I have received telegraphic instructions from my Government to beg of you, as I now have the honor to do, to be pleased to let me know what credit may be given to the press report recently published that American troops are leaving for El Paso with orders to cross into Mexican territory if shots are fired at the American side from Ciudad Juárez or any other place.

GILBERTO CRESPO Y MARTINEZ.

File No. 812.00/2888.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 26, 1912—3 p. m.

Last sentence of your February 24, 9 p. m.[1] Officially renew emphatic warning to the Mexican Government that there must positively be no firing into American territory.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2906.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 26, 1912—5 p. m.

Your February 25, 7 p. m. I learn at the Foreign Office that orders have been sent to the commander of the forces at Ciudad Juárez to engage the revolutionary forces at a point about 13 miles distant from the city, and under no circumstances to make a resistance in Ciudad Juárez. These instructions have also been communicated to the Mexican consul at El Paso.

---

[1] See this telegram at pp. 725–726.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2903.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 26, 1912—6 p. m.

Upon inquiry by the Mexican Ambassador regarding accuracy of recent press reports published here stating that American troops are leaving for El Paso with orders to cross into Mexican territory if shots are fired into the American side from Ciudad Juárez or any other place, Department has replied that such reports are without foundation, no such orders having been issued, but that troops are being massed at El Paso as a deterrent to any such action by Mexican forces. You will inform the Foreign Office that the Department has emphasized the absolute necessity of Mexico's taking such action as will prevent a repetition of the untoward accidents happening at El Paso last year.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2905.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 26, 1912—9 p. m.

Relative to the Ciudad Juárez situation and according to the information conveyed in my February 26, 5 p. m., I have sent a friendly but firm note to Minister for Foreign Affairs.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/2912.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juárez (via El Paso, Tex.), February 26, 1912.

A communication received from Gen. Emilio Campa, commander of the insurrecto forces, to notify all foreigners in Cuidad Juárez to seek a place of safety, as his command will attack the city without delay.

EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/2912.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Ciudad Juárez.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 26, 1912—11 p. m.

You will immediately, informally, and unofficially advise Campa that under no circumstances must there be any firing into American territory, and admonish him that any violation of this warning will almost certainly lead to consequences which it is to the interest of all true Mexican patriots to avoid. You will impress upon Campa the very great seriousness of the situation and the much-to-be-deplored results which would follow his failure to heed this warning. You will convey a like message officially to the commanding officer of the Federal troops.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2912.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 26, 1912—11 p. m.

Consul at Ciudad Juárez advises Department of a communication from General Emilio Campa to notify all foreigners to seek a place of safety as his command will attack the city without delay. Immediately bring this matter to attention of both President Madero and Foreign Office. Refer to the matter in Department's February 26, 6 p. m., and say, with all possible seriousness and earnestness, as under express directions from the President, that it is absolutely necessary to prevent firing into American territory at El Paso; otherwise consequences which it is to the best interest of both countries to avoid will almost surely follow. Urge immediate telegraphic action by the Mexican Government. Renew suggestion that if Juárez is inadequately defended by Federal troops the Mexican Government may, in view of the peculiar situation existing and the possible eventualities, deem it best either that such troops shall make such defense as they contemplate outside of Juárez, and in a place that would not threaten the lives and property of American citizens on American territory, or possibly withdraw without making defense in immediate neighborhood.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2942.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, February 27, 1912—5 p. m.

I sent notes this morning in the sense of the Department's February 26, 11 p. m., to the President and the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Wilson.

File No. 812.00/2930.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juárez (via El Paso, Tex.), February 27, 1912.

Ciudad Juárez peacefully surrendered to-day to General Campa with 800 men. Good order prevails.

EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/3040.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1285.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 28, 1912.

SIR: With reference to the Department's telegraphic instructions of February 25 and 26, relative to the situation at Ciudad Juárez, I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the information of the Department, copies of my correspondence with His Excellency the President of Mexico and with the Minister for Foreign Affairs on the subject.

I have [etc.],

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

No. 1876.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 26, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I am instructed by telegrams from my Government to convey a friendly warning to you of the dangerous situation which would result from any firing across the frontier line at Ciudad Juárez by either Federal or insurgent forces. My Government instructs me to say to your excellency that while fully cognizant of the abnormal and difficult situation which exists at Cuidad Juárez it can not, having due regard for the safety of the lives and property of its own citizens, permit a repetition of the intolerable incidents affecting these which occurred at Ciudad Juárez during the revolution against the Government of General Díaz. I am therefore instructed to urge upon the Mexican Government the utmost diligence in the performance of its international obligations at and in the neighborhood of Ciudad Juárez and at all other points of national contact.

I avail [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 2.]

The American Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

No. 1878.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 27, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to refer to my note No. 1876 of yesterday, relative to the dangerous situation that would result from any firing across the frontier line at Ciudad Juárez by either Federal or insurgent forces, and to inform your excellency that I am instructed by my Government to bring to the attention of your excellency's Government the fact that the American Consul at Ciudad Juárez has been advised by the commander of the insurrecto forces to notify all foreigners to seek a place of safety, as his command will attack the city without delay. In this connection I am instructed to impress upon your excellency's Government with all possible seriousness and earnestness, as under express directions from the President, the absolute necessity that there be no firing into American territory at El Paso, as otherwise consequences which the Department to the best interests of both countries desire to avoid will almost surely follow. I am further instructed to suggest to your excellency that if Ciudad Juárez is inadequately defended by Federal troops your excellency's Government may, in view of the peculiar situation existing and the possible eventualities, deem it best either that such troops should make such defense as they contemplate outside of Ciudad Juárez, and in a place that would not threaten the lives and property of American citizens on American territory, or possibly withdraw without making a defense in the immediate neighborhood. My Government directs me, with reference to the above suggestion, to urge the necessity of immediate telegraphic action by your excellency's Government.

I avail [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 3.]

The American Ambassador to the President of Mexico.

No. 2644.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 27, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Under express telegraphic instructions from the President of the United States, I have to advise Your Excellency that the American Consul at Ciudad Juárez informs the Department of State that he has received a communication from Gen. Emilio Campa, commander of the insurrecto forces near Ciudad Juárez, to notify all foreigners to seek a place of safety, as his comand will attack the city without delay. In view of this situation the President directs me to impress upon the Mexican Government with all possible seriousness and earnestness the absolute necessity that there be no firing into El Paso, as, in the event of such occurrence, consequences which the best interests of both countries desire to avoid will almost surely follow. It is suggested that as Ciudad Juárez is inadequately defended by Federal troops the Mexican Government may, in view of the peculiar situation existing and the possible eventualities, deem it best either that such troops should make such defense as they contemplate outside of Ciudad Juárez and in a place that would not threaten the lives and property of American citizens on American territory or possibly withdraw without making defense in the immediate neighborhood. In a note relative to this matter which I have just addressed to Mr. Calero I have urged immediate telegraphic action by the Mexican Government and I trust that Your Excellency will not deem me too urgent if I renew the suggestion to you. I advised my Government last evening of my interview with Mr. Calero during which he informed me that you had already taken action of the kind suggested herein. I am not certain whether this telegram had been received at the time of sending the telegram which is the motive for this note, but I have no other recourse under my instructions than to bring the matter to the attention of Your Excellency and again to the attention of Mr. Calero.

Believe me [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4311.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador and to the American Consul at Ciudad Juárez.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 19, 1912—2 p. m.

The Governor of Texas informs War Department of indications that a Federal force, now approaching Ciudad Juárez, intends to recapture it. In that event bullets might pass across boundary and endanger American citizens on American soil. Bring this immediately to attention President Madero and Foreign Office. Very strongly urge instructions to attack so as to avoid firing across the line. If this risk can not be avoided during attack, suggest very urgently that attack be postponed until better opportunity to capture the city offers; do this as under specific instructions from the President. Suggest possibly equally effective siege operations.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/4245.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 19, 1912—9 p. m.

Read a paraphrase of your June 19, 2 p. m., to Minister for Foreign Affairs and am also sending him an urgent note based thereon. He promised to communicate immediately with the Secretary of War and have the most urgent and explicit instructions sent to commanding officer in the sense of your telegram. Imperative to take Ciudad Juárez as soon as possible and he saw no way to avoid battle. He said a siege is impossible as the Government has not troops sufficient to surround city; unless American Government can cooperate by isolating it on American side, preventing entry of provisions and other supplies, siege would be ineffective. He thinks rebels will try to provoke American action by firing wilfully into American territory. He declared it was his most earnest desire to avoid repetition of unfortunate events of previous fighting at Juárez, not only because of claims and other annoyances, but also from realization of international obligations.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/4258.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 20, 1912—10 p. m.

I left a memorandum with the President this evening similar to my note to the Minister. The President explicitly said that no bullets would be allowed to penetrate American territory, and that if artillery is employed steps will be taken to prevent injury to Americans. He said a siege might be employed if the city is closed on the American side. The President, however, stated that no troops were advancing on or near Ciudad Juárez. Note the disagreement between the President's and the Minister's remarks.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/4251.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juárez, June 20, 1912.

Department's June 19, 2 p. m. No Federal troops approaching Juárez. Governor of Texas probably misinformed. Mexican consul El Paso assures me no movement contemplated at present for retaking Juárez. Personal observations confirm this.

EDWARDS.

File No. 812.00/4288.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 24, 1912—4 p. m.

I am officially informed that the Mexican Government will do its utmost to capture Ciuad Juárez without a battle, by starving it out if necessary, if the American Government will help by stopping entry of supplies. Unless otherwise instructed, I shall make no reply to this note.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/4322.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 28, 1912—6 p. m.

The President stated to me to-day that the Federal army would exercise the greatest care if an attack on Ciudad Juárez became necessary to avoid firing across the line, but hoped that our Government would cooperate in every way possible to terminate an abnormal situation, which must result from Federal inability to attack effectually. He added an expression of his deep appreciation of the friendship and patience which the President has displayed toward Mexico throughout the recent trying times.

WILSON.

File. No. 812.00/4884.

The American Consul at Nogales to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DOUGLAS, ARIZ., September 12, 1912—6 p. m.

Rebels appeared about 3 miles east of Aguaprieta, coming toward Aguaprieta. In view thereof the commanding officer of the United States troops stationed in Douglas stated verbally and personally to the commanding officer of the Federal troops in Aguaprieta that he must prevent bullets fired by the troops under his command from passing into the territory of the United States, and has sent a written message to the same effect by a civilian courier to the commanding officer of the threatening revolutionary forces.

DYE.

File No. 812.00/4877.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 12, 1912—8 p. m.

Consul Dye and agents of the Department of Justice report an attack by insurrectionists upon Aguaprieta is impending. The Vice Consul at Nogales reports a similar attack imminent upon that place also. If fighting occurs at either place bullets discharged in the contest may pass across the boundary line and endanger American citizens on American soil. The Department has accordingly requested the War Department to issue to the general in command along the Arizona border instructions similar to those issued to General Steever when an insurrectionist attack upon Ciudad Juarez seemed imminent in June last.[1] Immediately inform the Mexican Government of the situation at Aguaprieta and Nogales, and earnestly say that if either is attacked, Federal forces must be instructed to make their counter movements in such manner and from such position that no bullets can cross the line. You will also suggest that the insurrectionary forces be opposed at a point as far as possible from the boundary line.

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 812.00/4877.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Nogales.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 12, 1912—8 p. m.

Aguaprieta matter; War Department requested to issue instructions similar to those issued to General Steever when an insurrectionist attack upon Ciudad Juarez seemed imminent in June last.[1] Consult

---

[1] The instructions referred to are as follows (File No. 812.00/4264):

Adjutant General McCain to Colonel Steever, Fort Bliss, Texas.

[Telegrams.]

War Department,
The Adjutant General's Office,
Washington, May 21, 1912.

Notify commanding officer of present garrison of Juárez to prevent firing into United States territory in case of engagement. You are authorized to make these instructions public in El Paso. Report conditions.

In case of sudden emergency you are authorized to move troops to threatened points on border for purpose of maintaining neutrality laws in accordance instructions previously sent you. Keep in touch with conditions at El Paso and keep this office informed of situation there and elsewhere on border within limits your command.

By order Secretary War:

McCain, Adjutant General.

War Department,
The Adjutant General's Office,
Washington, May 22, 1912.

Supplementing instructions sent you May 21, 1912, you will, in addition to notifying commanding officer of garrison at Juárez to prevent firing into United States territory in case of engagement, notify commanding officer or officers of any Mexican Federal detachment in vicinity of Juárez to prevent firing into United States territory in case of engagement. You are authorized to make these instructions public in El Paso. Acknowledge.

By order Secretary War:

McCain, Adjutant General.

United States military authorities and if you are convinced that an attack by insurrectionists upon Aguaprieta is impending you are instructed immediately to inform all Mexican officials and insurrectionary leaders that any fighting that occurs must be conducted in such manner or from such positions that no bullets can cross the line; and that such fighting should be conducted as far from the boundary line as possible.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4895.

The American Consul at Douglas to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.—Paraphrases.]

DOUGLAS, ARIZ., September 12, 1912—12 midnight.

My telegram, September 12, 6 p. m. About 8 o'clock a written reply to the note sent to the rebel leader was received, signed by Antonio Rojas, saying that in consideration of the note received and in order to avoid such damages, as well as those which might be caused to noncombatants, he would try to delay the attack upon Aguaprieta until receiving instructions from their headquarters.

DYE.

File No. 812.00/4911.

DOUGLAS, ARIZ., September 13, 1912.—11 a. m.

Mexican Federal commander at Aguaprieta informs me that rebels went south last night about 11 o'clock.

DYE.

File No. 812.00/4877.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Douglas.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 13, 1912—3 p. m.

Vice Consul Bowman reports that it is feared insurrectionists will attack Nogales. If that seems likely communicate to him the substance of the Department's September 12, 8 p. m., to you, telling him to make the instructions therein applicable to himself and to the situation in Nogales in the same way that they are applicable to you and the situation at Aguaprieta.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4909.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, September 13, 1912—3 p. m.

In pursuance of Department's September 12, 8 p. m., I called upon Minister for Foreign Affairs this morning and made urgent representations relative to the unfortunate results which might follow at Aguaprieta and Nogales, should firing across the line not be prevented. He authorized me to telegraph the Department that immediate and energetic steps will be taken to prevent any such occurrences at either place. I left with him a clear memorandum on the subject and believe that the matter will be diligently attended to.

Wilson.

PERMISSION FOR MEXICAN TROOPS TO PASS OVER AMERICAN SOIL.

File No. 812.00/26.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, February 6, 1912—6 p. m.

I am requested by Foreign Minister Calero to ascertain whether or not the Washington Government would permit Mexican Government to pass 500 or 600 soldiers from Eagle Pass to Ciudad Juárez over the Southern Pacific Railroad, arms and equipment on separate train if necessary. I believe that such action would enable Mexican Government to deal successfully and permanently with situation in Ciudad Juárez.

Wilson.

File No. 812.2311/26.

The Secretary of State to the Governor of Texas.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 7, 1912.

The Government of Mexico desires the permission of the Government of the United States for a force of five or six hundred soldiers to enter American territory at Eagle Pass, Texas, and to proceed to Ciudad Juárez over the Southern Pacific Railway. The Federal Government proposes to stipulate that the Mexican troops go unarmed, their arms and equipment being shipped as baggage, and will also cause a small detachment of American troops to accompany them on the train as an escort. Before the issuance of definite instructions, I have the honor to request that you telegraph me, in accordance with the customary formality, the assurance that this course will be entirely agreeable to the State of Texas.

KNOX.

File No. 812.2311/27.

The Governor of Texas to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AUSTIN, TEXAS, February 7, 1912.

Telegram this date asking formal approval on part of Texas State government for permission of Mexican troops to pass over Texas, Eagle Pass to El Paso, accompanied by United States troops, is not objected to.

O. B. COLQUITT.

File No. 812.2311/27.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 7, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith a paraphrase of a telegram, dated February 6, 6 p. m., from the American Ambassador in Mexico City, in which he states that the Mexican Government desires permission to pass 500 or 600 soldiers from Eagle Pass to Ciudad Juárez over the Southern Pacific Railroad. The Ambassador states that he believes such action would enable the Government of Mexico to deal successfully and permanently with the situation at the latter place. I have also the honor to inclose a copy of a telegram, dated the 7th instant, addressed by me to the Governor of Texas, requesting him to advise me by telegraph, in accordance with the customary formality, of the assurance that the passage of these Mexican troops through the State of Texas will be entirely agreeable to him. A copy of his reply thereto is also inclosed.

The President directs that permission be granted for the passage of these troops over American territory, it being understood that the troops will be unarmed, their arms and ammunition being shipped as baggage. It has been deemed best that a small detachment of American troops accompany the train as an escort.

The Department has advised[1] the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor of the action taken in this matter, with the request that they render such assistance as may be possible looking to the speedy transportation of these Mexican troops.

This information is furnished you in order that you may make the necessary arrangements in the premises.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

---

[1] The advice is, however, dated the 8th; see below.

File No. 812.2311/27.

The Secretary of State to the Secretaries of the Treasury and of Commerce and Labor.

[Identic telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 8, 1912.

The Government of Mexico on February 6, 1912, requested permission to transport a force of 500 or 600 troops from Eagle Pass, Texas, via the Southern Pacific Railroad to Ciudad Juárez, Mexico. After consulting with the Governor of Texas, the Department of State on February 8 advised the Mexican Government, through the American Embassy at Mexico City, of its consent to the transportation of the troops as requested, with the understanding that such troops should traverse American territory unarmed, their arms being sent as baggage. As this movement of troops is designed to secure, among other things, the adequate protection of American life and property in the vicinity of Ciudad Juárez, the Department would appreciate your rendering such assistance looking to the speedy transportation of the troops as it may be possible for you to extend.

KNOX.

File No. 812.2311/27.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 8, 1912—11 a. m.

Regarding transport of troops, as per your February 6, 6 p. m Permission has been granted for troops mentioned to go from Eagle Pass to Ciudad Juárez via the Southern Pacific Railroad, with the understanding that such troops shall traverse American territory unarmed, their arms and ammunition being sent as baggage, and with a small detachment of American troops to accompany them on the train as an escort. Appropriate authorities have been advised. You may communicate the foregoing to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

KNOX.

File No. 812.2311/31.

The Governor of Texas to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AUSTIN, TEXAS, February 9, 1912.

I am just in receipt of the following telegram protesting against allowing a regiment of Mexican troops to pass over Texas soil from Eagle Pass to El Paso:

> Reported regiment of Mexican troops will come through Texas tomorrow to fight rebels in Chihuahua. Dangerous precedent, calculated inspire much resentment against Texas in Mexico and may lead to grave eventualities. You should protest in name of people of border against such action. Let Mexico handle troops on Mexico soil. Texas not fighting Mexico's battles. It is positively a disgrace that Texas and American soil should be trodden by foreign soldiers engaged in a civil war in neighboring country.

If this is purpose of moving troops through Texas I withdraw my consent for them to pass through Texas.

O. B. COLQUITT.

File No. 812.2311/31.

The Secretary of State to the Governor of Texas.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 9, 1912.

In reply to your telegram of to-day, I have the honor to inform you that this Department does not understand and did not understand that the Mexican troops for the passage of whom over American soil through Texas permission has been accorded to the Government of Mexico are to be engaged in general hostilities in the State of Chihuahua, but were to be used merely for the purpose of preserving order in Ciudad Juárez. The Department has no information to the contrary similar to that conveyed to you. Had the Department supposed that these troops were to be used for general hostilities, permission to allow them to cross American soil would have been refused, as it was refused during the Madero revolt. On learning that the passage of these troops over Texan soil would be agreeable to you, this Government issued instructions to its Ambassador at Mexico City to inform the Mexican Government that permission for these troops to go from Eagle Pass to Ciudad Juárez via the Southern Pacific Railroad had been granted. Unless the Government of Mexico will stipulate that these troops are not to be used in general hostilities this Government will, in accordance with its practice, withdraw the permission granted to the Government of Mexico to transport them over American territory.

KNOX.

File No. 812.2311/31.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram. -Extract.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 9, 1912—7 p. m.

The following telegram has been sent to the Governor of Texas: (See supra.)

Accordingly you will immediately cancel the permission, pending further instructions, to be based on your report as to a stipulation that the troops will be used exclusively to preserve order at Juárez.

KNOX.

File No. 812.2311/31.

The Secretary of State to the Secretaries of the Treasury, of Commerce and Labor, and of War.

[Identic telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 10, 1912.

This Department's telegram of the 8th instant. The Governor of Texas has been informed that the Mexican troops in question are to be used for general hostilities in the State of Chihuahua and has accordingly seen fit to withdraw his consent to their passage over Texan territory, and has so informed this Department. I must consequently cancel my request that your Department render assistance in the matter and say instead that I will appreciate it if you will promptly cancel any orders that have already been given and see that nothing further is done.

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 812.2311/34.

The Governor of Texas to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AUSTIN, TEXAS, February 10, 1912.

Your telegram [of February 9] received. Am advised that railroad communication between Juárez and Chihuahua is open, but south of Chihuahua the railroad is in hands of revolting party.

If Mexican troops pass through Texas from Eagle Pass to Juárez, is there any assurance that they will not be met with armed resistance in attempting to enter Juárez from Texas?

O. B. COLQUITT.

File No. 812.2311/35.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 11—11 p. m.

My telegram of February 6, 6 p. m., and your February 9. Considering the embarrassment with reference to the passage of the troops, the Mexican Government states that it will forego availing itself of the permission granted by the United States. Acting upon the authority granted in the Department's telegram February 8, 11 a. m., Mexican Government had submitted a request to the Mexican Senate to be permitted to transport troops out of Mexico territory. Mexican Government deems it inadvisable to withdraw from the Senate this request. The action taken will have no significance, but circumstances may arise under which Mexican Government will renew its request.

WILSON.

File No. 812.2311/35.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Governor of Texas.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 13, 1911.

Your telegram of the 10th instant. Department informed by Embassy at Mexico City that Mexican Government does not just now desire to ask for permission to move troops over United States territory.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.2311/42.

The Secretary of State to the President.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 27, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT. I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of the 22d[1] and 23d[1] instant relative to a letter from Mr. Sidney Austin Witherbee on the subject of granting to the Mexican Government permission to move Mexican troops across United States territory, and of your previous letter of the 18th[1] instant directing me to comment upon the advisability of such action.

Mr. Witherbee called at the Department on April 23, and upon rereading the letter he had written to you said that it gave a somewhat incorrect impression as to the idea he wished to convey. He said that at the time he wrote it newspaper reports to the effect that this Government would intervene in Mexico were so insistent that he thought such action imminent, and that, such being the case, he greatly preferred permitting the Madero Government to pass troops over United States territory to sending United States troops into Mexico.

If such an alternative were forced upon this Government, this Department would be inclined to express a preference similar to Mr. Witherbee's. Mr. Witherbee agrees with the Department, however, that until conditions grow so bad that this Government is compelled to intervene or to take other action to effectually remedy them—a very remote contingency—it would be unwise to allow Mexican troops to pass over United States territory, primarily, on account of the appearance such action would have that this Government was taking sides with the Madero Government as against the insurrectionists, and the consequent reprisals this apparent favoritism might cause insurrectionists to make upon American citizens resident in territory under rebel control.

This is the chief objection perceived by the Department to acting upon the suggestion contained in Mr. Witherbee's letter as it stands; but another objection, possibly of equal force, would be that the granting of this permission would precipitate further fighting along the boundary, and almost certainly bring about a dangerous situation and such an incident as the deplorable occurrence at Agua Prieta and Douglas of last year and that which threatened at El Paso in the early part of February last.

---

[1] Not printed.

Still another objection is found in the attitude of the Governor and people of Texas as exhibited early in the present year when a request for permission for Mexican troops to pass across a part of the State of Texas was presented to this Government by the Mexican Embassy. It will be recalled that at that time the Governor of Texas, in response to the Department's inquiry, stated that there was no objection on the part of the State of Texas to granting permission for the troops to cross Texan soil, but that shortly thereafter the Governor telegraphed that as he had learned that these troops were intended for the purpose of giving battle to the rebellious forces near the Texas border the Governor felt compelled to withdraw his permission, as such action was contrary to the wishes of the people of Texas.

I may also say that as the Embassy at Mexico City has been instructed to intimate to the Mexican Government that this Government would much prefer that no request to move troops across United States territory should be made, it would appear to be inadvisable for this Government to raise the question on account of the objections to granting such permission as above stated, and because it might encourage the Mexican Government to renew its request of last February, which, again, for the reasons above stated, it would be embarrassing for this Government to have to deal with.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

NOTE.—With his dispatch No. 1643 [1] dated September 6, 1912, the American Ambassador transmitted to the Department a copy of the note that he had sent to the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs, September 3, 1912, in compliance with the Department's telegraphic instruction of September 2, 1 p. m.[2] The note requested a general increase in the activity of the Mexican Federal troops and the establishment of additional garrisons along the border, where the chaotic conditions were causing the Government of the United States great anxiety, and then added:

> In thus advising your excellency of the deep apprehension entertained by my Government relative to the situation on the border and in conveying to your excellency the expression of its opinion relative to the military dispositions necessary to in some measure guarantee protection to life and property, I am directed also to say that my Government will favorably consider a request from your excellency's Government to permit the passage of Mexican troops, designed for the immediate establishment of these garrisons, across the territory of the United States.

In his reply,[3] September 5, to this note the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs responded to the above-quoted sentence as follows:

> By express direction of the President I beg to express to your excellency the most sincere thanks of the Mexican Government for the favorable reception on the part of your excellency's Government which would be given to a request on the part of my Government that our troops might pass over the territory of

---

[1] See pp. 836–837.
[2] See p. 833.
[3] See p. 837.

the United States for the purpose of establishing garrisons at certain points, a request which is not made, because the Constitution empowers only the Senate to permit the passage of troops outside of the national territory. The Senate is not now in session and its convocation in special session would be a cause for alarm that should be avoided; but my Government believes that the sending of the troops referred to above will bring safety to the region in the north that has been threatened with disturbances.

The Minister's formal reply to the Ambassador's note was accompanied by an informal letter (see p. 837), in part as follows:

Although it appears from the official note that I have to-day addressed to your excellency that a request for the passage of troops over American territory will not be made, the President has thought it proper to solicit this authorization in order to demonstrate once more the interest that he takes in the protection of the lives and properties of Americans, and to this end he has given orders for the convocation of the Senate in extraordinary session.

File No. 812.2311/53a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Governor of Arizona.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 7, 1912.

The Mexican Embassy has informed the Department of State that the President of Mexico has convoked an extraordinary session of the Mexican Congress in order to secure authorization for requesting permission from the Government of the United States to transport Mexican Federal troops from Ciudad Juárez to points in the State of Sonora to cope with the situation in that State where American life and property are in serious danger from the operations of Mexican revolutionary bands. Before the issuance of definite instructions, in the event that the Mexican Government requests permission to transport its troops through United States territory for the purpose mentioned, I have the honor to request that you telegraph me, in accordance with the customary formality, the assurance that this course will be entirely agreeable to the State of Arizona.

ALVEY A. ADEE.

[Mutatis mutandis to the Governors of Texas and New Mexico.]

File No. 812.2311/52.

The Governor of Arizona to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

PHOENIX, ARIZ., September 7, 1912.

In compliance with the request conveyed to me through your telegram of to-day I have the honor to assure you that the State of Arizona readily assents to the transporting of Mexican Federal troops from Ciudad Juárez through United States territory to points in the State of Sonora where American lives and property are being endangered by the operation of Mexican revolutionary bands.

GEO. W. P. HUNT.

File No. 812.2311/51.

The Governor of Texas to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AUSTIN, TEX., September 7, 1912.

Have no objections to movement of Mexican troops through Texas territory as requested, with proper safeguards.

O. B. COLQUITT.

File No. 812.2311/55.

The Governor of New Mexico to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

SANTA FÉ, N. MEX., September 9, 1912.

Replying to your telegram. It will be entirely agreeable to the State of New Mexico to have Mexican troops pass through our State under such regulations as may be imposed by the United States Government.

WILLIAM C. McDONALD.

File No. 812.2311/53.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 10, 1912—12 noon.

Referring to last part of Department's September 2, 1 p. m.

Inform the Minister for Foreign Affairs that in compliance with request of Mexican Embassy here, permission is hereby granted for from 1,000 to 1,200 troops to go from Ciudad Juárez via the Southern Pacific Railroad to the State of Sonora with the understanding that such troops shall traverse American territory unarmed, their arms and ammunition being sent as baggage, and with a small detachment of American troops to accompany them on the train as an escort. Appropriate authorities have been informed. Request the Minister for Foreign Affairs at once to inform the Department of the point of entry of the troops into Sonora and what persons at Ciudad Juárez will be authorized to make the necessary arrangements for the entraining of the troops, so that authorities of the War, Treasury, Commerce and Labor, and Justice Departments may be appropriately instructed.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/4932.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 19, 1912—7 p. m.

Regarding situation at El Tigre and Aguaprieta and northern Sonora. Represent to the Mexican Government that while this Government would not assume to direct the military movements of Mexican troops, the Mexican Government undoubtedly realizes that the action of this Government in permitting Mexican Federal troops to pass over United States territory was taken primarily to aid the Mexican Government in its efforts to protect endangered American lives and interests in northern Sonora and say that the failure of the Federal troops to move against bands of insurrectionists (even when urged to do so by the American Consul and the Americans directly affected) upon occasions when they could manifestly do so with every prospect of defeating them and successfully terminating their disastrous activity leaves this Government in some bewilderment. Say also that the Department is loath to make these observations, but is compelled to do so in view of the numerous reports both from private persons and consular officers.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.2311.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Governor of Texas.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 28, 1912.

The Government of Mexico desires the permission of the Government of the United States for a brigade of Mexican Federal troops, under the command of General Blanquet, to enter American territory from Piedras Negras, Coahuila, in order to proceed by rail to Del Rio and Marathon, whence they will reenter Mexico. This Government proposes to stipulate that the Mexican troops go unarmed, their arms being shipped as baggage, and will also cause a small detachment of American troops to accompany them on the train as an escort. Before the issuance of definite instructions, I have the honor to request that you telegraph me, in accordance with the customary formality, the assurance that this course will be entirely agreeable to the State of Texas.

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 812.2311/68.

The Governor of Texas to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AUSTIN, TEX., September 28, 1912.

Your telegram asking the consent of the Governor of Texas for a brigade of Mexican Federal troops to enter Texas from Piedras Negras, Coahuila, and proceed to Del Rio and Marathon is received. Under the escort and regulations mentioned by you I have no objection, but we will send rangers to escort them also.

O. B. COLQUITT.

File No. 812.2311/75.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Chargé d'Affaires.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 29, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you, in response to the request of the Mexican Government, as embodied in your note numbered 118,[1] of the 26th instant, that General Blanquet, of the Mexican army, with a brigade of Mexican Federal soldiers, be permitted to pass by rail from Piedras Negras, Coahuila, across American territory to Del Rio, Tex., and Marathon, Tex., for the purpose of reentering Mexican territory from these latter places to operate against insurrectionary bands in the mountains of northern Coahuila, that permission is hereby granted for the transportation of these troops by the route above mentioned, with the understanding that such troops shall traverse American territory unarmed, their arms and ammunition being sent as baggage, and with a small detachment of American troops to accompany them on the train as an escort.

Accept, etc.,

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.2311/68.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 30, 1912—12 noon.

In compliance with the request of the Mexican Embassy here permission is hereby granted for a brigade of Mexican Federal troops to proceed from Piedras Negras, Coahuila, by rail to Del Rio and Marathon, Tex., at which points they will reenter Mexican territory with the understanding that such troops shall traverse American territory unarmed, their arms and ammunition being sent as baggage and with a small detachment of American troops to accompany them on the train as an escort. Inform the Minister for Foreign Affairs and add that appropriate American authorities have been properly instructed.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.2311/69.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 30, 1912—12 midnight.

If you have not yet made the final answer of this Government to the request of the Mexican Government to have further troops traverse American territory you will hold it in abeyance; if already made, you will withdraw it for the present. Meanwhile, for your information and guidance, I quote the following telegram from the Governor of Texas:

---

[1] Not printed.

> Referring to your telegram of Saturday and reply concerning the movement of Mexican troops through Texas from Eagle Pass to Del Rio and Marathon. My adjutant general calls attention to the fact that it will be a 75-mile march over rough territory from Marathon, where it seems to be the purpose to detrain Mexican troops to go to Mexican border. I desire to withdraw my consent for the passage of these troops through Texas until I am more fully advised with reference to their movement. This march of 75 miles through the territory referred to will invite difficulties which I do not wish to occur in Texas.

To which I have telegraphed in reply as follows:

> Difficulties mentioned in your telegram could be obviated by having troops detrain at Del Rio. Since Mexican Government has already been informed permission granted, the Department will instruct Embassy to lay substance of your telegram before Mexican Government and suggest that troops could be detrained only at Del Rio, which is near the border. The Department feels that in view of the action already taken with your acquiescence it should have your cooperation in making feasible the plan above suggested, and I hope that you will be good enough to inform me by telegraph, in accordance with the usual formality, that the passage of these troops over United States territory will be agreeable to the State of Texas. Meanwhile, permission has been suspended.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.2311/71.

The Governor of Texas to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AUSTIN, TEXAS.
(Received October 1, 1912—1.15 p. m.)

Your telegram this date answering mine of yesterday in which I withdraw consent for passing Mexican troops over Texas territory received. If Mexican Government will amend request so as to eliminate Marathon and detrain Mexican troops at Del Rio, I will have no objection to urge, but after reflection I could not give consent to detraining Mexican troops at Marathon and marching them over rough, dry country 75 miles and invite a conflict from Orozco's men, who, according to my advices, are now operating across the Rio Grande River in Mexico from the Marathon section of Texas. It would be like inviting a slaughter of unarmed foreign troops on Texas soil. I am pleased to note your suspension of permission for Mexican troops to pass through Texas on receipt of my objections. The objection will be withdrawn if the application is amended as suggested.

O. B. COLQUITT.

File No. 812.2311/71.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 4, 1912—1 p. m.

Governor Colquitt of Texas, in a telegram received October 1, 1.15 p. m., replies to Department's September 30, as follows:

[Telegram quoted.]

You may bring the Governor's suggested amendment of the Mexican Government's request to the attention of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, unless you think it necessary for the Mexican Government to make the next move, in view of representations you have already made.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.2311/77.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1727.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 9, 1912.

SIR: With reference to the Department's telegraphic instruction of October 4, 1 p. m., relative to the passage of Mexican Federal troops across United States territory, I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a memorandum prepared by Mr. O'Shaughnessy, of the Embassy, reporting his interview with the Minister for Foreign Affairs relative to the matter.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.]

Memorandum regarding the passage of troops through the territory of the United States.

Pursuant to the Ambassador's verbal instructions, Mr. O'Shaughnessy gave to the Minister for Foreign Affairs a paraphrase of the Department's telegram of October 4, 1 p. m., regarding the passage of troops through the territory of the United States.

Mr. Lascurain read the paraphrase with great interest, and said that the Mexican Government would be only too glad to accept the courtesy of the United States and of the Governor of Texas, but that other arrangements for the transportation of troops had already been made by the War Department.

He requested Mr. O'Shaughnessy to thank the Ambassador for his friendly action in the matter, and to assure him of the Mexican Government's appreciation thereof. He noted the optional clause in the end of the telegram.

NELSON O'SHAUGHNESSY.

MEXICO, October 5, 1912.

CLOSURE OF THE PORT OF VERA CRUZ.

File No. 812.00/5424.

The Commodore of the Mexican Fleet and the Chief of the Port of Vera Cruz to the American Consul at Vera Cruz.

[Translation.]

UNITED MEXICAN STATES,
GUNBOAT "MORELOS,"
COMMANDERY OF THE FLEET,
Vera Cruz, October 19, 1912.

We have the honor to inform you that on sighting the American S. S. Seguranza to-day, the undersigned being aboard the Morelos, flagship of Commodore Manual Azueta, chief of the flotilla in this port, the tug Tulun was ordered to go out to communicate to the captain of the Seguranza that the Federal Government had closed the port of Vera Cruz in virtue of the fort being occupied by rebel forces which do not recognize the Constitutional Government of the nation; which proceeding is based on Article VI of the general customhouse regulations.

The captain responded that he had to consult with you, as Consul of his Nation, and continued to Pier No. 4 of the terminal company, where he moored, awaiting the visit of the sanitary officials.

As munitions of war for our Government may have come in this steamship, we notify you that under no considerations should she discharge cargo in this port, which is closed for unloading and loading cargo.

In addition, in view of the exceptional conditions of which you are well aware, she should stay as short a time as possible in this port in order to avoid any accidental harm which might be a motive for claims and differences which would moderate the cordial relations which at present exist between the two Governments.

You will please accept [etc.]

The Commodore of the Fleet,
MANUEL AZUETA.

The Administrator of the Customhouse, Chief of the Port,
M. AZCARRAGA.

File No. 812.00/5424.

The American Consul to the Commodore.

[Translation.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 20, 1912.

I am advised by your note of yesterday that the Federal Government has ordered the closing of the port of Vera Cruz. I take the liberty to make it known that this is the first notice of the fact which I have received.

I also note the action which you took, without the knowledge of this Consulate, in reference to the entrance of the merchant steamer Seguranza.

I have ordered a copy of the before-mentioned communication sent to the Department of State of the Government of the United States, to the Ambassador of the same country in Mexico, and to the captain of the Seguranza.

I am, etc.,

WM. W. CANADA.

File No. 612.1123/5.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 23, 1912—1 p. m.

Consul at Vera Cruz has received a communication from the commandery of the fleet and late collector of customs stating: (1) That they had sent tug to meet American steamer Seguranza to notify the master that the port was closed by order of the Federal Government, as provided by section 6 of customs regulations, but that master insisted upon entering to consult with consul; (2) that war material might be among the cargo of the Seguranza, which under no circumstances should be unloaded, as port is closed to all legal transactions of loading and unloading; (3) that on account of the existing conditions said steamer should remain a very short time, so as to avoid exposure to possible accidental damage, which might give rise to claims, thereby straining the existing friendly relations.

You will inform the Mexican Government that the Department understands that insurrectionary forces have taken and are now in possession of Vera Cruz. With reference to the closure by mere executive or legislative act of Mexican ports held by insurgents, you will communicate to the Foreign Office the following as the position of the United States:

> As a general principle a decree by a sovereign power closing to neutral commerce ports held by its enemies, whether foreign or domestic, can have no international validity and no extraterritorial effect in the direction of imposing any obligation upon the governments of neutral powers to recognize it or to contribute toward its enforcement by any domestic action on their part. If the sovereign decreeing such a closure have a naval force sufficient to maintain an effective blockade and if he duly proclaim and maintain such a blockade, then he may seize, subject to the adjudication of a prize court, vessels which may attempt to run the blockade. But his decree or acts closing ports which are held adversely to him are by themselves entitled to no international respect.[1] The Government of the United States must therefore regard as utterly nugatory such decrees or acts closing ports which the United States of Mexico do not possess, unless such proclamations are enforced by an effective blockade.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 612.1123/7.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 24, 1912—12 noon.

Now that the insurrection has collapsed, do you still wish me to communicate to the Mexican Government the position of the United States regarding closure ports in accordance with instructions in your October 23, 1 p. m.?

SCHUYLER.

File No. 612.1123/5.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Extract.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 26, 1912—4 p. m.

Department's telegram October 23, 1 p. m., your October 24, 12 noon. The Department desires you to communicate to the Mexican Government the position of the United States regarding the closure of the ports as instructed in the Department's said telegram, explaining that the telegram was sent prior to the receipt of news of the recapture of Vera Cruz.

---

[1] For another application of this rule, relating to the routing of mails, see Political Affairs, the letter of the Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador dated March 4, 1912, p. 736.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 612.1123/10.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 1772.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, November 8, 1912.

SIR: With reference to the Department's telegraphic instruction of October 23, 1 p. m., relative to the closure of ports of Mexico by executive or legislative order, I have the honor to report that I have received a note from the Mexican Foreign Office which states to the effect that in view of the fact that the conditions at the port of Vera Cruz are now changed, the Foreign Office believes that the matter may be considered as terminated.

I have [etc.] MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER.

DISPLAY OF THE AMERICAN FLAG BY AMERICAN CONSULAR OFFICERS IN MEXICO.

File No. 812.0151/1.

The Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

No. 33.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 21, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of note No. 1240 dated March 30,[1] from your excellency's predecessor setting forth the views of your excellency's Government relative to the rights of a consul in Mexico to display the flag of his nation, and requesting that the American Consul at Ensenada be instructed not to display unduly the American flag over the consular premises at that place.

In reply I am constrained to say that this request has been received with surprise, and that this Department is at a loss to understand, in view of the numerous proofs of friendship that have recently been shown to the Government of Mexico by this Government why the jefe político of northern Lower California should perceive any objection to the display of the American flag above the Consulate at Ensenada, especially under the conditions prevailing in Mexico at the present time.

Concerning the flying of the national flag as a question of right, the Department, after very careful consideration, feels quite sure that a reexamination of the authorities upon international law by the proper Mexican officers will convince your excellency's Government that the display by a consul of the flag of his country is a thing which may be properly claimed as a right under international law and that the Mexican Government, by its practice in permitting the consul to display the flag on the national holiday of his country, and the legal adviser of the Mexican Foreign Office in the present instance by so recommending, appear to recognize this, notwithstanding the Mexican municipal law of 1859 cited by your excellency, which provides that commercial agents residing in Mexico may display the flags of their countries only when the town where they reside is besieged, or when a riot or sedition breaks out therein.

---

[1] Not printed.

This Department is aware that the extent to which the right to display the flag can be exercised is variously stated; that some authorities limit it to solemn occasions and some to national holidays, while others merely state the right without limiting it. But since the reason for displaying the flag above the consular premises as recognized in international law is, as expressed in the consular treaties of the United States with other countries, "in order that the consular office or dwelling may be easily and generally known for the convenience of those who may have resort to them," it would seem that the flag of the consul's nation might be displayed at all times and not merely on certain holidays. And indeed this is the course that has been followed by American consuls at various places throughout the world, who, basing their action upon this ground, do now, as they have done in the past, daily display the national flag. This is likewise, it would appear, the practice of other nations.

Notwithstanding what has been said, and thinking that possibly some special reason growing out of local conditions might have induced the jefe político of northern Lower California to raise this question with particular reference to the American Consulate at Ensenada, this Department directed the consul there to make a report upon the matter. It learns from him that when he first arrived at Ensenada conditions throughout northern Lower California were such as to make it highly desirable to display the American flag daily, and that nothing has since occurred to suggest the advisability of discontinuing the practice. The consul also remarks in effect that while so far as he knows the display of the flag may probably, under the provisions of Mexican legislation, be contingent upon the acquiescence of the local municipal authorities, yet he adds that since no objection to the appearance of the flag over the consulate, from either official or private sources, has ever come to his knowledge, there was no apparent reason why even under such law he should cease to display it. With this statement in evidence this Department must express its inability to understand why any exception should have been taken to the consul's course, and I have the honor to say that the Government of the United States, in view of all that has been stated above, of the fact that the Consul at Ensenada in displaying the American flag has no other object than to identify the consular premises, and of the additional fact that such action may not, it would seem, be properly construed as offensive in any way to the Mexican Government, trusts that no necessity will be perceived for reiterating the request made in the note under acknowledgment.

I have the honor therefore to request that your excellency will be good enough to communicate the foregoing to the Mexican Government and to say that this Government regrets that it should have been thought necessary, and especially at the present time, to make this subject one for official representations, and hopes that in view of the long and sincere friendship uniting the Governments of Mexico and the United States the former Government will see fit fully to recognize the rules and principles of international law governing this matter and to refrain from insisting upon a strict compliance by American consuls with the provisions of the Mexican law of 1859 with regard to the matter, thus permitting them to display the American flag in such manner and at such times as their discretion dictates, unless in particular cases some good reason exists and can be shown why this should not be done.

Accept [etc.] P. C. KNOX.

PRESENTATION OF A STATUE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON TO MEXICO BY AMERICAN CITIZENS RESIDING IN MEXICO.[1]

File No. 812,413 W27.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1274.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 24, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to the Department clippings from the Mexican Herald of yesterday, describing the exercises in connection with the presentation, on February 22, by Americans in this Republic, of a statue of George Washington as a gift to the Mexican people.

I have [etc.]. HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.]

From the Mexican Herald of February 23, 1912.

Several thousand people assembled yesterday morning at 11 o'clock in Plaza Dinamarca to witness the unveiling of the Washington statue which was presented to Mexico by the American residents in the Republic at the centennial last year.

The statue is of bronze. It is eleven feet high and rests on a base of marble of the same height. The figure, face and pose of the great American are dignified and noble and the statue adds much beauty to the glorieta, which is surrounded by handsome buildings.

A large platform in front of the statue was occupied by President Madero, his staff, the members of the cabinet, the diplomatic corps, and many unofficial Mexicans and Americans, both men and women.

C. R. Hudson, vice president of the monument committee, spoke as follows:

"Many of you will recall that during the celebration held in this city in commemoration of the first centennial of the Independence of Mexico, we met on these grounds and dedicated the site of this glorieta to the statue of Washington, which was to be the gift of the citizens of the United States residing in this Republic, to the Mexican nation and people in honor of the centennial.

"It is with great pride that we meet to-day to fulfill the promise then made, and to present our gift now to the nation. Owing to unavoidable delays, and our wish to have these ceremonies on the birthday of Washington, we were not able to have the grounds completed and embellished, but that will follow immediately.

"Monuments to Washington exist in many Latin-American republics, and the selection of a statue of this great character as a gift to the Mexican nation seems particularly appropriate. In Latin-American hearts Washington is classed with Bolívar and Hidalgo, two of their own greatest heroes. He is dear to citizens of all countries under an elective form of government. He belongs to them all, and no doubt his career was an inspiration to all leaders in the establishment of American republics."

---

[1] In connection with the celebration in 1910 of the First Centennial of Mexican Independence. See For. Rel. 1910, p. 712.

ADDRESS OF AMBASSADOR HENRY LANE WILSON.

"One hundred and eighty years after the birth of George Washington in Westmoreland County, Virginia, the American colony in this Republic offers his plastic portrait carved in Mexican stone and American bronze to the Mexican people as a testimonial of their respect and fraternal affection. On the day when this great patriot first opened his eyes on the world the vast empire now known as the United States of America was a part of the monarchy of Great Britain, and Mexico with its great mineral and agricultural wealth, was still sleeping in the traditions of the Middle Ages under the monarchy of Spain. To-day both are powerful Republics cherishing the memory of the lands from whose loins they sprang, but united in maintaining upon this hemisphere the theory and practice of constitutional democracy.

"These two Republics have been at peace for more than half a century and during all that time the currents of a constantly increasing volume of commerce, immigration, and vast mutual interests have been bringing them more and more into intimate and cordial association. Nor can the eye of the prophet or the vision of the seer see aught in the horizon of the future portending the lessening of those cordial relations which the dictates of sound statesmanship, as well as the imperative considerations of mutual interest teach us are vitally essential to the peaceful progress and development of both countries.

"There is the difference of race; but while race pride and traditions are ennobling and useful, racial unity beyond national frontiers politically counts for little in an intensely utilitarian age, when political alliances and friendships spring from considerations of practical self-interest and the necessities of the hour rather than from the dreams of the past.

"No race is so great or perfect that it may not learn much to its advantage from other races and no race is so enthroned in its own virtues that it may not borrow something of the divine spark from races whose traditions, history and ideals are far asunder. The Mexican and American nations are Christian and republican nations, and while possibly pursuing different roads, are both animated by the same idea of elevating man and the happiness of the people. They should, therefore, be friends, as they are neighbors, putting aside the appeal of the demagogue and the singer of evil songs, and lend themselves unitedly to the peaceful development of this hemisphere.

"No fitter representative of this idea has ever lived than the great American patriot, George Washington. A warrior, he loved peace; an aristocrat, he loved the people; nourished in the lap of luxury, he devoted his life and fortune to the cause of the oppressed and poor; self-centered in his Americanism, the great central idea of his policy as enunciated by Alexander Hamilton was the maintenance and extension of the democratic idea throughout this hemisphere.

"The United States has produced many great men whose names have been written large upon the scrolls of history, but none greater than Washington, none in whom the fires of patriotism burned purer or higher, none who has left a memory more enshrouded in love and admiration among his fellow countrymen, the Latin-Americans of this hemisphere and the people of the world. Therefore, no worthier subject could so eloquently express the purpose of the American colony in Mexico, in presenting this statue of the great commoner who was first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen, to the Mexican people.

"Mr. President: In the name of the American colony in this Republic and as an offering of peace, good will, and friendship, I present this statue of George Washington, through Your Excellency, to the Mexican people."

ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT MADERO.

"Great men should have statues erected to their memory in every land, for these statues serve to recall vividly the virtues of the heroes of nations, and at the same time are a means of paying homage to the services rendered to humanity by the great men of the ages, whose work should never be restricted to the confines of one nation, but should be extended throughout the world to benefit all nations and peoples.

"For this reason men who have distinguished themselves in the fields of science, art, or politics should be considered as citizens of the world. All the world has been benefited by the discoveries of Volta, Edison, Marconi, Fulton and Watts, who gave the world the wonders of steam and electricity.

"So such men as George Washington, who brought freedom to their nations, are known throughout the entire world. The labor of Washington was one of the factors which caused France to seek and claim her freedom, radiating afterwards to all the world, illuminating the minds of our own Hidalgo, Allende, Morelos and other patriots.

"For this reason the American colony resident in Mexico could not, on the occasion of the centennial of our independence, have chosen a gift which would be more highly esteemed, for the noble figure of Washington is loved by all who love liberty and admired by all who regard the grand and the beautiful.

"This admiration for just and great men which is common to both our nations is the best testimony to the similarity of ideas which inspire us, and, for this reason, of the union which should continually strengthen and guide our relations. In the commercial world the interchange of products is beneficial to both nations (for which reason it increases) and the similarity of ideals will lead us toward the same end, that of attaining greatness through liberty and justice.

"The Mexican people appreciate to the higest degree this gift which the American colony on the occasion of the first centennial of Mexican independence has made to Mexico, this beautiful statue which represents in bronze the one who in his own Nation came to be 'first in war; first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen'—enviable praise which has rarely been accorded even to great men."

TAXATION OF FOREIGNERS BY INSURRECTIONARY FORCES EXERCISING DE FACTO AUTHORITY.

File No. 812.00/3353.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua (via El Paso, Tex.), March 23, 1912—1 p. m.

The provisional government demands the mine taxes due to the Federal Government at the close of this month. Penalty according to law for nonpayment 50 per cent increase first month, 100 second, relinquishment title third. While larger mines can stand double payment in case of failure of rebel movement, it will be burdensome for many small owners. I respectfully ask advice.

LETCHER.

File No. 812.00/3353.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 27, 1912—4 p. m.

Department assumes from your telegram of March 23, 1 p. m., that Americans are already paying taxes to insurrectionary authorities. You are instructed that such taxes should be paid under protest. The protest should be made a matter of record in each case as far as possible. Properly authenticated receipts should be secured for all taxes paid. Americans are entitled, however, to pay taxes to persons in de facto authority. See Moore's Digest, volume 1, pages 183–184; volume 4, page 12, for the principle involved. Ambassador at Mexico City is being instructed to lay the matter before Mexican Government, calling attention to the exaction of taxes by insurrectionary forces, and stating that this Government will regard payment of such taxes to such persons exercising de facto authority as completely relieving American citizens from further obligation with reference to taxes paid in that way.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3353.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 27, 1912—5 p. m.

Department is advising Consulate at Chihuahua as follows regarding insurrectionary forces collecting mine taxes due Federal Government: [Above telegram to American Consul.]

You will bring this immediately to the attention of the Mexican Foreign Office.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 312.115Am3/26.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 13, 1912—11 a. m.

Orozco has demanded of the El Paso representative of the American Smelters Securities Co. [?] that they remake all checks to the National lines for month of March, amounting to 26,000 pesos, to order of revolutionary government and that all future payments for freight be made to same order.

As this company's interests are very large the precedent to be established is very important. I am having the El Paso representative above mentioned telegraphed to refuse immediate payment and to inform Orozco that he will be held personally responsible by this Embassy for any damage done to American lives and property. I request instructions.

WILSON.

File No. 312.115Am3/29.

The Assistant Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 798.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 16, 1912.

SIR: I enclose a copy of a letter[1] from the American Smelting and Refining Company of New York City, in which they state that they are in receipt of a telegram from their manager in Chihuahua saying that General Orozco has demanded payment to be made to him for freights due by the company to the National Railway lines for the month of March, and that hereafter such payments for freight should be made to him. They point out that they will doubtless have demands made upon them by the railroad for repayment of the freight if paid to General Orozco; also that the same situation would doubtless apply to the export tax on shipments from Chihuahua.

---

[1] Not printed.

Some time ago the American Consul at Chihuahua was advised as follows: [Telegram of March 27, 4 p. m.]

It is believed that this instruction to the Consul states the general principles which control in the matter of the payment of taxes, customs duties, etc., to insurrectionary or revolutionary officers, and it would apply to the case suggested by the American Smelting and Refining Company.

You will lay the matter before the Mexican Government and state that the Government of the United States will regard such payments made for freight and export taxes to the persons exercising de facto authority as completely relieving the Smelting Company of further obligation in regard to such payments.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 312.11/285.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, April 24, 1912—5 p. m.
(Received, via El Paso, Tex., April 25, 1912—5.30 p. m.)

W. H. Kraft, a citizen of the United States, has been required by the rebel military authorities to pay to them $100,000 and 1,000,000 cartridges. By right of his wife this American owns an undivided one-sixth interest in one of the largest properties in the State of Chihuahua. An uncle of the President of Mexico residing here is also holder of a sixth interest. These facts account for the rebel hostility. Last week this estate, consisting of nearly 1,000,000 acres, was absolutely stripped and laid waste by rebel authorities. Request instructions as to what representations should be made in protection of American-owned share of property. The authorities threaten to confiscate all of Kraft's property in Chihuahua if he fails to comply with their demand.

LETCHER.

File No. 312.11/285.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Chihuahua.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 27, 1912—6 p. m.

Your April 24, 5 p. m. Bearing in mind Department's March 27, 4 p. m., regarding payment of taxes, you will informally protest to appropriate persons exercising de facto authority in your district against all arbitrary, illegal or confiscatory exactions made by such persons upon American citizens or their property. In matter of "forced loans" you will distinguish between levy in the form of war taxes equally applied according to a fixed percentage amongst all the inhabitants of the country, whether natives or foreigners, and exactions levied arbitrarily upon a part only of the community. See volume 6, Moore's Digest, page 915.

Referring again to Department's March 27, 4 p. m., protests should be entered against payment of all taxes to insurrectionary authorities; you will also enter special and emphatic protests informally and unofficially against arbitrary and discriminatory exactions, "forced loans." Protests should be recorded if possible.

KNOX.

File No. 812.512/5.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 21, 1912—noon.

Department's March 27, 5 p. m. Protests are being made here by representatives of American taxpayers in the State of Chihuahua against the collection attempted there by local authorities of certain mining taxes already paid by them to the revolutionary government of Orozco, which was the de facto government at the time of payment. I am to-day instructing American Consul at Chihuahua to advise Americans in his district to decline to pay taxes a second time.

WILSON.

File No. 812.512/6.

The American Consul at Chihuahua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Chihuahua, August 24, 1912—3 p. m.

The Ambassador advised me by telegraph yesterday that Mexican Government will not attempt second collection of taxes paid rebel authorities, and he has instructed advising Americans to this effect.

LETCHER.

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST AMERICAN CITIZENS EMPLOYED ON MEXICAN RAILROADS.

File No. 812.77/102.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 796.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 9, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to report to the Department that representatives of the Order of Railway Conductors and of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of the National Railways of Mexico, called at the Embassy on Saturday last and represented that a general strike of pronounced anti-American character by the Mexican employees of the National Railways is imminent and will probably occur about the middle of this month. Such a strike, they alleged, will seriously endanger their welfare and even their lives, and they requested to know what protection could be afforded them in the event the strike became a reality. I replied I had reason to believe that the Government could and would fully protect them and that if they would convince me that their lives were menaced I would do everything possible to have them promptly and adequately safeguarded.

In the course of the conversation the representatives asserted that the strike was in a way the outcome of a movement among the Mexican employees of the railroad which had been going on for some time and which has heretofore been manifested, as it still is, by constant and irritating discrimination against American employees on the part of subordinate and secondary officials whenever occasion offered. The source of this discrimination, aside from the animus which they claim to be in the minds of their Mexican fellow workers, they assert is in the executive committee of the board of directors, and asked me if I would give them a letter of introduction to the Secretary of Hacienda asking that they be given a hearing, so they could lay their grievances before him. As this seemed to be a reasonable request I gave them the letter they asked for, a copy of which I am enclosing.

Yesterday Mr. Jaime Gurza, the Sub-Secretary of Hacienda and a member of the executive committee of the board of directors above mentioned, told me that a movement for the complete Mexicanization of the National Railways has been on foot for over a year. He thought a general strike extremely unlikely, as it had been pointed out to the Mexican committees when they presented their case that exact justice would be accorded American as well as Mexican employees, and that if their agitation took on a political or anti-American character it would prejudice the Government against them and quite defeat their ends. He said that about a year ago the matter of the Mexicanization of the National Lines was gone into by Mr. Limantour, the former Secretary of Hacienda, and Mr. E. R. Brown, the President of the National Railways, and that it was then agreed that while American employees already in the service should not be discriminated against in any way, Mexicans, everything else being equal, would be given preference in regard to new vacancies in positions, but that efficiency would in all cases be the sole criterion. The railroad men who visited me also spoke of this arrangement and said that the point had been conceded by them.

This question, which indirectly affects the entire country, directly concerns over four hundred Americans, and several thousand—I believe about twelve—Mexican employees. Mr. Gurza told me the gross receipts of the lines were larger than the national revenues, and from these facts an idea may be gained of the importance of this question and the seriousness of a strike which would hamper the transportation facilities of the entire Republic.

I have [etc.]

FRED MORRIS DEARING.

[Inclosure.]

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of Hacienda.

No. 1260.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 7, 1911.

MY DEAR MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to request that your excellency will be good enough to receive and give a hearing to Mr. Thomas K. Eccles, Chairman, General Board of Adjustment for the Order of Railway Conductors, National Railways of Mexico; Mr. H. H. Kasten, General Chairman of the Grand Council of Adjustment, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, National Railways of Mexico; and the gentlemen who will accompany them, who have represented to this Embassy that they fear a strike of anti-American character by the Mexican employees of the National Railways, which may seriously jeopardize their personal safety, about the middle of this month. They also state that they are subjected to constant discrimination on account of their nationality. I therefore harbor the conviction that your excellency will be desirous of hearing at first hand what they have to say in regard to the matters which have caused them to seek an audience with you, and I beg to assure your excellency that the attention and consideration your excellency will show them will be appreciated no less highly by them than by myself.

I am [etc.]

FRED MORRIS DEARING.

File No. 812.77/102½.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 820.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 16, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to refer to my dispatch No. 796 of the 9th instant, relative to the fears of certain American employees of the National Railways of Mexico that a general strike of anti-American character will be called by the Mexican employees of the National Lines, and to inclose to the Department for its information a copy in translation of an extract from a folio, entitled "Railroad Policy of the Government," prepared by Mr. Jaime Gurza, the Subsecretary of Hacienda and a member of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors of the National Railways of Mexico, in which the respective rights of the American and Mexican employees and the question of the Mexicanization of the railway lines are touched upon.

Mr. Gurza's book, which seems to have been privately printed for a limited circulation, presents a very interesting study of the Mexican railway system, and, in case the Department so desires, I will endeavor to secure additional copies of it for the Department's use.

Referring to the last paragraph of my dispatch of the 9th instant above mentioned, I beg to say that a statistical table published in Mr. Gurza's book indicates that the employees of the National Railway Lines number 26,106, of whom 25,031 are Mexicans and 1,075 are foreigners; that is, to all intents and purposes, American.

I have [etc.]

FRED MORRIS DEARING.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

Extract from "The Railroad Policy of the Government."

It has also been arranged that among all the different railroad employees, those who are Mexican shall be given the same treatment and the same protection that is given to foreigners.

Mr. Limantour, understanding that it was only justice to leave railroad careers open to all young and energetic Mexicans who would be considered capable of such work, directed, on July 1, 1909, to Mr. E. N. Brown, Executive President of the National Railways, two important letters, in which, with the above object in view, he recommended:

(a) That equal opportunity be given to Mexicans and foreigners to occupy and carry on the functions of railway positions.

(b) That measures be taken to arrange that the Mexican employees receive the same treatment as the foreign, and that no obstacles be put in their way on account of favoritism.

(c) That the use of Spanish be made general and obligatory in all branches of the railway service; and finally,

(d) That attention be given to the formation and betterment of the schools in which railroading is taught.

Mr. Brown, following the wishes of the Government as expressed in the letters of the Minister of Hacienda, has increased the number of Mexican employees and has arranged that they receive better treatment.

It is true that this increase in the number of employees has been principally made in the ranks of the lower and secondary men; but this is natural and fair, because such positions are more frequently vacant, and, furthermore, it would neither be just or convenient to discharge old foreign employees for the sole reason of substituting others who are Mexicans. Nevertheless, higher positions have lately been given to Mexicans whenever the opportunity presented itself.

The Mexican employees themselves recognize generally the existence of these advantages, and they only complain because several foreign employees, chiefs of departments, place obstacles and difficulties in the way of nationalizing the service.

In order to avoid these difficulties, it has been suggested that positions be awarded by competition among those who show the greatest ability, and it is desired that any discharge of an employee shall be justified before the proper high official.

An effort has also been made to make the use of Spanish more general in the railroad service. It does not seem necessary to me to lay any stress on the importance of effectually establishing this measure which will bring so many advantages to the Mexican employees of the railways, greatly contributing to the betterment and strengthening of their relations with the public.

Now that the railways have become nationalized, it is very natural that all the details of the service should be in Spanish, because language is the simplest manifestation of the nationality of a people and the form in which they incarnate their racial character and civilization.

File No. 812.77/102⅓.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargê d'Affaires.

No. 515.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 31, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 820 of the 16th instant, enclosing a translation of an extract from Mr. Jaime Gurza's book entitled "Railroad Policy of the Government."

The Department will be glad to have you send it two copies of the work mentioned.

I am [etc.],

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.77/108.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

American Embassy,
Mexico, January 16, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies in duplicate as follows:

First. Instructions to Mr. Dearing to interview President Brown relative to the question of the Mexicanization of the National Railways.[1]

Second. Mr. Dearing's report of the interview.

Third. Letter from the Chairman of the General Board of Adjustment for the Order of Railway Conductors of the National Railways of Mexico.

My reasons for securing this interview are that the increasing probability of an antiforeign and anti-American policy in the personnel of the Mexican National Railways makes it important that the Department should be well informed in the premises.

In the event that the Mexicanization of the National Railways is persistently and thoroughly carried out by the Mexican Government the deterioration of these great properties must almost inevitably follow. This has been the experience wherever the policy of entirely eliminating foreign and American employees has been carried out effectually. In the event that this policy should be carried out, resulting in a depreciation of the values of the properties, it may be anticipated that American and foreign bondholders would immediately become dissatisfied and that an agitation would be started for the purpose of securing our intervention and possibly that of other powers in the matter.

I have [etc.]

Henry Lane Wilson.

[Inclosure 1.—Memorandum.—Extract.]

Memorandum relative to the Mexicanization of the National Railways of Mexico.

Mr. Dearing, at the direction of the Ambassador, called upon Mr. E. N. Brown, President of the National Railways of Mexico, by arrangement, at 3.30 p. m. on the eighth of January, 1912, in relation to certain agitation, supposed to have the sanction of the Mexican Government, for the so-called Mexicanization of the National Railways of Mexico, i. e., the substitution of Mexican for foreign employees. Since some sixteen hundred Americans are in the service this agitation at once assumes importance for them and thus for the American Government and the American Embassy in Mexico. Indeed, trouble has been narrowly averted on several occasions and as late as August, 1911, a general strike of the Mexican employees was threatened and was discourged only when the Mexican Government frowned upon it for matters of policy; i. e. the Government is favorable to the Mexicanization but does not wish it to be accomplished by strikes which would certainly bring about international complications. The agitation in question is now two years old and dates virtually from the issuance of what is known as the Limantour circular of 1910, copy of which will be found in Mr. Jaime Gurza's book enclosed in the Embassy's dispatch of September 18, 1911 (No. 950[1]).

Mr. Brown said that the foreign bondholders would certainly oppose any attempt by the Mexican Government to eliminate American employees and said that they had already been very active when nothing more than the possibility of such a thing existed.

---

[1] Not printed.

The difficulty, he said in effect, is that the Government, while understanding the situation and while well disposed, has to withstand a pressure from the middle and lower classes almost too strong to be resisted. As a matter of fact the Government would prefer to have the management of the railway in American hands, but as the various state officials and petty authorities of all kinds conceive that the railways are state property and that they as citizens have certain rights over them, they cannot, on account of their number, be ignored. This misconception, Mr. Brown thought, was largely due to the demoralizing Limantour circular above referred to which had been seized upon by the people as evidence of rights which, as a matter of fact, do not exist.

Mr. Brown said that the Mexicanization of the National Railways is actually being effected and in the only way in which it can be carried out to the satisfaction of all concerned. The present policy and method is to promote men from the ranks whenever they are found to be capable of filling the higher vacancies, the places being given, everything being equal, to Mexicans. He said this plan had been in operation on the old National Railways for about eighteen years and that in time practically the entire shop force had been Mexicanized without any loss in efficiency, only ten foreigners being now employed. He remarked that the company had taken great care in training its men and that even in the administrative department he was preparing to take in various Mexicans who had demonstrated their fitness.

Mexicanization even of the minor personnel cannot be effected now without disrupting traffic but that it is in gradual process of accomplishment as above indicated.

Mr. Brown, upon being asked if discrimination was being practiced by Mexican railway officials against American subordinates for the purpose of forcing them out of the service, answered "No."

Mr. Brown said that he had been assured by both the President and Ernesto Madero, the Secretary of Hacienda, that there would be no change in previous and established policies of the Government in relation to the National Railways and that he believed that they were sincere in their statements. But while evidently sincere now might, he thought, if agitation continued and pressure by the people became too great, be forced to take a different attitude, i. e., that they would stand by the status quo as long as the people acquiesced.

Speaking of the physical condition of the National Railways, Mr. Brown said the roadbed and equipment were in the best of condition and better than any railroad west of the Mississippi in the United States.

[Inclosure 2.]

The Chairman of the General Board of Adjustment for the Order of Railway Conductors to the American Ambassador.

131 Plazuela de Buena Vista,
Mexico, D. F., January 12, 1912.

Dear Sir: I am enclosing you herewith the report on conditions affecting the "road men" of the National Railways of Mexico, which you asked for.

The conditions as I have stated them are not in the least overdrawn—every word of it is true and can be proven.

If you can, in your official capacity, do anything that will get for us the "square deal" that we should be entitled to, I assure you that it will be greatly appreciated.

Very sincerely, yours,

T. K. Eccles.

[Sub-inclosure.]

Labor Situation on the National Railways of Mexico.

For a period of something over two years no conductors, and few engineers, have been hired, so that the number in the service is gradually growing less.

A great many of the Mexicans who have been given positions as conductors are men who have not earned this preference by reason of proficiency in the practical knowledge of the duties and responsibilities of a conductor or engineer.

The current book of rules of the National Railways, under which road employees work, reads, in part, as follows: "To obtain promotion capacity must be shown for greater responsibility." The conductors and engineers feel that they have a reasonable cause for complaint by reason of the fact that some of them have shown capacity for increased responsibility, yet they have not been promoted, and if the present policy of the company continues they will not be.

The greatest cause of complaint the men have is that they are being discriminated against in matters of discipline. An offense against the rules by an American is generally the cause for his discharge, where the fault is a dischargeable offense, and if it is not a dischargeable offense the man is heavily demerited. Similar offenses on the part of a Mexican are taken little, if any, cognizance of. It looks as though the policy were to get rid of the American employees and save the Mexican ones.

Many of the men who are now left in the service are men who have been with some of the properties constituting the National Railways for years and they have passed that age when they could go to the United States and get employment as conductors or engineers. They have given the very best years of their lives to railway service in Mexico and have helped to make it what it is. Their feelings may be imagined as they view the attitude of the company toward them. There was a time when an old employee who had erred in the performance of his duty was given some consideration because of long and faithful service. If any consideration is being shown now it is not apparent.

The last annual report of the company shows that there were 1,219 foreigners employed on the system, which is 3.19 per cent of the whole number.

File No. 812.77/111.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1306.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 12, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my telegram of February 3, 1912,[1] I have the honor to report that during an interview with the President on March 11th I called his attention to the gravity of the situation which would result from a strike of the American employees on the National Railways, now impending because of the announced determination of the Government to enforce the use of the Spanish language in all train orders and to require examinations in Spanish. I expressed the opinion that this strike would not only paralyze traffic and the transportation of troops and close factories, but it would also involve an attempted boycott on incoming and outgoing Mexican freight on the other side of the Rio Grande and that labor organizations in the United States would, as I was informed, pass resolutions denunciatory of the Mexican Government and asking American employers of Mexican labor in the United States to follow the example made by the Mexican Government. The President expressed himself as being in accord with me as to the undesirability of provoking this contest at the present time, and said that he would give immediate orders to have the obnoxious language order indefinitely postponed. I hope with this action the grave difficulties which I have been anticipating and fearing may be postponed for some time.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

---

[1] See p. 716.

File No. 812.77/111.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 772.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 21, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 1306, of the 12th instant, containing the substance of your interview with President Madero on the preceding day, and approves your action in detailing to him the grave complications which would result from the strike of American employees on the National Railways which would follow the Government's carrying out of its announced intention to enforce the use of the Spanish language in all train orders.

The Department is gratified by the President's attitude in consenting to order the indefinite postponement of the issuance of the contemplated order regarding the use of the Spanish language, and hopes that the President's orders will be effective.

You will continue to watch the railway situation closely and report all important developments by telegraph.

I am, etc.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.77/112a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 30, 1912—11 a. m.

The American Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the American Order of Railway Conductors are about to take up the grievances of American employees of the Mexican National Railways and will make the dangerous character of their employment under present conditions the basis for a request of the Department for special representations to the Mexican Government and for extraordinary measures by this Government. It is possible that if the Department's reply or the Mexican Government's attitude do not satisfy the men a strike of all American employees on the National lines will be ordered. The Department views this possibility with grave concern, for various reasons, such as the serious handicap that would be placed upon Americans in Mexico, whose need to leave the country may become imperative; the rights of the employees as American citizens; the usual inconvenience resulting from the stoppage of communication; the isolation of the Embassy and the various consular officers; in general, the serious situation with which this Government, as well as the Mexican Government, would be confronted if the strike becomes a reality.

You are therefore instructed to seek an early interview with President Madero and to impress upon him the gravity of the threatened situation and to suggest to him the great desirability of removing the cause of complaint by stopping, as far as possible, the discrimination alleged by the American employees, and urgently to request that every possible measure of protection be afforded them during the performance, often perilous, of their daily duties.

You may also say to the President that the matter would seem, in view of the present political situation in the country, to call not only for bare fairness in meeting the demands of the Americans (due regard being had for the Mexican employees), but for a more than usual measure of consideration.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.77/115.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 2, 1912—10 p. m.

Department's March 30, 11 a. m. The Cabinet has decided to reject all demands of American employes of Mexican National Railways. It acted upon what I know to be false information as to the attitude of the American railway servants and the representations of General Manager Clark.

I represented to the Minister for Foreign Affairs that (1) the interruption of traffic and transportation of soldiers, (2) the possible boycott by labor organization of incoming and outgoing Mexican freight, (3) the prejudice which would be excited against Mexican employees in the United States, (4) the intrusion of the question into congressional discussion and consequent embarrassment of the President, (5) the public sympathy which would be aroused by the return of some 4,000 Americans to the United States deprived of their positions through unjust and discriminating intrigues—would all contribute toward serious results.

The Cabinet will reconsider, in view of my representations.

WILSON.

File No. 812.77/117.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 7, 1912—7 p. m.

Referring to Department's March 30, 11 a. m. Mr. Calero informs me to-day, in a note, that the Government, reflecting the views of the officers of the Mexican National Railways, finds the demands of the American engineers and conductors intolerable and is advised from the same source of the ability of the management to effectively operate the railways without American employees. The note adds the hope of the Government that the American employees and the management will be able to arrive at an understanding and that he has so advised a responsible official.

I do not share in the optimistic view of the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3534.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 8, 1912—9 p. m.

As the Mexican National Railway refused to grant any of the demands of the American employees, these, amounting to from 700 to 800, will strike on the 15th and leave their posts. I have used all my influence with the Government, the railways, and the men to prevent the crisis and am deeply disappointed that no good result has followed.

WILSON.

File No. 812.77/122.

The American Consul General at Monterey to the Secretary of State.

No. 456.] AMERICAN CONSULATE GENERAL,
Monterey, April 9, 1912.

I have the honor to state that the threatened "walk out" of American railroad men here in Mexico is causing considerable anxiety amongst the better class of people. It is a recognized fact that the majority of American railroad men here in Mexico are not only competent, but they are quite a superior class of citizens. In fact, I have noted a great improvement between many of the American railroad men in Mexico of twelve years ago and those of to-day. As a rule our American railway conductors and engineers are sober, law-abiding citizens, remaining neutral as to local politics, and attending strictly to the business of the railroad company by which they are employed. As a rule they receive large salaries and instead of sending this money out of the country, Mexico is constantly benefited by this thrifty class who have money to spend and who invest it and spend it here in the republic. A large number of these Americans have spent years in Mexico and have been largely instrumental in bringing up the railroads in Mexico to their present high standing. Ten years ago nearly all of the railroads here were manned by Americans and there were few Mexican conductors or engineers, whereas to-day only about 62 per cent of the conductors and engineers are Americans, the balance are Mexicans who have been taught railroading under experienced American railroad men. Many of these American railroad men have passed the age limit which would enable them to find employment on American railroads in the United States, and, as they have spent a large part of their life railroading in Mexico, they greatly dislike being crowded from their positions and compelled to seek employment in other lines of business.

I have been told by some of the principal engineers and conductors that all the American railroad men ask is to be fairly treated by the railroad company, which they have helped to make what it is to-day in Mexico. I understand their demand to be that no less than 50 per cent of the engineers and conductors shall be Americans and that the policy of discharging Americans for unwarranted or slight causes, without giving them a proper hearing, cease. And that no Americans be discharged without a good and sufficient cause. As I understand it the American engineers and conductors in Mexico have not made any unreasonable demand.

American capital built these roads, a large part of the stock is owned in the United States, and while the Government of Mexico is supposed to own the controlling stock at the present time, it is understood that the bonds, which were given in exchange for said stock, is the property of American citizens.

The facts appear to be that these American railroad men, who are capable and responsible and who are the safe and competent guardians of American property, have already been greatly reduced in numbers. If their just rights are denied them they will, without doubt, leave Mexico, or at least quit railroading, and the railway properties will undoubtedly suffer as a result of their being crowded out of their present positions, which will not only result in a hardship to the men who have devoted the best part of their lives in building up these properties but will result in great loss to the people who own stock in the railroads.

It is furthermore understood that if this great body of men are compelled to leave the service, railroad men in the United States and employees of steamship lines touching at Mexican ports will show such sympathy as will cause a general tie-up in the movement of all freights between the United States and Mexico.

There exists what appears to be a well-founded rumor that railroad and steamship men will refuse to handle freights either in or out of Mexico if these American railroad men are unjustly driven from their positions.

The tying up of the railroads at the present critical time would undoubtedly greatly add to the seriousness of the present conditions prevailing throughout this country. It would mean the cutting off of the supplies brought into Mexico by railway and steamship lines, and it would make it impossible to market the products of this country outside of Mexico. The food supply would largely be cut off. The fuel supply would soon give out. The mines, smelters, and the mills would soon be compelled to close down, and starvation, more terrible than the present revolution, would soon be felt in every part of this republic.

It is hoped that every reasonable influence will be brought to bear on all parties concerned which will tend to bring about a just and satisfactory settlement of this serious question.

I have [etc.]

PHILIP C. HANNA.

File No. 812.00/3566.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 11, 1912—9 p. m.

I am informed through respectable sources that a signed organization of 10,000 men exists in the State of Vera Cruz to act in cooperation with the rebels in the north, and that as soon as the American railway servants go out they expect to begin destroying bridges and killing Mexican railway employees on the Interoceanic and Mexican railways.

WILSON.

File No. 812.00/3584.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 12, 1912—9 p. m.

Aguascalientes reports revolutionists held up train from Guanajuato to Silao and American conductor (name not given) was fatally shot; all passengers and employees maltreated. Also reports wrecking of train at Trapuato and killing of American engineer, Zachariah Farmer.

I am to-day advised by the representatives of American railway servants on Mexican National Railways that they would go out in a body on April 17. I believe efforts to save the situation will be unavailing. The said representatives have expressed to me their deep appreciation of the sympathetic attitude of this Embassy and of the Washington Government.

Wilson.

File No. 812.77/122.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 16, 1912.

Perhaps it would be worth while for you to make one more effort to induce the American railway employees at least to postpone their walkout for a few weeks, first, because so many of their countrymen would be affected by deterioration of the service, and, second, because it seems quite likely the opportunity to exclude Americans from future employment would be welcomed by the Mexican Government. However, you will give no advice inconsistent with the Department's standing instructions to you of March 2, 2 p. m.[1]

Wilson.

File No. 812.77/124.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

?Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 17, 1912.

It is impossible to do anything in the railway situation. The situation has been further aggravated by the railway management's refusal to give the men service letters or transportation to the border. I have asked Mr. Calero to express to the President this Embassy's deep concern. I will be glad to be instructed to take active steps to secure just treatment for the men. Shall I sign a general certificate attesting the service of these men and their reason for leaving the National Railways service?

Wilson.

File No. 812.77/127.

No. 1369.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, April 19, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith without comment and for the information of the Department or such other Departments as may be interested therein a copy of a letter from Mr. T. K. Eccles and

---

[1] See p. 731.

Mr. J. F. Ealy, representatives respectively of the Order of Railway Conductors and of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.]

The Representatives of the Railway Men to the American Ambassador.

MEXICO, D. F., April 16, 1912.

DEAR SIR: For your information will state that to-morrow something over 600 engineers and conductors will leave the service of the National Railways of Mexico. It will be a part of the duty of the undersigned to know where these men have located. If their services should be needed by our country in handling troop trains in the Republic of Mexico we will be able to furnish all the men needed and these men will thoroughly know the track they are to run over.

A wire or letter to T. K. Eccles, Alberta Hotel, El Paso, Texas, will be all that is needed.

Very sincerely yours,

T. K. ECCLES.
J. F. EALY.

File No. 812.77/127.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 30, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received, and has communicated to the Secretary of War, your No. 1369, of the 19th instant, transmitting a joint letter from Messrs. T. K. Eccles and J. F. Ealy, representatives, respectively, of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, with relation to some six hundred engineers and conductors who have left the service of the National Railways of Mexico, stating that, should the services of these men be needed by the United States in handling troop trains in the Republic of Mexico, the organizations mentioned would be able to furnish all the men needed, who would be thoroughly familiar with the tracks over which the trains would be run.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.77/132.

The President to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

CUMBERLAND, MD., May 12, 1912.

Have information which would be glad to have you confirm that there are as many as two hundred and fifty American railway conductors and many locomotive engineers and trainmen who have been thrown out of employment in Mexico and are now refugees in El Paso and other border towns. If you can, verify this information by telegraph to consuls at various places and to the Ambassador. I should be glad if you would issue a statement by my direction inviting the attention of railway presidents and managers to the presence of these skilled workmen with a view if possible to securing employment for them and to save them from suffering.

WM. H. TAFT.

File No. 812.77/132.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 13, 1912.

By direction of the President the border consulates were to-day instructed as follows:

> Telegraph Department how many American railway conductors and locomotive engineers who were formerly employed in Mexico are now idle in Texas border towns opposite your post.

Whatever information you may have on the subject you will send to the Department.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.77/136.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador and the American Consuls at Nogales, Ciudad Juárez, Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, Nuevo Laredo, and Matamoros.

[Identic telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 14, 1912.

In order to prevent any possible misunderstanding of the Department's May 13, you are informed that the data requested therein was ordered obtained by the President personally, and is desired for the purpose of securing employment in the United States for these idle men.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.77/143a.

The Secretary of State to the Presidents of the eighty-six railway companies of the United States operating lines of five hundred miles or more.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 17, 1912.

SIR: By direction of the President, the Department of State announces that, according to reports from diplomatic and consular officers, there are present in the border towns of Texas and out of employment about eighty American railway conductors and about eighty-three locomotive engineers, until now in the service of the National Railways of Mexico. Believing that possibly the skill and experience of these men could be advantageously availed of by the railroad companies of the United States, the President has directed that this situation be brought to their notice in order that, in case such railroad companies have occasion to make use of their services, these conductors and engineers may promptly secure employment.

If it is convenient and possible to give employment to any of these men, they can be reached through Mr. C. E. Webb, in charge of the Order of Locomotive Engineers, San Antonio, Texas, or Mr. D. F. Anderson, in charge of the Order of Railway Engineers, at Laredo, Texas.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 812.77/144.

The President to the Secretary of State.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, May 21, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have yours of May 17th [1] relative to the presence of unemployed railroad men along the Texas border. I approve and greatly appreciate the steps you have taken to meet the situation.

Sincerely yours,

WM. H. TAFT.

NOTE.—Replies were received from the railway presidents and receivers addressed by the Secretary of State on May 17; most of the letters were to the effect that the writer would be glad to bear the matter in mind and had referred the Secretary's request to the appropriate official of his company.

THE RIGHTS OF ASYLUM AND OF TEMPORARY REFUGE.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Vera Cruz, October 24, 1912—5 p. m.

No foreigners hurt or property destroyed. City in the possession of Federals. Díaz is a prisoner; if asylum is asked for will be refused.

CANADA.

File No. 812.00/5358.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 27, 1912—12 noon.

Both Mexicans and foreigners have crowded this Embassy asking that I take some action with President Madero in behalf of Díaz, some insisting that he should not be executed; others that such execution be postponed. I have replied to one and all that the Embassy could not under any circumstances take action or make representations, as his case was one of Mexican internal politics.

---

[1] Not printed; refers to above circular letter to railway presidents.

Similar visits of committees from their colonies with petitions to take some action for the sake of humanity have been received by the other members of the Diplomatic Corps, who have been much excited over the reported determination to execute Díaz. The wife of the Spanish Minister (acting Dean of the Diplomatic Corps), herself a Mexican by birth, went to see the Maderos, but was coldly received. The British Minister was very active for a time, saying that of course he could not act in the name of his Government without instructions, but was acting for his colony. German and French Ministers will do nothing.

Madero has made a speech, in reply to a manifestation, in which he concludes:

> General Díaz will be punished with all rigor. And I know very well that it is the wish of the nation that the blood of the guilty wash out the blood shed by General Díaz on June 25, 1879.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 812.00/5358.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 29, 1912—6 p. m.

Your October 27, 12 noon. Action approved.

KNOX.

File No. 812.00/5343.

No. 1073.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 29, 1912.

SIR: The American Consul at Vera Cruz, in a telegram dated October 24, 5 p. m., states, regarding asylum for General Felix Diaz, "if asylum is asked for will be refused." The Department presumes there will be no occasion either to grant or to refuse asylum to Diaz, since he is held a prisoner by Mexican Federal forces. You will inform the Consul at Vera Cruz, however, that the position of the Department with regard to asylum is as follows: "The Government of the United States does not claim what is technically known as the right of asylum in the strictest sense. There is, however, an evident distinction between cases of this kind and cases in which temporary refuge is given in order to preserve innocent human life. In cases of the latter kind the Department of State finds it expedient to give a certain latitude to the judgment of the officer who is called upon to determine within his discretion the course recommended by broad considerations of humanity in each individual case. It is accordingly the general rule of the Department of State to place all emphasis upon the responsibility of the officer concerned and to permit him within these limitations, at his discretion, to afford temporary refuge where such is necessary to preserve innocent human life."

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

PROTECTION OF CHINESE SUBJECTS IN MEXICO BY AMERICAN DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICERS.—TEMPORARY REFUGE GRANTED WAIVER OF EXCLUSION ACT.[1]

File No. 151.07/4.

The Chinese Minister to the Acting Secretary of State.

No. 33.]

Legation of China,
Washington, March 6, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inform you that I have received many telegraphic reports from the Chinese residents in various parts of Mexico concerning the serious character of the present disturbances in that country, which may render it imperative for them to seek refuge in the United States. During a similar revolution in Mexico last year, the Department of Commerce and Labor issued timely instructions[2] to the American immigration authorities on the Mexican border to allow Chinese residents in Mexico, whether of the merchant class or not, to take refuge in the United States, as your Department was good enough to inform me in its note of the 13th of June last.[3] If those instructions are no longer effective at the present time, I take liberty of requesting that they be revived and made applicable to the cases of the Chinese residents in Mexico seeking refuge in the United States during the present revolution.

Thanking you in advance for your kind compliance with my request,

I avail [etc.]

Chang Yin Tang.

File No. 312.93/19.

The American Consul at Mazatlan to the Secretary of State.

No. 149.]

American Consulate,
Mazatlan, March 17, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inclose confirmation copy of my telegram of even date.[3] During the last week notices have been appearing in the papers, calling on the unions and clubs to attend a public meeting to be held on Saturday night in the Plaza de la Republica, for a conference on the Asiatic race, and on Friday programme was circulated, one of the speeches was to be on "He who protects the Chinese is a traitor to his country."

All indication clearly indicated that the object of the meeting was to inflame the populace, cause an uprising, and compel the Chinese either by force or through fear to abandon the city.

The Department instruction of Nov. 14, 1911,[1] also that of the Embassy, placed me in the position of protecting the Chinese in case of necessity. I therefore called on the authorities and asked for the suppression of the meeting. Orders were issued for copies of the intended speeches to be submitted to me—I found same to be obscene and inflammatory—and again requested that the meeting should be prohibited. My request was granted.

---

[1] See For. Rel. 1911, pp. 615–618. [2] See For. Rel. 1911, p. 616. [3] Not printed.

I am aware that I may have gone further than my instructions warranted, but considered that it would be far easier to prevent an uprising than it would be to protect the Chinese once the outbreak had taken place; hence my action, which I submit for approval or otherwise.

Had the meeting taken place and an uprising resulted the authorities could not have coped with same, and the consequences would have been serious.

I have [etc.]

Wm. E. Alger.

File No. 151.07/5.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Chinese Minister.

No. 235.]

Department of State,
Washington, March 19, 1912.

Sir: Referring to your note of the 6th instant requesting a renewal of the arrangement made last summer whereby Chinese residents in Mexico were allowed to take refuge in the United States during the continuance of disturbances in Mexico. I have the honor to inform you that the Department is now in receipt of a letter from the Department of Commerce and Labor, to which Department the matter was referred, stating that there is little doubt that the previous arrangement is still being adhered to, but that, as a precautionary measure, the matter has again been brought to the attention of the proper immigration authorities on the Mexican border.

In this connection you will be interested to learn that in a letter to the Governor of Texas, dated March 9, 1912, communicated by him to the Department, Capt. John R. Hughes, of the Texas State Rangers, reported that on the night of the mutiny in Juárez 70 Chinese presented themselves at the detention station and asked for refuge, which was accorded them, the immigration authorities having refused refuge to no foreigners applying for protection.

Accept [etc.],

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 312.93/19.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Mazatlan.

No. 68.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 1, 1912.

Sir: The Department has received your dispatch No. 149 of the 17th ultimo reporting your action in connection with a meeting which it was proposed to hold Saturday evening the 16th of March for the purpose of arousing an anti-Chinese demonstration.

Your action in requesting that the meeting be prohibited has the approval of the Department.

I am [etc.]

For Mr. Huntington Wilson:
Wilbur J. Carr.

File No. 312.93/20.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, April 29, 1912—9 p. m.

Some 2,000 Chinese at Cananea are likely to be attacked at any moment. Chinese Chargé d'Affaires requests me to instruct our consular agent there to afford protection. I told him that I could not act without instruction. Will the Department instruct the consular agent and advise me in the sense of its instruction?

WILSON.

File No. 312.93/20.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 2, 1912—11 a. m.

Protection of Chinese, your April 29, 9 p. m. If the Mexican Government makes no objection, the consular agent at Cananea may exert his unofficial good offices in every proper way to secure protection of the Chinese in that district. You will so inform him.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 151.07/7.

The American Consul at Nogales to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nogales, May 2, 1912.

The American Consul at Mazatlan telegraphs that the Chinese colony, consisting of four hundred residents, may be compelled to leave Mexico and asks whether permission could be granted for temporary residence, as an act of humanity, at San Francisco or San Diego.

DYE.

File No. 151.07/7.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Consul at Nogales.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 4, 1912.

Forward following to Consul, Mazatlan: Department understands there is no objection to temporary admission of Chinese in the United States as an act of humanity. Inform Department if any seek refuge in this country. Make full report.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 312.11/362.

The American Consul at Mazatlan to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Mazatlan, May 5, 1912.

Your May 4. Chinese colony return thanks for generous act. Permission will not be availed of unless absolutely necessary.

ALGER.

CLAIMS OF AMERICAN CITIZENS AGAINST MEXICO FOR DAMAGES ARISING FROM REVOLUTIONARY DISTURBANCES.[1]

File No. 412.11/2.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

Serial No. 581.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, May 23, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to advise the Department that the Embassy is beginning to receive a number of claims for losses growing out of the present revolution. The Embassy is replying to all claimants that their claims have been placed on file for consideration at such time as the matter for the adjustment of claims is taken up. I trust that this action has the approval of the Department.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 412.00.

Serial 634.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 7, 1911.

SIR: With reference to the matter of the settlement of claims growing out of the damages to lives and property during the recent revolution, I have the honor to advise the Department of the existence of a strong desire on the part of all the diplomatic representatives accredited to this Government to take accordant action in bringing the claims of their respective nationals to the attention of the Mexican authorities. It is the general opinion that such procedure will cause prompt action and that all claims will then be settled upon the same basis, thus obviating any complaints of favoritism or special consideration on the part of those claimants who may think that they have not been adequately indemnified. It is also thought that such a method will be more acceptable to the Mexican Government, and will avoid any feelings of resentment which the urging of one nation or another on account of especially large losses might bring about. In this connection I beg to enclose to the Department, in translation, a copy of a letter from the Spanish Minister at this capital, in which it is suggested that identic action would be the best procedure in dealing with the adjustment of claims. The day after writing me this letter the Spanish Minister sent me a short informal note to indicate that he had trustworthy information to the effect that the Mexican Government has already come to some decision, which it is believed will satisfactorily dispose of this question.

---

[1] For other correspondence pertinent to this subject see Political Affairs, pp. 708, 720, 722, 724–725.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Spanish Minister to the American Ambassador.

SPANISH LEGATION,
Mexico, June 2, 1911.

MR. AMBASSADOR: As agreed in our conversation of this morning, I have the honor to address this letter to your excellency.

I have considered it my duty to lay before your excellency the fact that from the moment that certain foreign representatives had addressed themselves to the Ministry of Foreign Relations in the matter of the sufferings and losses of their countrymen during the recent troubles and had received replies thereto more or less similar, it might be of advantage to us to study in common, as occasion arises, the principles to be defined. These could not but be harmonious and in agreement with one another, and likewise the solution and procedure to be followed would be in accord with the sincerely amicable sentiments and relations which we all endeavour to cultivate with the Government of the Republic.

In the observance, therefore, of the development of this important question, so intimately connected with the definite realization of peace which is so much to be desired both by Mexico and ourselves, I have been of the opinion that we might be disposed and ready to enter upon an exchange of views if the circumstances should indicate the advisability of so doing, and it is with this in mind that I have had the honor of opening the subject with your excellency.

Thanking your excellency for the kind reception given to my suggestion.

I beg [etc.]

B. J. DE COLOGÁN.

File No. 412.00/1.

TheAmerican Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 657.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 15, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to inform the Department that the Sub-Secretary for Foreign Affairs called upon me yesterday and informed me of the appointment by the Mexican Government of a Court of Claims to deal with the claims for damages to life and property growing out of the late revolution. The personnel of the Court is as follows: Lic. José Diego Fernández, Lic. Pedro Lascurain, Ing. A. Roblez Domínguez, Gen. J. Gonzáles Salas, Gen. S. García Cuellar.

There is not much comment to be made upon this personnel further than to say that it is about evenly made up of revolutionary and Government men. Mr. Fernández and Mr. Lascurain are considered to be lawyers of ability; Mr. Roblez Domínguez has been in charge of the revolutionary forces in this part of the country and has acquitted himself well; General Cuellar will be remembered as having been Chief of Staff of President Díaz, the leader of the Federal forces at the battle of Casas Grandes, and lately for a short time Governor of the Federal District; concerning General Salas I have practically no information.

The procedure to be adopted by the Court, its powers, and the time during which it will sit have not as yet been decided. I hope, however, to have additional information on these points at some time in the near future, when I will at once transmit it to the Department.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 412.11/2.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 376.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 16, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 557 [537?][1] of May 10, and No. 581 of May 23, 1911, and approves your action in advising American citizens that their claims filed with the Embassy for indemnity for losses caused by the revolution in Mexico will be given consideration at such time as the matter of the adjustment of claims is taken up. In this connection fifty copies of the Department's circular relative to claims against foreign governments[2] are sent in the pouch with this.

You will transmit copies of this circular to the persons who have filed claims with the Embassy, calling their attention to the importance of conforming as nearly as possible to the rules of this circular in the preparation of their papers, and advising them to strengthen their claims in any way in which in their judgment this may be done. To any other persons communicating to the Embassy their desire to file claims you will transmit copies of the circular and inform each claimant that on receipt of a claim prepared in accordance with the circular the matter will receive careful attention by this Department. You will retain in the Embassy one copy of each of the claims so prepared and transmit the other two copies to the Department.

I am [etc.],

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 412.00/2.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

Serial 672.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 23, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to inform the Department that it has come to the knowledge of the Embassy, through a communication from the American Vice Consul at Manzanillo, that the Mexican Department of Government is seeking, through the Governors of the various States and certain other officials, information as to the extent and character of foreign claims growing out of the late revolution. As the Consul at Manzanillo requested instruction, and as it also seems advisable that there should be uniformity of action in this matter on the part of all Consular officers, I have to-day addressed to the various Consular officers in this country an instruction, a copy of which I enclose herewith.

---

[1] Not printed.
[2] The regular blank issued by the Department with instructions for preparing claims.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.]

The American Ambassador to American Consular Officers in Mexico.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 24, 1911.

The attention of the Embassy having been called to the fact that the Department of Government has requested of all Mexican officials throughout the country a full report as to the damages suffered by foreigners in their persons and property, as a consequence of the recent revolution, desires to say to the American Consular officers in Mexico that if they should be called upon by the State Governors or other Mexican officials for information relative to the damages suffered by American citizens, they should comply with the request by furnishing a list of such cases as have come to their knowledge, stating at the same time that such action is purely provisional, as all discussions relative to claims must necessarily be carried on by the Embassy at Mexico City, which reserves all rights of reclamation for damages suffered, pending the receipt of definite instructions from the Department of State at Washington.

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 412.00.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 398.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 27, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 634, of the 7th instant, with reference to the desire of the diplomatic representatives accredited to Mexico to take concerted action in bringing the claims of their respective nationals to the attention of the Mexican authorities with a view to securing prompt action and the settlement of all claims upon the same basis, thus obviating any complaints of favoritism or special consideration on the part of those claimants who may think that they have not been properly indemnified. In this connection you enclose a copy of a note from the Spanish Minister and state that he has since indicated to you that he has trustworthy information to the effect that the Mexican Government has already come to some decision which it is believed will satisfactorily dispose of the question.

The Department would like to receive a report from you in regard to what plans, if any, there may have been proposed, or any suggestions that may have been made among the members of the diplomatic corps with reference to this matter.

It may be observed in this connection that this Department hopes that a speedy and satisfactory settlement of the claims of American citizens may be effected, and for this purpose it is willing to acquiesce in any proper and adequate plan of adjustment.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 412.11/5.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 692.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 30, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's instruction No. 376 of the 16th instant, relative to the preparation of claims by American citizens for damages resulting from the late revolution, and to say that I have complied with the directions therein given.

I enclose to the Department a copy of a letter which I have addressed to the forty-three claimants who have already filed claims with the Embassy, and also a copy of a list of these claimants with their addresses.[1] An identic letter, with the exception of the omission of the last two sentences, will be sent to all new claimants.

I presume the Department has instructed all American consular officers in Mexico in the matter of the preparation of claims, and for this reason I have said nothing to them with regard thereto.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.]

The American Ambassador to American Claimants.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, June 30, 1911.

SIR: Acting under instructions from the Department of State at Washington with regard to American claims against the Government of Mexico growing out of the recent revolution, I inclose to you a copy of a circular prescribing the manner in which claims should be prepared. Your attention is called to the great importance of conforming as nearly as possible to the rules of this circular, and you are advised to strengthen your claim in any way in which in your judgment this may be done. On receipt of a claim prepared in accordance with this circular the matter will receive careful attention by the Department of State.

It is suggested that even if your claim has already been presented, it will be greatly to your advantage to prepare such claims anew, so as to conform to the provisions of the circular. This will greatly aid in expediting its treatment.

I am [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 412.00.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 712.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, July 6th, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's instruction No. 398 of June 27th last, in which I am instructed to report relative to such plans as may have been proposed or such suggestions as may have been made with reference to the question of claims growing out of the Mexican revolution by members of the resident Diplomatic Corps.

---

[1] Not printed.

Since the agitation and discussion among the diplomatic representatives which occurred immediately after the creation of the Mexican Claims Commission there seems to have been a disposition manifested not to proceed hastily, but to await developments which may reveal the purpose and policy of this Government relative to the question of the settlement of claims.

A temporary Court of Claims, of excellent personnel, has been organized and is expected to open its sittings in the near future, giving preferential consideration to the Chinese claims, which are vastly greater in number and pecuniary size to those of any other nation. A copy and translation of the rules of procedure of this Claims Commission is transmitted herewith to the Department, and I think it advisable that I should be instructed, at as early a date as is convenient, as to what attitude the Embassy shall take toward this Claims Commission and in what manner it shall advise American claimants.

In the meantime, the Embassy is taking steps to ascertain the names of all American claimants and is instructing them as to the form in which their claims shall be prepared for presentation.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure.—Translation.—Extracts.]

Rules of the Mexican Claims Commission.

The Constitutional President ad interim of the Republic, exercising the powers vested in him by Section I, Article 85, of the Federal Constitution, and in accordance with Article 2 of the Decree of May 31 last, has seen fit to issue the following:

RULES OF THE CONSULTATIVE CLAIMS COMMISSION.

ARTICLE I. In accordance with Article 2 of the Decree of May 31 last, a Consultative Commission shall be established in the City of Mexico, beginning July 1st of this year, which shall have charge of the examination and elucidation of claims made against the National Treasury because of injuries to the private estate of persons or for damages directly growing out of the revolution of November, 1910; and to consult with the Department of Finance with reference to the legal foundation or nonfoundation of said claims, and upon the the amount of the indemnity, if any, to which claimants may be entitled.

Articles II to VII concern the organization, manner of voting, place and time of meeting, etc.

ARTICLE VIII. All claims shall be submitted in writing, accompanied by the proper proofs, and shall be received from the 1st day of July to the 30th of September of this year. After the expiration of this term no administrative cognizance shall be taken of any claim.

ARTICLE IX. Claims shall be registered and taken up in the order of their filing with the Commission; and when several of them are filed at the same time they shall be given the alphabetical order of the last names of the claimants.

ARTICLE X. The Secretary shall keep a register [etc.].

ARTICLE XI. Claims growing out of forcible occupation, supply of money, arms, horses, or effects, or from loans exacted by the chiefs of the revolution, shall be submitted with the proper orders, certificates of delivery, receipts, and other documents proving the claim.

ARTICLE XII. The preparation of the records up to the time when they are ready for decision shall be made by means of instructions given by one of the members of the Commission, and to that end the business shall be divided among the members.

ARTICLE XIII. When the claimants do not prosecute their claims personally but through attorneys, the capacity of the latter shall be proved by a duly certified power of attorney, regardless of the amount of the claim.

ARTICLE XIV. The claimants shall have the right to ask for a fixed term within which to file proof, which shall not exceed two months from the date on which such term is fixed. During such term all proofs usually contemplated by the law, except those of interrogatories, may be submitted, and in due time they shall be considered in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure of the Federal District. The term of proof shall not be limited for the Commission, and therefore as long as it remains in existence it shall have the right, at any time prior to rendering its decision in any case, to institute such inquiries therein as it may deem advisable.

ARTICLE XV. The Commission may also accept any means of proof different from those provided in the above-mentioned Code of Civil Procedure which, in its judgment, may be reasonably sufficient to cause conviction concerning the concrete case in question, leaving the estimate of such means of proof to the reasonable opinion of the Commission; but the fact that they may be taken into consideration in some concrete case shall not serve as a precedent which will necessarily cause such means to have the same effect in other cases.

ARTICLE XVI. All public offices of the federal, states, or municipal government, as well as the chiefs of the army and of revolutionary forces, shall be required to supply information, data, and copies of such documents as the Commission may ask in order to establish and ascertain claims.

ARTICLE XVII. In case any proof or proceeding is to be had outside of the capital the Commission may appoint for the purpose any authority of the Republic, be it federal or local; and if, because of the amount of the claim or for some other reason, the Commission considers it advisable, it can designate the secretary or any of the commissioners to go to the place in question for the purpose of said proceeding, receiving, in case it is necessary, through the Department of Finance, the assistance of the federal or local authorities.

ARTICLE XVIII. The decisions reached by the Commission during the course of the case shall be personally brought to the attention of the interested party, if the latter appears at the office within three days from the date in which they are passed, or, in case the party does not appear, he shall receive information in writing from the secretary, who shall address his communication to the domicile mentioned for that purpose in the first application. In the absence of a given domicile notices shall be published in the "Diario Oficial."

ARTICLE XIX. When there may be any reason to suspect that false proofs or documents have been submitted and, in general, that a punishable act has been committed, the case shall be brought to the attention of the proper authority, suspending all action and reporting the case to the Department of Finance to the end that it may prescribe such action as may be proper.

ARTICLE XX. When the term of proof has expired, there being no further proceedings, the record shall be placed at the disposal of the claimant in the Office of the Commission to the end that if he sees fit, he may allege in writing, within a term of fifteen working days, whatever he may consider favorable to his interests. At the expiration of the fifteen days' term, the Commission shall subject the case to discussion in connection with the decision submitted by such member of the Commission as may have taken cognizance of the matter, without prejudice to the right which all the other commissioners shall have to personally study the record before voting, if they so desire.

ARTICLE XXI. The final report rendered by the Commission in each case shall be made in the usual form for legal decisions and shall close with concrete conclusions concerning the propriety or impropriety of the claim and the amount, if any, of the indemnity to be paid the claimant. If from the examination of the claim it would appear that a solution strictly in accordance with the law is not possible, the Commission shall so state it in its report and shall propose to the Department of Finance such equitable bases as in its judgment may be adopted to effect a settlement with the party in interest.

ARTICLE XXII. When the records are completed, with the report of the Commission, their originals shall be sent to the Department of Finance for such definite decision as may lie.

ARTICLE XXIII. The Commission shall end its labors no later than December 31 of the present year.

ARTICLES XXIV to XXVI. [Pay of members and employees of the Commission.]

MEXICO, June 30, 1911.

MADERO,
Secretary of Finance.

File No. 412.11/5.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 422.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 12, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 692 of the 30th ultimo in which, in connection with the preparation of claims [etc.].

Your action in this matter is approved by the Department, and in accordance with your request fifty copies of the claims circular are herewith enclosed, together with a copy of an identic instruction sent to the consular officers in Mexico.

You are instructed to advise persons communicating in the future with the Embassy in regard to claims, in the sense of the enclosed instruction.

You will retain two copies of each of the claims, prepared in accordance with the Department's claims circular and filed in the Embassy, and forward the other copy to the Department. On receipt of instructions from the Department you will transmit a copy of each claim to the Foreign Office. In the meantime you will, in cases where such action has not already been taken, submit a brief statement to the Foreign Office in regard to each claim which has been filed in the Embassy, setting forth the name of the claimant, the amount of the claim and the grounds on which it is based.

In this connection you are referred to the Department's instruction No. 376 of June 16, 1911, which you will observe, owing to recent developments pertaining to the matter of the settlement of the claims in question, is slightly modified in so far as concerns, first, the information which you will furnish persons addressing you in regard to claims, and, secondly, the action to be taken by you with reference to papers filed in the Embassy by claimants.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 412.00/2.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 424.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 13, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 692 [672] of the 23d ultimo, enclosing copy of an instruction addressed by you to the consular officers in Mexico relative to the course to be pursued by them if they should be called upon by the State Governors or other Mexican officials for information in regard to the damages suffered by American citizens in consequence of the recent revolution.

In approving your action in this matter the Department desires to call your attention to instructions which have been issued by it to consular officers, a copy of which has been sent to you, together with further instructions as to the Embassy's action.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 412.11/8.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

Serial 734.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, July 20, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to refer to the Department's instruction No. 376 of the 16th ultimo, relative to American claims growing out of the recent revolution in this country, and to transmit to the Department a copy in translation of a note just received from the Mexican Foreign Office, requesting to know whether it is desired that claims that have been presented by this Embassy be submitted to the consultative claims commission, the organization of which was reported to the Department in the Embassy's despatch No. 657 of the 15th ultimo.

I beg to request, prior to replying to the Mexican Foreign Office, that the Department will give me an expression of its views in this matter. I take it that the Department cannot consider itself bound with regard to claims by the actions or decisions of this committee, and do not wish, in the absence of instructions, to take any step that would indicate an intention to abide by or subscribe to the committee's resolutions.

I have [etc.]

FRED MORRIS DEARING.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

No. 1830.]

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Mexico, July 13, 1911.

MR. AMBASSADOR: The Consultative Claims Commission has addressed this Department asking for such claims as may have been filed with it on account of damages caused by the recent revolution.

In order to reach the proper conclusion, I beg your excellency to have the kindness to advise me whether it is your desire that such claims be submitted to said commission.

I take the liberty to say to your excellency that the commission was created for the sole purpose of affording private parties, whether natives or foreigners, facilities of procedure, because of its simplicity and brevity, and also with reference to the decision in each case, as it will not be necessary that it be based on legal provisions upon the matter, since all elements of a probatory character, even those of a moral order, will be accepted as decisive.

The decisions of the commission will not prevent the persons in interest when they disagree from resorting to the courts in defense of their rights.

I avail [etc.]

BARTOLOMÉ CARBAJAL Y ROSAS.

File No. 412.11/14.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 762.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, August 2, 1911.

SIR: With reference to the general subject of American claims growing out of the recent revolution, and especially to the Department's instruction No. 422 of the 12th ultimo, I have the honor to enclose to the Department a copy of an amended letter based upon the Department's most recent instructions, which is being sent to all American claimants as occasion demands. I beg to enclose also a sample copy of the notes comprising the brief statement of each claim on file at the Embassy, which the Department directed me to submit to the Foreign Office, and also a copy of the usual reply made by the Foreign Office to each note that is sent in.

I have [etc.]

FRED MORRIS DEARING.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Embassy's revised circular claims letter.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, July 31, 1911.

SIR: The Embassy has received your recent letter in regard to your claim for damages suffered on accunt of the late revolution and will in due time bring your claim to the attention of the Mexican Government. In the meantime, in accordance with instructions from the Department of State at Washington, I enclose to you a copy of a circular prescribing the manner in which claims should be prepared, calling your particular attention to the great importance of conforming as nearly as possible to its rules and the necessity of strengthening the evidence of your losses in every way in which this may be done. Upon receipt of your claim properly prepared two copies thereof will be placed in the Embassy's files and the third will be transmitted to the Department of State, for its consideration and subsequent instructions in the matter to the Embassy.

The Department of State has been informed that the Government of Mexico has taken steps to create a commission to consider revolutionary claims, and directs the Embassy to notify all American claimants that if this information proves accurate and a satisfactory commission is organized it will be necessary, in all probability, for claimants to present their claims personally to this commission.

I am [etc.]

FRED MORRIS DEARING.

[Inclosure 2.]

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Sub-Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

No. 850.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, July 28, 1911.

MR. SUB-SECRETARY: Acting under instructions from my Government, I have the honor to submit to your excellency the following brief statement relative to the claim of the American Grocery Company S. A. against the Government of Mexico for losses growing out of the disturbances attendant upon the recent revolution. This statement will place your excellency in possession of all the essential facts concerning this claim.

As my Government has not yet determined precisely what will be its action in regard to claims, I beg to point out to your excellency that the submittal of this statement is not to be regarded as a presentation of such claim, and to say that formal presentation of the same will be made later when I shall have received the proper instructions from the Department of State at Washington.

Statement:

Claim of the American Grocery Company S. A.

Amount of claim—One hundred and forty pesos, ($140.00).

The American Grocery Company S. A. makes claim against the Government of Mexico in the above amount on account of the destruction of the plate-glass windows of its premises at Avenida 16 Septiembre 12, Mexico, D. F., by a lawless mob at about 9.30 p. m. on May 24th, 1911, and supports its assertion that the said windows were broken by the mob by the sworn testimony of five eyewitnesses. The cost of the windows destroyed is vouched for by the firm of E. Pelandini and Son, who are dealers in plate-glass for windows.

I avail [etc.]

FRED MORRIS DEARING.

[Inclosure 3.—Translation.]

The Sub-Secretary for Foreign Affairs to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 152.]

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Mexico, July 31, 1911.

MR. CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES: This office has received your note No. 850 of the 28th instant, relative to the claim that will be presented by the "American Grocery Company S. A." for damages suffered as a result of the disturbances occasioned by the late revolution.

In reply I have the honor to say to you that the matter has been duly noted and will be decided at the appropriate time in accordance with the principles of international law.

I have [etc.]

B. CARBAJAL Y ROSAS.

File No. 412.11/8.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 476.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 17, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 734 of the 20th ultimo, transmitting a note in which the Foreign Office asks you whether it is desired that claims which have been presented by the Embassy be submitted to the Consultative Claims Commission, and requesting instructions for your guidance in answering the inquiry.

Regarding the commission established by the Mexican Government, you will advise that Government that in view of the rule of international law requiring claimants against a government to resort to local tribunals for remedy in the matter of the wrongs which they alleged, the Government of the United States could obviously have no ground to object to the establishment of any appropriate tribunal or the endowing of any existing tribunal with the authority to hear and pass upon claims of American citizens for losses sustained during the recent disturbed conditions in that country, providing access to the court is easy and prosecution of the claims before the court is not made unduly onerous. The Government of the United States, therefore, would be inclined in the first instance to refer its citizens to any appropriately constituted tribunal authorized to hear and determine their complaints.

Obviously it follows as a necessary corollary from the rules of international law stated above that should the American claimants feel that they had not received justice at the hands of such tribunals so constituted, to which they had in good faith applied, it would be incumbent upon the Government of the United States to consider the measures it should take to correct any failure of any such tribunal to adjudge any given case in accordance with the principles of law and equity involved.

In view of these principles, American citizens will be instructed to present to and prosecute before the appropriately constituted tribunals any claims which they may have against the Government of Mexico and which may fall within the jurisdiction of such tribunals, the question of diplomatic representations in any given case being reserved for future consideration.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 412.00/4.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 489.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 22, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received the Ambassador's No. 712 of the 6th ultimo transmitting [etc.].

With reference to the instructions requested by the Ambassador in this despatch, you are referred to the Department's No. 476 of the 17th instant, answering your No. 734 of the 20th ultimo.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 412.11/14.

No. 518.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 31, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 762 of the 2d instant, in regard to American claims [etc.].

In view of the fact that, as reported in the Embassy's No. 712 of July 6, 1911, a commission apparently has now been organized by the Mexican Government to consider claims, it would be desirable that in communicating with persons who may address the Embassy in the future in regard to claims a slight alteration in the statement respecting the claims commission should be made in the last paragraph of the letter which the Embassy is sending to claimants.

As claims filed in the Embassy are brought to the attention of the Mexican Government, although not formally presented to it, it seems appropriate that claimants should be advised of this fact. It is accordingly suggested that you alter the last paragraph of the letter addressed by you to claimants so that it may read as follows:

> The Department of State has been informed that the Government of Mexico has taken steps to create a commission to consider revolutionary claims, and directs the Embassy to notify all American claimants that, from the information in the possession of the Department in regard to the proposed organization and procedure of this commission, it will be necesary for claimants to present their claims personally before the commission. However, in order in the first instance to safeguard and conserve the interests of claimants, in accordance with the Department's instructions, claims filed in the Embassy will be promptly called to the attention of the Mexican Government.

In acknowledging receipt of claims transmitted to the Embassy, which have been properly prepared in triplicate, you will advise the claimants in regard to the disposition of their claims in the sense of the identic letter above referred to, whenever this has not already been done. Pending further developments in the matter of the settlement of claims care should be taken that claimants are fully advised regarding the status of their claims.

With reference to the note addressed by you to the Foreign Office, submitting a brief statement of each claim filed in the Embassy, you are instructed to eliminate from this statement any reference to the evidence relied on by the claimants to support their claims. It seems preferable that you should state in this note to the Foreign Office that final presentation of claims will be deferred pending the receipt by the Embassy of proper instructions from the Department, rather than that formal presentation of claims will be made later on receipt of instructions from the Department.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 812.032/4.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 948.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 19, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to the Department clippings from the Mexican Herald and El Diario Oficial, of this city, containing the text in English and Spanish of the message read by President de la Barra on the occasion of the opening of the first period of the Mexican Congress, on the 16th instant, for the fiscal year 1911-1912.[1] The attention of the Department is especially called to that portion of the message which relates to the attitude of the Mexican Government concerning the payment of claims growing out of the recent Revolution.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 412.00/14.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, September 20, 1911—8 p. m.

The President of the Claims Commission is said to have announced at one of the sittings that Mexican claims would be given preference, and that after these have been satisfied foreign claimants would be paid from the residue. This view is probably shared by the other members of the Commission. If the Department approves I shall address a note to the Foreign Office asking if the attitude of the President of the Commission has been correctly reported.

American claimants have not been notified formally by the Embassy of the sitting of the Commission, as the views of the Department on that point have not been communicated hither. Considerable confusion exists among American claimants owing to the fact that the Embassy, in the absence of definite instructions as to the ultimate action of the Department, has been unable to advise claimants with certitude.

WILSON.

File No. 412.00/14.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 22, 1911.

If you consider the information sent in your September 20, 8 p. m., to be well founded, you will immediately address a note to the [1] Printed in For. Rel. 1911, p. 517.

---

Foreign Office in the sense you suggest. Regarding reports of confusion of American claimants, the statement incorporated in Department's No. 518, August 31, should have sufficiently advised claimants regarding the presentation of claims to the Commission. Positive direction to present claims is unnecessary, as the Mexican Government may of right set up a tribunal to hear claimants; and it is impracticable because of the Department's lack of information as to whether the Commission's awards would be generally acceptable as doing substantial justice. You should furnish such information as soon as possible.

If you find the Commission making just and equitable decisions, and that insufficient time remains to enable the rest of the American claimants to present claims, and if the Foreign Office is then interrogated as proposed by you, add to such inquiry the statement that if the Mexican Government's views accord with those of the President of the Commission, it would seem fruitless further to resort to the Commission, and accordingly this Government will be obliged to take up American claims diplomatically, unless some other tribunal shall be promptly formed or empowered to consider on their merits alien claims arising from the recent disturbances; that if, however, the Mexican Government does not concur in the view of the President of the Commission, and foreign and Mexican claims are to be treated on the same basis, then this Government must request that the term of the Commission be extended so as to permit all American claimants to present their claims, it having been impossible heretofore for all of them to do so because of the unsettled conditions in Mexico that still exist.

But if you find the work of the Commission unsatisfactory by reason of generally unjust or inequitable awards or because of discrimination, you will then address the Foreign Office, stating the reported position of the President of the Commission, and that this Government can not under the circumstances consider the Commission as a proper tribunal for passing upon foreign claims, and that before taking up claims diplomatically the Department desires to know whether the Mexican Government contemplates the establishment of an adequate tribunal.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 412.00/17.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 2, 1911.

In practical compliance with Department's September 22, 4 p. m., I addressed two notes to the Foreign Office, one calling attention to the insistent rumor relative to the views of the President of the Commission and stating that if these views were shared by a majority of the Commission my Government would regretfully feel compelled to advise American claimants not to resort thereto. To this note the Foreign Office has replied that it will investigate the report, but that the alleged views of the Commission's President were not in any event shared by the Government.

My second note requested an extension of time for filing claims to November first. The Foreign Office replies that the Government is disposed to grant this request and will give the Embassy a definite answer soon.

The Commission has recently been increased by two reputable members, which seems to increase confidence in it.

WILSON.

File No. 412.11/32.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 9, 1911.

The Foreign Office agrees to extend time for filing claims of American claimants, but does not desire to extend this privilege beyond American claims and therefore requests that any of these not already presented to the Commission be transmitted to the Foreign Office, which will thereupon bring them before the Commission in such a manner as not to permit the right of filing to some ten thousand Mexican claimants, consideration of which can be prevented by this method.

In view of the fact that three quarters of the American claims have not been filed with the Commission, I request instructions.

WILSON.

File No. 412.11/32.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 11, 1911.

Claimants who send their claims directly to the Department are being advised as follows:

> In case you have not, in accordance with the Department's suggestion heretofore given, already presented your claim against the Mexican Government to the Consultative Commission established by that Government for the hearing of such claims, the Department again advises you that the Mexican Government has constituted a Consultative Claims Commission, before which all claims against the Mexican Government for damages suffered by individuals or companies in connection with the recent political disturbances in Mexico may, in the first instance, be submitted. Moreover, you are advised that inasmuch as it appears that up to this time not all American claims have been presented to the Commission, and inasmuch as the time for filing the claims as fixed by the decree establishing the Commission has expired, the Department has arranged that such claims as have not yet been filed before the Commission may be submitted for its consideration by informal presentation through diplomatic channels. As two of the copies of your claim, as it has been filed in this Department, are now on file at the American Embassy at Mexico City the Ambassador will, upon specific request, unless you have already presented your claim to the Commission, file with the Mexican Foreign Office for presentation to the Commission one set of the papers already sent to the Embassy, with the distinct understanding, however, that the Ambassador can do nothing more than this, and that you must yourself, personally or by attorney, take all other needful measures in the premises. If you desire that your claim be thus presented to this Commission through the informal use of diplomatic channels it will be necessary for you immediately to advise either the Department or the American Embassy in Mexico City by telegraph of your wishes. You will understand that by thus presenting your claim to the Mexican Foreign Office the Government of the United States does not pass upon the propriety, equity, justice, or legality of your claim. These questions are left for further consideration and final determination in accordance with the rules and principles of international law applicable and controlling, when, if at all, it shall become necessary to consider the question of formally presenting your complaint as a diplomatic claim. The Mexican Government has heretofore announced that if the parties appearing before the Commission are dissatisfied with the findings of that tribunal, as approved or modified by the Mexican Treasury, they may pursue their judicial remedies in the ordinary courts. Inasmuch as any diplomatic representations regarding American claims will, under the principles of international law which control such matters, almost surely involve the question of the exhaustion of local remedies as afforded by the Mexican Government, and inasmuch as a failure so to exhaust the local remedies will almost certainly be pleaded by the Mexican Government in bar of representations by this Government in behalf of any claim so situated, the Department again suggests to you the desirability, if not indeed necessity, of presenting your claim to this Consultative Commission. It is understood that the Commission is to be guided not only by technical legal considerations but also by the broad equities of the case, and therefore in determining the course to be followed you will obviously have in mind the legal character of your claim and whether or not, under the principles of international law involved, the Mexican Government can be regarded as under any positive duty to make compensation for the damages you may have suffered in the course of the recent revolutionary activities.

You will immediately so notify all claimants filing claims directly with the Embassy, and will direct all consuls who have received claims and sent them to the Embassy similarly and immediately to advise claimants. In informally presenting claims to the Foreign Office for submission to the Commission in accordance with the specific request of claimants you will reserve all rights hereafter to make diplomatic representations in regard to any claim concerning which the determination of the Claims Commission seems not in accord with those principles of international law, equity and justice which should control the disposition of the given case.

ADEE.

File No. 412.11/37.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1019.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, October 21, 1911.

SIR: Referring to the Department's telegraphic instruction, I have the honor to transmit herewith copies in duplicate of a circular to American claimants asking compensation for injuries to person or property during the recent revolution, which is intended to be conformable to the Department's instructions therein contained.

I also transmit herewith duplicate copies of the form of note to the Foreign Office used in the transmission of claims, to be subsequently delivered to the Consultative Claims Commission.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

[Inclosure 1.]

Circular to American Claimants.

AMERICAN EMBASSY, MEXICO.

This Embassy has been instructed by the Department of State at Washington to notify American claimants that in case they have not, in accordance with the Department's suggestion embodied in previous circular letters sent out by this Embassy, already presented to the Consultative Commission established by the Mexican Government their claims against that Government growing out of the recent revolutionary activities in this country, all such claims, either of companies or of individuals may, in the first instance, be submitted to this Commission, and that inasmuch as it appears that up to this time not all American claims have been presented to the Commission, and inasmuch as the time for filing claims, as fixed by the decree establishing the Commission, has expired, arrangements have been made for the filing of claims by informal presentation through diplomatic channels.

As two copies of each claim that have been prepared in accordance with the Department's circular and presented to this Embassy are now on file here, the Embassy will, upon specific request, file with the Mexican Foreign Office, for presentation to the Commission, one copy thereof, together with its accompanying documents, provided, of course, that such claim has not already been presented to the Commission through some other channel. In this connection, however, the Embassy desires to emphasize the fact that it can do no more than this, and that each claimant must, either personally or by attorney, take all other needful measures in the premises. Each claimant that desires the Embassy to take this action should immediately so advise the Embassy by telegraph, understanding, of course, that in so presenting claims to the Mexican Foreign Office neither the Embassy nor the Government of the United States passes upon the propriety, equity, justice, or legality of such claims. These questions are left for further consideration and final determination in accordance with the rules and principles of international law applicable and controlling, when, if at all, it shall become necessary to consider the question of formally presenting complaints of claimants through diplomatic channels as a diplomatic claim. The Mexican Government has already announced that if the parties appearing before the Commission are dissatisfied with the findings of that tribunal, as approved or modified by the Mexican Treasury, they may pursue their judicial remedies in the ordinary courts.

The Department of State further directs the Embassy to say that inasmuch as any diplomatic representations regarding American claims will, under the principles of international law which control such matters, almost surely involve the question of the exhaustion of local remedies as afforded by the Mexican Government, and inasmuch as a failure so to exhaust the local remedies will almost certainly be pleaded by the Mexican Government in bar of representation by this Government, in behalf of any claim so situated, it would seem desirable, if not indeed necessary, for claimants to present their claims to this Consultative Commission. It is understood that the Commission is to be guided not only by technical legal considerations, but by the broad equities of the case; claimants should, therefore, have in mind the legal character of their claims and whether or not under the principles of international law involved, the Mexican Government can be regarded as under any positive duty to make compensation for the damages suffered.

MEXICO CITY, October 12, 1911.

[Inclosure 2.]

Note transmitting claims.

File 620.
Serial ——.

AMERICAN EMBASSY, MEXICO.

The American Ambassador presents his compliments to his excellency the Sub-Secretary for Foreign Affairs and, acting under instructions from his Government and in behalf of and at the specific request of ——— ———, has the honor to transmit herewith a memorial of the latter's claim against the Mexican Government, growing out of the recent unsettled conditions in this country, and begs to request that this memorial be submitted to the Consultative Claims Commission before the first of November of the present year. In informally presenting to the Foreign Office, for transmission to the Consultative Claims Commission, the memorial enclosed herewith the American Ambassador reserves all rights to make diplomatic representations hereafter in regard to any claim concerning which the determination of the Consultative Claims Commission seems not to accord with those principles of international law, equity, and justice which should control the disposition of the given case.

Mr. Wilson avails himself of this occasion to renew to his excellency Mr. Carbajal y Rosas the assurance of his high consideration.

Mexico City, October —, 1911.

Enclosure as stated.

File No. 412.11/36.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, October 28, 1911.

The President refuses to grant a further extension of time for filing claims before the Claims Commission.

Wilson.

File No. 412.11/36.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, November 1, 1911.

The Department will discuss with confidential representative the question of extension of time for filing claims before the Claims Commission and advise you of the result.

Knox.

File No. 412.11/39.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 613.]

Department of State,
Washington, November 7, 1911.

Sir: The Department has received your No. 1026 of the 25th ultimo,[1] transmitting correspondence with the law firm of Coldwell & Sweeny, of El Paso, Texas, in regard to the presentation of the claims of several of their clients.

The Department approves the action taken by you in this case, in advising Messrs. Coldwell & Sweeny that no American rights will be sacrificed or imperiled by the presentation of claims for the action of the Consultative Claims Commission, as the United States has in no case waived the rights of any American citizen to present his claims through the diplomatic channels should the findings of the Commission not be in accordance with the principles of justice and international law.

The Department desires at the same time to express a word of caution with reference to the general matters treated of in your letter of October 23, 1911, to Messrs. Coldwell & Sweeny. You will appreciate the necessity of saying nothing to any claimant which could be in any way susceptible of an interpretation that this Government had espoused any particular claim, since the facts are that the Department has not yet attempted to pass upon either the merits or the legal sufficiency of any of the claims which have heretofore been presented to it, these questions being left to consideration when, if ever, it becomes necessary to consider the matter of presenting the claims diplomatically.

---

[1] Not printed.

In connection with American claims for losses at the hands of revolutionists, you should have also clearly in mind the principle which has been acted upon by our own Government, namely, that where an armed insurrection has gone beyond the control of the parent government, the general rule is that such government is not responsible for damages done to foreigners by the insurgents. (See Moore's Digest, vol. vi, p. 949 et seq.) The Department is under the apprehension that this principle may be found to operate unfavorably towards a great many American claims if they are to be pressed diplomatically or to be taken before an international claims commission. It is for this reason that it has somewhat urged that American claimants should present their claims to the Consultative Claims Commission, in the hope that they might receive something from the Commission, even though their claims were not such as under the principles of international law would require a compensatory payment by the Mexican Government.

Another matter which is brought out by the letter of Messrs. Coldwell & Sweeny and which you should carefully note in your correspondence upon claims, is the apparent effort to place upon this Department and upon the Embassy the onus of advising American claimants regarding the steps which they should take for the settlement of their claims, as also of advising them of the tribunals which Mexico may establish for the hearing and determining of such claims. This, of course, is an erroneous view. Having in mind the principle which requires that (save as to certain rather well-defined exceptions not, it is believed, applicable to the present situation) a claimant must, before invoking diplomatic assistance, exhaust his local remedies, it is quite obviously necessary for American claimants themselves to make sure they have met this requirement and they, and not the Department or the Embassy, must in the first instance become fully advised regarding the tribunals to which they should resort. Neither the Department nor the Embassy can be charged with any such responsibility.

I am [etc.]

Alvey A. Adee.

File No. 412.11/36.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, November 21, 1911.

Renew request for extension of time for filing claims before Claims Commission to January 1, 1912. The time originally fixed seems to the Department too short, as claimants naturally first presented their claims to this Government, and some have not been able to present claims after receiving definite information regarding the Commission, and furthermore the Department has been unable, after consulting claimants concerning their desires as to submission of claims to the Commission, to forward them to the Embassy within the fixed time. The short extension suggested by the Department would, in its opinion, permit the presentation of claims by all those wishing to present them, and would avoid any possible difficulties regarding them.

Knox.

File No. 412.11/42.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1083.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, November 22, 1911.

Sir: I have the honor to report to the Department that this Embassy is at present being actively and repeatedly requested by American citizens having claims against the Mexican Government for injuries to person or property growing out of the recent revolution, and by the attorneys for such American citizens as find it impossible to attend to the matter in person, to present and press their claims before the Mexican Government. In the absence of any instruction from the Department defining its attitude toward these claims, I am obliged to make reply to all communications of this nature by stating that the Embassy is awaiting instructions from Washington, and that whenever these are received all cases which have been properly executed and transmitted to the Embassy will receive its careful attention and earnest support. Under these circumstances I think it expedient to say to the Department that I believe a general instruction in the matter of claims should be sent hither as soon as may be compatible with a careful study of the interests and points involved.

I am informed that the payment of those claims which are adjudged just by the Consultive Claims Commission will be delayed for some time but that their payment will eventually be provided for in bill which will be submitted to the Federal Congress. I have, therefore, thought it best to defer urgent action in connection with any special case until all claims shall have been filed with this Embassy and have received the approval of the Department, and I further believe that all American claims which have not been submitted to the Consultive Claims Commission should be submitted en masse through diplomatic channels. This method, if approved by the Department, will permit of all claims of a certain class or character being settled according to a single rule, and will, in my judgment, simplify and expedite the procurement of justice for American claimants. I earnestly trust that the Department may be able to give this matter its consideration very soon, as the Embassy is becoming involved in a large correspondence relative to claims, which is of an irritating and pressing character and to which it has at the present moment no authority to give satisfaction.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 412.11/41.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, November 25, 1911.

The period for filing American claims will be extended until December 31st. I shall immediately send an advisory circular letter to all claimants of record here. Claims will be presented through the Foreign Office and I shall at once file those here which were barred on account of late arrival.

WILSON.

File No. 412.11/41.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 27, 1911.

Convey to the Foreign Office the expression of this Government's appreciation of the courtesy of the Mexican Government in extending the time for the presentation of claims.

KNOX.

File No. 412.11/42.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 652.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 2, 1911.

SIR: The Department is in receipt of your despatch No. 1083 of the 22nd ultimo, in which you report that [etc.].

With reference to your request for a general instruction in the matter of these claims, the Department refers you to its telegram of October 11, 1911, communicating to you the substance of a circular which was sent by the Department to persons who had transmitted claims directly to it, and instructing you to advise in the sense of this circular claimants who had filed claims with the Embassy. A copy of this circular is enclosed herewith.

Your attention is invited to the statements contained in this circular and likewise in that transmitted by the Embassy to claimants under date of October 12, 1911,[1] and to the effect that while the Embassy would on specific request from claimants present their claims informally to the Foreign Office for presentation to the Consultative Commission, the Embassy could do nothing more than this, and that it would be necessary for claimants, either personally or by attorney, to take all other needful measures in the premises. If further assistance is solicited from the Embassy by claimants whose claims have been presented by the Embassy to the Foreign Office for submission to the Consultative Commission, it would seem sufficient for the Embassy to call attention to the information already given such claimants in the circular letters referred to above.

---

[1] Inclosed to the Department October 21.

The Department approves of your purpose, as stated in your telegram of November 25, 1911, to address a circular to all claimants on record in the Embassy, advising them of the extension of time granted by the Mexican Government for the presentation of claims of American citizens to the Consultative Commission. As copies of all claims prepared in triplicate in accordance with the Department's claims circular are now on file in the Embassy except such as have recently been filed in the Department, and as the Department is not advised as to what claims have been presented to the Consultative Commission through the Foreign Office on the requests of the claimants communicated directly to the Embassy, the Department considers it advisable that the Embassy inform of the extension of time for the presentation of claims all claimants on record in the Embassy from whom requests for the submission of claims to the Foreign Office for presentation to the Consultative Commission have not been received; such notification to include claimants who originally filed claims directly in the Department, copies of which claims have been transmitted to the Embassy.

The Department presumes that claimants who have recently filed claims with the Embassy have been furnished with copies of the Embassy's circular of October 12, 1911, or have been informed of the substance thereof, and that such claimants have been advised by the Embassy to notify it promptly if they desire to have their claims presented to the Foreign Office for submission to the Consultative Commission.

In view of the position previously taken by the Department that claimants must personally prosecute their claims before the Consultative Commission, and in consideration of the fact that the rules of the Commission would seem to contemplate that method of procedure, the Department does not consider that it is in a position to adopt your suggestion that all American claims which have not been submitted to the Consultative Commission be submitted to it en masse through diplomatic channels. However, the Department will be glad to receive a further expression of your views in regard to this matter.

I am [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 412.11/47.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, January 8, 1912.

American claims. You will communicate with the Foreign Office informally in the following sense:

"A profound impression has been made in this country by news of Mexico's settlement of Chinese claims arising from the Torreón massacre. There is much criticism of this Government for what appears to those not familiar with the facts to be its failure to secure a settlement of American claims, particularly those resulting from the killing and wounding of American citizens on American soil at Douglas, Arizona, and El Paso, Texas.

"As is well known, this Government, desiring to embarrass as little as possible the Mexican Government in its present situation, has urged that all American claims should go before the specially established Mexican Claims Commission, even including the claims above specified although these stand on a peculiar footing different from that of any other claims against the Mexican Government since they involve a technical violation of American territory by Mexican forces.

"The Department has always desired and still desires to avoid making diplomatic representations regarding the Agua Prieta and Juárez incidents, but it now finds it necessary to bring these cases informally to the attention of the Mexican Government with a view to hastening the hearing thereof and the early allowance of a generous indemnity to all those injured at Douglas or El Paso and to the families of those who were killed there. Prompt attention to this matter by the Mexican Government would probably prevent congressional action here and so forestall the embarrassments that might be caused to both Governments by the agitation referred to."

Inform the Department of the attitude of the Mexican Government and state whether French, English, Spanish, and German claims are now being settled diplomatically or by reference to the Commission.

Regarding the killing at Alamo of American citizens, and referring to previous correspondence relative thereto, ascertain whether the promised fresh investigation has been completed; and say that this matter is also pressing here and that the information received by the Department indicates that the reports furnished the Mexican Government by its subordinate officers directly concerned in the matter are entirely erroneous, the Americans having been wantonly murdered; in view of all of which, the Department confidently expects that early steps will be taken to punish those guilty of committing the outrage and that the families of the murdered men will be properly indemnified.

KNOX.

File No. 412.11/48.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, January 10, 1912.

Department's January 8. Prior to receipt thereof I had been unofficially notified that the Consultative Claims Commission had decided not to consider claims for loss of life and for personal injury. I therefore addressed an informal note to the Foreign Office, in which I referred especially to the Douglas and El Paso claims and asked that the attitude of the Commission be defined. I have just received

Mr. Calero's informal reply, which says that after consultation with the Treasury his Government believes it will be satisfactory to have the Commission consider claims of this character as well as others. But I am of the opinion that consideration of these claims by the Commission will lead only to delay and irritation, and that such claims should be classified and then be made the subject of direct diplomatic representation, en masse and toutefois [sic]. Public opinion and the attitude of the diplomatic representatives here is at present decidedly unfavorable to the Commission; the representatives of France, Germany and Great Britain are now discussing joint action, identical with that taken by these powers against Cuba after the Spanish war. Four [?] Spanish cases for loss of life and personal injury have been rejected by the Commission; these might form a precedent for nearly all of our cases, except Douglas and El Paso. The only two British cases have both been rejected; the German cases for loss of life and for personal injury have been made the subject of diplomatic treatment; no French cases of this kind have been presented.

I shall await the Department's further instructions before making representations relative to the Douglas and El Paso cases; but with reference to the Alamo claims I shall immediately address the Foreign Office in the sense of the Department's instructions.

WILSON.

File No. 412.11/48.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 13, 1912.

You will make representations regarding Douglas and El Paso incidents as directed in Department's January 8. But in view of your report of the seeming attitude of the Mexican Government, you may if you deem it advisable make them in more urgent terms than the Department has indicated.

The Department desires information regarding the attitude of each of the other powers towards all classes of claims, not merely personal injury claims; also the general attitude of the Commission toward all classes of claims.

KNOX.

File No. 412.11/49.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, January 16, 1912.

All Governments whose nationals have suffered property damages during the recent revolution have submitted claims to the Consultative Claims Commission either through their legations or by suggestion to the claimants to deal directly with the Commission.

All of them are submitting or have advised the submission of all classes of claims to the Commission, with the exception of China and Germany in cases of loss of life or of personal injury.

The Commission is working very slowly. My colleagues inform me that they are dissatisfied with both the lack of industry and the conclusions of the Commission. It is generally believed that it has adopted a policy of elimination rather than of adjudication. There is no system of classification nor any defined attitude except perhaps a disposition to pay vouchers signed by Maderista officers and to refuse to recognize damages caused by mobs or by rural guerilla bands.

No American cases have been settled. Two British cases have been thrown out on the ground of lack of jurisdiction. And yet the Minister for Foreign Affairs tells me that it will not be inappropriate for us to submit our cases to the Commission. This looks like playing for time rather than serious treatment.

I have addressed a strong note to Calero relative to the Alamo cases and have his reply, which contains no direct promise. I will send him today an additional and very forcible note on the frontier cases, and make a personal visit to the President to request preferential attention to these cases.

I recommend diplomatic treatment of the border and Alamo cases, which fall clearly within well-established precedents, and are likely to become matters of public discussion and perhaps criticism. I recommend that for the present the status quo relative to all other cases be maintained.

WILSON.

File No. 412.11/50.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 17, 1912.

Yesterday I presented, very earnestly and insistently, the Alamo and frontier cases. The President inclined to place some of the responsibility on President de la Barra. He promised immediately to instruct Mexican consuls at El Paso and Douglas to ascertain the number and identity of persons injured or killed, with descriptions, circumstances, etc., and immediately to constitute a judicial inquiry of strictly impartial character into the Alamo cases; that immediately following the consuls' reports and the judicial inquiry the matter of settlement will be taken up and disposed of without delay.

I shall notify the Department when these steps are taken, in order that it may make sure that an exact and truthful account may in all the cases be brought to the knowledge of the investigating agents.

WILSON.

File No. 412.11/50.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 18, 1912.

Your January 16. In view of the facts that the Commission was established for hearing and adjusting all claims arising out of the revolution; that under the rules of international law local remedies should be exhausted; that this Government desired not to embarrass the Mexican Government any more than was unavoidable and therefore submitted the border and Alamo cases to the Commission—the Department deems it inadvisable, unless such a course be suggested by the Mexican Government, to attempt to negotiate a direct diplomatic settlement of those cases until the Commission shall have had ample opportunity to consider and pass upon the cases submitted to it or until it makes an award refusing compensation or naming an inadequate sum.

This attitude does not, however, preclude you from pressing diplomatically, and you will so press, for an early consideration of those claims by the Commission (which, being an administrative rather than a judicial body, apparently may be approached by the Executive without incurring the objection of interference with the judiciary) or by some other duly constituted body.

Your January 17. It is obviously proper that the Mexican Government should duly investigate the Douglas and El Paso incidents, but equally obvious that it should have done so long ago. President Madero himself has had months in which to do so, and probably no one knows better than he the facts involved; yet he has apparently done nothing. These points should be brought before him clearly in some appropriate way.

The Department can not determine from your telegram whether upon receipt of the consuls' reports the President will directly discuss a settlement or refer the reports to the Commission; either course will be satisfactory to the Department if executed without needless delay. This Government of course reserves the right to question the findings of the Commission if in its opinion the interests of justice demand it, and to press diplomatically these and all other claims if the Commission fail to take prompt and satisfactory steps. You will formally notify the Mexican Government of this intention.

KNOX.

File No. 412.11/51.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, January 22, 1912.

With reference to the Alamo cases, Calero stated to me to-day that the killing of the three American citizens would be judicially investigated at once under the supervision of the Governor General, Lower California; that, following the report, the cases would be taken up directly with the Embassy, since the Consultative Claims Commission has no jurisdiction over cases of personal injury or loss of life occurring within Mexican territory.

With reference to the Douglas and El Paso cases, he said that the Mexican consuls there would be at once instructed to investigate them all, and would endeavor to settle directly with the claimants; in case of failure so to settle, the claims will be taken up here and, being considered of an international character since the injuries occurred on foreign soil, they would have immediate and preferential consideration after sending to Consultative Claims Commission. Calero thought this method would secure an early adjudication of both the Alamo and frontier cases. If the Department approves it, I should be instructed accordingly and the Department should take the appropriate action relating to the judicial investigation in the Alamo cases, and inform and instruct in the Douglas and El Paso cases.

WILSON.

File No. 412.11/51.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram. –Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 5, 1912.

The Department is advising American claimants at Douglas and El Paso of the substance of your telegram of January 22 regarding the proposed attempt of the Mexican Government to settle through Mexican consular officers there, and is adding:

"In view of all the facts and circumstances of your case, including the possible saving of time and expense on your part, you will probably consider it advisable to endeavor to adjust your claim personally or by attorney with the consular representative of the Mexican Government authorized to act in the matter, provided a reasonably satisfactory settlement can be effected."

The following persons have been so advised: [naming them.] Should it appear from the Embassy's records that there are other claims growing out of the firing across the line, you will advise the claimants in the sense of the Department's communication to claimants referred to above.

It is advisable for you to submit to the Mexican Government the names and addresses of all these claimants, in order to assist the investigations of the Mexican consular officers.

KNOX.

File No. 312.11/94a.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 12, 1912—5 p. m.

The Department receives occasional inquiries whether it is safe for Americans to remain in particular parts of Mexico. The policy of the Department now is to leave all Americans to follow their own judgment on this question, unless at any time a well-defined part of Mexico should become sharply differentiated from the rest of the country as peculiarly perilous. In that case Americans might be advised to leave that locality.

If, later on, contrary to the hopes of this Government, the situation grows steadily worse, the Department will consider the question of instructing all consular officers in Mexico to give public notice, through the press and otherwise, to all Americans in their district that, because of the prevailing lawlessness and the failure of the Government to preserve order and tranquillity, all American citizens are advised for the present to return to their own country and that claims for all losses sustained by this action, or through injury to American citizens or their property, will at the proper time be presented to the Mexican Government.

KNOX.

File No. 412.11/59.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1266.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, February 19, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the matter of the American claims growing out of the recent revolution I have the honor to inform the Department that on February 15th I informally requested Mr. Calero, Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs, to inform me what action had been taken therein. Mr. Calero stated that instructions had already been sent to the Mexican Consul at El Paso to institute an investigation into the matter of the claims growing out of the El Paso-Ciudad Juárez incident. He said that he had no confidence in the Mexican Consul at Douglas and was making a change in the consular representation there in order that the Mexican Government might have the benefit of an intelligent and thorough investigation into the facts. Mr. Calero thought that this contemplated change might be brought about in two or three days. Mr. Calero further said that he had referred the Alamo cases to the Minister of Justice, who is understood to be arranging the method of judicial investigation.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 412.11/59.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 750.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 6, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 1266 of the 19th ultimo, containing the substance of your interview on the 15th [etc.].

You will continue to keep this matter prominently before the eyes of the Mexican Government and to impress them on all appropriate occasions with the necessity of making a liberal and early adjustment of all these claims.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 412.11/67.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 8, 1912.

Congressmen from Texas state that Mexican consuls at El Paso and Douglas have made no apparent effort to adjust American claims and that there is fresh ground for dissatisfaction and probability of action by Congress. You will immediately call the attention of the Foreign Office to the promises it has made and point out the inability of this Department to understand the delay; you will urge immediate action and request that the Mexican Government instruct said consuls immediately to announce, in such a way that all claimants may know, that they are prepared to arrange the settlement of their claims at a specified time and place at which the claimants may present their claims either personally or by attorney. Also state that the Department is instructing the American consuls at Ciudad Juárez and Nogales to place themselves at the disposal of the Mexican consuls for the purpose of reaching the American claimants and securing such a presentation of their claims as may be appropriate.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 412.11/64.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 9, 1912.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs says the delay in taking up the claims has been unavoidable owing to the extraordinary amount of work thrown on the consuls by the disorders. His plan involves the transfer of the consul at Laredo to Douglas and a consequent general shift of consular officers due to the incompetence of several. A reply from the Governor of Coahuila is expected to-morrow, after receipt of which arrangements will be completed.

WILSON.

File No. 412.11/64.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 11, 1912.

Watch the matter carefully and do all you properly can to avoid delay.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 312.11/127.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 18, 1912—12 noon.

An American citizen, George W. Conwell, who has some millions of dollars' worth of destructible property here, has asked me to define his course in view of possible attacks on property by mobs and the inability of the local authorities to render due protection. All his employees are Mexicans, and have an agreement not to attempt to defend the property in case of an attack, believing that his rights as a neutral would be prejudiced thereby.

Many other Americans are asking me the same question, and it may be of the greatest importance to have a rule clearly laid down by the Department with a view to any claims for damages which may be made in the future as a result of these disorderly occurrences. I therefore request that I be instructed.

I am permitting Americans to file inventories at the Embassy or at the Consulate General.

A rule should be established, if none exists, placing upon the Mexican Government the responsibility for acts committed by mobs or otherwise whenever it shall have received notice of dangerous conditions and a request for protection.

WILSON.

File No. 312.11/127.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 20, 1912—7 p. m.

Second paragraph of your March 18, 12 noon. The Department can not lay down any other rules than those provided by international law, which will doubtless meet situation. See volume 6, Moore's Digest, page 809 and following.[1]

All other points of your telegram are covered by a circular instruction to consular officers in Mexico, a copy of which will be sent to you to-morrow.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] This refers to the subhead "Mob violence" in the chapter on "Claims," beginning with the following general conclusions:

"The question of a government's liability for injuries suffered by foreigners within its jurisdiction has on various occasions been discussed and determined in cases of mob violence. Such cases sometimes apparently present strong grounds of national liability because of the popular approval of the mob's action and the consequent immunity of the actors from prosecution and punishment. The rule, however, which has generally been maintained in argument, even if not in practice, is that while a government is bound to employ all reasonable means to prevent such disorders, it is not required to make indemnity for losses that may result from them, unless, as in the case of Art. XXXV of the treaty of 1846 with New Granada or as in the case of an attack on official representatives, there is a special obligation of protection."

Citations of cases follow, pp. 809–883.

File No. 312.11/162b.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 771.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 21, 1912.

SIR: The Department incloses herewith, for your information, a copy of a circular instruction to American consular officers in Mexico under date of March 21, 1912, with regard to the collection of information regarding American properties in Mexico for use in connection with possible future claims for damages.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

[Inclosure.]

Circular Instruction to Consular Officers in Mexico.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 21, 1912.

SIR: As a matter of general policy the Department instructs you to collect, so far as possible, and mail to the Department accurate statements regarding all American enterprises in your district—their character, value, extent, and amount of business done; income derived therefrom; and, if mines, the condition of development, normal quantum of work, whether mines pay dividends; and, generally, any information of use in establishing, in case of controversy, the real value of such enterprise if at any time any damages should result thereto.

You are also instructed, whenever it may be possible to do so, to make such investigation as is practicable regarding properties, if any, that may have been deserted already, with a view to ascertaining whether or not the circumstances really warranted abandonment; the amount of damages suffered through actual destruction and cessation of operations, as well as other facts that would be of value in establishing the claim, and you should endeavor specially to secure the names and addresses of such persons as may be serviceable as witnesses.

You are finally instructed to inform the Americans in your district with whom you have means of communicating that should they at any time by any unforeseen turn of local events be actually compelled, for their personal safety, to abandon their property and holdings, in order later to substantiate whatever claims for damages they may wish to make they should as soon as possible, in the event they decide that they really must leave their properties, prepare in the form of a sworn certificate as complete an inventory as possible, which should be supported by the affidavits of two witnesses if they can be obtained, and also a concise but comprehensive statement as to the reasons for the abandonment, setting forth particularly the fact, if it be a fact, that they could get no protection from the Mexican Government and that life and property were really menaced with destruction without it, and then such other facts as may be pertinent, presenting both inventories and statements to the consulate general for filing for future reference. All documents filed, but especially inventories, should be prepared in triplicate, one copy sent immediately to the Department for safe-keeping and to facilitate consideration of possible claims, and one to the Embassy.

In your communication with American citizens do not fail to make perfectly clear the positive fact that this is merely a measure of general policy and is entirely without other significance.

I am [etc.] (for Mr. Huntington Wilson),

WILBUR J. CARR.

File No. 312.11/147.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 23, 1912—11 a. m.

The citations from Moore, in Department's March 20, 7 p. m., seem to deny responsibility of a government for damages to foreigners by mob violence unless it can be shown that the government had not exercised due diligence. Your telegram February 12, 5 p. m., which I consider a contingent and pending instruction, indicates that under stated conditions you would hold the Mexican Government liable for damages without regard to the amount of diligence exercised. Does the Department hold that action contemplated in its February 12, 5 p. m., changes the status of American claims?

WILSON.

File No. 412.11/71.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1327.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, March 23, 1912.

SIR: As a result of the continued disturbed state of this country the Embassy is in almost daily receipt of enquiries from citizens of the United States, who have suffered loss and damage to their properties, concerning what action they shall take in the matter of their claims against the Government of Mexico.

I have the honor to request that the Department of State instruct the Embassy in the premises. At the present time I am treating these cases precisely as they were treated in the last revolution.

I have [etc.]

HENRY LANE WILSON.

File No. 312.11/147.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 30, 1912.

Department deems it inadvisable at present further to elaborate the subject of your telegram of March 23, 11 a. m.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 412.11/75.

The Mexican Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 1235.]

MEXICAN EMBASSY,
Washington, April 1, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: In compliance with the instructions received from my Government I have the honor to inform you that Mexico has named commissioners at El Paso, Texas, and Douglas, Arizona, to attend to the claims for damages caused during the combats that occurred at Ciudad Juárez and Agua Prieta.

I have [etc.]

GILBERTO CRESPO Y MARTINEZ.

File No. 412.11/75.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Mexican Ambassador.

No. 149.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 5, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 1st instant, from which the Department is gratified to learn that your Government has appointed commissioners at El Paso, Texas, and Douglas, Arizona, to attend to the damage claims arising from the battles that occurred at Ciudad Juárez and Agua Prieta; and in reply I beg to say that this Government earnestly hopes that this matter will be settled with the least possible delay.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 412.11/71.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 790.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 8, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 1327, of the 23d ultimo, stating that you are receiving [etc.]

In reply you are advised that you will, in the first instance, upon notice of injuries or threatened injuries to American citizens, at once make appropriate representations to the Mexican Government, with all reservations as to future action; you should then send a claims circular, following generally the course outlined in Department's instructions of June 16, 1911, relative to claims arising out of the so-called Madero Revolution.

It would also doubtless be well, in connection with the procedure last referred to, to invite, for their guidance and information, the attention of the claimants to the following principles of international law: That a claimant against a foreign government is not generally regarded (subject to certain exceptions not at present necessary to consider) as entitled to diplomatic intervention by his own government until he has exhausted his legal remedies in the courts of the country against which he makes the claim; and that a government is not, as a general rule, considered to be responsible for damages caused to alien residents by revolutions when the revolutionary disturbances have passed beyond the control of the parent government.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 412.11/85.

The American Consul at Ciudad Juárez to the Secretary of State.

No. 132.] AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Ciudad Juárez, April 8, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to report with reference to instructions[1] of March 8 and April 2, and referring to the matter of assisting the Mexican Consul at El Paso in securing an adequate presentation and settlement of the claims of American citizens and injury inflicted upon them during the Madero fight at Juárez.

The said Mexican Consul has notified the claimants and their attorneys through the press and by personal notice of his readiness to take up the investigation of said claims, and requested them to present the same together with such evidence as they have for the establishment of the justice of the claims, etc.

On April 5, 10 a. m. -time appointed for one of the claimants—I was at the Consulate at El Paso. The attorney in the case, after being called by phone, appeared. His client being a Chinaman, but was not present, and was represented to be in Los Angeles. The claimant alleges that he was shot the day of said battle, and injured to the extent of $20,000. The attorney, however, presented no evidence to prove the allegations, and admitted his inability to show that his client was a citizen of the United States, but claimed that inasmuch as the Chinaman had resided at El Paso for several years [he] was entitled to the protection of the United States, etc.; to which the Mexican Government [Consul ?] dissented and said that he could entertain the case only on its coming through the Chinese Legation. And thus the day's work was ended.

On April 8th, 10 a. m., a case having been called for that time, but the attorneys in this case by phone advised the Consul that they were too busy in court and could not take up the case.

In this connection I will state that it has come to my knowledge unofficially that it is agreed among several, if not a majority of the attorneys representing these claimants, that they do not submit their cases to the said Mexican consul for adjustment, preferring (as I am led to believe) to wait for the commission provided for in the Joint Resolution presented by Representative Smith, of Texas, in the House of Representatives.[2]

The Mexican Consul will, however, continue to invite the claimants, agents, or attorneys to present their claims, and will endeavor to have a full and concise legal record of the facts in each case made in both languages. He also states that he is authorized to make settlement, and, if able to do so, to liquidate without delay.

I have [etc.]

THOS. D. EDWARDS.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] House Joint Resolution 255, "directing the Secretary of State to investigate claims of American citizens growing out of the late insurrection in Mexico, determine the amounts due, if any, and press them for payment." It was introduced by Mr. Smith of Texas February 27, 1912, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed; reported back to the House April 15, 1912, by unanimous vote, without amendment and with recommendation that it pass (House Report No. 556, 62d Congress, 2d Session).

File No. 412.11/85.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Ciudad Juárez.

No. 108.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 23, 1912.

Sir: The Department has received your despatch No. 132 of the 8th instant in regard to the adjustment of the claims of Americans against the Mexican Government by the Mexican Consul at El Paso, Texas, and the fact that you have been informed unofficially that it is agreed among several, if not a majority, of the attorneys representing the claimants that they will not submit the cases to the Mexican Consul for adjustment but wait for the commission provided for in the Joint Resolution presented by Representative Smith of Texas.

The Department has informed Representatives William Sulzer, W. R. Smith, J. N. Garner and W. G. Sharp that it considers that this reported course on the part of such attorneys would be most unfortunate if carried into effect, since in view of the apparently genuine desire of the Mexican Government to endeavor to effect an early settlement of these claims, it would seem that the American claimants should in the first instance submit their claims for consideration to the representatives sent by the Mexican Government for this purpose. Their failure to take advantage of this opportunity can scarcely result in anything other than prejudice to the claimants in the eyes of the Mexican Government. Moreover, such failure to act would, in the opinion of this Department, be entirely unwarranted and would lay this Government open to the charge of not proceeding in this transaction with entire good faith.

I am [etc.]

For Mr. Knox:
Wilbur J. Carr.

File No. 412.11/111.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, June 6, 1912.

I am informed by the Minister for Foreign Affairs that all the border claims have now been examined. He considers that some of them are exorbitant and a few untenable. But in order to avoid Congressional action at Washington he wishes to pay the majority of the awards as soon as possible.

Schuyler.

File No. 412.11/111.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, June 7, 1912.

Express to the Minister for Foreign Affairs the Department's gratification at the early settlement of the border cases which is promised. Say that the Department has experienced great difficulty in postponing Congressional action until now, and has been able to do so only because it has given repeated assurances that the Mexican Government would make an early settlement.

You will informally suggest to the Minister for Foreign Affairs that in view of the fact that this Government has made no claim or, indeed, special point with reference to the clear violation of sovereignty involved in the most unfortunate transaction out of which the claims arise, and in view of the fact that the whole matter therefore is reduced to mere payment of damages which, from the standpoint of government, amount to a comparatively small sum, it would seem wise -and he will probably so decide upon further consideration—immediately to settle all these claims, which have such great potentiality for much embarrassment to, and even for differences between, the two Governments, and thus remove all cause for irritation arising out of such claims and put the people of the border—who have been considerably agitated over the course of this matter, as have also the American people generally—in a better frame of mind.

KNOX.

File No. 412.11/129.

The American Consul at Nogales to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Extract.—Paraphrase.]

NOGALES, August 1, 1912.

None of the Douglas claimants have accepted awards. The statement has been made to claimants that if sums awarded are not accepted they will be deposited with Secretary of State at Washington, D. C., for distribution.[1]

DYE.

File No. 412.11/132.

The American Consul at Nogales to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

DOUGLAS, August 2, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to report that Mr. Antonio Lozano arrived at Douglas July 29, 1912, and placed a notice in the local papers the same day asking the claimants to meet him the next day, July 30, 1912, at the offices of Richardson and Doan, between the hours of 2 and 8 p. m., to receive the amounts which had been awarded them as damages by the Mexican Government.

---

[1] The statement referred to was sent to the Department on August 2, and consists of an open letter dated Douglas, July 30, 1912, from D. A. Richardson, attorney for the Mexican Consul, Lozano, to the "Douglas Daily International" newspaper, in which it was published as an advertisement. The pertinent passage reads as follows: "It has been the rule in the settlement of cases between the United States and Mexico for the United States to deposit the amount of damages with the Secretary of Foreign Relations in the City of Mexico for distribution among the interested parties. In this case Mexico has sent its Special Representative [Lozano] here [Douglas] to pay the individuals in person. Should they refuse to accept their money, naturally it would be supposed that Mexico would do the same that the United States has done in all of their cases. That is, deposit the money with the Secretary of State at Washington for distribution." File No. 412.11/132.)

None of the claimants, however, came to claim the awards. Mr. Lozano, however, had been informed by Mr. G. W. Cass, of the firm of Cass and Sames, attorneys for the claimants, that the amounts awarded were not satisfactory to the claimants.

The procedure followed by the Mexican Government in dealing with these claims has apparently been as follows: After the investigation and cross-examination of the claimants and their witnesses, formerly [formally?] conducted by Mr. Antonio Lozano and his attorney, Mr. D. A. Richardson, a brief was prepared of each case, which was signed jointly by Mr. Richardson and Mr. Lozano and forwarded to the Mexican Minister of Foreign Relations at Mexico City.

Yesterday Mr. Lozano placed in my hands for perusal original signed copies of all these briefs. I have had copies made of those of the cases of R. H. Harrington and F. F. Williams, and submit herewith two copies[1] of each brief as showing the manner in which the cases have been prepared and presented to the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs. The others are prepared along the same lines, quote the same authorities, and vary only in the circumstances of the individual case and in the citation of former cases which are considered as precedents of the case in hand.

In all the other cases, as in the two submitted herewith, the damages are considered as arising from purely accidental causes, the Mexican Government is considered as the defendant, the claimant as the plaintiff, and contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff is brought forward as a sufficient reason why no damages should be awarded.

In the other cases, as in these two, it is suggested, however, that while the claimant has no legal rights in the matter, if the Mexican Government desires to make him a present, such and such a precedent should be followed as to the amount of damages awarded. In each case the amount of damages which was eventually paid in the case cited as a precedent is the same amount which the Mexican Government is now offering to each claimant. This fact and the published statement[2] of Attorney Richardson (newspaper clipping of which is herewith enclosed) makes it evident that for all practical purposes the Mexican Government has left the settlement of these claims up to the present time entirely in the hands of Mr. Richardson.

However, it is also apparent from his entire conduct of the case that Mr. Richardson has approached the matter not in the spirit of an impartial investigator seeking to secure absolute equity in the cases, but rather in the spirit of a lawyer who is seeking to secure every advantage for his client and to reduce the amount of damages which his client must pay to as low a sum as possible.

As a consequence, practically all that seems to have been accomplished thus far is the presentation of clashing interests, possibly excessive amounts asked for on the one hand and on the other an effort to reduce these amounts to as low sums as possible.

Upon his arrival Mr. Lozano made public the amount of the awards and seemed much chagrined and surprised that not only were the amounts not accepted but that much adverse criticism appeared in the local press.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] See footnote, p. 964.

In this connection it would perhaps be well to state that I have made perfectly clear to all parties that I have no official connection with this matter whatever.

I have [etc.] ALEXANDER V. DYE.

File No. 412.11/129.

The Secretary of State to the American Consul at Nogales.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 3, 1912.

Referring to your telegram of August first, all Douglas claimants should be immediately informed by you that while the Department can not undertake to advise them whether or not they should accept the sums offered by the Mexican Consul in settlement of their claims against Mexico (for the reason, among others, that Congress now has before it a proposition contemplating the investigation of the El Paso and Douglas incidents by the War Department), nevertheless the claimants are under absolutely no compulsion to accept the proffered sums, and that if same are taken by them in satisfaction of their claims it must be with the understanding that it is done of their own free will and that any such attempted action by the Government of Mexico as depositing such sums with the Department would have no bearing whatsoever upon the amounts of their claims. You should point out that a long time ago the Department reserved the right, in the event Mexico did not make adequate offers of settlement to the complainants, to espouse the claims diplomatically.

KNOX.

Resolution of Congress to investigate American claims against Mexico.

[Public Resolution No. 48.—S. J. Res. 103.]

Joint Resolution Directing the Secretary of War to investigate the claims of American citizens for damages suffered within American territory and growing out of the late insurrection in Mexico.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to make, or cause to be made under his direction, a full and thorough investigation of each and all claims of American citizens and of persons domiciled in the United States which may be called to his attention by claimants or their attorneys for damages for injuries to their persons or property, received by them or by those of whom claimants may be the legal representatives, within the boundaries of the United States, by means of gunshot wounds or otherwise inflicted by Mexican Federal or insurgent troops during the late insurrection in Mexico in the year nineteen hundred and eleven.

For the purpose of such investigation the Secretary of War is authorized to appoint a commission of three officers of the Army, one of whom shall be an inspector general. Such commission shall have authority to subpœna witnesses, administer oaths, and to take evidence on oath relating to any such claim and to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers in any such proceeding by application to the district court of the United States for the district within which any session of the commission is held, which court is hereby empowered and directed to make all orders and issue all processes necessary for that purpose, and said commission shall have all the powers conferred by law upon inspectors general of the United States Army in the performance of their duties. Such commission shall report to Congress, through the Secretary of War, as soon as practicable, its findings of fact upon each and all the claims presented to it and its conclusion as to the justice and equity thereof and as to the proper amount of compensation or indemnity thereupon.

Approved, August 9, 1912.

File No. 412.11/133.

The Acting Secretary of War to the Secretary of State.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, September 3, 1912.

Having reference to the Joint Resolution of Congress approved August 9, 1912, which authorized this Department to investigate claims arising on this side of the Mexican border and growing out of the revolution in adjacent Mexican territory, a commission for the purpose indicated has been appointed.

It is understood that many of the claims in question have already been presented to the Department of State, and as the early conclusion of the investigation would be facilitated by any list of the claims now available, it is requested that this Department be furnished with such information of the kind indicated as may be on file in the Department of State, provided such action meets with your approval.

LEONARD WOOD.

NOTE.—On September 16, 1912, President Madero read his message to the Twenty-sixth Congress; in it he made references to the American claims; see "Messages of the President," p. 708.

File No. 412.11/133.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 18, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 3d instant referring to the Joint Resolution of Congress approved August 9, 1912, authorizing the War Department to investigate [etc.].

In reply I have the honor to enclose a list of claims of the character referred to in your letter, which have been filed in the Department. This list shows the names and addresses of the claimants.

I have [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 412.11/137.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 400.]

American Embassy,
Mexico, September 24, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to report that acting upon certain representations made by Mr. A. W. Heaton, one of the El Paso claimants against the Mexican Government, an inquiry was made at the Mexican Foreign Office as to the present status of the El Paso claims for damages growing out of the injuries inflicted by firing across the line from the Mexican side to the American side of the boundary, and that Mr. Lascurain replied that the claimants without exception had refused to enter into negotiations, preferring to await the action of the joint Senate and House Committee appointed by Congress to investigate into the matter.

I have [etc.]

Henry Lane Wilson.

File No. 412.11/136.

The Acting Secretary of War to the Secretary of State.

War Department,
Washington, September 25, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter of the 18th instant from the Acting Secretary of State, replying to one from this Department of the 3d instant, in which is inclosed a list of the claims on file in the Department of State arising in the United States but growing out of the revolution in adjacent Mexican territory.

The commission of Army officers appointed under the joint resolution of Congress is ready to begin its investigation of the claims, but most of them are not yet filed. It will facilitate the beginning of work if your Department would transmit to the War Department the original petitions or memorials on file in your office, provided, of course, that such action is entirely consistent with the purposes of the Department of State in respect to the claims in question.

Very respectfully,

Robert Shaw Oliver.

File No. 412.11/136.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

[Extract.]

Department of State,
Washington, October 8, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th ultimo in which [etc.]

I have the honor to transmit the requested memorials for your information and to ask that when they have served their purpose they may be returned for the files of this Department.

I have [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 412.11/167.

Report of the Claims Commission appointed by the War Department in pursuance of the Joint Resolution of Congress, approved August 9, 1912.

War Department,
Washington, November 29, 1912.

The Adjutant General of the Army,
Washington, D. C.

Sir: The commission appointed by par. 27, S. O. 205, W. D., August 30, 1912, has the honor to submit herewith its report as required under the terms of Joint Resolution No. 48, approved August 9, 1912, for submission to the Congress through the Secretary of War.

For reasons of convenience and completeness, the resolution and order under which the commission acted are quoted in full. [Here follows the text of the Joint Resolution printed ante, and the text of Special Order No. 205, appointing the commission.]

Immediately after its creation the commission caused to be inserted in three issues upon alternate days in the Douglas, Arizona, Dispatch, and the El Paso, Texas, Times the following advertisement:

NOTICE.

Mexican Revolution Damage Claimants Take Notice!

Whereas the Congress of the United States passed a joint resolution which was approved August 9, 1912, and which authorized the Secretary of War to appoint a commission of three officers of the Army to make a full and thorough investigation of each and every claim of American citizens and of persons domiciled in the United States for damages to their persons or property within the boundaries of the United States by means of gunshot wounds or otherwise inflicted by Mexican federal or insurgent troops during the late insurrection in Mexico, in the year 1911; and

Whereas a commission has been duly appointed by the Secretary of War as above authorized, consisting of Lieutenant Colonel Francis J. Kernan, adjutant general; Major Eli A. Helmick, inspector general; and First Lieutenant Aristides Moreno, Twenty-eighth infantry; now all claimants falling within the above description are advised and requested to file their respective claims at the earliest practicable date with the said commission, at its office, room 258, War Department, Washington, D. C.

In filing the claims the following rules should be observed:

1. To be in duplicate, properly dated and signed and verified upon oath or affirmation and setting forth:

2. The age, place of birth, present residence, post office address and occupation of the claimant and his residence, nationality and occupation at the time his claim had its origin.

3. The amount of the claim, the time when and place where it arose, the kind or kinds and amount of property lost, destroyed or injured, or the kind and degree of injury if the claim is founded upon damage to person, and the facts and circumstances attending the loss or injury out of which the claim arises.

4. Whether the claimant was the sole and absolute owner of the property damaged when the damage arose, and whether he is now the sole owner of the claim; or if any other person is interested therein, the name and address of such other person and the nature and extent of his interest, and how, when, and by what means and for what consideration the transfer of interests or rights, if such was made, took place between the parties.

5. Whether the claimant, his representatives, or any person interested in the claim or any part thereof has ever received any indemnification for the whole or part of the alleged loss or injury, and if so, the nature and amount of the indemnification, and when, from whom, and by whom the same was received.

6. Documentary evidence, if submitted, should be duly authenticated, and the whole claim and its accompanying papers should be in the English language.

7. All claims hereunder must be submitted to the commission not later than October 10, 1912.

Thereafter the commission met in Washington, D. C., on September 30 and, after such preliminary work as could be done in this city, proceeded about October 10 to El Paso, Texas, where sessions were held to hear evidence in the claims arising there and thereabouts. Upon the completion of these hearings the commission proceeded on November 1 to Douglas, Arizona, where similar sessions were held to hear the evidence in support of the six claims having origin in that city. Afterwards the commission returned to El Paso, where two additional claims were presented and heard, and upon the conclusion of these cases the commission returned to Washington, D. C., where it arrived on the 14th instant. To complete the narrative of its movements it may be added that members of the commission visited Indianapolis, Indiana; Cleveland, Ohio; Atlanta, Georgia; and San Antonio, Texas, for the purpose of prosecuting inquiries incident to the complete investigation of the claims in question.

Twenty-five (25) claims in all were brought to the attention of the commission. Of these one, that of Mrs. Jennie W. Preston, had been settled to the satisfaction of the claimant through the Mexican consul at El Paso, and was never pressed upon the commission; while another, that of Miss Frances M. Reade, appeared upon its face to be beyond the scope of the commission's authority, having arisen in Mexico, and so was not investigated.

The remaining twenty-three claims were investigated as fully as practicable and they divide themselves naturally into two classes. The first class embraces two cases only, those of Converse and Blatt, and they are founded upon the alleged kidnapping of the parties upon American territory and their subsequent harsh treatment. The other class is that of injuries arising from bullet wounds and resulting in death or some disability. And this latter class embraces two distinct kinds of claimants, i. e., those claiming as American citizens and those claiming as domiciled aliens.

The commission, in considering the form of its report, arrived at the conclusion that it would conduce to clearness and to brevity if the general situation out of which these claims arose and the general considerations which should govern their disposition were treated in one comprehensive report, leaving the particular facts and conclusions as to each separate claim to be embodied in separate reports, one for each claim. That plan has been followed and this, which is the general report, is accompanied by the several individual reports, all taken together constituting the complete report of the commission as required by Congress.

It will be observed that the joint resolution requires the commission to report "its findings of facts * * * and its conclusions as to the justice and equity thereof and as to the proper amount of compensation or indemnity thereupon."

In the execution of this part of its task the commission has become convinced that in some cases, all the relevant facts and circumstances being duly weighed, no compensation can be justly sought from or through the Government of the United States, notwithstanding the undoubted fact that injury was received; but as this report is advisory only and not conclusive, the commission has, in every case except in those of Converse, Blatt and Brown, assessed the amount of damages believed to have been sustained. It follows from this procedure that if the conclusions of the commission as to the justice, equity, or propriety of the claims be not concurred in by the authority which must make final disposition thereof, the reports will enable a prompter settlement to be effected than might otherwise be the case.

I. THE CASE OF CONVERSE AND BLATT.[1]

The evidence and circumstances of these two cases are substantially the same. These claimants are both young native-born American citizens. Early in 1911 Converse met an agent of the Mexican revolutionary party, which party was acting under the general leadership of Francisco Madero, in Los Angeles, California. The two struck a bargain under which Converse was to enter the service of the revolutionary army in Mexico, to be commissioned therein and to receive a stated salary. Pursuant to this agreement Converse entered that service and continued in it until the day of his kidnapping, February 20, 1911. He was employed chiefly as a messenger between the insurgents operating near Juárez, Mexico, opposite El Paso, Texas, and their agents in the latter city. On one of his visits to El Paso he met Mr. Blatt, talked over the matter of his service and took Blatt to the revolutionary junta living in El Paso. As a result, Blatt went next day over into Mexico and joined the insurgent forces. He denies having made a definite bargain or receiving a commission, but he admits meeting the junta and as a result he crossed into Mexico and identified himself with the forces seeking the overthrow of the Díaz Government. He was assigned to the duty of gathering supplies by requisition or otherwise from the neighboring country for the insurgent forces. Converse had been sent to carry correspondence to the revolutionary agents in El Paso, and Blatt got permission to accompany him. Converse avows his intention to return and rejoin the insurgents, but Blatt declares he had had enough and proposed to remain in the United States once safely there. The two were observed and followed by Federal Mexican troops, but succeeded in crossing the Rio Grande at a point where it is the boundary, and having achieved as they thought a safe place they rested near the river on the American side. There they were set upon by Mexicans undoubtedly sent by the Federal Mexican officers, captured and taken across the river into Mexico. They were carried as prisoners from Guadalupe, Mexico, to Juárez, Mexico, and incarcerated in the common jail for two months. In passing from Guadalupe to Juárez the road crosses once or twice into American territory. Converse called the attention of his captors to this fact while on the United States side and demanded release, but was refused. At the end of two months both prisoners were released by the personal order of President Díaz. There were circumstances of humiliation and discomfort connected with their captivity. Upon these facts each claimant demands $50,000 by way of damages.

---

[1] See For. Rel. 1911, pp. 605–614.

Mr. Converse, testifying in his own behalf, said:

> A. * * * I had no intention of joining the revolution until after I got to Los Angeles; I met in Los Angeles a man who was connected with the revolution and he offered me a position and a salary to drill the troops and to instruct the troops.
>
> Q. Did he profess to be an agent of Orozco or Madero or those connected with this revolution?
>
> A. He professed to be an agent of the Madero revolution; I knew that he was through a signed commission; I afterwards identified the signature of Mr. Madero.
>
> Q. And did you strike a bargain with him that you would become a drill-master?
>
> A. Yes, sir. (See p. 33 testimony in Converse case.)

Mr. Blatt, testifying in his own behalf said:

> Q. When had you entered the service?
>
> A. We went to the junta here in El Paso one evening; I met several of their emissaries here and the next morning—we stayed that evening—and the next morning we rode in a wagon to Ysleta, which is about 12 miles down the valley—we passed it yesterday—and stayed there that day; the following morning we rode on horseback to the town of Zaragoza, Mexico, where we joined the forces there.
>
> Q. Whose forces?
>
> A. The Mexican forces—the revolutionists—the Maderistas.
>
> Q. What sort of an engagement had you made with the junta here in El Paso?
>
> A. Nothing but to go over; I made my engagement merely to go over and did not ask anything of a reward, or what we would be paid, or anything; I just wanted to go over.
>
> Q. What was your purpose in going over to the other side?
>
> A. I often wonder at it now myself; that is it was wholly for the little excitement.
>
> Q. Were you going over there on a hunting trip?
>
> A. No, sir; going over there to fight.
>
> Q. Going for the purpose of joining the insurrectos were you not?
>
> A. Yes, sir.
>
> Q. You did join them?
>
> A. Yes.
>
> Q. Did they accept your services?
>
> A. Yes. (See testimony of Mr. Blatt, pp. 15–16, Blatt case.)

Section 9 of the Act approved March 4, 1909, provides that:

> Every citizen of the United States who, within the territory or jurisdiction thereof, accepts and exercises a commission to serve a foreign prince, state, colony, district, or people in war, by land or by sea, against any prince, state, colony, district, or people with whom the United States are at peace, shall be fined not more than $2,000 and imprisoned not more than three years.

Considering the testimony of the claimants in connection with all the other facts and circumstances brought out in the evidence, the commission is convinced that both these claimants were engaged, at the time when their claims had their origin, in violating the neutrality laws of their own country. If this be so, they are barred from asking that Government, whose laws they were violating, to take upon itself the task of seeking compensation for any damage or injury which may have come to them primarily as a result of their own wrongdoing.

In the case of the Monitor, where a claim against the Japanese Government was in question, Mr. Bayard, Secretary of State, said:

> Clearly, therefore, this Department is precluded from pressing in any manner upon the attention of a foreign government a claim growing out of transactions obnoxious to the laws of the United States, or possessing other features that forbid its approval and promotion by the official representative of this Government. (Moore's Int. Law Digest, 6, p. 620.)

And again the same Secretary, in reference to the claim of one Pelletier against Haiti, said:

> On the general question of turpitude of cause of action as barring the present claim, I am now prepared to give an emphatic, and, I trust, final decision. Even were we to concede that these outrages in Haitian waters were not within Haitian jurisdiction, I do now affirm that the claim of Pelletier against Haiti on the facts exhibited must be dropped and dropped peremptorily and immediately by the Government of the United States. "The principle of public policy," said Lord Mansfield in Holman v. Johnston, Cowper's rep., 343, "is this: Ex dolo malo non oritur actio." No court will lend its aid to a man who founds his cause of action upon an immoral or an illegal act, * * * by innumerable rulings under the Roman common law, as held by nations holding Latin traditions and under the common law as held in England and the United States, has this principle been applied * * *.

But even if it should be thought that the acts of Converse and Blatt as shown by the evidence would not sustain an indictment under the penal statute above cited, it must still be held that their admitted conduct estops them from asking the United States Government to press their claim upon Mexico. They were both actively engaged in the service of a revolutionary force whose avowed object was to overthrow the established Government of Mexico. As armed revolutionists they took upon themselves the hazards of war. They were liable to be killed in action; and, on the other hand, they were liable to kill in action soldiers of the Republic of Mexico. These rights and liabilities could not flow from American citizenship. If slain in fair fight, this Government would have no duty to demand redress in the premises; if they killed in like manner their opponents, they could not do so as American citizens primarily, but only as Mexican revolutionists. Otherwise such killing would be murder. It is plain that these claimants, having taken upon themselves the character of Mexican revolutionists with a new set of duties, rights and liabilities, put in abeyance for the time being at least their distinctive rights, liabilities and duties as American citizens. They were fighting not as citizens of this country, but as Mexican insurgents, and they were pursued not as Americans, but as rebels in arms against the established government. The pursuit should have stopped at the boundary not because the crossing of the Rio Grande divested Converse and Blatt of their hostile and capturable qualities, but because to go further was to violate the sovereignty of a neighboring country. Crossing the river did not reinvest these claimants with any of those individual rights peculiar to American citizenship which they had voluntarily put aside by enlisting in the Mexican revolution; on the contrary, the very character of their mission required them to cross to the soil of the United States and in so doing they were carrying out an act of warfare against the Government of the Republic of Mexico. The circumstances of their seizure constituted a clear and a grave violation of the sovereign rights of the United States. The commission believes their capture on American soil to have been deliberate and to have been instigated by the military authorities of Mexico, a part of whose forces were drawn up on the southern bank of the river to receive the two captured Americans and, which, in fact, did receive and hold them immediately after those effecting the seizure had brought them to the Mexican side. The whole procedure was an international wrong done to this country; but the individuals captured were captured not as American citizens, but as active insurgents in the very act of carrying out a hostile mission. The case would have been the same if the parties captured had been native-born Mexicans instead of Americans. In either case the pursuit should have stopped at the boundary; in either case the capture on this side was internationally wrong, but in both cases the injury is a public one directed against the sovereignty of the United States. It was open to our Government to demand the release of those captured, the punishment of those involved in the capture and such further international redress as might be deemed proper by those charged with that phase of public duty; but as to these claimants, capture was one of the fates they challenged when they embarked in their Mexican insurgent enterprise and the time and place of their capture, while making for an offense to this Government, grounds in them no claim for pecuniary damages which this Government should undertake to press. If they have any just claim for compensation it should be directed by them to the conscience and gratitude of the present Government of Mexico whose cause they made their own.

The principle here set out is not novel. It was acted upon in the case of Captain John Clark, who took out letters of marque from Uruguay and cruised against the vessels and property of Spain and Portugal upon the high seas. A part of his booty was taken by a public-owned vessel of Colombia and his heirs came in time to press a claim growing out of this seizure before mixed commissions appointed by the United States and New Granada, Venezuela, and Ecuador, these States being a part of that Republic of Colombia which had made the original seizure. In all cases the claims were finally disallowed, and the grounds upon which their action was had were, in principle, those above outlined. One of the commission said:

> I grant that the conduct of the Venezuelan squadron and the decisions of the Venezuelan prize court were unjustifiable upon any principle of international law and that a great outrage was committed on the sovereign rights and interests of Uruguay; but what is that to the United States? Whatever losses and damages Captain Clark sustained in the premises he sustained not in his character as a citizen of the United States, but as an officer in the service of the Banda Oriental Republic (Uruguay) cruising under her flag, for her benefit, and against her enemies. If, therefore, the spoliations committed by the Venezuelan navy and sanctioned by the Venezuelan courts entitle him to indemnification, this indemnification must be claimed by the Banda Oriental Republic, now the Republic of Uruguay, and not by the United States. The war was with Uruguay and Spain and Portugal; the United States were neutral; not so Captain Clark. Although a native citizen of the United States, he had identified himself with one of the belligerents in violation, as I shall presently show, of the laws and treaties of his own native country. He was cruising under the Uruguay flag against the commerce of two nations with which the country of his birth was at peace. He must, therefore, abide by the consequences. * * * A party who asks for redress must present himself with clean hands; his cause of action must not be based on an offense against the very authority to whom he appeals for redress. * * * He who engages in an expedition prohibited by the laws > of his country must take the consequences. He may win or he may lose. But that is his own risk; he can not in case of loss seek indemnity through the instrumentality of the Government against which he has offended. (Moore's Int. Arbitrations, pp. 2734–39.)

Other commissioners expressed similar views, and one of them, Mr. Findlay, in the course of his opinion, quoted from Mr. Justice Taney in Williams v. Gibbes, where having reference to a claim founded on a contract to furnish advances and supplies to a miltary expedition fitting out against Mexico then belonging to Spain, the Justice said:

> Of course it was their duty [the commission's] not to allow any claim for services rendered to Mexico for money advanced for its use by American citizens in violation of their duty to their own government or in disobedience to its laws. For the government would have been unmindful of its own duty to the United States if it had used its powers and influence to enforce a claim of that description or had sanctioned it by treaty.

Colonel Young's case, reported in Moore's International Arbitrations, pages 2752–2753, is almost exactly in point. Colonel Young accepted a commission in the Mexican Army in its war against Spain and was killed. The commissioners say:

> Col. Young, by accepting a commission in the Mexican service and actually engaging in the war then in progress, forfeited all claim to the protection of his own government. He lost, for the time being at least, and so far as he was connected with that service, the character of an American citizen. A return to the United States might have restored his national character; but while he was in Mexico, engaged in her service as an officer in her army he ceased to be a citizen of his native country and could claim none of the benefits resulting from that character.

So in Green's case, the umpire declares that—> the claimant must be considered to have been actually employed by and in the service of the Mexican government, and pro tanto a Mexican citizen during the time of his services.

The grievance of the United States against Mexico in these cases is not that the particular persons Converse and Blatt should have been captured as they were, but that anybody should have been kidnapped upon our soil by agents of a foreign government.

For the reasons stated, the commission does not recommend any amount as due these claimants from or through this Government. The commission visited in person the scene of this kidnapping and from this inspection, from the evidence adduced in the case, and from consulting the treaties between Mexico and the United States bearing upon the boundaries of the two countries, it is satisfied that Converse and Blatt were seized upon United States territory.

II. THE CASES ARISING IN EL PASO, TEXAS, AND DOUGLAS, ARIZONA, FROM GUNSHOT WOUNDS INFLICTED FROM THE MEXICAN SIDE OF THE BORDER.

To understand how these injuries were received some general description of the situation of El Paso and Douglas and of the events of May 8, 9 and 10, 1911, at Juárez, Mexico, and of April 13 and 17, 1911, at Agua Prieta, Mexico, is necessary.

El Paso, Texas, lies directly on the Rio Grande river opposite Ciudad Juárez, Mexico. The river between these two cities is spanned by several bridges, railroad and others, and at some seasons is nearly if not quite dry. Both cities grow down close to the river banks so that between the two municipalities the distance is not great. El Paso claims some 39,000 inhabitants and the greater number of these is to be found in the more compact part of the city and within about two miles of the dividing river. Its situation with reference to the bounding river and to Ciudad Juárez will be better understood from the map hereto attached as Appendix "A."[1] Some of the principal streets of the city will be seen to run nearly perpendicular to the river front.

On May 8, 1911, some of the subordinate leaders under Mr. Madero began an attack on Juárez, moving down under shelter of the river bank and so getting close to the heart of the city without much exposure. At the same time they thus became interposed between El Paso and Juárez in such fashion that a fire from the federal garrison of the town directed at the assailants along the river front must needs be in the direction of El Paso. It is hinted by some of the attorneys that, the United States having formally warned the garrison of Juárez not to fire in the direction of United States territory and this fact being known to the assailants, they purposely attacked from the river front so as to embarrass the defense. However this may be, the defense for the better part of three days, May 8, 9 and 10, did fire in such direction as to cover the greater part of El Paso with a flight of bullets, resulting in numerous casualties.

Douglas, Arizona, and Agua Prieta, Mexico, face each other across the international boundary line which here runs across a flat plain. They are separated by an open strip about one-quarter of a mile wide. An assault on Agua Prieta by insurgents occurred April 13, 1911, and was made from a line near the boundary so that in firing upon the assailants the Federal garrison was bound to fire towards and into Douglas. Again on April 17 when a Federal force undertook to recapture Agua Prieta the assault was directed from the southeast so that the bullets in their flight to the northwest were certain to fall into and about Douglas. On each occasion there were resulting casualties on the American side upon which are founded six claims presented to this commission. There is appended hereto and marked "B" a map[1] of Douglas, Ariz., which will further illustrate its inevitable exposure.

The modern high-power military rifle has a maximum range of approximately three miles. Upon the maps of El Paso and Douglas herewith there are drawn in red ink circles having their centers approximately near the center of the defense in Juárez and Agua Prieta, respectively. It will be seen that these circles embrace, in the case of El Paso, the greater part of the inhabited town and in the case of Douglas practically the whole city. Appended also to this report and made a part hereof is some general testimony[1] taken by the commission and detailing the events of those days in El Paso and in Douglas when the battles upon the adjacent Mexican territory gave rise to wounds upon American soil. Afternoon papers of El Paso published on the 8th, 9th and 10th day of May, 1911,[1] are also appended to further illustrate, by contemporaneous reports, the happenings of those days as they relate to the subject of these claims.

The brief submitted by Coldwell and Sweeney,[1] attorneys for the claimants Griffiths and Chandler, is also made an appendix hereto.

---

[1] Not printed.

This brief was adopted by the other attorneys as expressing their view of the law and the reasoning applicable to all the El Paso claims in so far as its citations and its arguments are of general application.

In this brief the argument is advanced that Mexico was wholly unjustified in carrying on active warfare when its natural result would be to endanger life on our soil by the falling of bullets thereon. And the conclusion is sought to be drawn that since Mexico's action is indefensible from the standpoint of international law, the damages allowed should be great, including not merely compensation but something beyond, to deter for the future.

It seems plain, however, that the right of a state to defend itself is fundamental and inferior to no other. In the case now under consideration the established government was threatened and in danger. On the one hand it was fighting in self-defense for its continued existence while on the other was a revolutionary party striving to overthrow it. The right of a state to change its government when it is alleged to be oppressive or otherwise unresponsive to the needs of the people is also a well-established dictum in the law of nations. Both parties to the conflicts at Juárez and at Agua Prieta were therefore engaged in a contest about the theoretical right of which, in an international sense, there can be no doubt. Both of these places were important to the combatants as both lie at the gateway of railroads penetrating the country, and both have customhouses where revenue is to be collected. It was highly important to the rebels to take and hold these towns; it was of the utmost importance to the Díaz Government, fighting for its life, not to permit this. The commission, in view of these facts, has no doubt that Mexico must be held within her sovereign rights when she fought to retain possession, as against armed rebellion, of both Juárez and Agua Prieta. If the situation as between Mexico and the United States were reversed and this Government found itself assailed by armed rebels avowing the purpose of overthrowing the established order of things, and its border cities were besieged, nobody can doubt that attack would be met by defense, let the bullets fall where they might. What we should undoubtedly claim for ourselves as right we must admit as right in our neighboring states. But when a state in the exercise of its sovereign right of self-defense has been compelled to inflict injuries as incidental thereto upon a neighboring and friendly power, prompt expressions of regret and prompt atonement in so far as money indemnity can atone, are to be expected.

It is believed that the views just expressed are in accord with our own diplomatic history, as several incidents illustrate. When the Caroline in the year 1837 was attacked and destroyed in a harbor of New York State by agents of Great Britain, the case was much less urgent than at El Paso or Douglas and all the attendant circumstances less calculated to justify the territorial invasion. But in the subsequent correspondence we find the plea of self-defense as the only one, and its force in an appropriate case apparently admitted by our Government, though not in the particular case.

Mr. Webster, then Secretary of State, said of this transaction:

> The President sees with pleasure that your Lordship fully admits those great principles of public law, applicable to cases of this kind, which this Government has expressed; and that on your part, as on ours, respect for the inviolable character of the territory of independent states is the most essential foundation of civilization. And while it is admitted on both sides that there are exceptions to this rule, he is gratified to find that your Lordship admits that such exceptions must come within the limitations stated and the terms used in a former communication from this department to the British plenipotentiary here. Undoubtedly it is just that, while it is admitted that exceptions growing out of the great law of self-defense do exist, those exceptions should be confined to cases in which the necessity of that self-defence is instant, overwhelming, and leaving no choice of means, and no moment for deliberation.

Understanding these principles alike, the difference between the two Governments is only whether the facts in the case of the Caroline make out a case of such necessity for the purpose of self-defence.

On our side practically the same principle was asserted when General Jackson in 1819 invaded Florida, then a dependency of Spain. The ground, broadly stated, was that such invasion was the only practicable way to put an end effectively to the Indian depredations on that frontier.

And in reference to the Mexican boundary itself, our Government has taken the position in times past that if the only effectual way to stop Indian raids upon our people and their property was to pursue them across the border into Mexico, that course would be followed unless the Mexican Government took effective measures to prevent its soil from being made a base of operations against us and a haven of refuge in case of pursuit by our forces.

The ground upon which this position rests is simply that the right of self-defense rose superior in the particular circumstances to the right of territorial inviolability.

The Commission, therefore, believes that Mexico, while justified by the extreme circumstances in fighting upon the immediate border, is bound to feel regret and make amends to those particular individuals who incidentally suffered from her action. And as to the sufferers who are American citizens the Commission believes it to be clearly the duty of their Government to urge the justice of a prompt and liberal settlement upon the Government of Mexico. It seems superfluous to make citations or undertake argument with the purpose of justifying this conclusion. The duty of Governments to see that their citizens when damaged by foreign Governments should be given justice is too well established in our own diplomatic history and through the long list of international claims commissions to be now questioned. Mexico herself has impliedly admitted her liability by offering compensation, after its own investigation, in a number of these cases. These offers were rejected in all cases except one, for the reason that the amount offered seemed to the claimant too small. But the fact that an attempt at settlement was thus made by the accredited agent of the Mexican Government is here cited as an acknowledgement by that Government of its liability for the injuries arising from its military operations at Juárez and Agua Prieta. In the one case actually settled—that of Mrs. Jennie M. Preston—the amount paid the claimant may be taken as in some degree a measure by which other amounts could be assessed. But in all cases the Commission has endeavored to take into consideration the age, state of health, earning capacity, and degree of permanent disability, if any, in arriving at the amount of the damage assessed.

There is some evidence that the Mexican Government took the ground in its own investigation through its Consular agents, that the doctrine of contributory negligence might be invoked as going to lessen the amount of compensation or perhaps to defeat the claim altogether.

There can be no doubt that many spectators on the American side were drawn by curiosity to points of advantage from which to view the conflicts on the other side. But curiosity is a human quality and not criminal and not even censurable in many cases. The sight of a battle is one not often presented to the citizen in his own home and amidst his usual daily vocations. That he should pause to see so strange and so rare a sight, or even that he should seek an advantageous point from which to view it is not surprising. It must be borne in mind, too, in this connection that few if any of these people had any realizing sense of the danger to which they were exposed by flying bullets. The Commission concluded, therefore, that these spectators were where they had a right to be in their own country, that they did not fully, if at all, understand their danger, and that it does not lie in the mouth of the responsible foreigner to present this phase of the matter by way of escaping or mitigating his accountability. Pretty much any person anywhere about El Paso and Douglas was exposed to danger on the days when these adjacent fights were under way and it is too nice a question ever to be determined satisfactorily as to whether or in what degree a particular wound might be ascribed to the indulgence of curiosity. Upon this point, however, the views of the Commission are not unanimous.

In regard to the claims brought before the Commission by domiciled aliens, it will be seen that all have been heard as required by the terms of the joint resolution, and the amount of damage assessed will be found for each case in the special report devoted to that case.[1]

The Commission, however, does not believe that these claims are of a class to be presented to the United States Government for settlement, or through that Government to Mexico. These claimants are not citizens of the United States. Their paramount allegiance is not to this Government. It is conceivable that the country of their origin might call them home, arm, and require them to fight against the United States. Nowhere is it suggested that the injuries out of which these claims spring is attributable to the United States Government or to acts or omissions of its agents. The United States therefore can not be appealed to as to the party responsible for these injuries. In what capacity, then, can this Government be called upon to entertain these claims? Evidently only as the Government owing a duty of protection to the claimants as the victims of wrongs inflicted by another nation. Upon this point it seems clear from the weight of authority that this duty of protection is reciprocal with the obligations of allegiance and service. These domiciled aliens (all but one being of Mexican origin) owe no duty of service to this Government, and such allegiance as is due from them to the United States is of a qualified and subordinated character. Their claim to compensation, if any, is upon Mexico; and the naked question presented here is whether the duty of pressing these claims upon Mexico for settlement devolves upon the country of domicile or that of citizenship. Upon this question the great weight of authority and of reason seems to this Commission to be against the country of domicile and hence we feel precluded from recommending them favorably.

---

[1] Not printed.

Some of these claimants had filed their declaration of intention to become naturalized citizens of the United States, and one has, since the injury was received, completed his naturalization and is now a citizen But the claim relates back to the status existing at the time of the injury. The proposition, as the Commission understands it, is for this Government to intervene between these domiciled aliens and (except in the case of one Chinese) their own Government for the purpose of securing justice as between those parties.

Upon the general proposition that citizenship is a prerequisite to such intervention, reference is made to the general practice of our State Department and to the cases cited in Moore's Digest of International Law, sections 979 and 980, vol. 6, pp. 628 to 636. The citations from our diplomatic correspondence made in section 981 of the same work are particularly apposite to these claims:

> In declining to present a diplomatic claim to the Government of Austria, Mr. Marcy said: "The wrong you complain of was done more than six years before you were a citizen of the United States, and while you were a subject of the Emperor of Austria. The application you make seems to require this Government to interpose in a matter between the Austrian Government and one of its subjects. That was the practical relation when the act complained of took place. It can not, therefore, be said to be an injury done to one of our citizens, but only to a person who several years afterwards became a citizen of the United States." (Mr. Marcy, Secretary of State, Aug. 26, 1856.)
>
> By adopting a foreigner, under any form of naturalization, as a citizen, this Government does not undertake the patronage of a claim which he may have upon the country of his original allegiance or upon any other government. To admit that he can charge it with this burden would allow him to call upon a dozen governments in succession, to each of which he might transfer his allegiance, to urge his claim. Under such a rule the government supposed to be indebted could never know when the discussion of a claim would cease. All governments are, therefore, interested in resisting such pretensions. (Mr. Fish, Secretary of State, May 16, 1871.)
>
> Where a person, who was naturalized in the United States in 1874, asked for diplomatic intervention in order to obtain the restoration of his property which was embargoed in Cuba in 1871, the Department of State said: "When your alleged injuries took place you were not a citizen of the United States, and therefore, under well established canons of international law, it is not within the province of this Government to inquire whether your property was wrongfully or rightfully taken. It would be a monstrous doctrine, which this Government would not tolerate for a moment, that a citizen of the United States who might deem himself injured by the authorities of the United States or of any State could, by transferring his allegiance to another power, confer upon these powers the right to inquire into the legality of the proceedings by which he may have been injured while a citizen." (Mr. Fish, Secretary of State, Apr. 8, 1874.)
>
> Subsequent naturalization does not alter the international status of a claim which accrued before naturalization. (Mr. Bayard, Secretary of State, Apr. 30, 1886.)

The case of Santangelo reported in volume 3, Moore's International Arbitrations, is exactly in point with the Chinese case here, and if this precedent is followed the United States will refuse to urge this case as well as those of the other domiciled strangers of Mexican origin. It is true that Santangelo's injury occurred in Mexican territory, while this happened upon our soil; but in neither case is there any imputation of laches or wrongdoing upon the part of our Government such as might fasten upon it a special obligation to see the wrong repaired.

Upon the other side of this question may be cited the cases of Jarr and Hurst, one a native of Denmark, the other of Norway, who had become domiciled in the United States and had declared their intention to become citizens of the United States. In this condition they shipped as sailors on an American vessel and the injuries of which they complained were received in the port of Acapulco, Mexico. Under a convention which authorized the claims of American and Mexican citizens only, to be considered by the Commission, the claims of these parties were heard, though subsequently dismissed upon other grounds. Here it will be observed that the claims were not against the country of origin. But in any case the decision of the Commission while conclusive in these cases appears to run against the great current of authority.

In addition to what has been said, it may be well to point out that inconvenient precedents might be made if our Government should undertake to champion the cause of domiciled strangers in a question primarily between themselves and the Government of their origin and paramount allegiance. It will hardly be maintained that these parties have the option of looking to either the Government of their domicile or that of their citizenship as they may elect for protection and compensation in circumstances like these. If it is our duty as a Government to look after these damages it can not be Mexico's at the same time and in the same sense. Now we have many American citizens domiciled in Mexico, doing business there, living there, and the number promises to increase indefinitely. Will it do for the United States to take, in these current cases, a position which may be cited in the future as throwing upon the country of their domicile the ultimate duty of protecting these citizens and by strong implication forbidding the exercise of that function to our Government?

From every point of view, then, it is believed that the United States, not being responsible for these injuries through any omissions or acts of its own, should not take upon itself the duty of settling those claims or of urging their settlement upon Mexico.

In assessing the amount of damage, the Commission has endeavored to arrive at compensation only; exemplary or punitive damages being regarded as not called for in view of all the circumstances surrounding the injuries. There follows a table[1] showing the name of claimant, nationality, amount claimed, and the sum assessed by the Commission.

File No. 412.11 H141/5.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 1793.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, November 30, 1912.

SIR: Referring to this Embassy's despatch of August 30th last, No. 1625,[1] regarding the claim of Mr. Herbert L. Hall, I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy in translation of a recent note from the Minister for Foreign Affairs in reply to the Embassy's representations in this matter.

---

[1] Not printed.

It will be observed that in this note the Mexican Government takes a positive attitude towards such claims for losses suffered by foreigners by revolutions and one which, if concurred in by the Department, will render useless any further steps towards the collection of damages for losses suffered by American interests in Mexico arising from the revolutionary movements of the past two years.

I have [etc.]

MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 3203.] DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Mexico, November 23, 1912.

MR. CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES: After the examination of the claim which, through the Embassy, Mr. Herbert L. Hall has formulated against the Mexican Government for the sum of $40,000 United States currency—this being the value of property belonging to him which he says was destroyed by Federal forces—it is to be observed first of all that the allegations made by Mr. Hall are not justified, in evidence of which it is sufficient to say that only one of the witnesses states that he has seen what Mr. Hall refers to. But it seems unnecessary to insist on this point in view of the fact that, although the allegations might be proved, it is a principle of international law that when a government finds itself temporarily unable to repress within its territory all the punishable acts resulting from insurrection or civil war it is not responsible for the damages which foreigners may suffer in person or property during the course of the campaign as a consequence of the measures that the government may find it necessary to take in order to recover its dominion.

This principle has been recognized in favor of your excellency's Government by the Government of Great Britain when the latter refused to make claim against the former for its subjects for any compensation for the damages which they had suffered during the Civil War, taking the position in that case that foreigners are subject to the same consideration as nationals; and even your excellency's own Government has acknowledged this principle in a most ample manner when it refused to make claim against Brazil for compensation for the damages which an American citizen had suffered during the civil war of 1893, in spite of the fact that his business, having been in the line of fire, had been destroyed by the forces of the Government and by the revolutionists, considering with all justice that a person domiciled in a foreign country is exposed equally with the nationals of that country to the results of the state of affairs, and therefore if his property is destroyed by revolutionary forces or by those of the Government the latter is not legally responsible therefore.

Therefore, upon the basis of these principles of strict justice, the Government of Mexico declines all responsibility, and in consequence does not accept the claim of Mr. Herbert L. Hall.

I avail [etc.]

PEDRO LASCURAIN.

File No. 412.11/144.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, December 6, 1912.

The Foreign Office has rejected a German claim in a note the terms of which are almost identical with those refusing Hall's claim. This is the first information received by the German Minister regarding his numerous claims for damages due to revolutionary disturbances. He forwarded it at once to his Government, with the comment that if this principle is allowed he can accomplish nothing more by diplomatic methods. He will recommend that the German Government show the Mexican Government that it can not make such an absurd denial of justice in the case of German subjects. I have also received another note refusing another claim in similar terms.

I should be glad to have some light on the Department's probable attitude with regard to such claims, of which the Embassy is daily receiving a number; it would appear to be a waste of time to send them to the Foreign Office if the Mexican Government's present contention is to be allowed.

Another class of claims is becoming quite important—those for personal service, such as that of locomotive engineers, rendered by American citizens to the Federal military authorities, for which the claimants have proper authorizations and payment orders signed by commanding officers, but payment of which is refused at the War Department in spite of the instructions from the commanders who employed them that they should apply there.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 412.11/146.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 1800.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, December 7, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to refer to my telegram of December 6, relative to the matter of certain classes of claims against the Mexican Government, and to transmit herewith copies in translation of notes which have been addressed to the German Minister and to this Embassy.

I have [etc.]

MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER.

[Inclosure 1.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the German Minister to Mexico.

No. 3380.] DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Mexico, December 2, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I beg to refer to your excellency's note No. 2683 of the 21st of October last, relative to the claim which Mr. Otto Katterfeldt, a German subject, resident in the city of Gómez Palacio, State of Durango, has presented against this Government for damages to him by sacking and robbing by a party of rebels on March 9th last.

The case having been duly considered, I have the honor to inform your excellency that the Mexican Government does not accept the said claim, basing its action upon the general principles of international law which exonerate States from the payment of damages suffered by foreigners during times of disturbance within the territory of such States; for there is no reason, either in justice or in equity, to differentiate such damages from those suffered by the nationals of the country.

The Mexican Government, therefore, in this as in all similar cases, declines all responsibility for the damages suffered by Mr. Katterfeldt.

I avail [etc.]

PEDRO LASCURAIN.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Mexico, December 2, 1912.

MR. CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES: I have the honor to inform you that upon examination of the claim presented through the Embassy against the Government of Mexico by Messrs. Daniel E. Sherron and Jack D. Van Horn, for the sums of $4,453.40 and $1,065,20, respectively, as the value of merchandise alleged to have been destroyed by revolutionary forces, such claim is considered unfounded, inasmuch as it is a universally recognized principle of international law, which has always been observed by your excellency's Government as well as by that of Mexico, that no State is legally responsible for damages and prejudices which during an insurrection or civil war may be suffered by foreigners at the hands of rebels, as under such circumstances they should suffer the same consequences as the natives.

Therefore the Government of Mexico declines all responsibility and does not accept the claim of Daniel E. Sherron and Jack D. Van Horn.

I avail [etc.]

PEDRO LASCURAIN.

File No. 412.11/145.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, December 11, 1912.

The Embassy has succeeded in obtaining payment through informal action of two of the claims of the class referred to in the last paragraph of my telegram of December 6.

SCHUYLER.

File No. 412.11/146.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 1142.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 19, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 1800 of the 7th instant, transmitting a copy of a note dated the 2d of the same month, in which the Minister for Foreign Affairs informs you that the Government of Mexico declines responsibility for the losses suffered by Daniel E. Sherron et al., on the ground that no State is legally responsible for damages and prejudices which during an insurrection may be suffered by foreigners at the hands of rebels. You also enclose a copy of a note of similar tenor which the Minister addressed to the Minister of Germany in relation to the claim of Otto Katterfeldt, a German subject.

In reply you are instructed to write a note to the Mexican Foreign Office acknowledging the receipt of its note of December 2 regarding the claims of Sherron et al., and informing it that the Government of the United States cannot admit the existence of any such unqualified rule as that stated by the Mexican Government, and that full reservation must be made of the right of this Government further to press this matter in connection with the hundreds of other claims which, it is now apparent, this Government must ultimately present to the Government of Mexico for settlement.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 312.11/1038.

Memorandum of an interview between the American Ambassador and the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs in New York City, December 21, 1912.

Minister Lascurain asked if he could arrange for an interview with President Taft and Mr. Knox on January 2, 1913, to which end Ambassador Wilson wrote Mr. Knox on the 21st of December, 1912.

During the conversation which followed his request, Ambassador Wilson urged Minister Lascurain to secure authority to make definite and categorical replies in these interviews to our note of December[1] 15, 1912.

Ambassador Wilson endeavored to impress upon Minister Lascurain the imperative necessity of Mexico meeting our demand for justice and furnishing ample guaranties therein. It was suggested that Minister Lascurain volunteer such proposals as he was authorized to make. In the alternative the Ambassador suggested to Minister Lascurain the submission of all difficulties between the United States and Mexico to an impartial arbitral commission, to be nominated by the Presidents of the United States and Mexico, in conformity with the usual methods. (Mr. Wilson believes this to be the surest way of getting speedy and definite action from Mexico.)

The suggestions and advice given by Ambassador Wilson to Minister Lascurain were given in response to an intimation and request from Minister Lascurain and were in no way spontaneous. It is suggested that a memorandum for an agreement for the arbitration of all claims and for the settlement of such litigation in which alleged denial of justice lies be immediately drawn up in simple form for the consideration of both countries; the period of adjudication not to exceed beyond four years. The commission is to consist of two arbitrators from each country and a fifth selected by them.

In conclusion it should be known that Minister Lascurain was very grateful for the advice given him, and said that he believed that great good had resulted from his meeting with Ambassador Wilson.

File No. 412.00/22.

The American Chargé d' Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 1834]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico, December 30, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith for the information of the Department copies of a note and translation thereof, dated November 9, 1912, from the Minister for Foreign Affairs to the Minister of Great Britain, pertaining to the attitude of the Mexican Government in the matter of claims growing out of the recent disturbances, which I received only Saturday last.

---

[1] This should be September. The note is printed in that chronological order under "Political Affairs," p. 842.

I have [etc.]

MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER.

[Inclosure—Translation.]

The Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs to the British Minister to Mexico.

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Mexico, November 9, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I have been honored by the note, No. 197, of your Legation, dated the 5th instant, in which, pursuant of instructions from Sir Edward Grey, you ask what attitude the Government of Mexico will take in the settlement of claims presented by foreigners on account of the present conditions in this country. In reply I have the honor to say that this Government considers that the disturbances which are occurring throughout the Republic do not have the character of those of the Revolution of 1910, as your excellency so correctly understands, and hopes that the illustrious Government of Great Britain is of the same opinion; for which reason the Government of Mexico has not made any decision in regard to the above claims, hoping that the disorders will cease; and as soon as this happens I shall be glad to inform your excellency of the course thereupon adopted.

I avail [etc.]

PEDRO LASCURAIN.

MOROCCO.

RELATION OF AMERICAN PROTÉGÉS TO THE FRENCH AUTHORITIES AT FEZ; GOOD OFFICES OF THE BRITISH CONSUL IN THE CASE OF MOHAMMED BEN LEHSEN EL FILALY.

File No. 381.81F47/4.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 257.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tangier, May 20, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to enclose copies of the two letters from Mr. J. M. Macleod, the British Consul at Fez, with reference to the case of Mr. Joseph R. Cazes' Semsar No. 7, Mohamed Ben Lehsen El Filaly, and also to enclose translation of the letter of thanks[1] of the French Consul at Fez. While awaiting the reply of the Department to my cable of the 18th instant with regard to this subject, I deem it wise that the enclosed correspondence may be on its way for the Department's information.

From my acquaintance with Mr. Macleod, I feel that our Government is most fortunate in this emergency in having the benefit of his years of experience and familiarity with conditions in the interior of Morocco, and of his very calm judgment of events there.

I have [etc.]

FRED W. CARPENTER.

[Inclosures.]

The British Consul at Fez to the American Minister at Tangier.

[Summary of the two letters referred to.]

The British Consul, Mr. J. M. Macleod, writes on May 8, 1912, to Mr. Fred W. Carpenter, the American Minister at Tangier, an account of the participation of an American protégé in the fighting at Fez between the French and the Moorish mutineers. This American protégé is Sid El Hadj Mohammed Ben Lehsen El Filaly, who is the Semsar of Mr. Joseph Cazes. During an attack on the Kasbah Filala he and some twenty-five of his friends rescued five men of a French detachment, in the course of which five of Filaly's friends were killed. The rescued French soldiers were taken by Filaly to the Kasbah Filala, where he housed and fed them. Filaly then went to the French Minister and reported the occurrence, and was warmly thanked by the Minister for his services. The same evening Filaly and his friends escorted the rescued soldiers to the quarter of the Consulates. At the request of the French Chief Intelligence Officer, Commandant de Lamothe, they also brought in the bodies of nine French soldiers, for which the Commandant thanked them.

Filaly has also been most generous in supplying food, bedding, etc., for the distressed Jews.

The British Consul reports these incidents feeling sure it will gratify the American Minister to learn of the brave and humane conduct of the American protégé.

---

[1] Not printed.

In the second letter, dated May 13 and 14, Mr. Macleod adds the following further particulars.

The French soldiers now say that, although it is true that they were sheltered at the Kasbah Filala, it was not till later that the American protégé, Filaly, assisted them; that at the beginning of the fight they were fired upon by the mutineers, who had been brought to the scene by the inhabitants of that very Kasbah Filala.

The American protégé denied this statement. Later, on May 11, he sent a message to the British Consul saying he had been arrested by the French authorities. The Consul sent Filaly's certificate of American protection to the French Military Intelligence Bureau and a letter to the effect that the Bureau was probably not aware of Filaly's being an American protégé.

The French officer in charge replied that they could arrest and interrogate whomsoever they pleased, and threw back to the messenger the copy of the certificate.

However, Filaly later appeared at the British Consulate, to say that he had been released.

But on May 12 Filaly's servant came in great alarm to say that his master was being thrashed by an officer at the French Bureau, and while he was talking Filaly himself appeared, in a most terrified state, saying that Lieutenant Arnaud of the Bureau had come to the Kasbah Filala and, cursing him, beat him over the head with his riding-whip.

The British Consul thereupon went with Filaly to M. Gaillard, the French Consul, who, although deprecating the beating, declared that Filaly was a French protégé. But M. Gaillard, after a visit to the Bureau, called for the protection-list, struck off Filaly's name and sent him away. Filaly implored the British Consul to make sure that he would not be in further danger; whereupon the Consul called on the French Minister and related the whole affair, with special emphasis on the lieutenant's conduct, saying that the Minister "would surely agree that curses and riding-whips were not mentioned amongst the powers which General Moinier, when proclaiming a 'state of siege' at Fez, had claimed the use of by the Military." The Minister promised to call General Moinier's attention to the lieutenant's behavior.

After his return to the Consulate the French Vice Consul called to explain and apologize, and it was agreed that El Filaly should remain at the British Consulate, where he then was, until the conclusion of the inquiry into El Filaly's affiliations and his acts during the attack on the Kasbah Filala. Later, Commandant de Lamothe informed the Consul that if this inquiry should implicate Filaly and a court martial should be ordered, an order would be issued for his arrest and the Consul would be asked to give him up. To this the Consul replied that, whatever the accusations against him, Filaly was an American-protected person, triable only by an American tribunal. Commandant de Lamothe answered "that as there was a state of war, and as a state of siege had been proclaimed, even though only on the 25th April—and the alleged offenses were committed on the 18th April—the French Court Martial alone had jurisdiction."

"I answered (writes Mr. Macleod) that no foreign consul here had recognized such a right, and that even were such right established it would be beyond my competence to surrender any British subject or protégé without instructions from my superiors to that effect, and still more to surrender, of my own discretion, a foreign—in this case an American—protégé, American interests being, for the time, in my charge."

Commandant de Lamothe replied that he did not anticipate any steps to arrest Filaly while in the British Consulate, which he understood was regarded as British soil, and added his warm acknowledgment of the courtesy Mr. Macleod had always shown the French authorities.

On May 14 Mr. Macleod called upon the French Minister, who said that the inquiry would show the Court Martial to have jurisdiction, but that he quite saw how the Consul could not surrender the accused without direction to that effect from the American Minister.

The letter ends as follows:

"I would beg, in conclusion, to point out how very serious the accusations are. Should a trial be ordered and the accused fail to clear himself he would be liable to be sentenced to death, and, obviously, recent events at Fez have not been of a nature to render a dispassionate trial by French Court Martial easy to carry out.

"Personally—from many years' acquaintance with him—and from what I have always heard of him from others, it would take much more and weightier evidence that I have yet heard to convince me that Hadj Mohammed Lehsen was capable of such odious conduct as the Tirailleurs have imputed to him.

"You will have observed of course that the offences alleged were committed on Wednesday 18 April, about dawn, that since noon on the 17th the Consulates quarter had been isolated and was in a state of self-defence, owing to the outbreak of the revolt, and consequently there had been no opportunity to communicate any advice to protégés as to the attitude they should observe. My advice to our British people and others applying to me, was, as soon as I could send it, (and is still) to observe the most rigid neutrality, leaving the French and French authorities and the rebels to fight out their quarrel by themselves. Otherwise, whenever French or Moorish soldiers or the like, were at fault, they would be apt to seek to clear themselves by blaming somebody else. This advice, of course, was not to preclude their sheltering any foreigners—noncombatants or combatants—or Jews in distress, but only referred to the operations of the French and Moorish Authorities.

J. M. MACLEOD."

File No. 381.81F47/1.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tangier, May 20, 1912.

Regarding the American protégé, Mohammed ben Lehsen el Filaly, the French officers concerned have apologized and report that the Court Martial have decided not to prosecute him. My British colleague has asked for instructions as to his nationals in any smilar situation, and although the present case is apparently closed I also should appreciate instructions as to future questions of a like nature.

CARPENTER.

File No. 381.81F47/6.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 263.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tangier, May 29, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to enclose two further letters from Mr. J. M. Macleod, the British Consul at Fez, with reference to our semsar Mohamed Lehsen El Filaly. The case was previously referred to in my cables to the Department of the 18th[1] and 20th instant, and in my despatches Nos. 257, 259[1] and 261,[1] of May 20th, 22nd and 24th, 1912.

From the last letter enclosed, it will be noted that the case so far as Filaly, the semsar, is concerned seems to be closed, as the French Consul at Fez has now advised the British Consul that he was satisfied that no proceedings whatever against him were in contemplation, and Filaly has now, therefore, left the British Consulate. I am glad that an incident was avoided in this case, though I believe the matter has been considerably discussed in Fez, and my colleague from Holland, now the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps here, asked me concerning it yesterday. He said in commenting on the matter that he should not consent to a court martial by the French of any of his nationals should the question arise.

---

[1] Not printed.

Mr. Macleod has endeavored in so far as possible to avoid the raising of the question in this case, though he advised me confidentially that he gathered from the French authorities that the reason the French closed the case as they did and not formally by writing was that they feared it would otherwise be construed by the powers here as an admission on their part that they did not have the power of court martial over foreign nationals. It would seem to be a matter of a good deal of importance should any further attempts of this character arise, but at least, pending the formal establishment and final assent by the powers to the French protectorate, and the wiping out of the Maghzen, it would, I feel very sure, be deemed by my colleagues here a great stretch of authority on the part of the French to contend that they now have such power. As the French are asking the favor of the nations as to their protectorate, it would seem to me, even as a matter of courtesy, if they felt that they could not concede it as a right, that they should first have consulted the power affected as to the form of trial before attempting summarily to proceed as they evidently intended to do in this case in the excitement of events there.

As the French Minister was in Fez, and pending any instructions from my Government, I have not deemed it wise to take the matter up at all with the French Chargé d'Affaires here, but rather to let the case be handled as it has been by the British Consul in Fez, who has apparently used much tact as well as firmness in the affair. M. Gaillard, the French Consul in Fez, is a man of much courtesy and consideration from all I have heard of him, and I have no doubt that his appreciation of the seriousness of the situation much assisted in the quiet settlement of it.

Awaiting the instructions of the Department, as to its attitude in this matter,

I have [etc.]

Fred W. Carpenter.

[Inclosure 1.]

The British Consul to the American Minister.

British Consulate,
Fez, May 23, 1912.

Sir: With reference to my letter of the 16th instant, I have the honour to report that on the 20th instant the Kasbah Filala people imprisoned in connection with the incident of the 18th April were released.

As no letter or further information had reached me about Hadj Mommed Lehsen, I enquired yesterday at the French Consulate how his case stood. M. Mercier, the Vice Consul, explained that the Reporter of the Court Martial had power to release accused persons when he thought no case was likely to be brought against them, but in any event the information lodged, and the Reporter's proceedings had to be submitted to the Court Martial. The latter then formally dismissed the case—or re-summoned the parties—as the Court might think fit. Such proceedings were usually (in cases like the present) merely formal, but still M. Mercier thought the most prudent course would be for Hadj Mohammed Lehsen to remain at this Consulate until the Court Martial had formally dismissed the complaint. Under the circumstances it was unlikely the Court would make any written communication to anybody, and so M. Mercier said that—in a personal way—he would arrange to learn when the Court Martial had formally disposed of the case and would inform me thereof, so that Hadj Mohammed Lehsen might then leave the Consulate without possibility of molestation in this affair.

I have [etc.]

J. M. Macleod.

[Inclosure 2.]

The British Consul to the American Minister.

British Consulate,
Fez, May 24, 1912.

Sir: With reference to my letter of yesterday, I have the pleasure to report that M. Gaillard, French Consul, called here yesterday afternoon and, in my presence, told Hadj Mohammed Lehsen that he was satisfied no proceedings whatever against him were in contemplation, and so M. Gaillard assured Hadj Mohammed he might now leave this Consulate freely without fear of molestation.

M. Gaillard assured me fully that the proceedings still to complete were merely formal and so it would only be causing Hadj Mohammed Lehsen unnecessary inconvenience were he to remain at this Consulate any longer.

Hadj Mohammed Lehsen, on my explaining this to him, stated he was quite satisfied, and after expressing his best thanks to M. Gaillard and myself he returned with great contentment to his house.

The incident, as far as it concerns Hadj Mohammed Lehsen, appears, therefore, to be now ended. I hope that I have been fortunate enough to act about it in the way your excellency would wish.

I have [etc.]

J. M. Macleod.

File No. 381.81F47/7.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 283.]

American Legation,
Tangier, July 11, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to report to the Department that Hadj Mohamed Lehesen El Filaly, Semsar at Fez of Mr. Joseph R. Cazes—concerning the attempted Court Martial of whom I recently had the correspondence with the Department—called at the office to thank the Legation for the interest taken in his case and said that it had saved his life. He stated that the French tried to get him to renounce his American protection and become French, when they found he was under American protection, and that his declining to do so brought on the trouble. That he had never had a certificate of French protection, as claimed, though they might have had him on their lists unknown to him. Since these events, however, he advises me that he has been shown great courtesy and kindness by the French officials so that the matter has apparently been taken somewhat to heart by them. He says the French have recently asked him once or twice to be of assistance to them, which he has gladly done. I told him I was glad to have him be of assistance to them when he could, and when they asked, but that usually he should maintain a neutral attitude in their disputes in so far as possible. He seems to be a man of a good deal of character and is thought very highly of by the prominent Moors here. He advised me that there is firing still about Fez every few nights, though the trade route here is now open; he further added that General Lyautey had made a very good impression, yet the French policy there from the first has made so many enemies, that the pacification of the tribes would undoubtedly be a long-pending work. As to conditions in the far south of the Empire, he said they were far from satisfactory, which corroborates the reports we get from all sources.

I have [etc.]

Fred W. Carpenter.

File No. 381.81F47/7.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 84.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 5, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your despatches, Nos. [etc.] relative to the protection of American semsars in Morocco, and in reply informs you that in the event that a similar case arises in the future, the Department desires appropriate protection extended to American semsars. The Department is also pleased to inform you that it approves the manner in which this case has been handled and desires that you so inform Mr. Macleod, the British Consul at Fez, and to express to that official this Department's appreciation for the deep interest which he manifested in the case and the able manner in which he handled it.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

NICARAGUA.

CONSTITUTION OF NICARAGUA PROMULGATED JANUARY 12, 1912.

File No. 817.011/1.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Managua, December 31, 1911.

The Constitution was to be promulgated tomorrow, but the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Chamorro, is withholding his signature. He told me to-day that among the Transitory Provisions is a clause making the election of Mena and Solórzano constitutional.

There is also a clause providing that all employees must be Nicaraguans excepting those on the Mixed Claims Commission.

The Constitution can be amended, after promulgation, only upon approval of amendments by two successive Congresses.

Having in mind the customs authorities who are not Nicaraguans, I suggested to the Minister to refrain for the present from [error in transmission] the Constitution. When proper provision shall have been made for the customs employees, either the Minister for Foreign Affairs or the Under Secretary will sign, they state, unless the Legation present a formal protest against the clause making constitutional the election of Mena and Solórzano.

I should add that the Nicaraguan Minister at Washington, Castrillo, has in several recent telegrams substantially stated that the Government of the United States will protect Nicaragua from foreign aggression and internal disorders unless these result from a failure to observe the Dawson Conventions.

Gunther.

File No. 817.011/6.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Managua, January 12, 1912.

In the Assembly yesterday the Minister for Foreign Affairs declined to comply with the Assembly's demand that he sign the constitution. A stormy scene ensued, in which American intervention was attacked. The Assembly does nothing without the assent of Mena, whose party is uniformly anti-American. To allay the excitement the Minister for Foreign Affairs, at the request of President

Díaz, agreed to sign. The President and Mena have promised me, however, not to allow promulgation of the constitution until January 31.

GUNTHER.

File No. 817.011/6.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 13, 1912.

Not having seen the text of the proposed constitution, the Department cannot express views thereon, but would regard its promulgation before the arrival of Weitzel (about January 18) as a distinct departure from the cooperation that has been practiced by the two Governments heretofore during the efforts of Nicaragua to reorganize its Government. You will impress this upon the Government of Nicaragua, again assuring President Díaz of the warm sympathy and cordial support of the United States.

KNOX.

File No. 817.011/7.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, January 13, 1912.

The Constitution was irregularly promulgated yesterday by the Assembly, without the signature of the Minister for Foreign Affairs and directly against the wishes of the President. Mena had encouraged the Assembly in this action. Furthermore, an act was passed concerning American intervention, couched in somewhat insulting terms; but this can still be reconsidered. The deputies intend to force the United States to recognize Mena's election and have been inciting Mena to consent to the overthrow of Díaz.

GUNTHER.

File No. 817.011/7.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d' Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 14, 1912.

Summon Mena to the Legation and inform him that this Government regards the Dawson Agreements—which he signed with the others—as still effective; that in pursuance thereof Díaz must complete his term of office; that the Government of the United States expects Mena, as a patriotic Nicaraguan, strictly to abide by and support those agreements; that his failure to do so would almost certainly result in internal disorder.

KNOX.

File No. 817.011/16.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 171.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, January 15, 1912.

SIR: * * * The President did everything in his power to keep his pledge to me that the Constitution would not be promulgated until after Mr. Weitzel's arrival, but he was powerless, as the Mena group became determined to force the issue. They have cherished the conviction that the United States Government would agree to Mena's election rather than risk the possibility of a disturbance which might imperil the Knox-Castrillo Convention in our Senate. * * *

Finally on the 10th instant the President called Mena and Dr. Suárez, the President of the Assembly, for another conference, in which the President and I reiterated our views. To my astonishment two days later Suárez makes a violent speech in the Assembly and relates in open session the proceedings of our conference. As a consequence a strong anti-American wave strikes the Assembly, and matters go from bad to worse until in the night session the enclosed Act is passed, after waiving all formalities. * * * It would still have been possible for General Mena to have stopped the entire matter, even by telephone. At eleven o'clock the Constitution was read and promulgated in the public park by two strong anti-American deputies, Señores Alcibiades Fuentes and Federico Lacayo. The Act was also read. I was greatly relieved to observe that very little popular interest was taken in the matter. As the hour was late, even the little boys who follow such things were in bed. It was also clear that the proceeding received the full official sanction of General Mena, as a large squad of police surrounded the readers and some pieces of Mena's own band supplied the music.

As already reported to the Department the Constitution was promulgated without the signature of the Minister for Foreign Affairs. The autograph copy had been in the keeping of the President and was obtained from him under false pretenses by Sr. Salvador Buitrago Díaz, Acting Minister of Gobernación, who represented that he wished it simply to make some comparisons, and in direct contravention to the President's orders, he sent it to the Assembly. The Minister of Gobernación is an underling of General Mena.

There have been no popular demonstrations to date whatsoever, and the reliable popular opinion strongly condemns action of the Assembly.

I have [etc.]

F. M. GUNTHER.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

Decree ordering the promulgation of the Constitution.

THE NATIONAL CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY,

CONSIDERING that the Chargé d'Affaires of the United States has given evidence of exceptional interest, as was manifested to Dr. Suárez, the President of the Assembly, in delaying the promulgation of the Constitution until the arrival of

Mr. Weitzel, the new Minister, who in all probability bears instructions from his Government to make amendments thereto;

CONSIDERING that this interposition of the Chargé d'Affaires of the United States carries with it, in effect, an insult to the national autonomy and the honor of the Assembly;

CONSIDERING that, above all, it is the duty of the Assembly to preserve the dignity and decorum of the Nation and the good name of this august body;

CONSIDERING that, given the territorial extent of our country, it is necessary to promulgate the Constitution some time in advance in order that it may be known to all the inhabitants of the Republic;

CONSIDERING that the Executive power has not ordained the publication of the Constitution, and that this Assembly desires that it be promulgated for the general good of the State;

CONSIDERING that there exists no principle which makes it indispensable that the Constitution be signed by all the Ministers in order that it may be promulgated and put into effect, or nullifies it for lack of the signature of one of them—

DECREES:

ARTICLE 1. That the Constitution elaborated by the present National Constituent Assembly be published by proclamation, or in the Official Gazette, or in any newspaper of the Republic.

ARTICLE 2. That the Junta Directiva of the Assembly be commissioned to take the necessary steps to cause this decree to have effect from date, by publishing the said Constitution in this city.

Given, [etc.]

R. LOPEZ CALLEJAS.
FEDERICO LACAYO.
JOSE F. SACASA.
MARIANO ZAVALA.

COMMISSION CHAMBER,
Managua, January 12, 1912.

File No. 817.011/12.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, January 16, 1912.

Your January 14. Public sentiment, as far as can be observed, welcomes its declarations, which are already well known.

GUNTHER.

File No. 817.011/17.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 2.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, January 24, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith two copies of the Gaceta Oficial of January 17, 1912, containing the Spanish text of the Nicaraguan Constitution recently promulgated with a preamble[1] mentioning me by name, and the American Chargé d'Affaires by title, as reported by Mr. Gunther in his confidential despatch No. 171 of the 15th instant.[1]

Because of the pressure of matters incident to the presentation of my letters of credence I have not had an opportunity to prepare an

---

[1] Meaning the decree above printed, the inclosure in Mr. Gunther's despatch.

English translation nor make a careful study of its various provisions. I have however marked all the parts which seem to have any bearing whatever on the relations between the United States and Nicaragua, including articles numbers 2, 14, 15, 44, 45, 55, 56, 57, 61, 62, 66, 71, 79, 84, 85, 103, 104, 111, 112, 117, 118, 135, 139, 151, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 167, 168, 170, and 171.

After a cursory examination I am inclined to think that paragraph 14 of article 85 relating to the public revenues and customs duties and article 170 reciting the validity of the elections of General Mena and Señor Solórzano as President and Vice President, respectively, for the next ensuing term, are the two provisions most susceptible of adverse criticism. Article 170 seems to be in conflict with article 103 of the Constitution which provides for the election of the President and Vice President by direct, popular and public vote.

In any event I doubt if the objectionable provisions of the Constitution are of sufficient importance to justify at this time any effort to influence the Assembly in rescinding its action.

It is possible that if matters are allowed to take their regular course the unfriendly factions will soon exhaust themselves and thereafter become more receptive to reason.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua.

In the presence of God, we the representatives of the Nicaraguan people, in constituent assembly, hereby decree and sanction the following Constitution:

TITLE I.—THE NATION.

ART. 1. Nicaragua is a free, sovereign, and independent Nation. Its territory, which also comprises the adjacent islands, is situated between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and the Republics of Honduras and Costa Rica.

ART. 2. The sovereignty is one, inalienable and imprescriptible, and resides essentially in the people, from whom the officials provided for by the Constitution and laws derive their powers. Consequently, no compacts or treaties shall be concluded which are contrary to the independence and integrity of the Nation, or which in any wise affect its sovereignty, except such as may look toward union with one or more Republics of Central America.

ART. 3. Public officials shall have no other powers than those expressly conferred on them by law. All acts performed by them outside the law shall be void.

TITLE II.—FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

ART. 4. The Government of Nicaragua is republican, democratic, representative, and centralized. It consists of three independent branches, viz, the Legislative, the Executive, and the Judicial.

TITLE III.—RELIGION.

ART. 5. The majority of Nicaraguans profess the Apostolic Roman Catholic religion. The Government guarantees the free exercise of this form of worship, as well as of all others provided they are not contrary to Christian morals and public order, the enactment of laws favoring or restricting certain creeds being prohibited.

TITLE IV.—EDUCATION.

ART. 6. The teaching of any lawful industry, trade, or profession shall be free. Primary instruction shall be compulsory and that financed by the Government shall be free. As regards professional instruction, the law shall determine what professions require a previous diploma for their exercise and the formalities for obtaining it.

TITLE V.—NICARAGUANS.

ART. 7. Nicaraguans are native or naturalized.

ART. 8. The following are native:

1. Persons born in Nicaragua of parents who are Nicaraguans or domiciled foreigners.
2. Children who are born abroad and whose father or mother is a Nicaraguan, provided they choose Nicaraguan nationality.

ART. 9. The following are naturalized:

1. Natives of other Central American Republics who reside in Nicaragua and declare their desire to be Nicaraguans before the proper authority.
2. Foreign women who marry Nicaraguans.
3. Spanish-Americans who have resided one year in the country, and other foreigners who have resided there two years, provided they declare their desire to become naturalized before the proper authority.
4. Persons who secure naturalization papers according to law.

ART. 10. The following persons shall forfeit their Nicaraguan citizenship:

1. Those who, while not residing in Nicaragua, voluntarily secure naturalization in a foreign country not situated in Central America. However, they shall recover their Nicaraguan citizenship by reestablishing their domicile in Nicaragua, at whatever time this occur.
2. Nicaraguan women who marry foreigners, provided they acquire the citizenship of their husbands according to the law of the nation of the latter, but they shall recover Nicaraguan citizenship upon becoming widows if they lose the citizenship of their husbands owing to this cause.

ART. 11. The provisions of this title may be modified by treaty on condition of reciprocity.

TITLE VI.—FOREIGNERS.

ART. 12. The Republic of Nicaragua shall be a safe asylum for any person seeking refuge in its territory.

ART. 13. Foreigners in Nicaragua shall enjoy all the civil rights of Nicaraguans; they shall be obliged to respect the authorities and obey the laws, and in regard to property acquired by them in the country they shall be subject to all ordinary or extraordinary taxes levied against Nicaraguans.

ART. 14. Foreigners shall not be allowed to lay claims against or demand any indemnity of the Nation except in the cases and in the manner in which Nicaraguans may do so.

ART. 15. Foreigners may resort to diplomatic channels only in case of denial of justice. The fact that an executory judgment is unfavorable to the claimant shall not be considered as such denial. If, in contravention of this provision, they fail to amicably terminate the claims which they raise, they shall forfeit the right to dwell in the country.

ART. 16. Extradition for political crimes is prohibited, even though a common-law crime arises therefrom.

Treaties and the law shall specify the cases in which extradition may take place for grave common-law crimes.

ART. 17. The manner and cases in which foreigners may be refused admission to the country or be expelled shall be prescribed by law.

TITLE VII.—CITIZENS.

ART. 18. All Nicaraguans who have reached 21 years of age shall be citizens, as well as all those who have reached the age of eighteen who are married or are able to read and write.

ART. 19. The following shall be rights of citizens:

1. Suffrage.
2. Holding public office.
3. Having and bearing arms, all in accordance with the law.

ART. 20. The rights of a citizen shall be suspended:

1. By virtue of a warrant of arrest or declaration that there is cause for action.

2. By virtue of a sentence involving disfranchisement with respect to the exercise of political rights, during the term of the sentence.

3. By virtue of a sentence imposing a severer than "correctional" penalty, pending rehabilitation.

4. Owing to mental incapacity.

5. For being a fraudulent debtor.

6. For notoriously vicious conduct.

7. For ingratitude toward one's parents or unrighteous abandonment of wife or minor legitimate children.

(A previous legal declaratory decree shall be necessary in case of the grounds set forth under 4, 5, 6, and 7.)

8. For acting in Nicaragua in the employ of foreign (not Central American) Nations without permission from the Legislature.

ART. 21. The right to vote is individual and can not be delegated.

ART. 22. Suffrage shall be direct and public. Elections shall be held at the time and in the manner prescribed by the law.

TITLE VIII.—RIGHTS AND GUARANTIES.

ART. 23. The inhabitants of the Republic, whether Nicaraguans or foreigners, shall be guaranteed individual safety, liberty, equality, and property rights.

ART. 24. The death penalty shall be inflicted solely for the crime of treason committed in a foreign war in the face of the enemy, and for the atrocious crimes of assassination, parricide, and incendiarism or robbery resulting in death and under grave circumstances specified by law.

ART. 25. The Constitution recognizes the right of habeas corpus. Consequently, every inhabitant of Nicaragua shall be entitled to demand the exhibition of a prisoner in person.

ART. 26. A warrant of arrest not issued by a competent authority or in accordance with the legal formalities shall be unlawful.

ART. 27. Detention pending inquiry into common law offenses shall not exceed 8 days, plus the time required to cover distance, for the purpose of placing the accused at the disposal of the proper judge.

ART. 28. A criminal caught in the act may be arrested by any person in order to be delivered up immediately to the authority having power to arrest.

ART. 29. A warrant of arrest shall not be issued unless there is ample evidence that a punishable act deserving a severer than "correction" penalty has been committed, and unless there is at least a strong suspicion as to who is the perpetrator.

ART. 30. Imprisonment or arrest as a penalty or coercive measure (to enforce judicial orders) shall be permissible in the cases and for the period prescribed by law.

ART. 31. No person shall be tried by special commissions or by other judges than those designated by the law prior to the commission of the deed giving rise to the action.

ART. 32. No public authority shall be permitted to remove to another tribunal causes pending before a competent authority, or to [re-] open proceedings which have terminated.

In criminal matters an appeal may be allowed for revision of finished cases in which severer than correctional penalties have been inflicted. The law shall regulate the exercise of this right.

ART. 33. In criminal matters the placing of a person under oath in regard to his own deeds shall be prohibited.

ART. 34. No person may be deprived of the right of defense. Trials shall always be public.

ART. 35. The infliction of perpetual or infamous punishments, whipping, and all kinds of torture are prohibited.

ART. 36. Persons under arrest or imprisoned shall not be deprived of the right of communication except by virtue of another written order from the proper authority, and then for a period not to exceed three days and only for grave crimes.

ART. 37. Nobody shall be kept prisoner or detained in any other place than the public ones intended for the purpose, unless the law so permits and the guilty or detained party expressly consents thereto.

ART. 38. The dwelling of every person shall constitute a safe and inviolable asylum, to be entered only by the authorities in the following cases:

1. In the actual pursuit of a criminal or in order to take out a criminal caught in the act.

2. On demand from inside the house, because a crime is committed therein, or because of scandalous disorder requiring prompt remedy.

3. In case of conflagrations, earthquakes, floods, epidemics, or analogous events.

4. In order to take out things sought in a trial, there being at least fairly ample evidence of the existence of such things (in the house), or in order to execute a legally issued order (of the court).

5. In order to liberate a person who is being unlawfully "sequestered."

6. In order to apprehend a criminal against whom a warrant for arrest or imprisonment for a crime has been issued, there being at least fairly ample evidence that he is hiding in the house to be entered.

In the last three cases the entrance shall not be made without a written order from a competent authority.

ART. 39. When the house to be entered is not the residence of the criminal being pursued, the permission of the owner or occupant shall first be requested.

ART. 40. In cases in which a written order from the authority is required, houses shall not be entered between 7 p. m. and 6 a. m. without the consent of the owner or occupant.

ART. 41. Epistolary correspondence shall be inviolable. That which is purloined from post offices or any other place shall not be admissible as evidence against any one.

ART. 42. Private papers may be seized only by virtue of an order from a competent judge, in the criminal or civil cases determined by the law, and they shall be examined in the presence of the owner, or, in his absence, of two witnesses, those which do not relate to the matter under investigation being returned.

ART. 43. No one shall be molested or persecuted on account of his opinions. Private acts which do not disturb public order, are not contrary to morals, and do not cause injury to third parties shall always be beyond the pale of the law.

ART. 44. All persons shall be allowed to communicate their thoughts freely by word of mouth or in writing without previous censorship, being liable according to law for any abuse of this freedom.

ART. 45. The enactment of proscriptive, confiscatory, or retroactive laws, or of laws imposing infamous punishment shall be prohibited.

ART. 46. The right to reclaim confiscated property shall be imprescriptible.

ART. 47. Imprisonment for debt shall be prohibited.

ART. 48. The freedom of unarmed assemblage and of association for any lawful purpose is guaranteed.

ART. 49. Entails are prohibited.

ART. 50. Every person shall have a right to address petitions to the legally constituted authority, and to have them decided upon and be informed of the decision reached in regard to them.

ART. 51. Every person shall have a right to enter and leave the Republic and to remain in and pass through its territory, in strict obedience to the laws.

ART. 52. Every service which ought not to be rendered without compensation according to law shall be fairly remunerated.

ART. 53. The law does not recognize personal privileges.

ART. 54. Every legally capacitated person shall be free to dispose of his property under any legal title, but in no case shall entails be established.

In testamentary succcessions there shall be compulsory assignments only in behalf of the descendants, ascendants, and consorts, with the preferences and limitations prescribed by law.

ART. 55. Congress alone may authorize loans and levy direct or indirect taxes, and all authorities are prohibited from negotiating the former or levying the latter without its permission, save the exceptions provided in the Constitution.

ART. 56. Direct taxes shall be levied proportionately.

ART. 57. No one shall be deprived of his property except by virtue of a judgment rendered by a competent authority, or by reason of public utility. The condemnation in the latter case must be specifically prescribed by the law or by a judgment based on the latter, and shall not be carried out without previous indemnity.

In case of domestic or foreign war it is not necessary for the indemnity to be previous.

ART. 58. No person enjoying the free right of administration of his property shall be deprived of the right to terminate his civil lawsuits by compromise or arbitraton.

ART. 59. Every author, inventor, or owner of a trade-mark shall enjoy the exclusive ownership of his work, discovery, or mark in the manner and during the time prescribed by law.

ART. 60. No severer than correctional penalty shall be inflicted for common law crimes without a verdict first being rendered by a jury as to the guilt of the accused party.

ART. 61. Monopolies in the interest of private individuals shall be prohibited.

ART. 62. The declaration of a state of siege may temporarily suspend the guaranties mentioned, except:

1. That establishing the inviolability of human life, with its exceptions.
2. That prohibiting trial by judges not designated by the law.
3. That prohibiting the infliction of infamous or perpetual punishments, whipping, and any kind of torture.
4. That prohibiting the enactment of retroactive or confiscatory laws.
5. Those embodied in Arts. 55 and 56.
6. The legal immunities of officials.

ART. 63. The laws regulating the exercise of the (right to enjoy the) constitutional guaranties shall be void insofar as they may diminish, restrict, or impair them.

ART. 64. An official who unauthorizedly restricts any of the guaranties contained in this Title shall be liable to damages commensurate with the injury caused, without prejudice to other legal liabilities.

TITLE IX.—LEGISLATIVE BRANCH.

ART. 65. The legislative power shall be vested in a Congress composed of two Houses—the Senate and the House of Representatives.

ART. 66. Congress shall convene at the capital of the Republic on December 15 of each year without the necessity of a call. It shall hold 45 regular sessions, subject to extension to 15 more.

ART. 67. It shall also hold extra sessions when convoked by the Executive, and in this event it shall deal only with matters submitted to it by the latter.

ART. 68. Congress may also convene and continue its sessions in any other town of the Republic without a call by the Executive, but in no case shall the legal quorum be supplied by uninstalled substitutes.

ART. 69. The election of Representatives shall be by popular suffrage, direct and public. The "departments" of the Republic shall be divided for this purpose into as many electoral districts as they contain multiples of 15,000 inhabitants, a district being added for fractions over 8,000. Each district shall elect one regular and one substitute representative.

The Regions of Cape Gracias á Dios and San Juan del Norte shall each (?) be considered as an electoral district.

ART. 70. Each "department" shall be entitled to elect one regular and one substitute Senator for every two Representatives. If the number of Representatives is an odd one, another regular and substitute Senator shall be elected.

ART. 71. The law shall make the necessary demarcations for the elections.

ART. 72. Five days before the dates set for Congress to convene, the Senators and Representatives shall meet and hold their respective preliminary conferences; and in the presence of at least five members of each House they shall draw up Rules and take the necessary measures for bringing their members together and solemnly convening Congress.

ART. 73. One-half plus one of the Seators and Representatives shall be sufficient in each House in order to legally convene.

ART. 74. The Representatives shall serve four years in their office, one-half being renewed every two years.

ART. 75. The term of office of the Senators shall be six years, one-third being renewed every two years.

ART. 76. In order to be a Representative it shall be necessary to be a citizen in the exercise of one's rights, belong to the laity, and have reached the age of 25 years.

ART. 77. In order to be a Senator it shall be necessary to be a citizen in the exercise of one's rights, belong to the laity, and have reached the age of 40 years.

ART. 78. The following shall not be eligible as members of the Legislative Branch:

1. Persons who have held office by appointment of the Executive within two months preceding the election.

2. The magistrates of courts of justice and the officials under them.

3. Relatives of the President of the Republic, within the second degree of consanguinity or affinity.

4. Persons who, having administered or collected public funds, are not yet solvent in this regard.

Art. 79. Senators and Representatives shall enjoy the following prerogatives from the date of their election:

1. Personal immunity from indictment or trial for official or common law crimes, unless Congress first declare them subject to prosecution.

2. They shall not be subject to civil suit from thirty days before the opening of the regular session of Congress, or from the date of a decree calling an extra session, to fifteen days after the termination of either.

If the suits or actions are already pending, the proceedings shall be suspended during the sessions.

3. They shall not be called into military service without their consent.

4. They shall not be banished from the Republic, confined, or deprived of their liberty on any ground, even during a state of siege, unless Congress declares them amenable to prosecution.

Art. 80. Members of Congress may accept offices from the Executive during recess, but during sessions they may only accept the offices of Head of Department, Diplomatic Officer, or Professor. In either case they shall forfeit their capacity as Representative by the acceptance of any office except the last two mentioned.

Art. 81. The Executive shall give an account to the House of Congress, when convened, of all appointments he has made in order that they may supply the vacancies produced. During a recess of Congress it shall be the duty of the Executive to have the vacancies filled.

Art. 82. The Houses shall open and close their sessions at the same time, and neither of them shall suspend or extend them for more than three days without the concurrence of the other.

Title X.—Rights Common to the Houses.

Art. 83. Each House shall have a right, without the interference of the other:

1. To regulate the order of its sessions and everything relating to its internal rules.

2. To pass upon the election and credentials of its members.

3. To compel their attendance.

4. To accept by a two-thirds vote the resignations of its members founded on duly verified legal grounds.

5. To order reelections in case of missing, deceased, resigning, or incapacitated members.

6. To ask the Executive for a statement of the receipts and expenditures on all or any of the accounts, as well as for reports on any branch of the administration.

7. To invite the other House to a joint conference.

Title XI.—Rights and Duties of Congress when Convened in Joint Session.

Art. 84. It shall be the duty of Congress:

1. To regulate the order of its sessions.

2. To regulate the votes and judge and declare the election of President and Vice President of the Republic, and to elect these officers in the cases provided by the Constitution.

, The President shall be that duly qualified citizen who receives the majority of votes of all qualified voters. If no person receives such a majority, Congress shall elect the President between the two persons who have received the largest number of votes, even though this number should be equal in case of both. The same rule shall be observed in electing a Vice President. Ties occurring in the popular election or in that made by Congress shall be settled by lot whenever this measure is necessary in order to apply the rules of the present article.

3. To select each year two emergency candidates to act in their order as President of the Republic when there is an absolute or temporary lack of a President and Vice President.

The persons selected as emergency candidates must be members of the National Legislature who fulfill the requirements for being President of the Republic.

4. To select the judges of the supreme court and court of appeals.

5. To act on resignations of the President and Vice President of the Republic and of judges of courts.

6. To declare, by a two-thirds vote, when it is proper to institute proceedings against the President, Vice President, Senators, Representatives, Judges, heads of Departments, and Diplomatic Officers of the Republic.

7. To extend for the Executive the period within which laws and other provisions are to be published.

8. To administer the constitutional oath to officials whom it selects or declares elected.

9. To declare the preference when the same person is elected as a member of different branches of the Government, in the following order:

1. President of the Republic.
2. Vice President of the Republic.
3. Senator.
4. Representative.

TITLE XII.—RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF CONGRESS WHEN CONVENED IN SEPARATE SESSION.

ART. 85. It shall be the duty of Congress when convened in separate session:

1. To enact, construe, revise, and repeal laws.

2. To create and abolish offices, establish pensions, confer honors, and grant amnesties.

3. To take all suitable measures for the safety and defense of the Republic.

4. To change the place of residence of the supreme governmental authorities.

5. To award prizes and grant temporary privileges to authors or inventors of things of general utility, and to persons who have introduced new or improved existing industries.

6. To grant subsidies or premiums on objects of public utility which contribute toward establishing new industries or promoting agriculture.

7. To approve or disapprove the conduct of the Executive.

8. To approve, amend or abrogate treaties concluded with foreign nations.

9. To regulate maritime and land commerce.

10. To approve or disapprove the accounts of public expenditures.

11. To fix the estimates each year.

12. To determine the duties of the officials of the Republic, and designate the territorial jurisdiction within which they are to act.

13. To levy taxes.

14. To order the alienation or lease of national property and the devotion thereof to public uses, or to authorize the Executive to do so on conditions suitable to the Republic. The public revenues or taxes shall not be alienated or leased out.

15. To authorize loans and regulate the payment of the national debt, or determine the conditions on which the Executive shall do so.

16. To open ports; create, transfer, or abolish customhouses; or lay down rules in accordance with which the Executive may do so.

17. To fix the weight, standard, value, type, and denominations of the national money and regulate the system of weights and measures.

18. To declare war and make peace or authorize the President for this purpose.

19. To fix the strength of the land and naval forces at each regular session.

20. To permit or refuse to permit the troops of another country to cross through the territory of the Republic, and to authorize the departure of national troops from Nicaragua. During a state of war the Executive shall have these powers.

21. To declare martial law ("state of siege") and even to suspend the constitutional order of things throughout the Republic or in a part thereof, when public peace is threatened or in case of foreign aggression. Such a declaration or suspension shall last sixty days at most, according to circumstances, a new declaration by Congress being necessary in order to prolong it.

22. To confer the grades of General of Brigade and Division.

23. To grant pardons or commutations of sentences, at the instance of the Executive, after receiving a report from the Supreme Court.

24. To grant premiums or rewards for eminent services.

25. To approve or disapprove contracts concluded by the Executive with individuals or companies regarding loans, colonization, navigation, and other works of general utility, provided they are permitted by the constitution and involve temporary privileges or affect the property of the Nation, or when money not appropriated in the estimates is availed of therein.

26. To permit the establishment of pawnshops and banks of issue.

27. To determine the coat of arms and flag of the Republic.

28. To grant or refuse permission to Nicaraguans to accept offices in foreign countries when the duties thereof are to be discharged in Nicaragua.

Art. 86. The Legislative Branch can not supply or declare the civil status of persons, or confer academic or literary degrees.

Art. 87. The powers of the Legislative Branch cannot be delegated, except the authority to legislate in the departments of Fomento, Police, Charity, and Public Instruction, which may be delegated to the Executive during a recess of Congress; and the powers relating to the administration of the constitutional oath to officials whom it elects or declares elected.

Art. 88. In the measures and laws enacted by Congress the following phraseology shall be used: "The Senate and House of Representatives of the Republic of Nicaragua decree, resolve, and declare: (here follows that which is decreed or resolved). Given in the Session Hall of Congress (when in joint session) or of the Chamber in which the measure originated (when in separate session), place and date." Then follow the signatures of the President (Speaker) and Secretaries of the Congress or Chamber, as the case may be. Upon the measure being approved in the other Chamber, the latter shall say: "To the Executive, Senate or House of Representatives" (as the case may be), setting down the proper place and date and the signatures of the Presiding officer and Secretaries concerned.

Art. 89. All measures of the Legislature shall be enacted in the form of a law or resolution.

Art. 90. Any bill or resolution may originate in either Chamber, only measures relating to taxes being reserved to the House.

Art. 91. Only Representatives and Senators in their respective Chambers, Secretaries of Departments on behalf of the Executive, and the Supreme Court, in matters pertaining to their branch, shall have a right to recommend such bills, resolutions, or declarations as they deem suitable.

Art. 92. When a bill is passed in one Chamber it shall go as an original measure to the other, which shall take it into consideration and may pass it or not, or revise it. In the latter case the bill shall be regarded as originating in the Chamber that revises it.

Art. 93. No bill shall be finally passed until subjected to two deliberations on different days, except in case of urgency as determined by a two-thirds vote taken after a single discussion.

Art. 94. Every bill, upon being passed by Congress in separate session, shall be transmitted to the Executive within three days at the latest after passage, in order that he may give it his sanction and have it promulgated as a law within ten days.

Art. 95. If the President, with the advice and consent of his Cabinet, should find objections to sanctioning the bill, he shall return it to Congress within five days, setting forth the grounds on which he bases his dissent. If he does not object to it within the period mentioned, it shall be considered as being sanctioned, and shall be published as a law. When the Executive returns the bill, Congress shall subject it to a further deliberation in joint session, and if it should be ratified by a two-thirds vote, it shall be retransmitted to the Executive accompanied by the words "Ratified constitutionally", whereupon the Executive shall have it published without delay.

Art. 96. When Congress passes a bill during the last five days of its session and the Executive deems it inexpedient to sanction it, he shall immediately give notice to Congress in order that it may remain in sesssion for ten days from the date on which the autograph was transmitted to it; if he fails to do this, the law shall be considered sanctioned.

Art. 97. When a bill has been rejected it can not be brought forward again until the next Legislature.

Art. 98. The sanction of the Executive shall not be necessary to the following decrees and resolutions:

1. In elections made or declared by Congress, and in resignations accepted or declined.

2. In regulations issued by Congress or the Chambers for their internal government.

3. In resolutions for convening, for transferring its seat elsewhere, and for suspending or extending its sessions.

4. In the law on the estimates.

5. In decrees relating to the conduct of the Executive.

6. In articles of impeachment (declarations that there is ground for instituting proceedings.)

ART. 99. Whenever the purpose of a bill not originating in the Supreme Court is to revise or repeal provisions of the Civil or Criminal Code, Code of Commerce, Mining Code, or Code of Procedure, it shall not be discussed without hearing the opinion of said Court, which shall give its opinion either during the same session or that of the next year, according to the extent, importance, or urgency of the bill.

ART. 100. The wording to be used in publishing laws shall be as follows: "The President of the Republic to the inhabitants of the latter, know ye that the Congress has ordained as follows (Here the text and signature) Therefore let it be enforced."

TITLE XIII.—EXECUTIVE BRANCH.

ART. 101. The office of Chief Executive shall be held by a citizen called President of the Republic, in his absence by the Vice President, and failing the latter by one of the emergency candidates according to their order.

ART. 102. The President of the Republic, the Vice President, and the emergency candidates must be citizens in the exercise of their rights, have reached the age of 30 years, belong to the laity, and be natives of Nicaragua.

ART. 103. The election of President and Vice President of the Republic shall be by popular vote, direct and public.

ART. 104. The term of office of the President and Vice President shall be four years, beginning on January 1. No citizen who holds the office of President, either as the duly elected incumbent or accidentally, shall be eligible to the office of President or Vice President for the next term.

ART. 105. No person shall be elected President or Vice President who is related by blood or marriage in a direct line, or up to the fourth degree inclusive in a collateral line, with the President of the Republic or with the person holding the office of President during the last six months prior to the election.

ART. 106. In case of the absolute or temporary lack of a President of the Republic, the office of Chief Executive shall devolve on the Vice President, and in default of the latter, in one of the emergency candidates in the order of their election. In the latter case, if the Congress is in session, it shall be its duty to authorize the entrustment of the office to the Representative whom it may designate, who must fulfill the requirements for President of the Republic.

ART. 107. Until the person designated by law receive the office of President, it shall be discharged by the Secretary of the Interior, who shall give up possession to the new official if Congress is not in session.

ART. 108. The President shall not leave the country during the term of his office without permission from Congress, nor shall he do so at the end of his term if there are proceedings pending against him for official or common law offenses.

TITLE XIV.—DUTIES AND POWERS OF THE EXECUTIVE.

ART. 109. The President of the Republic is the Chief Magistrate of the Nation and Commander in Chief of the land and naval forces. He has charge of the general administration of the country, which he shall carry on through Secretaries of Department and their Assistant Secretaries.

ART. 110. The law shall determine the number of Secretaries of Departments and the distribution of duties among them.

ART. 111. The duties of the Executive shall be as follows:

1. To defend the independence and honor of the Nation and the integrity of its territory.

2. To enforce and have enforced the Constitution and laws, issuing the necessary decrees and orders for the purpose, without altering the spirit of the former.

3. To appoint Secretaries and Assistant Secretaries of Departments and other Executive officers.

4. To preserve the domestic peace and security of the Republic and repel all attacks and aggressions from abroad.

5. To afford the members of the Judiciary such aid and power as they may need in order to carry out his orders.

6. To remove officials freely appointed by him.

7. To recommend to Congress, when required by the public welfare, amnesties, pardons, or commutations of sentences of criminals, and to grant amnesties during recesses of Congress.

8. To call extra sessions of Congress when the interests of the Nation require.

9. To present to the Legislature, through the Secretaries of the several Departments and within fifteen days from the date on which it convenes, a detailed report on the administrative branches, and itemized account of the proceeds and expenditure of the revenues, and the estimates of expenditures for the following year, pointing out improvements of which the legislation may be susceptible.

10. To conclude treaties and any other diplomatic negotiations, submitting them to Congress for its ratification.

11. To direct foreign relations, appoint consuls and diplomatic officers or ministers of the Republic, and admit and receive those appointed by foreign nations.

12. To cause the revenues of the Republic to be collected and expended in accordance with the law.

13. To confer military grades in time of peace up to Colonel inclusive, and the higher grades up to General of Division in the field; and recommend to Congress the conferring of these latter grades in time of peace.

14. To assemble the military forces, land and naval, organize them, and distribute them in accordance with the law and the needs of the Republic.

15. To grant privateering licenses and letters of reprisal.

16. To declare martial law and even suspend the constitutional order of things, during recesses of Congress, in the cases and under the conditions provided in Art. 85, No. 21.

17. To grant naturalization papers.

18. To direct and encourage public instruction, to diffuse popular education, and exercise supreme supervision over private institutions of learning.

19. To sanction laws, use the veto power in appropriate cases, and promulgate without delay all legislative measures which do not require the Executive sanction.

20. To order vacancies of Senators and Representatives filled during recesses of Congress within one month at the latest from the time they occur.

21. To publish monthly statements of the receipts and expenditures of the public revenues.

22. To watch over the legal exactness of money and to decide as may be proper regarding the admission of foreign money into circulation. To see to the uniformity of weights and measures, and in general to exercise supreme police supervision.

23. To attend to the internal security and external defense of the country.

24. To conclude contracts for the purpose of supplying the needs of administration and to submit to the ratification of Congress those which relate to loans, colonization, navigation, and other works of utility, as well as those which involve temporary privileges or affect national property, or when money not appropriated in the estimates is availed of therein.

25. To declare war with the authorization of Congress, and make peace when the convenience of the Nation requires.

26. To direct the operations of war as Commander in Chief of the National Army and Navy. When he wishes to place himself at the head of the Army, he shall commit the office of President to the person who is to take his place in accordance with the Constitution and he shall remain invested solely with the character of Commander in Chief and with the powers of Commanding General.

27. To see that Congress convene on the date set by the Constitution, taking the necessary measures for the purpose in due time.

28. To grant patents and copyrights in order to guarantee for a certain period literary property and inventions applicable to new industries or to the improvement of those already existing.

29. To designate, during recess of Congress, the place where the Government authorities shall transfer their seat when grave grounds arise for taking this step.

30. To raise the necessary force in order to repel any invasion or quell rebellions, and in these cases to levy taxes or negotiate loans and give an account to Congress at its next session.

31. To control the land and naval forces for the defense and security of the Republic, in order to maintain order and tranquillity therein, and for any other purpose demanded by the public service.

32. To rehabilitate, in accordance with the law, those citizens who have been suspended in the exercise of their rights.

33. To take the necessary measures in order that the elections may be held at the time prescribed by law, and in order that the rules provided by the law may be observed.

34. To close or open ports during recesses of Congress.

35. To adopt regulations governing his duties and powers.

36. To adopt measures for taking the census of the population and other branches of the national statistics.

37. To establish special rules for the temporary government of regions which are uninhabited or inhabited by uncivilized aborigines.

38. To determine the rules to which the occupation or alienation of vacant public lands shall be subject, and to devote these lands to colonization and useful enterprises.

39. To suspend the execution of the death penalty whenever requested to take the initiative in commuting a sentence, being obliged to give an account to the next session of Congress.

ART. 112. When public tranquillity is threatened, the Executive may issue warrants of arrest against persons presumed to be guilty, and examine them, placing them at the disposal of a competent judge within ten days; however, if it is necessary in the opinion of the Executive to confine in the interior or expel from the Republic any persons suspected of conspiracy or treason, he shall decide on the proper steps to be taken at a Cabinet meeting and with the votes of two regular (not substitute) Senators. If public order is disturbed, the concurrence of the Senators shall not be necessary.

ART. 113. The President and his ministers, and Senators, as the case may be, shall be responsible for measures adopted by them against the Constitution and the laws. In civil matters the responsibility shall be joint.

TITLE XV.—HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS.

ART. 114. The Heads of Departments must be citizens in the exercise of their rights, natives of Nicaragua, laymen, and 25 years old.

All decrees, resolutions, and orders of the President must be authorized by the heads of the departments within their respective spheres.

ART. 115. The following persons shall be barred from holding the position of head of a department:

1. Contractors for work or public services on account of the Nation.
2. Persons who, as a result of their contracts, have claims in their own interests against the Public Treasury.
3. Debtors to the Public Treasury.
4. Persons administering public funds, until their accounts are finally settled.
5. Relatives of the President within the second degree of consanguinity or affinity.

ART. 116. Heads of departments may attend, without voting, the deliberations of the Legislature, and they shall be obliged to attend whenever called upon, and answer any inquiry made of them by any Representative (or Senator) in regard to the affairs under their administration, except those relating to war and foreign affairs, when secrecy is deemed necessary, unless the Chamber decides to the contrary.

TITLE XVI.—THE JUDICIARY.

ART. 117. There shall be three Courts of Appeals, one situated in the city of Granada, another at León, and the third at Bluefields. The first two shall be composed of six regular judges, three for each of the two sections—civil and criminal; the Bluefields court shall have three regular and two substitute judges. The inferior judge shall be determined by statute.

The Justices of the Supreme Court and of the Court of Appeals shall be appointed by Congress in joint session, the term of office of the former lasting six and of the latter four years.

Congress may create other courts of appeals.

ART. 118. The Justices must be citizens in the exercise of their rights, belong to the laity, and be lawyers and have reached the age of 30 years.

ART. 119. Persons connected by blood relationship within the fourth degree or by marriage within the second shall be barred from serving as justices or judges in the same court.

If two or more persons related within these degrees are appointed, the person receiving the largest number of votes shall be preferred, and in case of a tie, the person who has longest been a lawyer.

The appointment of the others shall be made over again.

ART. 120. The law shall regulate the organization of the judiciary and the administration of justice.

ART. 121. The rights to judge and carry out judgments belong to the (higher and lower) courts.

ART. 122. The courts and judges of the Republic shall preferably apply:

1. The Constitution and constituent laws.
2. The laws and legislative decrees; and
3. Executive decrees and resolutions.

In no case shall they heed any provisions or revisions made by virtue of a dispatch (official communication).

ART. 123. The Supreme Court shall moreover exercise the following powers:

1. Adopting its internal rules.
2. Take original cognizance of official and common law offenses of high officers whom Congress has impeached.
3. To authorize lawyers, scriveners, and notaries who have been received within or outside the Republic to carry on their business, and to suspend and reinstate them according to law.
4. To take cognizance of appeals against decisions of the Court of Accounts.
5. To take cognizance of appeals for review and protection (amparo) in the cases indicated by law.
6. To try maritime prize cases and other matters referred to it by law.
7. To appoint inferior judges, legal physicians, and registrars of property, in accordance with the law.
8. To accept resignations of employees appointed by it and even to remove them before the expiration of their terms of office, with or without statement of grounds, it being necessary in the latter case that the resolution be adopted unanimously.
9. To decide protests made against ordinances issued by municipalities and other local administrative bodies, when contrary to the Constitution and the laws.

ART. 124. Any person injured in his rights by the application of a law in a particular case may challenge the constitutionality thereof directly before the Supreme Court, provided the law relates to matters not triable before the (ordinary) courts.

ART. 125. The administration of justice in the Republic shall be without charge.

ART. 126. Members of courts shall not hold any office filled by popular election or conferring additional jurisdiction.

ART. 127. The courts may demand the aid of the armed forces for the execution of their decisions, and if the armed forces are refused them or are unavailable, they may demand such aid from the citizens. Any official or citizen who refuses to give aid shall render himself liable.

ART. 128. In no case shall there be more than three trials and the same judges shall not officiate in more than one thereof.

ART. 129. In civil matters a jury may be called upon to pass on the facts, when so requested by the parties, and in this case the judge shall merely apply the law.

ART. 130. The magistrates of courts of justice shall enjoy the same immunities and prerogatives as representatives in Congress, except the exemption from civil suits.

ART. 131. The Justices of the Supreme Court may, with a voice but not with a vote, attend the deliberations of either of the Legislative Chambers or of both in joint session whenever they relates to matters originating in or recommended by said Court, or to those dealt with in Art. 99.

TABLE XVII.—THE ESTIMATES.

ART. 132. The estimates shall be passed by Congress in view of the recommendations of the Executive and Judiciary within their respective spheres.

ART. 133. The draft of the estimates shall be presented by the Secretary of the Treasury fifteen days at the latest after Congress convenes.

ART. 134. All expenditures made outside the estimates shall be unlawful, and the official ordering payment and the employee making the payment shall be jointly responsible for the amount expended, without prejudice to whatever penalties may be incurred according to law.

ART. 135. The treasure of the Nation shall comprise:

1. All its real and personal property.
2. All its outstanding credits.
3. All duties, imposts, and taxes paid into the treasury by the inhabitants of the Republic.

ART. 136. For the administration of the public revenues there shall be a General Collection and Disbursement Office, as well as such other offices as may be necessary.

ART. 137. In order to hold the office of Treasurer General it shall be necessary to be thirty years old, a citizen in the exercise of one's rights, of notably good conduct, and not to be a creditor or debtor of the Public Treasury or have accounts pending therewith.

ART. 138. For the purpose of exercising supervision over the National Treasury, there shall be a Court of Accounts (Auditor's Office) to which shall be committed the examination and final settlement of all accounts kept by officers administering public interests.

The members of this court must fulfill the same requirements as the Treasurer General, but all employees except the President may be as young as 25 years. Their number, organization, and powers shall be determined by law, their appointment, as well as that of Treasurer General, being in the hands of the Chief Executive.

ART. 139. No public authority, official, or corporation shall be permitted to conclude contracts in which national property or funds or those of local juntas are involved for any purpose, without previously receiving bids and publishing the offers made. Cases are excepted in which, owing to the nature of the contracts, the latter must be concluded with certain individuals, or in which, owing to the small amount involved, it is not necessary to call for bids. The law shall provide regulations for this matter.

TITLE XVIII.—THE ARMY.

ART. 140. The public forces are established for the sake of insuring the rights of the Nation, enforcing the law, and maintaining public order.

ART. 141. The discipline of the army shall be regulated by military laws and orders. No armed body shall be allowed to deliberate or to exercise the right of petition.

Soldiers in actual service shall not be permitted to hold offices filled by popular election.

ART. 142. Military service shall be compulsory, but in time of peace this duty may be discharged through a substitute. Every male Nicaraguan from 18 to 45 years of age is a soldier of the army. The law shall provide for the proper organization and specify grounds for exemption from service.

Ministers of the gospel of any denomination shall render service in the army only as chaplains and in the ambulance service.

ART. 143. There shall be no fuero atractivo and military persons in actual service shall be subject to military jurisdiction for purely military offenses.

TITLE XIX.—DEPARTMENTAL (PROVINCIAL) GOVERNMENT.

ART. 144. For purposes of civil administration, the territory of the Republic shall be divided into "departments" (provinces), and there may be districts (comarcas), the number and boundaries of which shall be determined by law.

TITLE XX.—MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

ART. 145. The local government of towns shall be in charge of Municipalities (Municipal Governments), the officers of which shall be elected by popular, public, and direct vote of the citizens of the respective towns in accordance with the law.

ART. 146. The number of officers of Municipal Governments shall be determined by law, taking into account the number of inhabitants of each town.

ART. 147. The powers of Municipal Governments shall be purely economic and administrative. They shall be determined by law, as shall also the requirements laid down in order to be a member thereof.

ART. 148. Municipal Governments may freely levy local taxes in accordance with the Constitution and general laws, submitting them to the approval of the Executive when they affect solely the interests of the town concerned or of the province to which it belongs, and to the Legislature when they impose burdens on one or more other provinces, even though indirectly.

ART. 149. Municipal Governments shall administer the funds of the community for the benefit of the latter, rendering an account to the superior authority established by the law; and they shall publish annually a detailed report on the receipts and expenditures of their funds.

ART. 150. In the discharge of their exclusive duties they shall be independent of the other authorities, but they must not in any case violate the general laws of the country, and they shall be responsible collectively and individually before the courts for any abuses they may commit.

ART. 151. Municipalities shall elect their own officers, and they may also appoint local police officers for purposes of order, security, hygiene, convenience, embellishment, and recreation; and they may enact regulations on these subjects in accordance with the general laws.

ART. 152. The officers of Municipal Governments shall not be obliged to discharge any other duties, not even military service, in time of war.

ART. 153. Municipal resolutions having the character of local laws shall be submitted to the approval of the Executive.

TITLE XXI.—RESPONSIBILITY OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS.

ART. 154. Every public official shall, upon assuming office, take an oath to carry out and cause to be carried out the Constitution and laws, and he shall be responsible for his acts.

ART. 155. The President of the Republic, Senators, Representatives, Magistrates of Courts of Justice, Secretaries and Assistant Secretaries of Departments, and Diplomatic Ministers and Officers shall be responsible before Congress for any common law crimes they may commit and for such official offenses as they may commit during the discharge of their duties, for purposes of impeachment and placing the guilty parties at the disposal of the proper court.

ART. 156. Once a judgment has been pronounced declaring an officer guilty of an official offense, he can not be granted pardon.

ART. 157. Notwithstanding approval by Congress of the conduct of the Executive Branch, the President and the Heads of Departments may be indicted for official offenses up to five years after quitting their offices.

ART. 158. When a public official still in office is impeached and acquitted, he shall resume the discharge of his duties.

TITLE XXII.—CONSTITUENT ("CONSTITUTIVE") LAWS.

ART. 159. The following laws are "constitutive": the law on the press, martial law, and the law of amparo.

TITLE XXIII.—REVISION OF CONSTITUTION AND CONSTITUTIVE LAWS.

ART. 160. When a partial revision of the Constitution or constitutive laws is deemed appropriate, this may be done by observing the following rules:

1. The project shall be presented by two or more members of the Houses and read twice with an interval of 4 days.
2. Upon being taken up for debate, it shall be turned over to a committee which shall present its opinion within six days.
3. The opinion of the committee shall be read twice on different days.
4. When the revising law has been approved by a two-thirds vote in both Houses, it shall be published by the press.
5. The amendment will be without legal effect until it has received the approval of a two-thirds vote in the next Legislature, after a lapse of two years, and in accordance with usual procedure.

ART. 161. Amendments to the articles of the Constitution which prohibit the reelection of the then President of the Republic, shall not be effective during the period in which such amendments are made, nor in the following one.

ART. 162. Treaties or pacts referred to in the last part of Art. 2, shall be ratified by a two-thirds vote of each Chamber, such action being regarded as an amendment to the Constitution, notwithstanding the terms of this Title.

ART. 163. An absolute [Constitutional] reform shall not be made until after a lapse of 10 years; and for this purpose the regulations of Art. 160 shall be observed. A declaration to this effect having been made, a Constituent [sic] Assembly shall be convoked.

ART. 164. The ordinary Congress upon declaring that the Constitution should be entirely revised, shall close its sessions and become dissolved in so doing.

TITLE XIV.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

ART. 165. The present Constitution supersedes that of March 30, 1905, and the Guarantee Law of September 15, 1910; moreover it declares the Constitution signed on April 4 of this year by the previous Constituent Assembly to be null and void.

ART. 166. Until revised or repealed, other laws shall remain in force provided they are not contrary to the provisions of the Constitution.

ART. 167. The present Constitution shall go into force on March 1 of this next year 1912.

TITLE XXV.—TRANSITORY PROVISIONS.

ART. 168. Pending the convening of the first Constitutional Congress, elected in the manner and at the time authorized by the present Constituent Assembly, the latter shall continue to discharge its duties and those which belong to the ordinary Congress in accordance with the Constitution.

ART. 169. The renewal of Representative during the first biennal period shall be by lot, as shall also be that of Senators in the first and second biennal periods.

ART. 170. The decrees of the present Constituent Assembly in regard to appointments of President and Vice President of the Republic and of Justices of the Supreme Court shall remain in full force and vigor for the time which they respectively comprise.

ART. 171. The decrees of May 18, July 15, and October 14 last regarding creation, powers, and duties of the Mixed Commission shall likewise remain in full force notwithstanding the provisions of this Constitution. The present Constituent Assembly shall, without any restriction, enact such revisional and supplementary laws and provisions as may be conducive to the objects stated in said decrees.

ART. 172. As soon as the Constitution is promulgated, all government officials shall take oath in legal form to strictly and faithfully observe all its provisions.

Given in the Hall of Sessions of the National Constituent Assembly at Managua on November 10, 1911.

IGNACIO SUÁREZ, President [of the Assembly], Representative for the Department of Jinotega.
[and 39 others.]

Let it be published. EXECUTIVE MANSION, Managua, December 21, 1911.
ADOLFO DÍAZ.

SALV. BUITRAGO DÍAZ,
Ministro de la Gobernación, Justicia, etc.
PEDRO RAF. CUADRA,
Ministro de Hacienda y Crédito Público.
DIEGO M. CHAMORRO,
Ministro de Relaciones Exteriores, etc.
LUIS MENA,
Ministro de la Guerra y Marina.
A. CANTÓN,
Ministro de Fomento y Obras Públicas.

POLITICAL AFFAIRS.[1] REVOLUTIONARY PLOTS. THE MENA INSURRECTION. BREACH OF THE DAWSON AGREEMENTS AND OF THE WASHINGTON CONVENTIONS. MEASURES TAKEN BY THE UNITED STATES FOR PROTECTING LIFE AND PROPERTY OF FOREIGNERS. ARREST AND DETENTION OF MENA. ELECTION BY DIRECT POPULAR VOTE OF ADOLFO DÍAZ AS CONSTITUTIONAL PRESIDENT FROM JANUARY 1, 1913.

File No. 817.00/1746.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams—Paraphases.]

American Legation,
Managua, January 1, 1912.

The president of Costa Rica, Jiménez, informs the Nicaraguan Chargé d'Affaires in Costa Rica that a movement on Nicaragua from Costa Rica is imminent; that the President of Guatemala, Estrada Cabrera, is supporting Irias in this connection; that the Liberals of Nicaragua have telegraphed Irias to act immediately or they will drop him. The President of Nicaragua, however, does not fear anything of a serious nature unless Mena or Chamorro should further the movement.

Gunther.

File No. 817.00/1749.

American Legation,
Managua, January 4, 1912.

A telegram from President Araujo of Salvador to the President of Nicaragua says that President Estrada Cabrera of Guatemala is in constant communication with José Dolores Gámez[2] in Costa Rica through General Nicasio Vásquez who has unlimited entrée at the presidential Mansion. President Araujo has intercepted correspondence clearly establishing the complicity of Estrada Cabrera, and advises the President of Nicaragua to watch the frontier closely.

Gunther.

File No. 817.00/1749.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, January 5, 1912.

Your January 4. You will repeat it to the American Legations in Costa Rica, San Salvador and Guatemala, adding that the Department requests a full report after careful investigation. Request of Heimke[3] transmission of copies of intercepted correspondence mentioned.

Knox.

---

[1] Continued from For. Rel. 1911, pp. 648–671.
[2] Former Minister in the Cabinet of ex-President Zelaya.
[3] American Minister to Salvador.

File No. 817.00/1764.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 163.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, January 6, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's instruction No. 65 of November 25,[1] enclosing for my information a copy of a despatch by which the Minister at Tegucigalpa communicated to the Department the substance of an interview regarding political affairs in this country which he had with General Emiliano Chamorro on September 17th last.

Since General Chamorro's return to Nicaragua on October 31st, he has been twice to see me at the Legation where he freely discussed the political situation in this country and in the other Central American States. He reminded me that at the end of the revolution he had the arms in his power, and that he did hand them over to General Mena of his own free will, preferring not to accept the Ministry of War in order to remain at liberty to launch his candidacy for the Presidency, and that he had refrained from doing this upon the conclusion of the Dawson Agreements.[2] Further, that he had declined to accept a portfolio in the Estrada administration for the same reasons. Here, however, it is to be remembered that General Chamorro came into control of the Assembly, a more powerful position, if independent, than any Ministry. He must have reckoned with this probability in view, estimating in full his popularity in the country.

He went on to say that, confiding in the American program as outlined in the Dawson Agreements, which he had always scrupulously observed, he had refrained at all times from entering into any revolutionary movement whatsoever against the present Government, in spite of the many opportunities offered him with a strong probability of success. That General Chamorro could within a few days' notice lead a very formidable revolution I do not doubt, knowing as I do his tremendous popularity with the people of Nicaragua. Furthermore, in order to meet the budget for the coming year the Minister of War has been induced to cut his standing army down to about 1600 men only, and all other military expenditures in proportion. The Government is not in a position to withstand, unaided, even a feeble uprising. In answer to my direct inquiry as to whether he intended at any time in the future to start a revolution he replied, "Only in case the Dawson Agreements are not carried out with reference to free elections, in which case I most certainly will."

We then discussed conditions in Guatemala, Salvador and Honduras, all of which he recently visited during his voluntary exile. * * * General Chamorro is quiet and dignified in his bearing, and extremely likable personally. His popularity is stupendous. Even the Liberals will hardly ever say a word against him, even though they may consider him their enemy. He is apparently very retiring and modest, and professes to be unambitious and willing to sacrifice personal leanings to the good of his country and party. Up to the present time he has been invariably truthful in his dealings with the Legation. Were he to be chosen under the Dawson Agreement No. 4, as the candidate for the presidency, and a free election should follow, I believe, all other things being equal, and if the other signers gave him their full support, that he would receive the presidency by an overwhelming majority. * * *

---

[1] Not printed. (File No. 812.00/1384.)

[2] For. Rel. 1911, pp. 652–653.

I have [etc.]

F. M. GUNTHER.

File No. 817.00/1765.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 164.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, January 8, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to call the Department's attention to the attitude observed by the signers of the so-called Dawson Conventions, with regard to the pledges contained therein.

The first to break the agreements was General Juan J. Estrada. Agreement No. 4, which affects Nicaraguan politics though not international relations, contains the clause:

> Also it is agreed that the Government to be established in Nicaragua must not permit, under any pretext, the Zelayista element in its administration.

This clause was inserted in the original draft of the agreement by General Estrada himself, in his own handwriting. Nevertheless, as the Department has already been informed,[1] on the night of the 8th and morning of the 9th of May last, General Estrada, as President of the Republic, attempted a coup d'état, with a view to turning the Government over to the Liberal party teeming with the Zelayista element. Through his brother, General Aurelio Estrada, and other prominent Liberal and Zelayista leaders, he had called the Liberals of Managua and adjacent parts to the Campo de Marte, and there ordered the chiefs of the garrison to supply them with arms. Those chiefs of garrison, being Conservatives and furthermore loyal to the Minister of War, General Mena, who was then in prison under orders of Estrada, refused to obey the command of the President, and, instead, turned the guns of the garrison upon the residence of the Campo de Marte, where General Estrada was living, demanding that he resign and deposit the power in the Conservative Vice-President Adolfo Díaz, who was there at the time. General Estrada having no other recourse complied then and there at 2:00 a. m., on the 9th of May [1911].

The next to openly violate the agreements was General Mena. Agreement No. 1, clause 3, provides that the Constituent [Constitutional] Assembly will convoke the people for the election of a constitutional president corresponding to the period following the present one. As the Department is already aware the members of the National Constituent Assembly stampeded that body on October 7th and carried the election of General Mena.[2] General Mena violated the agreements by not immediately declining to accept, as he had promised me he would do were they to elect him. Furthermore, it might be supposed that he could perhaps have prevented that election, notwithstanding the promise that the deputies held out for his election as the sine qua non for the approval of the loan contracts. He was warned by the Legation of the inadvisability of the step, and also forewarned of the possible consequences.

---

[1] For. Rel. 1911, p. 660.

[2] For. Rel. 1911, p. 668.

President Díaz might also be considered as having violated the agreements as he neither opposed the election of General Mena—on the contrary he favored it[1]—nor has he taken the attitude, at any time, that the National Constituent Assembly should convoke the people for a popular election. It must be said, however, that President Díaz was hardly in a position to do so. As a matter of policy, all things being considered with a view to the success of the American program, he was practically under the necessity of accepting the course pursued.

Fernando Solórzano, not being a signer of the first three agreements, and supposedly ignorant of their existence, acted in apparent good faith in accepting his election as Vice President. According to the terms of Agreement No. 4 the signers should designate at their opportunity and by a majority a candidate for Constitutional President of the Republic and another for Vice President, corresponding to the period following the presidency pro tempore of General Estrada, obliging themselves to take into consideration that the one chosen must represent the revolution and the Conservative party. The majority was composed of Luis Mena, Adolfo Díaz, and Fernando Solórzano, and the candidates designated were Mena and Solórzano.

There remains only to be considered the attitude of General Emiliano Chamorro. He alone of the signers of the first three agreements has not actually violated to some extent their specific pledges. He did, however, depart from the spirit of the Agreement [No. 1] in not supporting General Estrada during his term as President. The Department will remember that the first National Constituent Assembly, which was under Chamorro's complete control, drew up a Constitution which should have effectively emasculated the Executive power and would have created an oligarchy with the Chamorro family and followers as the predominant element. This Assembly was dissolved on April 5th[2] and the Constitution adopted by it rendered null and void. General Chamorro, however, alone of the signers of the first three agreements can be said to have rigorously observed the specific pledges therein contained. The Constitution drawn up by the first Assembly tended to the abolition of monopolies, guaranteed the legitimate rights of foreigners, provided for the Mixed Claims Commission, the loan, and would have convoked the people for the election of a Constitutional President for the term beginning January 1, 1913.

I have [etc.]

F. M. Gunther.

---

[1] For. Rel. 1911, p. 657.

[2] For. Rel. 1911, p. 669.

File No. 817.00/1763.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 166.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, January 8, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform the Department that in a recent conversation with President Díaz he stated that under certain circumstances he would be willing to run for the next presidency in the event of free elections. President Díaz said that if he felt sure that he might be free to govern according to a democratic constitution, in surroundings of law and order, and with the full support and recognition of the United States, he would receive his election with pleasure.

I have seen a number of letters from prominent Liberals in and out of Nicaragua offering President Díaz the support of their party should there be free elections, and from personal observations I have concluded that he would be far more acceptable to the Liberals as a candidate than either Mena or Chamorro, the only other formidable popular candidates. I am further of the impression that he would be more acceptable to the Conservatives as a body than either Mena or Chamorro, owing to the deep-rooted jealousy, amounting almost to a deadly feud, between the followers of these two Conservative leaders. * * *

I have [etc.]

F. M. GUNTHER.

File No. 817.00/1759.

The American Minister to Salvador to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, January 12, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the telegram addressed to the Department by Chargé Gunther, dated Managua, January 4, which he repeated to me on the 6th instant under instruction of the Department, with its request that I carefully investigate and report, transmitting the documents mentioned in that telegram, consisting of some intercepted correspondence which, [according to what] the President of Salvador telegraphed to President Díaz of Nicaragua, clearly established Estrada Cabrera's complicity in the support of a movement against Nicaragua, with the assistance of Doctor José Dolores Gámez in Costa Rica through General Nicasio Vásquez, who comes and goes at the Presidential Mansion at will, etc., I have the honor to transmit, herewith, a copy and translation of the correspondence in question.[1]

During an informal call which I made upon President Araujo on Sunday, the 7th instant, he stated to me that he was in possession of copies of some intercepted correspondence of the character before described; and after he had explained to me the manner in which he had obtained them I asked if he had any objection to allow me to make copies of the same. He replied that he had no objection whatsoever, whereupon I brought them to the Legation and caused them to be copied and translated, notwithstanding the fact that after reading them I failed to see in what manner they implicated Estrada Cabrera. The papers consist only of a cipher key, a letter relative to projects of a revolutionary character against Nicaragua, written by Doctor José Dolores Gámez to President Estrada Cabrera, and several other letters written by Doctor Gámez and Mrs. M. Antonia Zaldívar. Of these documents, only the cipher key and the first letter written by Doctor Gámez appear to refer to revolutionary plans against Nicaragua.

---

[1] Not printed.

I think that the Department will agree with me in that these letters do not attach to Estrada Cabrera any complicity in a movement against Nicaragua; and when I asked Doctor Castro Ramírez, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, if either he or President Araujo had any other documents bearing on this matter, he replied that they had no other documents bearing thereon. It is therefore upon these papers alone that President Araujo based his telegram to President Díaz of Nicaragua, saying that he was in possession of data showing that Estrada Cabrera is supporting a movement against Nicaragua, etc., as telegraphed to the Department by Chargé Gunther.

I have [etc.]

William Heimke.

Note.—On January 12, 1912, the new Constitution was proclaimed. This subject is treated separately; see ante, pp. 993–1011.

File No. 817.00/1753.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 4.]

Department of State,
Washington, January 25, 1912.

Sir: I enclose herewith for your information a copy of a letter in regard to political conditions in Nicaragua, which General Emiliano Chamorro has addressed to the Department.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

[Inclosure 1—Translation.]

General Emiliano Chamorro to the Secretary of State.

Granada, Nicaragua, December 11, 1911.

Excellency: On account of the interest that the Government of which your excellency is a member has displayed toward Nicaragua and on account of the part I have taken in the events which have taken place here since October 11, 1909, I base my hope that my name may perhaps not be entirely unknown to your excellency.

With that hope for my only ground, I venture to bespeak your excellency's attention to the points presented in this letter, of a confidential nature, which is intended to lay before you the anomalous condition in which this country, for whose fate the Government of the United States has shown so much concern, is placed.

This being the first time I have had the honor to address your excellency, I beg your leave, before launching into the main object of this letter, to say that even before the opening of the Washington conference and therefore long before the revolutionary movement of October 1909 in which I, as leader of the Conservative party, joined until it brought about the overthrow of the Liberal régime which your excellency most appropriately called "a blot on the history of Nicaragua"—long before these events, I say, there prevailed in the elements of the Conservative party, here and among the emigrados, a current of sympathy toward the American Government and people, born of the conviction that through them the reign of law and justice could be restored in this Republic.

This conviction assumed with the Nicaraguans the character of uncontrovertible truth when your excellency, pointing out the causes of the revolution, said in the memorable note[1] addressed to Señor Rodríguez Mayorga, Chargé d'Affaires of Nicaragua in the United States, that your excellency's Government was convinced that the revolution represented the ideals and will of the Nicaraguan people more faithfully than the Government represented by Señor Rodríguez; that it was a well-known fact that under the Zelaya régime republican institutions existed in name only; that public opinion and the press were throttled; that imprisonment was the reward of patriotism; and that it refrained from discussing the details of a régime which, unfortunately, has been a blot upon the history of Nicaragua.

The foregoing sentences in your excellency's note summarized the grievances that compelled us on more than one occasion to adopt the painful recourse to arms, and justified the attitude of the Nicaraguan people, naturally peaceful and law-abiding; subsequently they have been the criterion of a policy on which the coveted reconstruction of Nicaragua is to be founded, at the cost of so many sacrifices, and especially securing to the Government of the United States the right it then reserved to itself in accordance with the aforesaid memorable note, to consider at the proper time the expediency of also stipulating that the Constitutional Government of Nicaragua should bind itself by a treaty to the advantage of all the Governments that might be concerned and as a guaranty of its faithful future support of the Washington Conventions and its peaceful and progressive aspirations.

In consequence thereof, when the Liberalism that had done so much harm to the country was overpowered, I did not hesitate about accepting the mediation of the Hon. T. C. Dawson, Special Commissioner of the American Government, for the signature of four conventions, which remove certain difficulties which might stand in the way of the establishment of a constitutional régime in the country, that being the condition put by your excellency's Government upon the resumption of official relations with this Government and the execution of the program which, with the powerful influence of the American Government, would give prompt effect to the necessary political reforms demanded by this country. The first three parts of the compact, the first dated October 10, 1910, the second and third dated the 29th of the same month and year, were complied with by us; the last, under date of the 30th of the same month and year, awaiting execution at the proper time.

Mr. Dawson's intervention in the negotiations culminating in the said compact was regarded by us as one of the means your excellency's Government had reserved to itself for achieving the end it sought in the political and economic reform, and we always looked upon it as a pledge that the compact would be carried out under the guaranty of the Government he represented.

Your excellency can not be unaware of the events that have since taken place in Nicaragua, in view of which I decided to leave the country with the object of avoiding the use of my name as a standard of opposition to the policy consonant with the views of the American Government summarized in the Knox-Castrillo convention, in which, as above stated, we embodied the hopes of political and economic regeneration; and I did not return until recently when the loan contracts had already been approved, in the confident hope that they will be the means of giving effect to the political rights referred to in the above-cited Dawson compact, and that they would bring to a speedy end the anomalous conditions under which we live, with martial law now prevailing as under the long dictatorship of Santos Zelaya and the economic calamity which in the year that is about to end has considerably increased the national debt and profoundly disturbed the business entered into with a prospect of an early restoration of administrative order. It is true that the presence, at the eleventh hour, of Messrs. Pedro Rafael Cuadra as Minister of the Treasury and Diego Manuel Chamorro as Minister of Foreign Relations inspired some confidence among the people, but the uncertainty of their continued presence, because of the anomalous conditions above mentioned, contributes toward impairing their labor of reform.

---

[1] For Rel. 1909, pp. 455–456.

In spite of the expectation of improved conditions inspired by the approval of the loan contracts, it seems to have been frustrated by the strange and unexpected election of General Mena, by the Assembly, to the office of President of the Republic for the next constitutional term, in flagrant violation of the fourth of the Dawson conventions, which stipulated the manner of designating the candidate and contained the engagement of the signers to recommend to the people the election of him who should be the choice of the majority. The election above referred to perpetuates the system of the Liberal party in the seventeen years of its rule in this country, during which no attention was ever paid to public opinion in the solution of questions of interest to the people; nor is it entitled to the excuse that it is a reward for the approval of the loan contracts; that approval was brought about by the general wish of the country and not by any one person. I may assure your excellency that the leaders of the country, the educated classes, the landholders, and even the people themselves longed for the approval of the loan contracts and their annexes to the point of distinctly influencing the Assembly to have it sanction them.

In my position as leader of the Conservative party, which necessity alone could involve in war and compel to sustain a long struggle, I am interested in removing every difficulty that may imperil the realization of the just cravings of the Nicaraguans for a fair and progressive government, that will lead them to the prosperity they covet in consonance with the views of the American Government, by returning to the country its right to elect the executive of its choice. In the impossibility of gratifying this desire lay the main cause of the opposition to Santos Zelaya, because he excluded every hope of improving conditions by a change in the personnel of the Government.

Your excellency will permit me to call attention to the fact that I am not pleading the cause of any particular candidate but upholding the conservation of a principle which stands for the carrying out of a guaranty, since the candidate has not yet been nominated, and it would not be possible to say who would be selected; and also to the fact that compliance with the [Dawson] compact would do away with all occasion for discord. Indeed the elections as they have been conducted can achieve nothing more than to convince the people that violence is the only means by which they can regain their rights; this conviction, as your excellency will readily understand, cannot be encouraged by a party enjoying the standing and antecedents of the Conservative party.

On these grounds, and peace being fully recognized by your excellency's Government to be a necessary element of progress for this country, I have not hesitated to address your excellency in the name of the Conservative party I represent, and to beseech you to exert your influence toward the full execution at the proper time of the part of the Dawson compact which bears upon the subject above discussed as the best mode of placing upon a substantial basis that public tranquillity which is the safest foundation for lasting and profitable peace.

I beg [etc.],

EMILIANO CHAMORRO.

[Inclosure 2.]

File No. 817.00/1753.

The Secretary of State to General Emiliano Chamorro.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 22, 1912.

SIR: I have your interesting letter of December 11, 1911, regarding political conditions in Nicaragua, which was received at the Department a few days ago.

As you say, the Government of the United States takes a great interest in the welfare, peace and prosperity of Nicaragua.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 817.00/1761.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.[1]

No. 8.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 31, 1912.

SIR: For your information and with reference to Mr. Gunther's telegram of January 4th to the Department, you are advised that Consul Lee, in whose custody the Legation at San José now is, reported under date of January 16th that he could not, after careful investigation, verify the rumor that Gámez was lending assistance to any movement against Nicaragua, or that he was in constant communication with General Vásquez. He added that in San José there was no evidence of the existence of any activity against Nicaragua.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 817.00/1773.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 24.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, April 19, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy and translation of a communication, dated the 16th instant, sent to me by Don Diego Manuel Chamorro, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, regarding the so-called Dawson agreements.

Shortly after receiving my reply yesterday Señor Chamorro, accompanied by Dr. J. A. Urtecho, the Undersecretary of the Foreign Office, who is a close personal and political friend, called at the Legation and said that he wished to discuss the matter with me more at length, and that although my note was very courteous and very good of its kind I had failed to express therein any opinion on the question which he had raised and which is now agitating all Nicaragua, namely free elections.

I told him that my reply was not intended at all to be perfunctory but rather to give a concise statement of my views concerning the Nicaragua situation, to-wit that politics be kept in the background until the economic situation shall have been cleared and the country established on a sound financial basis.

He replied by giving the facts of various political intrigues, the relations between President Díaz and General Mena, and the attitude of General Emiliano Chamorro.

I thanked him for the information volunteered so frankly and added that I felt obliged to continue the policy announced by the Legation at the time I took charge, that is, to devote all my attention for the present to matters connected with the proper working out of the loan arrangement, and with that idea in mind it seemed to me inadvisable to complicate the situation by the injection of politics or personalities, for although conditions are unsatisfactory they are conceded to be far better than under the Zelaya régime, they have already reflected the beneficient results of the recent currency legislation and they give every promise of still greater improvement when the National Bank shall have been established and the new Nicaraguan money put in circulation.

---

[1] The same to the American Ministers to Salvador and Guatemala.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

[Inclosure 1.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

[Translation.]

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Managua, April 16, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: On October 27, 1910, at the close of the revoluton which was set on foot against the tyrannical Government established by the Liberal party of Nicaragua, the principal leaders in command who carried to a successful conclusion that movement of political, social and economic regeneration, celebrated and signed, at the instance of the Honorable Thomas C. Dawson, Special Commissioner of the North American Government near the Government of Nicaragua, and moved by a highly patriotic sentiment, four Conventions known by the name of Dawson Agreements and attested by the signatures of the Honorable Thomas C. Dawson and of Mr. Thomas P. Moffat, Consul of the United States in this country, which said Agreements were the subject of a note dated November 10,[1] 1910, from this Ministry addressed by my distinguished predecessor, Don Tomás Martínez, to the Special Commissioner, Thomas C. Dawson.

The first of said Agreements stipulates the convocation of a Constituent Assembly which, in conformity with the said agreements, assembled in December, 1911 [1910], and elected as President and Vice President General Juan J. Estrada and Adolfo Díaz respectively. According to Article 3 of the above-mentioned document, the signers solemnly obligated themselves in the presence of the representatives of the United States to convoke the Nicaraguan people for the election of the Constitutional President for the period following that previously mentioned, this being the political basis agreed upon and accepted by the leaders of the Government for the reorganization of the Republic.

By the Second Agreement it was agreed that all unsettled claims proceeding from the annulment of contracts and concessions associated with the previous régime of Nicaragua, would be submitted to the impartial examination of a Mixed Commission, appointed by the Government of this Republic in accord with that of the United States. In the same way the obligation was imposed to prosecute and punish those responsible for the death of the Americans, Cannon and Groce, and, concerning the indemnity that must be paid to the families of both victims, to await the result of these proceedings.

By the Third Agreement, the Government of Nicaragua obligated itself to solicit the good offices of the American Government for the rehabilitation of the public finances and the payment of legitimate claims, foreign as well as national, by means of the negotiation of a loan in the United States, which would be guaranteed by a certain per centage of the customs receipts of the Republic.

By the Fourth and last Agreement, the obligation was fixed to designate at their opportunity and by a majority of votes of the signers a candidate for Constitutional President of the Republic and another for Vice-President, corresponding to the period following the Presidency pro tempore of General Juan J. Estrada, the chosen one being obliged to represent the revolution and the Conservative party, and the subscribers promising that, in addition to the established laws guaranteeing a free election, there would be no concentration of armed forces of the Government in any part of the Republic other than shall be necessary for the preservation of order and proper policing, and there will be absolute exclusion of the Zelayista element in the new formation of the Government.

Permit me, in addition, to mention that in January of the current year, shortly after the promulgation of the present Constitution, the then Chargé of your Legation, the Honorable Franklin Mott Gunther, communicated to this Ministry the cablegram from his excellency, the Secretary of State of the

---

[1] Should be November 5; see For. Rel. 1911, p. 625.

United States, in which the binding character of these Agreements was confirmed in an unequivocal manner, and the Chargé instructed to give official notification of this resolution to the personnel of the Executive Power.

After having religiously observed the provisions of the several Agreements which I have mentioned at length to you, namely the convocation of the National Constituent Assembly, the creation of the Mixed Commission, the negotiation of an American loan; and the Government of Nicaragua being animated by the firm purpose of fulfilling faithfully and honorably its international obligations, and also by the natural desire to put into practice the solemn promises which the revolution made to the country, the execution of which promises is considered to be the means most appropriate to assure in an efficient manner the peace, the domestic tranquility and the administrative progress of the Republic—my Government believes that, on account of the approaching end of the provisional period of which the First Agreement speaks, and the necessity of calling an election some months before the date thereof, the time indicated in the Fourth Agreement has arrived for proceeding to the designation of candidates for President and Vice-President during the next Constitutional period, thus conforming to the bases fixed in the Dawson Agreements, to the intention of those who signed them, and to the good faith and authority of the Honorable Thomas C. Dawson and of the Consul of the United States of America, Thomas P. Moffat.

In bringing the above to the knowledge of your excellency I am obeying the instructions of the President, and I have [etc.],

DIEGO M. CHAMORRO.

[Inclosure 2.]

The American Minister to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, April 18, 1912.

DEAR MR. MINISTER: In acknowledging the receipt of your courteous note of the 16th instant in which at the direction of His Excellency, the President of Nicaragua, you refer to the Dawson agreements, I beg to assure you of my appreciation of the importance of your communication, and its significance for both Nicaragua and the United States. Accordingly I am forwarding it by the first mail to the Department, and I shall be glad to apprise you promptly of the reply.

I notice that your excellency has given first importance, as do the agreements themselves, to the settlement of the economic situation before discussing the political conditions. This is all the more gratifying to me because it accords with the view of my Government that the loan, currency and bank problems, about which there is no difference of opinion among those who are honestly working for the welfare of Nicaragua, should be disposed of before attention is directed to other questions.

This view held by your Government and by mine, and by those interested in making the above-mentioned agreements, seems amply justified by the beneficent results already attained, and therefore it is to be hoped that the present program will be continued until it is completed by the establishment of the proposed national bank, the issue of the new money, and the placing of the country on a sound financial basis.

With assurances [etc.],

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00/1775.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 28.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, May 2, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of correspondence exchanged with the Consul at Bluefields with reference to the political conditions on the Atlantic Coast.

On receipt of Mr. Clare's letter of March 4, reporting that there was great dissatisfaction and talk of a separation movement, I called his attention by telegram to the Secretary of State's speech in Managua[1] regarding a closer union between the Atlantic and interior portions of the country.

From information which had already come to me through the Collector General of Customs I had reason to believe that the dissatisfied elements were endeavoring to sound out the Consul and the Customs officer in Bluefields on the question of secession, and I therefore referred to the Secretary's statement as an indication to Mr. Clare of what should be his attitude in the matter.

In his telegram of reply[2] he stated that he would make a full report on the subject to the Department and to the Legation.

This talk of separation is nothing new as will appear by reference to the Department's instruction to Mr. Northcott, No. 9, of April 3, 1911,[3] (File 817.00/1547) transmitting a copy of a report of the then Consul, Mr. Lee, and the agitation, which is an inheritance of the days of the Mosquito protectorate, will probably continue until new means of communication are opened between Bluefields and Managua (as proposed under the loan arrangement with Messrs. Brown Brothers and Seligman) and the interests of the two sections, which at present have little in common because of the difference in population and pursuits, are brought more into harmony.

The immediate point of controversy now being waged is a financial one, but the central Government is unable to furnish prompt relief because the country as a whole is in a difficult situation on account of matters not having yet adjusted themselves to the new system of customs collection.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

[Inclosure 1—Extract.]

The American Consul at Bluefields to the American Minister.

No. 28.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Bluefields, March 4, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the following telegram, on yesterday's date, from you:

> The Secretary of State will arrive at Corinto and Managua on March 5th, and will remain until the 7th.

On the 4th instant I sent you the following telegram:

> I should be glad to have the following laid before the Secretary of State: Constituents of Representative Hooker uphold his action relative to Article 170 of the Constitution of Nicaragua. Commercial and financial conditions are critical in the extreme. Public employees unpaid for some months. Silver, the only currency, is fast disappearing from circulation. Many representations of new enterprises are here awaiting announcement of our policy in Nicaragua. Rumors of another revolution if the state of affairs remains unchanged. Only popular elections will satisfy this Coast.

You no doubt read in the papers of Managua that all the municipal officers resigned in Bluefields rather than take the oath to obey the Constitution as far as Article 170 is concerned. The people feel that the promises made to them have not been kept.

---

[1] See pp. 1117 and 1120.

[2] Not printed; it adds no new data to those given in Inclosure 1, following. (File Nos. 817.51/401 and 817.00/1771.)

[3] Not printed.

I am sorry to report that feeling against Americans here at present is not as cordial as it has been. Two attempts were made last week to destroy American property by fire, but luckily they were discovered in time and no damage resulted. Whether these were direct threats against Americans or whether they show the discontent and dissatisfaction existing is a matter of conjecture.

The merchants and fruit companies seem to be waiting some definite announcement relative to the financial policy of the Government, or in other words, as they express it themselves, "We wish to know whether the Nicaraguan Government is going to get the loan, and if they do get it what they are going to do with it." This is rather a crude way of expressing it, but that is how they seem to feel about it. In the meanwhile they are not going to pay a premium to import soles. Soles a few months ago were worth 40 cents gold, today they are at 42–3/4 to 43.

I do not put much faith in this this talk about another revolution, as I fail to see where they would get the money, arms or men to start it, but at the same time it would not take a great many well-armed men to take and hold this coast against any force that could be sent from the interior with the object of recapturing it. The people know this, and the next time they strike it will mean the independence of the Coast. They will not allow themselves to be fooled another time.

I have [etc.]

ARTHUR J. CLARE.

[Inclosure 2.—Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

The American Minister to the American Consul at Bluefields.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, April 13, 1912.

Your No. 28, and telegram of March 4. The latter was shown to the Secretary of State. Since then National Assembly has approved the new monetary legislation and supplementary loan providing for sound currency and banking system which it is believed will improve economic conditions of Atlantic coast as elsewhere in Nicaragua.

Telegraph your views as to present situation in Bluefilds district and what publicity was given to the Secretary's speech encouraging the closer union between the Atlantic coast region and the interior.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00/1773.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 23.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 14, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 24, of the 19th ultimo, transmitting a copy of a note in which the Minister for Foreign Affairs urges that the time has come for convoking the people previously to the elections of President and Vice President as provided for in the fourth and last of the so-called Dawson agreements. You also enclose a copy of your reply to the note mentioned, and communicate to the Department the substance of your interview on April 18 with the Minister, in relation to the same matter.

Your action in stating to Señor Chamorro that it is your Legation's policy to devote its attention primarily to the economic situation, leaving political questions to be considered when the country shall have been established on a sound financial basis, is approved by the Department.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 817.00/1786.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 50.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, June 20, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on the 5th instant the National Constituent Assembly chose General Luis Correa to be its Speaker by a vote of 14 to 13 against Fernando Guzmán, and it also elected General Correa and Don Marcos Mairena to be, respectively, First and Second Designados to the Presidency, to which latter office they will succeed in the order named, if and when there is a vacancy.

General Correa, who is an admirer of Emiliano Chamorro and not unfriendly to General Mena, was elected by a combination of the Díaz and Chamorro votes over the Mena candidate, the name of the latter being withdrawn when it was seen that he would be defeated.

The anti-Mena factions now claim that they control the Assembly on some questions but this is very doubtful, especially as under the practice observed here each seat in the Assembly may be filled by either the regular incumbent or by the alternate in his absence thus permitting a practically new alignment at every session in which there is a close contest.

The result reached in the present case is due probably to the greater personal popularity of Correa over Guzmán.

In this connection I have to report that on May 30 I was informed that the Minister of War, who is said to control the Army and the National Assembly, would within several days of that time have Guzmán elected First Designado and thereafter attempt a coup d'état by deposing Díaz and substituting Guzmán as President. If the plan succeeded, Guzmán would give way to his chief, but if it failed on account of opposition by the United States or for other reason then Mena would disclaim all responsibility. It was said that he had assured his followers that the American program in Nicaragua had been repudiated by the Senate and by the people of the United States, and that therefore the subversive movement might safely be attempted.

Although coming to me from a reliable source I did not attach enough importance to the information to telegraph it to the Department. I considered it as an effort to ascertain whether the United States would recognize the new government as fait accompli, or on the other hand would lend active support to the present administration in the suppression of the movement.

The Legation not being willing to anticipate any such act of bad faith declined to express any opinion in advance as to what course it would adopt in the event that the plan was attempted, other than to say that it would know how to deal with the matter when the occasion arose. It has seemed best from the start to refuse to make any commitments on Nicaraguan politics, and to confine efforts to an adjustment of the numerous and difficult financial and economic problems with the hope of thereby being able to insure the continuance of peace and order, such as they are.

The situation then, as now, seemed to be quiet and not to justify any serious apprehension, and I was, and am, inclined to believe that the moral influence in favor of constituted authority exerted by the United States, which has heretofore since my arrival been the strongest if not the sole factor in the preservation of peace and order, will continue to be effective to that end for the present.

In order not to give an erroneous impression I ought to add that the conditions are far from satisfactory. There is little or no police protection, the administration of justice is extremely lax, there is no punishment of any criminal offender who has the slightest political influence of the right kind, houses are searched and individuals arrested without warrant, and there is almost as much military activity as if the country were preparing for war.

This situation is due to divided responsibility and confusion which result from the opposing aims of the President and his Minister of War, but the conditions, bad as they may be, are a decided improvement as contrasted with those under the Zelaya régime and give promise of something better in the future. I think therefore that it is the wiser course for President Díaz to refrain from reorganizing his Cabinet until after the financial situation is improved, and at least until he can pay the back salaries of the public employees, many of whom are in direct want and therefore not over-enthusiastic in their support of the Government. It is also desirable, other things being equal, to postpone the settlement of the presidential succession, if the settlement is to be definite and effective, until only a comparatively short time will intervene between that event and the beginning of the term of the successful aspirant to the presidency.

I have [etc.]

George T. Weitzel.

File No. 817.00/1784.

The Secretary of State to the Attorney General.

Department of State,
Washington, July 24, 1912.

Sir: The American Legation at Managua has been informed that General Luis Mena, Secretary of War in the Cabinet of President Díaz of Nicaragua, has recently, without the knowledge of the President of that country, placed an order for the account of the Government of Nicaragua with Park Benzinger and Company of New York for two gasoline launches, each armed with six Colt machine guns and equipped with a large amount of provisions. It is reported that this order refers to the launches Zorayda and Kasagi, to be purchased from the Jennings Yacht Brokerage Company, and amounts in all to $30,000.

As this may be preparatory to a revolutionary movement against the present Government of Nicaragua, and in order that the Legation may be advised as to the truth of this report, I have the honor to request that the result of such investigation as you may deem expedient to conduct in this connection be communicated to this Department at your early convenience.

I have [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 817.00/2166.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 68.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, July 31, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform the Department of the details of the coup d'état attempted by the Nicaraguan Minister of War, General Luis Mena, on July 29, 1912, as heretofore briefly reported in my two telegrams of that date.[1]

It has been common talk on the streets for the last several weeks that a revolutionist movement was impending, and such of the local newspapers as are controlled by the Mena and Zelaya element have openly encouraged the Minister of War in his treasonable aspirations and have urged on him the ease of ousting from office the constitutional President of the Republic. Mena's advisers, among whom are certain influential European subjects, believed that he, being in control of both the military and legislative departments of the Government, would be able to seize the presidency with the aid of the army, and give his title some color of legality by act of the subservient National Assembly.

In furtherance of this idea he had dictated the appointment in each district of a jefe político who would carry out his commands, and had ordered the gradual removal of all the munitions of war to Granada to the arsenal of San Francisco, a large commanding edifice, formerly an old Spanish church and school, now changed into a strong fortress under the comand of Col. Daniel Mena.

During all this time he was exerting his efforts in every way, such as by conniving at violations of the internal revenue laws, by deflecting the money intended for salaries of public employes into expenditures for the military establishment, and by certain abuses on the Atlantic coast, to embarrass and discredit the administration and to arouse public sentiment. Under his orders private houses were forcibly entered without warrant on the pretext of searching for arms, and enemies were illegally imprisoned, soldiers recruited, munitions purchased abroad without knowledge of the Government, and a feeling of general unrest created. The only obstacle that remained in the path of his success was the fortress of the Campo de Marte and La Loma in Managua where, notwithstanding frequent changes in the personnel of the troops and of the officers, among whom was a brother of Mena, the majority of the forces continued to be loyal to the Government.

A few days ago President Díaz received positive information that General Mena was bringing 150 recruits from his home town of Nandaime to garrison Managua. When these men reached the capital on July 29 the President hurriedly called a consultation of his friends and advisers for the purpose of adopting means to oppose the attempt to overthrow the Government. It was agreed to take only defensive measures so as not to give any pretext for an open conflict. Therefore, the President decided that instead of removing his Minister of War he would merely curtail the authority of that office.

---

[1] Not printed.

In accordance with this arrangement President Díaz addressed to General Mena a note, the translation of which is as follows:

> The Chief Executive in compliance with the duty of maintaining peace has resolved to take direct command of the fortresses of the Campo de Marte and San Francisco, and in that capacity has despatched orders to the respective chiefs, General Bartolemé Víquez, Colonel Roberto Hurtado and Colonel Daniel Mena, not to obey any military command which does not emanate directly from the Chief Executive.
>
> For the purpose of avoiding useless bloodshed I appeal to your patriotism not to provoke a conflict.
>
> General Víquez and Colonel Hurtado have replied informing me that they and all their officers will render obedience.

President Díaz also sent the following note to General Víquez, the comandante de armas who is the officer directly in command of the Campo de Marte:

> Public tranquility being menaced, the Chief Executive heedful of its conservation has resolved to raise extraordinary forces, which you will please muster in immediately.
>
> The Chief Executive has also resolved to place the army of the Republic under the immediate command of General Emiliano Chamorro, appointing him General-in-Chief of the armies of the Republic.
>
> In accordance therewith please render him due obedience, recognizing him as such and so instructing all your subordinates.

At about three o'clock in the afternoon, which is the usual hour for the relief of the guard, General Mena sent 60 of his Nandaime soldiers to take possession of La Loma, a high fortified hill to the south of the Campo de Marte. The Government forces, consisting of about 35 men under Colonel Hurtado, refused to permit the newcomers to enter, and when the latter persisted in advancing on the fortress after being warned not to do so, fire was opened on them with machine guns until they broke and fled to the Mansión in the Campo where Mena has had his residence.

General Chamorro, who was on his way in a carriage to the Campo, heard the firing on the Loma and hastened to the comandante's barracks, known as Las Limas, in the northeast corner of the Campo, and presenting his credentials to General Víquez took immediate command of the Government forces. Then informing Mena over the telephone of his compliance with the President's orders, he expressed the hope that bloodshed might be avoided. Mena asked for a personal conference at the Mansión. Chamorro replied that he would be glad to see him at Las Limas.

The Nandaime soldiers, who had not yet recovered from their confusion, were sent by Mena's orders to the barracks in the northwest corner of the Campo, known as the Guardia de Honor, the headquarters for the uniformed guards who are always assembled at the official functions given by the President. Mena himself fled through a secret passageway constructed during Zelaya's occupancy of the house, and escaped to the same barracks. Quickly collecting rifles and three machine guns, he directed from the tower an attack on the Government forces at Las Limas.

At about 4.30 p. m. President Díaz drove to the Legation, followed by Dr. Carlos Cuadra Pasos, member of the Nicaraguan Claims Commission. The former stated to me that after a short conflict the Government forces had successfully resisted the attack, and that it was only a question of time when Mena and his men would either be captured or annihilated. The President seemed anxious to avoid unnecessary bloodshed and asked me if I would consent to get into communication with General Mena and try to stop the conflict by arranging a peaceful settlement. I inquired the terms, and he said the resignation of General Mena as Minister of War, the appointment of a civilian successor, and amnesty to the participants in the uprising. It was suggested that I telephone to Mena from the Legation, but believing that a personal interview would be more effective I decided to call at his headquarters.

A heavy rain was falling and it was difficult to see any great distance ahead, so when I reached the corner of the street in front of the Campo de Marte I waited for a few minutes in the hope that the combatants would cease firing to let me cross in safety. It occurred to me to turn back, but I felt sure that in case of Mena's death his son Daniel, an irresponsible negroid Indian, would make reprisals in Granada where he had control of the Government's military supplies.

During a lull in the firing I crossed the street and entered Mena's barracks. There were about 150 men with rifles standing inside. As I walked through the gate Mena came forward to greet me. He was considerably excited and much more talkative than usual. I inquired the reason for the disturbance, and he stated that he had been badly treated by the Government and produced President Díaz's letter, which I glanced over rapidly. He continued to complain that he was abused and had a right to feel resentful. I replied that I did not know the details or the merits of the difficulty, and of course could not discuss them; that my only interest was to try to bring about peace in the quickest and most practical way. After some talk of this kind he asked me what I proposed. I answered that I had nothing to propose but that President Díaz desired to propose through me that he, Mena, resign as Minister of War, deliver up his forces to a civilian, and in return be guaranteed his personal safety and that of his followers. He hesitated and then said that such a course on his part would be very humiliating. I replied that the terms were not mine but the President's, and that if he did not wish to accede to them my mission was at an end and I would return to the Legation. He then stated that he would accept the arrangement as he realized that his life was in danger. He thanked me for having come to him and asked what protection I could offer. I said I could give him no physical protection because I had none even for myself, not having brought so much as a revolver with me, but that I was willing to assure him as American Minister that I would use every effort to secure the pledge of General Chamorro not to fire, or take the offensive or in any way whatsoever endanger his safety, and that if such pledge were given I felt sure it would be observed, and I added that of course he must likewise pledge himself to abstain from firing a single shot or taking any offensive step whatsoever. He said, "My word of honor on it and you may rely on me implicitly. Please arrange also for the safety of my wife and notify her friends." I told him I thought his action in yielding was very praiseworthy. He replied that nevertheless his position was humiliating. I tried to pass the matter over lightly and offered to take his letter of resignation to the President. He hesitated and said, "Can't you take my word of honor?" I answered, "Yes, of course, but it will be better to put the matter in writing as I am only an intermediary." He stated that it would be embarrassing to do so without knowing whether Chamorro would abide by the arrangement. I assured him that unless Chamorro would give me something in writing indicative of his willingness to turn over the command to the person designated by the President. I would bring back the letter of resignation. General Mena then called for pen and paper, and labored with them for a few minutes. He did not seem satisfied with his first attempt but the second was more successful and he thereupon delivered to me his written resignation, a copy and translation of which are enclosed herewith.[1]

After leaving the Guardia de Honor I walked down the line to the other barracks where the Government had about 600 armed men. I was shown to General Chamorro's office and at once acquainted him with the purpose of my visit, the result of my interview with Mena and the arrangement by which both of them should retire in favor of a civilian. At first he demurred and insisted that he would not give up his command except on orders from the President. I explained to him that nothing else was requested or expected of him. He then wrote a letter, copy and translation enclosed,[1] addressed to the President, reporting that he had taken command of the forces as instructed and that he was ready to deliver them to the person designated by the Chief Executive.

Returning to the Legation I delivered the two letters to President Díaz who thanked me and stated that he would at once name Dr. Camilo Barberena, a prominent lawyer and civilian, as the new Minister of War. I telephoned this information to Mena, and he expressed himself as thoroughly satisfied with the appointment, adding that Dr. Barberena was friendly to all elements and would be in himself a guaranty that the rights of everybody would be respected. General Mena then asked me to send word to Dr. Graham to bring Mrs. Mena away from the Mansión in the Campo de Marte. Up to this time I thought she was in his private house in the city, and I had no idea she had been left by him in such a dangerous position. While we were talking he suddenly interrupted me for a few seconds and then resumed the conversation by saying that Dr. Graham had just entered his headquarters and wished to speak to me. This surprised me a bit as I did not know the gentleman even by sight, but of course I consented to hear what he had to say. At first Dr. Graham spoke in Spanish in order perhaps that Mena might understand the conversation. He said that General Mena wished to ask a great favor of me and would feel very grateful if I would conduct his wife to a place of safety. I replied that I would be glad to do so, but I inquired why he as a close friend of the family could not attend to the matter. He answered that it would be dangerous. I told him that there was no risk as I had already gone once to the Campo and that I intended to return there with Dr. Barberena to be present when he accepted the delivery of the forces. However, to avoid delay I said I would arrange to have Mrs. Mena safely escorted to the Hotel Lupone or to any other place he might designate. With this understanding I called up General Chamorro by telephone and urged on him the extreme importance of sending one or two thoroughly reliable staff officers to take Mrs. Mena to a place of safety. General Chamorro of course consented and the lady was accordingly brought to the house of her friends.

---

[1] Not printed.

Having ended this affair, I sent a messenger for Don Miguel Cárdenas, the Minister of Government, whose countersignature was necessary to validate the decree appointing the new Minister of War. After this formality was complied with I learned for the first time that Dr. Barberana was in Granada, and I at once despatched a note requesting him to come to the capital without delay. In order however not to lose further time in taking over Mena's forces it was decided to appoint a subsecretary to accept the delivery.

While this matter was being discussed, Mr. Peña, the manager of the electric light company, which is an American corporation, called at the Legation to ask my advice about a letter he had just received from the Chief of Police ordering the lights to be turned off that night at seven o'clock. I told Mr. Peña that his plant should be kept going by all means. I also addressed letters to the Chief of Police and to the Jefe Político of Managua, both friends of Mena, informing them that the latter had assured me of his desire to make a satisfactory settlement of the difficulty, and requesting them to cooperate in preventing disturbances during the night. The Jefe Político sent me a reply which at the time I thought was written in good faith.

It was already dark when I was called to the telephone by General Chamorro who informed me that his troops down in the city were being menaced by the police under Noguera, Mena's control, and that there was great danger of a conflict between the two forces. I advised him to observe the strict letter of the agreement not to make any offensive move, and that the police had the right in the first instance to continue to patrol the streets for the protection of property. General Chamorro consented to order his troops to the barracks even though he would thereby be putting himself at a great disadvantage in case the peace arrangement fell through.

President Díaz and Dr. Cuadra Pasos, who had been discussing the appointment of the subsecretary, decided to name Dr. J. A. Urtecho, and messengers were sent out to find him, but he had gone to Rivas; so Benjamín Cuadra was finally designated. It being now after seven o'clock I invited the President and Dr. Cuadra Pasos to take dinner at the Legation, so as not to delay matters after the new appointee should have arrived. While we were at table the electric lights suddenly went out, and in about half an hour I was again called to the telephone by General Chamorro who informed me that Mena had just left the city under cover of darkness taking the police with him. When I repeated this news to the President he seemed much disappointed at Mena's action in breaking his pledge but he said there was some consolation that Mena would at least exercise a restraining influence over his son Daniel who was very much feared in Granada.

At my request the acting Minister of Fomento, Señor Pallais, came to the Legation and arranged for the immediate organization of a provisional police force, with the understanding that if enough civilians could not be promptly had for the purpose General Chamorro would select a few of his soldiers to fill out. As a result the streets were better policed than usual, but the firing by the troops continued in desultory manner throughout the night and the city, while outwardly calm, was secretly apprehensive of what might happen in the morning.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00/1822.

The Secretary of State to the President.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 5, 1912.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: From advices that have reached this Department it appears that one day last week President Adolfo Díaz of Nicaragua demanded the resignation of General Luis Mena, his Secretary of War, whereupon Mena, accompanied by his brother, the Chief of Police of Managua, the entire police force and a number of followers cut the electric light wires in Managua and left in the direction of Masaya, since which time he has openly defied the constituted authorities and is now leading an open rebellion against the Government.

Minister Weitzel now reports from Managua that the American corporation owning the railway which runs from Corinto to Granada and certain steamships on the inland waters of Nicaragua has complained to the Legation that Mena and his followers have seized its property and have used certain of the vessels of the company in bombarding the unfortified town of San Jorge. Minister Weitzel thereupon addressed a communication to the Government of Nicaragua requesting that it give satisfactory assurances that it was willing and able to afford adequate protection to all private property of American citizens in Nicaragua. To this communication the Government of Nicaragua replied to the effect that it was employing every available means to give such protection but that it regretted that, because of the necessity of using forces to put down armed disorders, it was unable for the present to comply with the Legation's request. The note of the Foreign Office closed by saying that, > in consequence, my Government desires that the Government of the United States guarantee with its forces security for the property of American citizens in Nicaragua and that it extend its protection to all the inhabitants of the Republic.

Minister Weitzel then addressed a communication to the Commanding Officer of the U. S. S. Annapolis requesting him to take such measures as might be necessary to protect the railroad and to afford security to American citizens and their property.

Minister Weitzel now reports to the Department that a detachment of one hundred men was sent from the Annapolis to Managua, where they arrived on August 4th at 3.30 a. m., and that they are now quartered at the Legation. He concludes by recommending the advisability of sending marines from Panama to Corinto by a Pacific Mail steamer, saying that Managua was quiet.

Under date of August 4, 8 p. m., the Minister reports to the Department that quiet continues at Managua and that the effect of the arrival of the bluejackets, according to the unanimous opinion of the Americans, in which he concurs, is thus far favorable. The Minister states that foreigners with whom he has talked are of the same opinion and that the Salvadoran Minister, in his personal capacity and in strict confidence, has informed him that this was the only move that could have prevented complete anarchy and the spread of disorder throughout Central America.

From a telegram received at the Navy Department from the Commander of the Annapolis, it appears that the men were sent from Corinto to the capital in order to protect the lives of American citizens reported to be in imminent danger of attack.

I learn from inquiry at the Navy Department that there are on the Isthmus of Panama three hundred and fifty marines available for this service, and in view of the specific request of the Nicaraguan Government and of the seemingly possible danger of resultant anarchy, I have the honor to request that I be authorized to ask that the Navy Department comply with Minister Weitzel's recommendation.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

Note. The President returned the foregoing letter with the following notation written by him thereon:

The authority requested herein is hereby given.

WM. H. TAFT.

August 5, 1912.

File No. 817.00/2167.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 69.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, August 7, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith copies of letters[1] sent to General Mena in an effort to prevent an armed conflict in Nicaragua.

Even after he had fled during the night from the capital to Masaya in violation of his pledge to deliver up his forces to the Nicaraguan Government I still continued to try to bring about a peaceful settlement of the difficulty, and with that end in view I sent a telegram on July 30, confirmed by letter, urging him not to resort to violence and intimating that he might still explain his departure from the barracks as a reasonable precaution for the protection of his men and for the avoidance of hostilities.

The same afternoon he replied by telegram in which, after trying to justify his conduct, he insinuated that President Díaz should retire in favor of the second designate, Marcos Mairena, passing over the first for the reason, unexpressed though none the less obvious, that Luis Correa, who was next in line of succession, was known to be friendly to the Government. Mena's reply indicated that he was being advised in the matter by others, and, knowing how susceptible he is to influence, I wrote again on July 31, suggesting another personal interview, discountenancing any disloyalty to President Díaz and impressing again on him to respond to the offer of reconciliation made by the President and General Chamorro.

---

[1] Not printed.

That night the Government outpost intercepted two letters which proved conclusively that Mena was playing false and that he was already beginning to arm his allies, the Zelayistas, for the overthrow of the Government by force. In order to gain time to transport a certain number of rifles from Granada to Leon he continued his correspondence and on the 2nd of August he sent to the Legation a telegram, not completed because of the cutting of the wires, in which he said: "I am animated by the best intention to conclude happily your worthy and generous labor to reach a harmonious solution"; and he added that, although appreciating my humanitarian motives in desiring to avoid strife, his army was insisting on a change in the presidency.

The following day I sent my third communication informing him of the protest made by the American owner of the railroad against his unlawful seizure and destruction of its property, and warning him to restore such part as was still in his possession and to desist from any interference in the future. This letter was delivered by one of the Government's messengers who reported that he had been maltreated and cautioned under threat not to bring any more notes. Mena in his reply to me stated that he had referred the protest to his so-called national assembly, convoked by him in Masaya, and he enclosed a copy of a resolution of that body denying the American company's right to complain. From another resolution of the same sort it appears that on August 1 he conferred on himself the title of "General in chief of the Allied Forces", and assuming legislative powers declared that having been attacked in his office and compelled to resign as Minister of War, he therefore decreed that Adolfo Díaz be removed from the presidency and that the power be deposited in Marcos Mairena. This decree appears to have been approved by the rump assembly on August 3. The regular National Assembly in the capital at Managua adjourned on June 30 last.

I have [etc.]

George T. Weitzel.

File No. 817.00/2168.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 70.]

American Legation,
Managua, August 9, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of correspondence[1] in regard to the political disturbances in Nicaragua, and the measures taken by the Legation for the protection of life and property.

Within half an hour of the outbreak and while Mena was still cornered in the barracks of the Campo de Marte, the police commanded by his brother, Noguera, arrested the director of telegraphs, seized all messages, including my telegram of July 29, 1 p. m., and took control of the wires in and out of the city. They telephoned to the railroad offices giving out false reports that the Liberals had captured the Campo de Marte, and urging that all the rolling-stock be rushed to Granada to bring in friends of the Government to defend the capital. The obvious purpose, of course, was to turn over the engines and trains to the Menistas, and one of the conspirators, Salvador Buitrago Días, a judge of the Supreme Court, did succeed in getting away with freight and passenger coaches; another, Dr. Sebastián Salinas, escaped with two locomotives but fortunately was captured and brought back, otherwise the railroad company would have been even more seriously crippled in the management of the line.

---

[1] Not printed.

Two days later the Government outposts intercepted despatches which showed conclusively that Mena had agreed with Arturo Ortega and L. Ramírez to supply rifles and ammunition to the Zelayistas, and that Benjamín Zeledón and J. M. Zelaya were already on their way to Masaya with men to be armed. Zeledón is a Liberal, formerly connected with the Zelaya administration, and was recently permitted to return to Nicaragua on his promise not to take part in political agitations or engage in any subversive movement against the Government. The Menistas tried to surprise Tipitapa so as to send arms by that road to León, and about the same time, according to information received by the Government from its Chargé d'Affaires in San José, the Zelayistas in Costa Rica under Julian Irias and Rodolfo Espinosa were preparing a filibuster expedition from Puntarenas to a near-by port in Nicaragua.

These rapid preparations for hostilities, and the knowledge that Mena as Minister of War had been able to get control of the larger part of the Government's military supplies, caused great alarm in the capital, especially among those who have had some experience with the sort of warfare that is conducted in Nicaragua.

The British Consul General, Mr. H. C. Venables, called at the Legation on July 31 to request my good offices in arranging for the safety of his wife and infant child who were at Jinotepe. He said that while returning from there to Managua he was halted and questioned by Zeledón, who had already established a camp at Casa Colorada, near Masaya, and the impression made on him was such that he felt considerable anxiety for his family. I was very glad to be able to arrange to have them conducted to a place of safety at the Vaughan hacienda, near San Marcos, owned by an Englishman. The Consul General on August 3 again asked my assistance in behalf of two of his nationals, Mrs. Brown Webber and daughter, who were in Masaya.

The National Bank of Nicaragua, an American corporation, informally by its manager requested the Legation to mention confidentially to the Government that there were considerable sums of money in the vaults for which protection was sought against plain robbers as well as armed enemies. I had already arranged the night before with Señor Pallais for the organization of a provisional police force, but I nevertheless wrote to President Díaz in regard to the desirability of having an adequate guard at the bank, and received ample affirmative assurances in the matter.

Two days later the manager of the railroad, which is owned and operated by a company organized under the laws of the State of Maine, filed a protest with the Legation complaining that its locomotives and cars had been unlawfully taken by forces acting under Mena's orders; that a passenger train was obstructed at Masaya causing great distress to the passengers among whom were foreigners; and that the company's steamers on Lake Nicaragua had been seized and occupied by armed forces. These steamers were used for bombarding San Jorge and other unfortified towns along the lake.

The Legation promptly brought the protest to the attention of the Nicaraguan Government on August 3, and requested that steps be taken to afford adequate protection to the property of Americans. The Minister for Foreign Affairs replied that his Government is making every effort to extend such protection but regrets its inability to do so because of the necessity of using its forces to put down armed disorders, and he concluded by requesting that the Government of the United States land forces to guarantee the property and life of its own citizens as well as to extend its protection to all the inhabitants of the Republic.

The Mixed Claims Commission addressed to the Legation a communication reciting that whereas the Nicaraguan Government had replied to a request for protection that it was unable to afford adequate security for the commission records; and whereas there were on file more than five thousand cases involving claims of hundreds of thousands of dollars, many of the claimants being citizens of the United States and other foreign countries; and whereas the loss of these records would work irreparable injury to the innocent litigants, it was resolved by the commission to solicit the protection of the United States Government for its premises, its records and the persons of its American members.

The Legation received a similar request for protection of the customs houses, which are under the control of an American collector general.

The members of the American colony resident in Managua informally met and resolved to urge the necessity of taking prompt measures for the security of their lives and property.

That same morning information reached me of uprisings in Chinandega and León, and of further interruptions of the wire and rail service between the capital and the port. It then became necessary for me to decide without delay what practical measures to take for the safeguarding of the persons and interests committed to the care of the Legation, for if the railroad and telegraph communication from Corinto to Managua were destroyed no effective precautions would be any longer available.

The Department will observe from the enclosed letter and itinerary[1] of the U. S. S. Annapolis that it left Amapala on July 7 bound for the Canal Zone, and having put in at San Juan del Sur to meet the mail steamer, was intercepted by my telegram and that of the Consul at Corinto.

On August 3 I sent a telegram to the commanding officer, Captain W. J. Terhune, U. S. N., inquiring how many men he had available for a landing force, and a few hours later I sent another requesting that he disembark a guard and order it to the Legation in Managua Captain Terhune responded very promptly and landed a detachment of ninety bluejackets and five officers, Lieutenant James A. Campbell, Jr., commanding. This force arrived at the capital at 3.30 a. m. of

---

[1] Not printed.

August 4 and took up quarters in the Legation, which has been temporarily enlarged by the addition of a small house adjoining on the left.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00/1851.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 46.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 17, 1912.

SIR: I enclose herewith for your information a copy of a despatch from the Legation at San José, in regard to the rumor that the Nicaraguan Liberals threatened to invade Nicaragua from Costa Rican territory.

I am [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

[Inclosure.]

The American Chargé d'Affaires in Costa Rica to the Secretary of State.

No. 33.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San José, Costa Rica, August 2, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's telegraphic instruction of August 1, 1912, directing me to investigate and report upon the rumor that the Nicaraguan Liberals threatened to invade Nicaragua from Costa Rican territory.

When this instruction was received, I was confined to my bed by a slight illness. I therefore requested Consul Lee to call upon the Minister of Foreign Affairs. Mr. Lee was informed by Mr. Castro that he knew of no threatened invasion by the Nicaraguan Liberals from the Costa Rican border, and considered such invasion improbable, adding that, at the request of the Nicaraguan Chargé d'Affaires, the Costa Rican Government had ordered that certain Nicaraguan emigrados be put under strict police surveillance.

I accordingly cabled the above information to the Department today.

I have [etc.]

MARSHALL LANGHORNE.

File No. 817.00/2178.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 71.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, August 23, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of correspondence[1] relative to the peace proposals, the violation of the armistice arranged by the Salvadoran Minister, and the protests against the bombardment of the city of Managua by the forces of Mena and Zeledón.

On August 6 Mena wrote to his personal and political friend, Don Miguel Cárdenas, an officer of the Díaz Cabinet, that he was desirous of arranging a peaceful termination of the troubles in Nicaragua.

---

[1] Not printed.

On the same day he addressed another letter to certain members of his own Conservative party in Granada, replying to their suggestion of compromise, and proposing as the basis of settlement that Don Adolfo Díaz withdraw from the presidency and permit Mena to name the person who should succeed him for the balance of the present term and for the following four years.

Meanwhile the Minister of Salvador, Don Antonio López G., and the Chargé d'Affaires of Costa Rica, Don Francisco Cabezas G., had called at the Legation to inquire my views with reference to the advisability of offering their mediation to the contending parties. I replied that in my opinion they should first make sure of the safety of their channel of communication by getting from Mena a disavowal of the acts of his subordinates who have been accused by the Nicaraguan Government of maltreating its messengers. They accepted the suggestion and later on sent to me a note containing Mena's denial of the charges and promising fair treatment in the future. They then decided to visit him personally at Masaya and to communicate President Díaz's counterproposals to the effect that the rebels surrender all arms and that the Government grant amnesty and pay the costs of the conflict. The mediators succeeded in arranging with Mena an armistice of twenty-four hours, later increased forty-eight to expire on August 12; and they likewise entered into an agreement that for the purpose of expediting telegraphic communication between Masaya and Managua each side should send two workmen to repair the lines which had been cut. The Government promptly acceded to this arrangement and sent two employees of the telegraph office to Sabana Grande to put the lines in condition, but the Menistas stopped the work, imprisoned the men and confiscated their instruments.

While the armistice was still in force General Benjamín F. Zeledón demanded of the Government the surrender of the capital, and addressed to me as Dean of the Diplomatic Corps a note informing me of his intention to bombard the city within twelve hours. A similar note having been sent to the Consular Corps, both these bodies of foreign representatives met at the Legation for conference. When all were assembled the Salvadoran Minister expressed deep resentment against Mena for the inexcusable breach of faith, and after some discussion proposed that strong protests should be made against the threatened bombardment. He stated to me that the attacking parties had shown themselves to be beyond the pale of civilization and should be treated not as rebels but as savages who have violated all rules of warfare; and he urged on me the necessity of having sufficient United States forces to prevent complete anarchy. Señor López then prepared the protest made by the Diplomatic Corps, and I signed it, though with some hesitation as I had decided to send my own separate protest as Dean and as American Minister. The Consular officers added theirs in very emphatic terms. Another notice of bombardment having been sent to the Nicaraguan Government and to the Salvadoran Minister by General Dionisio Thomas, my colleague replied with a copy of the several protests.

Notwithstanding the vigorous objections raised by the Diplomatic and Consular Corps, the artillery attack was begun early in the morning of the 11th instant, as reported in my telegram of August 12, 7 p. m., and continued throughout the day, most of the three-inch projectiles falling in the residence portion of the city. The guns of General Dionisio Thomas also took part although the time proposed in his ultimatum had not yet expired. At night Zeledón's forces attempted to take the city by assault but were repulsed with great losses. Among the prisoners captured by the Government several stated that they had been promised four days of looting in Managua if the city were taken. The Minister for Foreign Affairs addressed to me a note requesting that more United States forces be disembarked for the protection of the life and property of the foreigners. Many Americans in the towns held by the Mena and Zelaya elements had already made complaint to the Legation of ill treatment, and in the case of Mr. Caldera, former United States Acting Consul in Managua during the Zelaya régime, who expressed some apprehension for the safety of his family, although I was not able to have them brought to the capital as requested I succeeded in sending medical relief to his wife.

The detachment of about one hundred bluejackets brought to Managua, as heretofore reported, would have been inadequate, of course, to afford protection for any length of time if the more serious fears felt by the general public had been realized. The commanding officer kept the guard within the building temporarily arranged as the Legation compound, and very little street liberty was allowed to the men. A supply of stores and water sufficient to last a month having been secured, and the Legation barricaded, the guard could have withstood an ordinary attack by street mobs, but of course would have been ineffective against any concerted assault with large guns.

The bombardment of the city continued throughout the 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th, with slight intermissions, and about 600 projectiles were fired into the residence portion of the city, according to the estimate of the Navy officers. One shell struck in the street directly in front of the Legation, and about 40 or 50 within dangerous proximity. Three fell in the Hotel Lupone where the foreigners were known to be congregated. Thousands of people fled into the country and those who remained were in dread of their lives. The Salvadoran Minister and the British Vice Consul departed for Corinto. Many families constructed places of shelter in back yards, and at the request of the British Consul General two of the bluejackets built a bombproof in his house for him and his friends. There were a hundred and thirty-two women and children killed and injured by shells and not one man. The last of the firing was heard at about 5 a. m. of August 14 and this proved to be a feint to cover the retreat, for by eight o'clock it was definitely known that the rebels had withdrawn towards Masaya, and the Government had demonstrated its ability to defend the capital under the most adverse conditions.

Two hours later Major Smedley D. Butler, U. S. M. C., arrived from Corinto with his battalion of 350 marines from the Canal Zone, and was given a warm welcome by natives and foreigners alike. He had moved his forces with remarkable rapidity and reached the capital at a most opportune time, for if he had arrived sooner he would have had difficulty perhaps in entering the city during the fighting, and on the other hand if his coming had been delayed the railroad communication would have been cut and the relief work seriously hampered for a long time.

I am [etc.]

George T. Weitzel.

File No. 817.00/2179.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 72.]

American Legation,
Managua, August 30, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inform the Department of further measures taken for the protection of life and property of foreigners in the capital.

Even before the bombardment of Managua, reports had come to the Legation of the spread of lawlessness in all parts of the country, especially in Granada, Masaya, and Jinotepe, where the people, natives and foreigners, were being subjected to personal abuse and forced to pay contributions of money and merchandise. The Italian, British and Austrian consular officers received vigorous complaints from their respective nationals against the unlawful seizure of property by Mena's bands. The British Consul General called at the Legation to say that he had been instructed to ask what protection the United States proposed to afford to foreigners and their interests in Nicaragua, and what naval vessels were available for the purposes. To his inquiry as to the advisability of sending a British man-of-war to Nicaraguan waters I replied that in my opinion such action would be inopportune and unnecessary.

On August 11 the members of the Consular Corps, apparently looking to the United States to take measures for the protection of foreign interests, presented a joint note requesting me to interpose my good offices to prevent the bombardment of the city with its consequent danger to life and property. The specific plan proposed by them was impracticable. No foreigners were killed during the bombardment and only one, an American, was injured, but several suffered severe damage to property before the arrival of the battalion of marines on August 15. Major Butler, the commanding officer, quartered his men at first in private houses in the city but afterwards transferred them to the open country and established a camp near the Loma, where the air, water and drainage are good and whence his forces might easily defend themselves in case of another attack on Managua.

On August 16 I addressed a note to General Mena demanding that he return the American property unlawfully held by him and that he comply with his pledge to deliver up his forces to the Government. As the Nicaraguan messengers heretofore sent with the Legation's notes had been roughly treated by the insurgent forces, we decided to have this one carried by an American officer. Lieutenant E. H. Conger, U. S. M. C., readily agreed to assume the risk and set out for Granada with a guide. The next day the guide returned alone and reported that Conger had not been able to go any further than Masaya where he was held by Zeledón as a hostage. I then sent another note to Zeledón requesting that Lieutenant Conger be allowed to proceed to his destination or else started on his return to the Legation. Corporal George Copeland promptly volunteered to carry this message, and to inform Conger quietly that an expedition would be sent to rescue him if necessary. Before this last mentioned note was delivered Conger returned to Managua, having successfully completed his mission. The reply which he brought from Mena was characteristically verbose and unsatisfactory, and was evidently intended to gain time until the result of the fighting in León could be ascertained. I therefore sent another note to Mena informing him that in the interest of humanity and for the protection of the lives and property of Americans, others foreigners and non-combatants, the city of Managua has been declared a place of safe refuge and no further bombardment or other hostilities will be permitted. As a result of this action calm has been restored to the city and a feeling of relief has spread among the people here. But elsewhere the conditions are growing worse and great disorder prevails in those towns in which the Government has lost control. President Díaz has informed me that it may become necessary to use the army for the safeguarding of Americans. The rebel leaders have in some cases fallen out among themselves, and each suspects the others of plotting to gain supremacy. Mena has had Marcos Mairena named President at Masaya, but Zeledón, who is in military command there, has ambitions of his own; one faction of the Zelayistas has declared for General Paulino Godoy, and another for Francisco Baca, who is likewise being supported by the Salvadoran Government, so it is said here; Rodolfo Espinosa, Leonardo Argüello and Manuel Carazo also have presidential aspirations. There is no real leadership, and those who call themselves leaders find that they have little control over the mob. Especially in León the confusion has increased since the uprising which resulted in the annihilation of Durón's forces and the brutal killing of the two Americans, Harvey Dodd and Philip Craven.

On August 20 Captain Terhune, U. S. N., left Managua with forty bluejackets and ten marines to return to his ship, the Annapolis, at Corinto but was stopped by a mob at León and compelled to return to the capital on foot after having his train taken away from him. As soon as Major Butler heard of the indignities to which his marines had been subjected he at once announced his intention to escort Captain Terhune with 120 men and to force a way through León. I tried to persuade him to wait for the arrival of the U. S. S. California which was expected daily at Corinto with reenforcements. Until the latter should come I felt that it would be inadvisable to weaken the United States guard in Managua which had been held out to the foreigners as a place of safe refuge although Mena had announced that he would not recognize it as such. However, the expedition started to Corinto by train on August 26. That night the Nicaraguan Government intercepted a courier bearing messages from Mena to the Zelayistas which stated that a convoy of ammunition was being sent from Granada to León, and that as soon as it arrived a joint attack should be made on Managua from both sides. Very fortunately the Government forces succeeded in capturing the convoy near El Guayabal some miles from León, and thereby not only replenished its own stores with much needed ammunition but also prevented another bombardment of the capital.

I have [etc.],

George T. Weitzel.

File No. 817.00/1930.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister to Salvador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 4, 1912—6 p. m.

The following telegram from the President of Salvador has been received by the President:

> I fear serious complications if American troops enter into Nicaraguan territory. The situation grows steadily worse. In León people uprose at arrival of marines. The interference of Salvador Minister alone prevented serious consequences. I respectfully beg of you to suggest to President Díaz to enter into some arrangement of peace, accepting third person. I do this moved by my ardent desire for peace in Central America and my sincere friendship for Government and people of the United States.
>
> Respectfully,
>
> President Araujo.

You will, by the President's direction, seek an audience with President Araujo and hand him textually the following message in reply:

> His Excellency the President of Salvador:
>
> I appreciate your assurance of your ardent desire for peace in Central America and of your sincere friendship. These high motives will doubtless guarantee a strict adherence to and enforcement of the Washington conventions[1] so far as the Government of Salvador is concerned and will undoubtedly insure earnest support by the Government of Salvador of those measures in furtherance of Central American peace which the Government of the United States is taking under the moral mandate of the Washington conventions and is best able to undertake because of its entire aloofness from those political interrelations which might be used to challenge and frustrate the efforts, however sincere, of any one of the Central American republics.
>
> I share your opinion that the situation in Nicaragua has grown very grave. The Government of the United States has no thought of leaving its Legation and the lives and safety of its citizens and their property and its important interests in Nicaragua at the mercy of a rebellion based upon no principle and carried on with motives and methods vividly recalling the times of Zelaya and doing the most flagrant violence to all the principles of honor, of humanity, of order and of civilization.
>
> As to Your Excellency's suggestion, I can not now feel justified in suggesting to the legitimate Government of Nicaragua any arrangement with persons whose pledged word has proved valueless or any compromise of governmental authority legally bestowed and properly exercised.
>
> In view of all these circumstances and to make promptly effective the discharge of its duties, the Government of the United States intends, in accordance with the request of the Government of Nicaragua, to take adequate measures for the protection of its interests and in furtherance of peace and orderly government, to the support of which under the Washington conventions each Central American republic is solemnly pledged.
>
> I regret the rumors, which seem quite incredible, to the effect that the present rebellion in Nicaragua is being assisted from the territory of Salvador. It is not necessary to point out to Your Excellency that the vindication of the policy of Salvador finds its full opportunity in the Washington conventions.
>
> William H. Taft.

---

[1] See For. Rel. 1907, pp. 655 et seq.

In your conversation you should leave no doubt in the mind of the President and Government of Salvador that their motives and activities are under considerable suspicion and are being closely watched; that the Government of the United States is absolutely determined to do its full duty in Nicaragua; and that the quality of the friendship of the Government of Salvador will be measured by its attitude in the premises.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 817.00/1940b.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 4, 1912—7 p. m.

Unless a different course appears to you preferable—in which case you will telegraph your suggestions—you may communicate to the Government of Nicaragua the text of the following as the authorized declaration of the policy of the United States in the present disturbances. You may also communicate it unofficially to the rebel leaders, and make it public:

> The policy of the Government of the United States in the present Nicaraguan disturbances is to take the necessary measures for an adequate legation guard at Managua, to keep open communications, and to protect American life and property.
>
> In discountenancing Zelaya, whose régime of barbarity and corruption was ended by the Nicaraguan nation after a bloody war, the Government of the United States opposed not only the individual but the system, and this Government could not countenance any movement to restore the same destructive régime. The Government of the United States will, therefore, discountenance any revival of Zelayaism and will lend its strong moral support to the cause of legally constituted good government for the benefit of the people of Nicaragua, whom it has long sought to aid in their just aspiration toward peace and prosperity under constitutional and orderly government.
>
> A group of some 125 American planters residing in one region in Nicaragua have applied for protection. Some two dozen American firms doing business in that country have applied for protection. The American bankers who have made investments in relation to railroads and steamships in Nicaragua, in connection with a plan for the relief of the financial distress of that country, have applied for protection. The American citizens now in the service of the Government of Nicaragua and the Legation itself have been placed in actual jeopardy under fire. Two wounded American citizens are reported to have been ruthlessly slaughtered. Besides the Emery claim due American citizens and the indemnity for the killing of Groce and Cannon in the Zelaya war, there are various American claims and concessionary interests. Under the Washington conventions, the United States has a moral mandate to exert its influence for the preservation of the general peace of Central America, which is seriously menaced by the present uprising, and to this end in the strict enforcement of the Washington conventions and loyal support of their aims and purposes all the Central American Republics will find means of valuable cooperation. These are among the important moral, political, and material interests to be protected.
>
> When the American Minister called upon the Government of Nicaragua to protect American life and property, the Minister for Foreign Affairs replied that the Government troops must be used to put down the rebellion, adding: "In consequence, my Government desires that the Government of the United States guarantee with its forces security for the property of American citizens in Nicaragua, and that they extend this protection to all the inhabitants of the Republic."

In this situation the policy of the Government of the United States will be to protect the life and property of its citizens in the manner indicated and, meanwhile, to contribute its influence in all appropriate ways to the restoration of lawful and orderly government in order that Nicaragua may resume its program of reforms unhampered by the vicious elements who would restore the methods of Zelaya.

The revolt of General Mena in flagrant violation of his solemn promises to his own Government and to the American Minister, and of the Dawson agreement by which he was solemnly bound, and his attempt to overturn the Government of his country for purely selfish purposes and without even the pretense of contending for a principle, make the present rebellion in origin the most inexcusable in the annals of Central America. The nature and methods of the present disturbances, indeed, place them in the category of anarchy rather than ordinary revolution. The reported character of those who promptly joined Mena, together with his uncivilized and savage action in breaking armistices, maltreating messengers, violating his word of honor, torturing peaceable citizens to exact contributions, and, above all, in the ruthless bombardment of the city of Managua, with the deliberate destruction of innocent life and property and the killing of women and children and the sick in hospitals, and the cruel and barbarous slaughter of hundreds reported at Leon, give to the Mena revolt the attributes of the abhorrent and intolerable Zelaya régime.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 817.00/2180.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 73.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, September 8, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the Department's telegraphic instructions of August 25, 8 p. m.[1], I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of correspondence[1] showing the conditions at Matagalpa and the measures taken by the Legation in behalf of the Americans and other foreigners residing there.

Matagalpa is a very prosperous interior town about five days journey by mule from Managua and is the center of a rich agricultural and mining district controlled principally by foreigners, of whom there are about two hundred. When the disturbances began at the capital on July 29 there was considerable apprehension and alarm in Matagalpa because of the recent efforts of the Zelayistas to inflame sentiment against the Americans on account of an alleged insult to the Nicaraguan flag during the last Fourth of July celebration. (See my despatch No. 67 of July 29, 1912.[1])

The American acting consular agent, Mr. Spencer Richardson, wrote to the Legation on August 9, 16 and 18, and transmitted a petition signed by the American residents of the district, requesting that United States forces be sent to the interior. He added his own opinion that there was danger in certain circumstances of a massacre of the Americans. After consultation with Major Butler I replied on the 18th and 21st informing him that it was impracticable with the small forces at hand to send any part of them to Matagalpa or to any other point so inaccessible from a seaport, but I instructed him to say to the Americans, and to any other foreigners who may apply to him for advice, that if they believe their lives to be in jeopardy they may consider the advisability of seeking safe refuge in Managua for the time being. This reply did not seem to be entirely satisfactory to the Americans, who naturally did not wish to leave their property behind, but with only 350 marines in Nicaragua, besides the bluejackets, it was of course out of the question to weaken the forces in the capital.

---

[1] Not printed.

The Orova Leonesa mine, which is a British concern managed by an American, Mr. F. W. Nobs, wrote to the Legation, and likewise to the British Consulate General, requesting protection for its property against marauding bands. Mr. Venables came to see me, bringing a copy of the letter, and inquired what assistance could be rendered to the British interests in that district. I told him of the instruction given to the American consular officer in Matagalpa and explained that for the present at least no United States forces could be sent so far inland. I had already urged on President Díaz the necessity of taking all possible precautions, but I again brought the matter officially to the attention of the Nicaraguan Government by note, and was assured by the Foreign Office that additional troops would be ordered to the vicinity to afford ample protection. This assurance was communicated to the interested parties, and thereafter on September 6 I received a report from Mr. Richardson that the conditions had greatly improved and that there was for the time being no further apprehension of danger in Matagalpa.

I have [etc.]

George T. Weitzel.

File No. 817.00/1959.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

Navy Department,
Washington, September 10, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the information of the Department of State, copies of two cablegrams, dated September 8th and 9th, received from the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, U. S. S. Annapolis, regarding the Nicaraguan revolution.

Respectfully yours,

Philip Andrews.

[Inclosure 1.]

U. S. S. Annapolis,
Corinto, Nicaragua, September 8, 1912.

The situation now completely quiet and absolutely under the control of myself from Corinto [to] Managua, and it is reduced to the status [of an] ordinary Central American revolution, which, with judgment, can be handled to a satisfactory termination. Plans now progressing will accomplish this result during this week. I shall open railroad fully from Corinto to the terminus [at] Granada, and keep it open. [I] possess all railroad stock and railroad personnel, composed of Navy and the Marine Corps.

Southerland.

[Inclosure 2.]

U. S. S. Annapolis,
Corinto, Nicaragua, September 9, 1912.

In order to render futile any revolutionary movement while our force [is] operating in the country, the entire battalions [of] California and Colorado bluejackets have been assigned [to] Colonel Pendleton's command. He will occupy León with sufficient force under Lieutenant Colonel Long, and then will open railroad to Granada. My object is to prevent any (?) while we remain here.

SOUTHERLAND.

File No. 817.00/1960.

The American Chargé d'Affaires in Salvador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, September 10, 1912.

An orderly anti-American mass-meeting was held here last night, the second demonstration that has been prompted by our policy in Nicaragua. The following report as to the sequel to the meeting has been received by this Legation from the Minister for Foreign Affairs:

> A large committee of workmen and students called to-day on the President to appeal to him in regard to the Nicaragua situation. The President replied as follows:
>
> The sovereignty of our brother country has not been attacked and is not in danger. The United States troops who disembarked did so at the solicitation of the lawfully established Government of Nicaragua; their only motive for disembarking was to protect the lives and property of foreigners. As soon as order is reestablished they will depart. Certain agitators are maliciously asserting that the United States intends to establish a protectorate, but this is not true.
>
> The Government of the United States is friendly to Salvador. As the Secretary of State of that Government said not long ago, "When American ships visit the waters of Salvador, it is in order to render to her the homage of sympathy."
>
> The transmission of these declarations will be thankfully appreciated by Your obedient servant and friend,
>
> M. CASTRO R.

HINCKLEY.

File No. 817.00/1935.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 52.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 11, 1912.

SIR: The Department encloses herewith, for the information of your Legation, copies of a despatch dated the 22nd ultimo, and its enclosures, from the American Minister at San Salvador, concerning the attitude of Salvador and other Central American countries regarding the revolutionary conditions now existing in Nicaragua.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Minister to Salvador to the Secretary of State.

No. 258.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, August 22, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on the morning of the 15th instant Doctor Castro Ramírez, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, came to the Legation to request me to send a telegram to our Legations at Tegucigalpa and Managua, and ask our Ministers at those capitals to have the kindness to ascertain and advise me, by wire, for the information of President Araujo, if it was true that the Honduran Government had sent General Durón to Nicaragua with artillery and military forces to aid the Government of President Díaz. Minister Castro Ramírez explained that the reason why he requested me to send such a telegram was that President Araujo's telegrams to the Presidents of Honduras and Nicaragua of several days ago asking for this same information had apparently been intercepted, as he had received no response, and that the President thought the Legation's telegrams might be allowed to go through without molestation. I therefore sent the before-mentioned telegrams for President Araujo. A few hours later, however (at 11:30 a. m. of the same day and twenty-four hours before I had received a response from either Tegucigalpa or Managua), Minister Castro Ramírez came to the Legation and showed me a telegram from President Bonilla, of Honduras, to President Araujo, dated the 15th instant, informing him that General Durón has not been in the service of the Honduran Government for some time past, and adding that apart from the small force on the frontier, no troops of the Government of Honduras have been mobilized; while Minister Castro Ramírez sent to me on the afternoon of the same day (the 15th instant) a copy of a telegram to the President of this Republic from Señor J. Antonio López G., the Salvadoran Minister to Nicaragua, dated Chinandega, August 15, 1912, saying that General Durón had arrived at Managua with three hundred men and two machine guns, and that a train had passed Chinandega on that day with 50,000 rounds of ammunition from Amapala, Honduras. Consequently, as President Araujo had obtained the information which he wanted regarding the movements of General Durón direct from the Minister of Salvador to Nicaragua and also from the President of Honduras, I did not communicate to the Salvadoran Government the response of our Legations at Tegucigalpa and Managua. I enclose copies of the before-mentioned telegrams for the information of the Department, as well as a copy of an additional telegram which I have received from our Chargé d'Affaires at Tegucigalpa, dated the 20th instant, saying that the information contained in his first telegram in that General Durón had joined President Díaz is incorrect, while I also enclose a copy of my response to that telegram, dated to-day.

Respecting the attitude of the Government of Salvador in relation to the present revolution in Nicaragua, I have the honor to report that in a conversation which I had with President Araujo on the 17th instant upon this subject, the Executive stated to me that he had addressed an identic note to the Presidents of Guatemala, Honduras, and Costa Rica, proposing joint action in giving to the constituted Government of Nicaragua their moral, as well as their material support; and when I asked President Araujo with what result, he responded that the Government of Guatemala had consented to give to the Government of President Díaz its moral, but not its material support; that the Government of Honduras had replied, saying that it would join the Government of Salvador in rendering the constituted Government of Nicaragua both moral and material support, and, finally, that the answer of Costa Rica had been to the effect that the Government of that country would do whatever Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras might dictate, in order to help in the restoration of peace in Nicaragua.

In this connection I may add that, pending an answer from the three before mentioned Governments, the Government of Salvador had completed arrangements with the Salvador Railway and Steamship Company for the transportation of one-thousand troops from here to Corinto, and that it was only yesterday that the Salvadoran Government resolved to abandon this project; and Doctor Castro Ramírez informed me in a conversation which I had with him to-day that his Government would confine itself to giving to the constituted Government of Nicaragua its moral support only. This is the situation here at the present time, and, aside from condemning General Mena for disturbing the peace of Central America, simply from morbid personal motives, the people of Salvador seem to take no other interest in the actual uprising in Nicaragua.

In explanation of his desire to ascertain if General Durón had been sent to Nicaragua by the Honduran Government to aid the Government of President Díaz against General Mena, President Araujo stated to me that he had had a suspicion (which he has now admitted to me without foundation) that the President of Honduras was working "underground" after having promised to cooperate with Salvador in rendering assistance to the actual Government of Nicaragua.

I have [etc.]

WILLIAM HEIMKE.

File No. 817.00/1968.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, September 13, 1912, 9 a. m.

Your September 4, 7 p. m. Being convinced of the wisdom of communicating at once, I have delivered to the Foreign Office a textual copy of the Department's authorized declaration of policy, and have forwarded to Admiral Southerland another copy.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00/2003a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 24, 1912.

Repeat to the other Legations in Central America for their information and guidance Department's declaration of policy, contained in the telegram of September 4, 7 p. m.

WILSON.

File No. 817.00/2033.

Interview between the Acting Secretary of State and the Minister of Salvador.

[Memorandum.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 26, 1912.

The Minister of Salvador called this morning to present the attached communication from President Araujo. I read it in Spanish, but explained to the Minister that I should wish to have it translated and carefully considered whereupon I should ask him to be good enough to come to the Department again to discuss the matter before taking further action.

The Minister twice intimated that he should think it would be all right to make the reply through our Legation in San Salvador, but I spoke in a friendly way of my preference for first discussing the matter with him. The Minister seemed, I thought, somewhat embarrassed at the news of Mena's surrender and intimated that of course the situation seemed to have changed a good deal. Mr. Mejía asked me if I knew what was to be done to the Liberals at León. I said that I was entirely without information on the subject.

I said that owing to our long-standing friendly relations I was always loath to have to mention any disagreeable subject, but that I thought I ought to say that even within the last forty-eight hours we had had reiterated reports that there were certain phenomena occurring in Nicaragua which the people there were utterly unable to explain on any other hypothesis than the sending of aid to the rebels from across the Salvadorean frontier whether in the form of money, arms, or men.

The Minister then spoke with a little more energy saying that, as I knew, the Gulf of Fonseca was between Salvador and Nicaragua, Honduran territory lying between, and then without illustrating more on this topic he passed on to speak of the frequent instructions he received in favor of putting forward Calderón, etc.

The President of Salvador to the Minister of Salvador.

[Translation of the communication above referred to; handed to the Acting Secretary of State September 26, 1912.]

Be good enough in a verbal interview to hand to Acting Secretary Wilson a textual copy of this instruction, asking him to bring it to the knowledge of His Excellency President Taft, to whom the original is addressed. It is as follows:

"It is believed here that the naval forces which occupy Nicaraguan territory have entered into warlike action against the revolutionists who occupy Granada. An occurrence of such gravity seriously compromises the responsibility of the other Central American executives. In order to safeguard my own and in fulfilment of the high duties of humanity which I am certain will find a generous response in the breast of the President, you will intimate to him the happy circumstance in that for the avoidance of greater shedding of blood among our brothers a propitious occasion is presented to the American Government of assisting the high offices of humanity acting in support of my Government, either jointly or separately, to the effect that Don Salvador Calderón should take provisional charge of the supreme power of Nicaragua during the period in which constitutional order is being reestablished by legal and peaceful means. Señor Calderón is a person of spotless antecedents, illustrious and upright, and moreover persona grata to the American Government and a friend of President Díaz, who has indicated to my Government that he would accept him in such a character. My Government engages to exercise moral pressure upon the revolutionary heads to induce acceptance of Señor Calderón in accord with that Government (of the United States), which would thus render a service not to be forgotten in the memory of the Central American people, eliminating the profound excitement which the gravity of recent events has caused in this country, which also will react markedly upon the moral opinion of the whole continent. Explain to the President the uprightness of my intentions in this grave emergency which I did not anticipate, since the Department of State had been so kind as to indicate to you that the American naval action would be limited to guaranteeing foreign life and property, and to safeguarding the American Legation and Consulates in that country, a statement which we received with the greatest satisfaction, especially inasmuch as it was confirmed by Minister Weitzel to our Minister in Managua. The undeniable consequences which the continuation of this inefficacious contest in the form and character which it presents today will bring upon Central America must be evident to the lofty intelligence of the President; and you will make one more endeavor in the proposed sense, interesting actively the humanitarian sentiments of the Chief Executive of that Government. I see with pain that the agreements contracted in Washington by the Central American delegates, merely under the good offices and generous hospitality which ex-President Roosevelt tendered them, are apparently being invoked in favor of the attitude recently assumed. Salvador, being one of the contracting parties, deems it its undeniable duty—a duty which becomes a right when it is a question of interpreting agreements which vitally affect it—to declare to President Taft in the most frank and respectful form that the good offices which the United States and Mexico afforded to the Central American plenipotentiaries are always remembered with gratefulness, but that they should be limited to that which they in good faith signify. The firm relations of cordial friendship which unite Salvador to the American Government authorize me to exercise this right in the most courteous form and with the best intentions.

MANUEL E. ARAUJO."

File No. 817.00/2033.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 26, 1912, 6 p. m.

In a communication sent by him to this Government the President of Salvador erroneously assumes that our forces are making war in Nicaragua and suggests the cooperation of Salvador and this Government, by their good offices, in causing Don Salvador Calderón to be given provisional charge of the Nicaraguan administration pending the reestablishment of constitutional order. The President of Salvador highly praises Calderón as a friend of Díaz who he says has indicated that this plan would be acceptable. He offers also to influence the revolutionary leaders to this end. He rather criticises our military activity as not limited to safeguarding the Legation and American interests and intimates that our policy exceeds what is proper under our relation to the Washington Conventions.

In my reply I propose to say to the Minister of Salvador that this somewhat singular communication was evidently written several days ago because it is based to a great extent upon misstatements of facts; that recent news from Nicaragua must have made the true situation clear; and that accordingly I should hesitate to submit the communication to the President without being assured that the President of Salvador would still regard it as opportune. I shall also say that the President's message sent the President of Salvador (with the Department's September 4, 6 p. m. to the Legation at San Salvador) still accurately represents the views of the President and would seem to make quite clear the attitude of this Government upon the points now raised. I shall also say that the Government of the United States sees no reason whatever why the present lawful Government of Nicaragua should consider the question of giving place to any provisional government.

Wilson.

File No. 817.00/2039.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

Navy Department,
Washington, September 28, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to invite attention to the telegram from the American Minister at Managua, dated 11 p. m., September 26th, transmitting a message for the Secretary of the Navy from the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, dated September 26th, 9 p. m., and particularly to the following portion thereof:

> Please request Governor of Canal Zone to permit his [Mena's] landing. I suggest that he be kept under surveillance, and that neither he nor his son be allowed to go to any Central American state hereafter. He is sick and unable to walk, may have to be sent to the Ancon hospital.

This request and suggestion of Rear Admiral Southerland are submitted to the Department of State for its consideration and such action as may be deemed appropriate, attention being invited, in this connection, to the fact that the statements contained in this cablegram indicate that it is possible that the Cleveland may reach Panama as early as the afternoon of Sunday, September 29th.

Respectfully yours,

PHILIP ANDREWS.

File No. 817.00/2191.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 74.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, September 29, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform the Department of the incidents leading up to the relief of the Americans and others foreigners in Granada who have been cut off from outside communication since July 29 last.

The only information as to conditions in the town was received from occasional refugees who have been able to escape the strict surveillance maintained by the forces under Mena, and from messengers with secret despatches sewed into their clothing. At first there was a tendency to consider the condition of the people as merely one of the incidents of warfare which however unfortunate must be borne with the best grace possible, but soon reports of outrages against person and property began to reach the outside, and of crimes which not even warfare could justify. Whatever doubts I may have had as to the danger to the lives of foreigners, equally with natives, were dissipated by my own observations in Managua during the bombardment when I became aware that the hotel where foreigners were known to be congregated was deliberately fired on, and even the Legation itself imperiled. A week later the two Americans, Harvey Dodd and Philip Craven, with Durón in León, were killed under circumstances of great brutality. Two British subjects were assassinated at Achuapa, a German was stabbed to death at San Ramón, and both the Amerian and British Consular officers at Matagalpa reported that every foreigner in that district would be in danger of his life if the Zelayistas came into control of affairs.

As soon as I received word from the Department of the despatch of reenforcements to Nicaragua I informed the Foreign office that additional vessels were coming, among them the U. S. S. California, flagship of Rear Admiral W. H. H. Southerland, U. S. N., with a regiment of Marines from Philadelphia, Colonel J. H. Pendleton, U. S. M. C., commanding, and I had hopes that the publicity given to this information would make it unnecessary to disembark any more troops. However, as communication with Corinto had been cut off for several weeks I was not then aware of the serious situation which had developed in that port and which was so fortunately relieved by the timely arrival of the reenforcements of the Denver and California. The Consul, James W. Johnson, displayed good judgment and commendable initiative under most trying circumstances, and Lieutenant Lewis after providing for the safety of the American women on board the Annapolis landed a squad of bluejackets to police the town at the request of the Comandante of the port. My first information of these happenings was received from Major Butler who returned to Managua on September 1 after rebuilding and repairing bridges and rails destroyed by the lawless element. Colonel Pendleton arrived at the capital on September 6, and was able with the marines and bluejackets stationed along the tracks to run an occasional train between Managua and Corinto, but as the telegraph and telephone wires were not restored there was no communication between the Admiral and the Legation, and we were consequently unable to confer together as to the measures to be taken. The manager of the railroad company complained to me that he was having considerable difficulty in operating his trains, so I wrote to the Admiral at the same time transmitting a copy of the Department's declaration of policy in Nicaragua, as set forth in its telegram to me of September 4, 7 p. m.

The members of the foreign colony in this city, including the German consular representative, C. Uebersezig, and the former Ecuadoran consul, Joaquin Arciniegas, addressed to me on September 13 a memorial appealing to the humane sentiments of the Legation for assistance in affording relief to their young daughters said to be suffering from want of provisions in the French boarding school at Granada. As the Nicaraguan Government army under General Macís had in the meanwhile on September 7 captured Santa Catarina thereby cutting off all communication between Masaya and Granada it was reasonably certain that both these towns would be eventually taken by the Government and that any pretense of resistance would mean only unnecessary suffering to the innocent, including the foreigners, women and children. Mena himself had already gone aboard the steamer Victoria ready to escape across the lake into Costa Rica. I therefore telegraphed to Admiral Southerland requesting that he order the immediate despatch of a train from Managua to Granada for the urgent relief of the Americans and other noncombatants, and to his letter of September 13 I sent a telegram cordially inviting him to come to the Legation and to be my guest during his stay in the capital. He very kindly accepted and arrived here on September 17 with his staff consisting of Lieutenant Charles G. Davy, Lieutenant Robert L. Ghormley, and Lieutenant-Commander Samuel I. M. Major.

A battalion of 350 marines under Major Butler, and 100 bluejackets of the Annapolis under Lieutenant Campbell, had already started on the 15th to open the railroad through the Barranca and Masaya to Granada so as to distribute the American Red Cross supplies and afford relief. They were accompanied by Mr. I. O'Reardon, an American, whose wife and family have been living in Granada for some time. He is a mining engineer and manager of the Libertad mine, knows the language and topography of the country, and was of great assistance to our forces. At Nindiri the train, flying the United States colors and a white flag, was fired upon from the Barranca by three-inch guns, and was forced to retire several hundred yards. Butler then entered into communication with Zeledon, and after Colonel Pendleton and Admiral Southerland had been consulted, and they had served a peremptory demand on Zeledón, the train was allowed to proceed. That same night the Nicaraguan Government outposts captured a courier with important despatches from Zeledon to Mena indicating that the United States forces had been permitted to pass the Barranca to be later ambushed. However, the plan failed and although a seeming attempt was made to assassinate Major Butler the ambushers were driven off by the heavy fire of the marines.

During this time Mena was making desperate attempts to break the cordon and change his base from Granada to Rivas so as to keep open a safe retreat into Costa Rica, and was bombarding the towns on the lake. His troops, however, were again decisively defeated by General Macís and forced back on Granada.

Major Butler continued to move carefully towards the latter after repairing the roadbed, and entered the outskirts early in the morning of the 22nd. He at once communicated with Mena and informed the rebel leader of his intention to establish his forces at the railroad station to protect the American company's property and to be easily available in case of further outrages against the foreigners. The clerk of the Legation then commenced to distribute the American Red Cross supplies to the school children, the sick in the hospitals and other needy persons.

During the day about 400 Liberals who had been marching for two weeks from León secretly entered Granada and were immediately supplied with rifles by Mena. At night they began to shoot up the town and terrorize the people, and when information was brought to Major Butler of indignities against American families, he decided to prevent further disorders by disarming the troublemakers. Mena who was confined to his bed in the San Francisco fortress with inflammatory rheumatism, sent for the commanding officer of the marines and said he wished to turn over everything to the Americans. Butler consented to accept his surrender subject to the approval of Admiral Southerland who was then on his way to Granada where he arrived the night of the 24th instant and after considering the situation acceded to Mena's offer. He at once notified the Legation that he had made an arrangement to parole all the troops and to take Mena under his protection out of Nicaragua to Panama never to return to this country. I addressed a note in this sense to President Díaz who promptly signified his assent to the arrangement. When Admiral Southerland had been informed by me of this fact he quietly made preparations to move General Mena and his son, Colonel Daniel Mena, by train from Granada to Corinto where the prisoners were put on board the U. S. S. Cleveland on September 26 and shipped to the Canal Zone of Panama.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00/2028.

The Acting Chief of Staff of the War Department to the Adjutant General.

[Telegram forwarded by the War Department to Colonel Goethals September 30, 1912; copy sent to the Department of State on the same date.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, September 30, 1912.

The Secretary of War directs that the Governor of the Panama Canal Zone be informed in substance as follows:

General Luis Mena, recent revolutionary leader in Nicaragua, has surrendered to Rear Admiral Southerland and will arrive at Panama from Corinto on the U. S. S. Cleveland on October 1st, accompanied by his son and body servant. Rear-Admiral Southerland recommends: "Please request Governor of Canal Zone to permit his landing. I suggest that he be kept under surveillance, and that neither he nor his son be allowed to go to any Central American state hereafter. He is sick and unable to walk, may have to be sent to Ancon hospital."

The Secretary of State considers it important that General Mena and his son understand that the Government of the United States expects them to remain upon Canal Zone territory for the present.

The Secretary of War directs that you take appropriate action to carry out the wishes of the Secretary of State in connection with the Legation of Panama, which has been directed to cooperate with you.

W. W. WOTHERSPOON.

File No. 817.00/2046.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, October 1, 1912—9 a. m.

Your September 26, 6 p. m. I believe that any other course than the one therein proposed would result only in further disorder, which would probably spread to other Central American States.

No objection has ever been made to the validity of President Díaz's succession to office, and the acts complained of during his administration were Mena's acts as the real ruler of Nicaragua.

The President of Salvador is misinformed as to the conduct of the United States forces in Nicaragua, and if he says that the selection of Calderón as provisional president is acceptable to Díaz; he misstates the facts.

That Araujo is intriguing to name the next President of Nicaragua seems to me certain; his idea is doubtless a Central American union under the auspices of Salvador. His pretensions, I am sure, are not supported by any of the other countries.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00/2039.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 1, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 28th ultimo inviting attention to the request and suggestion of Rear Admiral Southerland, contained in his telegram to you dated September 26, 9 p. m., that the recent revolutionary leader in Nicaragua, General Luis Mena, who, upon his surrender to Rear Admiral Southerland, was sent to Panama on the U. S. S. Cleveland, be kept under surveillance and that neither he nor his son be allowed to proceed to any Central American state.

In reply I have the honor to inform you that at the request of this Department the War Department has directed the authorities of the Canal Zone, with whom the American Legation at Panama will fully cooperate, clearly to explain to General Mena and his son that this Government expects them to remain at present upon Canal Zone territory.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 817.00/2083.

The American Chargé d'Affaires at Panama to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

No. 223.]

AMERICAN LEGATION.
Panama, October 2, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that General Mena, the Nicaraguan general, duly arrived per United States ship Cleveland, on October 1st. and was entered that afternoon at Ancon Hospital. His son and servant are remaining for some days in quarantine.

I am informed by Captain Barber. Chief of the Canal Zone Police, that General Mena's condition is such that he will be for some time unable to leave the ward. Captain Barber has practically decided, however, to keep him under surveillance so soon as he is able to move about.

While the Legation has not received any definite information as to his status, I learn that the Canal Zone authorities consider him as a quasi prisoner of war. Indeed there will be no other way to restrict his movements.

I have [etc.].

WM. WHITING ANDREWS.

File No. 817.00/2046.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 4, 1912.

Repeat to the Legation in Salvador Department's September 26, 6 p. m. and your October 1, 9 a. m.

WILSON.

File No. 817.00/2064.

The Minister of Nicaragua to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF NICARAGUA,
Washington, October 5, 1912.

SIR: My Government has charged me with the honorable but deplorable duty of presenting to your excellency its most lively sympathy on the occasion of the killing of four and the wounding of six American marines, in the fulfillment of the task which the Government of your excellency imposed upon them, in Nicaragua, yesterday.

The debt of gratitude which my country has contracted toward your Government and the American people is of those that can never be adequately discharged.

The Government of Nicaragua has ordered all the funeral honors possible at this time for the American victims; and prays the Eternal that that may be the last generous blood which may be shed on American soil, and that from it may germinate throughout the Continent the welfare and the peace and the holy ideals which have formed that great nation.

I beg your excellency to make known the expressions and demonstrations of profound sympathy, condolence and gratefulness of my Government to His Excellency the President.

I beg [etc.]

SALVADOR CASTRILLO.

File No. 817.00/2064.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Minister of Nicaragua.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 8, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 5th instant by which you convey in courteous and grateful terms, and by direction of your Government, the expression of its sympathy on account of the killing of four and the wounding of six marines of the United States in the discharge of their duty in Nicaragua, and inform me of the honors that your Government has directed on the occasion of the funeral of the men killed.

I beg you, Mr. Minister, to be so good as to inform your Government of this Government's high appreciation of the friendly and sincere sentiments of your note.

While lamenting the circumstances of the death of these brave men, it is the hope and expectation of the Government of the United States that they will not have died in vain, but that from the sacrifice the people of Nicaragua will become united in striving only for that which is for the best good of the country and for the general happiness of the people.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 817.00/2198.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
No. 77.] Managua, October 18, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of correspondence[1] relative to conditions at Masaya, Jinotepe and León before those places were finally entered by the United States forces.

The Consul of the Netherlands sent to me on October 1 a note requesting that if possible measures be taken by the American marines for the protection of the many Dutch families living in Masaya, and the next day a committee of twelve men and women refugees, representing German, Italian, British, Dutch and Nicaraguan residents of that town, visited the Legation to solicit relief from the conditions of terror and starvation ruthlessly inflicted on them by the rebel leaders.

---

[1] Not printed.

As already fully reported by Rear Admiral Southerland, the two hills of Coyotepe and Barranca which controlled the railroad were taken by the marines and bluejackets early in the morning of the 4th instant, Zeledón having refused to evacuate, and soon thereafter the town of Masaya was captured by the Nicaraguan Government forces. At the request of President Díaz a company of marines was sent into the city under command of Captain E. A. Green, U. S. M .C., to prevent further reprisals against the rebels by the federal troops, which were then withdrawn, leaving the Americans to do the police work and afford relief to the sufferers both in Masaya and along the branch line of railroad extending south to Jinotepe and Diriamba.

Meanwhile, conditions in León and Chinandega had grown intolerable, and many appeals of which a few are enclosed, were filed with the Legation for the relief of foreigners and natives in those towns. The British, German and Spanish Consuls wrote to me requesting protection for their nationals.

On October 5 a committee of three prominent Liberals, Dr. Paniagua Prado, Modesto Barrios and Sebastian Salinas, visited President Díaz and offered on behalf of the insurrectionists to surrender their forces and lay down their arms if given amnesty. A similar proposal was made to Lieutenant Colonel Long, U. S. M. C., in command of the American forces at León, by Dr. Rodolfo Espinosa, Julian Irias and the other emigrados from Costa Rica. Both offers were accepted, but the emigrados, either because of treachery or fear, fled from the city towards the northern boundary and were afterwards captured by the Honduran Government patrol.

As Colonel Long was entering the city of León October 6 to take control according to the arrangement previously made, his men were fired on and three of them killed. A rather sharp engagement followed, the details of which together with other military matters have already been reported by Admiral Southerland.

Within four days after the taking of León all organized opposition to the Nicaraguan Government had ceased, and after the fugitives, under General J. R. Osorio, who were endeavoring to escape into Honduras, were overtaken and captured, measures were at once adopted to pay off and discharge about 6,000 troops who were then transported to their homes in the interior where they are needed to help gather the coffee and other crops, which promise to be unusually large this year in Nicaragua.

I have [etc.]

George T. Weitzel.

File No. 817.00/2108.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

Navy Department,
Washington, October 19, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the information of the Department of State, a copy of a cablegram dated October 17th, 1912, received from the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, U. S. S. Annapolis, at Corinto, relating to the Nicaraguan revolution.

Respectfully yours,

BEEKMAN WINTHROP.

[Inclosure.]

The Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, to the Secretary of the Navy.

U. S. S. Annapolis,
Corinto, October 17, 1912.

Replying to your telegram of October 16th, 11:00 a. m., Cleveland will leave October 25th; Denver will be ready for sea October 26th.

The disturbance of the peace in Nicaragua has now ceased and public feeling is quieting down. With the exception of small guards on the passenger trains, will have railway company take [charge ?] completely October 21st. Will then consider it advisable to withdraw bluejackets gradually, completing withdrawal by November 15th. Will be able to withdraw a battalion [of] marines November 15th, and second battalion on or before December 1st. For the preservation of the peace indefinitely, a battalion of marines should remain, 250 at León [and] 150 at Managua [and should] keep at least one vessel in port [at] Corinto, [which vessel] must be small.

Commander Blamer sent small party [of] mounted bluejackets under the charge of Lieutenant M. S. Davis from San Juan del Sur over old Vanderbilt transit road to Virgin Bay, Lake Nicaragua, through rich agricultural district. The party above-mentioned [was] heartily welcomed by the natives, who expressed their strong desire for permanent peace, in order to cultivate [their] farms.

SOUTHERLAND.

File No. 817.00/2116.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, October 22, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the information of the Department of State, a copy of a cablegram, dated October 20th, 1912, received from the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, at Corinto, stating that, except the landing forces of Cleveland and Denver, the force now in Nicaragua will be retained on shore until the election of November 3rd, 1912.

Respectfully yours,

BEEKMAN WINTHROP.

[Inclosure.]

The Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, to the Secretary of the Navy.

U. S. S. Annapolis,
Corinto, October 20, 1912.

Except the landing force of Cleveland [and] Denver, will retain force on shore until election of November 3, 1912; I do not anticipate any trouble, but consider it wise to be prepared.

SOUTHERLAND.

File No. 817.00/2121.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, October 24, 1912.

Your telegraphic request of October 21 [1] for a report on the activities of the Mena insurrectionists.

Granada has a population of about 25,000. It claims to represent the intelligence, wealth and purest Spanish blood of Nicaragua. Its principal building is the church of San Francisco, of great size, thick walls and commanding position. Because of these qualities General Mena converted it into a combined storehouse, prison and fortress, and placed his son Daniel in command.

On July 29th Mena attempted his coup d'état. Within an hour Daniel Mena began to arrest prominent citizens in order to extort money. These prisoners were bound and locked together in a small filthy cell without toilet conveniences. For three days they were without water or food. When almost spent, food and drink was sold to them at 1000 pesos per plate. Martin Bernard, was taken to the police station, stripped, forced to walk naked to the church prison, and locked up; he was suffering intensely from kidney disease and soon went into hysterics. Another wealthy prisoner became temporarily insane.

On July 30, Daniel began sending troops with wagons to seize stocks of goods, and presently the soldiers took to looting on their own account. These acts continued almost two months and when Major Butler took possession of the church he found inside about 200 cattle and horses, and a large stock of silks, laces and other goods of little or no military use.

Women and children hid themselves; when captured, these wives and daughters of well-to-do citizens were forced to pay contributions. The young girls in the French school were kept in constant terror by squad after squad of soldiers. The Directress, Mlle. Eugénie Angevin, told me that the girls' dormitory was entered by troops who, under pretext of looking for Government [illegible] disguised as women, compelled the occupants of the beds to prove their sex.

The sufferings of the poor were even worse, on account of the system of reconcentration begun within a week after the outbreak, whereby the people were compelled to remain in the town. Farmers who ventured to bring their products to the market were so constantly robbed by the soldiers that they ceased to come at all, and the poor reconcentrados walked by hundreds from door to door begging for something to eat. The young children in particular suffered from lack of nourishment, death resulting in a few cases. On the day of the arrival of the marines a woman with five young children was planning to take them in a boat on the lake to drown them all in preference to the lingering death of starvation. This condition continued more than six weeks.

But this was not the only method of oppression of the common people. Mena's troops revived the Zelaya system known in Nicaragua as "palos y grillos," or flogging and chaining. There was also frequent shooting, and the cannon planted on top of the church were fired at night when no military purpose could be served other than to increase the terror of the populace, just as Managua was bombarded with a like barbarous intent.

---

[1] Not printed.

Mena was appealed to for permission for the women and children to leave town, and although this would have lightened the food problem for his soldiers and would have bettered his military position, he refused. He next issued an order that in case Granada should be attacked, the women and children of Government sympathy should be banked around his fortress.

If the motives of the rebels had been political, instead of criminal, American and other foreigners would not have been attacked. An Italian, Antonio Cassinelli, makes affidavit that his house was broken into and robbed on September 11, by a squad of Mena soldiers who committed all manner of abuses, entering his wife's room and jeopardizing her life and that of her new-born babe; that he complained to Mena thereof and two days later at midnight a mounted guard came to his place, cut down the flag and fired at the house. Two other Italians, Folletti and Bagontano, complain of the looting of their store. A Colombian, Pedro Arceyuy, deposes that he was robbed of thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise on August 9. G. A. Argüello states that he was imprisoned in August and again in September and held for a ransom of 50,000 pesos; that his store was robbed on five occasions; and that certain barbarities of an unmentionable nature were committed. An American citizen, Emil Downing, states that he was arrested and imprisoned on three occasions, although he showed his citizenship papers, and was held on a demand for 5,000 pesos, being finally released by Major Butler; his house, over which Mrs. Downing had displayed the American flag, was twice entered with violence, once at night when the family were in bed; her eldest son was arrested and imprisoned. An American citizen, Mrs. Inez Ètienne, widow, with daughter and niece and several children, states that her house was entered and robbed at night by soldiers, and such perishable food as they could not use was destroyed. There being no men in the house, the daughter went for relief to Mena's headquarters, where she was jeered by the soldiers; on another occasion one of the officers made an insulting proposal that she see Daniel Mena. On September 24 the mother was held up on the streets and robbed by soldiers.

Major Butler entered the city and, without firing a shot, disarmed the troops and restored order. Red Cross provisions were distributed to the hospitals, schools and poor people. This work was begun immediately by the Legation clerk, who reports pitiful and heartrending sights. Three thousand additional rations were issued by Major Butler; the American colony in Managua gave a carload of supplies; and the enlisted men of the Marine Corps shared their own meals with the poor who crowded their camp. Eight thousand were fed. The prompt action of Major Butler in disarming the troops saved the city from an even greater terror, for 400 hungry and desperate soldiers, just arrived after a ten days' march, had threatened to pillage and burn the town. The meaning of such a threat may best be realized from the indescribable horror and bloodshed accompanying the destruction of Masaya a few days later.[1]

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00/2134.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, October 30, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the information of the Department of State, a copy of a report, dated October 18th, 1912, received from the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, at Corinto, concerning operations in Nicaragua.

Respectfully yours,

PHILIP ANDREWS.

[Inclosure 1.]

The Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, to the Secretary of the Navy.

U. S. S. Annapolis,
Corinto, October 18, 1912.

The conditions in Western Nicaragua have steadily improved since the date of my last report and, due to the excellent results of our practical occupation of the late rebel towns from León to Chinandega both inclusive, the intensely bitter feeling existing between the two national parties is gradually quieting down and in addition, a desire for permanent peaceful conditions is steadily growing amongst the better classes.

The greater part of the Government army has been disbanded. This fact, with my order that no Government troops should be permitted to come within two miles of any of the towns referred to, and the knowledge that no reprisals of any kind would be permitted in any town occupied by our bluejackets and marines, has convinced the inhabitants that we are here, not to seize their country, but simply in the cause of humanity and to restore law and order. This belief has possibly been accentuated by the fact that I have extended the Department's order to protect Americans and other foreigners and their property to include all reputable Nicaraguans living in the towns above referred to, this action being necessary and wise under the existing circumstances.

All of the Government officials have been installed at León and the wheels of Government are now beginning to run smoothly, these officials all cooperating in the heartiest manner with Lieutenant Colonel Long to restore law and order and regain the confidence of the inhabitants. Stores and private houses have been opened and the city has nearly resumed its normal condition and appearance. Through the cooperation of some of the officials and prominent residents, Lieutenant Colonel Long has been able to obtain quite a number of rifles and dynamite bombs, and also a considerable quantity of Government tobacco which had been previously seized by the late rebels.

In Chinandega and the intermediate towns a similar improvement has taken place. In the first named town P. A. Surgeon C. B. Munger, U. S. Navy, has been made sanitary officer and the improved sanitary conditions resulting from his work are very noticeable. The same is also the case in Corinto where Assistant Surgeon C. M. George, U. S. Navy, has been acting as sanitary officer for some time.

On October 16th, Commander D. W. Blamer of the Cleveland, stationed at San Juan del Sur, sent a small party of mounted bluejackets under command of Lieutenant M. S. Davis, U. S. Navy, across country to Virgin Bay on Lake Nicaragua, over the old Vanderbilt transit road which was used by the California gold seekers in the early fifties, and which has been but little used of late years. This being the rainy season the road was very bad, mud in places being three feet deep. The distance is about ten miles but it took fourteen hours for the round trip. The road passes through a rich agricultural country the inhabitants of which welcomed and entertained the party and made it clear that they were tired of revolutions and wanted to work their farms and enjoy the blessings of peace. An intelligence report will be forwarded later.

---

[1] For additional narratives pertaining to this subject (certified statements and affidavits) see File No. 817.48/22.

The conditions now being favorable I have informed the manager of the Corinto-Granada railroad that, if he does not need our assistance hereafter, I will direct the removal of all of our people now connected with the railroad except a small armed guard for each passenger train.

The guard of one company of marines now stationed at Granada will be reduced one half, and that of one section of marines now stationed at Masaya will be removed entirely, within one month.

The landing parties of the Cleveland and Denver will be withdrawn within one week, while those of the California, Colorado and Annapolis will be withdrawn, a few at a time, in such a manner as to have them all on board ship by or before November 15th, those at Corinto and San Juan del Sur remaining until the last.

The third battalion of marines will then have headquarters at Managua, one section of a company of which will be temporarily stationed at Granada. The first and second battalions of marines will have headquarters at León, one section of a company being temporarily stationed at Chinandega and two squads each at Chichigalpa, Posoltega and Quezalguaque.

From the best information obtainable it appears that the return fire of the third battalion of marines and the California and Annapolis bluejackets when Major Butler's train was attacked in passing through Masaya on the night of September 19th and four marines were wounded, resulted in the killing of fifty-six rebels and the wounding of seventy others, of whom twelve died in the hospital later. It also appears that the rebels attack was premeditated, and thus an act of treachery on the part of General Zeledón.

The Department, of course, understands that I now have eyes and ears in each of the important towns in Western Nicaragua except Matagalpa; these eyes and ears being of Navy and Marine officers who know how to mix with and make themselves agreeable to people of all classes. In a few days I expect to have a set of bright, intelligent Navy and Marine officers in Matagalpa to observe and report upon the actual conditions in and about that town.

The accompanying letter, with translation, sent to me by the ladies of the city of Granada, may prove of interest to the Department. An appropriate response has been made.

W. H. H. SOUTHERLAND.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

Ladies of Granada to Admiral W. H. H. Southerland.

GRANADA, October 11, 1912.

HONORABLE SIR: Daughters of this beloved soil which God has endowed with a prodigality of beauty and natural riches, we should feel happy and contented if we had the tranquility indispensible for the development and well-being of the family; but, unfortunately, civil conflicts have resulted in weakening the ties which in every civilized country are considered sacred and which maintain the stability of all well organized society, which cannot exist without due respect for life and property.

These conflicts have been each day more stubborn and bloody, the bitterness each day greater, and the loss each time more irreparable, bringing about a division so deep in the Nicaraguan family that the most perverse elements predominated in this city and it fell to our lot to live in a state of horror and fright in which the mother, the daughter, the wife, and the sister saw themselves each moment threatened with the loss of all they held most dear, of their subsistence, of the most necessary things even for the life of the children, with the loss of their own honor.

It is for this, seeing the prolongation of the recent conflict which was growing fiercer each day, that we celebrated with enthusiasm your arrival on the shores of Nicaragua as an omen that soon our ills would cease. Our hopes were fulfilled, inasmuch as you have given with wonderful rapidity the peace and tranquility that we so longed for.

On account of the shortness of your stay in this city, we were not able to express to you personally our gratitude and profound esteem, so we send you a bouquet of flowers from our gardens, which in their perfume carry for you and your great and generous country the tenderest feelings of the women of Granada.

The judgment and prudence with which your worthy subordinate officer, Major S. D. Butler, U. S. M. C., has executed his mission in this city gives credit to the high efficiency of the officers and the morale and discipline of the American forces.

Already we have enjoyed for these few days real peace and tranquility with the stay of the American forces in our midst. It is for us to express the desire that our elder sister, the great Republic of the United States, so wise, so powerful, will bring to us permanently the benefits which all her sons enjoy throughout all her vast and peaceful domain.

With assurances [etc.]

Mercedes de Chamorro, and others.

File No. 817.00/2199.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 78.

American Legation,
Managua, November 5, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inform the Department of the result of the elections held in Nicaragua on November 2, 1912.

As soon as the Government felt sure that the insurrection had been finally put down it began to pay off and muster out the troops with the view of bringing about normal conditions as quickly as possible. The business and farming interests then began to use pressure to have the question of elections disposed of at once in order thereby to remove one of the principal causes of agitation and unrest. As President Díaz was of the same opinion he decided to issue the necessary decree, but the leaders of his administration began to urge on him the advisability of having the presidential elections by indirect vote through the National Assembly. As the Dawson agreements provide for elections by popular, direct and public vote, in accordance with the Nicaraguan Constitution, it seemed to me appropriate to call attention to the fact by an informal note to President Díaz. He replied in the same friendly spirit and issued the necessary decree containing the electoral law and fixing the date for November 2.

A meeting of the Conservatives was called to discuss candidates. The most extreme element of the party, known as the "cachos", desired to nominate General Emiliano Chamorro, but the majority seemed to prefer Díaz or some other civilian. Díaz himself had little inclination to continue in office, and for a while matters almost reached a deadlock. Señor Manuel Lacayo of Granada was then proposed by the "cachos", and Dr. Salvador Calderón of Segovia by the Moderates, each of them receiving two votes of the four signers of the agreements, but finally Don Adolfo Díaz, of Bluefields and Managua, was chosen by the leaders and promised unanimous support at the polls by the party.

Even greater difficulty was experienced in nominating a candidate for the Vice Presidency, the "cachos" again insisting on General

Chamorro for the second place. Although probably the most popular leader with the militant faction of his party, he is for that very reason bitterly hated and feared by the Liberals, some of whom announced that if he were named on the ticket they would put up an opposition candidate for second place and endorse Díaz for first. Under these circumstances Chamorro himself and a great many of his friends requested the Legation to use its influence in his behalf, but I refused and furthermore I explained that while appreciating the important serviceshe has rendered his country I believed he could show even greater patriotism by declining to be a candidate for the vice presidency and thereby removing even the appearance of militarism in the new administration. In the end Don Fernando Solórzano, a merchant of Managua and close friend of Chamorro, was agreed upon. The General seemed satisfied and issued a manifesto urging all his followers to vote at the polls for Díaz and Solórzano.

The Liberals discussed the names of Dr. Francisco Baca, Manuel Carazo, José Dolores Mayorga and Dr. Rodolfo Espinosa, but when they saw that the Conservatives were united, they decided not to participate officially, either because unable to agree on candidates or else preferring to be in a position afterwards to continue the cry of fraud in the elections. Some of them however voted for Díaz in order to make sure the defeat of Chamorro who was suspected by them of working secretly for the presidency.

The elections passed off very quietly throughout the Republic and a large vote was cast notwithstanding heavy rains in all parts of the country. Díaz carried every district except Granada which went for Chamorro, and Solórzano received the undivided vote of his party.

The new President and Vice President will be inaugurated for the term of four years on January 1, 1913.

I have [etc.]

George T. Weitzel.

File No. 817.00/2159.

The American Consul at Bluefields to the Secretary of State.

No. 86.]

American Consulate,
Bluefields, Nicaragua, November 9, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to confirm the following telegram to the Department, which was sent on October 16th by wireless via Colón:

> I have to suggest that the Tacoma be withdrawn, as there is no danger of any trouble now, all being quiet here.

Thinking that the ship may be needed elsewhere, and as it appeared to me that all danger had passed, I sent the above telegram. The ship received instructions on October 19th to proceed to Tampico, Mexico.

I have [etc.],

Arthur J. Clare.

File No. 817.00/2138.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 64.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 13, 1912.

SIR: I enclose herewith for your information copies of two letters from the Acting Secretary of War and a copy of the Department's letter in reply thereto, regarding the detention of General Mena in the Canal Zone and his application for a writ of habeas corpus.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

[Inclosure 1.]

The Acting Secretary of War to the Secretary of State.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, November 4, 1912.

SIR: The Department is in receipt of a cablegram from the Chairman and Chief Engineer of the Isthmian Canal Commission, under date of 2d instant, of the following tenor:

> General Mêna has applied for writ of habeas corpus, Canal Zone courts, to be heard Wednesday. Counsel for Commission advises that court will probably grant the writ, and that, unless instructed to contrary, I will have to comply with the order of the court. Advise.

If you will kindly advise me of the views and wishes of your Department I shall be pleased to transmit them to the chairman for his information and guidance.

Very Respectfully,

ROBERT SHAW OLIVER.

[Inclosure 2.]

The Acting Secretary of War to the Secretary of State.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, November 5, 1912.

SIR: With reference to my letter of yesterday's date, regarding the application of General Mena for writ of habeas corpus, I now have the honor to transmit for your information the following cablegram which has this afternoon been sent to the chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission:

> Replying to your cablegram second instant, your law officer will of course do all he can to defeat the writ. Should the court order release he will give the order its proper effect, and should Mena remain on the Canal Zone report any action upon his part which would justify his being taken again into custody under the provisions of section fourteen of the Penal Code of the United States; should Mena leave the Canal Zone or Panama, report the fact and his destination.

Very respectfully,

ROBERT SHAW OLIVER.

[Inclosure 3.]

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 8, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your two letters dated November 4th and 5th, respectively, regarding the application of General Mena for a writ of habeas corpus, which was to be heard on the 6th instant in the Canal Zone Court.

I note the telegraphic instructions which you have sent to the chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission after a discussion between the Judge Advocate General and the Solicitor of this Department, and have the honor to express this Department's approval thereof.

After investigation the Department has become of the opinion that, although it would be desirable to have Mena remain in the Canal Zone or in Panama, his departure therefrom would no longer constitute a serious menace to the people of Nicaragua. The Department, however, is glad that you have instructed the authorities of the Canal Zone to report Mena's destination should he leave the Zone or Panama.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 817.00/2145.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs of Nicaragua to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Translation.]

CORINTO, November 14, 1912.

The courteous hospitality of Admiral Southerland on board California is highly appreciated. I have the honor to send to your excellency my grateful and cordial salutation in the name of my Government.

DIEGO M. CHAMORRO.

File No. 817.00/2146.

The President of Nicaragua to the President.

[Telegram.—Translation.]

CORINTO, November 14, 1912.

Having been honored by the courteous hospitality of Admiral Southerland on board the California, I take pleasure in sending you my most cordial greeting together with the expression of my high esteem for you and for your country.

PRESIDENT DÍAZ.

File No. 817.00/2145.

The Secretary of State to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Nicaragua.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 16, 1912.

Your cordial salutation received with thanks. Accept my sincere good wishes for the continued prosperity of Nicaragua.

(For the Secretary of State.)
A. A. ADEE.

File No. 817.00/2130.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 65.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 18, 1912.

SIR: The Department encloses for your information and comment copy of the Libro Rosado of Salvador for the month of September, 1912, which treats at length of the recent revolution in Nicaragua.

Your attention is invited to the telegram of Señor López G, the Salvadoran Minister to Nicaragua, dated Managua, August 5, 1912, and printed on page 2 of the Libro Rosado. The Department is considering the advisability of calling upon Salvador for an explanation of this telegram. You are already familiar with the Department's reply to Minister Mejía when he presented President Araujo's telegram of September 23, printed, without the reply, on page 13.

You are requested to report fully regarding Salvador's attitude, and that of the other Central American republics in the recent revolution.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

The Minister of Salvador to Nicaragua to the President of Salvador.

[From the Libro Rosado, p. 2.—Telegram.—Translation.]

MANAGUA, August 5, 1912.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have just had a long conversation with the American Minister in the course of which I secured his formal promise that he will not cause the disembarkation of any more men besides those guarding the Legation. He says he wishes to act in agreement with me in every respect, and he even suggested to me the propriety of my proposing some step to prevent the shedding of blood. He adds that whatever I propose he will support. Perhaps action jointly with the Governments of sister Republics would result satisfactorily. The marines will be reembarked when the danger is over.

Yours,

J. ANTONIO LÓPEZ G.

File No. 817.00/2200.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 79.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, November 25, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform the Department that Rear Admiral W. H. H. Southerland, U. S. N., Commander-in-Chief of the United States Pacific Fleet, sailed from Corinto, Nicaragua, on November 14, 1912, for San Diego, aboard his flag-ship the U. S. S. California, accompanied by the other vessels of the fleet.

At his request I sent an informal letter inviting President Díaz and the Cabinet to visit the California the day before sailing. This invitation was accepted, and very interesting ceremonies were observed, including full presidential honors to the chief guest. Speeches were made by the Admiral, the President and others, expressive of great friendliness and cordiality, and the whole affair passed off successfully without any untoward incident. An account of the visit was given in the Gaceta Oficial of November 13 and 14, copies of which have been sent to the Division of Information.

Colonel J. H. Pendleton, U. S. M. C., in command of the First Provisional regiment, and Major Smedley D. Butler, U. S. M. C., in command of the battalion of marines from the Canal Zone, left together on the 22nd instant for Panama, thus withdrawing all the United States forces from Nicaragua except one battalion at León under command of Lieutenant Colonel Charles G. Long, U. S. M. C., and one company at Managua under Captain Robert C. Underwood, U. S. M. C.

The deportment of all these forces during their stay in Nicaragua has been exemplary in every way and has been the subject of favorable comment from many different sources .

If it may be done without seeming invidious, the Legation desires to make special mention of the services rendered by Major Butler and his capable adjutant Lieutenant E. A. Catermann, and by Lieutenant Colonel Long, Lieutenant E. H. Conger and Corporal George Copeland, the two last mentioned of whom volunteered to carry Legation despatches under circumstances believed at the time to be extremely dangerous. Major Butler was the first commanding officer to arrive here, and by his energy, tact and determination succeeded in reestablishing order in Managua and Granada. Colonel Long accomplished the same difficult task in León, both of them demonstrating that a competent officer adds at least fifty per cent to the efficiency of his command for work such as has been recently done in this country.

The Legation availed of the opportunity to express its thanks in person to Admiral Southerland and Colonel Pendleton for the services rendered by them, their officers and men during the time they were engaged in protecting American life and property in Nicaragua.

I have [etc.]

George T. Weitzel.

File No. 817.00/2170a.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, December 9, 1912.

The Department feels it is unnecessary to hold Mena indefinitely, although the Canal Courts have decided his detention legal, unless there are reasons for believing him still dangerous to the future peace of Nicaragua. Report your views.

Knox.

File No. 817.00/2173.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Managua, December 11, 1912.

Mena is no longer dangerous to the peace of the country in the opinion of the Government.

Weitzel.

File No. 817.00/2171.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, December 13, 1912.

Commanding Officer Terhune of the U. S. S. Annapolis telegraphed the Navy Department on December 9 as follows:

> If Nicaraguan conditions remain as at present, I recommend withdrawal of the marines about January 15, temporarily retaining 50 marines at Managua, attached to the station-ship at Corinto, as a guard for the Legation. Long concurs.

The foregoing is sent for your comment.

Wilson.

File No. 817.00/2173.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, December 13, 1912.

While the Department has learned with interest of the decision of the Supreme Court of the Canal Zone in refusing a writ of habeas corpus applied for by General Luis Mena the Nicaraguan revolutionary leader, it is inclined to believe that Mena is no longer dangerous to the peace of Nicaragua. I therefore recommend that instructions be telegraphed to the Canal Zone authorities to permit Mena and his son to depart if they wish to do so.

I have [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 817.00/2175.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Managua, December 14, 1912.

The Department yesterday sent for my comment Commanding Officer Terhune's December 9 to the Navy Department.

A naval vessel should be kept at Corinto. At Managua there should be at least 100 marines to maintain order until proper protection can be given by the Government. Withdrawal of all marines would be construed as the tacit consent of the United States to renew hostilities.

Although the newly elected administration represents the great majority, the treasury is empty and the necessary protective measures cannot at once be taken. If by means of the moral support of the United States this country can be placed on a secure financial basis—which its resources justify—it would be easy to maintain order.

The Government has been authentically informed that both Guatemala and Salvador are increasing their military establishments, and it is believed that if the restraining influence of the United States were removed, Estrada Cabrera and Araujo would precipitate war involving the other Republics, enforcing the union of all the Central American States, and having for its object the presidency of such a union.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00.2166.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 70.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 18, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 68, of July 31, 1912, transmitting correspondence relating to the revolutionary attempt of General Luis Mena, of July 29, 1912.

Your action in obtaining an interview with General Mena in which you communicated to him President Díaz's offer of amnesty on condition that he resign as Minister of War, and in obtaining from General Mena and the General commanding the Government forces letters in which they agreed to carry out such an arrangement, which was afterward violated by Mena, is approved by the Department.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 817.00/2207.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN LEGATION.
No. 90.] Managua, December 21, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's instruction No. 65 of the 18th ultimo (File 817.00/2130) together with its enclosure of a copy of the Libro Rosado of Salvador for the month of September, 1912, which treats at length of the recent revolution in Nicaragua.

On page 2 of the Libro Rosado is printed a telegram, dated Managua, August 5, 1912, in which the Salvadorian Minister, Señor J. Antonio López G., reports to his Government a conversation with me and alleges that he obtained my "formal promise" not to disembark another man besides those who were then guarding the Legation.

Of course I made no such promise, formal or otherwise, and I would have considered it presumption on his part to have requested any.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.00/2178.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 71.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 24, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 71, of August 23, 1912, transmitting correspondence regarding the peace proposals of General Mena, the violation by the rebels of the armistice arranged by the Salvadoran Minister, and the protests of the Diplomatic Corps and the Consular officers in Managua against the bombardment of the city by Generals Mena and Zeledón.

Your action in endeavoring to assist in reaching a peaceful solution of the conflict between the Government and General Mena, and in taking the wise measures adopted by you for the defense of American and other interests after hostilities were resumed, is approved by the Department.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 817.00/2203.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 93.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, December 26, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform the Department that the National Assembly in its session of December 18 canvassed the vote cast at the polls on November 2, 1912, and thereupon officially declared Don Adolfo Díaz and Don Fernando Solórzano elected President and Vice President, respectively, for the four years beginning January 1, 1913.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS. LOAN CONVENTION BETWEEN NICARAGUA AND THE UNITED STATES SUBMITTED TO THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES AND RATIFIED BY NICARAGUA. LOANS TO NICARAGUA BY AMERICAN BANKERS. GOOD OFFICES OF THE UNITED STATES.

File No. 817.51/133.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, May 6, 1911.

The President of Nicaragua has to-day been authorized by the Assembly to negotiate with American bankers, through the good offices of the United States of America, a loan not exceeding $20,000,000

American gold. The Assembly also authorized the President to conclude, subject to ratification by the present Assembly, such treaties and contracts as may be necessary to secure the loan.

NORTHCOTT.

62d Congress, 1st Session. Senate Doc. (Executive Series B.)

Message from the President of the United States transmitting a Convention between the United States and Nicaragua concerning a loan which Nicaragua contemplates making with citizens of the United States.

[Read June 8, 1911; convention read the first time; message and convention referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in confidence for the use of the Senate.]

To the Senate:

In my message of January 26, 1911,[1] transmitting to the Senate the Honduran Loan Convention, I said:

> Besides the considerations of propriety, expediency and interest which make the present arrangement with Honduras alike desirable and mutually advantageous, its wisdom as an evolution in the direction of far-sighted international policy is to be borne in mind. Honduras is not alone in financial embarrassment. The continual disturbances of other Central American States put them also, although to a less degree, in the category of prospective borrowers. Within a year past Guatemala has sought the friendly counsel of the United States regarding the terms of a projected foreign loan, and it is announced, as part of the program of national recuperation put forth by the newly installed constitutional Government of Nicaragua, that the aid of the United States will be asked in effecting a readjustment of the debts of that Republic. It needs no profuse argument to show that the financial rehabilitation of the greater part of Central America will work potential good for the stability and peace of all and lead to that development of international resources and expansion of foreign commerce of which they are all capable and of which they all stand in need.

What was then expected with respect to Nicaragua has now become a fact. That Republic, after many years of governmental maladministration, interspersed with internal disturbances and followed by civil war, has at last established a government on a constitutional basis, which finds itself, unfortunately, with a depleted treasury and burdened with an accumulation of debts and claims, both domestic and foreign, which it is unable to meet without outside aid. It has accordingly indicated its desire for assistance on the part of the United States for the refunding of its debt and the placing of its finances and administration upon a sound and stable basis, with a view to meeting its foreign obligations and to securing the tranquillity, prosperity and progress of the country. Heartily sympathizing with the Government of Nicaragua in its wish to reconstruct the financial and economic situation in that Republic and to further the development of that country, I empowered the Secretary of State to negotiate and conclude with the authorized plenipotentiary of Nicaragua a convention concerning a loan which that country contemplates making with citizens of the United States to provide for the refunding of its debt and the placing of its finances upon a sound and stable basis. This convention, signed at Washington on June 6, [1] See Honduras, Financial Affairs, p. 555.

---

1911, I transmit herewith to the Senate and commend with all earnestness to its favorable consideration, to the end that the advice and consent to ratification required by the Constitution may be given.

The convention with Nicaragua now transmitted is similar in its provisions to that with Honduras already before the Senate, and the weighty considerations of national and international policy which I advanced as counseling the consummation of the convention with Honduras are equally pertinent and applicable to the convention with Nicaragua. I deem it of paramount importance that both conventions should be ratified as contributing to the peace of Central America, for the fostering of which, under the Washington conventions of 1907, a moral obligation at least rests upon the United States.

Not only this, but a further responsibility is thrown upon us by the Monroe doctrine. Much of the debt of Nicaragua is external and held in Europe; and, while it may not be claimed that by the Monroe doctrine we may be called upon to protect an American Republic from the payment of its just foreign claims, still complications might result from the attempted enforced collection of such claims, from the involutions of which this Government might not escape. Hence it should be the policy of this Government, especially with respect to countries in geographical proximity to the Canal Zone, to give to them when requested all proper assistance, within the scope of our limitations, in the promotion of peace, in the development of their resources, and in a sound reorganization of their fiscal systems, thus, by contributing to the removal of conditions of turbulence and instability, enabling them by better established governments to take their rightful places among the law-abiding and progressive countries of the world. Better by far is this beneficial and constructive policy in the neighborhood of the Caribbean Sea, the Panama Canal and the Central American Republics, based as it is on the logic of our geographical position, the development of our commerce in the immediate neighborhood of our shores, our moral responsibilities due to a long-standing policy in the region mentioned, as well as, respecting Central America, arising from our relations to the Washington conventions, than it is with listless indifference to view unconcernedly the whole region in fomentations of turbulence, irresponsibly contracting debts that by their own exertions they would never be able to discharge, or to be required, as in several instances in the past, to land our armed forces for the protection of American citizens and their interests from violence, and for the enforcement of the humane provisions of international law for the observance of which in the region concerned this Government, whether rightfully or wrongfully, is held responsible by the world.

This convention now laid before the Senate, like the loan convention with Honduras, was drawn and signed, and now stands binding upon the Governments of the United States and Nicaragua, when by them ratified, only in respect to a loan contract when one shall have been signed which shall be finally found satisfactory to both Governments and shall consequently be admitted under the protection of the convention.

It is my judgment the part of wisdom and of statesmanship to ratify both the convention with Nicaragua now submitted and that with Honduras transmitted to the Senate on January 26, 1911, and it is my earnest hope that I may early receive the advice and consent of the Senate to their ratification.

WM. H. TAFT.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, June 7, 1911.

Loan Convention between the United States and Nicaragua.[1]

The Republic of Nicaragua, being now established on a firm political and constitutional basis, after eleven months of civil war and after seventeen years of administrative abuses resulting in the illegal diversion of public property and revenue, the accumulation of debts and claims in the hands of both natives and foreigners, and the existence of ruinous and disputed concessions in many of which foreigners are beneficiaries, finds the financial and economic situation of the country in urgent need of radical reconstruction;

And believing that this needed reconstruction on account of the circumstances above set forth will be difficult and complicated, especially as it involves the necessity of obtaining a loan adequate in amount yet on terms commensurate with the national resources—

The Republic of Nicaragua has indicated its desire for cooperation on the part of the United States for the refunding of its debt and the placing of its finances and administration upon a sound and stable basis with a view to meeting its foreign obligations, and to securing the tranquillity, prosperity and progress of the country.

And the Government of the United States, animated by a desire to promote the peace and prosperous development of all the Central American countries, and appreciating the wish of Nicaragua to contribute to such development by establishing on a firm footing its own material strength;

And it being recognized as necessary, in view of the present conditions of Nicaraguan finances and resources, that, to afford efficient and legitimate security and to obtain the special benefits sought, the Governments concerned should assume a special relation thereto;

And the two Governments being convinced that some contract should be negotiated and concluded between the Government of Nicaragua and some competent and reliable American banking group, said contract to afford a beneficial, just and equitable accomplishment of the purposes in question, have, with these objects in view, named as their plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States of America, Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State of the United States; and

The President of Nicaragua, Dr. Salvador Castrillo, junior, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Republic of Nicaragua near the Government of the United States;

Who, having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following:

ARTICLE I.

The Government of Nicaragua undertakes to make and negotiate a contract providing for the refunding of its present internal and external debt and the adjustment and settlement of claims, liquidated and unliquidated; for the placing of its finances upon a sound and stable basis; and for the future development of the natural and economic resources of that country. The Governments of the United States and Nicaragua will take due note of all the provisions of the said contract when made, and will consult, in case of any difficulties, with a view to the faithful execution of the provisions of said contract, in order that all the benefits to Nicaragua and the security of the loan may at the same time be assured.

---

[1] Ratified by the Assembly of Nicaragua June 15, 1911, and July 7, 1911. Made public August 5, 1911. Still pending in the Senate of the United States.

Article II.

The loan which shall be made by the Government of Nicaragua pursuant to the above undertaking shall be secured upon the customs of Nicaragua, and the Government of Nicaragua agrees not to alter the import or export customs duties, or other charges affecting the entry, exit, or transit of goods, during the existence of the loan under the said contract, without consultation and agreement with the Government of the United States.

Article III.

A full and detailed statement of the operations under this contract shall be submitted by the Fiscal Agent of the loan to the Department of State of the United States and to the Minister of Finance of Nicaragua at the expiration of each twelve months, and at such other times as may be requested by either of the two Governments.

Article IV.

The Government of Nicaragua, so long as the loan exists, will appoint from a list of names to be presented to it by the fiscal agent of the loan and approved by the President of the United States of America a collector general of customs, who need not be a Nicaraguan and who shall administer the customs in accordance with the contract securing said loan, and will give this official full protection in the exercise of his functions. The Government of the United States, should the circumstances require, will in turn afford such protection as it may find requisite.

Article V.

This Convention shall be ratified and the ratifications hereof shall be exchanged at Managua as soon as possible.

In faith whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present Convention in the English and Spanish languages and have hereunto affixed their seals.

Done in duplicate, at Washington, this sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and eleven.

(Seal) Philander C. Knox.
(Seal) Salvador Castrillo.

62d Congress, 1st Session. Senate Doc. (Executive Series C.)

Special Message from the President of the United States in relation to the Honduran and Nicaraguan Loan Conventions.

[Read June 29, 1911; referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in confidence for the use of the Senate.]

To the Senate:

The loan convention between the United States and Nicaragua, signed at Washington on June 6, 1911, and which I transmitted to the Senate on the following day with a view to obtaining that body's advice and consent to its ratification, was approved by the Nicaraguan Congress on June 14 with certain slight verbal changes so entirely consistent with the meaning of the convention as to make the acquiescence of this Government in such textual changes quite unobjectionable.

Upon the receipt very shortly of an authenticated copy of the amended text I shall ask the Senate to take favorable action upon this final form of the convention. Meanwhile, however, inasmuch as the substance and the principle of the convention are unchanged, and are indeed the same as in the convention between the United States and Honduras, submitted to the Senate January 26, 1911,[1] I take this opportunity again very earnestly to recommend that the Senate give to these two conventions its thorough deliberation in order that when I shall have laid before you the amended text of that with Nicaragua your final action may be taken at an early date.

It is doubtless unnecessary for me to reiterate my well-considered conviction that it is the duty of the United States to ratify these conventions. Among the reasons for this belief I may mention that these conventions are a practical measure of peace: that they are of vast commercial advantage, especially to the Southern States: that so far from involving entanglements, they will greatly reduce actual interference in Central American affairs: that they make American diplomacy and American capital helpful to neighboring republics to which our friendliness is peculiarly due; and that they lay the foundations for peace in the neighborhood of the Panama Canal, where constant turbulence is especially intolerable.

The ratification is urgent at the present session, because in the case of Nicaragua a loan can not be made; the Groce and Cannon indemnities can not be paid: the Emery claim can not be met; other claims and questions of monopolistic concessions can not be adjusted; railway improvements can not be undertaken; and, in short, Nicaraguan finances can not be removed from chaos to a condition where trade will prosper and where the Government revenues will not be the prey of revolution.

In the case of the Honduras convention, there are still other reasons for urgency. The Government of the United States can not expect the British Government indefinitely to delay proceeding to take its own measures for the settlement of the bonded debt due British subjects, and American bankers can not be expected indefinitely to hold options upon the foreign bonds.

---

[1] See Honduras, Financial Affairs, p. 555.

I deem it my duty again to emphasize my conviction that these conventions if examined in the broad aspects of the true policies involved will be found so responsive to the duty and to the interests of the United States as a whole that they will receive at the present session the approval of the Senate and the consequent ratification deemed by the Executive of really vital importance.

WM. H. TAFT.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, June 28, 1911.

62d Congress, 1st Session. Senate Doc. (Executive Series E.)

Special Message from the President of the United States, suggesting certain amendments to the convention between the United States and Nicaragua (Executive B, 62d Cong., 1st sess.), concerning a loan which Nicaragua contemplates making with citizens of the United States.

[Read July 17, 1911: referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in confidence for the use of the Senate. Made public August 5, 1911.]

To the Senate:

In my special message of June 28, 1911 (Confidential Executive C, 62d Cong., 1st sess.), I brought to the knowledge of the Senate the fact that the loan convention between the United States and Nicaragua, signed on June 6, 1911, and transmitted to the Senate on the following day, had been approved by the Nicaraguan Congress with certain slight unobjectionable changes.

I am now enabled to inform the Senate that the action of the Nicaraguan Congress in this respect consisted in so changing Article IV of the Spanish text of the convention as to make it follow mutatis mutandis the language of the Spanish text of the same numbered article of the loan convention between the United States and Honduras.[1] I transmit herewith a correct copy of the article as adopted by the Nicaraguan Congress, which has been furnished by the American Minister at Managua.

The Senate will not fail to notice that the change made is of phraseology only; that it in nowise affects the sense or force of the article; and that it requires the amendment by the Senate of the English text of the article only in two unimportant and immaterial particulars, namely, the striking out, in lines 7 and 8 of the article, of the words "who need not be a Nicaraguan and," and in line 13 the words "should the circumstances require."

I therefore recommend that in giving its advice and consent to the ratification of this convention, the Senate will do so with the following amendments: "In lines 7 and 8 of Article IV, strike out the words 'who need not be a Nicaraguan and'; and in line 13 of the same article the words 'should the circumstances require.'" As so amended the article would read as follows:

---

[1] See page 561.

ARTICLE IV.

> The Government of Nicaragua, so long as the loan exists, will appoint from a list of names to be presented to it by the fiscal agent of the loan and approved by the President of the United States of America, a collector general of customs, who shall administer the customs in accordance with the contract securing said loan and will give this official full protection in the exercise of his functions. The Government of the United States will in turn afford such protection as it may find requisite.

I have already on three occasions[1] endeavored to impress upon the Senate the great importance which I attach to the consummation of this convention and the like convention with Honduras, and have stated the reasons which persuade me to take this view. Reiteration of these reasons is unnecessary and might tax the patience of the Senate; but my conviction of the benefits which would accrue from these conventions is so strong that the Senate will acquit me of overzeal if, feeling my responsibility to the interests of the United States, I should deem it my duty, as I do, again most earnestly to commend them to the favorable consideration of the Senate during its present session.

WM. H. TAFT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 15, 1911.

File No. 817.51/243.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, October 9, 1911.

The loan contract between American bankers and Nicaragua, of Sept. 1, 1911, was approved today by the National Constituent Assembly.

GUNTHER.

File No. 817.51/256.

Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, November 2, 1911.

SIR: We beg to advise you that on September 1, 1911, we entered into an agreement with the Republic of Nicaragua, by which we undertook to make a temporary loan of $1,500,000, which the Republic urgently needed. As security for this loan, Nicaragua pledged her customs receipts, and agreed, in order to make such pledge effective, that the customs should be collected by a Collector General to be nominated by us and to be approved by you. We beg to hand you herewith a copy of the agreement referred to.[2]

---

[1] One of these being in the message of January 26, 1911, printed under Honduras, Financial Affairs, p. 555.

[2] Not printed.

The contract having been approved by the Congress of Nicaragua and having therefore become effective, we have, in accordance with its terms, nominated Mr. Clifford D. Ham to be Collector-General of Customs of Nicaragua. Relying upon your good offices in this matter, we submit his name to you, and beg that if it meets with your approval you will so advise us.

Mr. Ham is at present Surveyor of the Port of Manila, in the Philippine Islands, and has been recommended to us as a person qualified for the position and worthy of our confidence.

Respectfully yours,

Brown Brothers and Company.
J. and W. Seligman and Company.

File No. 817.51/257.

The Nicaraguan Minister to the Secretary of State.

Legation of Nicaragua,
Washington, November 7, 1911.

Excellency: I have the honor to inform your excellency that a contract providing for a loan of $1,500,000 to the Nicaraguan Government by Messrs. Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company of New York, was signed by myself and Messrs. Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company of New York on September 1st. This contract was subsequently submitted to the President of Nicaragua and the National Constituent Assembly, and was duly approved by that body on October 9th. The contract provides that this loan shall be secured by the customs receipts of Nicaragua, which shall be collected by a Collector General of Customs nominated by the bankers, approved by the Secretary of State, and appointed by the Government of Nicaragua.

As I am under telegraphic instructions from my Government to expedite this matter, I have the honor to request that when the bankers shall have submitted to your excellency for approval the name of the person proposed by them as Collector General that you will take action thereon as early as may be convenient.

Respectfully I am [etc.]

Salvador Castrillo.

File No. 817.51/256.

The Secretary of State to Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company.

Department of State,
Washington, November 11, 1911.

Gentlemen: I acknowledge the receipt of your joint letter of the 2d instant wherein you advise me that on September 1, 1911, you entered into an agreement with the Republic of Nicaragua by which you undertook to make a temporary loan of $1,500,000 which you state the Republic urgently needed. You inform me that as security for this loan the Republic of Nicaragua has pledged its customs receipts and agreed, in order to make such pledge effective, that the customs should be collected by a collector-general to be nominated by you and approved by me, and you enclose with your letter a copy of the agreement referred to. You further inform me that the contract has been approved by the Congress of Nicaragua, and that, having therefore become effective, you have, in accordance with its terms, nominated Mr. Clifford D. Ham, who is at present Surveyor of the Port of Manila, in the Philippine Islands, to be Collector-General of Customs of Nicaragua. You submit his name to me, requestion that if it meets with my approval you be so advised.

In reply you are informed that a note has also been received from the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Nicaragua in this city in which he informs the Department of the negotiation of this contract and requests, on behalf of his Government, that I take action upon the request made by you for the approval of the nomination of a Collector-General of Customs of Nicaragua who, under the terms of the contract, is to be appointed by that Government. Since receiving your letter I have caused inquiry to be made regarding the fitness of Mr. Ham to fill the position for which he has been selected, and I am happy to be able to advise you that I have received a favorable reply. I therefore approve the selection of Mr. Clifford D. Ham as Collector-General of Customs of Nicaragua, as a suitable and competent person to discharge the duties of that position.

As pointed out during your informal conferences with officials of this Department in the month of August last, my approval of the person selected for the post of Collector-General of Customs of Nicaragua must not in any wise be understood as indicating that the Government of the United States will lend any other or further good offices in the protection of the American citizens parties to this contract than it would accord to any legitimate American enterprise abroad, nor that this approval places the bankers in any better position in regard to seeking this protection than if I took no part whatever in the approval of a Collector-General of Customs.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 817.51/257.

The Secretary of State to the Nicaraguan Minister.

No. 12]

Department of State,
Washington, November 11, 1911.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 7th instant, in which you inform me that a contract [etc.]

In reply, I have the honor to inform you that the name of Clifford D. Ham, at present Surveyor of the Port of Manila, has been placed in nomination by Messrs. Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company to fill the post of Collector-General of Customs of Nicaragua, and that I have this day approved his nomination as a suitable and competent person to fill that position.

Accept [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 817.51/273.

Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, December 13, 1911.

SIR: We have the honor of handing you herewith, for your information, copy of a contract entered into on December 9th between the Republic of Nicaragua, the Ethelburga Syndicate, Limited, of London, and such holders of Nicaraguan Government bonds of the issue of 1909 as may hereafter assent thereto.

This contract was negotiated by us on behalf of Nicaragua in accordance with the terms of the agreement of September 1, 1911, between the Republic of Nicaragua and ourselves, copy of which accompanied our letter to you of November 2nd last. By its terms the contract of December 9th is subject to the approval of the Nicaraguan Executive, to whom we have submitted it.

Respectfully yours,

BROWN BROTHERS AND COMPANY.
J. AND W. SELIGMAN AND COMPANY.

File No. 817.51/275.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, December 16, 1911.

The Financial Agent, Colonel Ham, and Captain Wilson, assumed charge of their respective posts today.

GUNTHER.

File No. 817.51/280.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, December 26, 1911.

The good offices of the United States are requested by the President of Nicaragua for securing the services of an excise expert to advise as to a thorough excise reform.

GUNTHER.

File No. 817.51/294.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
No. 161.] Managua, December 30, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy and translation of a Presidential decree,[1] which was subsequently ratified by the Assembly, approving the transaction entered into by Messers Brown Bros. and Co. and J. and W. Seligman and Co., as authorized agents of the Republic of Nicaragua with the Ethelburga Syndicate Ltd, of London. This decree bears date of the 14th instant, and was published in the "Gaceta Oficial" on the 23rd instant.

---

[1] Not printed.

The President and other members of his Government have expressed to me their gratification at this prompt and satisfactory solution of this harassing and disturbing obligation.

I have [etc.]

F. M. GUNTHER.

File No. 817.51/280.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 12, 1912.

Edwin A. Thayer highly recommended for excise expert by the Insular Bureau. He is Chief of the Bureau of Accounts, Treasury Department, Porto Rico.

KNOX.

File No. 817.51/292.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, January 15, 1912.

The President and Minister for Foreign Affairs agree to appoint Mr. Thayer at $6,000 per annum.

GUNTHER.

File No. 817.51/292.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 19, 1912.

Thayer accepts and will sail from San Juan January 22.

WILSON.

File No. 817.51/297A.

The Secretary of State to various Senators.

[Circular letter.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 22, 1912.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have ventured to send you copy of an address I recently made on "The Monroe Doctrine and some incidental obligations in the zone of the Caribbean." I do so in the hope of increasing your interest in the Convention between the United States and Honduras, and even more especially the Convention between the United States and Nicaragua, which now await the advice and consent of the Senate. As you know, these Conventions are urged as a practical measure of peace; as a real benefit to commerce, particularly of the Southern States; and as a safe and provident measure of foreign policy. Moreover, the regeneration of Nicaragua clearly depends upon our willingness now to extend a helping hand.

Trusting that this important subject may have the advantage of your impartial consideration,

I remain [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

[Inclosure.]

Address of the Honorable Philander C. Knox before the New York State Bar Association, January 19, 1912.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE AND SOME INCIDENTAL OBLIGATIONS IN THE ZONE OF THE CARIBBEAN.

Gentlemen: When I was invited to address this distinguished gathering of lawyers, I was very glad to act on the suggestion that I speak to you on the subject of the two highly important conventions now awaiting the advice and consent of the Senate as the coordinate branch of the executive treaty-making power. I refer to the conventions negotiated during the year just passed between the United States and Honduras and between the United States and Nicaragua, both with the object of assisting those two Republics to work out their own best interests and to achieve prosperity through their own efforts.

Before commending to your attention these two conventions I wish to make clear the important fact in their favor that they respond to, and indeed actually evidence, one element of a policy initially adopted by us for our guidance in international affairs almost a century ago, and since then repeatedly announced and carried out by successive administrations of all political shades and beliefs. Involving thus a question of international policy, the conventions deserve the more attention because of their relations to the abstract principles of international law.

Contiguous countries or those approximate by reason of being parts of one of the earth's great geographical subdivisions sustain natural and inevitable relations toward each other, out of which arise certain political correlations to be asserted from time to time as the safety, welfare, and progress of the group as a whole or that of its members may require. One of these relations involves the necessity of being mindful of the activities of other States and the preservation among them of an existing stable status, "whether," as Phillimore says, "by preventing the aggressions and conquests of any one power or by taking care that out of the new order of things produced by internal revolutions no existing power acquires an aggrandizement that may menace the liberties of the rest of the world."

This relation and the necessities arising out of it are doubtless as old as human government and seem certainly to have become an avowed and conscious policy so soon as there existed in the world great States in rivalry for supremacy. For example, Hiero, King of Syracuse, though an ally of Rome, sent aid to Carthage during the war of the auxiliaries; and Polybius asserts that the King justified his course as necessary "both in order to retain his dominions in Sicily and to preserve the Roman friendship that Carthage should be safe, lest by its fall the remaining power should be able, without let or hindrance, to execute every purpose and undertaking."

Modern nations have found it necessary to invoke and enforce the same principle, and our own Government very early in its history adopted it when it pronounced the Monroe doctrine, the first assertion of which was based on purely selfish motives, namely, that this country's safety and peace depended upon the exclusion of American soil as a field for further European colonization.

The founders of our Government (observers of the strifes, turmoils, and rivalry among the countries of Europe) very early saw, in their providential wisdom, the necessity for creating and maintaining upon this hemisphere a status which should not threaten the existence or political stability of this nation. As early as 1793 Jefferson indicated in an instruction to the American Minister to Spain his apprehensions over the further acquisition of territory on this continent by European powers.

A few years later, in 1801, Mr. King, then Minister to England, reported that in an interview with Lord Hawkesbury he had indicated that the United States were "contented that the Floridas remain in the hands of Spain, but should not be willing to see them transferred, except to ourselves." In 1808 President Jefferson, writing to Gov. Claiborne, of Louisiana, asserted that—

"We shall be well satisfied to see Cuba and Mexico remain in their present dependence, but very unwilling to see them in that of either France or England, politically or commercially. We consider their interests and ours as the same, and that the object of both must be to exclude all European influence from this hemisphere."

Three years later President Madison sent to Congress a secret message regarding the occupation of the Floridas, in response to which Congress, in secret session, passed on January 15, 1811, a resolution which recited that—

"Taking into view the peculiar situation of Spain and of her American Provinces, and considering the influence which the destiny of the territory adjoining the southern border of the United States may have upon their security, tranquillity, and commerce," resolved,

"That the United States, under the peculiar circumstances of the existing crisis, can not, without serious inquietude, see any part of the said territory pass into the hands of any foreign power, and that a due regard to their own safety compels them to provide, under certain contingencies, for the temporary occupation of the said territory, * * *."

These few antecedents show how clearly this principle was understood by, and how vividly its importance was impressed upon, the founders of our Government, and how early they consciously adopted it in order to secure so far as possible from outside pressure the preservation of the Union. Moreover, even European countries not only recognized the principle itself as among themselves but also its application to the existing political conditions in the Americas. In the correspondence between Mr. Rush and Mr. Canning, as a result of which, at least in part, President Monroe made his announcement, Mr. Canning, in a letter to Mr. Rush under date of August 20, 1823, in speaking of the Spanish efforts to recover control of her colonies, stated the following propositions:

"1. We conceive the recovery of the colonies by Spain to be hopeless.

* * * * * * *

"4. We aim not at the possession of any portion of them ourselves.

"5. We could not see any portion of them transferred to any other power with indifference. * * *

"If there be any European power which cherishes other projects, which looks to a forcible enterprise for reducing the colonies to subjugation, on behalf of or in the name of Spain, or which meditates the acquisition of any part of them to itself by cession or by conquest, such a declaration on the part of your Government and ours would be at once the most effectual and the least offensive mode of intimating our joint disapprobation of such projects."

The first positive pronouncement, from which has grown in the lapse of fruitful years the great body of precept and precedent which is to-day called the Monroe doctrine, is found in President Monroe's annual message of 1823, in which he stated that—

"The occasion has been judged proper for asserting as a principle, in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintained, are henceforth not to be considered as subject for future colonization by any European powers."

This statement was designed as a politic declaration, made to fit a specific "occasion," namely, the claim of Russia, under the ukase of 1821, to exclude all alien commerce and industry from the coasts and waters of northwestern America down to the fifty-first parallel. John Quincy Adams, then Secretary of State, resisted this avid claim on the ground that no Russian settlement existed on the territory, to which the United States laid equal claim; and on July 17, 1823, more than five months before President Monroe's message, Mr. Adams gave notice to the Russian envoy to the effect that the flaw in the Russian contention could not be cured by making settlements, as an afterthought, to prop up an unjustified claim of title. What Mr. Adams said was—

"that we [the United States] should contest the right of Russia to any territorial establishment on this continent, and that we should assume distinctly the principle that the American continents are no longer subjects for any new European colonial establishments."

It was this categorical declaration that Monroe embodied in his message, with the verbal change that the original "settlements," which under Mr. Adams's pen became "territorial establishments" and "colonial establishments," was altered to "future colonization.' Thus amended, the Adams caveat, directed specifically at the Russian claim, became in time merged in the Monroe doctrine proper and, a generation later, played its part in the negotiation of the Central American and Clayton-Bulwer treaties with Great Britain as a question of fact, resting on the assertion that the continent was "occupied by civilized independent nations" and was "accessible to Europeans and each other on that footing alone."

The Monroe doctrine proper, as enunciated in a different part of the celebrated message of 1823, was much more far-reaching. It was called forth by the menace of a combination of European powers with the purpose of interference in the political affairs of the recently enfranchised American Republics, whose sovereign existence had been acknowledged by the United States but not then by Europe. This movement, an outgrowth of the Holy Alliance of 1815 and originally confined to Europe as a league for protecting the principle of legitimacy as against revolution, for upholding the divine right of kings as opposed to the rights of the people, was extended, in the summer of 1823, to embrace intervention, in behalf of Spanish sovereignty, in America. France proposed to Great Britain that when the allies should have accomplished their task of restoring the Spanish throne they should propose a congress with the view to the termination of the revolutionary governments in Spanish-America; but England looked upon this proposal with disfavor, and Canning, late in the summer of 1823, sounded the United States as to the possibility of the two Governments taking a joint position against interference by the allies in Latin America. The opinion of Jefferson that—was echoed by Monroe's advisers. The suggestion of joint action with Great Britain was not favored, but the coincidence of British policy with our own was not unwelcome. England, indeed, took the initiative in October, 1823, by declaring that, while neutral as to the contest between Spain and her American colonies, the "junction" of any foreign power with Spain against the colonies would be viewed as constituting "entirely a new question upon which Great Britain must take such decision as her interests required." The Canning declaration was potential and was soon rendered specifically effective by the utterance of Monroe; the fact that the two great maritime powers were moving in parallels toward the enunciation of a vital principle made impracticable the accomplishment of any project of American interference by the allies, and they were not slow to realize the force of Monroe's announcements when he said:

"Our first and fundamental maxim should be never to entangle ourselves in the broils of Europe; our second, never to suffer Europe to intermeddle with cis-Atlantic affairs"—

"We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, and whose independence we have on great consideration and on just principles acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

Like all general formulations of great principles the Monroe document has required interpretation and construction to apply its precepts to special cases.

It was understood at the outset by the newly enfranchised Latin-American States as a defensive movement in their favor rather than as a step taken by the United States in its own interest and for its own self-defense. In 1825 the southern republics proposed to convene a congress at Panama to form an alliance of all the independent American States for self-defense and to settle some principle of public law to govern their relation with each other. One of the measures scheduled for discussion was:

"To take into consideration the means of making effectual the declaration of the President of the United States respecting any ulterior design of a foreign power to colonize any portion of this continent, and also the means of resisting all interference from abroad with the domestic concerns of the American Governments."

It thus appears that the Spanish-American States understood the Monroe doctrine to import a definite pledge by the United Sates to them of mutual support in its maintenance and to involve joining with them in some kind of specific alliance, offensive and defensive, for that purpose. The Senate responded to the proposal for a congress by confirming two commissioners, for whose expenses the Congress appropriated means; but one of them died, the other reached Panama too late to take part in the first session, and no second session was ever held.

In 1848 President Polk saw occasion for an expansive construction of the Monroe doctrine. An Indian rising in Yucatan led the local authorities to offer their dominion and sovereignty to the United States, and, perhaps on the principle of having more than one string to their bow, to make a like offer to England and Spain. Commenting on this offer, Mr. Polk said:

"According to our established policy, we could not consent to a transfer of this 'dominion and sovereignty' to either Spain, Great Britain, or any other European power. In the language of President Monroe, in his message of December, 1823, 'we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety.'"

In this message Polk practically repeated what he had said in 1845 in connection with the Oregon boundary question and the annexation of Texas, when he deemed—

"that it should be distinctly announced to the world as our settled policy that no future European colony or dominion shall, with our consent, be planted or established on any part of the North American Continent."

Thus President Polk merged the "noncolonization" declaration of Mr. Adams in the case of the Russian claim with the true Monroe doctrine of political noninterference.

This combined doctrine found early application in the case of Cuba. As early as in President Jackson's time it was intimated by us to Spain "that if she would not cede Cuba to any European power we would assist her in maintaining possession of it." As Secretary of State, Daniel Webster took occasion to revive this phase of the broadened doctrine by serving notice, in 1851, upon Great Britain, in view of a proposed tripartite engagement between France, Great Britain, and Spain to guarantee the Spanish retention of Cuba, that—

"it has always been declared to Spain that the Government of the United States could not be expected to acquiesce in the cession of Cuba to an European power."

Thenceforth, through the period of the Ostend manifesto and the time when Mr. Marcy was Secretary of State, and Cuban annexation to the United States was discussed, Cuba passed on to independence and finally to its present position of great potential well being, securely bulwarked, by definite stipulations, from ever again becoming an issue under the Monroe doctrine. To-day no great liveliness of imagination is needed to conjecture, in retrospect, whither the Pearl of the Antilles might have drifted but for the part taken by the United States in securing Cuba to the Cubans.

The Monroe doctrine also came perilously near being brought into direct play when, during our Civil War, Spain made an attempt to regain Santo Domingo through an illegal arrangement with its President for the time being. The scheme was abortive, but the causes which prompted it survived, and the Dominican Republic continued to suffer from impotent misrule, financial default, and civil perturbation. Conspicuously an easy prey to any aggression from abroad, it sought the formal protection of the United States, which was declined. It then voluntarily sought annexation, which was accepted, and a treaty to that end was negotiated but never consummated. In sending the treaty to the Senate, President Grant said:

"The doctrine promulgated by President Monroe has been adhered to by all political parties, and I now deem it proper to assert the equally important principle that hereafter no territory on this continent shall be regarded as subject of transfer to a European power. * * *

"The acquisition of San Domingo is an adherence to the 'Monroe doctrine'; it is a measure of national protection."

We thus see President Grant ready to agree to annexation if the alternative bid fair to be the stultification of our long-asserted right and duty of self-preservation against adverse influences being set up through un-American domination at our doors.

To illustrate how the self-preservation features of the Monroe doctrine have been espoused and lived up to by all of our national administrations, whatever their party allegiance or political creed, as well as to show the asssociation between the instinct of self-preservation and the idea of aiding our neighbors to guard themselves against invasive alien influences from which, in the end, we ourselves should suffer, the Venezuelan episode of 1895 may be pertinently cited. On its face, the issue between Venezuela and Great Britain was merely one of determining an undefined boundary line; in its essence it appeared to involve the setting up of expanded colonial domination by Great Britain over a large part of the historical terrritory of Venezuela. The dispute lasted nearly half a century. Mr. Evarts, Mr. Frelinghuysen, and Mr. Bayard successively urged upon Great Britain the acceptance of the arbitration asked by Venezuela. Mr. Blaine followed in 1889, after Barima, at the mouth of the Orinoco, had been proclaimed a British port. When Mr. Cleveland assumed office Mr. Olney renewed the appeal for arbitration with the alternative of conventional agreement upon a definite boundary. In February, 1895, Congress, by joint resolution, approved the President's recommendation of arbitration. On July 20, 1895, Mr. Olney addressed to Ambassador Bayard an instruction which has become one of the famous papers of our diplomatic annals. He asserted that the right of one nation to intervene in a controversy to which other nations are directly parties may be availed of "whenever what is done or proposed by any of the parties primarily concerned is a serious and direct menace to its own integrity, tranquillity, or welfare."

He elaborately analyzed the history and scope of the doctrine of Monroe, especially dwelling upon its noncolonization declaration, deducing "that the Venezuelan boundary dispute is in any view far within the scope and spirit of the rule as uniformly accepted and acted upon." He was careful not to link himself to the cause of either disputant. To quote only very briefly, he said that the United States "being entitled to resent and resist any sequestration of Venezuelan soil by Great Britain, it is necessarily entitled to know whether such sequestration has occurred or is now going on."

Mr. Olney's conclusion was that it appeared to be the unmistakable and imperative duty of the President to ask "for a definite decision upon the point whether Great Britain will consent or will decline to submit the Venezuelan boundary question in its entirety to impartial arbitration."

The dispute was eventually and happily ended by arbitration.

It was at this period of the development of the doctrine and in this very controversy that a new suggestion was made, in negative form, to the effect that if the Government of the United States had the rights which it claimed, it must take them cum onere and so assume certain obligations and responsibilities. This was indicated by Lord Salisbury in answer to Mr. Olney's able presentation of the doctrine in the statement that—

"It is admitted that he [President Monroe] did not seek to assert a protectorate over Mexico or the States of Central and South America. Such a claim would have imposed upon the United States the duty of answering for the conduct of these States, and consequently the responsibility of controlling it. * * * It follows of necessity that if the Government of the United States will not control the conduct of these communities, neither can it undertake to protect them from the consequences attaching to any misconduct of which they may be guilty toward other nations."

In this relation I am disposed to emphasize the fact that our course in the Venezuelan incident, apart from obeying the instinct of self-preservation, was distinctly and mainly responsive to the appeal of Venezuela and in the direction of lending a helpful hand to a suffering neighbor to enable a just determination of her asserted claim of right. So far as Venezuela was concerned we imposed no burden upon that then feeble State; we simply assisted it to throw off a burden. It was surely zeal in the defense of a sister Republic and unaffected consciousness that our power was for beneficent use which called from Mr. Olney these vigorous words:

"To-day the United States is practically sovereign on this continent and its fiat is law upon the subjects to which it confines its interposition."

The spirit behind these words contemplated, I am sure, no arbitrary exercise of sheer power, but a determined zeal in magnanimous consideration for the rights of other American Republics, a sincere sympathy with them in their trials, an insistence upon the right, that good might come to them and that our own vital interests should not be menaced.

It goes almost without saying that, from aiding an embarrassed neighbor in doing the right, or in defending a right, to assuming vicarious responsibility for his wrongdoing, is a far cry. Between these two extremes, as between all extremes, there lies a median zone where they touch or even overlap. That is the case when the question arises how far, in a given situation, this nation may go in helping another American people to avert any injurious consequences of wrongdoing.

In principle it is not the duty of the United States to prevent a foreign state from seeking redress, or to shoulder the wrong and assume its redress ourselves. But it is equally obvious that the measures to which a foreign state might ordinarily resort to enforce its claim might amount to political interference in the affairs of the American continents, as by occupation and administration of territory, or like extreme coercive steps. That is a contingency which the tenets of the doctrine, joined to the dictates of common prudence, authorize and counsel us to avert by all proper means, in fulfillment of a responsibility we owe to ourselves, even if not in the discharge of any conventional or moral obligation.

The point was well considered in President Roosevelt's annual message of 1905. He examined it in its tortious and contractual aspects. As to the former, he said:

"If a republic to the south of us commits a tort against a foreign nation, such as an outrage against a citizen of that nation, then the Monroe doctrine does not force us to interfere to prevent punishment of the tort, save to see that the punishment does not assume the form of territorial occupation in any shape."

As to the latter aspect, he said:

"On the one hand, this country would certainly decline to go to war to prevent a foreign government from collecting a just debt; on the other hand, it is very inadvisable to permit any foreign power to take possession, even temporarily, of the customhouses of an American Republic in order to enforce the payment of its obligations; for such temporary occupation might turn into a permanent occupation."

And upon both propositions he reached the conclusion that—

"The only escape from these alternatives may at any time be that we must ourselves undertake to bring about some arrangement by which so much as possible of a just obligation shall be paid. It is far better that this country should put through such an arrangement, rather than allow any foreign country to undertake it."

My distinguished predecessor, Mr. Root, voiced the same views in a speech made in 1904 at the annual dinner of the New England Society:

"And if we are to maintain this doctrine [the declaration of Monroe], which is vital to our national life and safety, at the same time when we say to the other powers of the world, 'You shall not push your remedies for wrong against these republics to the point of occupying their territory,' we are bound to say that whenever the wrong can not be otherwise redressed we ourselves will see that it is redressed."

These, gentlemen, constitute the more important announcements, with the elements involved therein, which have been made during our past history, and whatever particular phase of the Monroe doctrine you may choose to emphasize, it appears to me evident that there is one certain deduction from the premises, and that is that the best way to avoid the difficulties occasionally arising out of any responsibilities which this doctrine in certan of its aspects may seem to impose is to assist the less fortunate American Republics in conducting their own affairs in such a way that those difficulties should not be liable to arise. The most effective way to escape the logical consequences of the Monroe doctrine is to help them to help themselves. Assuming the correctness of Mr. Root's corollary, it is our duty, to ourselves and to them, to cooperate in preventing, where possible, specific conditions where we might have to become in too great a measure accountable. We diminish our responsibilities in proportion as we bring about improved conditions. Like an insurance risk, our risk decreases as the conditions to which it pertains are improved.

I most confidently assert that, under the Monroe doctrine in its ultimate analysis, the heaviest and most matter-of-fact responsibility that to-day rests upon the United States is that we should respond to the needs still felt by some few of our Latin-American neighbors in their progress toward good government, by assisting them to meet their just obligations and to keep out of trouble. We wish to see them prosper, and their prosperity, by reflex action, is felt not only by us but by all the members of the American family.

The proposition is not novel; it has been practically wrought into shape and proved successful in the experimental case of Santo Domingo, which, as we have seen, had begun to cause us concern so long ago as the time of our Civil War. The success of the Dominican arrangement has been so brilliant that I mention it at some length as the best possible guaranty of the good effects to be expected from the Nicaragua and Honduras conventions, which are similar in principle but necessitate an even less direct interposition on the part of the United States.

In 1904 the Dominican Republic presented a situation which threatened to lead to the gravest consequences so far as the United States was concerned. For years the country had been torn by internal dissension and revolutions until the instability of the so-called Government had become a byword and the credit of the nation had been reduced to such a condition that usurious rates of interest were demanded and obtained by those who were willing to furnish the tottering Republic with funds. It was also customary for the lenders of money to demand as security for the payment of interest and principal the hypothecation of the revenues of the various seaports of the country until at length the Dominican people found themselves in a position where practically the revenues of every port in the Republic were pledged for the payment of debts. There were no funds left wherewith to maintain the Government, the total revenues from imports and exports had for years been insufficient to meet even the interest on the outstanding indebtedness, and the people of the island had been brought face to face with national bankruptcy.

In this posture of affairs the creditors of the nation, who were for the greater part Europeans, had become clamorous for the payment of arrears of interest and for the enforcement of the pledges of the revenues of the various ports of the country, which pledges it had been found necessary to violate if funds were to be had for the General Government. Protocols of the settlement of the various debts had been signed with Germany, Spain, and Italy two years previously with the terms of which it had been impossible for the Dominican Republic to comply, and the creditors had decided to invoke the aid of their Governments in the collection of what they claimed to be their due. An Italian warship was actually dispatched to Dominican waters for the enforcement of the agreements with Italian subjects. The Monroe doctrine, indeed, seemed menaced and the Dominican Government appealed to the Government of the United States for assistance in its extremity.

This appeal for assistance led, as you know, to a plan of adjustment whereby the customhouses of the Republic were to be placed in the hands of American officials and a portion of the receipts thereof was to be held on deposit in New York for the benefit of all creditors alike. It is also a matter of history that subsequently an equitable adjustment was had with the creditors, the debt was refunded, and a convention between this Government and that of the Dominican Republic was negotiated whereby the collection and administration of the customs revenues of the Republic were placed in the hands of American officials, who were to receive from the United States "such protection as it may find to be requisite. * * *" An adequate provision for the service of the debt was made, and a new order of things thus began and has continued ever since.

The result of the operations of this arrangement has been that the creditors now punctually receive their interest, and there is at present turned over to the Dominican Government for the purposes of defraying its current expenses an amount far in excess of what the total revenues of the Republic had previously been. Since the American management of the customs has existed it has been found possible to reduce the import tariff by approximately one-half, notwithstanding which the import duties have increased from $1,800,000 in 1904 to over $3,300,000 in 1911, while the total foreign trade of the Republic has grown from about $6,000,000 to over $17,000,000 in the same period, and the annual harvest of revolutions is no longer gathered, and military expenses which formerly depleted the treasury have been reduced to a minimum.

The problem presented by affairs in the Dominican Republic in 1904 has now become a reality in Honduras and Nicaragua, and those Republics have sought the interposition of the United States.

The situation is, briefly, this:

Practically from the outset the Republics of Central America, especially Honduras and Nicaragua, have been often torn with internal dissension and overrun with revolutions. In Honduras and Nicaragua these ills are still prevalent. Beset with strife these less fortunate Republics, although endowed by Providence with vast natural resources, have never been permitted to progress toward a normal and economic development. Early in their existence as independent States they found their treasuries depleted and their resources squandered in futile attempts to suppress internal disorder, and as a natural result they have been continuously compelled to borrow at exorbitant rates of interest from those willing to incur the disproportionate risk of lending them the moneys necessary for the temporary conduct of government, with the result that they now find themselves hopelessly entangled in the mesh of enormous and rapidly increasing national indebtedness. Their revenues have never been properly applied so as to meet the ever-increasing demands of their national creditors.

Because of the difficulty of communication in these countries the customhouses have ever been the objective point of the revolutionists and successive contests for their control have marked the national existence. Once having lost control of the customhouses and the revenues derived therefrom, the constituted authorities have found themselves confronted with a lack of funds and have ultimately been deprived of the means necessary to defend the capitals.

Control of the customhouses once obtained, it becomes necessary for the successful revolutionists to expend enormous sums, practically the entire national revenue, in the maintenance of an army adequate to continue them in control. Under such circumstances the payment of the interest on the national debt has been out of the question, and such governments fall into a state of hopeless default which deprives them of any further foreign credit.

Honduras and Nicaragua alike occupy a central position stretching from the Caribbean to the Pacific and separating the other Central American Republics. In Central America there are many rivalries as between the heads of the five Republics, but there has seldom been an open breach between them which has resulted in an international war. Rather than seek a direct means of redressing their grievances it has been found far more effective and less dangerous than open hostility for the president seeking to injure his neighbor to institute and set on foot a revolution of political malcontents against the government. For years the revolutions and internal commotions of several of these Republics have been caused by their neighbors who have taken advantage of their position to harbor political refugees from their neighbors and aid or permit them to foster a hostile movement against their native republic, which is fomented in security without the borders of the country at whose government it is aimed, and which is then permitted to cross the international line at some convenient location, thence to contend for supremacy.

Honduras, because it borders on three of the other Republics, Guatemala, Salvador, and Nicaragua, has for years been the hotbed of most of the internal disturbances of its neighbors, and in fact has been the cockpit of Central America. So great has been the abuse of the undefended central position occupied by Honduras that as long ago as 1907 all the Republics of Central America joined in a peace conference and signed at Washington, under our auspices, a convention one article of which had for an object the neutralization of the territory of that Republic so as to prevent its further use as a center of disturbance.

Under such conditions the Republics of Honduras and Nicaragua came to seek the counsel and assistance of the United States.

Provided the enormous waste on military establishments could be checked, the customs revenues of both these countries, properly administered, should be ample to meet the interest and sinking fund on their just national obligations, and it is in order to establish a system for the accomplishment of this end that the present conventions have been framed.

It may be asked, What are the provisions of the two practically identical treaties as drawn for the purpose of curing the evils of the situation as already set forth?

The preambles of the two conventions point to the recognized and urgent necessity, in each case, of laying the foundation for more effective helpfulness on the part of the United States in assisting the Republics of Nicaragua and Honduras to the rehabilitation of their respective finances and in thus making possible the maintenance of peace and prosperity in the two countries, and they recite the fact that the active aid of this Government has been requested to this end. Then follow the four articles of the conventions. These include some eight points and I shall try briefly to epitomize them, roughly indicating the objects of the different provisions.

In order to avoid the danger of further embarrassment with foreign creditors, the conventions provide (first) that a loan shall be placed in the United States; in order to provide that the bankers' contracts, which it will be necessary to negotiate to work out the details of their financial problems, may be equitable and just, and also that they may be properly executed, it is provided (second) that the signatory governments shall take due note of the terms and shall consult in case of any difficulties. That the loan may be properly secured, the conventions stipulate (third) that the customs duties shall be pledged; that this security may be adequate and may not be interfered with, it is agreed (fourth) that the customs duties shall not be changed without the consent of the Government of the United States. To assure the proper collection and administration of the customs by a competent person, it is provided (fifth) that a receiver general of customs shall be appointed by the Government of the country concerned from a list of names prepared by the fiscal agent of the contemplated loan and approved by the President of the United States. To insure the proper discharge of the duties of the receiver general of customs, it is agreed (sixth) that he shall be under obligation to report annually, and upon request, to both parties to the conventions. In order that he may effectively, conscientiously, and independently perform his functions, and to prevent customs houses continuing to be the goal of revolutionists, it is stipulated (seventh) that the Government of the country concerned will protect him and (eighth) that the Government of the United States shall afford him such protection as it may deem requisite, there being thus obtained just so much assurance of stable conditions and proper customs collections as will enable Nicaragua and Honduras to borrow the money necessary to rehabilitate their national finances at anything like a reasonable rate of interest.

I wish to call especial attention to the fact that in the Dominican Republic just this potential safeguard, unexercised and without any undue interference on the part of the United States, has cured almost century-old evils, and to ask you to judge these conventions in the light of the plain facts.

There has been a good deal of confusion of ideas in regard to the relation of the conventions to banking arrangements for the rehabilitation of Honduran and Nicaraguan finances. The conventions themselves are quite separate from any bankers' contracts. They may be ratified and put in force as between the Governments concerned, but they remain purely potential unless and until bankers' contracts are negotiated which are deemed acceptable by both Governments, and, in the case of the Governments of Nicaragua and Honduras, which would be direct parties to the contracts, approved by their legislative assemblies. The sole desire of the Department of State has been that Nicaragua and Honduras make the best contracts that are possible under the conditions, and it is gratifying that American bankers have been able to undertake the business.

The Government of Nicaragua has already approved the convention and, to relieve its urgent and pressing necessities, has placed a preliminary loan in the United States and engaged American citizens—one as financial adviser, two as claims commissioners, one as collector general of customs, and one as assistant collector general of customs—and in this way has laid a foundation for its financial regeneration. This, however, is merely a temporary expedient, and what has been done must be lost and the bright prospect destroyed unless the convention, upon which the future important and permanent improvements depend, is ratified by the United States.

If these conventions are put into operation, what has happened in the Dominican Republic will be repeated in the Republics of Nicaragua and Honduras, which are the key to the peace of the whole of Central America, and within a few years the revolutions which keep these countries in a state of constant unrest will be eliminated; the neutrality of Honduras and Nicaragua in Central American affairs will become an accomplished fact; and the peace of the rest of Central America will be immensely strengthened.

These conventions, as I have said, are not a new experiment; in principle they have been tried, and it has been found that they produce results beneficial to the debtor and creditor alike. Instead of producing foreign entanglements, they have precisely the opposite effect, because they do away with the present discontent and clamor of foreign creditors, because they insure prosperity, and because they make for peace.

Alone, these countries find it impossible to extricate themselves from the thraldom of civil strife, and they quite naturally look to their more prosperous and powerful neighbor for aid and guidance. Shall we refuse it any more than we refused to heed the cry of Cuba or that of the Dominican Republic?

With the Monroe doctrine as a tenet of our national faith, can we refuse to these Republics that measure of assistance which will render their Governments stable and keep them from foreign interference? These are the questions involved in these treaties which are now pending before the United States Senate.

The adoption of the present conventions is counseled not only by the humanitarian motive of preventing useless bloodshed (hundreds of lives having already been saved by the Dominican arrangement) and by the ever-increasing important political reason of avoiding the danger of European entanglement in the affairs of the countries surrounding the Caribbean, but is also more than justified from a purely material standpoint. In 1909 the total foreign trade of the Central American States, including Panama, amounted to approximately $60,000,000, of which about one-half was with the United States. When we consider that the total commerce between Mexico and the United States is in the neighborhood of $117,000,000 we can realize in some degree the trade possibilities with the Isthmian Republics, especially if it be understood that under the arrangement between the United States and the Dominican Republic the trade with that country has increased since 1903 (prior to the installation of American officials in the customhouses), when it was somewhat over $4,000,000, to about $11,500,000 for the year 1910, and that the share of the United States in the total foreign commerce of the Dominican Republic has materially increased in the same period.

Several of the Republics of South America have grown great and powerful and enjoy the highest culture, fine political ideals, and stable Governments. These Republics, indeed, are, consciously or unconsciously, fellow sponsors with the United States of the Monroe doctrine as a Pan American idea as well as an American policy. The growth of such nations lightens our responsibility. The logic of political geography and of strategy, and now our tremendous national interest created by the Panama Canal, make the safety, the peace, and the prosperity of Central America and the zone of the Caribbean of paramount interest to the Government of the United States. Thus the malady of revolutions and financial collapse is most acute precisely in the region where it is most dangerous to us. It is here that we seek to apply a remedy.

It would not be sane to uphold a great policy like the Monroe doctrine and to repudiate its necessary corollaries and neglect the sensible measures which reason dictates as its safeguards.

As practical measures of peace, as wise measures of polity, as useful instrumentalities for commercial expansion, I firmly believe that the Nicaragua and Honduras conventions will commend themselves to all thoughtful American citizens.

File No. 817.51/294.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

Department of State,
Washington, January 24, 1912.

Sir: The Department has received your No. 161, of the 30th ultimo, transmitting a copy of the decree authorizing the financial arrangement between Messrs. Brown Brothers and Company and Messrs. J. and W. Seligman and Company, agents for the Republic of Nicaragua, and the Ethelburga Syndicate, Limited, of London.

Copies of your despatch and its enclosure have been sent to Mr. Ernest H. Wands.

I am [etc.] P. C. Knox.

File No. 817.51/322.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, February 4, 1912.

I have a letter from the President of Nicaragua in which he says:

> A crisis even graver than the present one may result from a delay of several days in insuring a fixed rate of exchange for our paper currency. This would force many into bankruptcy, cause general misfortune and perhaps be irremediable by later legislation.

Memorials to the same effect are being received from leading business men, who complain that the bankers parties to the contract should have begun the monetary reform last November; that since December the Government has relinquished the customs receipts and allowed the interest on the loan since October, without a single dollar being received.

Two difficulties stand in the way of the currency plan, I am told by the currency experts. The first, that it would require $500,000 to reduce the rate of exchange by retiring the paper currency put into circulation since Wands' report. The second, that as long as a currency plan might fail because of Nicaragua's bankruptcy, the experts are against recommending one.

Heavy outgo for paying revolutionary claims and cessation of collections of customs duties by the Government have caused a deficit in the Nicaraguan budget.

The Government has therefore requested the bankers to advance the additional $500,000 under the temporary loan contract, and to allow it about $25,000 monthly from customs receipts for a short time, to tide over the crisis. The only security for such an advance would be a mortgage on the Pacific Railroad, subject to a possible prior lien.

The President of the Assembly tells me the Assembly would enact currency laws if there is not too long a delay.

I suggest that the serious nature of the crisis be urged upon the bankers.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.51/322.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 8, 1912.

On February 7, it is understood, the bankers sent a new proposal which they hope will be acceptable and will remove the difficulties mentioned in your telegram of February 4.

KNOX.

File No. 817.51/369.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Managua, February 14, 1912.

The Nicaraguan Government and the bankers are about to conclude an agreement satisfactory to both regarding the prompt execution of plans for the currency and banking operations, the bankers to make an additonal loan of $500,000, and also to pay monthly $30,000 from the customs receipts, the bankers receiving, among other things, an option to purchase 51% of the Lake steamers and of the Pacific Railroad, now operated by the Nicaraguan Government. In the opinion of the currency experts, this option includes the franchise to operate steamers from Managua to Greytown. The exercise of this option when possible, and the canalization of the existing waterway—which with the Pacific Railroad would form a transcontinental line—have been recommended to the bankers by Mr. Harrison. According to present plans, I am informed, the new contract when authorized by the National Assembly will be signed by Castrillo in the United States under a power of attorney.

Weitzel.

File No. 817.51/384.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 6.]

American Legation,
Managua, February 14, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to report that the Department's informal course in the matter of expediting the installation of the currency and banking plan of Nicaragua, referred to in my telegram of February 4, has had a most beneficial effect on the economic situation in Nicaragua and has likewise served indirectly to tranquilize and strengthen the political condition.

When President Díaz requested my good offices in bringing the seriousness of the matter to the attention of the New York bankers concerned, I informed him that the Legation did not wish to take any official part in the business negotiations between the Nicaraguan Government and Brown Brothers et al. I had in mind the advisability not only of refraining from any action until absolutely necessary, but also of not seeming to encourage the Nicaraguan Administration in the idea that it might be as improvident as it chose and then could call on the Legation to extricate it from its difficulties. I was convinced, however, in this particular case that the situation was critical and only prompt action would save it, as there was a sort of impasse between the Government and the currency experts, the latter being unwilling to risk their reputation on a plan of monetary reform which might fail by reason of the country's bankruptcy, and the former insisting that the announcement of a currency plan was necessary to prevent bankruptcy.

After Brown Brothers had submitted the conditions of an additional loan, as mentioned in your telegram of February 8, President Díaz and the Minister of Finance again requested my opinion in the matter submitting a counter offer stating that the Government needed cash to pay its most pressing obligations and that the proposal for the option to purchase the Pacific railroad would meet with opposition and might be rejected by the Assembly for political or other reasons.

With reference to the Railroad they were prepared to give an option for the purchase of 51 per cent. retaining the balance, and this seemed to me to be a satisfactory compromise, and possibly of even greater advantage to the bankers than the original proposition because it would ensure friendly action in the future by the Government in the matter of the railroad.

In regard to the increase of monthly allowance from the customs I intimated that a request therefor would come with better grace if accompanied by the suggestion that authority would be given for the payment of the expenses of the Claims Commission and the salaries of the excise commissioner and the police inspector from said allowance directly by the Collector General of Customs without going through the Minister of Finance. This idea was accepted and the counter proposal was sent to the bankers' representatives, who in turn transmitted it to their principals.

Yesterday afternoon the experts, Messrs. Harrison and Conant, informed me that they had received a reply from Brown Brothers and they believed an agreement satisfactory to both sides would be reached, provided that the Nicaraguan Administration could secure the necessary legislation from the National Assembly including a provision in the law to be enacted that all remaining claims and the so-called "vales" issued by the Minister of Finance shall be adjudicated by the Claims Commission. This condition seems not only reasonable but absolutely necessary if the Commission plan is to work out successfully.

In regard to the new tentative agreement there is one point in particular to which I respectfully call the Department's attention. It will be noted that in the proposal providing that the bankers shall have an option to purchase the Pacific railroad it is also stated that the lake steamers owned and operated by the Nicaraguan Government shall be included. Both the currency experts interpret this clause to mean that Brown Brothers will on the exercise of the option acquire a franchise to navigate the lakes and San Juan River, and Mr. Harrison, the English expert, has therefore recommended to Brown Brothers that they should forego their concession for a railroad from the Atlantic to Lake Nicaragua and instead thereof canalize the San Juan and Tipitapa Rivers thus making an all-water route from Greytown to Managua to be operated in combination with the existing Pacific railroad thereby affording transcontinental transportation.

It seems to me very doubtful if the sale of the whole or a half interest in the lake steamers carries more than a transfer of title of the physical property, but whether so or not, the Department may wish to give the matter careful study and especially consider the effect of the transaction on any treaty which the Government of the United States might wish in the future to negotiate with Nicaragua relative to canal route across this Republic.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.51/375.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 26, 1912.

In reference to your allusion to a canal project in your February 14, the bankers have expressed their wish to know if there is any objection to inclusion of that project in their new proposals to Nicaragua. Department replied February 24 that there was none, provided that the loan contract contain the specification that there shall be no alienation to any foreign company or government except with the consent of this Government, and provided further that no transisthmian route shall be established without the advice and consent of this Government.

The bankers advise the Department that their representatives will be directed to drop the matter for the present if either the concession itself or the insertion of the foregoing provisos in the loan contract would endanger the latter.

WILSON.

File No. 817.51/376.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 11, 1912.

SIR: I enclose herewith for your information a copy of a joint letter of Messrs. Brown Brothers and Company and Messrs. J. and W. Seligman and Company, transmitting correspondence with Messrs. F. C. Harrison and Charles A. Conant, in regard to a proposed loan to Nicaragua by the Brown and Seligman companies, and the railway and canal projects which are being considered in connection therewith.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

[Inclosure.]

Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, February 21, 1912.

SIR: We beg to refer to our letter of November 2, 1911, informing you of our temporary loan of $1,500,000 to the Republic of Nicaragua. The purpose of that loan was to enable the Government to withdraw from circulation its depreciated paper currency, to substitute therefor a stable currency and to establish a government bank. We were assured, at the time, that the paper currency outstanding represented a total of 32,000,000 "pesos," and the amount of the temporary loan was made upon that basis.

In accordance with the loan contract, a copy of which accompanied our letter to you of November 2nd, Messrs. F. C. Harrison and Charles A. Conant, currency experts, went to Nicaragua to study currency conditions and to prepare a plan for introducing and maintaining a stable currency system. Upon their arrival in Managua, Messrs. Harrison and Conant ascertained that, since the visit to that country of Mr. Ernest H. Wands in March of 1911, the Government had issued additional currency amounting to 16,000,000 pesos and that the outstanding circulation, instead of being 32,000,000 pesos as we supposed, was in reality 48,000,000 pesos. It soon became apparent that the $1,500,000 which Nicaragua had borrowed from us would be insufficient to meet the situation. Messrs. Harrison and Conant also reported to us that the Government was in immediate need of funds for its current expenses. We thus found ourselves face to face with a situation which had been forced upon us, and much against our will we took up negotiations with the Government for the purpose of helping it out of its embarrassments. As a result of such negotiations, we have offered to make further temporary loans not exceeding $755,000, to be secured by certain revenues and properties of the Government. In consideration of the loans thus to be made, the Government has offered us an option for the purchase of a 51 per cent interest in its railway and steamship lines; these lines it proposes to transfer to an American railway corporation which shall receive a concession substantially similar to the railway concession "Schedule D," annexed to the "Treasury Bills Agreement" of September 1, 1911, a copy of which is on file in the Department.

No agreement has as yet been signed for the new loans, but the terms upon which these are to be made are fully set forth in a proposed Act of the Nicaraguan Constitutional Assembly, a copy if which is embodied in a cablegram to Messrs. Harrison and Conant dated February 16th last. We enclose, for your information, copy of translation of that cablegram[1] into English.

As further bearing upon the subject, we also enclose copy of the translation of another cablegram to Messrs. Harrison and Conant, dated February 20th.[1]

One feature of the proposed concession is in the improvement of the San Juan River and in the construction of small canals suitable for barges to connect the two Great Lakes of Nicaragua with each other and also to connect the San Juan river with the Atlantic ocean. The suggestion as to these provisions emanated from the Government of Nicaragua, and the purpose of such provisions is thus explained by Messrs. Harrison and Conant, who in a cablegram addressed to us say substantially as follows:

"Your railway (referring to the railway which it is suggested we shall help the Government to build and which it is intended shall connect Lake Nicaragua with Rama, near the Atlantic Coast) ends either on the Great Lake or at Managua. In the first case you are at the mercy of a lake system; in the second case you are entangled in through rates. If you can control the present railways and steamers you can command the Pacific and Atlantic traffic, and until the Panama Canal is opened up you will be placed in a strong position for Pacific, Honduras and Salvador business and can probably retain the traffic once gained. The engineer who managed the lake steamers for years was with both Canal Commission surveys and has estimated that the cost of connecting the lake and the river San Juan fit for seagoing barges of five-foot draft will be somewhere between two and three million dollars. If this estimate should be corroborated by a competent engineer, the highest cost would presumably be less than the Rama route."

We do not know whether the above views are sound, and we have as yet formed no opinion as to the value or desirability of such a system as is suggested. As, however, our acceptance of the security and of the option in no way commits us to take action in the premises, we have seen no objection to the inclusion in the concession of the special features referred to.

Very respectfully yours,

BROWN BROTHERS AND COMPANY.
J. AND W. SELIGMAN AND COMPANY.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 817.51/395.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Managua, March 20, 1912.

The currency-plan and supplementary-loan bill, with the canal feature cut out, was passed yesterday by the Assembly, which ratified that action today.

The bankers' representatives now threaten not to accept the contract without insertion of a first option on canal construction if this is undertaken.

I strongly recommend urging bankers to accept amended contract, according to their understanding with the Department as per your February 26.

Weitzel.

File No. 817.51/396.

The Acting Secretary of State to the President.

Department of State,
Washington, March 21, 1912.

Dear Mr. President: I am happy to be able to inform you that the Department has just received a telegram from Mr. Weitzel, American Minister to Nicaragua, to the effect that the Assembly of that country on the 19th instant passed, by a vote of twenty-two to three, the plan of currency reform, and also the bill providing for the supplementary loan of $725,000 from the American bankers; and that the following morning, on a motion to approve this action, the Assembly ratified the same, although the bill was slightly amended in a way unobjectionable to the bankers.

Mr. Weitzel has also sent a later telegram, which, paraphrased, reads as follows:

> March 20, 6 p. m. Nicaragua, by passing the legislation necessary for the monetary reform, has again demonstrated its good faith in requesting the friendly assistance of the United States in establishing its finances upon a firm basis, and in putting an end to the ruinous fluctuations of the Nicaraguan currency. The well-known currency expert, Mr. Charles A. Conant, after several months of earnest study of the monetary and financial situation in Nicaragua, has evolved what will undoubtedly prove to be a most satisfactory working plan for the much needed currency reform.
>
> The people of Nicaragua are now anxiously waiting the response of the United States to their call for aid, and they most earnestly hope that the Senate of the United States may approve the loan convention, and thus confer upon them the full benefits of the reorganization of their political and financial system, which during the seventeen years of arbitrary and corrupt government under Zelaya were plunged into disorder bordering on anarchy.
>
> Reforms just enacted by the Nicaraguan Assembly have the general support of all classes, with the exception of the few persons identified with the Zelaya régime, of the speculators and of the English and other foreign bankers who profit by their control of the internal loans.
>
> While there are still in Nicaragua professional revolutionists who might welcome a rejection of the treaty, Mr. Weitzel is led by his experience in Nicaragua to believe that the Nicaraguan people as a whole are honestly desirous of securing peace in order to develop their country, and to share in the benefits which will accrue to them by reason of their close proximity to the Panama Canal.

This is but one more proof that the people of Nicaragua not only approve but desire the loan convention, and would seem sufficient to refute effectively any statements to the contrary. I hope that the above information may be of use to you in your efforts to make clear the great urgency of immediate favorable action on the convention, and I am sure that you will be glad to hear not only of the action of the Nicaraguan Assembly, but also of the conclusions, fully concurred in by the Department, which Mr. Weitzel has drawn therefrom.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 817.51/395.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 22, 1912.

Bankers have definitely instructed their representatives to drop canal feature.

WILSON.

File No. 817.51/418.

Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, April 2, 1912.

SIR: Referring to our letter[1] to you of February 21st, 1912, in which we advised you of the negotiations then pending between the Republic of Nicaragua and ourselves, relating to certain supplemental loans to the Republic in addition to the temporary loan of $1,500,000, theretofore made by us,[2] we beg to state that as a result of these negotiations we entered into an agreement with the Republic on March 26th, 1912, by which we undertook to make further temporary loans to the Republic to an amount not exceeding $775,000. We beg to hand you herewith a copy of the agreement referred to.[1]

Respectfully yours,

BROWN BROTHERS AND COMPANY.
J. AND W. SELIGMAN AND COMPANY.

File No. 817.51/427.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 17.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, April 7, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith three copies of the Official Gazette, dated March 30, 1912, containing Spanish text of the new currency law[1] enacted by the National Assembly of Nicaragua on March 20, 1912, as reported in my telegram of that date. I am also transmitting a copy of a letter[1] addressed to me by Mr. Conant, the currency expert, with its enclosure of the English text of said law as prepared by the bankers who have the loan and monetary matters in charge.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] See letter of November 2, 1911.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.51/428.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 18.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, April 7, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith triplicate copies of the Official Gazette, dated March 29, 1912, containing Spanish text of the law enacted on March 20, 1912,[1] by the Nicaraguan National Assembly, authorizing an additional supplementary [loan?] of Brown Brothers and Company, and J. and W. Seligman and Company, of New York, as reported in my telegram of the latter mentioned date. No translation thereof has been made, as I am informed that the Department has already been furnished with the official English text prepared by the bankers.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.51/451.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 35.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, May 17, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my telegram of May 11, 11 a. m.,[1] I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy and translation of the measure[1] passed by the National Assembly authorizing the President of Nicaragua to make a settlement of the Ethelburga loan.

In that same connection I enclose a copy[1] of a telegram given to me by the President, the English text of which is probably already before the Department. It is dated May 12, 1912, addressed by Brown Brothers to their local representative, and contains the terms of the Ethelburga settlement, as reported in my telegram of May 14, 4 p. m.[1]

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.51/440.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, May 22, 1912.

The Minister of Finance and the Nicaraguan member of the Mixed Claims Commission came to me today by the President's direction to urge the need for $900,000 gold at once to tide over the present crisis. Of this sum $650,000 are for "gold debts" payable without reference to Mixed Claims Commission; $200,000 for arrearages in salaries to employees who threaten a strike that would be serious; and $50,000 miscellaneous.

---

[1] Not printed.

The proceeds of the Ethelburga settlement will not go to the Government, nor will it be granted any future loans until January.

I suggest three bases for discussion: (1) an advance to Nicaragua of proceeds of Ethelburga settlement; or (2) a new loan based on collection of the internal revenue under Dr. Thayer; or (3) the exercise of the option to purchase the Government railroad for $1,000,000 cash.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.51/447.

Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, June 3rd, 1912.

SIR: Referring to our letter [1] to you of December 13th last, we beg to say that owing to the failure of the Ethelburga Syndicate, Limited, to carry out the contract of December 9th, therein referred to, the same became inoperative some months ago. We have recently negotiated on behalf of Nicaragua new contracts on the same subject with the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders, and beg to hand you herewith for your information copies [1] of the following instruments:

(1) Contract dated May 25, 1912, between the Republic of Nicaragua and the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders, containing principally such portions of the proposed settlement as affect the holders of 1909 Bonds.

(2) Another contract, also dated May 25, 1912, between the Republic of Nicaragua and the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders, to the original of which a copy of the above contract (1) is annexed as "Schedule A."

(3) Letter dated May 25, 1912, from the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders to Brown Brothers and Co. and J. and W. Seligman and Co., representing the Republic of Nicaragua.

(4) Letter dated May 25, 1912, from the Republic of Nicaragua and Brown Brothers and Co. and J. and W. Seligman and Co. to the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders.

(5) Contract dated May 25, 1912, between the Republic of Nicaragua and Brown Brothers and Co. and J. and W. Seligman and Co., to the original of which Contracts (1) and (2) and of Letter (3) above mentioned, are annexed as "Schedules L, K and Y" respectively.

The above contracts were all expressly authorized by the Republic of Nicaragua.

Respectfully yours,

BROWN BROTHERS AND COMPANY.
J. AND W. SELIGMAN AND COMPANY.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 817.51/450.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 8, 1912.

Wands transmits from Paris the recommendation yesterday of the French bondholders' committee to accept plan for settlement of the 1909 loan question.

Similar action yesterday by the committee of the council of foreign bondholders of London.

Wands requests that Schoenrich be informed that the matter he referred to in letter of April 13 can probably be arranged.

At the Department yesterday Mallet-Prévost seemed hopeful of early relief for Nicaragua.

KNOX.

File No. 817.51/465.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram—Extract.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, June 29, 1912.

The bankers' delay has compelled the Government of Nicaragua to make certain internal loans the conditions of which are improvident if not unconscionable.

, WEITZEL.

File No. 817.51/487.

Brown Brothers and Company and J. W. Seligman and Company to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, August 2, 1912.

DEAR SIR: On behalf of the National Bank of Nicaragua, incorporated, we beg to hand you herewith, for your information, copy of a letter which we have today written to Ernest H. Wands, Esquire, Financial Agent of Nicaragua, and copy of his reply.

In making the loan to which those letters refer, we assume that the Bank, in case of necessity, will receive the same measure of protection which may be afforded to us in connection with loans heretofore made by us to Nicaragua under the Treasury Bills Agreement of September 1, 1911, and the Supplemental Loan Agreement of March 26, 1912.

We remain [etc.]

BROWN BROTHERS AND COMPANY.
J. AND W. SELIGMAN AND COMPANY.

[Inclosure 1.]

Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company to the Financial Agent of Nicaragua.

New York, August 2, 1912.

Dear Sir: We are today in receipt of a telegram from the President of Nicaragua, requesting us to make an immediate loan of $100,000 to his Government for the purpose of enabling it to reestablish order.

As you are aware, the National Bank of Nicaragua, recently incorporated pursuant to the terms of the Treasury Bills Agreement of September 1, 1911, opened for business at Managua on August 1st. The entire capital stock of that Bank is pledged with us as security for the various loans which we have heretofore made to the Republic, and under the terms of our agreement with Nicaragua, the Bank is under our management and control. The Bank has, or can procure, the funds necessary to make the loan above referred to, and we are disposed, in that form to comply with the request of President Díaz. Before doing so, however, we desire to know whether such a step would meet with your approval as the Financial Agent of Nicaragua. If this loan should be made, we beg to inform you that it is our intention to file a copy of this letter and of your reply with the Department of State at Washington, in order that the loan may receive the same measure of protection which the United States Government will doubtless extend to the loans heretofore made by us.

Yours very truly,

Brown Brothers and Company,
J. and W. Seligman and Company,

[Inclosure 2.]

The Financial Agent of Nicaragua to Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company.

New York, August 2, 1912.

Dear Sirs: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of this date with reference to a loan of $100,000 proposed to be made to the Government of Nicaragua by the National Bank of Nicaragua, Incorporated.

In reply, I beg to say that the proposed loan meets with my entire approval.

Very truly yours,

Ernest H. Wands.

Note.—On August 5, 1912, the text of the loan convention between the United States and Nicaragua (see p. 1074) was made public.

File No. 817.51/487.

The Acting Secretary of State to Brown Brothers and Company and J and W. Seligman and Company.

Department of State,
Washington, August 19, 1912.

Gentlemen: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your letter of the 2d instant in which, on behalf of the National Bank of Nicaragua, Incorporated, you transmit, for the information of the Department, a copy of a letter dated August 2d to Ernest H. Wands, Esquire, Financial Agent of Nicaragua, relative to an immediate loan of $100,000 requested by the President of Nicaragua, and a copy of Mr. Wands' reply thereto.

In reply you are informed that this Government always exercises every proper effort to protect legitimate interests abroad insofar as the particular facts and circumstances of the given case may warrant. However, you will of course appreciate that this Department could not undertake in any way to guarantee investments of American capital in foreign countries. Moreover, it should be stated that it is the custom of the Department to decline to express an opinion as to the attitude which it might take with reference to anticipated occurrences which might, under the rules and regulations prescribed by international law, warrant representations by this Government in behalf of its citizens.

I am [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 817.51/499.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, September 14, 1912.

There is urgent need of money to pay troops and meet other legitimate expenses necessarily incurred in putting down disorders. But recourse to internal loans would be decidedly unpopular and inadvisable. Therefore I strongly recommend that bankers advance additional sums on equitable terms for at least three months, during which normal conditions will probably be established.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.51/503.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, September 23, 1912.

The Government is fast losing control of the situation. It is extremely unfortunate that additional loan mentioned in my September 10 [1] has not been agreed to by the bankers. There is immediate need for $50,000, but the Government has no means of raising it except through the bankers or by levying contributions; the latter was the rebels' method and should be avoided by the Government.

The President offers three alternative propositions: (1) an advance of $50,000 gold from customs revenues, the bankers to reimburse themselves from some source under the supplementary contract; (2) exercise by the bankers of their option on 51 per cent of railroad under an agreement to advance $100,000 monthly for five months and the remainder at a time to be agreed upon; (3) an advance of $100,000 monthly for five months and an option on the remaining 49 per cent of the railroad at a valuation of $1,000,000.

WEITZEL.

---

[1] Not printed; see September 14.

File No. 817.51/505.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 26, 1912.

The following just received from the bankers:

> The plan we submitted, and accepted by Nicaragua, involved no delay and will, we trust, be promptly adopted.

WILSON.

File No. 817.51/515.

Brown Brothers and Company and J. and W. Seligman and Company to the Secretary of State.

NEW YORK, November 13, 1912.

SIR: Referring to your telegrams[1] to us of Sept. 16th and Sept. 25th, and our telegrams to you of Sept. 17th[1] 25th[1] and 26th, we beg to say that the negotiations with the Government of Nicaragua therein referred to have resulted in an agreement between the Republic and ourselves, dated November 4th, 1912, a copy[1] of which we enclose herewith for your information.

In accordance with the provisions of this agreement, we have already released and turned over to the Republic $100,000 of the customs moneys heretofore collected, and out of the moneys received as the result of the Ethelburga Syndicate settlement have set aside $400,000 which we now hold as a separate fund under the agreement to be paid over to the Republic in installments at such times and in such amounts as may be agreed upon between the President of the Republic and us.

Respectfully yours,

BROWN BROTHERS AND COMPANY.
J. AND W. SELIGMAN AND COMPANY.

NATURALIZATION CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND NICARAGUA.

Signed at Managua, December 7, 1908; ratification advised by the Senate January 21, 1909; ratified by the President March 1, 1909; ratified by Nicaragua March 28, 1912; ratifications exchanged at Managua March 28, 1912; proclaimed May 10, 1912.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a Naturalization Convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Nicaragua was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at Managua, on the seventh day of December, one thousand nine hundred and eight, the original of which Convention, being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

---

[1] Not printed.

The President of the United States of America and the President of the Republic of Nicaragua, desiring to regulate the citizenship of those persons who emigrate from the United States of America to Nicaragua, and from Nicaragua to the United States of America, have resolved to conclude a Convention on this subject and for that purpose have appointed their Plenipotentiaries to conclude a Convention, that is to say: the President of the United States of America, John Hanaford Gregory Jr., Chargé d'Affaires ad interim of the United States at Managua, and the President of Nicaragua, Rodolfo Espinosa R., Minister for Foreign Affairs, who having exchanged their full powers, found in good and due form have agreed to and signed the following articles.

Article I.

1. Citizens of the United States who have been or may be voluntarily naturalized in Nicaragua in conformity with the laws thereof, shall be considered and treated by the Government of the United States as citizens of Nicaragua.

2. Reciprocally, citizens of Nicaragua who have been or may be voluntarily naturalized in the United States in conformity with the laws thereof, shall be considered and treated by the Government of Nicaragua as citizens of the United States.

Article II.

1. If a citizen of the United States naturalized in Nicaragua renews his residence in the United States without the intention to return to Nicaragua, it shall be considered that he has renounced his citizenship in Nicaragua.

2. Reciprocally, if a citizen of Nicaragua naturalized in the United States renews his residence in Nicaragua without intention to return to the United States it shall be deemed that he has renounced his citizenship in the United States.

3. The intention not to return shall be deemed to exist when a person naturalized in one of the two countries resides for more than two years continuously in the other country; however, such presumption may be destroyed by evidence to the contrary.

Article III.

A mere declaration of intention to become naturalized in either country shall not, in either country, have the effect of legally acquired citizenship.

Article IV.

Citizens naturalized in one of the two countries and returning to the country of their origin shall be subject to trial and punishment in the latter for any punishable act committed before their emigration, but not for the act of emigrating itself, always excepting cases of limitation or any other remission of liability.

ARTICLE V.

It is agreed between both parties to define the word "citizenship," as used in this Convention, to mean the status of a person possessing the nationality of the United States or Nicaragua.

ARTICLE VI.

The present Convention shall be in force for a period of ten years from the date of the exchange of ratifications. If, one year before the expiration of this period, neither of the parties gives notice to the other that it shall expire, it shall continue in force until twelve months after such notice is given.

ARTICLE VII.

The present Convention shall be ratified constitutionally by each country, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Washington or at Managua within two years from date at the latest.

Done in Managua the seventh of December one thousand nine hundred and eight, sealed and signed in two copies of same tenor in English and Spanish.

JOHN HANAFORD GREGORY Jr. [SEAL.]
RODOLFO ESPINOSA R. [SEAL.]

And whereas the said Convention has been duly ratified on both parts, and the ratifications of the two Governments were exchanged in the City of Managua, on the twenty-eighth day of March, one thousand nine hundred and twelve;

Now, therefore, be it known that I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, have caused the said Convention to be made public, to the end that the same and every article and clause thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this tenth day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve, and of [SEAL.] the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-sixth.

WM. H. TAFT.

By the President:
HUNTINGTON WILSON
Acting Secretary of State.

Supplementary Naturalization Convention between the United States and Nicaragua.

Signed at Managua, June 17, 1911; ratification advised by the Senate, August 15, 1911; ratified by the President, January 24, 1912; ratified by Nicaragua, March 28, 1912; ratifications exchanged at Managua, March 28, 1912; proclaimed, May 10, 1912.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a Supplementary Convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Nicaragua extending the time within which may be exchanged the ratifications of the Naturalization Convention between the two countries signed at Managua, December 7, 1908, was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at Managua on the seventeenth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and eleven, the original of which Supplementary Convention, being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

The President of the United States of America and the President of the Republic of Nicaragua, considering it expedient to prolong the period in which, by article VII of the Naturalization Convention signed by the respective plenipotentiaries of the United States and Nicaragua at Managua on December 7, 1908, the exchange of the ratifications of the said Convention shall be effected, have for that purpose appointed their respective plenipotentiaries, namely:

The President of the United States of America, Elliott Northcott, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America; and the President of the Republic of Nicaragua, Tomás Martínez, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Nicaragua,

Who, after having communicated each to the other their respective full powers, which were found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the following additional and amendatory article to be taken as a part of the said Convention:

Sole Article.

The respective ratifications of the said Convention shall be exchanged at Washington or at Managua as soon as possible and within two years from December 7, 1910.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present Supplementary and Amendatory Convention in duplicate in the English and Spanish languages and have hereunto affixed their seals.

Done at Managua this seventeenth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eleven.

Elliott Northcott.
Tomás Martínez.

[seal.]

And whereas the said Supplementary Convention has been duly ratified on both parts, and the ratifications of the two Governments were exchanged in the City of Managua, on the twenty-eighth day of March, one thousand nine hundred and twelve;

Now, therefore, be it known that I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, have caused the said Supplementary Convention to be made public, to the end that the same may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this tenth day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve,
[SEAL.] and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-sixth.

WM. H. TAFT.

By the President:
HUNTINGTON WILSON
Acting Secretary of State.

VISIT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO NICARAGUA.

File No. 033.1100 K77/6.]

The Minister of Nicaragua to the Acting Secretary of State.

LEGATION OF NICARAGUA,
Washington, February 15, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge your note of February 13[1] in which you advise me that, impressed with the importance of the relations between the United States and the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea, the President has directed the Secretary of State to visit the capitals of the Republics referred to, stopping also at the capitals of Venezuela and Panama and probably visiting Mexico and Colombia as well.

And you add that you reserve for a later communication the information of the precise date of the visit of the Secretary of State to Nicaragua.

I want to express our great appreciation of this visit and how much obliged we are to the President of the United States and to the Secretary of State, who will honor my country as it has never before been honored by so powerful a nation.

I have communicated with Managua, and the President has directed me to say that the Government and people of Nicaragua are rejoicing greatly over this happy event.

We are sure that the visit of the Secretary of State, the first in the history of my country, will benefit us immensely and will establish forever the cordial relations between the United States and the Central American Republics; and I am also convinced that these countries will be proud of such a distinction and courtesy, and that they will make in the future every effort to deserve such an honor and to prove themselves worthy of so significant and friendly a demonstration.

Accept [etc.]

SALVADOR CASTRILLO.

---

[1] The identic letter printed under Panama: "Visit of the Secretary of State to the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea," p. 1240.

File No. 033.1100 K 77/100.]

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 10.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, February 23, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose copy, with translation, of notes exchanged with the Foreign Office and with President Díaz regarding the visit to Nicaragua of Mr. Knox and his party. I am also transmitting the program of his entertainment [1] and an official decree of the Government extending to him presidential honors.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Minister to the Nicaraguan Minister for Foreign Affairs.

F. O. 4] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, February 16, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your Excellency that I am in receipt of a telegraphic instruction from my Government regarding the proximate visit to Nicaragua of the Honorable the Secretary of State of the United States.

My Government is deeply impressed with the importance of the relation between the United States and the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea happily so friendly and grown closer and more intimate with the approach of the opening of the Panama Canal from which so many mutual benefits to our countries are hoped, and therefore the President has directed the Secretary of State to visit the capitals of these several Republics stopping also at the capitals of Venezuela and Panama and possibly others of the Southern Republics.

The final decision of the President was made so shortly before the departure of Mr. Knox for Florida that it was not possible to give this Legation precise information of the Secretary's plans and therefore the Department has reserved the details of the Secretary's itinerary and the length of his stay in Nicaragua for a later communication.

However before leaving Washington Mr. Knox requested that the Legation be assured of the great pleasure with which he looks forward to his visit in this country and to the opportunity for personally knowing President Díaz and the members of his Government in that way signalizing the particular importance attached by President Taft to those relations of cordial amity which it is the aim of the United States to cultivate with Nicaragua.

Accept [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

[Inclosure 2.—Extract.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Managua, February 17, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's important note of the 16th instant wherein you are pleased to inform me [etc.]

My Government has welcomed your courteous announcement with marks of high satisfaction, and feels that an occurrence of such importance is not only an event of honor for Nicaragua, but that it will redound in great benefit to the welfare of the Central-American Republics and make more intimate, if possible, the friendly relations which so happily exist between Nicaragua and the United States.

---

[1] Not printed.

It will give my Government great pleasure to receive Mr. Knox as much for his high personal qualities as for his eminent official position as representative of the American Government and people, for whom the Government and people of Nicaragua cherish sentiments of unstinted admiration and goodwill; and also the members of his family and party as guests of the nation; and to lavish upon them the signal attentions which are due their high rank and position.

While venturing to request that your Excellency inform this Ministry of any news relative to the trip of Mr. Knox to Nicaragua, which my Government would regard as true evidence of friendship on the part of your Government, I take advantage of this occasion to renew [etc.]

J. A. URTECHO.

[Inclosure 3.—Translation.]

The President of Nicaragua to the American Minister.

NATIONAL PALACE,
Managua, February 18, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I am performing a most pleasant duty in offering to the Secretary of State, Mr. Philander C. Knox, and to his distinguished family through the worthy medium of your excellency the presidential house for the residence of the illustrious guests during their approaching visit to Nicaragua.

Believe, Mr. Minister, in the sincerity of this offer, which I make for the better comfort of the notable travelers, and which, saving your better judgment, resolves satisfactorily a detail quite important for the welfare of these honorable guests of the Nation.

I beg you, Mr. Minister, when honoring me with your reply, not to entertain any unjustifiable fear of occasioning inconvenience, since even now the necessary dispositions have been made in the hope that your valued reply will be favorable.

I take [etc.]

ADOLFO DÍAZ.

[Inclosure 4.]

The American Minister to the President of Nicaragua.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, February 18, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: It is very gratifying to me to be able to express my deep appreciation of the very courteous spirit of your note to-day offering the use of the presidential mansion to the Secretary of State and his family during their visit in this capital.

I shall be glad to convey your message to Mr. Knox and I have no doubt of the warm response that will be evoked by this new evidence of the hospitality for which Nicaragua is so well known, and of the delicate kindliness that distinguishes Your Excellency.

I am [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

[Inclosure 5.—Translation.]

Decree of the Government of Nicaragua.

The President of the Republic, considering that His Excellency the Secretary of State of the United States of America, Mr. Philander C. Knox, will honor Nicaragua with a visit during the first days of the coming March; that, because he is the welcome representative of the American Government and people and because of his high official position, the highest considerations are due to him by the Government and people of Nicaragua; that it is therefore appropriate to make a signal show of friendship to the American people, to His Excellency the President of the United States, Mr. W. H. Taft, an expression of recognition of the deferential courtesy of the visit of His Excellency the Secretary of State, Mr. Philander C. Knox, and to this renowned official a cordial manifestation of the goodwill and admiration of the Nicaraguan Government and people—

In Council of Ministers decrees:

ARTICLE 1. The day on which His Excellency the Secretary of State enters this capital shall be a holiday.

ARTICLE 2. The Honorable the Secretary of State, his family, and party, are hereby declared to be guests of the nation.

ARTICLE 3. A reception committee shall be formed as an annex to the Foreign Office, under the authority of Dr. Máximo H. Cepeda. This committee will be charged with personally attending to the honorable guests, drawing up a program of entertainment, and with such other details as may be necessary in this connection.

ARTICLE 4. To His Excellency, Mr. Knox, during his stay in Nicaragua, the honors of a President of the Republic are hereby extended.

PRESIDENTIAL MANSION, Managua, February 21, 1912.—Adolfo Díaz.
Minister of Gobernación, Justicia y Gracia, Miguel Cardenas.
Minister of Hacienda y Crédito Público, Pedro Raf. Cuadra.
Minister for Foreign Affairs and Public Instruction (acting), J. A. Urtecho.
Minister of War and Marine, Luis Mena.
Minister of Fomento and Public Works (acting), Arturo Solorzano.

Speech of Mr. Knox at the railroad station at Managua, Nicaragua, March 5, 1912.[1]

MR. MAYOR, LADIES, AND GENTLEMEN:

My especial regret at this moment is that I have not an acquaintance with the beautiful language of your good people which will enable me to respond in fitting terms to your words of welcome. I can not take any other meaning from them, however, than that you have extended to me a kindly greeting, and in the name of the people of my country and of the President of the United States I sincerely thank you. It is not only a privilege to be here, but a great satisfaction to stand in this capital city and look into the eyes of the people for whom my friendship has always been great. I appreciate the honor that was done me by the citizens of Nicaragua in sending to the seashore so many of your distinguished men and beautiful women to greet us at the threshold of your country, and I am sincerely thankful to the municipal authorities of the city of Managua, as well as the authorities of the Republic, not only for myself but for my party, for my people, and for my President for the great cordiality you have shown me.

Speech of His Excellency Don Adolfo Díaz, President of Nicaragua, welcoming Mr. Knox, Managua, March 6, 1912.

[Translation.]

MR. SECRETARY:

You are in a country where your name has long been known, because on a memorable occasion for our liberty you linked it with the history of our struggles for advancement by an act of justice of the American Government, inspired by the sentiment of that great people which abhors tyranny not only within its own frontiers, but in every place to which it may carry the beneficent influence of its policy.

As an admirer of that policy by reason of its evident results in other fortunate Latin countries, I live in the firm intention of accepting that friendly influence so long as I myself have any influence in the destinies of my country, whether as a ruler or as a citizen.

---

[1] The Secretary did not receive a copy of the speech to which this is a reply.

Unfortunate has been the existence of Central American democracy. A prolonged and bloody struggle has consumed the vigorous life of these nations during almost an entire century of sterile uprisings. To refer only to my own country; it has been a republic for almost a hundred years without having known republican methods in all that time, except at brief intervals. Our political struggles have unfortunately not been a luminous contest of ideas and principles; they have been a terrible duel between despotism, on one hand, and, on the other, the ill-directed efforts of the people in search of happiness never attained—a duel, a horrible duel, which has at length left the Republic, if not dead, at least almost utterly exhausted.

Horrible disasters have happened among us which have been viewed, if not with indifference, at least with passive calmness by the rest of the civilized world, because in international regulations the selfish doctrine has prevailed that in the matter of good government each nation should concern itself only with its own people, as if those who suffer the oppression of tyranny were not human beings, like other unfortunates to whom succor is never denied among Christians. This doctrine, thanks principally to the United States, is disappearing among nations to give place to the more generous one of mutual assistance.

In the light of these principles I entered the revolution of Bluefields with firm faith, a faith maintained unchanged even amidst the greatest vicissitudes of that terrible war, because I knew that we were engaged not in one of the many uprisings, vain efforts, common in our disorganization, without positive results, but in a real revolution, an absolute overthrow not only of the despot but also of his baneful system, and thereafter a triumph of justice and the establishment of order and lasting peace in Nicaragua.

I knew then, and I believe to-day, notwithstanding my transition from a revolutionist to a member of the Government, that this happy outcome can not be obtained without the assistance of your country. We are weak and we need your strong help for the regeneration of our debilitated land. The hand which your Government generously and fraternally extends to us I accept without reserve or fear, for I know it belongs to a people which has made a religion of liberty and, educated in and for freedom, loves its independence above everything and respects the independence of others.

In this work for the welfare of Nicaragua, increasing the hope of its ultimate success, your name is pledged. It has been connected, to the joy of our people, with two of our principal events: With your famous note, in which, as the mouthpiece of civilization, you pronounced the doom of tyranny before the world, and with the treaty you signed in Washington with our Minister Castrillo, the clauses of which are a guaranty of peace, the basis of a future of prosperity and order, and the confirmation of which by the American Senate all good Nicaraguans are to-day anxiously awaiting in order to enter tranquilly upon the enjoyment of their assured rights and the anticipation of that future of development and wealth.

The name of your worthy President, William H. Taft, and your own name are pronounced by all Nicaraguans, from the statesman to the humblest countryman, as though they were names of personages of our fatherland, due to the fact that every day the bonds are becoming closer between your great and happy country and my own small country, worthy, however, of equal happiness because it consists of a generous race inhabiting a rich land.

This sincere friendship between the powerful and the weak is meritorious for both—for the one because of its altruism; for the other because of its confidence. Yes, sir, unlimited confidence in the proven morality of the American Government, and even greater confidence in the people of your great nation, who in every circumstance would be the first and most earnest defenders of justice for the weak, even against their own Government.

In this new political life of Nicaragua, which, scarcely begun, is already showing the effect of almost forgotten liberties—in this work of regeneration you have been one of the most active agents, bringing to us at this opportune moment of our transformation the influence of your power without offending us with your strength. For this reason you may count upon firm affection in Nicaragua; for this reason you are received like an old acquaintance, and I, in the name of the people and of the Government of Nicaragua, greet you cordially, and hope your sojourn may be pleasant in this country, where your name signifies an ideal.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES, AND GENTLEMEN:

On behalf of the Government and people of the United States permit me to express my sincere appreciation and thanks for your kindly greeting. I have come to Nicaragua to express to you the keen feeling of neighborly sympathy entertained by my Government for the Government and people of Nicaragua, and it is indeed a pleasure to meet you here and be privileged to speak to you face to face.

Thanks to the frank and most cordial relations which happily exist between our respective countries our people are rapidly becoming more deeply interested in the welfare and development and consequent prosperity of Nicaragua, and are more than ever before manifesting a desire to cultivate even closer and more intimate relations. Movements toward closer association and truer friendship between the peoples of different countries are not arbitrarily created by outward efforts: they spring from within. Their primary impulse is the growing conviction of neighboring countries that the development and prosperity of each is in harmony with the advancement of the welfare of all. Such movements are tremendously facilitated by the confidence and friendship that follows acquaintance, and that fact is the inspiration of my mission.

Although the interest of the people of the United States in the welfare of your country is keen there is not and never has been any desire either on the part of the American Government or people to mix unduly or unbidden in the internal affairs of Nicaragua, but to the request for assistance in the regeneration of Nicaragua my Government was happy promptly to respond.

The political and economic situation that had arisen, due to many years of misrule, rendered the task of reorganization of your Government exceedingly difficult, and your leaders, because of the frank friendship and good faith of the United States toward the Nicaraguan people as a whole, naturally turned to the American Government for council and assistance in the arduous task before them. My Government was glad to send to Managua a special commissioner to aid in making a fixed program which the leaders pledged themselves to carry out and in which was contemplated loyal cooperation in the rehabilitation of Nicaragua. The Government of the United States was glad to suggest, upon the invitation of Nicaragua, a competent financial adviser who should make a careful study of the economic conditions of the country and counsel the Government of Nicaragua as to the best methods to be pursued in dealing with this most difficult and important problem, and also to assist you in devising means to be adopted to deal with the claims against Nicaragua and to dispose in an adequate and just manner of the outstanding and legally or economically unsound and ruinous concessions.

The United States was likewise, upon your invitation, glad to conclude a convention with Nicaragua which will provide a sufficient measure of security for a new foreign loan, essential for your financial reorganization and internal public improvements. While this convention is still pending before the United States Senate it has become necessary for Nicaragua to make some provision for the immediate reformation of the local currency, and in order to accomplish this a short-time loan has been negotiated and my Government has gladly approved the name of an American collector general of customs, who has been appointed by the Government of Nicaragua.

The Nicaraguan people are to be congratulated that they have at the head of the nation a man quick to realize the necessities of the country and of courage sufficient to expeditiously set on foot the best and surest means of meeting the country's needs.

It must here be remembered that the progress already made and the continuance of Nicaragua along the path to national regeneration depend almost entirely upon the preservation of peace and contentment in the country, and that the surest means of reaching this end is the faithful observance of the pledges made by the leaders of all parties.

In the zone of the Caribbean the responsibilities of the United States are becoming increasingly great as the opening of the great waterway which is to change the trade routes of the world draws nearer and the desire of the United States to see order and prosperity becomes even more intensified. We are especially interested in the prosperity of all the people of Nicaragua. Their prosperity means contentment and contentment means repose. The United States have always cherished sentiments of the warmest regard and most cordial esteem for the people of Nicaragua, and from the very commencement of the independent existence of Nicaragua the Government of the United States has steadfastly adhered to the traditional policy that found expression in the words of President Monroe and which indicated a sympathetic interest in seeing this country develop and progress unrestricted and unfettered by the interference of foreign nations. Encouraged by that sympathy Nicaragua was able to add to its jurisdiction a strip of territory along the Atlantic coast which, with the establishment of better means of communication between the eastern and western portions of the country, will add greatly to the resources and the political prestige of the Republic. The people of the United States most earnestly desire that Nicaragua should steadily advance to that place in the family of nations to which its situation, its wealth, and the capacity of its people for self-government justly entitle it, and in that spirit of cordial good will and warm friendship the Government of the United States stands prepared to lend such counsel and assistance as may be requested and as may be proper in the establishment of a government calculated to maintain order, enforce law, discharge its international obligations, and promote peace, progress, and prosperity.

I was much impressed, sir, by the lofty standard Nicaragua has set for herself, so eloquently expressed by you in your gracious words of welcome to our Minister, whom you have so recently received. When you assured him that Nicaragua "had established as a firm base of government the respect for human life, the absolute right to property, the suppression of the odious system of forced contributions, the complete independence of the courts, the freedom of the press, and the observance of all individual guaranties", you justly concluded that these facts were "eloquent testimony of the unvarying purpose that animates the Government of Nicaragua to be faithful to its international obligations and to the promises of liberty and justice given to its citizens."

It has probably never happened that neighboring countries, which have been more or less afflicted with international and internal troubles of frequent recurrence arising from similar causes, have adopted such radical and effective means for their prevention as did the five Central American republics in the three treaties signed at Washington in 1907 under the friendly counsel and sympathy of the United States and Mexico.

By the convention for the establishment of a Central American Court of Justice they bound themselves to create and maintain a permanent tribunal and to submit to it all controversies and questions which may arise among them of whatever nature. By the general treaty of peace and amity they agreed to the maintenance of peace in their mutual relations, and to that end, taking into consideration the central geographical position of Honduras, they stipulated for its complete neutrality in event of conflict between the other republics, and, in order to remove one of the most frequent sources of trouble, provision was made calculated to suppress revolutionary activity on the part of the residents in adjacent republics. By the addition to that convention, and for the purpose of further discouraging and preventing internal disturbances in the five republics, they agreed to refuse to recognize revolutionary governments in each other's countries until first constitutionally recognized in the country where occurring; they agreed not to intervene in any country in case of civil war; and they agreed to constitutional reform. The mere fact that these high resolutions may not have been strictly observed in particular cases should by no means discourage the signatory parties, the important fact being that these five republics have indicated their sincere desire for international peace and domestic tranquility, and have devised complete and adequate means to that end, the faithful adherence to which will become more and more habitual as the excellent example of the more advanced republics continues to prompt it.

Mindful of the part the United States took in encouraging the making of these treaties and the moral obligations arising therefrom it is not the intention of our Government or our people to refrain from lending every possible proper aid and encouragement to the parties to these conventions to constantly carry into effect their wise and beneficient provisions.

If this or any other government is to endure in this or any other land it is necessary that wisdom, vigilance, patience, and loyalty should abide in its halls of legislation, its chambers of justice, in the centers of executive power, and with the dominating mass of its people.

The establishment and preservation of the institutions of free government, here as elsewhere, depend not upon those who think first of serving themselves and to that end would sacrifice their country; not upon those who think only of defeating the opposition and to that end would sacrifice the world; but upon those who think only of the welfare of their country and to that end would sacrifice themselves.

In Nicaragua there is to-day present the opportunity and the acute necessity for a display of the very highest and most enduring type of patriotism. There is now a call to her true sons to give the best that is within them to anxious and concerted effort for the public weal, to execute the compromises, adjustments, and concessions essential for the general welfare, and, by consistent and loyal adherence to the understandings and agreements that have been reached for the rehabilitation of their Government, to place their names first upon their country's enduring roll of fame.

Speech of the President of the National Constitutional Assembly of Nicaragua, Dr. Ignacio Suárez, at a session of that body held at Managua in honor of Mr. Knox, March 6, 1912.

[Translation.]

MR. SECRETARY:

The National Constitutional Assembly wishes to accord you this reception to give you a cordial welcome in testimony of the lively sympathy and high esteem which the people and Government of the United States inspire in them, and you, Mr. Secretary, who, in the high character of Secretary of State of the great American nation, have contributed indirectly with your moral influence to the pacification of our country. Hence, I have the honor to express these sentiments in the name of the National Congress, prophesying the most perfect success of the mission which has brought you here.

You are not, therefore, to us merely the diplomatic representative of a powerful nation whom we admire and respect and to whom we are bound by ties of old and friendly relations, but also a welcome guest, owing to your having given proof that you are animated by a lofty spirit of American brotherhood.

It can not be denied, however, that your visit, which the peoples of America, and ourselves especially, have been awaiting with suspense, has awakened fears and misgivings in timid minds, who see in it a peril to our autonomy. Undoubtedly it is because they are unaware of the many proofs which on divers and solemn occasions North American statesmen have given officially which eliminate all tendency to expansion or to interference in foreign dominions which might compromise the latter's sovereignty and independence.

It must be recognized also that a propaganda nearly continental in proportions denouncing expansionism has been initiated. This propaganda first took form in the famous Monroe Doctrine, so opportunely formulated, now amplifying and restricting its terms, or diluting it in a strong solution of unbiased criticism in order to arrive at the exact conception of its true meaning.

Those unfounded fears of which I have just made mention arise from this. To dissipate them it is enough for me to recall some of those proofs, unimpeachable through having been confirmed in the international practice of the United States.

The glorious conqueror of Vicksburg, in 1881, calmed the restlessness of the Mexicans who attributed intentions of annexation to his journey, assuring them, at a banquet given to him by the deputies of Oaxaca, that the people of the United States would under no circumstances accept annexation, not even if nine-tenths of the people of Mexico should ask for it, and he added:

> We do not need new territory; we have yet to develop what we have. We wish to see our neighbors prosper and become so strong that the projects which are formed by other countries in relation to them may in no way endanger their safety.

And later, in 1885, in order to dispel new fears in the same Republic, the United States Minister, Mr. Henry R. Jackson, at a reception given on July 4, pronounced these energetic and quieting words:

> May the hand be paralyzed that dares to strike out a single star of the pleiad of American republics! May the statesman perish who pulls out petals or pistils from a single flower! Allow to each nation the full enjoyment of its institution, customs, and local laws. Let it govern itself according to its pleasure. If American freedom for all nations does not consist in this, then our Constitutions, Federal and State, can be naught but lies and our flag a farce.

The Attorney General, Mr. Cushing, upon giving an opinion requested by the Secretary of State, Mr. William L. Marcy, on a claim of Peru against the United States, thus expressed himself:

> It seems to me that considerations of expediency concur with all sound ideas of public law to indicate the propriety of a return to more reserve in all this matter, as between the Spanish American Republics and the United States; that is, to abstain from applying to them any rule of public law which we do not admit to have applied to us; to do only as we would be done by; and to consult their well-being, and cultivate their friendship, by adhering to the impartial assertion, whether in claim or in rejection of claim, of the established rules of the international jurisprudence of Christendom.

Such wise and worthy words even the venerable founder of American democracy would not have disdained to pronounce.

I omit other more recent declarations, for they are better known, such as those of Secretary of State Root on his trip through South America, calculated also to communicate to weak nations the security of their independence.

There can be no doubt that justice will triumph and that the way will be opened through which invigorating and fruitful currents will urge on to fields of progress.

The evolution taking place in private law, influenced by the principles of true justice which does not lose sight of the common destiny of mankind, is already more important than international law, and from day to day the violence of nation against nation becomes rarer where such violence is grounded only on the supremacy of strength.

I have the pleasure here to state that the United States has in nearly all cases abided by the principles above laid down. In evidence of this are the many cases of arbitration with small nations: The Venezuelan flour claim of 1836, which it dropped when convinced that it was in the wrong; the abuses of a mixed commission on claims against Paraguay, removed in 1862 by this declaration of the President: "The people and Government of the United States are too honorable to connive at oriental trickery in favor of their citizens to the detriment of justice"; to Peru was given entire satisfaction in 1852 by the Secretary of State, Mr. Everett, "in consequence of unintentional injustice done," according to his expression, when the sovereignty of this Republic in certain guano islands which American citizens wished to take possession of was put in jeopardy.

And I could continue with similar quotations. I shall not omit the Venezuelan case, owing to the special circumstances which attached to it. This Republic was condemned to pay by a mixed commission an indemnity to American citizens in the sum of $1,253,310.30. It paid one-half, more or less, and it then refused to pay the rest because great frauds had been disclosed which placed the real amount of the debt at $80,000. The American Congress, at the request of the Executive, authorized the use of force for obtaining payment; but Venezuela held out in its refusal until President Arthur and Secretary Frelinghuysen recognized that it was right, and to this effect Congress was informed, and this high body thereupon unanimously resolved that another commission should be appointed to revise the first decision.

I have gone into these details at length to make clear the procedure of your powerful country with the other weak ones of the continent; and the last cited in particular attracts the attention, for it treats of decision clothed with all the force of a thing adjudicated opened anew through respect for right and equity.

Hence, all fears and all prejudice ought to be rejected in our relations with the United States, it being evident that the strongest bulwark of our guaranty as a nation lacking physical strength lies in the force which emanates from right, and therefore it resides in your own institutions, in your characteristic respect for law, which, as was said by a notable writer, is born of the Anglo-Saxon temperament—calm, practical, lover of justice, and averse to all extreme measures.

Hard is the lot of a weak people, even when its friendship with great and strong nations is taken into consideration.

The same august founder of your prosperous Union, who saw everything through the crystal of his excellent virtues, said, on taking leave of public life, in his immortal message addressed to Congress:

> Such an attachment of a small or weak toward a great and powerful nation dooms the former to be the satellite of the latter.

Nicaragua, however, which in 1884 was closely bound to your country by the Zavala-Frelinghuysen treaty, does not fear prejudice or see peril to its autonomy, and strong in its good faith and confident in its institutions, founded in and strengthened by the same principles of justice which govern your wonderful Republic, we open our arms and receive you as friends, with signal show of respect and true esteem.

Accept, Mr. Secretary, this manifestation of the Assembly, which, through you, it extends to the people and the Government of the United States.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

Mr. President:

I deeply appreciate the honor of being invited to appear before this Assembly in solemn session. It is another mark of the high consideration I have been shown since I entered the Republic. I profoundly realize the important relations which the legislative branch of your Government, like the legislative branches of all republics, bears to the national system and how important its functions are for the welfare of the people.

The real crisis in the history of any people who have by revolution freed themselves from tyranny and oppression is when the cohesive force of the perils of war have been released and the duty of the construction of a new government begins. A people may be liberated and their right to self-government established by the arbitrament of war; but liberty without efficient government is anarchy, and a true national government must be constructed. We found this true in the history of the United States, and the period that intervened between the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown and the establishment of the present Government of the United States was one of the most critical in its history. It was commonly asserted, and even by our most friendly critics, that we were incapable of establishing any species of government because we were disunited. It was thought that suspicion and distrust of the people of the different sections of our country would continue until the end of time, and that we would be subdivided into little commonwealths or communities, according to the physical conformation of the land.

Perhaps without the splendid service which the immortal Washington rendered to his country in its trying years this dire prediction might have proved true, but he roused the people to the appreciation of the fact that no permanent government was possible unless the people themselves would be willing, as he expressed it in his farewell letter, "to sacrifice, if need be, some of their local interests to the common weal; they must discard their local prejudices and regard one another as fellow citizens of a common country, with interests in the deepest and truest sense identical." This communication was addressed to the people of thirteen different Commonwealths, each of which regarded itself as a sovereign power, and each of which was groaning under the burden it had assumed for the common cause now brought, as they believed, to a happy issue. They were in no humor for further surrender or sacrifice; they were quarreling among themselves over all sorts of real and fancied grievances. Our credit was failing at home and abroad; our relations with other countries as well as between ourselves were unhappy because of our lack of unity. As a result our citizens were insulted, kidnapped, impressed, and sold into slavery, and all sorts of economic vagaries were abroad in the land. This pointed to an early condition of total wreckage of all that we had gained by our war for independence if a better understanding for the future was not soon reached.

Fortunately this opportunity came in the call for the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia in 1787. Once again duty called Washington from the satisfactions of private life to preside over the destiny of his countrymen, and upon the very threshold of its labors his lofty character and noble eloquence inspired the members of the convention with a sense of their duties and responsibilities. It has been said by one of our great historians[1] that—

> At the very outset some of the delegates began to exhibit symptoms of that peculiar kind of moral cowardice which is wont to afflict free governments, and of which American history furnishes so many instructive examples. It was suggested that palliatives and half measures would be far more likely to find favor with the people than any thoroughgoing reform, when Washington suddenly interposed with a brief but immortal speech, which ought to be blazoned in letters of gold, and posted on the walls of every American assembly that shall meet to nominate a candidate, or declare a policy, or pass a law, so long as the weakness of human nature shall endure. Rising from his President's chair, his tall figure drawn up to its full height, he exclaimed, in tones unwontedly solemn, with suppressed emotion: "It is too probable that no plan we propose will be adopted; perhaps another dreadful conflict is to be sustained. If, to please the people, we offer what we ourselves disapprove, how can we afterward defend our work? Let us raise a standard to which the wise and the honest can repair; the event is in the hand of God."
>
> This outburst of noble eloquence carried conviction to everyone, and henceforth we do not hear that any attempt was avowedly made to avoid the issues as they came up. It was a most wholesome tonic. It braced up the convention to high resolves, and impressed upon all the delegates that they were in a situation where faltering or trifling was both wicked and dangerous. From that moment the mood in which they worked caught something from the glorious spirit of Wasington.

The result of the labors of this convention was the Constitution of the United States; the result of its ratification by the States was the birth of a nation. The present unity, brotherhood, and intercitizenship of the inhabitants of the formerly discordant and jarring States of our Union attest the beneficence of the work of those upon whom the original responsibility was cast, and you people of Nicaragua may be assured of the certainty that under Providence great blessings will come to you as a result of the heroic fortitude you have displayed in the cause of liberty, if it is followed by wise, prompt, and beneficent action for the rehabilitation and reconstruction of the institutions of your land. Mere politics, local differences, sectional strife, personal ambition, should be set aside, and the best thought and the best effort of the country given to the consideration and enactment of such economic measures as will open to the people of Nicaragua a new vista of hope and prosperity. This, supplemented by such measures as will make permanent and enduring the equality of rights which is essential to the maintenance of republican institutions, will give Nicaragua her proper place among the family of American republics.

I note, Mr. President, what you have said in regard to the existence of some apprehension here and in other republics of Latin America as to the true motives and purposes of the United States toward them under the Monroe Doctrine. I beg to assure you, and I am sure that what I say meets the approval of the people and President of the United States, that my Government does not covet an inch of territory south of the Rio Grande. The full measure and extent of our policy is to assist in the maintenance of republican institutions upon this hemisphere, and we are anxious that the experiment of a government of the people, for the people, and by the people shall not fail in any republic on this continent. We have a well-known policy as to causes that might threaten the existence of an American republic from beyond the sea. We are equally desirous that there shall be no failure to maintain a republican form of government from forces of disintegration originating from within; and so far as we may be able we will always be found willing to lend such proper assistance as may be within our power to preserve the stability of our sister American republics.

---

[1] John Fiske, "The Critical Period of American History, 1783–1789."

Speech of the President of the Supreme Court of Justice, Dr. Alfonso Solórzano, at a session held by that Tribunal in honor of Mr. Knox on March 6, 1912.

[Translation.]

YOUR EXCELLENCY:

It is the first time in the annals of the history of the Supreme Court of Justice that it has departed from its traditions and extended an invitation to anyone to honor it with a visit.

But nothing is more natural than that it should be extended to you who come as the representative of the great American Nation, which, it is truthfully said, has placed law upon the highest pedestal in the world.

We read your history with interest to learn of the institutions of a free people; its pages, covered with wise lessons, have taught us to love your great men of lofty virtue, who, always conscious of their duty, had the strength of mind to perform it—those men of a glorious past who first planted with firm and unfaltering hand the banner of freedom in the heart of the American Continent.

Born, like you, to a life of law, we have struggled for liberty. Vividly before us is the example of your country, which has succeeded in attaining the height of power not only through the untiring endeavors of its sons to win material progress, but also, and especially, through its political institutions so wisely formulated and even more judicially adhered to.

When your great ancestors founded the Republic they embodied in the Constitution the admirable principles of liberty. They believed, and rightly, that progress and happiness of a people could only be brought about by the full exercise of individual activities, and hence they put upon them no limitations other than those fixed by God, Himself, to prevent annihilation of all in the clash of opposing aspirations.

But they also understood that the wise provisions of this political organism would be fruitless if they did not establish a sovereign and independent power, which, removed as far as human weakness permits from the strife of parties and free from the passions of interest, should become the custodian of its institutions and safeguard its laws; and to the Supreme Court of Justice, which already had been intrusted with the noble mission of conserving peace, protecting life, property, and honor against individual acts, was intrusted this other and higher charge—that of maintaining its principles when unfortunately they might be trampled upon by those intrusted to guard them.

The institution of the Supreme Court of Justice as the custodian of the fundamental law is, to quote Root, "the most precious gift that political science has given to our country." We, prepared by the history of our "mother country," which from the first understood that law is in the hands of the governing power, were heirs also to this valuable legacy.

Our court, like yours, without machinery of material force, is perhaps the highest moral power of the State. It prevents the execution of those orders of the other high powers of the States which might violate the Constitution; it repairs the wrong, punishes the guilty, and, by recent ruling, it even decides upon direct appeal the unconstitutionality of the laws. It is this power which now demonstrates its admiration and good will toward you, and, through you, toward your country. We fain would believe that, if the assurances of cordiality which the political bodies of our country have lavished upon you have been agreeable, as the expression of sincere feeling, this demonstration, which is addressed not to policy but to an eminent jurisconsult, not to a great and strong power, but to people great in law and liberty, will be not less well received.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

MR. CHIEF JUSTICE:

This is indeed a high honor you have conferred on me, and I deeply appreciate it, as well as the very kind and complimentary words which you have just pronounced in referring to my Government and to my people.

During twenty-five years of my life I devoted myself to the practice of law in my native State and there I learned to respect the courts as a power, exerting within the orbits of law, justice, and equity great influence for all that is good, and in the last analysis constituting the strongest safeguard for the people's rights. Though I have never occupied a judicial position, yet, having served as the chief of the Department of Justice in two administrations, the contact which my position permitted me to enjoy with the members of the bench strengthened my respect for the courts and taught me to appreciate the sacrifice made by those who, in devoting their lives to the administration of justice, deny themselves opportunities for acquiring wealth or fame in the more alluring fields of human endeavor.

Again I beg of you, Mr. Chief Justice, to accept my most sincere thanks for the distinguished honor you have this day shown to me.

Speech of His Excellency Don Diego M. Chamorro, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Nicaragua, at a banquet tendered to Mr. Knox at Managua, March 6, 1912.

[Translation.]

MR. SECRETARY, LADIES, AND GENTLEMEN:

Animated by sentiments of the most legitimate satisfaction, I have the great honor to offer this homage of high appreciation and good will to his excellency the Secretary of State of the United States of America, Mr. Philander C. Knox.

The people and Government of Nicaragua, Mr. Secretary, feel a lively pleasure in the visit that you make to our country, where your illustrious land is alternately appreciated and admired, and with unfeigned rejoicing we celebrate the happy occasion of your presence among us, which has permitted you to know personally how sincere and enthusiastic are the sympathies we cherish for the great Republic of the north, sympathies which increase every day in the glow of the inalterable confidence which your interest for the well-being and prosperity of Nicaragua inspires in us, and in the perseverance with which we labor in the same work of liberty and of justice, which is the aspiration of our people and the generous ideal of your nation and of your Government.

Peoples, like individuals, more than by their own resources, live by the interests common to other peoples, and no nation, without placing in danger its well-being and its existence, can draw away from that sociological law which compels all individuals and all nationalities to live together in a general concert which tends to the highest development of their forces in the material, the economic, and the moral order.

Profoundly affected by this truth and by the exceptional importance which the relations will assume in the near future, without doubt, between the United States and other nations of the world and all the countries surrounding the Panama Canal, we, in the agreements celebrated with the United States, without any reserve or vacillation, have followed the inspirations of a far-sighted and patriotic policy that counsels us not to lag behind the other nations on the ascending road of progress, civilization, and culture, but to assure, once for all, our position among the nations of the world.

You, most excellent sir, are not a stranger among us. Your name is familiar to our people, and everywhere it is accompanied by the respect and the affection with which entire Nicaragua greets you and receives you as an old and true friend. Your illustrious personality and the eminent representative character vested in you give to your pleasant visit a significance superabundantly honorable for Nicaragua, because you come in the name of a great people to whom we are bound not only by the material ties of an active commerce ever on the increase, but by the better and indestructible moral bonds of the same political ideals, and by your historical traditions closely connected with all our struggles for independence.

With your beautiful Declaration of July, 1776, you awakened in all the people of America the love for liberty. Your sympathies accompanied us in our strivings for emancipation, and before any other country it was your people who recognized us as sovereign nations.

Your international doctrines then gave stability and strength to those conquests of right, assuring forever our existence as republics, unhampered by foreign interference. We owe to you the restoration of our territory, and to-day more than ever we place confidence in the friendship and solicitude of your people for the maximum development, which all Nicaraguans desire, of republican institutions and practices of which your country is, par excellence, the highest exponent in the world.

In the paternal house we learnt from childhood to know and admire your great forefathers. The lives of Washington, Lincoln, and Franklin were heroic legends of the home and their salient and stirring deeds were held up before us constantly by our elders as the most beautiful examples of virtue and patriotism worthy of admiration; and so, used to living in communion with your heroes, we never have and never will accustom ourselves to regard them as strangers, since they are not and can not be such for any free man, whatever the place of his nationality in the world. If your language be unknown to us, the language of liberty and justice, which by its example pointed the way to the attainment of the greatest and most perfect political institution that human endeavor has been able to bring about, so took possession of our minds that it is not surprising that, as men, in contemplating the stupendous altitude which your country has reached in all the spheres of activity and civilization, we should continue rendering that same heartfelt tribute of our admiration to those famous men who initiated such work and to the heirs of those virtues and warders of such great institutions.

In witnessing the public demonstrations and your reception by the Nicaraguan people in their fold, and in considering how the prejudices and misunderstandings among the nations of this continent are quickly blotted out by the frequent celebration of our Pan-American Congresses, of the lofty policy of which your visit to our countries of Central America is one of the most expressive signs, we can not fail to recall the notable words which one of your most illustrous men, John Adams, wrote with prophetic vision to his wife on signing your magnificent Declaration of Independence. He said:

> Yesterday, the greatest question was decided, which ever was debated in America, and a greater, perhaps, never was nor will be decided among men. * * * But the day is past. The second of July 1776, will be the most memorable epocha in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated, as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward, forevermore.

Remembering these beautiful words of him who was your second President, the clear-sightedness of the statesman is surprising who, from that memorable date, understood the whole compass of your revolution for the entire world, and with the vision of his soul assisted, and caused his contemporaries to assist, in the contemplation of the colossal development of his country, free, rich, and happy after more than an age of existence; who discerned, and caused others to discern, the edifying and magnificent spectacle of America separated in numerous republics, but all united in a single ideal of justice, of liberty, and of respect for the independence and sovereignty of each one of them.

Permit me, gentlemen, in the name of the President of the Republic, to invite you to drink a toast to His Excellency the President of the United States, William H. Taft; to His Excellency the Secretary of State, Philander C. Knox; to his worthy wife and the distinguished ladies who accompany her, whose presence grace and honor this occasion; and to the North American people, to that great nation, the friend of peace, of liberty, and of justice.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

Mr. Minister, Ladies, and Gentlemen:

I am deeply grateful for the evidences of cordiality which the Government has given me, and I accept these as a mark of brotherly feeling toward the Government and people of the United States.

To my addresses before the Assembly and at the Campo de Marte I have nothing further to add relative to the situation of Nicaragua, but I do wish to avail myself of the opportunity to repeat that the Government of the United States does not propose in any way to interfere in the internal affairs of this country.

This country, though small, has territory and resources sufficient to support 6,000,000 inhabitants, and the Government of the United States will assist Nicaragua in order that it may grow in wealth and population, thus becoming a strong nation.

When I promised to go to Granada I fully intended to make the journey, as it was one of my most cherished wishes that I could have the privilege of visiting that city. The demands upon me while I have been in Nicaragua have been so numerous that I find myself physically unable to undertake a journey that will require me to travel so far to-morrow. I wish, through you, to express to the good citizens of Granada my very deep regret that I am so situated that I can not be the recipient of the cordial welcome that I feel certain I should receive from them.

File No. 033.1100 K77/95.]

The President of Nicaragua to the President.

[Telegram.]

Presidential Mansion,
Managua, March 7, 1912.

I have the honor to apprize you of enthusiastic ovation for Secretary Knox and family. Nicaragua considers herself honored by the visit of such illustrious and welcome guests, and I take pleasure in thanking Your Excellency for it. I send you my best wishes for your personal happiness and for the prosperity of the American people over whom Your Excellency so worthily presides.

President Díaz.

File No. 033.1100 K77/95.]

The President to the President of Nicaragua.

[Telegram.]

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, March 12, 1912.

I am greatly gratified at your kind message of the 7th and to learn of the marked courtesies and warm welcome so freely extended to Secretary Knox by Your Excellency's Government and the people of Nicaragua. Pray accept the expression of my appreciation and my good wishes for your personal prosperity and that of the Nicaraguan people.

WM. H. TAFT.

RELIEF OF FAMINE IN NICARAGUA.

File No. 817.48.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, August 5, 1912.

Owing to a partial failure of crops last year and the financial exhaustion of the Republic under the Zelaya régime, there was widespread want approaching famine throughout the country before the outbreak of the present trouble. On account of existing hostilities and consequent prospect of increase of this suffering, does the Department think it advisable to ascertain whether the American Red Cross is prepared to send on short notice supplies to be distributed to noncombatants under American supervision?

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.48.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of the American National Red Cross.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 6, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received, under date of August 5th, telegraphic advices from the American Legation at Managua to the effect that previous to the present revolutionary outbreak in Nicaragua there had been widespread hunger and distress throughout the country which almost approached famine. This unfortunate condition was due to a partial failure of crops last year and to the financial drain upon the Republic due to the ill effects of the régime of President Zelaya. The Minister also states that this suffering is now greatly increased on account of an existing revolution, the effects of which will undoubtedly continue for some time.

The Department, therefore, would be glad to learn whether the American Red Cross is prepared to send, on short notice, supplies of rice, beans, corn, flour and potatoes to be distributed to noncombatants in Nicaragua under the supervision of our representatives in that country.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 817.48.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister to Panama.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 7, 1912.

The American Red Cross authorizes expenditure $1000 for flour, potatoes, beans, rice and corn for distribution to famishing noncombatants in Nicaragua, on request of our Minister there. The Commissary of the Isthmian Canal Commission has been instructed by the War Department to furnish these supplies under your direction. You will arrange to purchase them by draft on Secretary of State for delivery to U. S. S. Justin sailing August 9th for Corinto from Balboa.

KNOX.

File No. 817.48.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 7, 1912.

Expenditure of $1,000 for food supplies authorized by American Red Cross, in pursuance of your August 5. Supplies will be furnished for delivery to Justin to be held at Corinto subject to your instructions. These supplies will be furnished by commissary department of Canal Commission under the direction of the American Minister at Panama.

KNOX.

File No. 817.48/1.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, August 8, 1912.

In pursuance of your August 7 I have requested of American Legation at Panama $400 worth each of beans and corn, $100 each of rice and flour.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.48/6.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, August 23, 1912.

I have issued to date in Managua through Navy Surgeon Stibbens, to the non-combatant deserving poor of whatever persuasion, about one-third of the provisions consigned to me by the American Red Cross. It was my intention to distribute the remainder in León, Masaya and Granada, where the suffering is acute and widespread, but owing to the danger of seizure by armed forces I may for the present be obliged to confine efforts to this vicinity. Any further shipments, of which there will be increasing need, should be confined to corn and beans, which are the staple food for the poor of this country. My two assistants have been Mr. Walter H. Hooper, an American missionary in Managua, and Padre Lezcano, a local Nicaraguan priest noted for his works of charity. They have executed this charity in a most impartial and efficient manner, and not only has suffering been alleviated but a strong sentiment of friendliness and good will has been fostered.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.48/6.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the American Red Cross.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 26, 1912.

SIR: Referring to previous correspondence relative to the present situation in Nicaragua, I beg to inform you that the Department is in receipt of a telegram from the American Minister at Managua, Nicaragua, dated August 23rd in which he states [summary of telegram referred to].

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 817.48/18.

The Secretary of the American Red Cross to the Acting Secretary of State.

NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS,
Washington, September 4, 1912.

SIR: Referring to your letter of August 28, 1912,[1] suggesting that the Red Cross could greatly alleviate the suffering which is bound to follow the revolutionary disturbances by making an additional appropriation of $2,000 worth of corn and beans to be distributed in the same manner as the supplies so far sent to Nicaragua, I have the honor to advise you that the Executive Committee hereby authorizes the expenditure of $1,000 additional by the State Department for the above purpose.

---

[1] Not printed.

As in the case of the former appropriation of $1,000, a check payable to the Secretary of State will be delivered to you upon the receipt of an account showing the exact amount of the expenditure.

The Red Cross very much regrets that its limited funds will not permit a larger appropriation at this time.

Very respectfully,

CHARLES L. MAGEE.

File No. 817.48/11b.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 5, 1912.

American Red Cross authorizes further expenditure of $1,000. Food supplies will be obtained as previously and shipped to Corinto on first available steamer.

ADEE.

File No. 817.48/17.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, October 2, 1912.

The second car of Red Cross provisions distributed in Granada by Legation clerk to more than 8,000 persons, one day's rations each, preference being given to hospitals, schools, convents, women and children. Fewer than 30 men applied, all of them sick, blind or crippled. Conditions were as bad as reported; delay of another week would have resulted in many deaths. The bluejackets and marines, touched by the pitiful condition of the sufferers, shared their rations with them. The prompt and generous action of the American Red Cross not only afforded the much-needed relief but also created a strong sentiment of friendship among all classes to whom supplies were distributed impartially without reference to affiliation.

WEITZEL.

File No. 817.48/21.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 75.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, October 6, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report on the distribution of two car-loads of food supplies sent to Nicaragua by the American Red Cross.

The first car consisting of flour, corn, beans, rice and potatoes to the value of one thousand dollars, left the Panama Canal Zone on August 7, 1912, in charge of Major Smedley D. Butler, U. S. M. C., and was received in Managua on the 15th of that month.

The Legation requested a committee of Americans, including Messrs. Otto Schoenrich, A. R. Thompson, C. D. Ham, A. J. Lindberg, and J. A. Whitaker, to take charge of the provisions under instructions to relieve all cases of distress irrespective of affiliation of the applicants; but as they were unable to attend to the matter on account of departure from the city or other reason, the Legation decided to do the work itself. Mr. Walter H. Hooper, an American missionary, and Padre J. A. Lezcano, a well known Nicaraguan priest, kindly offered to assist in investigating needy cases. Signed tickets good for five rations were then issued to the applicants, who presented them to Mr. William Gower, assistant paymaster of the United States Navy, at the railroad station where two-fifths of the carload were distributed, beginning with the flour and potatoes which deteriorate very rapidly in this climate.

The remaining three-fifths were taken to León where Lieutenant Colonel Charles G. Long, U. S. M. C., distributed them through the Hospital San Vicente and the Sisters of Charity, reserving a portion however to feed one hundred and twenty-five prisoners who had been sadly neglected during the hostilities in that town.

The second carload donated by the Red Cross consisted of 10,000 lbs. of beans and 7,140 of cornmeal, these two staples being the principal articles of food for the poorer classes in Nicaragua. Having been despatched from the Canal Zone on September 7 the consignment reached Managua on the 14th of that month and was started the next morning to Granada under the personal charge of the clerk of the Legation, arriving there after being fired on at the Barranca on Sunday, September 22. The distribution was promptly begun from a central station even before the disarmament had taken place. Great assistance was rendered by Dr. Juan I. Urtecho, an elderly gentleman of wide reputation for impartial charity who has devoted many years of his professional life as a physician to gratuitous practice among the poor and who before the arrival of the Americans had fed at his own expense hundreds of famished people. Several of the Granada ladies kindly volunteered their services in placing the tickets with deserving families, and Private Baldwin, U. S. M. C., supplied the holders of the tickets with the number of rations thereon designated, nearly 8,000 in all being thus disposed of. A gratifying feature of the distribution of supplies was the small number of men who appeared in line, and even those few were maimed, sick or blind. The Red Cross and San Juan Hospitals, the French College for girls and the schools were given the first attention.

There was urgent need of help as many poor families had been forced for a long time to subsist on green mangoes, and some deaths had already resulted from starvation, but the timely arrival of supplies quickly relieved the situation. Children who crowded around the camp were fed by the enlisted men out of their own rations, and a carload of corn and flour donated by the American colony in Managua was distributed among the sufferers.

As soon as order was restored the farmers from the surrounding territory brought their products to market, and the railroad resumed transportation of supplies which had been accumulating in Corinto, so that conditions at Granada and elsewhere should begin gradually to improve, although it will be some time before the people will cease to feel the depression caused by the failure of crops for two successive years and by the hardships suffered during the present disturbances.

The prompt and generous action of the American Red Cross has won expressions of deep appreciation from those who have been helped, and has created the kindliest feeling among all classes of people in Nicaragua.

The Department is respectfully requested to transmit to the association the accompanying packages of tickets and receipts for rations issued.

I have [etc.] GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

File No. 817.48/22

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 76.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Managua, October 10, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a copy of a letter[1] from the French consular representative in Nicaragua requesting me to forward to Granada food supplies furnished by him to certain of his nationals who have had to endure the hardships imposed on foreigners and natives alike by Mena's lawless bands. The Legation was of course glad to be able to comply with the request.

I am also transmitting copies of letters[1] received from Americans and other residents of Granada, briefly describing conditions which recently prevailed in that city under the Mena régime.

I have [etc.]

GEORGE T. WEITZEL.

---

[1] Not printed.

PANAMA.

SUPERVISION OF ELECTIONS BY THE UNITED STATES.

File No. 819.00/349.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 21.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, December 6, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that little of importance in the political situation has occurred since my arrival here and that everything continues to center around the coming presidential elections, notwithstanding their comparative remoteness. President Arosemena is apparently most anxious to secure his reelection, and for the purpose of satisfying (as his partisans claim) the constitutional requirement is generally expected to avail himself early next month of the leave of absence granted to him by the Supreme Court.

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 819.00/352.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 36.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, December 29, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to report that Señor Ricardo Arias, who was some months ago appointed Panaman Minister to the United States and who, as reported in my telegram of yesterday's date, left yesterday for this post, called upon me the day before his departure saying that before leaving Panama he wished to again talk over his political plans and those of his friends. He did not wish for any intervention by the United States, but considered that if his plans were to have any chance of success the American Government must exercise a certain moral influence over the Government of Panama, which it would be entirely willing to accept. Moreover, if the Government of Panama was allowed to go on as it had been going on, an intervention by the United States must eventually ensue. He believed in order to preserve the existence of the Government of Panama, especially that the suffrage should be limited and that Panama and Colon should be made free ports, that there should be some means of rigidly controlling the expenditures of the Government and that there should be an entire reform of the present administrative departments, and particularly the school system, all of which were extremely inefficient. He and his friends were resolved to support President Arosemena's candidacy for the next presidential elections, as they considered him a good man although he had faults.

President Arosemena's friends had recently discreetly sounded Señor Boyd, Minister for Foreign Affairs (who is the Second Designado), as to his willingness to assume charge of the Executive Power when President Arosemena availed himself of the leave of absence granted to him. Señor Boyd had let it be known that he would not be willing to assume charge, as he considered himself also to be a candidate and this would render his candidacy constitutionally illegal. Personally he did not believe that Señor Boyd had much chance of being chosen a candidate unless the American Government decided to support him, which he thought Señor Boyd expected to be the case. The two candidates would undoubtedly be Dr. Porras and Dr. Arosemena. Dr. Samuel Lewis, Señor Rodolfo Chiari, and Señor de Icaza he thought had no real chances of being candidates.

In reply I expressed my great interest in all he had told me, but reminded him of my former statement to him (Despatch No. 5) to the effect that the American Government "will take no part in and indicate no preference as to this election." This attitude of my Government, I added, must by this time be well known to all the leading men of Panama, especially as it had lately been reiterated by the President of the United States in his message on foreign affairs to the Congress of the United States. Señor Arias admitted this to be true, but he evidently hopes, perhaps through his own efforts in Washington, to be able to secure some change in it for the benefit of his candidate.

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 819.00/357.

The Secretary to the President to the Secretary of State.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, January 23, 1912.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: For your information I send you a copy of the dispatch which the President this afternoon sent to Colonel Goethals.

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES D. HILLES.

[Inclosure.]

The President to Colonel Goethals.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, January 23, 1912.

I wish you would communicate confidentially and discreetly to Federico Boyd that we of the American Government hope that when President Arosemena leaves he will remain to take his place by virtue of his present office as secundo designato during the six months prior to election. Impress on him that we think that his exercise of the office is needed to steady matters in the Republic and that if he abandons the government at this time it will bring about a situation not favorable to the future prosperity of Panama.

WM. H. TAFT.

File No. 819.00/356.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, January 27, 1912.

The Minister of Panama at Washington has been instructed to consult the Department of State as to whether the American Government would be willing to supervise the elections. Mendoza tells me that such supervision would appear to be the only way to secure absolute impartiality.

The intention of President Arosemena to take leave on February 2 was officially communicated to-day to the Supreme Court.

Boyd, the Second Designate, is opposed to Arosemena's candidacy. The latter has instructed the Minister of Panama to consult the Department as to his constitutional eligibility.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/358.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, January 31, 1912.

The Second Designate, Boyd, has formally declined to assume the executive power.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/360.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, February 1, 1912.

The executive power has been accepted by the Third Designate, Chiari.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/364.

The Minister of Panama to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

No. 4.] LEGATION OF PANAMA,
Washington, February 5, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your excellency that Señor Don Rodolfo Chiari assumed on the 1st day of this month the Executive Power of the Republic of Panama in his capacity as Third Designado, by reason of the leave granted the First Designado in Charge of the Executive Power, Dr. Pablo Arosemena.

I have [etc.]

RICARDO ARIAS.

File No. 819.00/387.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Extracts.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, April 25, 1912.

The Porras party committee has left a petition, which goes in the pouch tomorrow, requesting supervision by the United States of the registration of voters, in view of the grave electoral situation and in order to give proper guaranties to their opponents; such supervision to begin as soon as possible, as registration will close on May 15. The petition also requests supervision by the United States of both the municipal elections (June 30) and the presidential elections (July 14 and August 2). Numerous supporting documents accompany the petition.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/390.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, May 4, 1912.

President Arosemena assures me that he desires supervision of the elections to the extent necessary to ensure fairness.

A letter requesting supervision of registration by the United States has been written to the President and sent to the Minister of Panama at Washington by the Committee of the Patriotic Union. This supervision is desired as soon as possible.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/393.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 127.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, May 8, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 126[1] of the 25th ultimo and supplementing my telegram of the 4th instant, I have the honor to enclose a copy of the letter sent on the 28th ultimo by the Committee of the Unión Patriótica to Señor Ricardo Arias, Panaman Minister in Washington, addressed to the President of the United States, requesting complete supervision by the United States of the registration of voters and later of the voting for President of the Republic. In speaking of this letter President Arosemena has informed me that he had instructed Señor Arias to add to it an emphatic statement of his own desire, as head of the Government, for supervision of all the electoral machinery, this to have such an extension as to ensure absolutely pure elections. To-day President Arosemena has informed me that he has received a telegram from Señor Arias to the effect that he had presented the letter on the 6th and that it would be considered shortly by the Cabinet.

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

---

[1] Not printed; incloses a letter from the committee of the Porras party referred to in the telegram of April 25. (File No. 819.00/391.)

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Unión Patriótica to the President.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: We, the undersigned, all belonging to the executive committee of the Patriotic Union, which is the political coalition that maintains the present Government in power and which has proclaimed and now upholds the candidature of Don Pedro A. Díaz, have the honor to address Your Excellency, begging Your Excellency to be good enough to order the intervention by the Government of which Your Excellency is the head, in the approaching elections of Panama, in order to watch the conduct of the election boards and of the Government. The line of action followed by the party that has proclaimed the candidature of Doctor Belisario Porras is creating in this country a very dangerous situation and may entail consequences of extreme gravity.

The opposition have a majority in all the election boards. One of these, the municipal committee for elections, has by law the duty to draw up the lists of all the citizens who, according to the constitution, are entitled to vote. Duty and honor demand that these lists should be drawn up with strict fairness; that is to say that the name of every citizen without exception should be included in them. But the persons who form the majority in these boards think otherwise, and therefore in nearly every district of the Republic they intentionally omit to insert the names of persons who are friendly to the Government or to the candidature of Señor Díaz, a citizen who has made himself conspicuous on account of his virtues, which are universally recognized and esteemed. On the day of the elections only those citizens whose names are in the lists will be able to vote. The course of conduct followed by the majority of these boards will produce, as a necessary result, elections that do not convey the true state of public opinion in the country. In order to acknowledge and uphold the rights of a considerable number of citizens it would be necessary to take prompt action to cure the evil referred to, which, if it continues, will undoubtedly jeopardize the preservation of public order. The proceedings of the election boards show their moral character and the notion they have of their own strength. If they count with the majority of the electorate, why is it necessary for them to prevent their opponents from voting?

We further ask for the intervention of the Government of the United States in the approaching elections, so that it shall be recognized that the conduct of the Government of Panama, which has been unjustly charged with the commission of arbitrary acts in order to impose the candidature of Señor Díaz, is perfectly correct and entirely according to law and political morals. We are confident in the belief that it would not be possible to point to a single act of the Government that would have the character that is imputed to it by our enemies.

The intervention by the Government of the United States in the elections of the Republic of Panama would not be a novel act. There is the precedent of 1906, in which Your Excellency, as Secretary of War, had a considerable part.

The object involved in this petition, which is no other than the preservation of peace in the Republic of Panama, assures us that it will be entertained and acted upon by the illustrious Government of the United States, the nation that guarantees the independence of this Republic.

File No. 819.00/392a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 9, 1912.

Telegraph immediately whether Porras and Díaz themselves favor American supervision of registration and election, so that the request is in fact made by the Government and both political parties. Do you recommend our acquiescence? Could a committee, consisting of yourself as chairman, Colonel Goethals and Governor Thatcher, devise suitable measures after consulting the Government and both parties?

WILSON.

File No. 819.00/393.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, May 9, 1912.

Porras and Díaz both absent in the interior, but the leaders of both parties have to-day affirmed to me over their signatures that Porras and Díaz both desire American supervision of registration and election. This I believe to be true. The written statements were signed for Porras by Mendoza, Valdés and Chiari; for Díaz by President Arosemena. I recommend our acquiescence, and believe the committee as described could devise suitable measures in the manner indicated, as Governor Thatcher is on leave. President Arosemena has asked me by a note just received to urge my Government to accede to the request of the Government of Panama.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/396.

The Acting Secretary of State to the President.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
May 10, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I have the honor to inform you that the Republic of Panama is approaching the third quadrennial election of a President, and the political conditions seem at present to be somewhat disturbed.

Dr. Belisario Porras, formerly Minister here, is the candidate of the Liberal Party, and Pedro Díaz of the Conservative Party. Some Liberal support seems to have gone over to Díaz, and the organization actively supporting him is known as Unión Patriótica.

The Liberal Party is in control of the election boards throughout the country, and the Unión Patriótica is receiving the active support of the present Government, which is in control of the police and officials. Mr. Dodge, the American Minister at Panama, has reported one quite serious riot, and press reports indicate other disturbances that have resulted since the candidates began their campaign speech making. Several leaders of the Unión Patriótica addressed a communication to the Secretary of State while he was on the Isthmus, requesting intervention of this Government in the elections. Mr. Dodge telegraphs under date of May 4 that the committee of the Unión Patriótica had sent to the Panaman Minister here a letter addressed to you, requesting complete supervision as soon as possible by this Government of the registration of voters, and later complete supervision of voting.

Minister Dodge has also forwarded to the Department a very comprehensive petition of the Porras (Liberal) party, requesting our intervention in the form it took in 1908.

On May 6 the Panaman Minister at Washington left with the Department a note, a translation enclosed herewith, which, on behalf of his Government, requests this Government to intervene. Mr. Dodge has also stated in a telegram, dated May 4, that "President Arosemena assures me that he desires supervision of the elections to the extent necessary to ensure fairness."

In order that the Department might be assured that the candidates themselves desire supervision of registrations and elections by this Government, a telegram was sent to the American Minister at Panama on May 9 inquiring whether Messrs. Porras and Díaz themselves favored American supervision of registration and election, in order that the Department might be informed whether this in fact was requested by the Government and by both political parties. The Department also asked whether Mr. Dodge recommended our acquiescence and whether a committee consisting of himself as chairman and Colonel Goethals and Governor Thatcher could devise suitable measures, after consulting the Government and both parties.

To this telegram Mr. Dodge has replied that both Porras and Díaz are absent in the interior, but that Messrs. Mendoza, Valdés and Chiari, the principal directors of the Porras party, had yesterday affirmed to him over their signatures that they know that Porras himself favors American supervision of registration and election, and President Arosemena has affirmed over his signature to Mr. Dodge the same regarding Señor Díaz. The Minister states that he believes there can be no doubt but that this is true, and recommends our acquiescence in the request for supervision which has been made by the Government and by both political parties, as it appears to be the only way of avoiding serious disturbances and securing fair elections. Mr. Dodge also says that he believes the committee described in the Department's telegram could in the manner indicated devise suitable measures, and that Governor Thatcher is at present on leave.

In view of the circumstances, and of the importance of having orderly and fair elections at Panama, I recommend that this Government consent to intervene and supervise the registration and, if necessary, the voting; and upon the indication of your pleasure in this matter I shall be glad to take it up with the proper departments, so that we may help Panama to hold a fair election.

In this connection I may point out the importance of despatch, as the registration under ordinary circumstances would close on May 15, but, as indicated by Mr. Dodge, will be probably continued until the last of this month.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

The Minister of Panama to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

No. 15.]

LEGATION OF PANAMA,
Washington, May 6, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: Until the Panaman people, who are having their first trial of self-government, shall have received proper education, taught by experience, and shaped their system of voting in conformity with their very peculiar conditions, which is the aim of a group of patriots who wish to bring stability, steadiness and honesty into the Republic's administration by endeavoring to introduce into the elective franchise such limitations as will make it the true expression of public opinion and so make it respectable, it will be impossible to prevent disturbances or frustrate the purpose of seeking unlawful advantages in the great mass of ignorant voters, who form the great majority of our electorate.

Our short experience shows that whenever an election has taken place since the first one for President, which went to the one candidate, Dr. Manuel Amador Guerrero, more or less well-founded complaints have been made in which the friendly intervention of this Government was sought under Article 136 of our Constitution.

Thus in the elections of 1906 for members of the Legislative Assembly, the Liberal Party complained of the electoral registration in the city of Panama, and upon the intervention of Minister Charles E. Magoon, in conference with the Commissioners, Dr. Pablo Arosemena for the complaining Liberals and the undersigned for the Constitutional Party, a satisfactory arrangement was reached whereby a common candidacy was adopted by both parties, and it was religiously observed.

In 1908, before the presidential elections, the party styled "Coalición Republicana," in memorials by the Liberals and Conservatives belonging to it, brought grave charges against the Constitutional Party then in power as to the manner in which the lists of voters were being made. The Government, of which the undersigned formed part as Secretary of State, invited a joint Panaman-American investigation; in this investigation it was found that the electoral lists had been drawn up as regularly as our inexperience permitted and without evil purpose; furthermore, the suggestion offered by the Commission appointed by the Honorable William H. Taft, then Secretary of War, now President of the United States, were heard and heeded.

The same conditions occur again to-day, with identical results, and the Liberal Party—which holds absolute control of all the electoral colleges, as they are constituted by a majority of members elected ad-hoc from that party—is making the list of voters so as to favor its followers and hurt its opponents by excluding under more or less veiled pretenses many of the members of the Unión Patriótica. Such is the purport of many complaints of the last-named party to the Government and denunciations published by the press.

The electoral colleges enjoying absolute autonomy, the Executive Power has no authority to intervene in the drawing up of the lists of voters and to enforce respect for true and pure elections, in order to give satisfaction to that respectable and large part of community which complains of its being deprived of its principal political right.

Under these very difficult and alarming circumstances, I have received express instructions from my Government to solicit the benevolent and friendly intervention of your excellency's Government to the end that the electoral registration shall faithfully and exactly express the number and identity of the electors and that the balloting be pure, thus vesting the right of suffrage with all the respectability that its present defective organization allows.

The above-cited precedents which have had the concurrence, consent and participation of the various political factions of Panama, and the interest your excellency's Government has evinced in the maintenance of constitutional order in the Republic of Panama, inspire me with confidence that the petition will meet with a favorable prompt reception on the part of your excellency's Government, all the more as the electoral lists are to be closed on the fifteenth of the current month of May. To that end my Government offers to assist as far as possible in carrying out such measures as your excellency's Government may wish to take in accordance with established precedents.

With sentiments [etc.]

Ricardo Arias.

File No. 819.00/396.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Minister of Panama.

No. 12.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 10, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 6th instant,[1] in which you state that you have received instructions from your Government to solicit the friendly intervention of the United States in safeguarding the electoral registration and the balloting in the impending Presidential election in Panama; that the electoral lists will be closed on the 15th of this month; and that the Panaman Government will assist as far as possible in carrying out such measures as this Government may wish to take, in accordance with the precedents which you cite.

---

[1] The inclosure with the foregoing letter to the President.

In reply I beg to say that this matter will receive the earnest consideration of this Government.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 819.00/398.

The President to the Acting Secretary of State.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, May 10, 1912.

SIR: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of May 10 in reference to the third quadrennial election of a President in the Republic of Panama and the wisdom of the designation of certain American officials to act by way of arbitration and suggestion in reference to the coming election so as to secure its fairness. A precedent for such action was established in 1908 under Governor Magoon by this Government, and in view of the fact that the President of the Republic, Señor Arosemena, and the representatives of both candidates request it, there seems no objection to following that precedent. You will, therefore, communicate with the Minister, Mr. Dodge, and designate him and Colonel Goethals and the colonel commanding the regiment of infantry now stationed on the Isthmus to act as a committee for the general supervision of the registration and election and for taking such suitable measures, after consulting the Government and both parties, as will secure fairness in the registration and election.

Very respectfully,

WM. H. TAFT.

File No. 819.00/396.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Minister of Panama.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 13, 1912.

SIR: Referring to your note of the 6th instant, acknowledged by the Department on the 10th, wherein, on behalf of the Government of Panama, you state that you have received instructions from your Government to solicit the friendly intervention of the United States in safeguarding the electoral registration and the balloting in the impending presidential election in Panama; that the electoral lists will be closed on the 15th of this month; and that the Panaman Government will assist as far as possible in carrying out such measures as this Government may wish to take, in accordance with the precedents which you cite, I have the honor to inform you that the President has decided to accede to this request and that at his direction I am telegraphing the American Minister at Panama to the effect that the President has decided to agree to the request of the Government of Panama and both parties to have the Government of the United States exercise supervision over the registration and election on the Isthmus, and has instructed this Department to name Colonel Goethals, the colonel commanding the regiment of infantry stationed on the Isthmus, and the American Minister to act as a committee for the general supervision of the registration and election and for taking such suitable means, after consultation with both parties and the Government of Panama, as will result in fairness in the election and registration. The American Minister is designated to act as chairman of the committee.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 819.00/393.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 13, 1912.

The President has decided to have this Government supervise the registration and election in Panama, and has directed this Department to designate you as chairman and Colonel Goethals and the colonel commanding the regiment of infantry now stationed on the Isthmus to act as a committee for supervision of registration and election and for taking such suitable measures, after consulting with the Government and both parties, as will secure fairness in the registration and election.

You will inform the Panaman Government of the foregoing and notify the leaders of both parties who have communicated with you of this Government's decision. The Department is communicating with the Panaman Minister here and with the War Department.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 819.00/402.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 130.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, May 14, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt this morning of the Department's telegram dated May 13, relative to the President's decision to supervise the registration of voters and the election in Panama, thus acquiescing in the request of the Panaman Government and of both political parties. In accordance with the directions therein I immediately informed President Arosemena and Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, personally, of the substance of this telegram, handing a note to the latter containing a paraphrase of it. I also notified the leaders of both political parties, whom I requested to call at the Legation, further communicating with the other members of the committee designated in the Department's telegram, Colonels Goethals and Greene. In accordance with my suggestion the committee thereupon decided to meet to-morrow, the 15th instant, at the Legation, to hold a preliminary consultation with representatives of the Government and of both parties with a view to beginning as soon as possible the consideration of such suitable measures as to secure fairness in the registration and election. I found that no intimation of our Government's decision had as yet been received either by the Government or the political parties, which all expressed the greatest satisfaction and appreciation.

I have [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

File No. 819.00/399.

The Minister of Panama to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

No. 20.]

Legation of Panama,
Washington, May 16, 1912.

Excellency: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's note of May 13, in which you inform me [etc.]

Immediately upon receipt of that communication I telegraphed the substance of it to my Government, which will doubtless fully appreciate this additional proof of the solicitude of your excellency's Government for the orderly and constitutional development of the Government of the Republic.

I beg your excellency to express to the President my sincere thanks for having favorably considered the desires of my Government, for which I am also grateful to your excellency.

Accept [etc.] Ricardo Arias.

File No. 819.00/405.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 134.]

American Legation,
Panama, May 20, 1912.

Sir: Referring to my despatch No. 130 of the 14th instant, I have the honor to inform you that the preliminary consultation therein mentioned between the committee and the representatives of the Panaman Government and both political parties for the purpose of considering suitable measures to insure fairness in the registration of voters and the subsequent presidential election took place at the Legation on the 15th instant. I inclose a copy of the report [1] of this consultation, from which it will be seen that the committee decided upon the following measures:

(1) The period for the registration of voters to be extended from May 15 to May 31, the Government agreeing to issue the necessary decrees still further to prolong this period if necessary.

(2) All registration to be supervised by representatives of the committee. To facilitate this all registration places to be arranged in itineraries, upon each of which should be sent one representative of the committee, who would be accompanied by one representative of the candidacy of Señor Diaz and one of that of Dr. Porras. Upon their arrival at each registration place registration to begin and continue

---

[1] Not printed.

daily until complete. The maintenance of order in and about the registration places to be entirely under the authority of the supervisor, who, while observing the proceedings, would also use his friendly offices when necessary to compose differences, without, however, having any right to issue any order as to registration.

(3) The Panaman Government to pay all expenses of supervision and to deposit an installment of $7,500 now with the disbursing officer of the Isthmian Canal Commission, who would take entire charge of all accounts, eventually presenting them with vouchers to the Panaman Government.

(4) The Government and each political party to appoint two representatives with whom the committee could confer when it desired to do so.

(5) Regarding the question of adopting the census as a basis for registration, as desired by the Unión Patriótica but opposed by the Porrista party, the committee decided that this was not a question properly for its consideration, it being only concerned with the proper registration of all those entitled and not with what lists might be used in this connection.

These decisions received the unqualified approval of the Government representatives and those of both parties. I may add that throughout the meeting all these representatives appeared disposed to cooperate in assisting the committee to fulfill its instructions.

In accordance with the directions of the committee, I subsequently drafted instructions to be given to each of the supervisors of registration and these were approved practically without change. I inclose a printed copy of them.[1] Copies of these instructions are also to be furnished to the Government and to the representatives of both parties accompanying the supervisors.

I have further made a short code to enable the supervisors to communicate confidentially with the committee.

The committee met again on the 18th instant, no others being present, and agreed to the itinerary prepared by the Panaman Government. As according to this itinerary all registration places are included in thirteen routes, it was decided to send—thirteen representatives only being required—twelve officers of the Tenth Infantry Regiment stationed in the Zone and one officer of the Marine Battalion, also stationed here, all of whom were available and spoke Spanish. The committee considered military officers to be especially adapted to duties of this nature, involving tact, ability to maintain order, and strict compliance with instructions. It considered also the prestige which military men enjoy in this country, the saving of expense to the Panaman Government, as no salaries would have to be paid, and the benefit which the knowledge to be gained of the country would be to the officers themselves.

The Panaman Government has now paid to the disbursing officer of the Isthmian Canal Commission the $7,500 agreed upon, and all arrangements have been completed for the departure of all the supervisors, with the representatives of both parties accompanying them, on the 23d instant, except those for Panama City and Colon, who began supervision yesterday.

---

[1] Not printed.

The proceedings of the committee have naturally excited much interest and have been extensively published and commented upon in the press of both parties, especially the Porrista. All comment has thus far been extremely and universally favorable.

I have [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 819.00/407.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 6, 1912.

The Department has received a telegram from Chiarí, to the following effect: "Constituted authorities, in league with largely increased body of policemen armed with rifles, terrorize citizens, put them in jail without any cause or trial, attack and even murder them. Personal liberty and security do not exist. Complaints to governor have no effect. American intervention should be extended to control police, otherwise public peace may be disturbed at any moment." Department has replied: "The complaint contained in your telegram of yesterday would seem to be a matter proper to be laid before the supervision committee."

KNOX.

File No. 819.00/409.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 141.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, June 8, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 134 of the 20th ultimo, I have the honor to report that the supervision of registration has been proceeding satisfactorily and is expected to be completed about the 15th instant.

Registration in Panama City and Colon closed on the 31st ultimo. The supervisors in both places had little difficulty in maintaining order.

Party spirit is running high throughout the Republic, although the excitement in Panama City would seem to have diminished somewhat since the close of registration here. The Government, assisted by the Union Patriotica, is doing its utmost to secure the election of Don Pedro Díaz, using all the various means at its command, especially the police. Cases of alleged oppression of Porristas in numberless different ways and of their arbitrary arrest fill the Porrista press and have been presented lately in considerable numbers to the committee.

The committee has merely filed these cases until recently, when it received corroboration of the active political meddling of the police in Chiriquí from one of the supervisors, Lieutenant Conger. The committee thereupon decided to address Señor Chiarí, Minister for Foreign Affairs, in this matter, requesting that steps might be taken to prevent the police from "any participation in the actions of either political party."

In this connection I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's telegram of June 6, quoting certain telegrams received from Don Rodolfo Chiarí, lately Acting President of the Republic and one of the Porrista leaders, as well as the Department's reply thereto. Señor Chiarí's description therein of the political situation is undoubtedly exaggerated, although some foundation for each of his statements exists, as will be noted from the foregoing. So far, at all events, the committee is not prepared to recommend to the Department the adoption of Señor Chiarí's suggestion that American intervention should be extended to the control of the police.

The committee is now taking steps to secure the necessary supervisors of voting, who will have to be about 180 in number, in order to provide two for each polling place. On the 25th ultimo Colonel Goethals addressed a telegram to the War Department inquiring whether Army, Navy, and Marine Corps officers could be furnished for this purpose. Meanwhile the committee, aided by Lieutenant Colonel Hodges, acting chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, is selecting such men here as are available and appear suitable for this purpose. I have also prepared for the committee's consideration a draft of the instructions to be given to these supervisors.

The committee has decided and the Government has agreed to publish in the Gaceta Oficial all such of the committee's acts, including the foregoing, as it may desire. This was considered desirable by the committee, both to give these acts greater publicity and to show the Government's acquiescence in them.

I have [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 819.00/408.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, June 9, 1912.

Government and both parties request supervision to include election for municipal council to take place June 30 in all municipalities. Committee recommends it, since otherwise this election will not be fair and disturbances may be anticipated which will have a serious effect upon presidential electoral situation. Referring to Department's telegram of May 13, was this supervision therein included?

Registration is proceeding satisfactorily and will be concluded on June 15. Party spirit remains high and numerous complaints of oppression and electoral interference by Government officials, some of them corroborated by supervisors, have been received from the Porras party. Committee has brought these to the Government's attention.

Regarding Department's telegram June 6, Chiarí exaggerating situation.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/408.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 10, 1912.

This Government is glad to accede to the request in your telegram of June 9, to include in supervision election for municipal council.

KNOX.

File No. 819.00/411.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 149.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, June 14, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 141 of the 8th instant, I have the honor to report that the supervisory committee received on the 8th instant a reply from Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, to its note of the 5th instant inclosing complaints as to police interference and improper telegraph censorship.

On the 10th instant the committee addressed a note to Señor Chiari stating that it had come to its attention that the presidents of the registration boards of Macaracas and San Carlos were being held in prison. The committee expressed the belief "that, analogous to the provision of the Panaman law, which gives immunity from arrest in civil cases to voters during the voting period, like immunity should be given in criminal cases, except those of a grave nature, amounting to felony, to the election officials until after the elections are over." The further correspondence upon this subject is contained in Señor Chiari's reply of the 11th instant, the committee's note of the same date, and a further note from Señor Chiari, also of the same date, as a result of which the presidents of the election boards in question were released and the immunities suggested by the committee were granted by the Government.

On the 10th instant the committee was advised by the collector of customs of the Isthmian Canal Commission that 25 cases of rifles, 2 cases of scabbards, and 167 cases of cartridges had arrived in Colon by the S. S. Prinz Joachim, consigned to the Secretary of the Treasury of the Panaman Government. Colonel Greene and Judge Feuille, I myself being still unable to go out, immediately called upon Señor Chiari and informed him of the foregoing, adding that in view of the electoral situation the committee considered the use of these arms by the police most inadvisable and that unless the Panaman Government was willing to assure the committee that no use would be made of them until after the elections the committee would consider itself bound to inform its Government at once of the matter. Señor Chiari replied that if the Government was prevented from receiving these arms, which were generally known to have arrived, this would cause it a loss of prestige which would be extremely dangerous under the present conditions. On the other hand, if the Government was allowed to receive these arms it was prepared to guarantee that they would not leave Panama City during the electoral period, and, further, that during this period the entire police of the Republic would be under the orders of the committee, conforming absolutely to its orders, both as to measures to be adopted during these days and as to the arms then to be carried. Señor Chiari then requested an opportunity to confer with President Arosemena.

On the following day the committee called upon President Arosemena, at his invitation, and he repeated Señor Chiari's assurances, agreeing, at the committee's request, to put these assurances in writing. The committee thereupon withdrew its objections, considering that the assurances given rendered this increase in the armament of the police entirely unimportant.

The committee has been taking steps to secure the necessary supervisors for the voting, about 200 of whom will be required, and will undoubtedly be able to secure this number of suitable men from the Tenth Regiment, the Marine Battalion, and the Isthmian Canal Commission. A number of these men who go to inaccessible districts will be obliged to leave on the 22d instant and can not return until after the election for presidential electors on July 14.

I have [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

File No. 819.00/410.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Panama, June 19, 1912.

Authorization is requested by the supervisory committee to call upon Tenth Infantry Regiment and Marines Battalion in case, contrary to expectations, their assistance should become necessary to preserve order in Panama City and Colon on election days, June 30 and July 14. Committee recommends withdrawal of marines from the Isthmus should not take place before July 14.

Dodge.

File No. 819.00/422.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 152.]
American Legation,
Panama, June 25, 1912.

Sir: Referring to my despatch No. 149, of the 14th instant, relative to the electoral situation and the measures taken by the supervisory committee, I have the honor to inform you that on the 15th instant the committee met at the Legation and submitted to the representatives of the Government, Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and the representatives of both political parties (Señores Tomás Arias and Julio Febrega, Unionistas, and Samuel Lewis and Ramon M. Valdés, Porristas), who had been invited to be present, a draft of proposed instructions to supervisors of voting at the coming municipal and presidential elections. The draft was read paragraph by paragraph, all the representatives present expressing entire satisfaction with it. No alteration was proposed by the Porrista representatives and but a few minor ones by the Government and Unión Patriótica representatives. The principal of these alterations requested related to the hours for opening and closing the polls, which the Unionistas thought might be shortened, and the form in which voters should identify themselves to the voting boards. The former of these requests was finally withdrawn and the draft was altered to meet the Unionistas' desires as to the identification of voters.

On the 18th instant, at the suggestion of Señor Chiari, an additional instruction to supervisors of voting was decided upon by the committee, which was also agreed to by both parties. These instructions have since been printed and translated into Spanish by the Legation, and copies of them are inclosed. Also at the request of the committee these instructions, duly signed by the committee and the representatives of the Government and both parties, have been officially published by the Government, preceded by a decree of President Arosemena approving of them. Further, at the request of the committee, President Arosemena has instructed the Minister of the Interior to send two circular telegrams, one advising all the governors of Provinces of his approval of these instructions, directing them to inform the alcaldes of all districts, and the other informing all governors that the police will be under the orders of the American supervisors during the elections in all that relate to the polling.

Both political parties have now appointed representatives in all the districts to accompany the supervisors, and the Porrista party has issued instructions to its representatives which are modeled upon the committee's own instructions.

The instructions to supervisors, as well as the measures taken relative to them, have been published in extenso in the local press, which has uniformly commented extremely favorably upon them.

Complaints of oppression in numerous different ways are constantly being presented to the committee by the Porrista representatives, while the Government and the Unionista representatives are constantly complaining of the breaches of authority committed by the Porristas and their revolutionary tendencies. These complaints of the Porristas the committee transmits to the Government for its information and investigation. In a few cases where acts of oppression have been corroborated by supervisors, the committee has requested that suitable measures be taken, and in reply the Government has acceded, so far as it is possible to ascertain.

I have [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

[Inclosure 1.]

Instructions to Supervisors of Voting.

Mr. ——— ———:

You are hereby directed to supervise the voting for municipal councilmen and presidential electors of the Republic of Panama, which will take place, respectively, on June 30th and July 14th next, within the district specified in the enclosure herewith, which also states the number of polling places (Mesas de votación) within this district, and the names of the assistants who will accompany you and act under your direction. You will be accompanied, also, by one representative of Señor don Pedro Díaz and a representative of Dr. Belisário Porras. The names of the representatives also appear in the enclosure mentioned. You will proceed to your district, arriving there at least two days before the opening of the polls on June 30th next. Upon your arrival at your district you will immediately inform the local authorities and the several election boards of your presence, and, aided by your assistants, you will carefully compare the various lists of voters in the possession of those boards, respectively, with the general list with which you have been furnished. Should any one of the boards' lists not contain the names of voters that should appear therein according to your list, or should there be names thereon not on your list, you will cause the list not in accord with yours to be corrected so as to make it conform with your list, unless all of the members of the board and the representatives of Señor Díaz and Dr. Porras agree to allow the difference to stand, in which event your list should be made to conform to that of the board in question.

You will then see that the lawful number of suitable voting places has been provided for, and especially that these places are large enough and conveniently located as to allow the voters free and easy access to them, and that they are not crowded, and that they are so situated as to facilitate as much as possible the maintenance of order. In determining upon the polling places to be selected, you will consult the Municipal Council and the representatives of Señor Díaz and Dr. Porras, but you will be governed by your own judgment. You will see that proper arrangements are made for polling at all of the polling places, including the necessary stationery and other necessaries.

You will see that no one is present at the respective voting places during polling hours, except the members of the election board, one representative of Señor Díaz, one representative of Dr. Porras, and yourself or your assistants, in addition to the voters while depositing their votes. You will see that the public is not permitted to approach nearer than 50 feet on any side of the voting place, and this exclusion will extend to everyone except the board, the representatives of the two parties, the voters while depositing their votes, yourself, or your assistants, as above stated.

The polls shall be open at 7 o'clock in the morning, and notice of such opening shall be given by the beating of a drum, or in any other manner sufficient to advise the public that the hour for voting has commenced, and the polls shall remain open until 5 o'clock p. m. of the same day, when a similar notice to the public shall be given of the closing of the polls. It might be well for you to have all of the watches or clocks of the different boards set to conform with your own timepiece, or such other one as you may select, before the polls are opened, so as to secure uniformity of time in all the polling places in the opening and closing of the polls.

From the time of your arrival at your district, you and your assistants are to have charge of the maintenance of order there and especially at and about the polling places, and in addition it shall be the duty of yourself and your assistants to take all necessary measures to prevent the voters from being intimidated, coerced, or having frauds perpetrated upon them in going to the polls, or while depositing their votes there, or while returning thence to their homes, and your authority in this respect will extend throughout your district. Article 60 of Law No. 89 of 1904, on the subject of popular elections, provides that during the hours of voting no one having the right to vote shall be arrested or detained, neither shall he be obliged to appear before the public authorities in any civil proceeding which may interrupt the period of time set aside for the voting. It shall be your duty and that of your assistants to see that this provision of the law is faithfully complied with in your district.

You may call on the police force, or any member thereof, in your district, to aid you in the maintenance of order in and about the polls, and elsewhere in your district when necessary to prevent intimidation, coercion, or fraud in connection with the elections, and you are advised that the police force of the Republic has been placed under the orders of the Supervisory Committee by the President of the Republic for the purposes above mentioned. You will probably find it advisable to have such police as you require armed only with the baton.

During the voting period you will probably find it advisable, in observing the proceedings at the several polling places, to circulate about the streets not immediately around the polls, so as to ascertain whether any interference is offered to persons desiring to cast their votes. Should you discover any such interference, you will call the local authorities and police to put a stop to it, and in case of their failure to do so you will advise the undersigned by telegraph.

The President of the Republic has decreed that no intoxicants shall be sold from 12 o'clock midnight, of June 29 to 12 o'clock midnight, of June 30, next, and from 12 o'clock midnight, of July 13 to 12 o'clock midnight, of July 14 next, at places where the elections are held. You will see that the decree is properly observed in your district. In addition, the representatives of the respective political parties have agreed, with the sanction of the representatives of the Government and of the Supervisory Committee, to instruct all local party leaders not to give away intoxicants during the same periods.

No person should be allowed to vote whose name does not appear upon your list corrected as above described.

Either of the representatives of the two parties present at the voting place may challenge the right of any person offering to vote who is unknown to any member of the election board (jurado). If the person is identified as one whose name appears upon the registration list by his own verbal statements under oath he shall be entitled to cast his vote without delay or discussion.

Privates of the police force shall cast their votes singly and in such a way as to be free from any compulsion on the part of their superiors. Neither officers nor privates of the police force shall have any preference shown them over civilians in casting their votes.

You will endeavor, in a tactful manner, to have the voting proceeded with as rapidly as possible, so that all lawful voters may freely appear and cast their votes. Upon the closing of the polls the counting of the votes cast shall be proceeded with forthwith, and during the count you will take such measures as may appear necessary to preserve order. In case it is not possible to proceed at once with the count you will take such steps, aided by your assistants, as will prevent any tampering with the votes prior to their being counted.

The counting of the votes will be done by the election boards in your presence or that of one or more of your assistants. You or they will carefully observe the counting, and should any irregularity occur in the same you or your assistants will endeavor by friendly council to induce the board to correct it. Should the board fail to do so, you will report such irregularity by telegraph to the undersigned.

Article 103 of the above-mentioned election law declares an election shall be null:

First: When it does not take place on the days fixed by law.

Second. When the voting has not taken place in the presence of at least an absolute majority of the members of the board (jurado).

Third. When, during the hours of voting, violence has been exercised toward the board by private individuals or by the authorities with arms or without arms, provided the violence exercised has caused disorganization or panic in the board and has obliged them to leave the place of voting.

Fourth. When violence has been exercised against the canvassers of the votes, when by reason of such violence the urn has been destroyed, or when the ballots have been mixed or confused with others, or the ballots have been lost, or when a declaration of the result has been made which does not conform to the true result.

Fifth. When the voting has been suspended by the board before the hour fixed, when the list of voters is not put up where it may be examined by the public, or when it is shown that the one that has been put up has been falsified or altered.

Seventh. When the voting has not commenced two hours after the time fixed by law. (As above stated, the hours for polling are from 7 a. m. to 5 p. m., instead of from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m., as provided by Law 89 of 1904.)

You are instructed that if any one, or more, of the conditions mentioned in Article 103 should occur in your district, or if by acts of intimidation or by threats or fraud any voters in your district are not permitted to cast their votes, you will immediately notify the undersigned of that fact by telegraph, and if after considering your report the Supervisory Committee is of the opinion that the acts reported by you have materially affected the result of the election, the committee will then take the necessary steps to have the election at such place declared null and void and a convenient date fixed for another election in your district.

You will telegraph to the undersigned any matters of importance as they may arise, and as soon as possible after the close of the proceedings you will inform the undersigned by telegraph briefly as to the character of the day's proceedings, whether orderly or not, and the number of votes cast for the candidates of each party, marking all of your telegrams "urgente."

You will deliver a full written report to the undersigned upon your return to Panama City, accompanying it with the list of voters handed to you by him. The local authorities and election board within your district have been duly advised by the Panaman Government of your and your assistants' designation, and all proper directions have been issued by the Panaman Government to enable you and them to fully carry out the foregoing instructions.

Copies of these instructions have been furnished to your assistants. You will, however, take an early opportunity to go over these instructions with them so as to insure a due understanding of them and secure efficient and well coordinated action between yourself and your assistants.

Regarding your conduct during your trip, you and your assistants will always be careful to maintain an absolutely impartial attitude and be courteous and tactful in your dealings with all those with whom you come in contact. You will discharge your duties and execute your instructions with firmness, however, but avoid discussing the political situation further than is absolutely required in the discharge of your duties. You will use your best efforts to avoid friction, to settle by friendly advice any controversy which may arise, and, in short, you will do all in your power to secure the results desired by the Supervisory Committee, which is to secure the voting of all persons entitled to do so in the municipal and presidential elections.

A sum of money sufficient to cover your own and your assistants' expenses during your trip will be handed to you by the disbursing officer of the Isthmian Canal Commission, to whom you will make a full accounting supported by vouchers upon your return to Panama City. With this sum you will pay for your own and your assistants' transportation, lodging, board, and other necessary expenses.

The Government of Panama will do everything possible to facilitate your trip.

H. PERCIVAL DODGE,
American Minister,
Chairman Supervisory Committee, American Legation, Panama.

JUNE 15, 1912.

[Inclosure 2.]

Additional Instructions to Supervisors of Voting.

If a member of the board of elections, and his substitute, should fail to appear at the hour fixed for the opening of the polls, or if present should refuse to act, you will see that this vacancy on the board is filled in accordance with Article 30 of Law 89 of 1904.

If the membership of an election board present and acting should be reduced below an absolute majority thereof at any time during the voting hours, from any cause, you will appoint a sufficient number of persons to act on the board to make up the requisite absolute majority of membership, after conferring with the representatives of both parties; but in making the appointments you will use your own judgment.

The person so appointed by you shall act until the regular member of the board, or his substitute, appears and takes his place thereon.

H. PERCIVAL DODGE,
American Minister,
Chairman Supervisory Committee, American Legation, Panama

JUNE 18, 1912.

File No. 819.00/417.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 28, 1912—1 p. m.

Porras's supporters are said to be padding election registers in Panama and Colon with men from Chorrera, Arraijan, and Chagres. The registers used in the municipal elections, it is also reported, will be those used on the national election day. The Department has received this information from the Minister of Panama and transmits it to you for investigation and appropriate action by supervisory committee.

The Minister has further made complaint that you have opposed the making public of a personal letter from the President to Acting President Arosemena thanking him for his congratulations on renomination, and he requests the President's permission to have this letter made public, saying that an exchange of telegrams between the President and Porras has been made public and is being used as political capital. There is no objection to making this letter public, provided it be distinctly understood that both this letter and the telegrams to and from Porras are of a purely personal nature, have absolutely no bearing on the present elections, and can not possibly be distorted into the expression of favor of the United States for one or the other candidate. The attitude of this Government, as is well known, is one of absolute impartiality, its friendship being for the people of Panama and its concern being that the people of Panama shall elect and maintain a good government responsive to its obligations.

KNOX.

File No. 819.00/410.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 28, 1912—3 p. m.

Your June 19. The marine detachment will not be withdrawn. Orders have been issued authorizing, upon your recommendation, the use of marines and infantry to preserve order on election days in Panama and Colon. Should it become indispensable for these forces to be used, you will previously notify Panaman authorities, informing them that such action is taken for the maintenance of public order.

KNOX.

File No. 819.00/415.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, June 30, 1912—8 a. m.

Department's telegram June 28, 1 p. m., regarding statements by Minister of Panama. According to the committee's instructions to supervisors of registration, agreed to by the Government and both parties, all complaints as to registration might be brought before the committee. Several complaints as to registration in Panama and Colon relative to men alleged to be properly from Chorrera, Arraijan, and Chagres were made to the committee, which, hearing both parties, rendered decisions in accordance with the facts before them and the laws and customs of the country

The committee did not oppose publication of the President's letter, provided publication was in such form and with such comments as not to distort its proper character. But it did oppose publication for electoral purposes of a huge circular giving in conspicuous type the text of the letter.

President of Panama and Panaman Government have lately shown a strong disposition to restrict powers of supervisors, although previously agreed to by them and both parties and published in a decree, and to obstruct the supervisors in the exercise of these powers considered necessary by the committee to secure fair elections. The committee has been compelled to appeal to the President several times to induce him to execute his agreement, and although he has now again promised to do so, the committee is not yet entirely satisfied of his good faith.

File No. 819.00/416.

The American Minister to Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, June 30, 1912—11 p. m.

Panama and Colon municipal elections and 20 other of 61 districts of the Republic are all so far heard from, and all passed off satisfactorily. No disturbances of consequence. Porras candidates elected by large majority in nearly all districts.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/427.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 153.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, July 1, 1912.

SIR: * * * Election day itself passed off practically without disorder in Panama City, and all the voting arrangements made by the supervisor proved satisfactory. There were, of course, a few rows. Certain officers of the Panaman police attempted at first to interfere with voters, but were soon made to desist; and there was undoubtedly much repeating by both parties. It will be practically impossible to stop this until a new voting system is adopted. In Colon proceedings also were orderly, except just before the closing of the polls, when some rowdies became somewhat unruly. Reports received from supervisors in other districts are not yet complete (some 15 are still to be heard from), but appear to show that except in a few districts the election passed off satisfactorily and with few disturbances of a minor character. In the large majority of districts the authority of supervisors was respected by the authorities. Also in these provisional districts there was much repeating by both sides. The poll throughout the Republic is undoubtedly the largest ever cast.

In a few districts the Diistas left the polls toward the end of the day, and in one they refused to appear at all, charging in all these cases partiality of the supervisors. Also since the close of the polls the committee has received several notes from Señor Chiari, quoting the text of telegrams from local officials or Diista organizations making the most violent charges of partiality against supervisors. The committee is about to determine upon some steps to investigate these charges, such as possibly sending some man of well-known impartiality to examine into these charges on the spot where sufficient proof is offered and make a reasonable case. In view of the high character of the men sent as supervisors, it would seem most unlikely that these charges have any foundation other than the anger and disappointment of those making them. Should the charges be found to be justified, according to the instructions to supervisors, the elections in any such districts can be annulled by the committee and other elections held, provided the partiality can be shown to have affected the result of the election in question.

Undoubtedly there is an extremely bitter feeling against the committee among the Diistas, who apparently have believed that they would be able, through the Government, to prevent supervision from being effective. The committee have no doubt but that without supervision the Government, through its police and officials, would have been able to secure the election of its candidate for the presidency. No doubt this is the real reason for their bitterness toward the committee and their charges against supervisors. The Diistas will probably not give up without another struggle, and this will very likely be directed against the committee through the Panaman Minister in Washington. Apparently corroborative of this is the reported departure (which I have not as yet been able to verify) for Washington of Señor Carlos Constantino Arosemena, ostensibly with a view to selling certain land.

I have [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

File No. 819.00/419.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, July 3, 1912.

Members of the Unión Patriótica have sent the President a telegram translated as follows:

> The undersigned directors and members of the Patriotic Union, assembled in a special meeting, hereby respectfully present to you our formal protest against the fraudulent and scandalous manner in which the recent elections were carried out, and we earnestly entreat you to have the next ones postponed long enough for us to present proofs to you of the frauds and partialities committed in the elections held yesterday, so that we may request their annulment and that means may be adopted for the holding of a new election which shall record the real opinion of the people.

To which answer is being made on behalf of the President:

> Complaint contained in your telegram, which has been referred to this Department for a reply, would seem to be a matter which might properly be laid before the supervision committee for its recommendation.

Knox.

File No. 819.00/433.

The American Minister to Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 154.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, July 8, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 153 of the 1st instant, I have the honor to inform you that since the municipal elections on the 30th ultimo the supervisory committee has continued to receive numerous notes from Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, usually transcribing telegrams addressed to the Government or Unión Patriótica by local district leaders, complaining, often in most excited language, of alleged partiality shown by the supervisors to the Porrista party. In cases where these charges were so general as to make an investigation impossible the committee has requested the Government to furnish the facts, promising an investigation in that event. In cases where definite facts were alleged the committee addressed telegrams to the supervisors concerned requesting an investigation and report. The reports furnished in reply by these supervisors have appeared satisfactory to the committee and have been transmitted to Señor Chiari, who has been invited when this has appeared proper to submit any further evidence. In no case thus far has the evidence submitted been of such a character as to make it seem desirable to send some one to conduct an investigation on the spot. It may be noted that these complaints received from Señor Chiari only relate to some 13 districts where the result of the polling was especially close.

Since the 30th ultimo also numerous complaints have been received from the supervisors in some 20 districts, many of them—those complained of by the Government—stating serious failures on the part of the authorities to enable them to execute the instructions to supervisors of voting, notwithstanding the efforts of the committee detailed in my despatch No. 153 of the 1st instant, and President Arosemena's repeated assurances and telegraphic instructions to the local officials. The principal difficulties, as might have been anticipated, were to secure execution of the President's agreement placing the police and their armament at the disposal of the committee. The local authorities did all in their power to have the police remain armed. In these districts also the supervisors reported that the Government was endeavoring in many ways to intimidate the Porrista voters, making use extensively of a system of arresting the Porrista leaders in order not only to intimidate their followers but to break up their party organization. Complaints similar to those of the supervisors were received continually from the representatives of the Porrista party. From these reports the committee became convinced that the Government had by no means abandoned its struggles to win the presidential election on the 14th by the usual processes of intimidation and playing fast and loose with its agreements. At the same time rumors which seemed to have some foundation were current to the effect that at the next elections the Government would entirely refuse to observe its agreements and make an attempt to win the election at all costs.

The committee thereupon considered it necessary to have an interview with President Arosemena and place the situation clearly before him, at the same time making certain categorical demands which appeared to be covered by the authority already granted to it and which appeared to be absolutely necessary to end the continued prevarication of the authorities and do away with at least their most powerful means of intimidation. Moreover, if President Arosemena really desired a fair election there seemed to be no good reason why he should have any objection to granting them. These demands were (1) that the instructions contained in the President's telegram of the 28th ultimo to the governors and alcaldes should be reissued; (2) that all firearms in the possession of the police should be deposited under such guard as the supervisor might appoint from now until the end of the electoral period; (3) that the supervisors should have all proper facilities to investigate all cases of arrest, so as to prevent arrests for electoral purposes; and (4) that such instructions should be given as to prevent any further failure of the authorities to allow persons entitled thereto under decree 44 of the 20th ultimo to vote.

Upon hearing these demands of the committee the President appeared to be considerably excited and complained again of the partiality of the supervisors. He requested the committee to confirm its demands in writing. This was done to-day.

On the 6th instant Señor Ramón Arias Feraud, jr., a son-in-law of the Minister in Washington, and a member, though not a leading one, of the Unión Patriótica, called upon Colonel Goethals and, stating that all he wished was to secure honest government, asked him for his "advice" as to whether the committee would be willing to present to the representatives of the Porrista party a proposition to the effect that the Unión Patriótica would retire from further activity if the Porrista party would guarantee to the United States that when they took office they would place the police and finances under American supervision and reform the electoral laws. Colonel Goethals reported this conversation to the committee, which unanimously authorized him to reply to Señor Arias that it would be willing to convey such a proposal to the Porrista representatives, provided it was made formally by the Unión Patriótica. To-day, however, Señor Arias handed to the committee, instead of the proposal mentioned, another signed by the directors of the Unión Patriótica, stating that, in case it won the elections, the Unión Patriótica agreed (1) to reorganize the police according to a plan to be agreed upon by the Panaman and American Governments; (2) to request the Assembly to create the post of auditor of the treasury, to which an American would be appointed; and (3) to present a bill to the Assembly for changing the present defective election laws. The committee thereupon informed Señor Arias that it could do nothing with such a proposal; and he stated that he would endeavor again to have the Unión Patriótica make the proposal he first mentioned, which some of the more impetuous members had as yet refused to consider. He promised a reply to the committee for to-morrow, which, if it is the proposal first mentioned by Señor Arias, will then simply be handed to the Porras representatives as at the request of the Diista party. Should the Porrista party accept it, the matter will then be telegraphed to the Department with a recommendation that the Department authorize the committee to communicate to both parties its acceptance of the promises made to it by the Porrista party in connection with the agreement between both parties. It seems likely that the Porristas would accept such an arrangement if offered, in view of certain declarations of Dr. Porras, but it seems less likely that the Unión Patriótica will agree to make this offer. Nothing certainly could be more advantageous to Panama than placing their finances and police under American supervision and thus removing the two worst features of the Panaman Government—incurable extravagance and despotic police.

Referring to the Department's telegram of July 3, the Unión Patriótica has to-day presented a note to the committee stating that the recent elections had been fraudulent in nearly all districts and that the Unión Patriótica desired to present proofs of this, which it possessed. The committee has replied to this, stating that it will give earnest consideration to the proofs which the Unión Patriótica may care to submit.

I have [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 319.112D29/2.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.—Extract.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, July 9, 1912.

Conduct of police[1] from statements so far received is so outrageous that I recommend request for suspension of Quijano, chief of police, and Ossa, inspector general, who apparently were not present during firing but who are responsible for present dangerous character of police.

The supervisory committee thinks it necessary for fair elections, in view of continued efforts of the authorities to intimidate voters, to request Government to order immediate [deposit] of all arms of police in police stations under guard of supervisors during election.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/428.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 11, 1912.

Action reported in your 149, 152, and 153 approved. Regarding your July 9, the Panaman Minister has requested of the President the postponement of next Sunday's election; he makes several charges of partiality against the supervising committee, none of which the Department considers well founded. This Government will not, as at present advised, take part in postponing the election.

---

[1] See under "Assault upon American citizens in Panama," under date of July 9.

The Minister to-day endeavored to demonstrate that Panama would be ruined if the Government candidate did not succeed. He was told that this Government had full confidence in the supervising committee and proposed to stand by it; that this Government would perform the obligation which it had assumed at the specific request of both parties and of the Government of Panama to see that fair elections were held throughout Panama.

You will so inform the President of Panama and insist that he comply with his agreement that the supervising committee shall have control of the police.

KNOX.

File No. 819.00/429.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, July 13, 1912.

Minister for Foreign Affairs replied to request of committee relative to arms reported in my July 9, that arms could be deposited only under guard of the police themselves. Committee has informed him that it could not agree to this interpretation of its authority and duties under President of Panama decree approving instructions to supervisors, and would proceed to comply with these duties, notifying supervisors fully to assert their proper authority.

Unión Patriótica having requested committee to examine evidence of electoral frauds and put off election until August 11, committee consented to former request, but stated that no proper ground had been shown to consent to latter. Unión Patriótica yesterday published manifesto that Diaz withdrew, and advising their friends not to vote on account of electoral frauds rendering such voting useless.

DODGE.

File No. 819.00/432.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, July 16, 1912—6 p. m.

Nearly all the supervisors have been heard from. They report satisfactory and orderly elections on 14th, Diaz party not voting.

Yesterday rowdies in Panama committed numerous outrages, none so far as known upon Americans. I have impressed upon Minister for Foreign Affairs urgent necessity for promptly stopping this, which is apparently countenanced by the police.

DODGE.

File N. 819.00/434.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 161.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, July 20, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that on the 10th instant the committee received a reply from Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, to its note addressed to him on the 8th instant (despatch No. 154) making certain categorical requests. This reply granted the first request of the committee, namely, the reissue of the President's instructions of the 28th ultimo, but accompanied this grant with charges against numerous supervisors, some of which had already previously been made by Señor Chiari and satisfactorily explained by the committee. The reply refused the second request of the committee, the most important one, namely, that all firearms in the possession of the police should be deposited under such guard as the supervisors might appoint until the end of the electoral period, stating that the President was constitutionally unable to grant such a request. The note, however, offered that the arms should be deposited in the police stations and should not be used "except to arrest persons guilty of unusual crimes, maintain order, or reestablish it, according to the requests of the supervisors." Accompanying this offer the note made serious reflections upon the elections of the 30th ultimo, and also made the statement, remarkable in view of the extremely numerous instances brought to Señor Chiari's attention, that "no information had been received that the authorities or police in that district had impeded voters of the opposition party from making use of their right to vote." Regarding this, the third request, that the supervisors should have all proper facilities to investigate all cases of arrests so as to prevent arrests for political purposes, the reply merely stated that orders would be issued to take especial care to favor members of the opposition party in the exercise of the suffrage. As to the fourth and last request, that instructions should be given to prevent any further failure of the authorities to allow persons accused or sentenced for minor offenses to vote, in accordance with decree No. 44 of the 20th ultimo, the reply agreed to issue such instructions.

Señor Chiari's reply appeared to the committee to give entirely insufficient guaranties of the Government's fair intentions and to be argumentative and even bordering upon the offensive in character. The committee accordingly decided to make no further endeavors to induce the Panaman Government to issue further instructions, but—standing upon the authority already granted to them in Señor Chiari's note of June 11 last (despatch No. 149), by which the control of the police and the disposition of their arms were left to the committee, and that granted in the President's decree approving the instructions to supervisors of voting (despatch No. 152)—merely to reply to Señor Chiari that the committee were unable to agree with the President's interpretation of these documents, which, if it were correct, would not enable them to perform properly the duties imposed upon them by the President himself and by the Government of the United States; and that the committee would faithfully comply with these duties and would accordingly instruct the supervisors to assert all authority given them by the decree mentioned. The text of the instructions to be sent to the supervisors was subsequently quoted in the note to Señor Chiari. These instructions were then telegraphed to all the 61 supervisors and were subsequently repeated when not duly acknowledged.

To this note Señor Chiari replied on the 12th instant in a long communication alleging that the Government had not desired to limit the powers of the supervisors, but merely to determine them. Señor Chiari then alleged that certain supervisors had so far overstepped their proper powers that in some districts "the Government of the Republic had ceased to exist," and stated that the Government did not agree with the committee's interpertation of the documents mentioned. Regarding the instructions telegraphed to the supervisors, Señor Chiari asserted that the Government did not approve of the powers given them to investigate arrests. His note ended by quoting a telegram sent to the governors and alcaldes instructing them to give all support to the supervisors according to the instructions given by the Government and the committee, reporting any departure of the supervisors from these instructions.

The committee decided that no reply to this note was necessary.

Meanwhile, until the 10th instant, nothing further had been heard from Señor Ramón Arias Feraud, jr., who, as stated in my despatch No. 154, had expressed a desire to make a further attempt to induce the Unión Patriótica to agree to retire its candidate, provided the Porrista party was willing to guarantee to the United States that when they took office they would place the police and finances under American supervision and reform the electoral laws. Finally, on the 10th instant Señor Ramón Arias called upon me and declared that his further efforts had been useless.

Señores Tomas Arias and Julio Fabrega, the representatives of the Unión Patriótica before the committee, resigned from this representation about the 10th instant, stating that they considered their further service to be useless. It will be remembered that on the 10th instant the committee had answered their note dated the 8th instant (but only received late on the 9th instant), stating that they would give careful consideration to such evidence of fraud in the elections as the Unión Patriótica desired to submit (despatch No. 154). On the 11th instant the committee received a letter from Señor Ramon Arias, who had been appointed to succeed Señores Tomas Arias and Fabrega, inclosing a large number of telegrams and other documents, which he stated to be part of the evidence of fraud in the elections of the 30th ultimo. He further stated that more evidence would be submitted later and that his party "trusted that the committee would also take into consideration that the irregularities and frauds shown by this evidence were such that until they were corrected the political party to whose prejudice they had been committed would not have sufficient confidence to go to the polls on the next elections" (14th instant). Accordingly, his party requested that the elections should be put off until August 11, so that proper measures might be taken to avoid a repetition of the alleged frauds.

To this the committee replied on the following day stating again that this evidence would be given earnest consideration, but that no sufficient ground had yet been shown for putting off the elections fixed by law for the 14th instant. On the following day the committee received a further parcel of documents from Señor Arias said to be additional evidence, and on the 12th instant it received another letter from him. This letter acknowledged the receipt of the committee's letter and stated that the Unión Patriótica justly complained of the partiality of the committee, for which reason "solely" it had decided that its members throughout the Republic should not vote. Señor Arias ended his letter by stating that he was "authorized to withdraw the request for the annulment of the elections and to demand the return of the evidence submitted in order to make better use of it," again protesting formally against the partiality of the committee and the supervisors.

It is a fact that owing to the extremely defective voting system here repeating is frequent and is practically impossible to prevent. During the election on the 30th ultimo, however, the reports received by the committee point strongly to repeating and fraudulent swearing of identity being indulged in practically equally by both parties. It would seem certain, therefore, that these frauds did not affect the result of the voting. The committee naturally did not consider that its authority extended to reforming the voting system of the Republic, which, moreover, it would not have had time to do, and which would have involved changes in this substantive law. Such changes in the substantive law the committee at the very beginning of its work duly announced that it would not make. Finally, it may be noted that the committee was not requested to make any such changes by either party until after the defeat of one of them. On the contrary, the system of voting as prescribed by law was set forth in the instructions to supervisors of voting and was accepted by both parties with only a slight change proposed by the Unión Patriótica, which was accepted by the committee (despatch No. 152).

As the day of the election for presidential electors approached rumors of some covert hostile action on the part of the Government became more and more persistent. On the 12th instant the Unión Patriótica published a long "manifesto" announcing the withdrawal of Señor Diaz's candidacy, and again charging fraud and partiality of the supervisors. On the 13th instant I telegraphed to the Department giving briefly the situation. On the preceding day I received the Department's telegram of July 11, which, according to the directions in it, I communicated to Señor Chiari for the information of President Arosemena. This materially strengthened the committee's position. The withdrawal of the Unión Patriótica had been expected for some days, and it is probable that it had been deferred to await the result of Señor Carlos Constantino Arosemena's visit to Washington (despatch No. 153). On the same day on which the Department's telegram was received it was credibly reported that the Government had received a telegram from Señor Ricardo Arias, Panaman Minister at Washington, to the effect that further hope was useless, since the American Government supported the committee. It was on the evening of this same day that the manifesto above mentioned appeared.

The 14th instant, the day of the election, passed off with perfect order and quiet in Panama City and Colon, and, in fact, in all the districts of the Republic. The committee, in view of the attitude of the Government and the current reports, had taken certain precautions, sending a number of additional assistant supervisors to the districts where the officials were known to be most partisan.

The result of the voting, in which the Diistas took no part, showed a vote for Dr. Porras practically similar to that cast for him on the 30th ultimo.

The feeling of the Diista party is, of course, intensely bitter, and this bitterness is naturally directed especially against the members of the committee and to some extent against Americans in general. In fact, rumors of violence to the members of the committee have been current. For this reason I have advised the commanders of the infantry regiment and marines not to allow their men in Panama for some days to come. No overt acts have as yet been committed nor do I now think that any will occur, as the indications are that the Government is at last really exerting itself to rid the police of its most dangerous elements. Indeed, the Government now appears to appreciate that the large number of dangerous characters which it has collected for electoral purposes and given employment to as policemen, plain-clothes men, supernumerary laborers, or agents provocateurs may well, now that it has no more favors to offer them, get out of hand and prove to be a source of danger to itself. Another good feature of the present situation is the evident effort which the Porrista party is making to conciliate its recent opponents.

Though it seems almost incredible, in view of the repeated unequivocal declarations of our Government, President Arosemena's Government has up to the last deluded itself with the idea that by insistence and persistence it would at last be able to secure support from the United States. By the action of the Porrista party in asking for supervision of the elections, the Government was forced also to ask for such supervision itself, but in doing so it did not expect that this supervision would be effective and prevent it from making use of its official powers.

The committee believe that both of the recent elections have been as fair and free from fraud as the circumstances admit, and that the candidates favored by the great majority of the voters have been elected. What frauds have been perpetrated have been unavoidable under the present election laws, which should be changed, and have probably been perpetrated equally by both parties, unless they have been perpetrated more extensively by the Diista party. So far as they have been able to learn, the committee also believe that the supervisors and their assistants, who are all men of good standing, military officers and noncommissioned officers and employees of the Isthmian Canal Commission, have done their duty well and impartially, often under the most trying conditions. If in some cases possibly they may slightly have overstepped their authority, this has undoubtedly been due to the provocative attitude of many local officials and in accordance with the supervisors' best judgment in order to avoid serious trouble. This can not have affected the result of the voting.

Many persons whose opinion appears entitled to weight have informed the committee that the recent elections are the fairest which Panama has ever had. The press is entirely partisan and, since the recent disappearance of Los Hechos, entirely pro-Porras. Its opinion as to the elections is, therefore, naturally extremely favorable. To-day the committee has received a letter from the liberal and conservative branches of the Porrista party, expressing their gratitude to the Government of the United States and to the committee for "the great service rendered to our country by having secured free and pure elections."

I have [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

File No. 819.00/438.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 166.]

American Legation,
Panama, July 27, 1912.

Sir: Referring to my despatch No. 161, of the 20th instant, I have the honor to inform you that no further complaints relative to the recent supervision of the elections have been received by the committee from the Panaman Government since my last despatch.

On the whole, with a few unimportant exceptions, quiet and order seems to exist throughout the Republic, and after consulting with the Porrista representatives, who have stated that this would not be necessary, the committee have decided not to send representatives to supervise the meetings of the presidential electors which take place in each provincial capital on August 1 and 2 for the purpose of casting their votes. The final electoral proceedings, which are purely of a formal character, will take place at Panama City on September 1, when the votes of the electors will be opened by the electoral council and the result of the election solemnly announced.

All the supervisors and their assistants have now returned, including one or more who remained in each district to supervise the counting on the 21st instant of the returns of the election on the 14th instant.

According to the Constitution, Dr. Porras will be inaugurated President on October 1 next.

The committee have arranged with Colonel Goethals to have all the accounts of the supervisors audited by the examiner of accounts of the Isthmian Canal Commission, who will send them, when approved, to the disbursing officer. Eventually the disbursing officer will render a full account to the committee covering all disbursements and supported by vouchers, which will then be transmitted to Señor Chiari, together with any unexpended balance. A copy of this account will also be sent to the Department.

I have [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

File No. 819.00/437.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, August 3, 1912.

Porras unanimously elected President of Panama yesterday by the electoral assemblies.

DODGE.

INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT PORRAS.

File No. 819.001 P 82.

The President to the President of Panama.

[Telegram.]

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, October 1, 1912.

In extending to Your Excellency on the occasion of your inauguration the felicitations of the Government of the United States, I express my own sentiments and those of my fellow citizens in wishing, for the Republic, continued prosperity and happiness under your administration.

WM. H. TAFT.

File No. 819.001 P 82/3.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 220.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, October 2, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform the Department that the inauguration of Dr. Belisario Porras as President of the Republic of Panama occurred yesterday in a dignified and orderly manner and amid expressions of genuine enthusiasm upon the part of both the number of those who were present at the National Theater at the inaugural ceremony and by the populace assembled in large numbers on the streets about the theater and the Presidential Palace.

The inaugural address contained very friendly and appreciative references to the United States.

I have [etc.],

WM. WHITING ANDREWS.

File No. 819.001 P 82/2.

The Chargé d'Affaires of Panama to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

No. 30.] LEGATION OF PANAMA,
Washington, October 4, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your excellency that His Excellency Dr. Belisario Porras, President elect of the Republic of Panama for the constitutional term from 1912 to 1916, took possession of his high office on the first of this month.

With feelings [etc.],

JUAN BRIN.

File No. 819.001 P 82/4.

The Secretary for Foreign Affairs to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

No. 3210.]

FOREIGN OFFICE,
Panama, October 14, 1912.

MR. SECRETARY: Accompanied by the customary copy, I have the honor to transmit to your excellency the autograph letter which His Excellency Dr. Belisario Porras addresses to His Excellency W. H. Taft, President of the United States, announcing to him that he has assumed the presidency of the Republic of Panama.

I beg your excellency to be kind enough to have the mentioned sealed envelope reach its high destination and to accept for it my most cordial thanks.

I avail [etc.]

E. T. LEFEVRE.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The President of Panama to the President.

PRESIDENTIAL PALACE,
Panama, October 1, 1912.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: I fulfill the pleasant duty of communicating to Your Excellency that, having been called by the vote of my fellow citizens to occupy the First Magistracy of the Republic, I have to-day assumed the Supreme Command, beginning thus the constitutional period of my Government.

In bringing this act to the knowledge of Your Excellency I take pleasure in declaring to you that, in the fulfillment of my duties, I shall take especial pains to bind more closely the ties of sincere friendship which happily unite our respective countries.

I present [etc.]

B. PORRAS.

File No. 819.001 P 82/4.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 31, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 14th instant in which you enclose, with office copy, an autograph letter addressed to the President of the United States by His Excellency the President of Panama, in which the latter announces that he has assumed charge of the Presidency of the Republic of Panama.

In reply I have the honor to say that His Excellency's letter has been laid before the President, and that his reply will shortly be transmitted through the American Legation at Panama.

Accept [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 819.001 P 82/4.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 89.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 14, 1912.

SIR: I enclose, with office copy, a letter addressed by the President to His Excellency Belisario Porras, acknowledging his letter of October 1 last in which he announced his election to the Presidency of Panama and his entrance upon the duties of that office.

You will forward the copy to the Foreign Office and deliver the original in the manner most agreeable to His Excellency.

I am [etc.],

P. C. KNOX.

[Inclosure.]

The President to the President of Panama.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, November 1, 1912.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: I have received the letter of the 1st of October last in which Your Excellency announced that, having been chosen to occupy the First Magistracy of the Republic, you had on that day assumed the Supreme Command.

I cordially reciprocate the sentiments you express for the continuance of the friendly relations which have heretofore existed between the United States and Panama, and I assure Your Excellency of my best wishes for your personal welfare and for the prosperity of the Republic over which you have been called to preside.

Your Good Friend,

WM. H. TAFT.

RAILROAD CONCESSIONS TO FOREIGNERS AND THEIR RELATION TO THE CANAL.—ATTITUDE OF THE UNITED STATES.

File No. 819.77/69.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 169.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, September 9, 1911.

SIR: Referring to the Department's telegraphic instruction of September 2, 8 p. m.,[1] on the subject of the extension desired by Mr. Dziuk, the concessionary for the Darien Railroad, I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy of my note to the Panaman Foreign Office, of August 8, together with a copy and translation of the reply received from the Foreign Office of the same date.

It may throw some light upon the tone of this reply to say that I have ascertained that the Secretary of Foreign Relations was unaware of the fact that the Secretary of Fomento had taken up the matter with Colonel Goethals; that he had made proposals to him for transmittal to the Secretary of War, and had given him to understand that he desired a definite answer to the question at issue.

---

[1] Not printed; it informed the Minister that the subject specified was being considered.

There is no doubt that Mr. Dziuk has been extremely active in pressing not only the permission to extend the concession, but that the matter be definitely settled without further delay.

I am informed that the supposed reason for Mr. Dziuk urging the extension of the concession is that the German and English capitalists back of the Balboa and Pacific Estates Company declined to furnish him with sufficient funds to carry on the enterprise unless he would secure these extensions covering the entire eastern half of the Republic of Panama.

I have [etc.]

WM. W. ANDREWS.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

No. 90.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, September 8, 1911.

EXCELLENCY: Referring to previous correspondence with your excellency's Government on the subject of railways in the Republic of Panama, I desire to bring to your excellency's attention the subject of railway concessions in general in the Republic, and in particular, the proposed extension of the Dziuk railway concession from the headwaters of the Chucunaque River via Chepo to the Sandías River, which the American Government understands it to be the desire of the Panaman Government to grant.

These questions are of such importance as will make it unavoidable that a considerable further time be devoted to their investigation and consideration by the Government of the United States. The new ramifications of the railway plans under consideration introduce many new and important elements, creating a situtation materially different from that of last year.

All railway development in the Republic of Panama bears, potentially where not actually, a relation to the immensely important American interests created by the construction of the canal; and it is in order to properly safeguard these interests, while yet conforming to a just appreciation of the rights of the Republic of Panama, that abundant time must be employed in their consideration. The fundamentals of American and Panaman relations are involved in this matter of railway development.

Permit me therefore, excellency, to especially impress upon your attention that, meanwhile, it is most essential that the Government of Panama refrain from any further commitments.

Accept [etc.].

WM. WHITING ANDREWS.

[Inclosure 2.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Panama, September 8, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to refer to your important communication No. 90, of this same date, in relation to the construction of railroads in the Republic and especially to the concession granted to Mr. August Dziuk for the exploitation of one in the region of the Darien.

As you know, by the correspondence which I have had the honor to hold with you upon this same subject, the Government of Panama has not lost sight of its obligation to give the United States all the protection which it needs for the execution and preservation of the Canal.

Respecting the concession granted to Mr. Dziuk, the Government has not changed its conduct. It was agreed with the Honorable Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War of the United States, to wait until the American Government should fully consider the question, and this has been done. In nothing, absolutely in nothing, has the status of this matter been changed, and I can assure you most emphatically that my Government will take no step tending to separate itself from the agreement.

But if this assurance and those which have been made previously in the same sense were not sufficient to tranquilize the American Government, permit me to suggest the advisability of indicating to us the form in which we can guarantee our promise. This would have, for us, the further advantage of allowing us to complete, immediately following, an agreement relative to the demarcation of the cities of Panama and Colon, which is at present at a standstill on this account.

I will appreciate it if you will communicate the foregoing to your Government and inform me of its decision in respect thereto.

I have [etc.]

FEDERICO BOYD.

File No. 819.77/71.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 173.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, September 12, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to report that Mr. August Dziuk, concerning whom there has been considerable correspondence between the Department and this Legation in relation to the Balboa and Pacific Estates Company, Limited, and railway development in Panama, called upon me this morning and stated that he is leaving Saturday for Washington (en route to Germany) to interview the American Government with regard to his affairs and is considering opening an office in New York for the purpose of interesting American capital.

Mr. Dziuk asked for a letter of introduction for use at the Department. I suggested that he would naturally come to our Government with an introduction from his Embassy in Washington, but that I would give him a personal note of introduction, as he requested.

The exact composition of the body of capitalists which he represents is a little in doubt as it is given out that it is made up of English capitalists rather more than of German. Such introduction to our Government as he may receive through the German Embassy will probably make more clear his standing.

Mr. Dziuk asked for a map and showed me the exact original concession, explaining that the territory, which he himself had been the first white man to explore, was very rich in gold. He stated that he had met with no opposition in obtaining the concession covering this first area of country and to the railroads covered by that concession. When he pointed out the route of his proposed extension to or near Panama, I asked him why he sought this. He showed some embarrassment saying that his original concession was no good without this concession, and that the territory through which the proposed line would run was very fertile and rich.

Mr. Dziuk evidently was cognizant, from Panaman sources, of the real reasons why his projects are obnoxious to our Government; and I thought it well to state that the opposition he had met with was not because of his nationality but that it would be quite the same if he were of any other foreign nation, saying that the American Government, realizing that the canal is not only a commercial but a military measure, naturally considers everything from that viewpoint, even looking far ahead into the future. I remarked that the American Government had no objections to himself as an individual.

In conclusion, I said to Mr. Dziuk that while I could not with propriety have suggested his going to Washington to see my Government, however, since he had himself determined on this course, I would say that I had no doubt it would prove more satisfactory to him to discuss his affairs at headquarters.

I have [etc.]

Wm. Whiting Andrews.

File No. 819.77/70.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 174.]

American Legation,
Panama, September 14, 1911.

Sir: Referring to previous correspondence concerning the bids for the construction of the Panama-David railroad, I have the honor to inform the Department that as all three of the American bidders found objection to the limitations and lack of elasticity in the law covering the conditions under which the bids were to be made, and as the President of the Republic, on his part, found none of the three bids satisfactory, by a mutual agreement between the several bidders and himself President Arosemena has called a special session of the National Assembly to convene on the 25th instant for the purpose of modifying the law.

The only feature definitely known wherein it is proposed to change the law is to make possible the selling of bonds to cover the cost of the railroad at a price less than par, the present law forbidding the sale of such bonds below par.

One of the bidders, Mr. L. E. Myers, with whom is affiliated Rollins & Sons, bankers, of Boston, has allowed it to be publicly supposed that he is returning to the United States, having definitely finished his connection with the bids for the construction of this railroad, but in confidence he has informed me that he has an understanding with President Arosemena that he will return and bid again if the law is changed as above.

In the Star and Herald of this morning it is announced that another of the bidders, Mr. Knowlton, is also returning to the United States, having withdrawn from the competition.

A British subject, Mr. Gillingham, spoke to me yesterday, saying that he was prepared to make a bid for the bonds to be issued, of 98. This will be considerably higher than any American bid, undoubtedly. Mr. Myers, for example, has been considering offering 92. Mr. Gillingham asked me whether I was able to tell him if the United States Government could, and if so, whether it would, prevent the Government of Panama from pledging as security for these bonds the principal which they have invested in real estate mortgages in the United States of $6,000,000. I told him that I was unable to say, officially, that they would, but that I was quite certain the convention between the two Governments was such as to enable the American Government to do so if it wished.

In this connection I wish to quote, on the authority of Mr. Myers, a remarkable statement made to him by Mr. Nicanor Obarrio, who is, beyond question, one of the most prominent and wealthiest Panamans. Mr. Obarrio said that there was a considerable opinion existing in Panama that the Government of Panama ought to spend the $6,000,000 above referred to in the construction of this railroad, saying that it was their money to do with as they pleased. As he is a very responsible person, it is probable that he really voiced a sentiment, concealed but existing.

I have [etc.]

Wm. Whiting Andrews.

File No. 819.77/58.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 89.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 20, 1911.

Sir: The Dziuk railroad concession, from its origin down to its present status, itself raises questions requiring great circumspection on the part of the Department and of the Legation. The questions which it raises are, moreover, typical ones, so likely to recur from time to time in one or another form that it is evidently desirable to define with sufficient clarity the position of the United States and the plain duty and interest of the Republic of Panama in such cases.

First of all, it will be useful to epitomize what appears to be the history and status of the Dziuk concession.

On October 22, 1910, the Legation wrote the Department that the Balboa and Pacific Estates, Limited, an English corporation, with its home office at 312 Regent Street, London, had, through its Panama agents, applied for a concession to construct a narrow-gauge railroad in the Darien region, District of Chepigana, running from the mouth of the River Piñas to a point on the left bank of the River Tuira. The company desired also an option to continue the road to some point more or less near the headwaters of the River Chucunaque. The Legation at the same time transmitted a copy of the proposed concession as submitted by the company, attention being called to the wholesale grant of public land on each side of the right of way, in addition to the lands necessary for the work of construction. In the same dispatch the company was alleged to be the proprietor of three mines near the mouth of the River Piñas. The Legation stated that the railroad was not designed for the development of these mines, and ascribed the company's efforts to the desire to secure vast tracts of public lands, without adequate compensation, in a country where the railroad could not for many years prove commercially profitable.

Regarding the economic aspect of the proposed concession, Maj. Gen. George W. Davis was good enough quite unofficially to express to the Department his very valuable views. General Davis pointed out that the country traversed was most sparsely populated, with Indians only; that its timber resources could now be exploited through water transportation cheaper than by rail; that the valley of the Chucunaque was one of the most unhealthy in the world; that the construction would be expensive; and that the railroad, with practical certainty, could not be profitable either to the company or to the Republic. General Davis also pointed out that two hundred years ago a British attempt to colonize the Darien region had resulted in disaster and great financial loss.

In the same dispatch of October 22, 1910, the Legation stated that the proposition would at once be submitted to the National Assembly, intimating that if the Department considered the project objectionable an intimation by telegraph might remove it from consideration. The draft contract was for ninety-nine years; it had one article seemingly monopolistic as to railroad construction in the territory concerned, and the land grants seemed excessive.

On November 7, 1910, the Department instructed the Legation to suggest to the Government of Panama the desirability of granting only alternate sections of public lands along the railroad, at the same time intimating in general terms the interest of the United States in the development of Panama.

The Legation's dispatch of October 22, 1910, was read by the Chief of the Isthmian Canal Commission in the War Department, who suggested no change in the Department's telegram of November 7, 1910. A copy of the correspondence to this point was sent to the War Department on November 11, 1910, and was acknowledged without comment.

In a dispatch of November 8, 1910, the Legation notified the Department that the suggestion to grant only alternate sections of land had been informally made, and that before ratifying the concession such a modification was likely to be made, since both the executive and the legislative branches of the Government of Panama evinced every desire to act in conformity with the wishes of the United States.

On February 1, 1911, the Consulate-General at Panama dispatched to the Department a translation of contract No. 2.

On February 2, 1911, the Washington Herald printed a telegram, dated the previous day at Colon, forecasting the early ratification of a railway concession to the Balboa and Pacific Estates, Limited, and alleging that the concession would provide for a railroad from one end of the Republic to the other and that as an evolution of the old Darien project it was to open up the virgin country of the Pacific slope, to parallel the coast and ultimately to form an important link in the inevitable Pan-American system. After speaking of an English invasion and possible sphere of influence, the article intimated that, contrary to expectation, American opposition had not developed, and that therefore the concession, involving enormous land grants, would be consummated within a few weeks.

After examining this newspaper report, the Latin-American Division, not having before it the second draft contract, gained the impression that the proposed concession had nothing to do with any proposed railroad from Colon to the cocoanut country along the Atlantic, nor with the Panama-David railroad project then pending, and that, although American exploitation would be far preferable to exploitation by foreigners, still, in general, the material development of Panama through railroad construction should be encouraged if properly safeguarded. Owing, however, to the intimation of possible monopoly in the Darien region and the valley of the Chucunaque, for which an optional extension was included in the application of the company, the Latin-American Division recommended that the Department inquire whether any contemplated exclusive rights were such as to interfere with a future Pan-American railway system. In the Department's telegram of February 3, 1911, embodying this inquiry, the Legation was also instructed to report at once whether the concession had been modified to give only alternate land sections.

In its telegram of the following day the Legation replied that the Minister for Foreign Affairs stated that the concession now conconformed in principle to the suggestion regarding only alternate land sections, and did not confer exclusive rights which could interfere with the Pan-American railroad system, Article III containing the seemingly monopolistic feature having been omitted from the concession. The same telegram added that the concession had been approved.

On February 4, 1911, the Legation transmitted a copy of the same second draft contract which had been sent by the Consulate-General. A copy of this second draft contract was sent to the War Department, on May 13, 1911, and an additional copy with the Legation's covering despatch of February 4, 1911, was transmitted to the War Department on May 19, 1911.

This despatch from the Legation made it clear that it was the second draft contract which had been approved, and that it had been approved only by the President of Panama. The proposal had not been favorably acted upon by the National Assembly at its regular session, but had been again submitted to it by the President at its special session. The concession so pending, then, was free from the objection as to alternate land sections, and purported to be free from potential conflict with a Pan-American railroad. The second draft contract, however, had been expanded and changed in numerous respects. For example, in addition to embodying a provision similar to that at the end of Article I in the first draft contract, whereby the company was to have the right to continue the railroad to some point more or less near the headwaters of the River Chucunaque, crossing the River Tuira, and partially crossing the valley of the Chucunaque, Article II purports to give the concessionaire an option to construct any other branches deemed necessary for the development of the enterprise (subject to all the stipulations of the contract), upon written application to the Executive Power for permission to begin to locate such branches.

It may here be observed that the Department now for the first time had before it the draft of a project sufficiently elaborated to challenge any measure of serious attention even if it had been possible to assume that the Government of Panama could have for a moment considered proceeding beyond the most tentative steps, in a matter involving problems of such obvious joint interest, without officially seeking thorough and deliberate consultation with the Government of the United States.

In a despatch of April 19, 1911, the Legation informed the Department that the concessionaries had cabled their representative in Panama, Dr. Inocencio Galindo, directing him to secure from the President of the Republic authority to extend the railroad from Chepo to Panama, since they desired to construct such a branch simultaneously with what was called the principal line—that is, the one to run from Puerto Piñas to the River Tuira. As the Legation pointed out, it was perceived to be obvious that no such extension could be built without traversing a section of the Canal Zone, since the city of Panama is surrounded by the territory of the Zone. The President of Panama, the Legation reported, had not yet taken any action on this fresh proposal. With the same despatch the Legation transmitted published telegraphic correspondence between the Panaman representative of the syndicate and Messrs. Dziuk, Tiktin and Hoffman, speaking for those in Europe supposed to be interested in the project. The tone of the telegrams from Berlin was such as to seem to show clearly enough that their senders looked to these extraordinary extensions of the concession as the really essential part of the project which had been so innocently proposed as a small railway concession in the Darien region. Mr. Galindo, in his replies to Berlin, demurred, and asked for formal documents. In its telegram saying that these could not yet be sent because Mr. Dziuk had gone to New York, the remark was made that if necessary the syndicate would obligate itself to buy railway materials in the United States.

With the same dispatch the Legation transmitted an article from the Panama Journal of April 18, 1911, calmly assuming that these great extensions should be granted; advocating the introduction of European capital; commenting upon the interest said to be taken by a certain European country in everything relating to the interests of Panama; referring, in illustration of the same thought, to an alleged extensive German agricultural undertaking near by in Colombia, with harbor projects on the coast; and, in conclusion, admitting the power of the United States to refuse the right of way through the Zone and advocating the removal, through diplomacy, of this obstacle.

On May 2, 1911, the Department called upon the Legation for a report as to surveys, physical features, and commercial purposes, directing the Legation to consult Colonel Goethals, and intimating that the President of Panama would be expected to defer granting this application pending full consideration by the Government of the United States. Copies of the Legation's despatch of April 19, 1911, and of the Department's reply of May 2, 1911, were transmitted to the War Department May 8, 1911, together with telegraphic information sent by the Legation May 5, 1911, to the effect that the President of Panama had agreed to defer granting permission for the Chepo-Panama extension.

In a despatch of May 9, 1911, the Legation reported that the President of Panama, in spite of the syndicate's insistence, was taking the sufficiently obvious ground that the Chepo-Panama line could not be termed a "branch" at all. Upon being consulted by the Legation, Colonel Goethals had expressed the opinion that if the United States did not object to the construction of the Panama-David Railroad by foreign capital he saw no objection to the construction of the Chepo-Panama Railroad by foreign capital, inasmuch as the relations of both roads to the Canal Zone were identical. As to this whole question of policy, Colonel Goethals naturally left it to the consideration of his Government. This despatch was copied to the War Department on May 25, 1911.

From a letter of May 11, 1911, from the War Department it appeared that that Department had failed to receive copies of the Legation's despatch of November 4, 1910, and of the second draft contract therein referred to. Such copies were thereupon sent, May 19, 1911, and on May 23, 1911, the War Department informed the Department of State that this last-mentioned letter, with its inclosures, had been copied to the chairman and chief engineer of the Isthmian Canal Commission on the Isthmus for his information in connection with previous correspondence already forwarded to him.

On June 1, 1911, the War Department was good enough to furnish the Department of State with extracts from a communication from Colonel Goethals, dated May 24, 1911. It appeared therefrom that the then Chargé d'Affaires at Panama, while viewing the proposed project as prejudicial, was of the opinion that no such railroad would be built without the access to the city of Panama, which was precluded by necessity in such case to cross the Zone. Colonel Goethals also referred to the President's visit to the Isthmus and to the discussion at the time with the Secretary for Foreign Relations of the question of readjusting the boundary between the city of Panama and the Canal Zone, and also to a discussion of the question of use by the Zone authorities of certain waters at present reserved to the harbor of Colon. In remarking that the adjustment of the boundaries of the capital would make geographically possible a route to the city through Panaman jurisdiction, Colonel Goethals reported that he had indicated to the Legation that since the matter of the Dziuk concession concerned policy rather than the canal construction it was not one upon which he then felt called upon to make any expression. It thus appears that the Legation deemed the acquiring of exclusive railway rights by foreign capital in Panama detrimental to American interests, and further believed that the railroad in question would not be built unless the company could gain access to the city of Panama, and that Colonel Goethals naturally enough regarded this question as one of broad policy. It further appears that when the President visited the Isthmus of Panama in November, 1910, he had a certain tentative discussion with the Secretary for Foreign Affairs with a view to the possible exchange of a portion of the Zone for certain water rights—such exchange to be effective if and when reduced to writing and approved by the Presidents of the United States and of Panama, and to have, incidentally, the effect of leaving no Zone territory between the city of Panama and the road which the railroad from Chepo would take, if authorized, in entering the capital.

On June 2, 1911, Mr. Carlos C. Arosemena, the Panaman Minister of Public Works, informed Mr. Dodge, Resident Diplomatic Officer of the Department of State, that the Panaman Government had refused to grant to the Balboa and Pacific Estates, Limited, their request to construct a "branch" to Panama City on the ground that this could not properly be considered as a branch within the meaning of the company's concession. Mr. Arosemena, apparently with an unconscious indifference to the interests or the attitude of the United States, remarked at the same time that the Panaman Government would, however, be ready to consider the question of granting a new concession under proper conditions to this company for building a railway to Panama City.

On the same day Mr. Arosemena informed Mr. Dodge that he had heard unofficially that the Balboa and Pacific Estates, Limited, to whom a concession to build a railway in the Darien Province had been granted, were considering another branch line, which Mr. Arosemena said they were entitled to under their contract, to run from the main line near the Chucunaque River to the Colombian frontier, thence joining a concession which they either had obtained or expected to obtain for a railroad from the Colombian frontier to the Gulf of Darien. Mr. Arosemena added that such an arrangement would give the company a railroad across the Isthmus, which, if true, would, of course, be of great interest to the United States, and would be immediately brought by him to the attention of the Department. Mr. Dodge intimated that the permission of Panama would be necessary to such a branch; that the Department would, of course, be greatly interested; and that, therefore, the Government of Panama would naturally afford the Department every opportunity to consider the question. To this Mr. Arosemena replied that he recognized the Department's interest, but thought that under the contract the Panaman Government would be obliged to grant any request for such a branch.

By a despatch of June 3, 1911, the Legation informed the Department that Mr. Agusto Dziuk was reported to have deposited with the national treasury of Panama the $10,000 gold required by the contract to be deposited as a pledge that the company would proceed in good faith.

The newspaper article relied upon by the Legation for the information further stated that the Government of Panama had thus far only consented to permit the company to run the railroad up to Chucunaque, about 25 kilometers from the Atlantic coast.

The Department's conversations with Mr. Arosemena were communicated to the Legation in its instructions of June 17 and June 30, 1911, and the Legation at Bogotá was, on the latter date, informed of the rumors regarding the supplementary project in the Republic of Colombia.

From the beginning of July there has been a correspondence between the White House, the Department of State, and the War Department, and a Mr. William Albert Nicholls, who was introduced to the Department by Senator Brandegee, of Connecticut, and who caused it to be understood that he wrote only as a patriotic American citizen and as a friend of Mr. Egon Schaar. This correspondence may be summarized in this way: Mr. Schaar tells Mr. Nicholls that he has been approached by Japanese and others to buy lands about Piñas Bay, a prospective important harbor; that he is not looking for a purchaser, but would prefer to sell, if at all, to the United States. In the course of the correspondence $2,500,000 was mentioned as the price of the lands in question.

It is interesting to note in this connection that Mr. Laughlin, Secretary of the Embassy at Berlin, sent the Department the following telegram, dated August 24, 1911, 12 noon:

> Count Oppersdorff, Member of Reichstag, informs me our Government is interested in the transfer of an estate in Panama, and asks me to transmit through you the following power of attorney for Egon Schaar, Ritz Carlton, New York City:
>
> "The undersigned five directors and seven associates of the Balboa and Pacific Estates Limited, representing nine-tenths majority, grant you unlimited power of attorney for the sale and realization of all rights of the company. Papers duly executed, follow by mail. Count Oppersdorff, Schmid, Begas, Dziuk, Hoffman, von Bethmann Hollweg, Tiktin."

The correspondence with the War and Navy Departments shows that neither of those Departments deemed it advisable that the United States should acquire the lands about Piñas Bay, and accordingly the following reply, dated August 29, 1911, 4 p. m., was sent to Mr. Laughlin:

> The Department had already informed Schaar's associate, William Nicholls, that the Government of the United States has no present interest in the acquisition of Piñas Bay lands in Panama. The power of attorney would, therefore, seem unnecessary, so far as this Government is concerned.

As Mr. Nicholls was anxious for a fuller reply than previously given him, the Department advised him by telegraph on September 2, 1911, as follows:

> In compliance with the request to hear from the Department to-day, contained in your letter of August 30, which crossed the Department's communication of August 29, I desire to express regret at the apparent misunderstanding of the correspondence in question. It should be remembered that the overtures made the Department were unsolicited and you will of course realize that any government requires considerable time to consider a matter bearing upon such important subjects.
>
> The specific question you asked was whether this Government now cared to purchase certain lands on the Pacific coast of Panama. While the ultimate relation of the Government of the United States to all such questions is sufficiently clear through public treaties, I can only at the present time again transmit to you the information that this Government is not disposed to consider at this time the suggested transaction.

In the same connection it is interesting that on August 4, 1911, Mr. Galindo, representing the German interests, addressed from Berlin a letter to the President containing many protestations of his devotion to American interests and quite strongly insinuating that it would be a menace to the United States to permit the lands about Piñas Bay to pass into any foreign hands. This letter was duly transmitted to the War and Navy Departments.

As showing a certain amount of energy and assurance on the part of the promoters of the Dziuk railroad concession, it is worth while, perhaps, to note the following very misleading despatch to the London Times of July 29, 1911:

> RAILWAYS IN PANAMA.
>
> [From our correspondent.]
>
> PANAMA, July 27.
>
> The Washington Government has withdrawn its objection to the extension of the German-English railroad from Darien to the city of Panama. The line will be 300 kilometers long, of which 80 kilometers are to be built at once. It is made a condition that the railway shall not go within 10 miles of the Atlantic side of the Isthmus and shall keep southwest of the Cordillera.
>
> (The above telegram refers to a railway syndicate which has recently obtained permission from the United States Government to build a railway from Puerto Piñas, on the Panama Gulf, to La Palma, on the same gulf, at the entrance of the Tuira River. The concession, according to the telegram, has been extended.)

The Legation's despatch of July 10, 1911, stating that the Panaman Minister for Foreign Affairs had given assurances that no branch railroad to the Colombian frontier was under contemplation, and that in the event that permission to build such a road should be requested the interests of the United States would be carefully guarded, was transmitted to the War Department on July 26, 1911.

On August 19, 1911, the Secretary of War discussed with the Assistant Secretary of State the general subject of the present instruction, and particularly the Dziuk railroad concession, the matter having come concretely before the War Department through the following telegram that it received from Colonel Goethals:

> Panaman authorities desire extend Dziuk railroad concession from headwaters of Chucunaque via Chepo to Juan Diaz River, stipulating that road shall not be nearer than 10 miles to Caribbean Sea or Colombian frontier, and request the consent of the United States.

On the same date, and confirming this conversation, the Secretary of War informed the Department that shortly before he started for Panama Mr. C. C. Arosemena came to Washington and was received by the President, the Secretary of War being present. Mr. Arosemena mentioned that the Government of Panama had granted Dziuk a railroad from Piñas Bay to the River Tuira, possibly to be extended thence to some point toward the headwaters of the Chucunaque River with the privilege of constructing other branches also with the further consent of the Executive of Panama. Mr. Arosemena said to the President that Mr. Dziuk desired permission to extend the proposed railroad to some point on the Colombian frontier whence it could be easily extended through Colombia to the Gulf of Darien, making a transcontinental railroad which, in his opinion, might interfere with the interests of the United States on the Isthmus of Panama. As to Mr. Arosemena's remarks on this occasion, it will be recalled that the Government of Panama has officially disclaimed to our Legation any intention to make this particular extension of the concession. In the despatch of August 19, the Secretary of War was good enough further to inform the Department that during his visit to Panama in July he found this situation: Mr. Dziuk was pressing for an extension of his concession to involve a railroad from the headwaters of the Chucunaque via Chepo into the city of Panama. The President, when previously in Panama, in the desire to contribute in all proper ways to the legitimate aims of the Republic, had acquiesced in an informal but tentative way in a modification of the boundaries of the city of Panama in such manner as to bring those boundaries to the eastern edge of the Canal Zone and thus into juxtaposition with the rest of the Republic on the east. The question of such modification by Executive order was to be taken under consideration with reference to its technical, strategic, political, and legal bearings with the competent departments of the Government.

It became apparent to the Secretary of War that such modification of the boundaries of the city of Panama, and therefore of the territory of the Canal Zone, would demolish the power of the United States to prevent, so far as this one ground is concerned, the entrance into Panama of such a railroad as that under consideration. Accordingly, the Secretary of War, at a conference with the President of Panama, at which Mr. Boyd (the Secretary of State), Colonel Goethals and Judge Fouille were present, made it clear to the President of Panama that when the President had intimated a willingness to acquiesce in the desired modification of the boundaries of Panama City the question of the railroad concession—which naturally could hardly be dissociated from it—had not been submitted to his consideration. The Secretary of War further pointed out that the building by foreign capital of a railroad to the neighborhood of the city of Panama might, owing to its propinquity, be a serious embarrassment to the United States and that for such reasons the United States would not consent to such a modification of the boundaries unless upon a disinct understanding that no such concessions for railroads would be granted except under such safeguards as would enable the United States to control absolutely the railroad in case of war or other disturbance. Naturally acceding to the reasonableness of this position, President Arosemena asked as to the nature of the conditions the United States would be likely to impose for the protection of its interests. While informing the President of Panama that this matter must be passed upon by the Department of State, to which he would communicate the substance of his conversation, and through which the Government of Panama would doubtless hear in due course, the Secretary of War made it plain that, from the point of view of military policy, it was felt that the Government of the United States could be satisfied with no arrangement not including the right to occupy and take possession of the railroad whenever it thought its interests required it to do so. Mr. Boyd, the Secretary of State, spoke of the pressure being brought to bear by Mr. Dziuk and his associates and expressed the hope for a prompt answer as to the conditions the United States would impose upon the railroad extension and also as to the modification of the area of the city of Panama which had been requested.

In his letter of August 19 the Secretary of War also points out that inasmuch as the Juan Diaz River is only about 10 miles from the city of Panama and the Canal Zone a railroad built there would be practically as objectionable to the interests of the United States from a strategic point of view as would an extension frankly to the city of Panama itself. The Secretary of War informed the Department of State that he was on the same date sending Colonel Goethals the following telegram:

> Have reported to State Department fully matter of Dziuk railroad concession and they will communicate with Panaman authorities. From standpoint of military policy of United States, I deem extension to Juan Diaz River to be equally objectionable with extension to Panama.

The Secretary of War adds that President Arosemena acquiesced in the reasonableness of the position of the United States as expressed during the conversation at Panama. In closing he points out that even if the confines of the city of Panama were not enlarged the military exigencies of the case should be most carefully scrutinized even in the case of a railway going at all into the neighborhood of the Canal Zone and that there should be safeguarded not only the possibility of war between the United States and another nation but also that the possibility of trouble between Panama and another nation should receive thorough consideration, since in any event the United States should be in a position not only to prevent occupation of the railroad by a foreign power, but itself to occupy it whenever its interests required.

From an informal communication to the Department of July 21, it appears that the War Department took the view that the original concession from the mouth of the Piñas River to the valley of El Real de Santa Maria on the Tuira River and thence northwesterly toward the headwaters of the Chucunaque, a distance of about 100 miles, and at no point approaching within 100 miles of the Canal Zone, from which it would be separated by difficult and mountainous country with only a sparse Indian population, would in no wise affect the canal or its construction or the government of the Canal Zone. Even such a railroad, however, would be a worthy subject of study from the point of view of general policy. As to any extension of a foreign railroad nearer the Canal Zone the Department understands that such an extension would be regarded by the War Department as more or less contrary to the interests of the United States from the point of view of military policy and as absolutely contrary to such interests if such extension reached within striking distance of the Canal Zone.

The Secretary of War desired the Department to give the Legation instructions which would preclude any misunderstanding as to the safeguarding of the vital strategic and other interests of the United States in Panama against any ill-considered action on the part of the Republic of Panama which might in the future cause embarrassment.

To do this is the object of this instruction.

Pending the result of the careful deliberation now going forward between the Department of State and the War Department, and to preclude the possibility of any such ill-considered action, the Department of State on September 2 despatched to the Legation at Panama the following telegraphic instruction:

> About August 18 Goethals telegraphed the Secretary of War as follows: "Panaman authorities desire extend Dziuk railroad concession from headwaters of Chucunaque via Chepo to Juan Diaz River, stipulating that road shall not be nearer than 10 miles to Caribbean Sea or Colombian frontier, and request the consent of the United States." The Department of State and the War Department will require considerable time for consultation and study of the whole subject of which that telegram raises one phase. Confer with Colonel Goethals and thereupon formally notify the Government of Panama that this whole subject is receiving the study which is required by the fact that it is involved in the fundamentals of American-Panaman relations. Point out in the same communication that the new ramifications of the railway schemes under consideration introduce many new and important elements creating a situation materially different from that of last year (see Department's telegram November 7, 2 p. m., and subsequent correspondence). In closing make quite clear that it is essential that the Government of Panama studiously refrain meanwhile from any further commitments.

It is believed that the foregoing will serve as a résumé to the present date of the various phases of the subject of the Dziuk concession project.

Distortion of the policy of the United States, the cry of American aggression, the appeal to national pride in Panama, scheming for this or that private interest, coquetting with foreign enterprises as a barrier against American preponderance, and depending upon American protection and disinterestedness as a cloak for all sorts of irresponsible activities—such, unfortunately, have sometimes been pawns in Panama's domestic politics. That the above-indicated dispositions have existed in certain quarters there have unfortunately been only too many illustrations. Indeed, it may be remarked that it was at one time represented to the Department that certain prominent Panamans, official and otherwise, had been conspicuous in such activities. For example, a person, the authority of whose position made him supposedly influential, was represented as habitually disseminating the idea that, owing to domestic politics in the United States and still more to our general Latin-American policy, the United States would be very reluctant to exercise any discipline upon Panama or other small countries, and that any severity that might ever be threatened would not be seriously meant. Thus this gentleman was represented as encouraging the sentiment that Panama could, with safety, act with entire disregard of the relations so essential to both countries.

Another faction was represented as impatient at the uniform unwillingness of the Government of the United States to enter upon any undue interference in internal political affairs as to which it at present deems its duty discharged in maintaining Panama as a Republic able to respond to its various obligations.

The fact that the policy of the United States has to be carried out at every step in such a milieu, and the fact that the policy of the United States is one of justice and right, as well as one of due regard for Panama's real and legitimate interests, should make it as easy as it is important that this policy should be as well defined and frankly accepted as it is fundamental and permanent.

In the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty of 1850 the obligation to protect was recognized as alone bestowing the most favorable rights to use an interoceanic canal.

Not only has the United States exclusively assumed the great obligation to protect the canal and the Canal Zone, but by its treaty of November 18, 1903, with Panama the United States has become responsible for the very existence of the Republic of Panama. By Article I "The United States guarantees and will maintain the independence of the Republic of Panama."

Indeed, without entering upon any extended analysis of the treaty relations of the two Republics or assuming to define their full effect, some of the more palpable elements in the situation will at once be apparent from a mere perusal of the treaty of November 18, 1903. Merely by way of illustration, there may be cited the following provisions which, among others, are typical of the gist of that instrument. In Article II there occurs the following language:

> * * * The Republic of Panama further grants to the United States in perpetuity the use, occupation, and control of any other lands and waters outside of the zone above described which may be necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal or of any auxiliary canals or other works necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said enterprise.

Article IV states:

> As rights subsidiary to the above grants the Republic of Panama grants in perpetuity to the United States the right to use the rivers, streams, lakes, and other bodies of water within its limits for navigation, the supply of water or water power or other purposes, so far as the use of said rivers, streams, lakes, and bodies of water and the waters thereof may be necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal.

By Article V—

> The Republic of Panama grants to the United States in perpetuity a monopoly for the construction, maintenance, and operation of any system of communication by means of canal or railroad across its territory between the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean.

Article VI, in reference to such grants as it may be "necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection" of the said canal, states that—

> * * * All damages caused to the owners of private lands or private property of any kind by reason of the grants contained in this treaty or by reason of the operations of the United States, its agents or employees, or by reason of the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal or of the works of sanitation and protection herein provided for, shall be appraised and settled by a joint Commission appointed by the Governments of the United States and the Republic of Panama, whose decisions as to such damages shall be final and whose awards as to such damages shall be paid solely by the United States. * * * The appraisal of said private lands and private property and the assessment of damages to them shall be based upon their value before the date of this convention.,

Article XVII says:

> The Republic of Panama grants to the United States the use of all the ports of the Republic open to commerce as places of refuge for any vessels employed in the canal enterprise, and for all vessels passing or bound to pass through the canal which may be in distress and be driven to seek refuge in said ports. Such vessels shall be exempt from anchorage and tonnage dues on the part of the Republic of Panama.

Article XX says:

> If by virtue of any existing treaty in relation to the territory of the Isthmus of Panama, whereof the obligations shall descend or be assumed by the Republic of Panama, there may be any privilege or concession in favor of the Government or the citizens and subjects of a third power relative to an interoceanic means of communication which in any of its terms may be incompatible with the terms of the present convention, the Republic of Panama agrees to cancel or modify such treaty in due form, for which purpose it shall give to the said third power the requisite notification within the term of four months from the date of the present convention, and in case the existing treaty contains no clause permitting its modification or annulment, the Republic of Panama agrees to procure its modification or annulment in such form that there shall not exist any conflict with the stipulations of the present convention.

Article XXI says:

> The rights and privileges granted by the Republic of Panama to the United States in the preceding Articles are understood to be free of all anterior debts, liens, trusts, or liabilities, or concessions or privileges to other Governments, corporations, syndicates, or individuals, and consequently, if there should arise any claims on account of the present concessions and privileges or otherwise, the claimants shall resort to the Government of the Republic of Panama and not to the United States for any indemnity or compromise which may be required.

Article XXIII says:

> If it should become necessary at any time to employ armed forces for the safety or protection of the canal, or of the ships that make use of the same, or the railways and auxiliary works, the United States shall have the right, at all times and in its discretion, to use its police and its land and naval forces or to establish fortifications for these purposes.

Article XXIV says:

> No change either in the Government or in the laws and treaties of the Republic of Panama shall, without the consent of the United States, affect any right of the United States under the present convention, or under any treaty stipulation between the two countries that now exists or may hereafter exist touching the subject matter of this convention.

Article XXV says:

> For the better performance of the engagements of this convention and to the end of the efficient protection of the canal and the preservation of its neutrality, the Government of the Republic of Panama will sell or lease to the United States > lands adequate and necessary for naval or coaling stations on the Pacific coast and on the western Caribbean coast of the Republic at certain points to be agreed upon with the President of the United States.

The obligation to protect and to maintain the Republic of Panama would carry with it, then, the right to do the things necessary to such protection, even if not only the spirit but the language of the whole treaty did not make the rights of the United States and the obligations of Panama in the premises particularly clear. Thus, the United States may at any time, in responding to the duties of its treaty obligations to protect Panama and the Canal Zone, be compelled to take control of any harbor or railroad line as "necessary and convenient" for the protection of the canal. It would appear that if rights or properties so needed for the protection of both countries and the control of which was at any time desired by the United States for these broad purposes should have been meanwhile made the subject of concessions by Panama to foreign capitalists, then, in the expropriation and adjustment which it would fall to Panama to carry out the Government of Panama might find itself under serious foreign embarrassment and subject to large international reclamations.

As to any question of Panama's being a party to any concession for a transcontinental railroad, this would be in point-blank violation of the treaty.

All waters "necessary and convenient" for the canal are given in advance to the United States by Article IV, and in giving them the Government of Panama is in no position to bargain for an extension of the confines of Panama City.

Article XXIII would seem sufficiently to recognize the paramountcy of the United States in case of the necessity of protecting and so controlling the railways, certainly if such railways were susceptible of affecting the Canal Zone.

Since by Article XXIV the Republic of Panama agrees not to make, without the consent of the United States, any law or treaty affecting any right of the United States under the present convention, the Republic would seem the more plainly estopped from effecting similar results through contracts or concessions to private parties.

The construction of the Panama Canal is the greatest and most costly governmental work ever undertaken in history. The future and the prosperity of Panama depend upon the canal as completely as the permanent existence of that Republic depends upon the protection of the United States. It is high time that the officials and people of Panama should realize this, should respond to their clear obligations in the premises, and should at all times heartily cooperate with this Government. Such cooperation is the indispensable consideration for the protection of the Republic. This protection is synonymous with the protection of the interests of the United States in the zone of the Caribbean, which not only the Panama Canal but the logic of geographical and political relations has made a keynote in the policy of this Government.

Instead of such an attitude it has seemed that ill-considered projects of most problematical practicability or advantage are light-heartedly undertaken not only without the prior deliberation of the United States but without any scientific or thorough consideration by the Government of Panama. Such a tendency can only bring disaster upon Panama and tend to create a situation where the United States would in the end be obliged to take such direct measures as might be suggested by its recognized interests.

From an economic point of view it is easy to see that the construction of the Panaman section of the Pan-American Railway, as well as such lesser railway construction as may advantage the development of the Republic, will not be easy undertakings to carry through to real success. This is true because of topographical difficulties, sparsity of population, and present backwardness of exploitation. Ultimately to induce responsible and serious investment to build the needed railways Panama possesses rich virgin lands and undeveloped resources. If these assets be frittered away in unsound or ill-considered schemes, then means which wisely used would conduce to substantial prosperity may be found to have been lost with no real return to the people of the Republic.

The Legation will take suitable opportunities to cause this conception of the relations of the two countries and the community of their interests to become gradually known to the officials and people of Panama.

As to the Dziuk railroad concession, the Department does not believe that it will ever come to anything without a branch beyond the Chucunaque River or a transcontinental connection, and the Government of the United States is entirely unable, for fundamental strategic and political reasons in which the interests of the Government of Panama are equally involved, to acquiesce, under any circumstances, in further railway extension as a foreign enterprise beyond the limits herein indicated. If the Government of Panama sincerely desires to construct railways for beneficial and economically sound exploitation of the Republic's resources, the Government of the United States will be glad to cause engineers to join in examining any proposed projects, and will be glad, also, to endeavor to enlist the cooperation of American capital in the construction of any projects approved by both Governments.

In general, as to foreign railway or other concessions having a possible bearing upon the strategic and political interests of the two countries, while very sensible of every legitimate interest of Panama and very desirous of fostering in every way the growth and prosperity of the Republic, the Government of the United States feels that it will be more regardful of the interests of Panama to examine in advance and express itself after ample deliberation upon any such project than it would be to keep silent and then perhaps be obliged at a later date to assert its treaty rights in a manner which might involve the Republic of Panama in serious financial losses.

In giving to the Government of Panama the reply of the Government of the United States that it can not acquiesce in the extension of the proposed railway concession, or any other foreign railway project involving an important extension up the River Chucunaque, or in any other such manner as either to approach in effect a transcontinental line or to approach at all within the vicinity of the Canal Zone, you will add that any question of railway lines deemed to be really necessary would receive the earnest study of this Government, and that the separate question of a desired extension of the area of the city of Panama will continue to receive due consideration.

Adverting once more to the sincere interest of the Government of the United States in a wise and prosperous development of the Republic of Panama, it will be recalled that under instructions from this Government the engineers of the Panama Railroad Company have completed, under the direction of Colonel Goethals, a survey of the route of the proposed Panama-David railroad, the work having been accomplished, it is understood, with great economy as well as efficiency. As to the Panama-David project, for the construction of which it is understood bids are being received from contractors in this country, the Legation will bear in mind that the Government of the United States feels, in the ultimate carrying out of that or a similar project, a special interest because of the importance of any route adapted to form a link in a future Pan-American railroad system. It goes without saying that in matters of the nationality of the enterprise, the route, and other pertinent considerations, the principles embodied in the present instruction are equally applicable to all such undertakings upon the Isthmus.

The Government of the United States would have no disposition to question the intention of the Government of Panama to make its fundamental policy one of frank, considerate, and sympathetic cooperation with the United States, even if such attitude were not dictated alike by moral obligation and by intelligent self-interest. If there have, from time to time, been appearances of any tendency toward lack of coordination of effort in what may have seemed relatively unimportant matters, the President would be inclined to ascribe the fact to misleading inferences as to the true bearings of the matters concerned. Impressed with the great desirability of clear understanding upon matters affecting these large subjects naturally calling for joint consideration, the President has directed that the most painstaking and sympathetic attention to all matters in which this Government may be helpful to the Government of Panama be accorded by the competent Departments, which matters, excepting as to such technical details connected with the canal and the administration of the Canal Zone as may be conveniently dealt with by the local authorities of the United States, will naturally be dealt with through the diplomatic channel through which the views of the United States may at all times be learned with authenticity.

You will read this instruction to the Minister for Foreign Affairs with a view to acquainting him frankly with the sentments and policy of the Government of the United States in these matters, and should he so desire you will leave with him a copy.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 819.77/70.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 92.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 22, 1911.

SIR: I acknowledge the receipt by the Department to-day of your despatches Nos. 169, 173, and 174, dated respectively September 9th, 12th, and 14th, all bearing upon phases of the railway construction question in Panama, relating chiefly to the Dziuk concession matter and touching also upon the Panama-David project.

On the occasion of carrying out the Department's instruction of the 20th instant, you will, first of all, express to the Minister for Foreign Affairs this Government's appreciation of the cordial spirit of the assurances contained in Mr. Boyd's letter addressed to you on the 8th instant. You may assure the Minister for Foreign Affairs that it is, of course, unnecessary to express the entire confidence of the Government of the United States in the valued assurances then given. You may, indeed, intimate that they might possibly be regarded as rendering not actually necessary, so far as the Dziuk concession is concerned, the further communication which you are about to make under the instruction of the 20th instant. As a preliminary to carrying out that instruction you will readily be able to explain that, actuated by a spirit of friendly frankness, it is deemed best in any case to make to the Government of Panama that lengthy exposition of broad matters of policy which are of such vital concern to both Governments, and as to which it is so important that they should be at all times in accord and free from the possibility of any misunderstanding. The present instruction will, of course, be carried out orally but you will say that you are making these remarks under instructions.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 819.77/78.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, October 9, 1911.

The bill forbidding any loan for constructing the Panama-David railroad and authorizing use therefor of $6,000,000 now invested in New York, is being rushed through the Assembly. Article 138 of the Constitution is canceled by the bill.

ANDREWS.

File No. 819.77/82.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 184] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, October 9, 1911.

SIR: Referring to the Department's instructions Nos. 89 and 92, of September 20 and 22, respectively, I have the honor to report that on October 7 I made a formal call by appointment upon the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Federico Boyd, and after addressing to him the preliminary remarks indicated in instruction No. 92, read to him instruction No. 89.

While I read this instruction, the Secretary commented at length upon it and I confined my replies to the facts in the instruction. Mr. Boyd disagreed on practically one point only, that part of the instruction which summarized the negotiations and correspondence to date, concerning the Dziuk railway concession. He stated that the rivers of the Darien region were not navigable—I presume canoes were not to be considered—and that that region could never be developed without building some railroads there.

Mr. Boyd said that he had for some time lost confidence in Mr. Dziuk and that he desired me to inform the Department that he agreed with their views that the pressure being brought by Mr. Dziuk to obtain extensions of his original concession was an indication of lack of good faith as to his intention in obtaining the original concession.

The Nichols-Scharr correspondence, quoted in the instruction I was reading, Mr. Boyd said he had never heard of before, and he expressed great indignation at the conduct of Mr. Dziuk and his associates in proposing to sell to the United States lands about Piñas Bay. The Panaman Government, or at least the Secretary of Foreign Affairs, was entirely unaware of any such proposal being made in the United States and he stated that in fact such sale or transfer of lands could not be legally made by Mr. Dziuk and his associates without the authority and consent of the Panaman Government.

The Secretary further stated that this matter completely destroyed his already wavering confidence in Mr. Dziuk and he would have nothing further to do with him other than the original concession might render necessary.

The latter part of instruction No. 89 wherein are expressed the views of the American Government upon the relations existing and which should exist between the Government of the United States and the Government of Panama, seemed to cause Mr. Boyd considerable concern.

At the end of the interview, Mr. Boyd stated that he wished me to express to the American Government his sympathy with the views therein expressed as to the identity of American and Panaman interests and that he realized that in its ultimate analysis, the protection of the canal and the independence of the Republic of Panama were identical.

Mr. Boyd expressing a desire to have a copy of the instruction, I left him the copy which the Department had enclosed to me and as I left the room, remarked that doubtless the communication would be of interest to the President and possibly also to the Minister of Fomento, as mention had been made of the latter in the document.

I have [etc.]

Wm. Whiting Andrews.

File No. 819.77/80.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 185.]

American Legation,
Panama, October 10, 1911.

Sir: I have the honor to report that the special session of the Assembly adjourned October 9.

Two bills concerning the Panamá-David railway were passed by the Assembly and are now before the President for signature or veto. I inclose a copy and translation of the bill relating to my telegram of October 9, 11 a. m., sent in belief that if the American Government was opposed to the use of the six million dollars on deposit in New York, toward the construction of the Panamá-David railway, an instruction from the Department would enable me, almost certainly, to insure the President's vetoing that bill and stopping the measure in its initial stage.

As this law effects a change in the Constitution, it must, if signed by the President, be reconsidered by the next regular session of the National Assembly: vide Article 137 of the Constitution.

If the other bill—which relates to the matter of final surveys, estimates, etc., upon the Panamá-David railway—shall be signed by the President and become a law, I will at once send a translation to the Department and will also notify the Department if this bill, the copy of which is inclosed, shall be signed.

I have [etc.]

WM. WHITING ANDREWS.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

Bill relating to the Panamá-David National Railway, passed October 9, 1911, and abrogating Article 138 of the Constitution.

The National Assembly of Panama decrees:

Article 1. The Nation shall not contract any debt for the construction and equipment of the National Railroad from Panamá to David with branches in the Provinces of Coclé and Los Santos. The Executive Power is authorized to execute this work with the B.6,000,000 which the Republic possesses at present invested in security mortgages in the United States of America.

Paragraph. Article 138 of the Constitution is abrogated.

Article 2. The Executive Power will allow, moreover, such sums from the national revenues as he may consider proper, for the termination of the work upon the railroad from Panamá to David with branches, if the six millions of dollars to which the previous article refers are not sufficient.

Given in Panamá the 9th day of October, 1911.

The President,
GUILLERMO ANDREVE.

The Secretary,
JULIO ARJONA Q.

File No. 819.77/83.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 190.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, October 16, 1911.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 185 of October 10, on the subject of the Panama-David railway, I have the honor to report that the status of that matter remains the same as before the recent special session of the National Assembly. Both bills passed by this Assembly referring to the financing and construction of that railway have been vetoed by the President.

I have [etc.]

WM. WHITING ANDREWS.

File No. 819.77/83.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 3.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 7, 1911.

SIR: The Department is in receipt of Mr. Andrews's despatch No. 188,[1] of the 11th ultimo, reporting that Mr. R. W. Hebard, who, with Mr. L. E. Myers, was one of the two most prominent contractors that recently offered bids for the construction of the Panama-David railway, proposes to take up, himself, at par, the bond issue, if any is made by the Government of Panama to provide funds for the construction of the railway, and to sell the bonds in Europe.

With his despatch Mr. Andrews sends a copy of a letter received by him from Mr. Hebard in which the latter states his position in the matter, and requests to be informed whether the Government of the United States approves or disapproves his proposed action as to these bonds.

Referring to Mr. Andrews's despatch No. 190, of the 16th ultimo, in which he reports that both bills passed by the Panama Assembly relating to the construction and financing of the Panama-David railway have been vetoed by the President of Panama, the Department would be glad to have you report what effect the vetoes have on Hebard's proposition, and it would also be glad if you would send it a report, up to date, on the disposition that is proposed by the Panaman Government to be made of its funds invested in New York.

I am [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 819.77/83.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 4.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 7, 1911.

SIR: The Department is in receipt of Mr. Andrews's despatch No. 185, of the 10th ultimo, reporting that the special session of the Panaman Assembly adjourned on the 9th ultimo, and that two bills concerning the Panama-David railway had been passed by the Assembly and were then before the President for his approval or veto. Mr. Andrews's despatch No. 190, dated the 16th ultimo, reporting that both bills have been vetoed by the President of Panama, has also been received.

The Department would be glad to have you send it a report, up to date, on the Panama-David Railroad project.

I am [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 819.77/91.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 14.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, November 28, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your instructions Nos. 3 and 4, both of the 7th instant (File Nos. 819.77/81 and 819.77/80, 83 respectively), and both relating to the proposed Panama-David Railway. Your instruction No. 3 requests informaton as to what effect the vetoes by the President of Panama of the two bills passed at the recent special session of the Assembly have upon the bid made by Mr. R. W. Hebard. In reply I have the honor to state that Mr. Hebard's original bid, as well as those of the other two American bidders and the French bidder, were all found unsatisfactory and rejected by President Arosemena prior to the calling of the special session of the Assembly for September 25 last.

Your instructions referred to also request a report up to date on the disposition that is proposed to be made by the Panaman Government of its funds invested in New York and upon the Panama-David Railway project as a whole.

Mr. Andrews's despatches have informed the Department of the developments in this matter up to the time of my arrival here. The following information will, I trust, enable the Department to understand the further developments and the situation as I understand it at present.

I have had conversations upon the subject of the Panama-David Railway with President Arosemena, Señor Boyd, Minister for Foreign Affairs, Dr. C. C. Arosemena, Minister of Public Works, and Mr. R. W. Hebard.

In a conversation with Dr. C. C. Arosemena I requested him to give me the exact situation at preesnt. Dr. Arosemena thereupon reviewed the history of this matter stating that all the bids presented having been considered unsatisfactory by the Government, the Government had called the special session of the Assembly in order to secure the alteration of the requirement imposed by section b. of paragraph 3 of Article 1 of Law 6 of 1909 (January 5), forbidding bonds for railway construction to be issued below their face value. This provision was considered to have prevented bidders from having made more satisfactory bids. The Assembly, however, as a purely political measure and to prevent the present Government from gaining any prestige through constructing this railway, had not only failed to alter the requirement in question but had passed two bills, one altering Article 138 of the Constitution and directing the Executive to build the railway with the six million dollars invested in New York, and the other directing the Executive to have another survey made before constructing the line. The object of both bills was merely dilatory and both had been vetoed by the President (despatches Nos. 185 and 190 of October 10 and 16, 1911). This had left the legal situation precisely as it had been before the special session.

In this connection and for greater clearness I enclose a copy of the following documents[1] which, at my request, Dr. Arosemena gave me, certain of which have already been forwarded to the Department:

---

[1] Not printed.

1. Pamphlet entitled "Ferrocarril de Panamá a David" (Railway from Panama to David), containing in convenient form the two laws governing the construction of the Panama-David Railway (Laws 6 of 1909 and 2 of 1911); the procès-verbal of the opening of the bids; the text of the bids received from Mr. W. H. Knowlton, Mr. R. W. Hebard, the L. E. Myers Co., and Mr. Blaise Roy (French); the Report of the Consulting Commission of the Ministry of Public Works as to these bids; a memorandum of the Minister for Foreign Affairs as to the construction of this railway; the procès-verbal of the Session of the Cabinet rejecting all the bids and the procès-verbal of the Session of the Cabinet at which the Executive reported the failure of the further negotiations with the former bidders and the Cabinet decided to call a special session. Added to this pamphlet are the specifications issued with the call for bids (enclosure 1).

2. Pamphlet entitled "Panamá-David Railroad: Documents referring to public bids for the construction of a railroad, with branch lines from Panamá to David, Republic of Panamá," containing the report of the preliminary survey of the railway from Empire to David made by the Panama Railroad Co.; a tentative draft of a contract for the construction of this railway and the specifications for the same (enclosure 2).

3. Pamphlet entitled "Informe que el Secretario de Fomento presenta al Señor Designado Encargado del Poder Ejecutivo" (Report presented by the Secretary of Public Works to the Designado in Charge of the Executive Power regarding the bidding for the Construction of the Panama-David Railway). This contains a review of the situation after the refusal of all the bids and recommendations for the consideration of the Special Session of the Assembly, with a draft for a new law (enclosure 3).

4. Printed sheet giving the report of the committee of the Assembly upon the Panama-David Railway project and the modifications suggested in the law proposed by the Minister for Public Works (enclosure 4).

5. Gaceta Official of October 14, 1911, giving the text of the two laws passed by the special session of the Assembly and vetoed by the President, a copy and translation of the first of which was enclosed in Mr. Andrews's Despatch No. 185 of October 10, 1911 (enclosure 5).

Continuing, Dr. Arosemena said that under these circumstances, as the Executive was convinced that the people wished the railway to be built, the President had endeavored to make a contract for this purpose acting under the authority conferred by Article 5 of Law No. 2 of 1911 (of January 2, 1911). The Executive considered that it might be best to construct a section rather than the whole of this line at first in order to demonstrate its value. Accordingly, the Government had lately agreed upon a tentative draft for a contract with Mr. Hebard for the construction and operation of the section from Aguadulce to Santiago de Veraguas. At my request Dr. Arosemena furnished me with a copy of this draft,[1] which is enclosed with a translation (enclosures 6 and 7). Mr. Hebard was to present this to his principals in the United States for their acceptance. Dr. Arosemena added that this draft had not been signed and was therefore entirely tentative and did not bind the Government even if accepted by Mr. Hebard's syndicate. Certain details in it in fact had not been entirely settled; especially he desired to reduce the length of the concession (Article XIa) from seventy-five to fifty years. The sum upon which by Article XXI the Government guaranteed 5% interest, which was left in blank in the draft, was one million dollars gold and the period for this guaranty (also left in blank) was the existence of the concession. It is to be noted that the contract (contrary to the Dziuk proposition mentioned below) gives no land, except such as is necessary for the railway, and also gives no option for constructing further sections. The Government expressly guarantees the interest on the one million dollars with the interest from the six million dollars invested in New York. A memorandum attached to the contract obliges the concessionary to allow connections with other railway lines and also allows the Government to use the railway, whenever it considers it necessary, for reasonable compensation.

---

[1] Not printed.

Dr. Arosemena stated that an offer to construct the Panama-David Railway had also been received from Mr. Dziuk, the concessionary of the Darien Railway. At my request Dr. Arosemena furnished me with a copy of this offer,[1] which I enclose with a translation (enclosures 8 and 9). Dr. Arosemena stated that he considered this the best offer the Government had received but as it came from a German syndicate and as the Government was resolved only to deal with Americans, he had declined it and advised Mr. Dziuk to see whether he could not get Mr. Myers to interest himself in making through him a similar offer. From what he had subsequently heard, however, he did not think this likely. It is hard to see why Dr. Arosemena should prefer Mr. Dziuk's proposition as it appears distinctly more onerous to Panama.

Dr. Arosemena assured me that the foregoing was the present situation and that no other negotiations were taking place.

I thereupon thanked Dr. Arosemena and stated that I supposed he was familiar with the Department's instruction to the Legation (No. 89 of September 20, 1911) a copy of which had been given to Señor Boyd. Dr. Arosemena replied that he had heard of this instruction but had never seen it, as Dr. Arias, Panaman Minister to the United States, had had it for some time. While expressing my surprise and regret, I advised Dr. Arosemena that it seemed most important that he should read this document as soon as possible. Notwithstanding his statement I believe from what I have heard that Dr. Arosemena is already well acquainted with this instruction.

Subsequently, two days ago, I again met Dr. Arosemena by chance and he informed me that Mr. Dziuk had that afternoon shown him a telegram which he had received from New York from some gentlemen who seemed interested in this railway. He had not been able to see the signature to this telegram at all well, but it seemed to be a German name. Dr. Arosemena added that he had not made up his mind whether or not to deal with Mr. Dziuk, and in reply to my question said that to his regret he had not yet been able to read the Department's instruction. I again pointedly advised him to do so immediately, stating that this instruction would give him better than I could full information regarding the position of the United States as to the construction of railways in Panama by foreign syndicates. Dr. Arosemena I have since learned sent to Dr. Arias soon after and secured the copy of the instruction.

While adding that I did not fail to express my gratification to President Arosemena for his important communications, which I promised to report to my Government,

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 819.77/92.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 15.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, November 29, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that Mr. Augusto Dziuk called upon me recently saying that he desired to make my acquaintance. Mr. Dziuk is a German who speaks very little English but who has apparently spent a number of years in Central America and Mexico.

In the course of our conversation he stated that his company, The Balboa and Pacific Estates Co. Ld., and The Balboa and Darien Estates and Railway Co., was Anglo-German, the larger part being of the latter nationality. Among the German members were Count Oppersdorf, a prominent member of the German Reichstag, and Herr von Bethmann-Holweg, a nephew of the German Imperial Chancellor. He expatiated upon the mining and agricultural wealth of the part of Darien to be traversed by his railway, pointing out on a map which I happened to have ("Mapa de la República de Panamá arreglado por Ramón M. Valdés, 1910") the route of this railway, which, starting at Puerto Piñas, followed not far from the coast in a northwesterly direction to the end of a chain of mountains called "Serranía del Sapo." Here the line was to turn and run on the other side of this chain in a southeasterly direction apparently to somewhere near the headwaters of the Sambú River. At this point the line struck north to El Real de Santa María. Mr. Dziuk stated that it was not worth while to go beyond this point unless the extension to Panama City was secured.

In reply to my enquiry as to why the line adopted described such an extremely circuitous route, he replied that as the concessions gave the railway extensive grants of land along its line and as the land in this region was especially valuable, the railway made this détour so as to acquire as much as possible. He further stated that he had bought from the Panaman Government large tracts of so-called "tierras baldías," untilled lands, surrounding Puerto Piñas, about 27,000 hectares. The port of Puerto Piñas was an excellent one, with water enough for ships of deep draft to come close inshore.

As yet no work had been done, except for some plantations started around Puerto Piñas, where about 300 Colombian laborers had gradually been attracted by the prospect of work. He intended to begin work during the coming dry season, about in March, and expected to purchase material from the Isthmian Canal Commission, although I ascertained that as yet he had made no arrangements for this.

In reply to my enquiry as to the gauge of the railway, he said that this depended upon the gauge of the David railway: he would adopt the same gauge, as, with the extension which he had requested to Panama City, this would make a long link in the Pan American Railway.

He referred to his request for the extension to Panama City as "pending."

Mr. Dziuk then stated that an American syndicate was now forming in New York for the purpose of bidding for the construction of the Panama-David Railway. He was to be the representative of this syndicate and if it was successful in its bid, which he hoped before long to be able to present to the Panaman Government, it would employ American materials as the cheapest and best. He added that he wished to begin building both railways (the Darien and Panama-David) at the same time but if his American syndicate did not secure the construction of the latter, he would nevertheless begin the other. Mr. Dziuk did not seem inclined to give any further details as to his American syndicate but evidently wished to lay stress upon his intention of purchasing his materials in the United States.

This information as to Mr. Dziuk's American syndicate may be compared with Dr. C. C. Arosemena's information upon the same subject as reported in my despatch No. 14 of the 28th instant. It would also seem that the real American character of this syndicate, should it materialize, would be a proper subject for investigation.

Regarding Mr. Dziuk's Darien concession and his statement that his request for an extension to Panama City is still pending, "Resolución Número 29" of May 27, 1911, of which a copy and translation are enclosed,[1] clipped from the Gaceta Oficial No. 1452 of June 16th last, shows that this extension was then refused as a "branch" of his main railway while the extension to the headwaters of the Chucunaque was granted. I have lately been informed most emphatically by both President Arosemena and Dr. C. C. Arosemena, Minister of Public Works, that of course the extension to Panama City or any extension in this direction was absolutely and definitely refused.

I also learn that Mr. Dziuk has made the deposit of 10.000 balboas required by paragraph 4 of Article 10 of his contract but has not yet deposited the "maps, profiles and plans" as required by paragraph 2 of Article 10, having secured an extension of the period for doing so as may be seen from "Resolución Número 31," of which I enclose a copy [1] and translation, the former clipped from the Gaceta Oficial, above mentioned.

President Arosemena and others have expressed considerable doubt as to whether under these circumstances Mr. Dziuk will ever begin the construction of his Darien railway.

I have [etc.]

F. Percival Dodge.

File No. 819.77/93.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 19.]

American Legation,
Panama, December 6, 1911.

Sir: Referring to my despatch No. 14 of the 28th ultimo, I have the honor to inform you that Señor Nicanor A. de Obarrio, who is a member of the Panaman Assembly and has apparently been representing Mr. L. E. Myers here, called upon me to-day and showed me a letter from Mr. Myers of which he allowed me to retain a copy (which is inclosed [1]) for my information. Señor de Obarrio stated that he had brought this letter to the attention of President Arosemena and Dr. C. C. Arosemena, Minister of Public Works, and informed me that he did not believe that President Arosemena desired to construct the Panama-David Railway at all. In an apparently rather dissatisfied tone he then purported to give me the results of his conversation with the President and Dr. Arosemena. Señor de Obarrio's statements as to this were not altogether clear to me, but I gathered that at first he had been told that the Government would be prepared to negotiate with Mr. Myers for the final survey of the line, and later that the Government would not consider any proposition which did not have the "OK" of the American Government. Referring to Mr. Myers' letter he stated that the Mr. Lewis mentioned on page 3 was Señor Samuel Lewis, and that he had not left Panama.

---

[1] Not printed.

He further stated that Mr. Dziuk was endeavoring to form an American syndicate with German capital to present a proposition to the Panaman Government for constructing the Panama-David Railway and further for constructing a railway connecting with this one and running from Panama City to the headwaters of the Chucunaque River, there joining the railway to be constructed under Mr. Dziuk's Darien concession. Mr. Myers' letter gives his impression of Mr. Dziuk's proposed syndicate.

Señor de Obarrio then stated that he desired information upon something which he had heard lately "in the street," namely, that the Department had recently sent an instruction to the Legation for communication to the Panaman Government which stated that the American Government desired that the Panama-David Railway should not be constructed. I replied that I was extremely glad that he had brought this rumor to my attention, which was entirely without foundation. It was true, I stated, that the Department had lately sent an instruction for communication to the Panaman Government and that this instruction set forth clearly the attitude of the American Government as to the construction of railways generally in Panama. I then gave Mr. de Obarrio in a few words the substance of this instruction, adding that I should be glad to have it become generally known in Panama, in order to make clear the attitude of my Government and thus prevent false reports from circulating in the future.

Subsequently, in a conversation with President Arosemena, he mentioned Mr. Myers' letter to Señor de Obarrio, stating that he was about to send me a copy of it. Señor de Obarrio had been informed that Mr. Myers' proposal would be taken under consideration. The President added that, as the matter was such a serious one, no answer could be made until after serious thought.

As I was leaving, the President handed to me a pamphlet entitled "Official Messages of the President. His Vetoes of the Railroad Measures passed at the session of the National Assembly held September 25 to October 9, 1911. Also an Address to the Nation."

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 819.77/92.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 12.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 12, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 15 of the 29th ultimo, reporting the conversation between yourself and Mr. Augusto Dziuk, the representative of the Balboa and Pacific Estates Company Limited and the Balboa and Darien Estates and Railway Company, in regard to the railroad concession granted to these companies.

Copies of your despatch and the English text of the enclosure have been forwarded to the Secretary of War.

The Department's views as to this concession are covered by instruction No. 89, of September 20, 1911, to Mr. Andrews.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 819.77/93.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 21, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your confidential despatch No. 19, of the 6th instant, in which you report a conversation between yourself and Señor Obarrio, a member of the Panaman Assembly, in regard to the proposed construction of the Panama-David Railway.

A copy of your despatch has been forwarded to the Secretary of War.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

NOTE.—The President's message to Congress on departmental questions[1] was read December 21, 1911; it refers to the Panama Canal and calls attention to the need for legislation relating to the government of the Canal Zone, which should approximate a military government.

File No. 819.77/96.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 30.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, December 22, 1911.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 19, of the 6th instant, on the subject of the proposed Panama-David railway, I have the honor to enclose a copy,[2] and translation which I have made,[2] of a draft contract for the construction of a railway starting from the port of Aguadulce and running to the town of Aguadulce where it is to divide into two branches, one end at Anton, passing through Nata with a prolongation to Penonomé, and the other ending at Santiago de Veraguas. This draft was sent to me on the 20th instant by Dr. C. C. Arosemena, Minister of Public Works, who in an accompanying letter stated that this proposal was recently tendered to him and would shortly be considered by the Cabinet. President Arosemena has also mentioned it to me, saying that he considered it to be quite favorable.

---

[1] See page 467 of this volume.

[2] Not printed.

Of the three persons mentioned as contractors, Mr. J. M. Hyatt was until recently American Vice and Deputy Consul at Colon, Mr. H. G. Prescott is an American residing in Panama who during Mr. L. E. Myers' (despatch No. 19) visit here appeared to have some business relations with him, and Mr. Robert Wilcox is said to be an American but as yet I have been able to learn no more about him. I am also unable to say who these gentlemen are connected with in this matter or whether they represent any syndicate. From what I have heard, however, they would not appear to be themselves persons of any importance of financial or business standing.

I have [etc.]

F. Percival Dodge.

File No. 819.77/91.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 31.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 2, 1912.

Sir: The Department is in receipt of your despatch No. 14, of the 28th of November last, reporting the status of the proposed construction of the Panama-David Railway.

A copy of the despatch has been sent to the Secretary of War, for his information.

The matter of the construction of the Panama-David Railway is now being considered by the War Department in conjunction with congressional action looking to the operation and maintenance of the Panama Canal.

I am [etc.]

(For Mr. Knox:)
Huntington Wilson.

File No. 819.77/107.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Panama, March 5, 1912.

The Dziuk concession has been revoked by the Government of Panama, on the ground of failure to fulfill certain of its terms. See my No. 15 of November 29, 1911.

Dodge.

File No. 819.77/108.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 78.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, March 5, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my dispatch No. 15, of November 29, last, and supplementing my telegram of to-day's date, I have the honor to inform you that Señor Arjona, Minister for Foreign Affairs, called upon me to-day and advised me that the Panaman Government has canceled the contract with Mr. Augusto Dziuk for the construction of a railroad in the Darien region, which was approved by Law 48 of 1911 (of January 29). The grounds for the revocation were, he said, the non-fulfillment by Mr. Dziuk of certain terms of the contract, especially his failure to present the plans, etc., required by paragraph 2, of Article 10, of the contract (See dispatch 15 above referred to) and to maintain a representative in Panama, as required by Article 11 of the contract. Señor Arjona, however, informed me confidentially that the reason why his Government desired to cancel the contract was his Government's opinion that this would be agreeable to the American Government and would facilitate the resumption of the negotiations for the exchange of certain lands in the Sabanas adjoining Panama City and forming part of the Canal Zone, for certain water rights in the harbor of Colon. He thought that the Dziuk concession had had the effect of at least temporarily stopping the progress of these negotiations and requested me to inform my Government that the Government of Panama was anxious to resume the negotiations and conclude them as soon as possible.

The question of the cancellation of this contract has been under consideration for some time and has been mentioned to me on several occasions by members of President Chiari's Government. I have refrained from expressing any desire as to this matter, but on some of these occasions I have casually remarked that although over a year had elapsed since this contract was approved, the contractor had as yet apparently done nothing, while his financial support seemed not to be clear. Mr. Dziuk is said to be now in New York, but a request that a further extension of the time for presenting the plans (Articles 10, paragraph 2), was recently made to the Panaman Government by a local lawyer who, I am informed, presented no power of attorney or other authority to act for Mr. Dziuk.

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 819.77/111.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 96.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, March 22, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my dispatches No. 30 of December 22 and No. 39 [1] of December 30 last, relative to a draft contract between Señor Arosemena, Minister of Public Works, and Messrs. J. N. Hyatt, H. G. Prescott, and R. Wilcox for the construction of a section of the

---

[1] Not printed.

Panamá-David railway, which draft I stated the Panaman Government desired to execute, provided the Department of State had no objection to offer to it, I have the honor to inclose herewith a copy and translation of a note, dated the 21st instant, which I have received from Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs. In this note Señor Chiari refers to Señor Arosemena having furnished me with a copy of this contract with a request that I might transmit it to my Government for its consideration (inclosed in Dispatch No. 30 above referred to) and requests that, as no reply has as yet been received from my Government, I will obtain an expression of its opinion in view of the interest of this matter to the country and of the passing of the proper time for starting it.

There would seem to be a fairly considerable desire in the Western provinces and in Panama City for the construction of this railway and a "plank" advocating this has been included in the recently issued programme of the Porrista party. One of the charges made against President Arosemena and his party has also been their lack of real interest in this project which it is well known President Arosemena opposed at first. It seems very likely that President Arosemena's desire to expedite the signing of this contract is at least partly to offset these charges and so assist the party's new candidate, Don Pedro Diaz.

I have [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

No. 914.[

Department of Foreign Relations,
Panamá, March 21, 1912.

Mr. Minister: In January last, Messrs. Hyatt, Prescott and Wilcox submitted to the Department of Fomento for consideration a draft contract for the construction of a part of the railroad from Panamá to David, which starting from the port of Aguadulce should end in the city of Santiago. This project had the approval of this office, but the contract therefor was not entered into, in consideration of the suggestions made by the Department of State of the United States in regard to the advisabiliy for Panamá of not entering into arrangements of this sort without previous detailed study by your excellency's Government.

According to information furnished to me by the Secretary of Fomento, he submitted for the consideration of your excellency the project of Messrs. Hyatt, Prescott and Wilcox, with the request that it be transmitted to the Department of State for consideration and that he be advised of the result.

As no advices have thus far been received in regard to this matter, which is of great interest for the nation, and as the proper time for the starting of the work is passing, I will greatly appreciate it if your excellency will be good enough to obtain from your Government an expression of its opinion on the projected contract referred to.

The construction of a railroad which will unite the towns mentioned is a work of great possibilities for the future of the country and its agricultural development, since this is made an easy outlet for the products of the provinces of Coclé, Los Santos and Veraguas. Its cost will not be a burden for the Republic, as it is only an experiment which is within the limits of our economic possibilities.

In view of these circumstances, it is to be hoped that the said undertaking will be acceptable to your excellency's Government, which takes such interest in our welfare.

I am [etc.]

Eduardo Chiari.

File No. 819.77/111.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 4, 1912.

The Department is carefully considering the matter treated in your No. 96 of March 22 and as soon as possible will communicate with the Government of Panama.

WILSON.

File No. 819.77/112.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 42.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 8, 1912.

SIR: Referring to past correspondence in the matter of the construction of a section of the Panama-David railway in which Messrs. J. N. Hyatt, H. G. Prescott and R. Wilcox are interested, and particularly to your No. 96 of March 22 last enclosing a communication from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the 21st of that month, stating that the contract had not been entered into with the above-mentioned persons because of the suggestion made in the Department's instruction of September 20, 1911, that no arrangement of this sort be consummated without previous detailed study by this Government, and requesting that you obtain from this Government an expression of its opinion on the projected contract referred to, you are informed that in a letter from the Department to the Secretary of War of March 19, it was observed that in view of the technical character of this question and of others that might be brought to the Department's attention for its study, it would be advisable to form a board to pass upon this class of questions. A copy of the Department's letter of March 19 to the Secretary of War and of his reply of the 3d instant are enclosed for your guidance.[1] From this you will observe that the Secretary of War approves in principle the formation of such a commission, and suggests that a board charged with the duties above mentioned be formed, to be composed of the American Minister to Panama, a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission to be designated by the chairman thereof, and the Chief Engineer of the Panama Railroad Company.

For the better understanding of the views of the Department in this important matter, and of its desire scrupulously to proceed in the manner that may best consult the mutual interests of the United States and of Panama, I am enclosing a copy of a memorandum[1] prepared in the Solicitor's office, dated March 4, 1912, which, with the letter of the Department to the Secretary of War above mentioned, should make clear the attitude taken by the Department.

A copy of the reply which the Department is sending to the Secretary of War signifying its entire approval of the formation of a board as indicated in his letter of the 3d instant is also enclosed.[1]

---

[1] Not printed.

The Department desires you to put yourself immediately in communication with the other members of the board to the end that the questions involved in the project of the Aguadulce-Santiago Railroad may be passed upon with the utmost despatch and the final results of the examination of this matter transmitted promptly to the Department in order that an expression of the opinion of this Government on the projected contract may be communicated to the Panama Government at the earliest possible date.

It should be added that the board should limit its attention to the technical aspects of the matter now submitted to its examination, the Department reserving for itself the determination of the general questions involved such as that presented by the inclusion of the so-called Calvo clause and the pledging of the canal annuity.

The files of the Legation, it is felt, will furnish the board all information regarding the provisions of the proposed contract needed in order to proceed at once to the study of the questions submitted to its examination. You are authorized to make request of the Panaman Government for any further data regarding this matter which the board may desire in connection with the examination of this question.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 819.77/112.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 7, 1912.

What progress has been made in the Aguadulce railway project? See Department's No. 42. While the examination should be careful and thorough, it is highly desirable that it proceed as rapidly as possible.

WILSON.

File No. 819.77/118.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 128.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, May 13, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt on the 26th ultimo of the Department's instruction No. 42, dated April 8th last, informing me of the appointment of a board composed of myself, a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission and the Chief Engineer of the Panama Railroad Company, to consider the technical merits of the proposed contract between the Panaman Government and Messrs. J. N. Hyatt, H. G. Prescott, and R. Wilcox, for the construction of a railway from Anton, Province of Cocle, to Santiago, Province of Veraguas, via Nata and Aguadulce, and a branch road from Antón to Penonomé.

According to the Department's instruction I immediately put myself in communication with the other members of this board, i. e.

Lieutenant Colonel D. D. Gaillard, U. S. A., member of the Isthmian Canal Commission, who, under instructions from the Secretary of War, had been designated by the Chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, and Lieutenant F. Mears, U. S. A., Chief Engineer of the Panama Railroad Company. Subsequently the board held meetings at the Legation on the 25th ultimo and on the 8th and 13th instant, and after full discussion of the proposed contract drew up a report. I have the honor to enclose herewith two signed copies of this report, of which another signed copy has been deposited in the Legation archives and three further copies have been furnished to Lieutenant Colonel Gaillard and Lieutenant Mears for transmission to the War Department and for the archives of the Isthmian Canal Commission and the Panama Railroad Company.

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

[Inclosure 1.]

Report of the Board.

[Extract.]

In conclusion the board desires to state that it is of the opinion that the price per mile as provided by this contract is a fair one, when it is considered that this region is subject to unusually heavy rainfall, which would increase the expense of construction over what it would be in a region of ordinary rainfall. The estimates for the section of the line from Nata to Santiago, via Aguadulce, and for the section of line from Nata to Penonomé, were prepared from the best existing data, i. e., survey made by the Panama Railroad Company for the Panaman Government in 1910; the estimate for the section of line from Nata to Antón were prepared largely from data of the Intercontinental Railroad Survey, which covered the territory in question. This survey shows that the country between Nata and Antón is exceptionally favorable for railroad construction. The opinion of the Panama Railroad assistant engineer, who made the survey of 1910 in this territory, and who has been over this route a number of times in the course of his work, was also given due consideration. It is well known that the first three miles separating the port from Aguadulce presents absolutely no difficulties, as the terrain has a very gentle slope and permits of inexpensive railroad construction.

The average cost of the entire line, according to these estimates, is B. 24,015 per mile, agreeing closely with the price quoted by the contractors. The board believes this road can be constructed within the estimate mentioned, and give a profit of from 10 to 20 per cent to the contractors, depending upon the efficiency of the management and character of weather conditions encountered.

Although the board has attempted to so modify the proposed contract as to insure, so far as possible, construction of a suitable road, yet attention should be invited to the fact that it is not possible to draw any set of specifications which will insure first-class work of this character, unless the official inspectors are thoroughly efficient and zealous in their endeavors to secure a proper performance of the contract.

Respectfully submitted.

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.
D. D. GAILLARD.
F. MEARS.

[Inclosure 2.]

Proposed Contract.

[Extract.]

Article VII. The contractors bind themselves to renounce, as they in fact do renounce entering any claim through diplomatic channels relative to the rights and obligations arising from this contract, and that all controversies between the Government and the contractors, on account of the interpretation of this contract, shall be submitted in each case to an arbitration tribunal, which shall be appointed in the manner determined in Article VIII.

Article VIII. The arbitration tribunal shall be appointed thus: one by the President of the Republic, one by the contractors, and the other by the Supreme Court of Justice of the Nation. The decision of the majority shall be considered as a final and definite solution for both contracting parties.

Article XVI, paragraph 5. The Government agrees to issue bonds for an amount not to exceed B. 2,000,000 in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000. These bonds will draw an interest of 5% per annum and will be redeemable at par 50 years from date of issue. To guarantee the principal and interest on these bonds the Government binds itself to set aside yearly from the $250,000 which it will receive annually from the Government of the United States in accordance with Article XIV of the treaty of November 18th, 1903, a sum which shall be sufficient to cover the interest on the bonds as well as a proportional amount for the amortization of the bonds 50 years from date of issue. The bonds will be issued in blocks of $125,000 and will commence to accrue interest from date of issue.

File No. 819.77/120.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 31, 1912.

Concerning the Hyatt and Wilcox contract and your dispatch No. 128 of May 13—the Department would not object to the contract if Article VII were omitted, and paragraph 5 of Article XVI, and if amended so as to conform to the recommendations of the board. You will so inform the Minister for Foreign Affairs, adding that if the railroad is built the United States Government would like to have an understanding that it could use the railroad in case of emergency, the same as the other railroads near the Canal Zone.

KNOX.

File No. 819.77/129.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, August 20, 1912.

Department's telegram of May 31. The Minister of Public Works is apparently disposed to sign the contract, and the Minister for Foreign Affairs assures me that if signed it will conform to all the conditions of that telegram. He adds, however, that it would seem not proper for the present administration to sign a contract of this nature, as it has only five more weeks of tenure, especially as the President-elect, Porras, recently informed me that he did not approve of constructing this section of the Panama-David railroad first.

DODGE.

File No. 819.77/130.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, August 21, 1912.

I am informed by Mr. J. M. Hyatt that in the contract referred to in my telegram of yesterday the provision for hypothecating the $250,000 annuity has been replaced by a provision for hypothecating a portion of the $6,000,000 belonging to the Government of Panama in New York. Mr. Hyatt also says that the substitution has been acquiesced in by the Department of State.

DODGE.

File No. 819.77/130.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 22, 1912.

Your telegrams of August 20 and 21. You will immediately inform the Minister for Foreign Affairs that the Department of State has not acquiesced in the proposition to substitute, as a security for the railway bonds, a portion of the interest of the $6,000,000 referred to, and that no such proposition has been presented to the Department.

ADEE.

File No. 819.77/132.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 194.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, August 24th, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's telegram of August 22 in reply [etc.]

I immediately communicated the substance of the Department's telegram to the Panaman Government in a note, of which I enclose a copy, which I handed personally to Señor Chiarí. Señor Chiarí informed me that he was not aware of this new provision as these negotiations were being conducted by Señor Carlos Constantino Arosemena, Minister of Public Works. To-day I have received a reply from Señor Chiarí of which I also enclose a copy and translation. It will be observed that in this note Señor Chiarí renews the verbal assurances reported in my Despatch No. 187, referred to, that this contract if signed "will be wholly in accord with the indications of the Government of the United States."

I have [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Minister to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

No. 248.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, August 22, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: Referring to a recent conversation with your excellency in which your excellency informed me that his excellency the Minister of Public Works was considering the advisability of signing the contract with Messrs. J. M. Hyatt and R. Wilcox relative to the construction of a railway from Antón to Santiago via Nata and Aguadulce with a branch line from Antón to Penonomé, mentioned in my note to your excellency of June 3rd last and to the assurances which your excellency then gave me that this contract, if signed, would, of course, conform entirely with the conditions set forth in my note just mentioned, I have the honor to inform your excellency that it has since then come to my knowledge, from an apparently trustworthy source, that in the contract now being considered there has been substituted for the provision relating to the hypothecation of the annuity of $250,000 to be received from the Government of the United States, another provision granting a portion of the interest of the sum of $6,000,000 now invested by the Panaman Government in New York as security for the bonds to be issued for the construction of this railway.

My Government accordingly desires me to inform your excellency, for your excellency's information, that it has not acquiesced in the substitution mentioned and further that the proposed concessionaries of this contract did not present any such proposition to the Department of State.

I avail [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

No. 2771.] DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Panamá, August 23, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's esteemed communication No. 248 of yesterday's date, of which I have noted the contents, then referring it to the Minister of Public Works for him to take note of the declaration which your excellency makes relative to the new clause which, according to the information you have, has been introduced into the proposed contract with Messrs. Hyatt and Wilcox, concerning the construction of a railway from Antón to Santiago with a branch from Antón to Penonomé.

I avail of this opportunity to confirm to your excellency the declaration which I have already made to you, that if this contract is signed it will be wholly in accord with the indications of the Government of the United States.

I avail [etc.]

EDUARDO CHIARÍ.

File No. 819.77/133.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 204.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, September 3, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 194 of the 24th ultimo as to negotiations proceeding between Señor Carlos Constantino Arosemena, Minister of Public Works, and Messrs. J. M. Hyatt and Robert Wilcox, relative to the signature of the contract between the Panaman Government and these gentlemen for the construction of a railway from Antón to Santiago, etc., I have the honor to inform you that Señor Chiarí, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has now advised me that the contract will not be signed by this administration, which, owing to the fact that it is so near its expiration, will not sign any more contracts, believing this to be improper.

I have [etc.]

F. Percival Dodge.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPH INSTALLATION IN PANAMA—TREATY RIGHTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

File No. 819.74/2.

The Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

Department of the Navy,
Washington, December 11, 1911.

Sir: I have the honor to request such information as may be available concerning any wireless telegraph installations existing or proposed on the Isthmus of Panama.

Respectfully,

Geo. von L. Meyer.

File No. 819.74/3.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

Department of State,
Washington, December 13, 1911.

Sir: The following recommendation of the Joint Board, dated November 27, 1911, has been approved by the President, under date of December 12:

> 2. That an understanding be reached with Panama to prevent the establishments of private and commercial wireless installations in its territory.

Accordingly, I have the honor to request that necessary steps be taken by the State Department to accomplish the desired understanding with the Republic of Panama in definite terms, so as to prevent the establishments of private and commercial wireless installations in its territory.

I have the honor, further, to request that negotiations to this end be commenced as soon as practicable, as it has come to the attention of the Navy Department that the establishment of a wireless system in Panama is being contemplated, which would seriously interfere with our national policy regarding means of communication in the vicinity of the Canal Zone, as set forth in the above-quoted recommendation.

Respectfully yours,

Beekman Winthrop.

File No. 819.74/2.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 14.]
Department of State,
Washington, December 15, 1911.

Sir: The Department is in receipt of a request from the Secretary of the Navy for a full report on the wireless telegraphic systems proposed or already established on the Isthmus of Panama. You are therefore directed to investigate and report on this matter as promptly as possible.

The Government of Panama of its own volition, and without mention of any treaty provisions which might be relevant, has frequently assured your Legation that no negotiations for any form of telegraphic communication on the Isthmus would be concluded without first communicating with this Government and securing its assent. For this assurance you are referred to Mr. Hitt's despatch No. 21 on June 30, 1910. Yet according to Mr. Campbell's despatch No. 90 of March 1, 1911, a contract between the Government of Panama and the United Fruit Company for the erection of a wireless station at Colon was signed on December 27, 1910; and according to a despatch from the Consul at Colon, dated July 29, 1911, the United Wireless Telegraph Company of New York installed a wireless station of its own at Colon in June, 1910, the very month in which the Minister for Foreign Affairs assured Mr. Hitt that the assent of this Government would be obtained before negotiations for wireless communication on the Isthmus would be concluded.

It does not appear that the assent of this Government to either of these enterprises was ever requested, or given, or even that the Legation was approached in the matter.

In view of these facts you are directed to inquire informally and discreetly of the Minister for Foreign Affairs why the procedure contemplated in the assurance given to Mr. Hitt has not been followed by the Panaman Government.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 819.74/3.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, December 16, 1911.

[Quotes the Joint Board's recommendation (see ante, telegram from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, December 13) and proceeds:]

Your Legation has been frequently assured by the Government of Panama—of its own volition and without mention of any treaty provision that might be relevant—that it would not conclude any negotiation for any form of telegraphic communication on the Isthmus without securing the assent of this Government. You will discuss this matter with the Minister for Foreign Affairs and report.

Knox.

File No. 819.73/3.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

Department of State,
Washington, December 19, 1911.

Sir: Referring to the Department's instruction No. 14, of the 15th instant, and to the Department's telegram of December 16, the Department encloses herewith for your information and for appropriate action a copy of a letter dated December 13, 1911, from the Acting Secretary of the Navy in which is quoted the following recommendation of the Joint Board of the Army and the Navy, dated November 27, 1911, and approved by the President under date of December 12, 1911:

> 2. That an understanding be reached with Panama to prevent the establishments of private and commercial wireless installations in its territory.

A copy of an unnumbered despatch,[1] dated November 29, 1911, from the American Consulate General at Panama on the same general subject is also enclosed herewith.

I am [etc.]

(For Mr. Knox:)
HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 819.74/2.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 20, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th instant in which you request such information as may be available concerning any wireless telegraph installations existing or proposed on the Isthmus of Panama.

In reply I have the honor to say that an appropriate instruction, based on your letter, has been sent to the American Minister at Panama City, and that, when a reply shall have been received, the Department will be glad to communicate further with you on the subject.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 819.74/3.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 20, 1911.

SIR: Referring to the letter dated December 13, 1911, from the Acting Secretary of the Navy in which is quoted a recommendation of the joint board, dated November 27, 1911, relative to the installation of private and commercial wireless stations in the Republic of Panama, I have the honor to inform you that a copy of the letter from your Department has been referred to the American Minister at Panama, for his information and for appropriate action.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 819.74/4.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Panama, December 21, 1911.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs has told me in conversation that his Government will enter into such an understanding as that indicated in your telegram of December 16, if necessary for protecting the canal and the interests of the United States, but hopes such an understanding will not prevent such use of wireless telegraphy as might aid the development of Panama.

Dodge.

File No. 819.74/4.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

Department of State,
Washington, December 26, 1911.

Sir: [After referring to the Navy Department's letters of December 11 and 13, and quoting the Minister's telegram of December 21, the letter continues:]

The Department would be glad to have you give it some expression as to an arrangement that might be made by the Navy Department to handle all wireless messages to and from the Republic of Panama.

I have [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 819.74/6.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 83.]

American Legation,
Panama, December 26, 1911.

Sir: Supplementing my telegram of the 22d [21st ?] instant, relative to the unwillingnuess of the Panaman Government to enter into an understanding with the American Government with a view to preventing the establishment in Panaman territory of wireless telegraph installations of a private and commercial character, I have the honor to report that upon the receipt of your telegram of the 16th instant I discussed this matter discreetly with Señor Boyd, Minister for Foreign Affairs, who immediately replied that he could inform me at once that if the American Government considered that the protection of the canal required such an understanding the Government of Panama was willing to enter into it. He only feared that it might hinder the commercial and agricultural development of the country, which was just beginning, especially if, as seemed possible, future improvements in wireless telegraphy rendered this system more advantageous than cables and also convenient for local use. After some discussion, during which I expressed the belief that such an understanding would not operate unfavorably to Panama, in whose prosperity and development my Government was so deeply interested, Señor Boyd requested a couple of days to consider the matter. On the 22d [21st ?] instant Señor Boyd made me his reply, as promised and as embodied substantially in my telegram referred to. In making this statement he also expressed to me the sincere wish of his Government to assist the American Government in every way possible in securing the adequate protection of the canal.

At the same time, in reply to my question, Señor Boyd informed me that the only wireless apparatus existing in Panama, except such as belonged to the United States, was a small apparatus purchased not long ago by the Panaman Government and established at Panama City for the purpose of communicating with ships in case of disaster and the wireless station of the United Fruit Company at Bocas del Toro.

Further, by the law of December 27, 1910 (Ley 36 de 1910), a contract had been entered into with the United Fruit Company by which this company agreed to establish "an office for wireless communication" (Paragraph a) at Colon for service with the station at Bocas. A copy and translation of this contract is enclosed,[1] from which it will be noted that the company further agrees to establish this service within one year of the approval of the contract (December 27, 1910). The Government on its side cedes to the company the national land in Colon necessary for the installation of a wireless plant for the term of fifty years. The contract further includes an agreement as to tolls, the Government collecting and retaining the tolls on all messages sent from Colon to Bocas and the company doing the same with the tolls on messages sent from Bocas to Colon.

I have learned that the company has not as yet erected any wireless apparatus of its own at Colon, but has established and maintained a wireless service between these points by using the apparatus on its ships, when any are in port, and when none are there by having its messages (both its own and those taken in accordance with its contract) transmitted by the Naval wireless apparatus. From what I have learned through Captain Maxwell, U. S. N., who has recently arrived here on a mission from the Navy Department connected with the establishment of a powerful wireless station at Culebra, this arrangement appears to be satisfactory to our Naval officials, who in return secure from the United Fruit Company the transmission of their messages through the company's stations at Bocas, Puerto Limon, and at other places.

As to why the company has never constructed any station of its own at Colon, it would seem that none of the Panaman Government lands at Colon were found suitable for the purpose. Moreover, the company apparently believes that the naval station will shortly be abandoned at Colon when the Culebra station is established, thus giving them an opportunity to acquire this site which is one of the only desirable ones apparently in this locality. I am confidentially informed by Captain Maxwell that the Navy Department will probably not give up this site.

---

[1] Not printed.

In this connection I may state that on the 24th instant Captain Maxwell kindly informed me that an agent of the United Fruit Co. had just called him up by telephone and requested an interview, which was urgent as he stated, because the company's contract at Colon would expire on the 27th, presumably it would seem, on account of noncompliance with the terms of its contract requiring the establishment of a wireless station within the year, although from the wording of the contract this does not seem altogether clear. In view of this and of the possibility that some action might be taken by the Panaman Government at the request of the company which would be unfavorable to the understanding mentioned in your telegram of December 16, I took an early opportunity to mention the matter to Señor Boyd, who stated that, so far as he knew, the company had been fulfilling its contract although he was unaware that it had not constructed any wireless station at Colon. I then said that although in view of our recent conversations I thought it unnecessary to mention it, nevertheless I might say that I hope of course that his Government would do nothing to alter the status quo of the wireless telegraph situation without previously giving me an opportunity of communicating with my Government. Señor Boyd cordially agreed to this, adding that he would even go so far as to offer to rescind this contract if my Government desired it and saw any ground for so doing.

As yet the United Fruit Co. have apparently had no communication with the Panaman Government as to this matter, and it would seem unlikely that they will have any. It would also seem that they will not be able to establish a wireless station at Colon unless they are able to secure the present Naval station there.

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 819.74/8.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 41.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, January 3, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your instructions No. 14 of the 15th ultimo and No. — [unnumbered instruction] of the 19th ultimo [etc.]

My telegram of December 21, in reply to the Department's telegram of December 16, has informed the Department that the Panaman Government is ready to enter into such an understanding. My despatch No. 33 of the 26th ultimo supplemented this telegram and also informed the Department that I had been advised by Señor Boyd, Minister for Foreign Affairs, that the only wireless stations existing in Panaman territory were the small apparatus of the Panaman Government in Panama City and the United Fruit Company's station at Bocas del Toro. My despatch also gave the status of the United Fruit Company's wireless situation at Colon.

Since writing this despatch I have had a further conversation with Señor Boyd, who informs me that he has recently received a request from Mr. McFarland, the agent of the United Fruit Company mentioned in my despatch No. 33, for permission to establish a wireless station upon the land now occupied by the naval wireless station at Colon as soon as this station is removed to Culebra. Señor Boyd informed me that he had replied to Mr. McFarland that this permission could not be given to his company, in any event for the present, as the Panaman Government was considering whether the United Fruit Company's contract with the Government for the establishment of a wireless station at Colon (of which a copy and translation was enclosed in my despatch No. 33) had now lapsed, owing to the company's failure to comply with certain of its terms. Señor Boyd stated that this reply had been made in view of my request that the Panaman Government would do nothing to alter the status quo of the wireless telegraph situation without previously giving me an opportunity for communicating with my Government (despatch No. 33). A delay of several weeks was thus secured, during which he hoped that the Department would be able to advise the Panaman Government, through me, as to what course it was desired that it should pursue in this matter. Señor Boyd is not aware that the Navy Department has now practically, as I understand, decided not to give up the Colon wireless station (despatch No. 33).

I then took occasion, in accordance with your instruction No. 14, informally and discreetly to mention to Señor Boyd that the assent of the American Government to this contract with the United Fruit Company had never been requested or given, although the Legation had frequently been assured that no negotiations for any form of telegraphic communication on the Isthmus would be concluded without first communicating with the American Government and securing its assent. Señor Boyd replied that he did not understand why the Panaman Government had failed to live up to this engagement, as this had occurred before he entered the Foreign Office, but that he could give me full assurances for the future. Upon my also mentioning the establishment in June, 1910, of a wireless station at Colon by the United Wireless Telegraph Company of New York, Señor Boyd said that he was entirely unaware of the existence of this station, that he was certain that permission for erecting it had never been given, and consequently that the Panaman Government could cause it to be removed at anytime. There was no law covering the establishment of wireless stations in Panama; therefore, according to Panaman law, express permission from the Government was required in each case. Señor Boyd then again assured me with great earnestness that he had given me the exact present situation and that the Panaman Government, far from contemplating entering into any wireless agreements, was awaiting the moment for signing the understanding desired by the United States to prevent the establishment in Panaman territory of private and commercial wireless installations which he presumed would soon be presented to him.

Captain Maxwell, U. S. N., whom I mentioned in my despatch No. 33, informs me that this United Wireless station at Colon has not been used for the past four months and that its range probably does not exceed one hundred miles. Mr. Kellogg, our Consul at Colon, informs me that the agent of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company states that it will soon be in operation again. Captain Maxwell further informs me that the United Wireless system is used by the ships of the Royal Mail, the Panama Railroad Company and probably the Hamburg American Line, while the United Fruit Company presumably uses the Telefonken system.

Captain Maxwell states that Mr. G. N. Clark, subinspector of naval wireless telegraph stations, who has recently arrived here for the purpose of making certain wireless experiments for the Navy, especially with a view to selecting the site for the high-power wireless station at Culebra, is intending soon to make experiments at the naval station at Colon which will enable him to determine what wireless stations exist within a radius of one thousand miles. The results of these experiments, which Captain Maxwell has kindly instructed Mr. Clark to communicate to me, will show apparently definitely whether any stations besides those mentioned by Señor Boyd exist in Panaman territory. I enclose, as of interest in this connection, a copy of a memorandum handed to me by Captain Maxwell and drafted by Mr. Clark, regarding the installation of a complete wireless telegraph system in the Isthmian Canal Zone with a special reference to the technical questions involved by the topography of the country.

I have taken occasion to request Señor Boyd since his resignation from the Foreign Office, to inform his successor, Señor Chiari, fully as to our conversations and understandings regarding this matter, and he has informed me that Señor Chiari is already fully advised.

While desiring to express my appreciation for the assistance and information given me by Captain Maxwell in this matter,

I have [etc.]

F. Percival Dodge.

[Inclosure.—Extract.]

Panama, December 29, 1911.

Memorandum regarding the installation of a complete wireless telegraphy system in the Isthmian Canal Zone, with special reference to the technical questions involved by the topography of the country.

The project for Naval uses in controlling vessels of war in both oceans, both at a great distance and near by, from the station at Washington, at present involves the installation of a high-power station at the most favorable location approximately midway between the Atlantic and Pacific, and two low-power stations peculiarly located with respect to their geographical situations with reference to each other and the larger station.

Moderate [sic] wireless telegraph practice has shown positively that even with the most highly developed system available to-day it is impossible for two stations of like power to work simultaneously without interference with each other when located within the geographical limitations imposed by the question at issue. Both stations can be used at the same time for transmitting, as far as they themselves are concerned, although the respective receiving stations with which they are in communication will experience interference in the general case. Similarly both stations can be used simultaneously for receiving, under special circumstances. But for one station to receive while the other is transmitting is impossible, and a knowledge of actual daily conditions at wireless telegraph stations shows that this third condition occurs during by far the greatest percentage of the total time.

It is, however, possible with properly designed apparatus to have a high-power station communicating with another station at a distance, both stations using a long wave length, without there being any mutual interference between it and a low-power station some distance away using a short-wave length. If in addition, the topographical conditions are such that the conditions for the propagation of electric waves between the high and low power stations are very poor, the combination of great difference in wave lengths, difference in heights of aerials, difference in amounts of power used, and the poor connecting ground conditions between each of the low-power stations and the high-power one, can be utilized so as to absolutely prevent any interference between the two, although of course they can communicate if desired by mutually altering their wave-length relations.

Since for long distance work a long wave length is essential, while for short distance communications a short wave is better, the operation in the Canal Zone of a system embodying one major and two minor stations, without mutual interference, is perfectly possible.

For the large station, three four-hundred-foot powers are proposed, and the following buildings: (1) Power, storage battery, and transmitter building; (2) receiving and operating building; (3) quarters for five operators; (4) five-room cottage for electrician in charge; (5) oil house and tank, if possible. Station will if practicable be located on the same side of the Canal as the principal activities. The small power stations will probably have a combined receiving and transmitting house, and quarters for five operators. At the large station at least will be supplied two breakdown sources of power, the main supply being the high-tension line from the Canal Zone power plant, and the breakdown supply being a storage battery and an internal combustion engine.

The military necessity for these three stations is evident when consideration is given to their several functions. The high-power station is designed primarily for long-range communication with Washington, Mare Island, ships at sea in both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans at a distance of about three thousand miles, and, ultimately, important stations in a southeast and southwest direction. * * *

For medium ranges, say 200 to 1,000 miles, a second serial of smaller dimensions than that used for the long waves will be part of the installation. * * *

The low-power stations serve a much more important end. Were they not installed, at least one such set would have to be placed at the high-power station, for short range work with the fleets operating in either ocean. Both for military and other reasons—such as operating expenditures—it would be very objectionable to use the high-power station for this work. This small set could not work independently of the larger one, and hence would cut down its operating efficiency. By locating two low-power sets on the Atlantic and Pacific sides, respectively, however, each can work with vessels up to 200 miles at sea without interfering with each other or with the high-power station. * * *

The Navy Department's policy during the past year has been to absorb as far as possible all commercial stations operating near Naval stations, because (1) the commercial stations were operated with apparatus inferior to that of the Navy in point of efficiency and sharpness of tuning, thereby causing much needless interference with other stations attempting to intercommunicate at the same time, (2) as previously stated, it is impossible for stations of the same order of power and wave length to work near each other without constant mutual interference. * * *

In general, the following conclusions may be drawn:

(1) It is impossible to use two simultaneously operating stations of the same operating range without constant mutual interference, making the total number of messages which can be handled approximately a constant whether one or both stations be used.

(2) It will very probably overtax the ability of a single high-power station in the Canal Zone to handle long distance work as well as local.

(3) It is perfectly possible to operate small-powered and high-powered stations in close geographical relations with each other without mutual interference. Hence the system can be simultaneously operated. The smaller stations can handle local work, which they are eminently fitted to do, and the large station can take care of long range work the class for which it was primarily designed.

(4) From a military point of view, the ability to keep in touch with Washington from the Canal Zone and at the same time keep in communication with a fleet in the Atlantic or Pacific or both is an absolute necessity.

Respectfully submitted.

G. H. Clark,
Subinspector, Wireless Telegraph Stations.

File No. 819.74/6.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 6, 1912.

SIR: Referring to this Department's letter to you of the 26th ultimo on the subject of wireless telegraph installations existing or proposed on the Isthmus of Panama, and of a possible agreement between this Government and that of Panama looking to the prevention of the establishment of private and commercial wireless stations on the Isthmus, I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a despatch from the American Minister to Panama, dated December 26, 1911.

From an examination of this despatch, which is confirmatory of the telegram paraphrased to you with this Department's letter referred to above, it would seem not improbable that the Government of Panama will be willing, although Mr. Boyd, the Foreign Minister with whom Mr. Dodge discussed the matter, has since resigned, to negotiate such an agreement as you suggested in your letter of the 13th ultimo, provided the Navy Department in operating the wireless system on the Isthmus will place no restriction on the acceptance of private and commercial messages, such as would in any way hinder the industrial development of the Republic of Panama. It would also seem, from Mr. Dodge's despatch, that the United Fruit Company does not intend to construct a wireless station at Colon as provided in the contract, a copy of which is transmitted as an enclosure with Mr. Dodge's despatch.

In this connection and in view of the liklihood that legislation for the permanent government of the Canal Zone will soon be enacted, I beg to suggest the advisability of causing the insertion in any legislation for this purpose of a provision authorizing the President to regulate the erection and operation of wireless telegraphic installations on the Canal Zone and to provide for the acceptance and transmission by the Government wireless telegraphic system of private and commercial messages, as well as those of the Government of Panama, at toll rates to be prescribed by the President in his discretion. It is noted that there is no such provision in the Mann bill.

This Department will await a further expression of your desires before again instructing the Legation at Panama with regard to this matter.

I have [etc.] P. C. KNOX.

File No. 819.74/6.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 11, 1912.

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your confidential despatch No. 33, of December 26, 1911, relative to the establishment of wireless telegraph stations on the Ishthmus of Panama.

A copy of your despatch has been transmitted to the Secretary of the Navy, for his information.

I am [etc.] P. C. KNOX.

File No. 819.74/9.

The Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

Navy Department,
Washington, January 11, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 6, 1912, relative to the subject of wireless telegraph installation existing or proposed on the Isthmus of Panama; and to express my sincere appreciation of the efforts of your Department to further the Navy's interests in the erection and operation of wireless installations on the Isthmus.

Referring to your suggestion as to the advisability of inserting a provision in the Mann bill authorizing the President to regulate the control of wireless on the Canal Zone, I beg to inform you that it meets with our approval, and a letter to this effect will be transmitted to the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

When the selection of sites for subsidiary wireless stations along the coasts of Panama has been completed, the Department will submit recommendations concerning an agreement with the Government of Panama for the operation of the wireless system on the Isthmus, outside the Canal Zone.

Respectfully yours,

Geo. von L. Meyer.

File No. 819.74/9.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 25.]

Department of State,
Washington, January 17, 1912.

Sir: The Department has received your No. 41 of the 3d instant, in reply to its instruction of the 15th ultimo, to investigate and report as to the wireless telegraphic systems proposed or already established on the Isthmus of Panama.

A copy of your dispatch has been sent to the Secretary of the Navy for his information. In this connection a copy of a letter of the 11th instant from the Secretary of the Navy is herewith inclosed.

I am [etc.],

P. C. Knox.

File No. 819.74/8.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

Department of State,
Washington, January 17, 1912.

Sir: Referring to previous correspondence, I have the honor to inclose herewith for your information a copy of a dispatch of the 3d instant from the American Minister at Panama, reporting on the wireless telegraphic systems proposed or already established on the Isthmus of Panama.

I have [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 819.74/10.

The Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

Department of the Navy,
Washington, January 23, 1912.

Sir: Referring to my letter of January 11, 1912, in which it was stated that request would be made for further negotiations with the Republic of Panama towards setting aside certain sites along its coasts for wireless stations, I have the honor to inform you that the location of the desired sites has been decided upon, and to request that the Department of State take steps towards the cession of these sites to the United States for the use of wireless telegraph stations.

The Navy Department desires to make the following specific propositions, which I beg you to convey to the Panaman Government, with regard to the further status of wireless on the Isthmus of Panama:

(a) That the Navy shall erect, operate, and maintain wireless telegraph stations upon sites ceded by the Republic of Panama to the United States for that purpose, in the approximate localities hereinafter named, and in such other places as may be selected by agreement between the two Governments concerned; the exact locations to be decided by representatives of the Panaman Government and the Navy Department. The approximate locations selected on the Atlantic coast are:

(1) Bocas del Toro, Almirante Bay.
(2) Portobello, where the present station will be continued.
(3) Armila, near Cape Tiburon.

Along the Pacific coast:

(4) Piñas Bay.
(5) Cape Mala.
(6) David Bay.

These locations are merely approximate, since it will require considerable time to test the electrical conditions at each proposed site, but the exact site should fulfill the conditions of being well situated electrically, near a town or village and consequent supplies, and when practicable, near a roadway, telegraph or cable, that is or may be established. Furthermore, these stations must be so located with reference to one another and to the low-power stations now erected or projected in the Canal Zone as to form a complete chain of stations covering the entire Isthmus.

(b) That the Navy shall have the exclusive right to the erection and operation of all wireless installations in the territory of Panama. This is a reasonable request, based upon our Government's guarantee of the integrity of Panama and its reciprocal obligation to give us the right to protect the Republic of Panama and Canal Zone; the control of wireless will be a vital factor in preventing foreign encroachments and aggressions.

(c) As an adequate return for the above concessions on the part of the Panaman Government, the Navy will guarantee:

(1) To handle all messages of the Panaman Government free of charge, and to give them the right of way over private or commercial messages.

(2) To handle all private or commercial messages at such tolls as the President, in his discretion and pursuant to an act of Congress, may prescribe.

(3) To place no restrictions upon the acceptance of commercial or private messages such as would in any way hinder the industrial development of the Republic of Panama.

(4) To erect and operate such additional stations in the Republic of Panama as may become necessary for military reasons or for the proper handling of business in the Isthmus, and which may be erected pursuant to agreement between the two Governments.

(5) It is believed that the protection of the Republic of Panama, its development, and commercial interests will be fully conserved by the agreement proposed, and in view of the early completion of the Panama Canal, it is urged that an early decision be reached in this matter for the mutual benefit of Panama and ourselves.

Respectfully yours,

GEO. VON L. MEYER.

File No. 819.74/10.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 29.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 31, 1912.

SIR: Referring to past correspondence on the subject of wireless telegraph stations in Panama, a copy of a letter dated January 23, 1912, from the Secretary of the Navy, setting forth the desires of that Department with regard thereto is enclosed for your preliminary information.

The Department is studying carefully the proposals of the Navy Department in order to determine the form which negotiations looking to the realization of the Navy Department's desires should take.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 819.74/11.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, February 10, 1912.

The Government informs me that a 5-kilo wireless watt apparatus was ordered about November 14 from Flint & Walling, New York, to be erected on the National Theater, Panama, for Government use. A portion of it has lately been received. Subinspector Clark says such an apparatus will seriously interfere with the proposed Navy apparatus at Balboa and near Culebra. I have therefore obtained from the Minister for Foreign Affairs a delay of installation pending Department's instruction.

DODGE.

File No. 819.74/12.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 71.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, February 14, 1912.

SIR: Supplementing my cipher telegram of the 10th instant, I have the honor to inform you that about the first of this month a report reached me that the Panaman Government had ordered a wireless apparatus to be erected in Panama City and that practically at the same time Major S. D. Butler, U. S. M. C., commanding the Marines detachment at Camp Elliott, Canal Zone, called upon me and showed me reports which he had received, one from Mr. G. H. Clarke, U. S. N., subinspector of wireless telegraph stations, dated the 29th ultimo, and one from Inspector A. G. Belknap, of the Zone police, dated the 5th instant, copies of both of which are enclosed.[1] Both reports give details regarding a wireless apparatus ordered by the Panaman Government and the former quotes a statement, said to have been made by Mr. R. D. Prescott, Inspector General of Panaman Telegraphs, that "we are going to let the United Fruit people put in a high-power station at Colon, but we are not going to allow anyone else to put up stations in the Republic."

In this connection I may mention that as soon as President Arosemena announced his decision to take a leave of absence I took occasion to request him to inform his successor, Señor Chiari, fully as to my conversations with Señor Boyd, formerly Minister for Foreign Affairs, regarding wireless telegraphy in Panama, which he promised to do. Upon the appointment of Señor Arjona as Minister for Foreign Affairs, I further took occasion to inform him fully of my conversations with Señor Boyd and Señor Arjona then stated to me that he would also inform Señor Chiari as to this matter. He further stated that I might rest assured that nothing would be done by the Panaman Government tending in any way to alter the existing wireless telegraph situation without previously communicating with me and affording me an opportunity for obtaining my Government's instructions.

Upon receiving the above-mentioned information from Major Butler I immediately inquired as to it of Señor Arjona, who informed me that as he had so recently taken office he had no knowledge either as to the wireless apparatus mentioned nor as to the alleged statement of Mr. Prescott regarding the United Fruit Company, but that he would be glad to make inquiry and advise me. Accordingly, on the 10th instant Señor Arjona handed me a copy of a memorandum signed by Mr. Prescott, a copy of which is enclosed.[2] I also enclose a copy of the requisition[1] addressed on November 14th last to the Minister of Hacienda by the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs containing the specifications for the tower to be ordered for the wireless apparatus which was given me by Señor Acevedo, the new Minister of Hacienda.

---

[1] Not printed.

[2] Not printed; it gives specifications for a "wireless station for Panama, to be erected on top of Panama opera house" (National Theater).

From these documents and other information furnished to me by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs and Hacienda, it appears that about November 14th last a 5-kilowat telefunken system wireless apparatus was ordered by the Panaman Government from the firm of Flint & Walling, of New York, to be erected on the National Theater in Panama City and to be used especially for communication with ships. Although the entire apparatus has been ordered, only the materials for the tower have arrived as yet and were to have been erected beginning within a few days. Mr. Prescott has informed me that the cost of the apparatus is about $7,500, to be paid in three installments, one of which I understand has already been paid. The cost of the small building to be erected for the operator and the installation of the apparatus will amount to about $2,500 more. Mr. Prescott further stated that the expected day radius of the instrument was about 350 miles, but with a second steel tower, which might be ordered later, its range would probably be increased to 500 miles.

Under these circumstances, and especially in view of Mr. Clark's statement that this apparatus of the Panaman Government will positively interfere greatly with the proposed Naval wireless station at Balboa and near Culebra, I inquired of Señor Arjona as to whether he would have any objection to deferring the installation of this apparatus until I was able to inform my Government in regard to it and receive its instructions. Señor Arjona replied that he understood the difficulties which this apparatus might cause, that he did not see what need his Government had of it in any case, and that he would be happy to have the work deferred as I requested.

As to Mr. Prescott's statement regarding the United Fruit Company, Señor Arjona has now informed me that he knows nothing of any such an intention which would, in any case, be subject to our agreement regarding the nonalteration of existing conditions.

In this connection I may mention that the small apparatus referred to in Mr. Clark's report as maintained by Mr. Prescott on the roof of the Armour Building in Panama City is the apparatus mentioned in my despatch No. 33 of December 26 last which Señor Boyd informed me belonged to the Panaman Government. Mr. Prescott has stated to me that this apparatus belongs to him personally.

I may add that I have inquired of Señor Boyd as to why he had not formerly advised me of the order for this apparatus and he has assured me that he knew nothing of it until a few days ago, and that President Arosemena, to whom he had at the time related my conversations with him requesting full information for me, had never mentioned it. I do not believe that there has been any intention on the part of the Panaman Government to conceal this order, but rather that the failure either of Señor Boyd or of Señor Chiari, his successor, to inform me is the result of the lack of cooperation between the various branches of the Government.

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 819.74/13.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 43.] Department of State,
Washington, April 15, 1912.

Sir: Referring to past correspondence relative to the establishment of wireless telegraph stations in Panama, there is enclosed herewith for your information a copy of the Solicitor's memorandum dated April 4, 1912, considering the subject from the point of view of the rights given to the United States by treaty to erect and maintain wireless stations not only in the Canal Zone, but in parts of the Isthmus itself.

I am [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

[Inclosure.—Memorandum.]

Department of State,
Office of the Solicitor,
Washington, April 4, 1912.

Operation of Wireless Telegraph Stations on the Isthmus of Panama.

It appears that the Navy Department desires to erect wireless telegraph stations, not only in the Canal Zone, but in parts of the Isthmus itself, and to operate the same when constructed as monopolies, at least as to certain kinds of stations.

The Latin-American Bureau requests an opinion as to the form the negotiations for obtaining the realization of the Navy Department's plan should take, whether it should be an exchange of notes or otherwise.

It is my judgment that, as against the Government of Panama, this Government already enjoys, under the Canal Treaty of 1903, full right and authority to carry out the plans desired by the Navy Department in the erection and maintenance, as a monopoly, of wireless telegraph stations not only in the Zone but on the Isthmus itself. Unless, therefore, owing to some reason of policy another course is deemed desirable, it would not seem necessary to enter into any formal negotiations at all for the acquisition of any right or permission to do the thing desired. The exchange of notes could be confined merely to the announcements and arrangements necessary for the carrying out of the work.

The grounds upon which the above conclusions have been reached may be set forth as follows:

(1) It is a general rule of international law that treaties must be construed broadly not narrowly and technically, and with a view to ascertaining and carrying out the broad general purpose for which the treaty was concluded.

The following authorities, which include authorities on international law from the earliest writers to the present, as also the rulings of our own Supreme Court, show that this rule is one that has been uniformly followed since international law began to be observed in dealings between nations.

Vattel, in his work on the "Law of Nations," devotes a great deal of space to the question of the interpretation of treaties, and the principle as above set forth, underlies his entire dissertation upon this subject. The more immediately pertinent parts of his comments read as follows:

> We ought always to affix such meaning to the expressions as is most suitable to the subject or matter in question, for, by a true interpretation, we endeavor to discover the thoughts of the person speaking, or the contracting parties in a treaty. (Vattel, Book 2, chap. 17, sec. 280.)

Again Vattel says:

> Laws and treaties can only be worded in a general manner; and it is the interpreter's province to apply them to particular cases, conformably to the intention of the legislature, or of the contracting powers. (Op. cit. sec. 282.)

Again:

> It is not to be presumed that sensible persons, in treating together, or transacting any other serious business, meant that the result of their proceedings should prove a mere nullity. The interpretation, therefore, which would render a treaty null and inefficient, can not be admitted. We may consider this rule as a branch of the preceding; for, it is a kind of absurdity to suppose that the very terms of a deed should reduce it to mean nothing. It ought to be interpreted in such a manner as that it may have its effect, and not prove vain and nugatory; and in this interpretation we proceed according to the mode pointed out in the foregoing section. In both cases, as in all interpretations, the question is, to give the words that sense which ought to be presumed most conformable to the intention of the parties speaking. If many different interpretations present themselves, by which we can conveniently avoid construing the deed into a nullity or an absurdity, we are to prefer that which appears the most agreeable to the intention of those who framed the deed; the particular circumstances of the case, aided by other rules of interpretation, will serve to point it out. (Op. cit. sec. 283.)

In the following section Vattel lays it down that—

> The reason of the law or of the treaty—that is to say, of the motive which led to the making of it, and the object in contemplation at the time—is the most certain clue to lead us to the discovery of its true meaning; and great attention should be paid to this circumstance, whenever there is question either of explaining an obscure, ambiguous, indeterminate passage in a law or treaty, or of applying it to a particular case. When once we certainly know the reason which alone has determined the will of the person speaking we ought to interpret and apply his words in a manner suitable to that reason alone. Otherwise he will be made to speak and act contrary to his intention, and in opposition to his own views. (Op. cit. sec. 287.)

Kent, in his address on the Law of Nations, asserts that—

> Treaties of every kind, when made by the competent authority, are as obligatory upon nations as private contracts are binding upon individuals; and they are to receive a fair and liberal interpretation, according to the intention of the contracting parties, and to be kept with a most scrupulous good faith. (Kent's Commentaries, Vol. I, p. 175.)

Phillimore, in his work on International Law, lays down, as a fundamental proposition in the matter of the interpretation of treaties, that—

> All international treaties are covenants bonae fidei, and are, therefore, to be equitably and not technically construed. (Vol. 2, 3d ed., p. 94.)

Phillimore further comments as follows:

> First. The rule which has already been adverted to, of deriving the interpretation of a particular passage from a comparison with the whole context of the instrument, and which mode of interpretation belongs as much to the logical as to the grammatical division of the subject. Mr. Wildman illustrates this position by the following example: "The ninth article of the Treaty of Utrecht provided that the port of Dunkirk should be destroyed. 'Nec dicta munimenta portus moles aut aggeres denuo unquam reficiantur.' The plain intention of this stipulation was to prevent the existence of a French port of military equipment in the midst of the Channel. The King of France, while he was destroying the port of Dunkirk, in accordance with the article of the Treaty, was constructing at Mardick, at the distance of a league, another port of greater dimensions and importance. The English Government remonstrated upon the absurdity of putting such a literal construction upon the article as would entirely defeat its object; and the French Government ultimately acquiesced, and discontinued the works. It was stipulated by the fourth article of the treaty between France and England, concluded at the Hague in 1777, that no new port should be formed within two leagues of Dunkirk and Mardick."
>
> Second. The rule of considering the ground or reason (ratio legis) in which the Treaty originated, and the object of those who were parties to it. This is a less safe and less certain mode of interpretation, and one which requires more caution in its use and application. (Op. cit. pp. 102–103.)

Westlake, in his recent work on International Law (Part I, Peace, p. 282), has the following discussion regarding the interpretation of treaties:

> The interpretation of treaties has been considered at much length by many writers on international law, and rules on it have been suggested which in our opinion are not likely to be of much practical use.
>
> The important point is to get at the real intention of the parties, and the enquiry is not to be shackled by any rule of interpretation which may exist in a particular national jurisprudence, but is not generally accepted in the civilized world. On the whole we incline to think that the interpretation of international contracts is and ought to be less literal than that usually given in English courts of law to private contracts and acts of Parliament. In the first place, English drafting is more minutely careful, and correspondingly English interpretation is more literal, than is common in those countries to which most of the ministers and diplomats who are responsible for the wording of international contracts belong. And secondly, the nature of the matters dealt with by those eminent functionaries, and the peculiar conditions under which they work, must be considered. A style of drafting accommodated to the expectation of a very literal interpretation would necessitate the suggestion and discussion of so many possible contingencies, as would be likely to cause needless friction between the representatives of countries not always very amicable. It seems best in the interest of peace that, when an agreement on broad lines has been reached, it should be expressed in language not striving to hide a felt doubt, but on the other hand not meticulously seeking occasions for doubt; and to such a style of drafting, which we believe to be that most common in treaties, a large and liberal spirit of interpretation will reasonably correspond.

Oppenheim discusses the matter as follows:

> All treaties must be interpreted according to their reasonable in contradistinction to their literal sense. An excellent example illustrating this rule is the following, which is quoted by several writers:
>
> In the interest of Great Britain the Treaty of Peace of Utrecht of 1713 stipulated in its article 9 that the port and the fortification of Dunkirk should be destroyed and never be rebuilt. France complied with this stipulation, but at the same time began building an even larger port at Mardyck, a league off Dunkirk. Great Britain protested on the ground that France in so acting was violating the reasonable, although not the literal, sense of the Peace of Utrecht, and France recognized in the end this interpretation and discontinued the building of the new port. (Int. Law, Vol. I, Peace, p. 560.)

The courts of the United States have repeatedly announced that in interpreting treaties we do so broadly and liberally, rather than narrowly and technically, even where the provisions run against this Government.

Mr. Justice Field, in delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in Geofroy v. Riggs (133 U. S., 258, 271), stated the principle in the following language:

> It is a general principle of construction with respect to treaties, that they shall be liberally construed, so as to carry out the apparent intention of the parties to secure equality and reciprocity between them. As they are contracts between independent nations, in their construction words are to be taken in their ordinary meaning, as understood in the public law of nations, and not in any artificial sense impressed upon them by a local law, unless such restricted sense is clearly intended.

Mr. Justice Brown, in delivering the opinion of the court in Tucker v. Alexandroff, commented upon the principle as follows:

> We think, then, that the rights of the parties must be determined by the treaty, but that this particular convention being operative upon both powers and intended for their mutual protection, should be interpreted in a spirit of uberrima fides, and in a manner to carry out its manifest purpose. (Taylor on International Law, sec. 383.) As treaties are solemn engagements entered into between independent nations for the common advancement of their interests and the interests of civilization, and as their main object is not only to avoid war and secure a lasting and perpetual peace, but to promote a friendly feeling between the people of the two countries, they should be interpreted in that broad and liberal spirit which is calculated to make for the existence of a perpetual amity, so far as it can be done without the sacrifice of individual rights or those principles of personal liberty which lie at the foundation of our jurisprudence. It is said by Chancellor Kent in his Commentaries (Vol. I, p. 174): "Treaties of every kind are to receive a fair and liberal interpretation according to the intention of the contracting parties, and are to be kept with the most scrupulous good faith. Their meaning is to be ascertained by the same rules of construction and course of reasoning which we apply to the interpretation of private contracts." (183 U. S., p. 424, 437.)

The authorities above cited would seem sufficiently to establish the general principle set forth at the head of this discussion.

(2) In determining the extent of a grant made by treaty, where the treaty admits of two constructions, one restrictive as to the rights that may be claimed under it, and the other liberal, the latter is to be preferred.

The authorities on international law and the courts are quite as clear on this point as the other.

Vattel discusses it in the following language:

> On every occasion when a person could and ought to have made known his intention, we assume for true against him what he has sufficiently declared. This is an incontestable principle, applied to treaties; for, if they are not a vain play of words, the contracting parties ought to express themselves in them with truth, and according to their real intentions. If the intention which is sufficiently declared were not to be taken of course as the true intention of him who speaks and enters into engagements, it would be perfectly useless to form contracts or treaties. (Vattel, Book 2, chap. 17, sec. 266.)
>
> * * * Whenever we meet with any obscurity in it, we are to consider what probably were the ideas of those who drew up the deed, and to interpret it accordingly. This is the general rule for all interpretations. It particularly serves to ascertain the meaning of particular expressions whose signification is not sufficiently determinate. Pursuant to this rule we should take those expressions in their utmost latitude when it seems probable that the person speaking had in contemplation everything which, in that extensive sense, they are capable of designating; and on the other hand, we ought to restrict their meaning, if the author appears to have confined his idea to what they comprehend in their more limited signification. (Op. cit., sec. 270.)
>
> All those things which, without proving too burthensome to any one in particular, are useful and salutary to human society, are to be ranked in the class of favourable things; for a nation is already under a natural obligation with respect to things of this nature; so that if she has entered into any particular engagements of this kind, we run no risk in giving those engagements the most extensive meaning of which they are susceptible. Can we be afraid of violating the rules of equity by following the law of nature, and giving the utmost extent to obligations that tend to the common advantage of mankind? Besides, things which are useful to human society, are, from the very circumstance, conducive to the common advantage of the contracting parties, and are consequently favourable (see the preceding section). (Op. cit., sec. 302.)
>
> 1. When the question relates to things favourable, we ought to give the terms the utmost latitude of which they are susceptible according to the common usage of the language;

> and if a term has more than one signification, the most extensive meaning is to be preferred: * * *
>
> 2. In questions relating to favourable things, all terms of art are to be interpreted in the fullest latitude of which they are susceptible, not only in common usage, but also as technical terms, if the person speaking understands the art to which those terms belong, or conducts himself by the advice of men who understand that art. (Op. cit., sec. 307.)

Phillimore in his work comments upon the general principle involved as follows:

> With respect to the mode of interpretation which has been designated as extensive, Vattel, agreeing with Grotius and Puffendorf, is of opinion that where the sufficient and only reasons of a provision is undisputed and certain, such provision may be extended to cases to which the same reason applies, although the provision be not comprised within the signification of the terms employed. This principle is sometimes called an adhering to the spirit rather than the letter. The Koran forbade wine to the Mahometans, and in so doing forbade all intoxicating liquors. It was a provision in a treaty that a certain city should not be enclosed within walls; at the time when the treaty was made, walls were the only species of fortifications in use; it would not be lawful to fortify that city by means of fosses and earthworks, because the spirit and intention of the treaty was to prevent the fortification of the town. Sempronius willed in his last testament that if the child of his then pregnant wife should die, Curius should be his heir. The testator died, but his wife proved not to be pregnant. Are the heirs under an intestacy, or Curius, to possess the property? The latter, for it is manifest that the intention of the testator was that Curius should stand next to the testator's own child. These are the illustrations employed by Vattel and his great predecessors in support of the position. One, it will be seen, borrowed from a law, one from a convention, one from a unilateral act or testament. Vattel, however, enforces with great earnestness the necessity of the utmost caution always attending the use of a mode of interpretation which is not authorized by the terms of the instrument. It may only be resorted to in cases where there is no dispute with respect to the true and only reason of the provision; and the cardinal rule, that the true sense of a promise is not only that which was in the mind of the promiser, but also that which has been sufficiently declared, and which both the contracting parties must have reasonably understood, is never to be departed from. On the one hand, therefore, the instrument is not to be construed agreeably to the reason which one of the parties possibly might have had in his mind. On the other hand, it certainly ought to be construed agreeably to the reason upon which the parties clearly did proceed.
>
> This rule of extensive interpretation excludes all the evasions and pretexts which have been resorted to for the purpose of evading stipulations. As a general maxim, it is true that good faith clings to the spirit, and fraud to the letter of the convention.
>
> When the Corinthians, being forbidden to give ships to the Athenians, sold them some, at a merely nominal price; when the Queen of Egypt refused to pay tribute to the Rhodians for Pharos, because, though as an island, it was, under the convention, liable to such tribute, while the demand was being made she had joined it to the continent by a mole; when these and similar frauds are attempted, the rule of extensive interpretation by which they are condemned, is the rule of acknowledged rights.
>
> There is another maxim of law relating to private contracts, which relates to the extensive interpretation, and the principle of which is applicable to international covenants. Pothier says that, "When the object of the agreement is universally to include everything of a given nature (une universalité des choses), the general description will comprise all particular articles, although they may not have been in the knowledge of the parties. For instance, an engagement which A. makes with B. to abandon his share in a succession for a certain sum. This agreement includes everything which makes part of the succession, whether known or not; the intention of A. and B. was to contract for the whole. Therefore, it is decided that A. can not object to the agreement, under pretense that a considerable property has been found to belong to the succession of which both parties had no knowledge." (Commentaries on International Law, 3d Ed., Vol. 2, pp. 111–113.)

Mr. Justice Swayne in delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court in Hauenstein v. Lynham (1879, 100 U. S., 483–487), said:

> Where a treaty admits of two constructions, one restrictive as to the rights that may be claimed under it, and the other liberal, the latter is to be preferred. (Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet., 242.) Such is the settled rule of this court.

In Jeffry [Geofroy] v. Riggs (1889, 133 U. S., 258, p. 271) Mr. Justice Field, speaking for the court, said:

> It is a general principle of construction with respect to treaties that they shall be liberally construed, so as to carry out the apparent intention of the parties to secure equality and reciprocity between them. As they are contracts between independent nations, in their construction words are to be taken in their ordinary meaning, as understood in the public law of nations, and not in any artificial or special sense impressed upon them by local law, unless such restricted sense is clearly intended. And it has been held by this court that where a treaty admits of two constructions, one restrictive of rights that may be claimed under it and the other favorable to them, the latter is to be preferred. (Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S., 483–487.)

It is submitted that these authorities sufficiently established the principle quoted under 2 supra.

(3) While no treaty can be taken to restrict, by implication, the exercise of rights of sovereignty or property or self-preservation, yet every right or obligation which is necessarily attendant upon something clearly ascertained to be agreed to in the treaty, including a right to whatever may be necessary to the enjoyment of the things granted by it, is understood to be tacitly given or imposed by the gift or imposition of that upon which it is attendant.

This is Hall's statement of the law governing interpretation of treaties in this respect. (International Law, 6th Ed., pp. 331–332.)

Other writers are equally clear in their statement of this principle. Grotius in his work on the rights of war and peace says:

> In things of a favourable nature, if the parties engaged are acquainted with the legal principles upon which they proceed, or rest upon the judgment of those who are so, the words used may be taken in their most extensive signification, including even terms of art and of law. (See Universal Classics, Edition of Grotius, p. 181.)

Again Grotius says:

> In speaking of motives and reasons, it is proper to observe that they sometimes comprehend things, considered not according to their actual existence, but according to their moral consequences; in which case it is by no means right to limit the words of a treaty to their literal meaning, but the utmost extent of interpretation is allowable, in order to maintain the spirit as well as the letter of such treaties. Thus, if it be stipulated that no troops or ships shall be brought to a certain place, or within a certain distance, the prohibition excludes all ships or troops from being brought thither, even under the fairest and most harmless pretenses. For the purport of the treaty is to guard not only against actual mischief, but even against remote danger. (Op. cit., p. 189.)

Vattel states the same principle in the following language:

> It is not to be presumed that sensible persons, in treating together, or transacting any other serious business, meant that the result of their proceedings should prove a mere nullity. The interpretation, therefore, which would render a treaty null and inefficient, cannot be admitted. We may consider this rule as a branch of the preceding; for it is a kind of absurdity to suppose that the very terms of a deed should reduce it to mean nothing. It ought to be interpreted in such a manner as that it may have its effect, and not prove vain and nugatory; and in this interpretation we proceed according to the mode pointed out in the foregoing section. In both cases, as in all interpretations, the question is, to give the words that sense which ought to be presumed most conformable to the intention of the parties speaking. If many different interpretations present themselves, by which we can conveniently avoid construing the deed into a nullity or an absurdity, we are to prefer that which appears the most agreeable to the intention of those who framed the deed; the particular circumstances of the case, aided by other rules of interpretation, will serve to point it out. (Vattel, Book 2, chap. 17, sec. 283.)

Again he says:

> When the sufficient and only reason of a provision, either in a law or a promise, is perfectly certain, and well understood, we extend that provision to cases to which the same reason is applicable, although they be not comprised within the signification of the terms. This is what is called extensive interpretation. (Op. cit., sec. 290.)

Taylor, in his work on International Law, states that:

> As the valid grant of a substantive right or the assumption of a substantive obligation is supposed to carry with it all the incidents necessary to the enjoyment of the one or the performance of the other, such incidents will be presumed to have followed tacitly whenever such substantive rights or obligation has been given or imposed by treaty. (Taylor, International Public Law, p. 397.)

Wilson and Tucker, in their little work on "International Law," assert that:

> That which is clearly granted by the treaty carries with it what is necessary for its realization (p. 216).

It is of interest, in this connection, that the Supreme Court of the United States has invoked the same principle in construing the Constitution under which this Government is organized, and have advanced in so doing arguments, contentions, and reasons which seem equally applicable to the interpretation of treaties.

In the great case of McCulloch v. Maryland, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, delivering the opinion of the Court, said:

> * * * A constitution, to contain an accurate detail of all the subdivisions of which its great powers will admit, and of all the means by which they may be carried into execution, would partake of the prolixity of a legal code, and could scarcely be embraced by the human mind It would probably never be understood by the public. Its nature, therefore, requires that only its great outlines should be marked, its important objects designated, and the minor ingredients which compose those objects be deduced from the nature of the objects themselves. That this idea was entertained by the framers of the American Constitution is not only to be inferred from the nature of the instrument, but from the language. Why else were some of the limitations found in the 9th section of the 1st article introduced? It is also in some degree warranted by their having omitted to use any restrictive terms which might prevent its receiving a fair and just interpretation. In considering this question, then, we must never forget that it is a constitution we are expounding.
>
> Although, among the enumerated powers of government, we do not find the word "bank" or "incorporation," we find the great powers to lay and collect taxes; to borrow money; to regulate commerce; to declare and conduct a war; and to raise and support armies and navies. The sword and the purse, all the external relations, and no inconsiderable portion of the industry of the nation, are intrusted to its government. It can never be pretended that these vast powers draw after them others of inferior importance, merely because they are inferior. Such an idea can never be advanced. But it may with great reason be contended that a government intrusted with such ample powers, on the due execution of which the happiness and prosperity of the nation so vitally depends, must also be intrusted with ample means for their execution. The power being given, it is the interest of the nation to facilitate its execution. It can never be their interest, and cannot be presumed to have been their intention, to clog and embarrass its execution by withholding the most appropriate means. Throughout this vast republic, from the St. Croix to the Gulf of Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, revenue is to be collected and expended, armies are to be marched and supported. The exigencies of the nation may require that the treasure raised in the north should be transported to the south, that raised in the east conveyed to the west, or that this order should be reversed. Is that construction of the Constitution to be preferred which would render these operations difficult, hazardous, and expensive? Can we adopt that construction (unless the words imperiously require it) which would impute to the framers of that instrument, when granting these powers for the public good, the intention of impeding their exercise, by withholding a choice of means? If, indeed, such be the mandate of the Constitution, we have only to obey; but that instrument does not profess to enumerate the means by which the powers it confers may be executed; nor does it prohibit the creation of a corporation if the existence of such a being be essential to the beneficial exercise of those powers. It is, then, the subject of fair inquiry how far such means may be employed.

It is not denied that the powers given to the government imply the ordinary means of execution. That, for example, of raising revenue and applying it to national purposes is admitted to imply the power of conveying money from place to place as the exigencies of the nation may require, and of employing the usual means of conveyance.

* * * * * * *

But the Constitution of the United States has not left the right of Congress to employ the necessary means for the execution of the powers conferred on the government to general reasoning. To its enumeration of powers is added that of making "all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution, in the Government of the United States, or in any department thereof." The counsel for the State of Maryland have urged various arguments to prove that this clause, though in terms a grant of power, is not so in effect, but is really restrictive of the general right which might otherwise be implied, of selecting means for executing the enumerated powers.

* * * * * * *

But the argument on which most reliance is placed is drawn from that peculiar language of this clause. Congress is not empowered by it to make all laws, which may have relation to the powers conferred on the Government, but such only as may be "necessary and proper" for carrying them into execution. The word "necessary" is considered as controlling the whole sentence, and as limiting the right to pass laws for the execution of the granted powers to such as are indispensable, and without which the power would be nugatory. That it excludes the choice of means, and leaves to Congress, in each case, that only which is most direct and simple.

Is it true that this is the sense in which the word "necessary" is always used? Does it always import an absolute physical necessity, so strong that one thing to which another may be termed necessary can not exist without that other? We think it does not. If reference be had to its use in the common affairs of the world or in approved authors, we find that it frequently imports no more than that one thing is convenient, or useful, or essential to another. To employ the means necessary to an end is generally understood as employing any means calculated to produce the end, and not as being confined to those single means without which the end would be entirely unattainable. Such is the character of human language that no word conveys to the mind, in all situations, one single definite idea; and nothing is more common than to use words in a figurative sense. Almost all compositions contain words which, taken in their rigorous sense, would convey a meaning different from that which is obviously intended. It is essential to just construction that many words which import something excessive should be understood in a more mitigated sense—in that sense which common usage justified. The word "necessary" is of this description. It has not a fixed character, peculiar to itself. It admits of all degrees of comparison, and is often connected with other words which increase or diminish the impression the mind received of the urgency it imports. A thing may be necessary, very necessary, absolutely or indispensably necessary. To no mind would the same idea be conveyed by these several phrases. The comment on the word is well illustrated by the passage cited at the bar, from the 10th section of the 1st article of the Constitution. It is, we think, impossible to compare the sentence which prohibits a State from laying "imposts, or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws," with that which authorizes Congress "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution" the powers of the general government, without feeling a conviction that the Convention understood itself to change materially the meaning of the word "necessary," by prefixing the word "absolutely." This word, then, like others, is used in various senses; and in its construction the subject, the context, the intention of the person using them, are all to be taken into view.

Let this be done in the case under consideration. The subject is the execution of those great powers on which the welfare of a nation essentially depends. It must have been the intention of those who gave these powers to insure, so far as human prudence could insure, their beneficial execution. This could not be done by confiding the choice of means to such narrow limits as not to leave it in the power of Congress to adopt any which might be appropriate, and which were conducive to the end. This provision is made in a Constitution intended to endure for ages to come, and consequently to be adapted to the various crises of human affairs. To have prescribed the means by which government should, in all future time, execute its powers would have been to change entirely the character of the instrument and give it the properties of a legal code. It would have been an unwise attempt to provide by immutable rules for exigencies which, if foreseen at all, must have been seen dimly, and which can be best provided for as they occur. To have declared that the best means shall not be used, but those alone without which the power given would be nugatory, would have been to deprive the legislature of the capacity to avail itself of experience, to exercise its reason and to accommodate its legislation to circumstances.

If we apply this principle of construction to any of the powers of the government, we shall find it so pernicious in its operation that we shall be compelled to discard it. The powers vested in Congress may certainly be carried into execution without prescribing an oath of office. The power to exact this security for the faithful performance of duty is not given, nor is it indispensably necessary. The different departments may be established; taxes may be imposed and collected; armies and navies may be raised and maintained; and money may be borrowed, without requiring an oath of office. It might be argued, with as much plausibility as other incidental powers have been assailed, that the Convention was not unmindful of this subject. The oath which might be exacted—that of fidelity to the Constitution—is prescribed, and no other can be required. Yet he would be charged with insanity who should contend that the legislature might not superadd to the oath directed by the Constitution such other oath of office as its wisdom might suggest.

So with respect to the whole penal code of the United States: Whence arises the power to punish in cases not prescribed by the Constitution? All admit that the Government may, legitimately, punish any violation of its laws; and yet this is not among the enumerated powers of Congress. The right to enforce the observance of law, by punishing its infraction, might be denied with the more plausibility because it is expressly given in some cases. Congress is empowered "to provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States," and "to define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offences against the law of nations." The several powers of Congress may exist, in a very imperfect state to be sure, but they may exist and be carried into execution although no punishment should be inflicted in cases where the right to punish is not expressly given.

Take, for example, the power "to establish post offices and post roads." This power is executed by the single act of making the establishment. But, from this has been inferred the power and duty of carrying the mail along the post road, from one post office to another. And from this implied power has again been inferred the right to punish those who steal letters from the post office or rob the mail. It may be said with some plausibility that the right to carry the mail and to punish those who rob it is not indispensably necessary to the establishment of a post office and post road. This right is indeed essential to the beneficial exercise of the power, but not indispensably necessary to its existence. So of the punishment of the crimes of stealing or falsifying a record or process of a court of the United States, or of perjury in such court. To punish these offences is certainly conducive to the due administration of justice. But courts may exist and may decide the cause brought before them though such crimes escape punishment.

The baneful influence of this narrow construction on all the operations of the government, and the absolute impracticability of maintaining it, without rendering the government incompetent to its great objects, might be illustrated by numerous examples drawn from the Constitution and from our laws. The good sense of the public has pronounced, without hesitation, that the power of punishment appertains to sovereignty, and may be exercised whenever the sovereign has a right to act, as incidental to his constitutional powers. It is a means for carrying into execution all sovereign powers, and may be used although not indispensably necessary. It is a right incidental to the power, and conducive to its beneficial exercise.

If this limited construction of the word "necessary" must be abandoned in order to punish, whence is derived the rule which would reinstate it when the government would carry its powers into execution by means not vindictive in their nature? If the word "necessary" means "needful," "requisite," "essential," "conducive to," in order to let in the power of punishment for the infraction of law, why is it not equally comprehensive when required to authorize the use of means which facilitate the execution of the powers of government without the infliction of punishment?

In ascertaining the sense in which the word "necessary" is used in this clause of the Constitution we may derive some aid from that with which it is associated. Congress shall have power "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper to carry into execution" the powers of the government. If the word "necessary" was used in that strict and rigorous sense for which the counsel for the State of Maryland contend, it would be an extraordinary departure from the usual course of the human mind, as exhibited in composition, to add a word the only possible effect of which is to qualify that strict and rigorous meaning; to present to the mind the idea of some choice of means of legislation, not strained and compressed within the narrow limits for which gentlemen contend.

But the argument which most conclusively demonstrates the error of the construction contended for by the counsel for the State of Maryland, is founded on the intention of the Convention as manifested in the whole clause. To waste time and argument in proving that, without it, Congress might carry its powers into execution, would be not much less idle than to hold a lighted taper to the sun. As little can it be required to prove that in the absence of this clause, Congress would have some choice of means. That it might employ those which in its judgment would most advantageously effect the object to be accomplished. That any means adapted to the end, any means which tend directly to the execution of the constitutional powers of the government, were in themselves constitutional. This clause, as construed by the State of Maryland, would abridge and almost annihilate this useful and necessary right of the legislature to select its means. That this could not be intended is, we should think, had it not been already controverted, too apparent for controversy.

We think so for the following reasons: 1st. The clause is placed among the powers of Congress, not among the limitations on those powers. 2d. Its terms purport to enlarge, not to diminish, the powers vested in the government. It purports to be an additional power, not a restriction on those already granted. No reason has been or can be assigned for thus concealing an intention to narrow the discretion of the national legislature, under words which purport to enlarge it. The framers of the Constitution wished its adoption, and well knew that it would be endangered by its strength, not by its weakness. Had they been capable of using language which would convey to the eye one idea, and, after deep reflection, impress on the mind another, they would rather have disguised the grant of power than its limitation. If, then, their intention had been, by this clause, to restrain the free use of means which might otherwise have been implied, that intention would have been inserted in another place, and would have been expressed in terms resembling these: "In carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all others," &c.,

> "no laws shall be passed but such as are necessary and proper." Had the intention been to make this clause restrictive, it would unquestionably have been so in form as well as in effect.
>
> The result of the most careful and attentive consideration bestowed upon this clause is, that if it does not enlarge, it cannot be construed to restrain the powers of Congress, or to impair the right of the legislature to exercise its best judgment in the selection of measures to carry into execution the constitutional powers of the government. If no other motive for its insertion can be suggested, a sufficient one is found in the desire to remove all doubts respecting the right to legislate on that vast mass of incidental powers which must be involved in the Constitution, if that instrument be not a splendid bauble.
>
> We admit, as all must admit, that the powers of the government are limited, and that its limits are not to be transcended. But we think the sound construction of the Constitution must allow to the national legislature that discretion with respect to the means by which the powers it confers are to be carried into execution which will enable that body to perform the high duties assigned to it in the manner most beneficial to the people. Let the end be legitimate, let it be within the scope of the Constitution, and all means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, which are not prohibited, but consist with the letter and spirit of the Constitution, are constitutional. (17 U. S., p. 315, 406.)

Fifty years later, Mr. Justice Strong of the same court, in delivering the opinion of the court in the Legal Tender Cases (79 U. S., pp. 457, 531), said:

> Nor can it be questioned that, when investigating the nature and extent of the powers conferred by the Constitution upon Congress, it is indispensable to keep in view the objects for which those powers were granted. This is a universal rule of construction applied alike to statutes, wills, contracts, and constitutions. If the general purpose of the instrument is ascertained, the language of its provisions must be construed with reference to that purpose and so as to subserve it. In no other way can the intent of the framers of the instrument be discovered. And there are more urgent reasons for looking to the ultimate purpose in examining the powers conferred by a constitution than there are in construing a statute, a will, or a contract. We do not expect to find in a constitution minute details. It is necessarily brief and comprehensive. It prescribes outlines, leaving the filling up to be deduced from the outlines. In Martin v. Hunter, it was said, "The Constitution unavoidably deals in general language. It did not suit the purpose of the people in framing this great charter of our liberties to provide for minute specifications of its powers, or to declare the means by which those powers should be carried into execution." And with singular clearness was it said by Chief Justice Marshall, in McCulloch v. The State of Maryland, "A constitution, to contain an accurate detail of all the subdivisions of which its great powers will admit, and of all the means by which it may be carried into execution, would partake of the prolixity of a political code, and would scarcely be embraced by the human mind. It would probably never be understood by the public. Its nature, therefore, requires that only its great outlines should be marked, its important objects designated, and the minor ingredients which compose those objects be deduced from the nature of the objects themselves." If these are correct principles, if they are proper views of the manner in which the Constitution is to be understood, the powers conferred upon Congress must be regarded as related to each other, and all means for a common end. Each is but part of a system, a constituent of one whole. No single power is the ultimate end for which the Constitution was adopted. It may, in a very proper sense, be treated as a means for the accomplishment of a subordinate object, but that object is itself a means designed for an ulterior purpose. Thus the power to levy and collect taxes, to coin money and regulate its value, to raise and support armies, or to provide for and maintain a navy, are instruments for the paramount object, which was to establish a government, sovereign within its sphere, with capability of self-preservation, thereby forming a union more perfect than that which existed under the old Confederacy.
>
> The same may be asserted also of all the nonenumerated powers included in the authority expressly given "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into excution the specified powers vested in Congress, and all other powers vested by the Constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof." It is impossible to know what those nonenumerated powers are, and what is their nature and extent, without considering the purposes they were intended to subserve. Those purposes, it must be noted, reach beyond the mere execution of all powers definitely intrusted to Congress and mentioned in detail. They embrace the execution of all other powers vested by the Constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof. It certainly was intended to confer upon the government the power of self-preservation. Said Chief Justice Marshall, in Cohens v. The Bank of Virginia, "America has chosen to be, in many respects and to many purposes, a nation, and for all these purposes her government is complete; for all these objects it is supreme. It can, then, in effecting these objects legitimately control all individuals or governments within the American territory." He added, in the same case: "A constitution is framed for ages to come, and is designed to approach immortality as near as mortality can approach it. Its course cannot always be tranquil. It is exposed to storms and tempests, and its framers must be unwise statesmen, indeed, if they have not provided it, as far as its nature will permit, with the means of self-preservation from the perils it is sure to encounter." That would appear, then, to be a most unreasonable construction of the Constitution which denies to the government created by it, the right to employ freely every means, not prohibited, necessary for its preservation, and for the fulfillment of its acknowledged duties. Such a right, we hold, was given by the last clause of the eighth section of its first article. The means or instrumentalities referred to in that clause, and authorized, are not enumerated or defined. In the nature of things enumeration and specification were impossible. But they were left to the discretion of Congress, subject only to the restrictions that they be not prohibited, and be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the enumerated powers given to Congress, and all other powers vested in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.
>
> And here, it is to be observed, it is not indispensable to the existence of any power claimed for the Federal government that it can be found specified in the words of the Constitution, or clearly and directly traceable to some one of the specified powers. Its existence may be deduced fairly from more than one of the substantive powers expressly defined, or from them all combined. It is allowable to group together any number of them and infer from them all that the power claimed has been conferred. Such a treatment of the Constitution is recognized by its own provisions. This is well illustrated in its language respecting the writ of habeas corpus The power to suspend the privilege of that writ is not expressly given, nor can it be deduced from any one of the particularized grants of power. Yet it is provided that the privileges of the writ shall not be suspended except in certain defined contingencies. This is no express grant of power. It is a restriction. But it shows irresistibly that somewhere in the Constitution power to suspend the privilege of the writ was granted, either by some one or more of the specifications of power, or by them all combined. And, that important powers were understood by the people who adopted the Constitution to have been created by it, powers not enumerated, and not included incidentally in any one of those enumerated, is shown by the amendments. The first ten of these were suggested in the conventions of the States and proposed at the first session of the first Congress before any complaint was made of a disposition to assume doubtful powers. The preamble to the resolution submitting them for adoption recited that the "conventions of a number of the States had, at the time of their adopting the Constitution, expressed a desire, in order to prevent misconstruction or abuse of its powers, that further declaratory and restrictive clauses should be added." This was the origin of the amendments, and they are significant. They tend plainly to show that, in the judgment of those who adopted the Constitution, there were powers created by it, neither expressly specified nor deducible from any one specified power, or ancillary to it alone, but which grew out of the aggregate of powers conferred upon the government, or out of the sovereignty instituted. Most of these amendments are denials of power which had not been expressly granted, and which can not be said to have been necessary and proper for carrying into execution any other powers. Such, for example, is the prohibition of any laws respecting the establishment of religion, prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press.

And it is of importance to observe that Congress has often exercised, without question, powers that are not expressly given nor ancillary to any single enumerated power. Powers thus exercised are what are called by Judge Story in his Commentaries on the Constitution, resulting powers, arising from the aggregate powers of the government. He instances the right to sue and make contracts. Many others might be given. The oath required by law from officers of the government is one. So is building a capitol or a presidential mansion, and so also is the penal code. This last is worthy of brief notice. Congress is expressly authorized "to provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States, and to define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas and offences against the law of nations." It is also empowered to declare the punishment of treason, and provision is made for impeachments. This is the extent of power to punish crime expressly conferred. It might be argued that the expression of these limited powers implies an exclusion of all other subjects of criminal legislation. Such is the argument in the present cases. It is said because Congress is authorized to coin money and regulate its value it cannot declare anything other than gold and silver to be money or make it a legal tender. Yet Congress, by the act of April 30, 1790, entitled "An act more effectually to provide for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States," and the supplementary act of March 3d, 1825, defined and provided for the punishment of a large class of crimes other than those mentioned in the Constitution, and some of the punishments prescribed are manifestly not in aid of any single substantive power. No one doubts that this was rightfully done, and the power thus exercised has been affirmed by this court in United States v. Marigold. This case shows that a power may exist as an aid to the execution of an express power, or an aggregate of such powers, though there is another express power given relating in part to the same subject but less extensive. Another illustration of this may be found in connection with the provisions respecting a census. The Constitution orders an enumeration of free persons in the different States every ten years. The direction extends no further. Yet Congress has repeatedly directed an enumeration not only of free persons in the States but of free persons in the Territories, and not only an enumeration of persons but the collection of statistics respecting age, sex, and production. Who questions the power to do this?

Indeed the whole history of the government and of congressional legislation has exhibited the use of a very wide discretion, even in times of peace and in the absence of any trying emergency, in the selection of the necessary and proper means to carry into effect the great objects for which the government was framed, and this discretion has generally been unquestioned, or, if questioned, sanctioned by this court. This is true not only when an attempt has been made to execute a single power specifically given, but equally true when the means adopted have been appropriate to the execution, not of a single authority, but of all the powers created by the Constitution. Under the power to establish post offices and post roads Congress has provided for carrying the mails, punishing theft of letters and mail robberies, and even for transporting the mails to foreign countries. Under the power to regulate commerce, provision has been made by law for the improvement of harbors, the establishment of observatories, the erection of lighthouses, breakwaters, and buoys, the registry, enrollment, and construction of ships, and a code has been enacted for the government of seamen. Under the same power and other powers over the revenue and the currency of the country, for the convenience of the Treasury and internal commerce, a corporation known as the United States Bank was early created. To its capital the Government subscribed one-fifth of its stock. But the corporation was a private one, doing business for its own profit. Its incorporation was a constitutional exercise of congressional power for no other reason than that it was deemed to be a convenient instrument or means for accomplishing one or more of the ends for which the Government was established, or, in the language of the first article, already quoted, "necessary and proper" for carrying into execution some or all the powers vested in the Government. Clearly this necessity, if any existed, was not a direct and obvious one. Yet this court, in McCulloch v. Maryland, unanimously ruled that in authorizing the bank Congress had not transcended its powers. So debts due to the United States have been declared by acts of Congress entitled to priority of payment over debts due to other creditors, and this Court has held such acts warranted by the Constitution.

This is enough to show how, from the earliest period of our existence as a nation, the powers conferred by the Constitution have been construed by Congress and by this Court > whenever such action by Congress has been called in question. Happily the true meaning of the clause authorizing the enactment of all laws necessary and proper for carrying into execution the express powers conferred upon Congress, and all other powers vested in the Government of the United States, or in any of its departments or officers, has long since been settled. In Fisher v. Blight, this Court, speaking by Chief Justice Marshall, said that in construing it "it would be incorrect and would produce endless difficulties if the opinion should be maintained that no law was authorized which was not indispensably necessary to give effect to a specified power. Where various systems might be adopted for that purpose it might be said with respect to each that it was not necessary because the end might be obtained by other means." "Congress," said this Court, "must possess the choice of means, and must be empowered to use any means which are in fact conducive to the exercise of a power granted by the Constitution. The Government is to pay the debt of the Union and must be authorized to use the means which appear to itself most eligible to effect that object. It has, consequently, a right to make remittances by bills or otherwise, and to take those precautions which will render the transaction safe." It was in this case, as we have already remarked, that a law giving priority to debts due to the United States was ruled to be constitutional for the reason that it appeared to Congress to be an eligible means to enable the Government to pay the debts of the Union.

>
> It was, however, in McCulloch v. Maryland that the fullest consideration was given to this clause of the Constitution granting auxiliary powers, and a construction adopted that has ever since been accepted as determining its true meaning. We shall not now go over the ground there trodden. It is familiar to the legal profession, and, indeed, to the whole country. Suffice it to say, in that case it was finally settled that in the gift by the Constitution to Congress of authority to enact laws "necessary and proper" for the execution of all the powers created by it, the necessity spoken of is not to be understood as an absolute one. On the contrary, this Court then held that the sound construction of the Constitution must allow to the national legislature that discretion, with respect to the means by which the powers it confers are to be carried into execution, which will enable that body to perform the high duties assigned to it in the manner most beneficial to the people. Said Chief Justice Marshall, in delivering the opinion of the Court: "Let the end be legitimate, let it be within the scope of the Constitution, and all means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, which are not prohibited, but consist with the letter and spirit of the Constitution, are constitutional." The case also marks out with admirable precision the province of this Court. It declares that "when the law (enacted by Congress) is not prohibited and is really calculated to effect any of the objects intrusted to the Government, to undertake here to inquire into the degree of its necessity would be to pass the line which circumscribes the judicial department and to tread on legislative ground. This Court (it was said) disclaims all pretensions to such a power." It is hardly necessary to say that these principles are received with universal assent. Even in Hepburn v. Griswold, both the majority and minority of the Court concurred in accepting the doctrines of McCulloch v. Maryland as sound expositions of the Constitution, though disagreeing in their application.

Applying these principles to the case in hand:

In its preamble the treaty asserts that it is made because the two governments concerned are "desirous to insure the construction of a ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama to connect the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans."

The provisions of the treaty are more specific.

In Article 2, "the Republic of Panama grants to the United States in perpetuity the use, occupation, and control of a zone of land and land under water for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of said canal * * *."

Further on in the same article it is stipulated that "the Republic of Panama further grants to the United States in perpetuity the use, occupation, and control of any other lands and waters outside of the zone above described which may be necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal, or of any auxiliary canals or other works necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said enterprise."

In Article 4 Panama granted to the United States certain "subsidiary rights" for the "construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal."

Article 6 provides for payment of damages "caused to the owners of private lands or private property of any kind * * * by reason of the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal."

The same expression, "construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection," occurs also in Article 7 of the treaty giving the rights with reference to sanitation, and see for other uses of the same phrase Articles 5, 9, and 13.

In other words the entire treaty gives abundant and incontrovertible evidence that the purpose for which it was concluded was the "construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection" of the projected canal.

It is also perfectly evident from the language of the treaty that its framers made no pretense of specifying all of the things which the Government of the United States might do, nor all of the works which it might find necessary to undertake (and this latter is for the present purposes the more important), in order to accomplish the "construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal."

For example, in Article 2 the Republic granted to the United States, in addition to the zone of land for the purpose named, the perpetual "use, occupation, and control of any other lands and waters outside of the zone above described which may be necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal, or of any auxiliary canals or other works necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said enterprise."

In Article 4, the Republic of Panama granted "rights subsidiary to the above grants" in the use of the rivers, streams, lakes, and other bodies of water within its limits as might be "necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal."

Article 6 speaks not only of the work on said canal or on the Panama Railroad, but also of "any auxiliary works relating thereto."

In Article 13, containing the stipulations for freedom from customs duties, imposts, taxes, or other charges, the provisions are made to apply to materials "convenient in the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the canal and auxiliary works."

It is thus quite clear that the negotiators of the treaty were fully aware that other works than those specified in the convention might be necessary in the "construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the canal," and that not desiring to restrict the scope of the treaty they merely provided generally for such "other works" or "auxiliary works" as the exigencies of the undertaking, when fully developed, would demand.

A few words may be added regarding the nature and extent of the grant actually made. By Article 2 the grant is[1] of the zone of land as well as of the "use, occupation, and control of any other lands and waters outside of the zone" which might be necessary and convenient for "the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection" are [sic] made in perpetuity. Likewise a grant in perpetuity was made, as "rights subsidiary" to the first-named grants, of the right to use the rivers, streams, lakes, and other bodies of water for the purposes named. In Article 3 there was granted within the zone mentioned and described in Article 2, "all the rights, power, and authority * * * which the United States would possess and exercise if it were the sovereign of the territory within which said lands and waters are located to the entire exclusion of the exercise by the Republic of Panama of any such sovereign rights, power, and authority."

In addition to these, the treaty specifically grants to the United States for use outside the zone certain rights usually classed as sovereign and also the power to exercise certain other rights regarded as incident to sovereignty. For example, Article 6 gives to the United States the right of expropriation. Article 7 specifically grants to the United States "within the limits of the cities of Panama and Colon and other adjacent harbors and within the territory adjacent thereto * * * the right of eminent domain." This article also grants to the United States the right to impose sanitary regulations, etc., in connection with the sanitation of Panama and Colon; and finally, the United States is given right and authority "for the maintenance of public order in the cities of Panama and Colon and the territories and harbors adjacent thereto in case the Republic of Panama should not be, in the judgment of the United States, able to maintain such order."

Again, by Article 6 it is stipulated that "the rights of the United States shall be superior" to the rights of private land holders or owners of private property in the said zone, or of any private rights in or to any of the lands or waters "granted to the United States by the provisions of any article of this treaty," subject only to the condition that the United States should make compensation therefor "to the owners of private lands or private property of any kind."

Finally Article 5 provides that "the Republic of Panama grants to the United States in perpetuity a monopoly for the construction, maintenance, and operation of any system of communication by means of a canal or railroad across its territory between the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean."

To recapitulate: It will be observed that the treaty therefore provides first for the construction of the canal and gives to the United States Government full and complete powers in order to accomplish that purpose. In the next place the construction having been accomplished, like full and complete powers are given to the United States for the maintenance of the canal. Moreover, not only are such powers given in order that the canal may be constructed and maintained, but also in order to permit the operation of the canal. Again perceiving, as the framers of the treaty did, that the successful construction, maintenance, and operation of the canal would in a large measure (as the failure of the French companies had indicated) depend upon the sanitation of the region, powers were given not only to sanitate the zone but also the terminal cities, Colon and Panama. Finally, it being wholly and entirely obvious that the immense expenditure of money and labor in the construction, maintenance, operation, and sanitation of the canal would be wholly wasted and lost unless there was a proper protection of it, full powers were given to the United States to insure this also.

---

[1] The word "is" has been interpolated, with a pen, in the typewritten text.

It will, morever, be observed that Article 2 may be divided roughly into two parts: First, the grant of the zone itself, and secondly, the grant in perpetuity of the "use, occupation, and control" of any other lands and waters outside the zone "necessary and convenient," in the first place, for the "maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal," and in the second place, for any auxiliary canals or "other works necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said enterprise." That is to say, grants are made not only of what is necessary and convenient for the construction and the maintenance of the canal itself, but also of what may be "necessary and convenient" for "other works" in themselves "necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of said canal."

Moreover, as has been pointed out above, not only does Article 2 thus indicate that the framers clearly understood there was necessity for auxiliary or subsidiary works, but the same idea occurs in Article 4, Article 6, and Article 13.

Therefore, it must be held that this treaty gives authority to the United States to do whatever the United States may consider is necessary or convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, or protection of the canal, subject to no curtailment whatsoever except only such as may be imposed in the treaty itself; and for the purposes of the point under consideration there are but two pertinent limitations, the one contained in Article 6, which provides that where the United States takes "private property of any kind by reason of the grants contained in this treaty or by reason of the operations of the United States, its agents or employees, or by reason of the construction, maintenance, sanitation, and protection of the said canal or of the works of sanitation and protection herein provided for," it must make compensation therefor to the parties interested; and the further limitation contained in Article 11, which provides that "the United States agrees that the official dispatches of the Government of the Republic of Panama shall be transmitted over any telegraph or telephone lines established for canal purposes and used for public or private business at rates not higher than those required from officials in the service of the United States."

In view of these facts and circumstances, it is submitted that if this Government is prepared to say, as it is understood it is, that the erection of wireless telegraph stations on the zone or anywhere within the territory of Panama is necessary either for the maintenance, the operation, or the protection of the canal, or if it is prepared to say that such wireless stations are necessary for the successful operation of other works, which works in themselves are necessary or convenient for the maintenance, operation, or protection of the canal, that then the Government of the United States has a complete and indefeasible right to erect such stations.

It would, moreover, seem to be perfectly clear that the "auxiliary works" or "other works" contemplated by this treaty as proper for the maintenance, operation, or protection of the canal must, in order to fulfil their purpose, be effective. In other words, the right to erect an auxiliary work or other work necessary or convenient for the maintenance, operation, or protection of the canal must carry with it the right absolute and complete of operating that other auxiliary or other work in such way as to make it effective for the maintenance, operation, or protection of the canal. Or, applying the principles to this case, it must be that if, as it is herein contended, the treaty gives to the United States the right to erect wireless stations for the purpose of maintaining, operating, or protecting the canal, it must also give the right, without which the first would be a barren grant, to operate such wireless stations effectively. Moreover, this view seems to have absolute confirmation in the provisions of Article 6 which seem clearly to give to the United States the right to condemn any other stations in the hands of private parties which might interfere with the operation of the stations established by this Government, subject only to the provision that for the property thus taken the United States should make reasonable compensation.

It is, therefore, submitted in conclusion, that it would not seem necessary as a matter of law to enter into any formal negotiations at all for the acquisition of any right or permission to erect and operate wireless stations under the condition indicated in the Navy Department's report on wireless telegraph stations, either in the Canal Zone or the territory of Panama proper; and further that any interfering wireless stations owned by private parties may be treated and disposed of under the provisions of Article 6 of the treaty.

J. R. C. [CLARK.]

File No. 819.74/13.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 15, 1912.

SIR: Referring to previous correspondence, I have the honor to enclose herewith, for your information, a copy of a memorandum by the Solicitor of this Department, dated April 4, 1912, dealing with the subject of our treaty right to establish wireless telegraph stations not only in the Canal Zone but on the Isthmus of Panama itself, and to inquire whether it is your desire that this Department now proceed to notify the Panaman Government of the purpose of the Government of the United States, in accordance with the rights granted by treaty, to acquire sites for wireless stations at the points indicated in your communication of January 23, 1912, and to take steps to obtain the necessary control of these sites.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 819.74/14.

The Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, April 19, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of April 15, 1912, enclosing copy of a memorandum by the Solicitor of your Department dated April 4, 1912, relative to our treaty right to establish radio stations on the Isthmus of Panama.

The Department notes the Solicitor's opinion that this Government enjoys the right and authority to erect and operate radio stations on the Isthmus of Panama, pursuant to the Treaty of 1903, and that it is therefore unnecessary to enter into negotiations for the acquirement of this authority. This Department, in asking that negotiations be inaugurated towards the acquisition of suitable locations for low-power stations on the Isthmus of Panama, had in view a possible extensive series of negotiations; it was also desired to forestall any attempts on the part of private corporations to secure concessions in the Republic of Panama for the operation of radio stations. The Solicitor's opinion that interfering stations owned by private parties may be disposed of under the provisions of the Canal Treaty of 1903, appears to cover the latter contingency in a most satisfactory manner.

In order to make selections of the exact localities for low-power radio stations on the Isthmus of Panama, tests must be made of the electrical conditions in the vicinity of the places mentioned in my letter of January 23, 1912. It is proposed to undertake these tests as soon as the services of our radio expert can be spared to make them. When these tests shall have been completed and the appropriations for the erection of these stations secured, the Department will furnish the Department of State with a list of the sites desired and a statement of the arrangements necessary for the erection, equipment, and operation of these stations.

Respectfully yours,

GEORGE VON L. MEYER.

File No. 819.74/15.

The Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
Washington, April 22, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter[1] of April 17, 1912, enclosing copy of a despatch from our Minister at Panama City relative to the erection of radio stations in Panama.

Referring to the statement that a 5-kilowatt telefunken set has been ordered by the Panaman Government for installation on top of the National Theater in Panama City, this Department can only reiterate the opinion expressed by Mr. Clark, its radio expert on the Isthmus of Panama, that this apparatus would positively interfere with the Naval radio station at Balboa; and in view of the opinion of the Solicitor for the State Department that "it is my judgment that, as against the Government of Panama, this Government already enjoys, under the Canal Treaty of 1903, full right and authority to carry out the plans desired by the Navy Department in the erection and maintenance, as a monopoly, of wireless telegraph stations not only in the zone but on the Isthmus itself," I have the honor to request that our Minister be instructed to use his influence against the erection of any radio stations in Panama except those of this Department.

Respectfully yours,

GEO. VON L. MEYER.

File No. 819.74/14.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 25, 1912.

SIR: Referring to instruction No. 43, of the 15th instant, relative to the establishment of wireless telegraph stations in Panama, I enclose herewith for your information, a copy of a letter[2] from the Secretary of the Navy in which, in reply to the Department's letter to him of the 15th instant, he says that in order to make selections of the exact localities for low-power radio stations on the Isthmus of

---

[1] Not printed. The inclosed dispatch referred to is No. 71, of February 14; see ante.
[2] See ante, letter of April 19.

Panama, tests must be made of the electrical conditions in the vicinity of the places mentioned in his letter of January 23, 1912; that it is proposed to undertake these tests as soon as the services of the Navy Department's radio expert can be spared to make them; and that when these tests shall have been completed and the appropriations for the erection of these stations secured, the Navy Department will furnish this Department with a list of the sites desired and a statement of the arrangements necessary for the erection, equipment, and operation of these stations.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 819.74/15.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

[Extract.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 11, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22d ultimo regarding the construction of wireless telegraph stations in Panama and to transmit herewith for your information copy of an instruction [1] to the American Minister at Panama.

I have [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 819.74/15.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 51.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 13, 1912.

Sir: With reference to the Department's instruction of April 25, 1912, regarding wireless stations in Panama, a copy of a letter dated April 22 from the Secretary of the Navy is enclosed for your information.

You are instructed to use your influence against the erection of any radio stations in Panama except those of the Navy Department of the United States, and you will be guided by the Solicitor's memorandum enclosed with the Department's instruction No. 43, of April 15, 1912.

I am [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

File No. 819.74/17.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 148.]

American Legation,
Panama, June 12, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your instruction No. 51, of the 13th ultimo, enclosing for my information a copy of a letter, dated April 22nd last, from the Secretary of the Navy, regarding wireless stations in Panama and directing me to use my influence against the erection of any radio stations in Panama except those of the Navy Department of the United States. In reply I beg to state that I shall not fail to use my influence as directed.

---

[1] This is the instruction of May 13 (see infra).

In this connection I desire to state that in a recent conversation upon this subject with Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, he requested me to inquire of the Department whether some arrangement could not be made as to the disposition of the wireless apparatus purchased by the Panaman Government for erection on the National Theatre in Panama City (despatch No. 71, of February 14th, 1912), all the parts of which had now been delivered here and which had cost the Panaman Government altogether about $6,000. As he understood that the Government of the United States desired to erect and maintain as a monopoly all wireless stations in the Republic, he suggested that it would only be fair that the Government of the United States should reimburse the Panaman Government for its outlay in this apparatus by purchasing it for use in its contemplated system.

It should be noted that Mr. Reynolds Hitt, in his despatch No. 21, of June 30, 1910, reports that he had mentioned to the Minister for Foreign Affairs that his predecessors, Señor Arias and Señor Arango, had informed Mr. Squiers that the Panaman Government would not enter into negotiations "for the establishment of a system of wireless telegraphy between Colon and the coast of Colombia and of a wireless station in the city of Panama," "without first consulting the United States and securing its assent," and that in reply the Minister had "stated that he understood that to be the present attitude of the Panaman Government." Unless this assurance should be understood as referring only to the granting of concessions to third parties for establishing wireless stations, and, consequently, as not affecting wireless stations to be established by the Panaman Government itself, the recent purchase of this apparatus for Panama City, as to which the Government of the United States was not consulted, must, of course, be considered as a breach of this assurance. I nevertheless believe that if any breach was committed by the Panaman Government it was not intentional, but was the result of the unsystematic conduct of the Panaman Foreign Office and of the frequent changes of Foreign Ministers and personnel, which make the permanence of such understanding here extremely precarious. In view of all the circumstances I consider that it would be advisable to make use of this apparatus, if suitable, reimbursing to the Panaman Government such a sum as may fairly represent its value.

I have [etc.]

F. Percival Dodge.

File No. 819.74/17.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

Department of State,
Washington, June 29, 1912.

Sir: Referring to your letter of April 22nd last, I have the honor to enclose for your information a copy of a despatch[1] from the

---

[1] This refers to the Minister's despatch No. 148, of June 12.

American Minister at Panama stating that he will use his influence against the erection of any radio stations in Panama except those under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department.

The Department will be glad to receive such comments as you may desire to make.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 819.74/18.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, July 2, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of June 29, 1912, enclosing a copy of a despatch from the American Minister at Panama stating that he will use his influence against the erection of radio stations in Panama, and citing an inquiry from the Panaman Minister for Foreign Affairs as to whether some arrangement could not be made relative to the disposition of the radio apparatus purchased by the Panama Government for erection on the National Theatre in Panama City.

In reply I have the honor to reiterate the opinion of this Department that it would be prejudicial to the military and naval interests of our Government to have radio stations erected and operated by private individuals or by the Panaman Government. Pursuant to a decision of your Department that it would not be necessary to secure permission from the Government of Panama to erect coastal radio stations in Panama as one of the means of preserving the integrity of the Republic, this Department will undertake to ascertain the electrical conditions in certain localities along the coast of Panama, and when appropriation is available, will erect the above-mentioned coastal stations.

Referring to the inquiry of the Panaman Minister for Foreign Affairs, I have the honor to request that you convey to his Government the information that this Department is ready to take over the radio apparatus purchased for use on the National Theatre in Panama City at the price named if, upon inspection, the apparatus is found to be as represented and in good condition.

Respectfully yours,

BEEKMAN WINTHROP.

File No. 819.74/18.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
No. 61.] Washington, July 10, 1912.

SIR: Referring to your No. 148 of the 12th ultimo, I enclose a copy of a letter[1] from the Acting Secretary of the Navy stating that that Department is ready to take over the radio apparatus, purchased for use on the National Theatre in Panama City at the price named if, upon inspection, the apparatus is found to be as represented and in good condition.

---

[1] The letter of July 2.

You will convey to the Foreign Office the substance of the letter of the Acting Secretary of the Navy.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 819.74/19.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 179.]

American Legation,
Panama, August 7, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your instruction No. 61, dated the 10th ultimo, enclosing a copy of a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy stating that that Department is ready to take over the radio apparatus purchased for use on the National Theatre in Panama City at the price named if, upon inspection, the apparatus is found to be as represented and in good condition, and to inform you that according to the directions therein, I immediately addressed a note to Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, conveying to him the substance of the letter of the Acting Secretary of the Navy.

On the following day Major Butler, U. S. M. C., commanding the Marine battalion at Bas Obispo, Canal Zone, informed me that he had received instructions, also from the Navy Department, to inspect the apparatus in question and to report as to the possibility of erecting it temporarily on the National Theatre or elsewhere near by. * * *

He informed me that he will report adversely to erecting the apparatus even temporarily in Panaman territory, as its proper installation, protection, etc., would in that case probably cause continual difficulties, and recommend that it should be erected temporarily somewhere near Balboa, where the Isthmian Canal Commission have offered a site. I entirely agree with Major Butler's opinion as to the inadvisability of erecting this apparatus in Panaman territory.

I have [etc.]

F. Percival Dodge.

File No. 819.74/19.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

Department of State,
Washington, August 22, 1912.

Sir: Referring to previous correspondence, I have the honor to enclose a copy of a despatch[1] from the American Minister at Panama regarding the proposed purchase from Panama of the radio apparatus, the property of the Panaman Government in Panama.

I have [etc.]

Alvey A. Adee.

---

[1] That of August 7.

File No. 819.74/19.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 22, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 179, of the 7th instant, regarding the question of the proposed purchase by the United States of the radio apparatus now the property of the Panaman Government.

A copy of your despatch has been forwarded to the Secretary of the Navy.

I am [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 819.74/20.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
Washington, August 29, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter[1] of August 22, 1912, with enclosure of despatch No. 179 from the American Minister at Panama, in reference to the purchase by this Department of the radio set at Panama, now owned by the Panaman Government.

I agree with the Minister's recommendation that this set should not be operated upon Panaman territory.

Very respectfully,

W. C. TWINING.

File No. 819.74/23.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Chargé d'Affaires of Panama.

No. 16.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 12, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received a letter[1] from the Acting Secretary of the Navy in which he asks it to ascertain from you whether it would be agreeable to your Government for the Navy Department to pay for the radio receiving set, forming part of the radio set purchased from your Government by that Department, in the same manner as the previous payment was made, namely to the Consul General of Panama at New York.

The Department will be gratified to receive your reply after you have heard from your Government.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 819.74/24.

The Minister of Panama to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF PANAMA,
No. 42.] Washington, November 26, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your excellency's communication No. 16 of October 12 last, in which this Legation is informed that the Department of State has received a note from the Navy Department inquiring whether it would be agreeable to my Government to deposit at the Consulate General of Panama at New York the sum due my Government for the wireless telegraphy receiving apparatus bought from it by the Navy Department.

In reply I have the honor to say that in Note No. S181 of November 8 the Foreign Office of my country transmits to me a note from the Treasury Department dated November 6 stating that the Government of Panama has not the least objection to the payment being made as above mentioned, which has been the custom on previous occasions.

I have [etc.]

RAMÓN M. VALDÉS.

VISIT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE REPUBLICS OF CENTRAL AMERICA AND THE CARIBBEAN SEA.

File No. 033.1100 K77.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Ministers of Costa Rica, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Panama; the Minister of Costa Rica in charge of the Legation of Salvador; and the Minister of Venezuela.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 13, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. MINISTER: Impressed with the importance of the relations between the United States and the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea, happily so friendly and grown closer and more intimate with the approach of the opening of the Panama Canal, from which are hoped so many mutual benefits to our countries, the President has directed the Secretary of State to visit the capitals of the Republics referred to, stopping also at the capitals of Venezuela and Panama, and probably visiting Mexico and Colombia as well.

The final decision of the President was made so shortly before the departure of Mr. Knox for Florida that it was not possible to give you early private information of this plan, and even now I must reserve for a later communication the pleasure of informing you of the precise date of the visit of the Secretary of State to [name of country].

Before his departure Mr. Knox asked me to assure you of the great pleasure with which he looks forward to visiting your country[1] and personally knowing those at the head of its Government, and to signalizing in that way the particular importance attached by the President to those relations of the most cordial amity which it is the aim of the United States to cultivate with [name of country].

---

[1] To the representative of Salvador: "Salvador" in place of "your country."

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 033.1100 K77/224.

The Minister of Panama to the Assistant Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF PANAMA,
Washington, February 15, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have had the pleasure of receiving your very courteous communication of the 13th instant by which you are pleased to inform me that [etc.]

No sooner had your very kind letter reached my hands than I communicated by cable with my Government announcing to it the intended visit of Secretary Knox to our capital, which intelligence, I am sure, has been received by my Government and the people of Panama with positive satisfaction; and I am anxiously looking forward to notice of the precise date on which the visit will be made so as to report it to my Government and enable it to make preparations for the reception due to so distinguished a guest.

I sincerely appreciate the flattering assurance you are pleased to communicate to me in behalf of Mr. Knox regarding his impressions upon his visit to Panama, and I am glad to assure you for my part that my country will feel highly honored at having, although for a short time unfortunately, the Secretary of State of this great nation with us.

I avail [etc.]

RICARDO ARIAS.

File No. 033.1100 K77/52d.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 24, 1912.

You may inform the Government of Panama that the Secretary will arrive at Colon on the morning of February 27, and will proceed to Panama the same day. He will leave Panama on the morning of the 29th, recross the Isthmus, and proceed to Costa Rica.

WILSON.

File No. 033.1100 K77/54.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, February 25, 1912.

I am requested by the Minister for Foreign Affairs to send you the following:

Immediately upon learning that this Republic is to be honored by a visit from the Secretary of State of the United States, this Government, in appreciation thereof, appointed a committee of representative men to receive Mr. Knox and tender to him and to the ladies and gentlemen of his party a reception at the Government Palace, and also a banquet on the 28th, besides such other courtesies as time may permit and they may be willing to accept. The Government and people of Panama are delighted with the prospect of the visit and, without political differences, are all preparing in common to show their high appreciation of their honored guest.

DODGE.

Address of welcome of Señor don Demóstenes Arosemena, Governor of Colón Province, on the arrival of the Secretary of State at Colón, February 27, 1912.

[Translation.]

MR. SECRETARY: As the representative of my country's Government in this part of the Republic, the honor of offering you a cordial greeting upon your arrival on our shores in the name of the nation devolves upon me.

The Panaman nation, to whom you are well known, greets in you an eminent statesman of a nation which marches in the vanguard of the civilization and progress of the American continent, and it highly appreciates the visit of so distinguished a guest.

Panama, to whom you are especially persona grata, regards as an honor the presence of so illustrious a representative of the great American Union, which, in an hour of trial for the Isthmians, fearlessly assumed before the world an obligation which it has fulfilled, and will no doubt in the future most loyally fulfill, of guaranteeing and maintaining the sovereignty and independence of the youngest Republic of this continent, and 400,000 Panamans are at this moment hoping that upon leaving our shores you will carry with you as agreeable a memory of the country as your visit will doubtless leave in their breasts.

Welcome, Mr. Secretary, to this Republic, which gladly contributes to the aggrandizement and prosperity of your country with the only thing possible—with its territory.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

EXCELLENCY: In the name of the people of the United States, the President of the United States, for my party, and for myself, I desire to express to you our deep gratitude for the cordiality of this welcome when we have first touched the shore in the Republic of Panama and in the ancient city named for the great discoverer of America. This reception is extremely flattering to me, because it indicates that the people of Panama respond to the sentiment that inspired the President of the United States, and whose inspiration has been cordially and fully indorsed by the people of the United States, to send me hither as a bearer of a message of good feeling, friendship, and kindliness to the people of this Republic and the other peoples of the Caribbean littoral. I have sincerely to thank you all for this manifestation of the sympathy which is thus shown toward us, and I shall repeat to you only what I have said before—that is, thanks—which I am sure will find a response in the hearts of the American people.

Speech of Señor don Aristides Arjona, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Panama, at a dinner given to Mr. Knox at Panama City, February 28, 1912.

[Translation.]

MR. SECRETARY KNOX:

When the cable and the press announced a few days ago your visit to some of the Central and South American republics, the citizens who represent the brain and the heart of these nations, as if moved by a single potent impulse, made ready with their eyes fixed upon you, who can not be other than a bearer of good tidings and an inspirer of wholesome political policies for the Latin-American countries.

These countries, Mr. Secretary, relatively young, as compared with those of the old continent, are eager in this delicate period of their existence for such examples and teachings as may be offered by your great nation, which holds properly the first place in the civilization and progress of this hemisphere.

The youth, the blood, the race, and the idiosyncracies, in short, of these countries tend to make them appear impulsive in the grave questions in which a solution is needed for complicated social and political problems, since, in truth, opposing tendencies and judgments degenerate sometimes into internal complications with prejudicial consequences to the Latin-American family. On the other hand, in your country, the United States, the model Republic, a clear, temperate judgment, cold as the snows of those beautiful latitudes, can at all times be brought to bear upon the series of difficult problems which present themselves to the intelligence and activity of statesmen like yourself; and therefore Latin-American nations, guided by a common purpose to become great, receive with interest and pleasure your visit, which can have no other object than to stimulate and benefit them. Considering the facts thus, I do not hesitate to acknowledge that only a noble altruism guides you, that only lofty ideals inspire your acts, and that only your marked interest in the future of these entities of young America has impelled you to lay aside your delicate and multifarious official duties in your own country to come to strengthen the ties of friendship, interest, and sympathy which join them with your nation, increasing the prestige which has been attained by the wise diplomacy of North America.

The Republic of Panama, mistress of the two greatest bodies of water which bathe the world, has a thousand reasons to be grateful to you and to your Government, and to-day has another reason in considering that it is the first which you have chosen to honor with your visit, you who intend to proceed to the other countries, which will receive you cordially, as an illustrious and distinguished guest, with ovations expressive of their feelings. Panama knows that your mission is one of laudable patriotism and international concord, and doubts not that it will also know how to respond to the call of American confraternity which you have addressed to it, since it aspires loyally to aid you in the work of Pan American progress which you carry on with such success and which will make your name imperishable in the records of the world of Columbus.

You know well, Mr. Secretary, that the Republic of Panama will always be in accord with your lofty views of international policy. A thousand reasons for perpetual gratitude and lasting union bind the inhabitants of the Isthmus to the American Government and people; therefore your triumphs will always have our sincere plaudits and the possibility of your reverses as a nation will always be considered by us as a personal calamity.

The gigantic work of the Interoceanic Canal, which astonishes the whole world, is the principal factor in the community of interests and the reciprocity of sentiment which characterize the relations between our countries. To protect this great work, which is already nearing conclusion, the Republic of Panama will omit neither care nor effort, since it will always hold in remembrance the protection received from your nation when it took its first steps as a sovereign state and the wise purpose which has guided your country in all the acts in which its assistance has been necessary to secure the benefits acquired with our independence.

The work of the representatives of your Government in this Republic and in the Zone of the Canal has been most appropriate and beneficial. Confining myself to the present, I will mention the able diplomat, Mr. Dodge, who maintains upon a high plane the relations between both countries. At the head of the civil administration, Governor Thatcher is a model of zeal and intelligence. Colonel Gorgas, with his well-disciplined officials in the sanitary department, has effectively removed the dark and horrible specter of epidemics; and, finally, Colonel Goethals, the man of iron, of trained mind, of never-sufficiently-praised energy, the supreme director of the stupendous work of the canal, with his constant and honorable zeal to immortalize the name of the United States in that of the colossal work, offers to your powerful country the splendid spectacle, which all powers will witness with delight, of the rapid passage of ships through the channel which is being opened by the unceasing blows of the marvelous arm of the North American Nation. A day of glory, recorded with letters of gold in the annals of the Republic of Panama, will be that upon which traffic through the new road is opened. The world, astounded, will contemplate the celebration which will crown the glory of the people and Government of the United States and which, at the cost of enormous sacrifice, will be the most valuable offering presented upon the altar of universal progress.

Welcome, therefore, illustrious Mr. Secretary. Behold in the people of the Republic of Panama, which has for you the immense gratitude of the protégé, more than a friend, a true brother; and in the name of the Government and of all the citizens of my country accept this modest expression of appreciation and sympathy which we have dedicated to you for your entertainment. When you return to your country, tell the American Government and people, in the name of the Republic of Panama, that we, the people of the Isthmus, are bound to them with the same ties, with the same eternal bonds, with which at no distant time, to the astonishment of the world and for all eternity, the deep, blue waters of the Atlantic and the Pacific will be united.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES, AND GENTLEMEN:

It is an honor and a sincere pleasure to be your guest and the recipient of the cordial welcome of Panama. It is a privilege to stand upon the threshold of the consummation of the greatest work done by man in or for the world and to feel that one is not a stranger upon the soil dedicated from the creation to be the scene of the supreme effort for human advancement when man's requirements demanded it and man's genius should be equal to the task.

When the necessities of the world's first civilization could be no longer supplied and its aspirations no longer satisfied in its oriental abode it was natural that the pioneers of those days should make their first explorations by following the path of the life-giving sun in its daily journeys toward the West.

The fruits of their first timid ventures emboldened them to more ambitious endeavor, and the ever-increasing rewards resulting from the discovery of continents and seas beckoned them on until, halted here by another world, they seemed to have fulfilled their mission of companion discoverers with the sun, which passed on in solitude toward and into the unknown.

It was not until 1513, when Balboa stood "silent upon a peak in Darien" and gazed upon the waters of the Pacific, that it was evident that the hand that gave the seas and formed the land left it possible to divide the hemisphere which halted western progress, even as Moses had divided the Red Sea that the children of Israel might pass, and though the hand of the early navigators were unskilled for the gigantic task their imaginations grasped the possibility of its successful realization.

The history of the project to build an isthmian canal is full of strange national and personal disappointments. Perhaps the most tragic of them all is that, coincident with Spain's loss of the last vestige of her sovereignty in the New World, the final act of the realization of the dreams of her great navigators began.

After many vicissitudes and failures the completion of this stupendous work devolved upon the people of the United States, who are thus thrown into relations with the countries of the isthmian region which, with our geographical propinquity, make a broader understanding and a more sympathetic reciprocal interest between us an essential basis for the realization of the splendid possibilities which seem to have been decreed from the beginning of time.

The President of the United States believes that the early completion of the Panama Canal should mark the beginning of closer relations to all Latin America, and especially to the Caribbean littoral, as well as the relations of these countries to each other, and, impelled by the thought that this is an auspicious moment, through better acquaintance, to lay the foundations upon which there should rest a broader confidence, a closer sympathy, and more practical reciprocal helpfulness, has sent me hither as a bearer of a message of good will to our sister American republics. It is the President's desire that I might personally meet your most hospitable peoples, might see for myself your beautiful countries, with their boundless resources and economic possibilities, to the end that such direct personal knowledge, understanding, and appreciation might result in mutual advantage and in cooperation for the development of all our countries. Responding to the hospitality of the country which has first and so generously received me and with which the relations of my country are so cordially intimate, I take this opportunity of assuring all the American republics that the purpose of the United States toward them is that we should live in amity and essential harmony and that we desire only that more peace, more prosperity, more happiness, and more security should come in and become a part of their individual and national lives.

While it is entirely clear to those who have fairly and intelligently considered the history of the relations of the United States to the other American republics that our politics have been without a trace of sinister motive or design, craving neither sovereignty nor territory, yet is is true that our motives toward you have not always been fortunately interpreted either at home or faithfully represented by some of our nationals who have resided in your midst.

While we have much to learn of each other and are all to be vastly profited by clear and more sympathetic ties, yet between the elder and the younger republics there is much in common.

A commonwealth founded on freedom of conscience and security of individual rights is not an exclusive heritage of Saxon America, but one shared by all the peoples of the hemisphere who, like ourselves, have passed through the sore trials that attend the founding of new communities in a new land. However diverse our physical environments, however great the contrast between the natural obstacles to be surmounted; whether amid the snows and pine forests of the north or in the sierras of the equator and the pampas of the south, the aim of our respective enterprises, expressed in the undying words of Lincoln, has been the same, to bring forth on this continent new nations, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Much has been said about the effect of the opening of the Panama Canal, but I believe it is given to few of us to realize what magic possibilities are potential in that event. As I conceive it, it will create for our western world an entirely new situation, a situation fraught with possibilities so vast they daze the fancy of the mind. In this new world we must be found drawn closer by sympathies and mutual esteem, and working in harmony toward beneficent ends. This must be so, for our greatest interests are those that are common to us all. We who live on the western hemisphere find ourselves by force of geography in circumstances which make our situation peculiar, and this fundamental fact gives us privileges and imposes upon us duties and obligations we would not otherwise have. It was a perception of this, which your own thinkers and statesmen have seen as clearly as our own, which prompted the announcement by President Monroe of the great and beneficent policy that now bears his name. When the canal is opened and the ships of all the countries of the world come sailing through these Carib seas, the peculiarity of our position with its special requirement will be accentuated and the wisdom of that doctrine confirmed again and specially. It serves admittedly your interests as much as ours. Even now it is a great bond between us. In its future amplification I perceive it will be a common heritage binding together the nations of this hemisphere with a force no power can break, and while it has in Providence been given to us of the north to state and interpret it, it has never been invoked to the detriment of the people of the south or operated to their hurt.

In my judgment the Monroe Doctrine will reach the acme of its beneficence when it is regarded by the people of the United States as a reason why we should constantly respond to the needs of those of our Latin-American neighbors who may find necessity for our assistance in their progress toward better government or who may seek our aid to meet their just obligations and thereby to maintain honorable relations to the family of nations. Great as will be the glory of having physically divided a hemisphere, a greater glory will be to have contributed to the unity, happiness, and prosperity of its people.

It is a paradox that the severance of the physical ligament that joins the two continents of the New World will more closely unite them. Culebra is the clot in the artery of intercourse whose removal will give free and full circulation throughout the whole organism to the vivifying currents of friendship, peace, commerce, and prosperity.

When the waters of the two oceans are blended on the soil of Panama it will make curious changes in the geography of the Americas. All that is south of the Isthmus will be nearer to all that is north, and all that is north will, in a peculiar sense, be more closely drawn together. The Central American republics will be the tropical end of a vast island whose northern limits will extend to the eternal ice and whose southern boundary will be a continuous procession of the commerce of the world.

File No. 033.1100 K77/105.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 79.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, March 5, 1912.

SIR: Notwithstanding the short time at our disposal, it was possible to complete all the arrangements at a late hour on the 26th ultimo, when Señores Arjona, Minister for Foreign Affairs, Arango, aide-de-camp to the President of Panama, Mrs. Dodge, myself, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrews, left for Colon.

At 7 o'clock on the following morning the Washington arrived and I immediately went on board with Mr. Andrews. At 9 o'clock the Secretary and his party landed in the cruiser's launches and were received by Señores Arjona, Hazera, Arango, Arosemena, Governor of Colon, and Dr. Velázquez, as well as by all the other Panaman officials at Colon, the principal officials of the Isthmian Canal Commission and Panama Railroad and quite a large crowd composed chiefly of natives. The landing place was decorated with flags and a band played the national anthems.

After the formal introductions the Secretary entered the special train, which had been provided by the Panaman Government and which was drawn up close by, and proceeded to Panama. At Panama the station was cleared and profusely decorated and the Secretary was met by the reception committee, which presented flowers to the ladies and made a most cordial address of welcome. After the presentations had been made the Secretary and his party, the reception committee and others were conveyed in some twenty-five automobiles, provided by the Panaman Government, to the Tivoli (the Secretary having decided to stop there), the Secretary's carriage being accompanied by an escort of mounted police. The roadway was lined with police and firemen, and four bands stationed at various points played the national anthems.

At 3 p. m., accompanied by Señor Arjona, his Staff, and myself, in the President's own carriages, the Secretary called upon President Chiari, who was attended by all the members of his Cabinet, by the Designados, and by other high officials. During this call President Chiari made a formal and most cordial address of welcome to the Secretary, who replied with equal cordiality. At the suggestion of the Panaman Government, made to save the Secretary all unnecessary fatigue, it had been arranged that this call should be considered also as a call upon the Ministers of State and Designados.

Upon leaving the Palace, the Secretary and his Staff, accompanied by me, left cards upon all the Diplomatic Missions accredited here and then returned to the Tivoli, where almost immediately all the calls were returned.

In the evening the Secretary and most of the members of his party dined at the Legation, the following other guests, drawn as much as possible from all the different political parties, being also present: President and Señora Chiari, Señor and Señora Arjona, Dr. Pablo Arosemena, Señor and Señorita Boyd, General de la Guardia, Dr. and Señora Porras, Señor de La Espriella and Colonel and Mrs. Gorgas.

After dinner a reception followed at the Legation at which about 250 people were present, also including as many representatives as possible of all political parties and Panaman society.

On the next day, the 28th ultimo, the Secretary and his party, accompanied by the reception committee, the members of the Legation and others, made an excursion to Old Panama, which at the request of the Secretary had been substituted for the excursion in the bay of Panama. Luncheon was taken at the house of the Honorable F. M. Thatcher, Chief of the Civil Administration of the Canal Zone, and at 4 p. m. the Secretary and his party attended a large reception in the President's Palace. In the evening the Secretary, with all the gentlemen of his party, attended an extremely elaborate banquet in the Hotel Central at which 170 persons were present, while the ladies of the party dined with Señora Ramón Arias F. Jr., later observing the banquet from the gallery of the hotel. Upon this occasion Mrs. Knox was presented by Señora Chiari with an attractive basket, of native workmanship, filled with valuable ornaments found in ancient Indian graves. Señor Arjona made a speech in honor of the Secretary, to which the Secretary replied. It had previously been arranged that there would be no other speeches.

On the following day, the 29th ultimo, the Secretary and his party returned to Colon, accompanied by Señores Arjona and Arango, the members of the Legation, Lieutenant Colonel Hodges, acting chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, and others, stopping en route to visit some of the points of interest on the Canal. At Colon, where he was received by the local authorities with the local band, he invited Señores Arjona and Arango to visit him on board the Washington, and upon leaving the cruiser Señor Arjona was given the usual salute.

Upon his arrival on board, the Secretary received a telegram from President Chiari expressing deep appreciation for his visit, to which he replied by wireless, soon after the cruiser's departure, as follows:

His Excellency RODOLFO CHIARI,
President of Panama:

Upon parting from the fair shores of Panama I desire to extend to you in my own name and in the name of my Government my hearty thanks for your cordial welcome and warm and generous hospitality while it was my privilege to be with you. Mrs. Knox joins me in fervent wishes for your continued good health and prosperity and that of Mrs. Chiari.

P. C. KNOX.

The Secretary's visit passed off without a single regrettable incident, so far as I am aware, notwithstanding the necessary haste in preparations, and the chief officials and political leaders of all parties showed the best disposition to make it a success in every way.

The local press also, both during the visit and since the Secretary's departure, has shown the greatest interest in his visit and has made uniformly cordial comments regarding it.

I have [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 033.1100 K77/116.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 84.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, March 9, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 79 of the 5th instant, I have the honor to enclose a copy of a note dated the 2nd instant, which I addressed to Señor Arjona, Minister for Foreign Affairs, conveying to him and to the Panaman Government a repeated expression of the thanks and appreciation of the Secretary of State for the reception tendered to him by the Panaman Government, as well as a copy and translation of the reply of Señor Arjona, dated the 6th instant. Señor Arjona has subsequently taken occasion to thank me for the opportunity afforded to him by my note for placing upon record the sincere appreciation of President Chiari and of the Panaman Government for the Secretary's visit.

I have [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Minister to the Secretary of State for Foreign Relations.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your excellency that I have been requested by his excellency the Honorable Philander Chase Knox, Secretary of State of the United States of America, to convey in his name to your excellency and through your excellency to the Government of Panama a further expression of his sincere thanks and appreciation of the magnificent and cordial reception so graciously tendered to him during his visit in Panama, in which his excellency was especially pleased to note that representatives of all political parties equally participated.

I avail [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

The Secretary of State for Foreign Relations to the American Minister.

EXCELLENCY: The information conveyed to this Department by your excellency in your courteous communication of the 2d instant, has been the cause of just gratification to His Excellency in Charge of the Executive Power.

That high Magistrate greatly appreciates the interest taken by his excellency the Honorable Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State of the United States, in making known to him his appreciation of the entertainments which, in the name of the Panaman Government and people, were organized in his honor during the brief visit with which he honored us in his journey to some of the Central and South American republics. And it is an additional cause of satisfaction to His Excellency in Charge of the Executive Power that the entertainments organized and demonstrations made should have merited the kind acceptance and entire approval of the distinguished American statesman.

The consideration that the festivities should have as a basis the expression of national sentiment and not that of a particular political party, in order to demonstrate in a genuine and sincere manner the cordiality existing between the Panamans and the American Government and people, inspired the Executive to designate special committees for the organization of the reception in honor of the distinguished guest, and, for this reason, all the representatives of the existing political parties had, in the committees nominated, the place of honor to which they were entitled in the demonstration of Panama to his excellency, Mr. Knox. Otherwise, neither the Government nor the people of Panama would have done their duty nor paid homage worthy of the importance of the guest entertained.

Will your excellency be kind enough to inform his excellency the Honorable Mr. Knox of the contents of this communication and assure him, once again, in the name of His Excellency the Designate Charged with the Executive Power, and of this Department, of the impressions of sincere consideration and respect of the Panaman Government and people?

I am [etc.]

ARISTIDES ARJONA.

ASSAULT ON AMERICAN CITIZENS IN PANAMA.

File No. 419.11 D 29.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, July 4, 1912.

To-day at Cocoa Grove one American civilian killed, three wounded, and seven infantry privates, two marine privates wounded, by Panaman police. Three policemen wounded, one reported killed. Investigation thus far indicates an attack by armed police on unarmed soldiers, for no cause except some altercation among themselves.

DODGE.

File No. 419.11 D 29/2.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, July 9, 1912.

Affidavits regarding assault by police tend strongly to prove that all the Americans were unarmed, although somewhat disorderly and intoxicated; that suddenly a policeman fired on them, the Americans replying with stones; that a large body of police appeared a little later and began at once to fire, whereupon the Americans fled without making resistance, taking refuge in houses, pursued by the police who were continuously firing.

Ralph W. Davis was killed, transfixed by a bayonet while seeking a hiding place.

Some who surrendered to the police were beaten and wounded after surrender.

American casualties one, nineteen wounded, two seriously.

From statements thus far received, the conduct of the police was so outrageous that I recommend that the Government be requested to suspend Chief of Police Quijano and Inspector General of Police de la Ossa. They were apparently not present during the firing, but are responsible for the personnel and consequent dangerous character of the force.

DODGE.

File No. 419.11 D 29/14a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 22, 1912.

Relative to the affair at Cocoa Grove on July 4; to the killing of Pelote and arresting of certain persons on the Canal Zone by Panaman police; to the War Department's request and your recommendation that demand be made for dismissal of Quijano, and to your recommendation as to de la Ossa—you will immediately repeat the demand for the removal of Quijano if he has not already been removed, and will demand removal of de la Ossa; you will at the same time say that it is expected that these officers will not be reinstated. Use all proper means to cause their removal by the present administration.

In regard to Ralph W. Davis, say that it is obvious that this Government expects every proper effort to be made to identify the murderers of Davis, and to adequately punish not only them, but all other guilty officers.

ADEE.

File No. 419.11 D 29/18.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 197.]
AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, August 26, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt late on the 22d instant of the Department's telegram of August 22, directing me immediately to demand [etc.].

On the following morning I addressed a note to Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, in the sense of your telegram. My note was actually delivered to Señor Chiari at about 3 p. m. I have since learned from a trustworthy source that about 4.30 p. m. Señor Quijano, accompanied by Captain Walker of the Panaman police, embarked in a small boat in the port of Panama and proceeded to a point near the island of Flamenco in the bay. The boat lay at this point until the steamship Chile bound for Guayaquil passed, coming out of the port of Balboa, when Señores Quijano and Walker boarded her. Señor Quijano evidently desired to leave as hurriedly and as secretly as possible, taking this most unusual manner of joining his steamer in order to escape notice and avoid passing through the Canal Zone. His passage was taken under the name of "Wallace," which is part of his full name (Quijano-Wallace), although he is not known by it. Before leaving Señor Quijano found time to tender his "irrevocable" resignation to President Arosemena, said to be dated the following day. The Captain Walker who accompanied him is the police officer who was in command of the police detachment which brutally charged unoffending men, women, and children in the Santa Ana Park on the night of the 4th instant.

This afternoon I called upon Señor Chiari and inquired of him when I might expect a reply to my note, informing him at the time of the seriousness of the matter and of the expectation of my Government that its demands would be complied with promptly. Señor Chiari answered that the Government was still considering its reply, which I would receive to-morrow (28th [sic] instant). In answer to my inviting his attention to the circumstances of the departure of Señor Quijano, which resembled a flight, Señor Chiari remarked that Señor Quijano's resignation had been prepared some time before, that he had long been contemplating a trip abroad and that he had avoided passing through the Zone and had left quietly merely because certain personal enemies of his might otherwise have attempted some injury to him. He admitted, however, that Señor Quijano had been ill-advised in engaging a cabin under the name of "Wallace." He knew nothing as to how the President had accepted his resignation. Captain de la Ossa, he believed, was still occupying his post.

I then invited Señor Chiari's attention to the expectations of my Government relative to the identification and punishment of the guilty. Señor Quijano [sic] replied that Judge de la Guardia was still investigating the occurrences on July 4. In answer to my questions he stated that he did not know when this investigation would end, nor whether as yet the evidence examined pointed to any persons as guilty, nor in fact anything regarding it. Señor Chiari in fact showed a disinclination to giving any information as to the Panaman Government's investigation. He remarked, however, that he regretted that in demanding the removal of Señores Quijano and de la Ossa, I had not submitted the evidence which had induced my Government to make these demands. Señor Chiari showed throughout this conversation, as he has always done, a desire to belittle this whole affair and to procrastinate, doubtless with a view to leaving it to be settled by Dr. Porras' administration. I shall, however, in accordance with the Department's directions, use all proper means toward securing the prompt removal of these men.

In this connection I have the honor to state that I am informed by the Zone police that there appears again to be a reasonable chance of securing evidence as to the identity of the murderers of Ralph W.

Davis and certain other policemen who took part in the Cocoa Grove affair. It seems likely that once Señores Quijano and de la Ossa are removed, a number of witnesses will be prepared to give evidence who are now afraid to do so.

I have [etc.]

F. PERCIVAL DODGE.

[Inclosure.]

The American Minister to the Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

No. 249.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, August 23, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to inform your excellency that I have received instructions from my Government directing me immediately to demand of your excellency's Government the removal from their respective offices of Señor Quijano, chief of the Panaman police, and of Señor de la Ossa, captain of police.

These demands are in view of the evidence before my Government relative to the affair which occurred on July 4 last in the district of Panama known as "Cocoa Grove" and also in view of the evidence relative to the affair which occurred on the 12th instant in the same district, both of which affairs are now receiving the most serious consideration of my Government. The demand for the removal of Señor Quijano is also in view of a request of the Secretary of War of the United States made on account of the killing of one marine, Pelote, and the arrest of a man, woman and child by certain Panaman police on July 4 last within the territory of the Canal Zone.

My Government further directs me to inform your excellency that obviously it expects that the Panaman Government will make all proper efforts to identify the person or persons guilty of the murder of the American Ralph W. Davis during the affair at "Cocoa Grove" on July 4 last, and will cause them as well as the other guilty police officers and privates to be adequately punished.

I avail [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 419.11 D 29/15.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, August 27, 1912.

In response to my note of August 23 to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, I have to-day received from him a note written by direction of the President, substantially as follows:

> Without previous proof of the guilt of the parties, the Government of Panama can not accede to the demand as made. Since international law requires that demands be founded on proofs, it is not necessary for the Government of Panama to explain its reasons, or to state its profound surprise at the small degree of friendliness with which on this occasion it has been treated by the Government of the United States. Prior to the conclusion of the investigation of the incident of July 4, now going on, nothing definite can be known, but assurances can be given that all found guilty will be punished.

The note then refers to the Pelote incident and claims that the Panaman police were assisting and cooperating with the Zone police.

The note ends by stating that Quijano had left before my note was received.

DODGE.

File No. 419.11 D 29/15.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 30, 1912.

The Minister of Panama stated at the Department on August 27 that unless our Legation supplied full proofs of guilt, he hoped this Government would not press for the dismissal of Ossa; to which the Department to-day replied that it does not find any justification for modifying in any respect its just insistence upon Ossa's dismissal, and that the Department feels that Ossa and Quijano must both be held responsible for grave outrages which involve death and injury of American citizens.

In making your representations you should recall to the Government of Panama that this last outrage is merely the culmination of a long series of indignities and injuries to American citizens. You will then say that these indignities and injuries have been inflicted under such circumstances as to convince this Government that the Panaman police as now organized can not be trusted adequately to protect the life and property of American citizens nor even to refrain from acts of their own, whenever the opportunity may occur, of positive violence against American citizens; that this Government must therefore repeat its demand for the immediate removal of the responsible officers; and that this Government must consider what immediate measures it will be obliged to adopt, in view of its rights, duties and obligations in the premises, in case the Panama police force should not be so reorganized as adequately to secure the maintenance of public order in the cities of Panama and Colon and in the adjacent territories and harbors.

WILSON.

File No. 419.11 D 29/21.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 201.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, September 2, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Department's telegram of August 30, relative to the demanded dismissal of Captain J. Francisco de la Ossa, jr., of the Panaman police. I immediately drafted a note to Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, a copy of which is inclosed. I then called upon Señor Chiari and handed this note to him in the course of a long interview, during which I read the note to him in Spanish, as Señor Chiari speaks no English, and commented upon it in some detail, reviewing the conduct of the police and their present dangerous character, for which Señor de la Ossa was jointly responsible with Señor Quijano. I then requested him to give me his answer at the earliest moment, since I could not allow a solution of this matter to suffer longer delay.

I then endeavored to see President Arosemena, intending to hand him a copy of my note to Señor Chiari, but I was unable to do, as the President sent a message to me to the effect that he was unwell.

Late this afternoon I received Señor Chiari's reply, of which I inclose a copy and translation, stating that by a decree dated to-day Captain de la Ossa has been "separated from the exercise of his duties as captain of the National Police." This phrase, which is one often used here, signifies the definitive removal of this man from the police as demanded by the Department. I have already ascertained that Señor de la Ossa is no longer wearing the police uniform and soon I expect to have confirmation of his entire separation from the police.

I have [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Minister to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

No. 251.]

American Legation,
Panama, August 31, 1912.

Excellency: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's esteemed communication No. 2806, dated the 27th instant, in reply to my note F. O. No. 249 of the 23d instant, in which I had the honor to inform your excellency that I had received instructions from my Government directing me immediately to demand of your excellency's Government the removal from their respective offices of Señor Julio Quijano and Señor Franklin de la Ossa.

I have the honor to inform your excellency that I duly transmitted to my Government by telegraph the substance of your excellency's note and that I have now received my Government's reply instructing me to state to your excellency that my Government sees no reason which would justify it in changing in any way its proper insistence on the dismissal of Señor de la Ossa, whom my Government considers is to be held with Señor Quijano to be responsible for the outrages of a grave character which have entailed loss of life to American citizens as well as injuries to them.

My Government desires me to recall to your excellency's Government that there has been a prolonged series of indignities and injuries which have been inflicted on Americans and that this recent outbreak is only the culmination of this series. The circumstances under which these indignities and injuries have been inflicted oblige the Government of the United States to come to the conclusion that the police of your excellency's Government can not, under their present organization, be trusted either to afford proper protection to the lives and property of American citizens or themselves to keep from committing against Americans acts of actual violence whenever an occasion for this is presented to them.

My Government accordingly instructs me to say to your excellency that the Government of the United States is compelled to repeat the demand already made by it for the immediate removal of the officers who are responsible and that unless the Panaman police is so reorganized as properly to insure in Panama City, Colon, and the harbors and territories adjacent to them the maintenance of public order, the Government of the United tSates will find it necessary to consider the immediate measures which must be taken by it in connection with the duties, obligations, and rights which appertain to it in this matter.

I avail [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

No. 2855.]

Department of Foreign Relations,
Panama, September 2, 1912.

Mr. Minister: Referring to your excellency's note No. 251 of the 31st of August last, I have the honor to inform you that by decree No. 450, made to-day, Señor J. Francisco de la Ossa, jr., has been separated from the exercise of his duties as captain of the national police.

Shortly I shall address myself again to your excellency concerning certain of the points mentioned in your excellency's note.

I renew [etc.]

EDUARDO CHIARI.

File No. 419.11 D 29/23.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 206.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, September 5, 1912.

SIR: Referring to my despatch No. 201 of the second instant, relative to the dismissal of Captain Francisco de la Ossa, of the Panaman police, I have the honor to inclose a copy and translation of the decree[1] dismissing this officer. * * * I also enclose a copy and translation of the decree[1] accepting Señor Julio Quijano's resignation. * * *

In my despatch No. 201 [197] I stated that a result of the removal of Señores Quijano and de la Ossa would probably be that many persons now afraid to do so would be willing to give evidence as to the occurrences on July 4 last. There seems to be good reason for anticipating that this result is now about to take place. * * *

I may mention that in order to render the identification of the policemen engaged in the Cocoa Grove affair more difficult Señor Quijano has not only transferred many of these policemen to various parts of the republic, as to Chiriquí, but has changed all their numbers. Many of them also have now left the police altogether. The officer in charge of the Cocoa Grove station upon July 4 last was Vigilante Cortes, who some weeks ago left Panama secretly for Guayaquil. * * *

I have [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

File No. 419.11 D 29/21.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 75.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 19, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received Mr. Dodge's No. 201 of the 2d instant, reporting his action in obtaining the dismissal of Captain J. Francisco de la Ossa, jr., of the Panaman police.

Mr. Dodge's action is approved by the Department.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 419.11 D 29/23.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, September 24, 1912.

You will address the Foreign Office substantially as follows:

The Department of State has carefully examined a great mass of evidence relating to the occurrences at Cocoa Grove on July 4, 1912, wherein two American citizens were killed and many others wounded by Panaman police. This examination has inevitably led to the conclusion that the deplorable results of those occurrences are chargeable to the brutal and criminal conduct of the policemen; that no effort was made by the superior police officers to prevent such conduct by their subordinates; that there is, rather, much reason to believe that the latter were encouraged to their conduct by their superiors; that, further, there is considerable evidence tending to show this attack upon unarmed American citizens to have been premeditated and more or less openly discussed in Panama as probable for some days before it happened.

You will then say that it furthermore appears that after the attack the policemen involved were transferred to other points, their police numbers changed and the officer in charge of the police station at Cocoa Grove was allowed to leave the country—all in order to make it difficult to identify the guilty persons.

In view of such evidence facts and circumstances, and the unfortunate frequent recurrence of such incidents, the Government of the United States must insist (first) that immediate and adequate punishment be inflicted upon those criminally liable therein; (second) that an indemnity be paid for the killing and wounding of the American citizens involved, the amount of the indemnity to be fixed after the Panaman authorities shall have had opportunity to punish the guilty; (third) that the Government of Panama formally express its regret for this deplorable affair, unless the character of the affair be materially changed by facts hereafter discovered.

You will add, in a way to leave no possible room for misunderstanding, that an immediate response accepting these bases of adjustment is expected by this Government.

Wilson.

File No. 419.11 D 29/26.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Panama, September 30, 1912.

The Foreign Office has sent a note in reply to your September 24, stated to be based on instructions from the President. It is wordy, argumentative, with much high-flown sentiment, of twelve pages, six of which are excerpts from testimony. The substance of it is:

The Panaman Government is unable to accept the proposed bases of adjustment because (1) the judicial inquiry is not yet ended and the executive can not admit responsibility in the meantime; (2) the Government of the United States has been erroneously informed, since the incident was due to excesses of American soldiers; (3) the American Government really concurs in point 1, since it admits possibility of showing a substantial change in the character of the incident. The note concludes with a suggestion of arbitration.

This reply, it should be remembered, is from an administration that expires to-day. I request instructions, as I wish to take up the matter with the new administration within a few days.

Accompanying the note is a book of testimony in Spanish; it contains 134 pages and it will take ten days to translate them. Shall I send it to the Department without translation?

ANDREWS.

File No. 419.11 D 29/26.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 5, 1912.

The Legation will translate the testimony. You will be further instructed on receipt of the translation.

WILSON.

File No. 419.11 D 29/31.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 238.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, October 28, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that noticing the authorities of Panama to not be showing energy in seeking the apprehension of those members of the national police who must have been guilty of the unjustifiable assault upon American citizens in the affair of the 4th of July—and this in spite of the insistence exhibited in your instruction telegraphed September 24th—I have addressed a note to the Foreign Office calling attention to the necessity of apprehending those guilty as being a necessary part of any adjustment, notwithstanding the delay unavoidably existing before a resumption of negotiations.

I have the honor to herewith enclose a copy of my note.

I have [etc.]

WM. WHITING ANDREWS.

[Inclosure.]

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of Foreign Affairs.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, October 28, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to bring to your excellency's attention—in view of the very considerable and unavoidable delay which is occurring before a resumption of negotiations directed towards an adjustment of the issue between my Government and your excellency's Government arising from the incident of the clash that occurred July 4th last, between American citizens and police of the Republic—that any basis of adjustment between my Government and your excellency's will mainly hinge upon the punishment of those members of the national police criminally liable for the murder of one American citizen and the wounding of many others.

The delay can not be considered as indicating any abandonment of the extreme interest which the Government of the United States feels in the apprehension and adequate punishment of those guilty.

I avail [etc.]

Wm. Whiting Andrews.

File No. 419.11 D 29/32.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 240.]

American Legation,
Panama, November 1, 1912.

Sir: Referring to my despatch No. 238, of October 28, 1912, I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy and translation of a note received from the Foreign Office, and which will have interest for the Department as significant of the attitude of the present Administration towards the police abuses of the 4th of July.

I have [etc.]

Wm. Whiting Andrews.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Secretary for Foreign Affairs to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

Foreign Office,
Panama, November 1, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your courteous communication, dated the 28th of last month, and in reply I am pleased to inform you that being anxious to make amends for the unpleasant situation created by the lamentable incidents that occurred in this city on the 4th of July of the present year, with the result of an affray between various American citizens and some members of the Panaman police my Government has ordered the Attorney General to effect the completion as soon as possible of the investigation which has been already initiated by the Superior Judge of this capital.

My Government hopes that the investigation carried on under the able direction of such a high and honorable functionary, will make it possible to ascertain, in order that they may be punished with all the rigor of our laws, those who were responsible for the death of the American citizen and for the wounding of the others to which you alluded in the note to which I am replying.

With sentiments [etc.]

E. T. Lefevre.

File No. 419.11 D 29/31.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 88.]

Department of State,
Washington, November 12, 1912.

Sir: The Department has received your No. 238, of the 28th ultimo, in which you report that you have addressed a note to the Panaman Foreign Office calling attention to the necessity of apprehending those members of the national police force, who were guilty of the unjustifiable assault upon American citizens on July 4 last, as being an indispensable part of any adjustment of the case between the two Governments.

Your action in the matter is approved.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 419.11 D 29/34.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 249.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, November 19, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that I have received a request from the Minister of Foreign Affairs, written at the behest of the Attorney General, asking that the Legation furnish a copy of the testimony on the American side which bears upon the riot between American soldiers and marines and the Panaman national police on July 4 last.

The reasons given for this request are that the Panaman testimony have proven worthless to the Government of Panama in its efforts to fix the blame for the casualties upon individuals, and that the American testimony might assist the Government also in placing the blame upon men higher up in the former administration.

The Legation has in its files only a duplicate copy of a summary of certain most important testimony selected from the entire evidence, which is voluminous.

I have informed the Secretary that I did not feel at liberty to comply with his request except under instruction from the Department of State.

I have [etc.]

WM. WHITING ANDREWS.

File No 419.11 D 29/32.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 23, 1912.

SIR: In reply to your No. 240, of the 1st instant, I desire to say that the Department is glad to learn of the apparently sincere determination of the present administration of Panama to identify and punish those responsible for the killing and wounding of American citizens in Panama on July 4 last, and trusts that the investigation which has been undertaken will lead to prompt results along this line.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 419.11 D 29/34.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 96.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 27, 1912.

SIR: The Department has received Mr. Andrews' No. 249 of the 19th of November last, in which he reports that the Panaman Minister of Foreign Affairs has asked your Legation to furnish him with a copy of the testimony taken on the American side bearing upon the riot between American soldiers and marines and the Panaman national police on July 4 last. In reply the Department desires to say that it will be glad to have you confer with the officials of the Canal Zone with reference to this matter.

Bearing in mind the reasons given by the Panaman authorities requesting copies of the American testimony, together with the possible purpose for which it may be employed, you will use your own discretion in the matter of acceding to the request of the Panaman Minister of Foreign Affairs.

I am [etc.]

Huntington Wilson.

REINSTATEMENT OF POLICE OFFICERS, DISMISSED AT REQUEST OF THE UNITED STATES.[1]

File No. 319.112 R 15/127.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 54.]

American Legation,
Panama, January 18, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inform you that a report recently reached me to the effect that certain of the police officers who were guilty of brutalities toward seamen of the U. S. S. Buffalo on the night of September 28, 1908, and who subsequently were dismissed on this account upon the demand of the American Government, had been reinstated in the Panaman police. I accordingly requested the Zone police authorities, if possible, to ascertain the truth of this report, and I am now informed by them that two of these men are members of the Panaman police. These are Paulino Macías, who was restored to the police some months ago as a policeman (No. 336), and Abelardo Bustos, who was restored to the police about two years ago (No. 162). Of the other three, two are in Panama and the third has not been located.

It will be remembered that the dismissal of these five men from the Panaman police was demanded by the Department as part of the settlement of the Buffalo case "for the reason that the investigations and reports made by representatives and officials of this [the American] Government clearly indicate that the police officers of Panama acted brutally and cruelly toward unarmed sailors wearing the uniform and entitled to the protection of the United States." (Instruction 192 of July 13, 1909.[2]) This demand for their dismissal was communicated to the Panaman Government in Mr. Squiers's note to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, No. 531, of July 31, 1909, a copy of which was enclosed in his despatch No. 531 of August 2, 1909,[3] which also enclosed the reply dated July 31, 1909, of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, giving the text of the President's decree commanding the chief of police to dismiss these men. Mr.

---

[1] Continued from For. Rel. 1909, pp. 472–494.

[2] For. Rel. 1909, pp. 472, 489.

[3] These numbers and dates are confused; see For. Rel. 1909, pp. 488–193.

Weitzel's despatch No. 536 of August 13, 1909,[1] enclosed a copy of a further note from the Minister for Foreign Affairs dated August 6, 1909, giving the text of a note from the chief of police stating that three of these men, including the two now reinstated, Paulino Macías and Abelardo Bustos, had been dismissed and that the other two had not belonged to the police for more than six months.

If the information which has been furnished to me by the Zone police, and which was secured by the same detective who originally investigated this matter, is correct, Abelardo Bustos must have been reinstated soon after his dismissal and Paulino Macías must have been reinstated about two years later.

In this connection, I have the honor to refer to my despatch No. 50 of the 9th instant,[1] in which I have mentioned the numerous changes which have been made in the Panaman police, especially during the last weeks, for political purposes. It is credibly reported that many of the new political appointees are men of very doubtful character, some of them, in fact, having extremely bad records.

I have [etc.]

H. Percival Dodge.

January 20, 1912.

P. S.—I reopen my despatch to add that I have just been informed by the Zone police authorities that the former policeman, who, as stated therein, had not then been located, Sergeant Indalecio Franco, has now been found to be again serving in the Panaman police at Bocas del Toro as Policeman No. 669. This man is one of the two who was stated in the note of August 6, 1909, of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, enclosed in Mr. Weitzel's despatch No. 536 of August 13, 1909, above referred to, not to have belonged to the Panaman police for more than six months.

The two men who have not been reinstated are former Lieutenant Emilio Lenares, who is a clerk in a hardware store in Panama, and Faustino Alvarado, who is a cab driver, also in Panama.

H. P. D.

File No. 319.112 R 15/127.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 34.]

Department of State,
Washington, February 19, 1912.

Sir: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your despatch No. 54, of the 18th ultimo, reporting that Paulino Macías and Abelardo Bustos, two of the policemen who were guilty of brutalities toward seamen of the U. S. S. Buffalo on September 28, 1908, and who, together with three others, were discharged from the National Police force of Panama on August 1, 1909, to satisfy the demands of this Government, have been reinstated in the Panaman police. You add that the reinstatement of Bustos must have occurred soon after his dismissal and that of Macías a few months ago.

The demands of this Government for the dismissal of these men contemplated, as it seemed hardly necessary to explain, not only the discharge of these policemen but also their permanent separation from the police force, and the Department is disagreeably surprised to learn that two of them have been reinstated.

---

[1] Not printed.

Although the Department believes it inadvisable to press this matter very urgently at the present time, you are instructed to lay before the Minister for Foreign Affairs the facts of the case, calling attention to the disagreeable impression the Department has received upon learning of the reinstatement of these men and stating that the Government can not be satified with less than the permanent separation from the Panaman police force of all the police officials involved in the Buffalo affair. You may add that this Government can not believe that the Government of Panama intends to depart from the attitude it adopted toward this matter at the time of its settlement and will accordingly not fail to cause Macías and Bustos to be promptly discharged and permanently barred from the Panaman police force.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 319.112 R 15/128.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 97.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Panama, March 23, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your instruction No. 34, of February 19th last, relative to [etc.]. According to your directions I laid the facts of this matter before Señor Chiari, Minister for Foreign Affairs, in the sense of your instruction, also handing to him an aide mémoire embodying the substance of my verbal communication. * * *

On the 13th instant I received a note dated the 12th instant, a copy and translation of which are enclosed. * * *

Señor Chiari has since informed me verbally that the policeman No. 667 serving at Bocas del Toro under the name of Balbino Palma has been ascertained to be Indalecio Franco and has accordingly also been dismissed. Señor Chiari further stated that to prevent any further reinstatement of these men, their photographs had been taken and sent to all the police stations in the Republic.

I have thought well to have Señor Chiari's statements confirmed by the Zone Police who now inform me that it is a fact that these three men have been dismissed and duly photographed. I have accordingly verbally stated to Señor Chiari my appreciation of his Government's disavowal and expressions of regret and of its prompt action.

I have [etc.]

H. PERCIVAL DODGE.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

No. 794.]

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Panama, March 12, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to refer to your excellency's memorandum of yesterday in regard to the appointment to the police of some of the individuals who took part in the Buffalo affair.

I have taken great pains to investigate the facts reported by your excellency and can inform you as follows:

Unfortunately it is true that Paulino Macías and Abelardo Bustos were serving in this city as policemen. From data which I have before me, furnished by the commander of the police, it appears that the said individuals were appointed by the ex-Commander Señor Leonidas Pretelt, on August 2, 1911, and November 11, 1909, respectively.

In compliance with instructions issued by His Excellency the President of the Republic, the individuals mentioned have been this day dismissed from the police and every proper means has been taken so that there may not be the slightest complaint on this account in the future.

In regard to Indalecio Franco, I take the liberty to inform your excellency that from the latest list of the personnel of the Bocas del Toro police which can be consulted, which is dated February 20 last, there is in that city no person by that name in the Government service. Your excellency states that Franco was reinstated as number 669 and this number corresponds to Policeman Balbino Palma. However, as it may be possible that he has been appointed since February 20, the commander of the police yesterday telegraphed to Bocas del Toro ordering his dismissal in case he has been reinstated.

The Government was in ignorance of and sincerely regrets what has happened, which can only be explained in the following manner:

In accordance with the decree organizing the police, it is the commander who appoints and dismisses all the policemen. Probably the chief of police at the time when Macías and Bustos were reinstated did not have in mind the circumstance that these individuals were dismissed from the police owing to their behavior in the affair referred to, since it is not credible that he could have intended to cause the least mortification to your excellency's Government.

With assurances [etc].

EDUARDO CHIARI.

File No. 319.112 R 15/128.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 6, 1912.

SIR: The Department is in receipt of your despatch No. 97, of March 23 last, in which you report regarding the case of Paulino Macías, Abelardo Bustos and Indalecio Franco who had been dismissed from the police force of Panama because of their connection with the Buffalo affair.

The Department is gratified to know of the prompt steps that were taken by the Panaman Government to rectify the error that had been made in restoring these men to positions on the police force of the Republic, and to find that the views expressed by the Department in its instruction No. 34, of the 19th of February last, are in entire accord with those held by the Panaman Government.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

PARAGUAY.

POLITICAL AFFAIRS—INSURRECTION OF FEBRUARY-MARCH, 1911; COUP D'ÉTAT OF JULY, 1911; VARIOUS INSURRECTIONS, NOVEMBER, 1911, to MAY, 1912; PRESIDENTIAL SUCCESSIONS OF GONDRA, JARA, ROJAS, PEÑA, NAVERO, AND SCHAERER.—RECOGNITION OF PRESIDENT SCHAERER BY THE UNITED STATES.

File No. 834.00/101.

The American Consul at Asuncion to the Secretary of State.

American Consulate,
Asuncion, April 17, 1911.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith my report dated April 13, 1911, on the insurrection in this country in February and March, 1911.

I have [etc.] Cornelius Ferris, Jr.

[Inclosure.—Extract.]

Report on the Insurrection in Paraguay in February and March, 1911.

Asuncion, Paraguay, April 13, 1911.

CIRCUMSTANCES LEADING UP TO THE OUTBREAK.

The insurrection which began in Paraguay on the 21st of February, 1911, was the culmination of political differences between the Provisional President, Colonel Albino Jara, and the leaders of the Liberal-Radical Party, namely, Manuel Gondra, Juan B. Gaona, Adolfo Riquelme and Eduardo Schaerer, the two last named being the most prominent leaders.

The Liberal-Radical Party came into power by a revolution in 1908, Colonel Jara being the effective agent to accomplish that result.

In November, 1910, Manuel Gondra was inaugurated President, having been duly elected under the constitution. Colonel Jara was appointed Minister of War and Marine, Adolfo Riquelme was appointed Minister of Interior. Juan B. Gaona was Vice President and President of the Senate. Eduardo Schaerer was to have been appointed Intendente of Asuncion. All of these offices were held by the same persons under the provisional government established by the revolution of 1908, except Manuel Gondra, who was Minister of Foreign Relations.

During the provisional government Colonel Jara had been the dominant personality. * * * When Mr. Gondra became President it was understood that Colonel Jara was to leave the country on some foreign mission, taking the portfolio of Minister of War until such mission should be decided upon. Whether he had acquiesced in that arrangement is not clear, but he persisted in holding the ministry of war, and upon that issue his relations with the rest of the ministry were strained to the breaking point.

A crisis was reached upon the question of the appointment of a chief of artillery. The Minister of War holding out against the President, the latter ordered his arrest, upon what technical charge I have not been able to ascertain. Colonel Jara took refuge in the artillery barracks, and on the 17th of January [1911] used that arm of the military service to obtain control of the police department. This placed at his disposal the 600 or 700 force of armed and drilled police of Asuncion. He then demanded the dismissal of Mr. Riquelme, the Minister of Interior. In order to save bloodshed the President and Vice President resigned.

Colonel Jara was elected Provisional President January 18 [1911] by the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, securing the attendance of a quorum of those bodies with the greatest difficulty. A ministry was appointed, and the Provisional President attempted to form a new party, but was not able to detach any of the leading men from their former political affiliations. Colonel Jara's position became continually more isolated, there being a succession of resignations of both civil and military officials, besides the arrest and deportation of many army officers. Congress made an effort to assert its authority by ordering inquiries into the deportation of army officers, and an investigation into the conduct of the ministry of war and marine when in charge of Colonel Jara. After that there were no more quorums of Congress.

INSURRECTION AND ITS SUPPRESSION.

On the 21st of February [1911] the disaffection came to a head in Concepcion, the second city in Paraguay, situated on the Paraguay River, about 132 miles north of Asuncion. News of this reached Asuncion February 23, when it was reported that the garrison at that place had revolted and was supported by the people of the city. On the same day news was received that an insurrection was gathering in the southeastern part of the country, northwest of the Paraná River, indefinitely and locally known as the "Misiones." Mr. Riquelme was at the head of the insurrection in Concepcion; Mr. Schaerer was somewhere in the south; Mr. Gondra had retired to a small place south of Asuncion; and Mr. Gaona was in Buenos Aires. * * * An expedition was organized to proceed against Concepcion. In fitting out this expedition three Argentine merchant vessels were seized. In resorting to this measure the Paraguayan Government asserted the right, under stress of circumstances endangering its existence, to avail itself of foreign vessels found in its ports. It admitted the right of the owners to compensation, but neither the terms nor the security of such compensation were settled at the time of the seizure. The Argentine Chargé d'Affaires protested, and was hindered from communicating with his Government, it being necessary for him to go to Formosa, the nearest Argentine port, to do so. Preparations continued for the expedition against Concepcion, but the insurrectos in the meantime were proceeding southward from Concepcion. * * * On the 3d of March the expedition for the north was to have made another start, but as it was about to leave, the orders were again countermanded. By that time the insurrectos from Concepcion had proceeded more than half way from Concepcion to Asuncion. March 7 a battle took place near Yuty, between a force of 2,000 Government troops and 800 insurrectos; the former being victorious. * * * March 8 three Argentine naval vessels arrived at Asuncion. On the 9th of March a small river naval vessel of Brazil, the Sampio, which had been stationed in the upper Paraguay River, arrived at Asuncion, escorting two Brazilian merchant vessels. The Pernambuco, a Brizilian monitor, has been in this port for several months, Asuncion being a naval station of Brazil. With these vessels came the information that about 25 miles north of Asuncion there was an insurrecto force of 16 boats, among them some Argentine vessels forced into service by the insurrectos.

At about this date it was reported that a force of insurrectos numbering one or two thousand men occupied the territory a few miles from Asuncion. To oppose this force the troops were hurried back from Yuty, and under the personal command of Colonel Jara the insurrectos were forced northward, up the river. The principal fighting took place March 12. On the following day Colonel Jara returned to Asuncion and started north by river with a force to cooperate with the Government troops on land. In a week the Government forces returned to Asuncion, having defeated the insurrectos, March 17. Mr. Riquelme was taken prisoner. Afterwards he was taken out and shot. Eleven other prisoners were disposed of in the same way. It is reported that all the wounded insurrectos left on the field were killed. I have made careful inquiry on this point and am satisfied that it is true. * * *

No information whatever had been published except what was favorable to the Government, whose policy was to make light of the insurrection. * * * The return of the expedition was considered as the end of the insurrection, but martial law was then declared for six months and troops were sent to the "Misiones" to prevent the gathering of insurrectos in that part of the Republic.

GENERAL EFFECTS.

Certain effects of the insurrection may be noted even at this early date. The three political parties of Paraguay are all out of office and, as far as there is any public opinion in the country, the bulk of the country population is hostile to the Government. No one considers the country at rest. At the opening of Congress on the first of April, an event always conducted with great formality, presided over by the President and attended by officers of state, representatives of foreign powers, and prominent citizens friendly to the Government, there were only ten members of Congress present, out of a total of about forty. There was also almost an entire absence of prominent Paraguayans.

Unlike revolutions in Argentina and Uruguay, all business stops when there is such a disturbance in Paraguay. Furthermore, on account of the condition of unrest now prevailing, orders for foreign goods are placed in Buenos Aires and Montevideo, where they may be small and quickly filled, instead of buying in more remote countries. Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay have considered it necessary to send nine war vessels here, besides three previously kept in these waters by Brazil. The Paraguayan navy consists of two old nondescript boats of small size; probably having been converted from their original purposes. Talk of guaranteeing the peace of this country by some outside power has become quite common among commercial classes of Asuncion. * * *

Although the Government means little to the mass of people but an agency for sending out recruiting and foraging parties, there is a loyalty for Paraguay among them which is almost fanatical. Reports that might tend to reflect unfavorably on their country are deeply resented. Even those who have suffered from the oppression of their leaders, or rather masters, are reluctant to give information of a bad state of affairs.

CORNELIUS FERRIS, JR.

File No. 834.00/105.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 40, Paraguay.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, July 6, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor of transmitting copy of a letter received today from Consul Ferris at Asuncion, giving the latest political events in Paraguay.

I have [etc.]

EDWIN V. MORGAN.

[Inclosure.—Extract.]

The American Consul at Asuncion to the American Minister to Uruguay.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Asuncion, July 1, 1911.

DEAR MR. MORGAN: It is not easy to give you a definite account of the political situation as it has developed within the last few days, as resignations and arrests are occurring faster than one can keep posted about them, and reports of all kinds are very numerous and uncertain. The feeling against the President [Jara] has steadily increased. He has alienated all the support which he had been able to draw to himself. * * * The streets are being patrolled to prevent people collecting. Orders have been issued by judicial officials against unauthorized acts ordered by the President, but there is no one to execute such judicial orders. * * * There is a complete deadlock between the President and Congress. * * * Practically the Government is falling to pieces. Everyone expects an outbreak here in the city at any moment. The President has the support of the army, but without officers. They are all disaffected. With such a state of disorganization the situation is desperate enough. The Argentine gunboat stationed here will probably prevent extreme disorder, but security from that source is counterbalanced by the attitude of Brazil. You may recall Mr. Duval's statement to me that his Government would expect an equal influence. They still have a monitor and cruiser in this port. I believe I wrote you that the Argentine commander had orders to close this port in case matters became very bad. The telegraph service can not be relied upon for quick communication. For six months past it has taken four days to send a message to Buenos Aires. La Prensa will probably keep you better posted than I can, though I shall do my best.

CORNELIUS FERRIS, JR.

File No. 884.00/104.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, July 8, 1911.

President Jara was arrested July 5, but newspapers assert that he arranged for this himself as the only way safely to leave the country. A provisional government will be formed.

TURNER.

File No. 884.00/107.

No. 41, Paraguay.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, July 20, 1911.

SIR: Referring to my cablegram on the subject of the overthrow of President Jara and the establishment of a provisional government in Paraguay, I have the honor to enclose copy of a letter from the consul at Asuncion, reporting a coup d'état which occurred in that place on the 14th inst.

The opinion of Consul Ferris that the men now in control of the Paraguayan Government have the support of the best interests of the country, is shared by the British Chargé d'Affaires at Asuncion, whose reports to his superior at Buenos Aires I have seen.

I have [etc.]

C. TURNER.

[Inclosure.]

The American Consul at Asuncion to the American Minister.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Asuncion, July 15, 1911.

DEAR MR. MORGAN: I have the honor to report that there has been an overthrow of the ministry in this country, by a coup d'état which occurred yesterday. I have not been able to learn the full details. The Minister of War, Cipriano Ibáñez, who was the principal actor in taking the former Provisional President prisoner, was himself locked up, and the present Provisional President formed a new cabinet in part. The only new ministers settled upon are Col. Chirife, Minister of War (his full name I do not know), and Dr. Geronimo Zubizarreta, Minister of Finance.

The controlling elements in this movement are of the Liberal-Radical Party, or Gondrists, having adhered to the President who was forced out of office by Col. Jara last January.

The object of the coup d'état yesterday was to prevent the return of Jara, which was understood to be the design of the parties who removed him and who remained in power.

Although the situation is not considered at rest, the men now in control have the support of the best interests in the community. I shall inform you further when the Ministry is completed.

CORNELIUS FERRIS, JR.

File No. 834.00/108.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 42, Paraguay.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, August 8, 1911.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose copy of a despatch received from the consul at Asuncion relative to the condition of affairs in Paraguay. As the Department will perceive, Consul Ferris does not venture to make any prediction regarding the turn which events may take in the future.

The newspapers of Montevideo and Buenos Aires usually contain telegrams from Asuncion, but the state of affairs in Paraguay appears so confused that, having no knowledge of that country at first hand, I do not feel competent to do otherwise than transmit the reports sent me by Consul Ferris without comment.

I have [etc.]

A. CAMPBELL TURNER.

[Inclosure.]

The American Consul at Asuncion to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Asuncion, August 2, 1911.

SIR: I have to report that on the 31st ultimo certain army officers attempted to coerce the Provisional President to complete the formation of a ministry favorable to the Liberal Party, and to reincorporate into the army certain officers who had taken part in the last revolution against the Government. The attempt did not succeed as planned, but just how it was frustrated I am not able to state. Troops were posted in the different parts of the city and the police force is concentrated in its headquarters. The situation is still unsettled.

An interesting feature of the situation is the action of the Argentine and Brazilian diplomatic representatives, who tendered their good offices to harmonize the diverse political elements, but who said that in case of fighting in the streets, forces would be landed from the naval vessels of those two countries to preserve order.

I have not sent this information by telegraph on account of the telegraphic service being so unreliable, and because political changes are so frequent that they seem to me not important enough to telegraph. Furthermore it is very difficult to obtain information that is definite and reliable.

Very respectfully yours,

CORNELIUS FERRIS.

File No. 834.00/107.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 6, Paraguay.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 24, 1911.

SIR: The Department acknowledges the receipt of your despatch No. 41 of the 20th ultimo, enclosing copy of a letter from the consul at Asuncion reporting that a coup d'état took place at Asuncion on July 14.

The information which has been furnished the Department on the subject of the governmental changes in Paraguay by the consul at Asuncion and the Legation is of a very insufficient character and does not even make clear who succeeded President Jara as Provisional President of Paraguay.

You are therefore instructed to obtain from the consul at Asuncion, for transmission to the Department, a full and detailed report upon the events that have taken place in Paraguay since the recent fall of President Jara, indicating as clearly as possible the various elements of which the several administrations have been composed.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 834.00/109.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, October 5, 1911.

The Congress confirmed Liberato Rojas as Provisional President for the entire new electoral term. The formality of an election was dispensed with. Dr. Carlos Isasi is Minister for Foreign Affairs.

GREVSTAD.

File No. 834.00/113.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Asuncion, November 7, 1911.

Critical situation, owing to return of Jara.

GREVSTAD.

File No. 834.00/115.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, November 23, 1911.

Another customary revolution is on, led by Gondra and Schaerer, who, in Europe, have secured two small vessels, rifles, artillery, ammunition. Jara is believed to be with the Government.

GREVSTAD.

File No. 834.00/120.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 6, Paraguay.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, November 24, 1911.

SIR: Confirming my cablegram of yesterday, I have the honor to report that Paraguay is now in the throes of another revolution.

As stated in cables from Asuncion, an uprising against the Government of President Liberato M. Rojas has been expected for several weeks, in fact ever since his introduction into office. * * * The only question was which party would get into the field against the administration first—the Liberals (Cívicos) or the Radicals (Colorados). * * *

During my stay in Asuncion, Colonel Jara, who was supposed to be on his way to Europe, suddenly turned up in the city. Nothing definite could be learned as to the real purpose of his sensational visit.

The prevailing opinion seemed to be that he came at the invitation of President Rojas. He kept in close seclusion during his stay in Asuncion, and his going, if he did go, was as secret as his coming.

As reported by my cable of yesterday, the uprising is now on. It is led by former President Manuel Gondra, Eduardo Schaerer and Dr. Jose R. Montero, all well-known Colorado leaders. Señor Gondra was thrown out of the presidency by Jara a few months ago. Schaerer, a native of German extraction, is the strong man of the triumvirate, and likely to be made president if the movement succeeds. * * *

Colonel Jara is still strong with the "army" of Paraguay. If he, as reported and believed in some quarters, has joined hands with President Rojas and has assumed, or should assume, command of the military forces of Paraguay, some blood may be shed before the issue is finally decided one way or the other. * * *

I have [etc.]

Nicolay A. Grevstad.

File No. 834.00/117.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Legation,
Montevideo, December 5, 1911.

Paraguayan Government charges Argentine support of revolution; Brazil and Uruguay in sympathy with the Government. Revolution apparently halted.

Grevstad.

File No. 834.00/118.

American Legation,
Montevideo, December 12, 1911.

At the request of the Diplomatic Corps, the Argentine and Brazilian naval commanders at Asuncion have forbidden revolutionist war vessels to shell the city and unfortified places. Brazil will send more war vessels.

Grevstad.

File No. 834.00/124.

No. 12, Paraguay.]

American Legation,
Montevideo, December 20, 1911.

Sir: Referring to your instructions, No. 6, to Mr. Turner, of August 24, 1911, I have the honor to enclose a statement showing the presidential succession in Paraguay from 1870 down to the present time. As will be seen, the record is marred by irregularities and violence. Since 1904 the country has been in a perpetual unrest, with a revolution either brewing or in full blast.

I have [etc.]

Nicolay A. Grevstad.

[Inclosure.]

List of Presidents of Paraguay, 1870–1911.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, December 20, 1911.

After the disastrous war against the triple alliance (Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay) in 1870, Paraguay was reorganized by a committee of leading citizens which assumed the powers of a constitutional convention. The constitution was framed and was promulgated on the 24th of November, 1870. This organic law has not been changed since, and is still in force, if not enforced. As in other South American republics, the president is elected by Congress, for a term of four years.

The record of the presidential succession from 1870 down to date is as follows:

(1) Don Cirilo Antonio Rivarola, who had acted as provisional executive during the greater part of the past two years, was elected the first constitutional president of the Republic upon the promulgation of the organic law in November, 1870, with Salvador Jovellanos as vice president. After about two years of service he was induced to resign, with the understanding that his resignation would not be accepted. However, it was accepted very promptly, and Rivarola had to leave the country to save his life. He was succeeded by the vice president,

(2) Salvador Jovellanos, who completed the presidential term.

(3) Juan Bautista Gill succeeded Jovellanos in 1874, but was assassinated in the streets of Asuncion in 1877 by one Nicanor, a brother of Juan Silvano Godoy, just returned from Rio Janeiro, where he had served as minister for a short time. The term was completed by the vice president,

(4) Higinio Uriarte, who served about a year.

(5) Cándido Bareiro succeeded Uriarte in November, 1878, and died a natural death within twelve months. The vice president was arrested and compelled to resign. About this time, the first president, Rivarola, returned from his exile, but was assassinated in the streets of the city in 1879, a few minutes after he had left the president's house.

(6) Juan Bernardino Caballero took the reins of government which he held until the term was completed.

(7) Juan Caballero was duly elected president for the ensuing term, and was succeeded by

(8) Juan Patricio Escobar in 1886. His successor was

(9) Juan G. González, who was elected in 1890, but was deposed after three years of service. His term was completed by vice president

(10) Marcus Moringo.

(11) Juan Bautista Egusquiza was elected president in November, 1894, and served out his term. He was succeeded in 1898 by

(12) Emilio Aceval, who did not complete his term. He was succeeded by the vice president,

(13) Hector Carvallo in the spring of 1902; in November, 1902,

(14) Col. Escuira was elected president but was deposed after two years, as a result of successful revolution headed by

(15) Dr. Benigno Ferreyra, who served four years as president.

From Gill to Escuira, a period of 30 years, the Colorado or Radical party was in power. Dr. Ferreyra and the Civicos, or so-called "Liberal" party, then took the reins of government. They were turned out after four years, however. In 1908 the Radicals started a revolution, which succeeded, and

(16) González Navero was elected president. He held office until 1910, when

(17) Manuel Gondra, Radical, was elected on November 25 of that year. He remained in power but a few months, until January 18, 1911, when he was forced to resign by

(18) Col. Albino Jara, a political adventurer, belonging to no party, who was elected by Congress to succeed Gondra. Within a couple of months a revolution was started to overthrow Jara. He was victorious in the field, yet he found his position untenable and was forced to resign in July of this year.

(19) Liberato M. Rojas was elected to succeed Jara. He is supposed to be a Cívico, but is by many held to be a Jarista, or follower of Jara.

During the last days of November, a revolution against Rojas broke out, headed by Manuel Gondra, Navero, and other Radicals, in combination with some leading men of the Cívico party.

NICOLAY A. GREVSTAD.

File No. 834.00/119.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Legation,
Montevideo, December 21, 1911.

Isasi resigns from Foreign Office, succeeded by Irala. Four Brazilian war vessels left Montevideo yesterday for Asuncion. Argentina also strengthens her fleet. Brazil for, Argentina against the Government.

Grevstad.

File No. 834.00/123.

American Legation,
Montevideo, January 15, 1912.

Government overthrown January 14; President Rojas, Cabinet and leaders arrested.

Grevstad.

File No. 834.00/133.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 26, Paraguay.]

American Legation,
Montevideo, March 8, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to report that the Provisional President of Paraguay, Liberato M. Rojas, was taken prisoner by two army officers, Garay and Goiburu (Colorados), on the night of February 28, and forced to resign. On February 29, the resignation was accepted by Congress, and Dr. Pedro Peña elected to succeed Rojas as Provisional President. Consul Ferris reports that the election was dictated by Garay, supported by twenty soldiers stationed in the Hall of Congress, and thirty more in other parts of the buiding. The new Cabinet is made up as follows:

Minister of Foreign Relations, Fulgencio R. Moreno.
Minister of the Interior. Dr. E. Lopez Moreira.
Minister of War and Marine, Major Eugenio Garay.
Minister of Treasury, Dr. Higinio Arbe.
Minister of Justice, etc., Dr. Rogelio Urizar.

All of them are Colorados, except the Ministers of Treasury and Justice, who are Cívicos.

In a note of March 1, the new Minister of Foreign Relations informs the Legation of the change of government, and adds that it will be his ernest desire to maintain and develop the friendly relations that happily exist between his country and "the noble nation of the United States."

* * * Colonel Jara has evacuated Humaitá, and is endeavoring to unite under his command several scattered detachments in the southern part of the country for a march upon Asuncion from the south and southeast. It looks like a race between the two old enemies, Gondra and Jara, for the capture of the capital. Whichever may win will probably have to face the other in open revolution.

Meanwhile, famine and starvation are threatening the people of the unfortunate city. Committees of prominent men and women have made efforts to bring about a peaceful solution of the unseemly struggle, but without success.

Lately, there have been suggestions, more or less official, of intervention by Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, to end the anarchy and the misery, but as far as known, nothing definite has been agreed upon thus far. * * *

I have [etc.]

Nicolay A. Grevstad.

File No. 834.00/129.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Legation,
Montevideo, March 25, 1912.

New provisional revolutionary President is Navero. Jara believed to be marching on Asuncion, now held by revolutionists.

Grevstad.

File No. 834.00/132.

American Legation,
Montevideo, April 2, 1912.

Diplomatic Corps recognize new provisional Government, except Brazilian Minister, awaiting instructions. I believe our Government should recognize the new Government.

Grevstad.

File No. 834.00/132.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, May 3, 1912.

The Department is withholding judgment in view of renewed political disturbances.

Wilson.

File No. 834.00/137.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Montevideo, May 17, 1912.

Jara died May 15.

Pennoyer.

File No.834.00/140.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 34, Paraguay.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, May 30, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a report of Consul Ferris, at Asuncion, Paraguay, dated May 13, regarding the political conditions in that country up to that date. * * *

The question of the choice of the presidential candidate, however, may lead to some difficulty; there are four names suggested, not counting that of the Provisional President, Señor Gonzales Navero. These four are: Señores Gondra, Schaerer, Franco and Velásquez. According to reports received from Buenos Aires, Gondra, who was president in 1910 and later overthrown by Jara, had refused the nomination, though it appears that were he to accept he might count upon more unanimous support than any other candidate. Señor Schaerer is the capitalists' candidate, and is fairly popular with the army and lower orders. Most of the intelligent elements of the people, however, oppose him. This is especially true of the university element. If Señor Gondra is not to accept, they have their own candidate in the person of Dr. Franco, of the law faculty, and a man of some ability. The fourth candidate suggested is Dr. Velásquez, a scientist of note in Paraguay, and a man who it seems has aroused no distinct antagonism among the voting elements. * * *

I have [etc.]

RICHARD E. PENNOYER.

[Inclosure.]

The American Consul at Asuncion to the American Chargé d'Affaires at Montevideo.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Asuncion, May 13, 1912.

DEAR MR. PENNOYER: I have to report that at 2 o'clock in the morning of the 11th instant Colonel Jara with his entire force consisting of 1,600 to 2,000 revolutionists attacked a force of about 4,000 Government troops at Paraguari. The revolutionists were completely defeated. According to information which I considered reliable in the main, about 900 were killed and died of wounds on both sides. Colonel Jara was mortally wounded and is either prisoner or dying at a house in the country where he had taken refuge. All of his leading officers but one or two were killed.

This brings to a definite conclusion the period of internal warfare which began in January, 1911, when Jara overthrew the Radical party then in power, by a coup d'etat. As before reported, that party returned to power March 22, last, when it gained a victory over the Colorado party, which had succeeded the Jaristas. Since that date the Provisional Government of the Radicals has been engaged in suppressing the Jara insurrection, with which the Cívico party had become identified. The elimination of Jara and the overthrow of the Colorados and Cívicos leaves the present Provisional Government in undisputed control of the whole country. I believe that the leaders of the party in power will act without conflicting ambitions and will maintain order in this country. The attention and energies of the people, whch have been entirely distracted for the past 18 months, can now be expected to follow commercial lines.

Yours very respectfully,

CORNELIUS FERRIS, JR.

File No. 834.00/141.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 36, Paraguay.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
Montevideo, July 26, 1912.

SIR: Complying with the Department's instruction No. 7, Paraguay Series, of June 3, 1912,[1] I have the honor of submitting the following report upon the internal condition of Paraguay.

The Legation finds itself limited in the getting of information. Such as is contained in the press telegrams is often contradictory and meagre of detail. On the whole, however, the situation has improved.

Señor Schaerer, noted in my despatch of May 30, 1912 (Paraguayan Series 34) as being among the presidential possibilities, has been unanimously chosen by the Electoral College as President, in spite of the supposed opposition to him of the more intelligent vote. (See despatch referred to). The Vice President chosen is Señor Pedro Bobadilla.

The action of the Electoral College has, it appears, been upheld in both these elections by the opinion in the Provinces, through which Señor Schaerer has recently made a long trip on which he was enthusiastically welcomed. * * *

Several of the late telegrams deal with the personnel of the new Government. The Cabinet officers are given as follows:

Interior: Señor José Montero.
Public Industries: Señor Paiva.
Finance: Señor Zubizarreta.
War: Señor Gondra.
Foreign Affairs: Señor Ayala.

The President of the Assembly is Dr. Haeda. [Other appointments.]

The new Paraguayan Chamber is to meet on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays and a bill of some importance, in view of one or two American claims which Mr. Ferris notifies me are now on file at the Consulate in Asuncion, has recently been introduced providing for the creation of a special commission to sit upon the claims of damages arising from the war.

* * * The most serious matter in Paraguay at the present moment appears to be the condition of the finances. The Minister of Finance announces a deficit of $22,000,000 paraguayan on the budgets of 1910, 1911, and the first quarter of 1912. This amount must be provided for in addition to a total of $5,000,000 for back salaries, an item which would seem to show that the internal peace of Paraguay is largely a question of finance.

I have [etc.]

RICHARD E. PENNOYER.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 834.001 Sch 1/1.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the Secretary of State.

No. 450.] MINISTRY OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Asunción, August 17, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to enclose, with the customary copy, the autograph letter from His Excellency the President of the Republic, Don Eduardo Schaerer, to His Excellency the President of the United States of North America, informing him of his inauguration.

I beg you to be good enough to have the letter reach its high destination, and

I am [etc.]

J. MONTERO.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The President of Paraguay to the President.

To His Excellency the President of the Republic of the United States of North America, General William Howard Taft.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: I have the honor to inform Your Excellency that, called by the free vote of my fellow citizens, I have this day assumed the Chief Magistracy of the Republic, before the Honorable Congress of the Nation, thus inaugurating the constitutional term of my Government.

In so informing Your Excellency I take pleasure in adding that one of the principal solicitudes of my Government will be to maintain and, if possible, draw closer, the cordial relations that happily unite the Republic of Paraguay to the Nation whose affairs are directed by Your Excellency.

I am glad to take this occasion to express to you my sincere desire for the prosperity of the North American Nation and for the personal happiness of Your Excellency, and at the same time I assure you of my highest consideration and particular esteem.

EDUARDO SCHAERER.

JOSÉ P. MONTERO.

ASUNCION, CAPITAL OF THE REPUBLIC OF PARAGUAY,
August 15, 1912.

File No. 834.001 Sch 1/1.

The Secretary of State to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 29, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 17th of August last, enclosing a letter, with office copy, addressed to the President of the United States by His Excellency Señor Don Eduardo Schaerer, announcing his elevation to the Chief Magistracy of Paraguay.

His Excellency's letter has been laid before the President, whose reply will be delivered to its high destination through the American Legation at Montevideo.

Accept [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 834.001 Sch 1/1.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 12 Paraguay.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 17, 1912.

SIR: I enclose with office copy a letter addressed by the President to His Excellency Eduardo Schaerer, acknowledging His Excellency's letter of August 15 last in which he announced his election to the Chief Magistracy of the Republic of Paraguay, and his entrance upon the duties of the office.

You will forward the copy to the Foreign Office and deliver the original in the manner most agreeable to His Excellency.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

[Inclosure.]

The President to the President of Paraguay.

To His Excellency, Eduardo Schaerer, President of the Republic of Paraguay.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: I have received the letter of the 15th of August last, in which Your Excellency announced your election to the Chief Magistracy of the Republic of Paraguay, and your entrance upon the duties of the office.

I cordially reciprocate the sentiments you express for the continuance of the friendly relations which have heretofore existed between the United States and Paraguay, and I assure Your Excellency of my best wishes for your personal welfare and for the prosperity of the Republic over which you have been called upon to preside.

Your Good Friend,

WM. H. TAFT.

By the President:
P. C. KNOX,
Secretary of State.
WASHINGTON, December 4, 1912.

PERU.

SETTLEMENT OF BOUNDARY DISPUTE BETWEEN BOLIVIA AND PERU.[1]

File No. 723.2415/172.

The Minister of Peru to the Acting Secretary of State.

PERUVIAN LEGATION,
Washington, May 8, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that a cable despatch from my Government, dated the 6th instant, advises the Legation that a protocol was signed at La Paz whereby the special commissions appointed to mark out the boundaries between Peru and Bolivia were empowered to establish the confines between the rivers Heath and Naverija. As the commissions have agreed upon the entire line of the said boundary, the frontier question between Peru and Bolivia is definitely settled; and this unfortunate cause of friction has been finally eliminated, in accordance with the policy of international peace and good will constantly pursued by my Government.

Accept [etc.]

F. A. PEZET.

File No. 723.2415/172.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Minister of Peru.

No. 4.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 13, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th instant communicating the gratifying information that a protocol was signed at La Paz whereby the special commissions to mark out the boundaries between Peru and Bolivia were empowered to establish the confines between the rivers Heath and Naverija, and that the commissions have already agreed upon the entire line of the said boundary.

The fact that the Governments of Peru and Bolivia have thus peacefully settled this difficulty, thereby removing a cause of friction between one another, and giving to the world a fresh proof of a cordial love of peace, is very gratifying to this Government.

Please be so good as to communicate to the President of Peru the congratulations of the President of the United States.

Accept [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

---

[1] See For. Rel., 1909, pp. 502–507.

SANITATION OF IQUITOS. EMPLOYMENT OF AMERICAN ENGINEERS; GOOD OFFICES OF THE UNITED STATES.

File No. 823.124/3.

The American Consul at Pará, Brazil, to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 146.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Pará, March 29, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit copy of an official communication[1] received from the President of the Commercial Association of Iquitos, Peru, advising that the Peruvian Government has authorized the issue of a loan for 200,000 pounds, Peruvian, the proceeds of which loan is to be employed in providing the city of Iquitos with a new and more modern system of sewerage. The city of Iquitos is estimated to have at the present time a population of about 7,000 persons and it is situated at the head of the Amazon River traffic, being some 2,100 miles from Pará, Brazil. It occupies a very important traffic position, being the base of supplies for an immense surrounding territory, the inhabitants of which depend upon outside sources for a very large portion of their supplies. The accompanying statements[1] will give a fair idea of the income of the central Government and movement of shipping at this port. Unfortunately my correspondent failed to give the name of the department of the supreme Government in Lima to which intending bidders should apply for more detailed and particular information, but I have no doubt that a communication to the consul at that place will secure what is wanted. I also note that he is not clear as to whether this loan is to be given out by the Peruvian Government or the authorities of the city of Iquitos.

I have [etc.]

GEO. H. PICKERELL.

File No. 823.124/2.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Lima, April 12, 1912.

I am asked by the President to request the Department to recommend some one to undertake the sanitation of Iquitos: a work kindred to that of Colonel Gorgas in the Canal Zone.

HOWARD.

File No. 823.124/2.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 18, 1912.

Although the Department will be glad to assist Peru in selecting a suitable expert, it desires to be able to assure the man recommended that he will be given such full authority as will permit him to make his work thorough and effective.

---

[1] Not printed.

KNOX.

File No. 823.124/4.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Lima, April 23, 1912.

Full power will be given the expert by means of a contract to continue until the work is finished.

HOWARD.

File No. 823.124/4.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Treasury.[1]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 24, 1912.

SIR: The Government of Peru has been authorized by the Congress of that country to contract a loan of 200,000 pounds for the sanitation of Iquitos. The Department is now informed by the American Minister at Lima that the President of Peru requests this Government to recommend a sanitation expert for the carrying out of this work. In reply to an inquiry as to the authority which will be given to such an expert the Minister telegraphs that the President of Peru will invest the expert with as full authority as the law authorizing this work will permit him to confer, and that the services of the expert will be contracted for until the completion of the work.

I therefore have the honor to request that you will be so good as to recommend, at your earliest convenience, with the advice of the Surgeon General of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, one or more men whom you believe to be well fitted for this important position. It is presumed that a knowledge of Spanish on the part of the person finally recommended will be required.

With the view to learning from the War Department of a possible candidate for this position, a similar letter is being sent to the Secretary of War.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 823.124/6.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Treasury.[1]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 4, 1912.

SIR: With reference to recent correspondence on the subject of an American sanitary expert for the sanitation of Iquitos, Peru, I have the honor to inform you that the Legation at Lima telegraphs under date of the 3d instant that the President of Peru confides in the good faith of any expert this Government might recommend as to the duration and terms of his employment, and that he authorizes the offer of a salary of seventy-five pounds sterling per month, or as much as one hundred pounds. The Legation adds that if this offer should be considered insufficient the President of Peru would consider a counter proposal.

---

[1] Mutatis mutandis, to the Secretary of War.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 823.124/10.

The Acting Secretary of the Treasury to the Secretary of State.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, May 18, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to refer to your letters of April 24 and May 4, 1912, relative to the request made by the President of Peru [etc.]

The Department is informed by the Surgeon General of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service that Acting Assistant Surgeon G. M. Converse of that Service is professionally qualified for this duty, speaks the Spanish language, and is available for the said duty. Dr. Converse is willing to accept the position on the following terms:

1. His traveling expenses to and from Iquitos to be paid by the Peruvian Government.
2. His traveling expenses while engaged in this sanitary work to be paid by the Peruvian Government.
3. His compensation to be 100 pounds sterling a month.
4. The tenure of office to be fixed at no less than two years.

In the event that the Peruvian Government decides to accept the services of the above-mentioned officer this Department will grant him the necessary leave of absence.

Respectfully,

J. CURTIS.

File No. 823.124/10.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 21, 1912.

[Summary of the foregoing letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury.]

Three civilians have been recommended also, but have not yet been consulted as to their willingness to undertake the work.

KNOX.

File No. 823.124/10.

The Secretary of State to the Secretary of War.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 21, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of your letter of the 15th instant,[1] in which you inform the Department that Colonel Gorgas has been consulted regarding an expert to take charge of the sanitation of Iquitos, Peru, and recommends as suitable either of the following: Mr. J. A. Le Prince; Dr. M. E. Connor; Dr. Charles A. Hearne.

---

[1] Not printed.

You add that each of these gentlemen has had much experience in tropical sanitation and can speak Spanish fluently but that you are not informed as to their willingness to accept the position in question

The Secretary of the Treasury has recommended very highly one of the assistant surgeons of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service who has indicated his willingness to accept the position offered by the Peruvian Government. The Department has accordingly telegraphed this recommendation to the Legation at Lima and has added that your Department has also recommended three civilians now engaged in sanitation work on the Isthmus of Panama but that none of these three has as yet been approached as to his willingness to accept the Iquitos position.

Should the Peruvian Government request that either of the three gentlemen named in your letter be approached on this subject I shall communicate with you again.

I have [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 823.124/11.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Lima, May 25, 1912.

The proposition of Acting Assistant Surgeon Converse has been accepted by the President. Papers will await him at Iquitos; it is desired that he proceed at once, via Amazon. Any remaining time after completion of Iquitos work will be employed elsewhere.

HOWARD.

File No. 823.124/11.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Treasury.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 27, 1912.

SIR: With reference to previous correspondence on the subject of a sanitation expert for Iquitos, I am glad to inform you that a telegram received from the American Minister at Lima states that the President accepts the proposition of Assistant Surgeon G. M. Converse, of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, adding that should the work at Iquitos be completed in less than two years the remaining time may be employed at some other point or points in Peru. The President of Peru desires Doctor Converse to proceed at once to Iquitos via the Amazon River and says he will find the necessary papers at Iquitos upon his arrival there.

In its telegram to the Minister at Lima the Department, after recommending Doctor Converse, said that he was willing to accept the position offered on the following terms: salary at one hundred pounds per month, term of office to be no less than two years, and traveling expenses to and from Iquitos and traveling expenses while engaged in this sanitary work to be paid by Peru. I insert this so that Doctor Converse may know what the President of Peru means when he says that he accepts the proposition and that if the work is completed in less than two years the remaining time may be employed elsewhere in Peru.

Please be so kind as to let me know when Doctor Converse will start and when he should arrive at Iquitos so that the Department may inform the Legation at Lima.

I have [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 823.124/17.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Lima, August 15, 1912.

The President asks that the Department recommend to serve under Doctor Converse an engineer who has specialized in public water supply and sewerage construction and has had responsible charge of such work. He is wanted to supervise the design and construction of works at Iquitos. Preferably member of American Society of Civil Engineers; must be scrupulously honest.

HOWARD.

File No. 823.124/17.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 19, 1912.

Department is consulting War Department and American Society of Civil Engineers.

ADEE.

File No. 823.124/32.

The Acting Secretary of State to Samuel E. Bayless.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 4, 1912.

SIR: The Department understanding that you would be glad to obtain a position as engineer under one of the South American Governments, sent in your name to the Government of Peru, which had requested the Department to recommend a sanitary engineer to design and carry out sewerage and water-supply works for the town of Iquitos, cooperating with Doctor George M. Converse, of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, who has gone to Iquitos to take charge of sanitating that place.

The Legation at Lima on September 24 telegraphed to the Department saying that the President of Peru had signed a letter directed to you employing you as engineer for that work, and specifying that your salary would begin upon your departure from this country direct for Iquitos.

The Department therefore telephoned to your office in the Maltby Building, and upon being informed that you were at the Hotel Bexar, San Antonio, Texas, sent you a telegram as follows:

SEPTEMBER 25, 1912.

SAMUEL E. BAYLESS,
Hotel Bexar, San Antonio, Texas.

Upon Department's recommendation President of Peru has signed letter to you employing you as engineer to conduct sewerage and water-supply works at once in city of Iquitos, Peru. Salary £100 sterling per month to begin on departure direct for Iquitos. Department understands you would accept this position, and, if so, hopes you will be able to start at once. Further details here or by mail to whatever address you direct.

HUNTINGTON WILSON,
Acting Secretary of State.

According to the telegraph company there was some difficulty in delivering this telegram to you, but the Department was notified on September 28 that it had been delivered.

The department has received no reply from you and accordingly has telegraphed to you at the Hotel Bexar, San Antonio, to-day the following:

Please reply to Department's telegram of September 25, which telegraph company states was delivered.

There has already been considerable delay in this matter and it is incumbent upon the Department to arrange definitely for an engineer to go to Iquitos at once to assist Dr. Converse. Unless a reply is received from you within a reasonable time the Department will be forced to advice the Government of Peru accordingly and to recommend some other engineer in your stead.

As the Department would greatly regret such a step the favor of a reply is urgently requested.

I am [etc.]

(For Mr. Wilson),
ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 823.124/42.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 1, 1912.

SIR: I have to enclose herewith, for transmission to the President of Peru, the letter of acceptance of Mr. Bayless.

Mr. Bayless informs the Department that a Mr. Keegan, one of the assistants in the Health Department of the city of Richmond, Virginia, has agreed to join him at Iquitos, sailing on November 15, and Mr. Keegan's letter of acceptance will be forwarded later.

I am [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

Mr. Bayless to the President of Peru.

WASHINGTON, October 29, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of the courteous note of September 23, 1912, from His Excellency Señor A. B. Leguia, ex-President of the Republic, in which His Excellency is good enough to appoint me, jointly with Doctor George M. Converse, engineer for the sanitation of the city of Iquitos, Peru.

I am glad to inform you that I accept the position and that I shall leave New York for Iquitos on November fifth.

Very respectfully,

SAMUEL E. BAYLESS.

RUSSIA.

EXTENSION BY RUSSIA OF THE THREE-MILE LIMIT OF TERRITORIAL WATERS TO TWELVE MILES FOR CUSTOMS PURPOSES AND CONTROL OF FISHERIES.

File No. 861.0145.

The Russian Embassy to the Department of State.

[Memorandum.]

The British Government contend that a law recently promulgated in Russia and subjecting to the Russian customs regulations the waters of the sea within 12 nautical miles from the Russian shores, is contrary to the principles of international law.

Sections 2760, 2867 and 3067 of the Revised Statutes of the United States provide for a zone of 4 leagues (equal to 12 miles) within which the authority of the United States customs officers is exercised.

In view of the above-stated contention of the British Government, the Imperial Russian Foreign Office is anxious to learn whether the British Government have ever protested against the enactment of the American law, either when it was originally passed or at a later date, and what was the nature of the reply offered by the United States to such a protest.

IMPERIAL RUSSIAN EMBASSY,
Washington, April 12, 1910.

File No. 861.0145.

The Department of State to the Russian Embassy.

[Memorandum.]

Referring to the inquiry contained in the memorandum of the Russian Embassy of the 12th instant, in connection with the subject of the Russian law assuming, for customs purposes, a jurisdiction of twelve nautical miles from the coasts, it may be stated that there is no record of any protest having been made at any time by Great Britain against the enactment of sections 2760, 2867 and 3067 of the Revised Statutes of the United States providing for a zone of four leagues from the coast within which the authority of the United States customs officers is exercised.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 18, 1910.

File No. 861.0145/2.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 363.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, September 30, 1910.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy and translation of a law approved by the Emperor December 10/23, 1909, and promulgated January 1/14 last, whereby the area of supervision by the Russian customs authorities is extended to twelve marine miles from low-water mark.

I learn from the British Embassy that shortly after the promulgation of this law, the British Government gave notice that with reference to this question it reserved the rights of its subjects as fixed by international usage. The Russian Government replied that, in the absence of treaty provisions to the contrary, the determination of the limits to which customs supervision could be extended was a question not of international usage but of domestic regulation; and it instanced similar enactments of other Powers, including the United States (presumably referring to section 2760 of the Revised Statutes, quoted in Moore's Digest, I, 725, § 151); and it asked for a more precise statement of the rights which the British Government had declared its intention of reserving. The British Government thereupon expressed its unwillingness to acquiesce under any circumstances in a claim to jurisdiction over marginal seas beyond the generally recognized three-mile limit. To this expression of views the Russian Government has not yet replied.

I am informed from the same source that, notwithstanding some misleading comment published at the time, the recent seizure of the British steamer Onward (as to which a Russian official communiqué was transmitted in this Embassy's No. 277 of July 20 last) did not involve the question raised by this law: the Onward was seized on the charge of fishing within Russian territorial waters; but she was voluntarily released by the Russian Government upon its appearing that when arrested she was, though perhaps within twelve miles of a line from headland to headland of the White Sea, at a distance of more than twelve miles from the shore. The case is therefore of no significance as indicating the intention of the Russian Government to insist upon the extension of its territorial control over the marginal seas, whether for customs purposes only, or for other jurisdictional purposes.

One of the Secretaries of the Japanese Embassy has recently made inquiry of this Embassy as to the attitude of the Department of State on this question. While careful not to make any specific statement, he gave the impression that his Government is endeavoring to learn the attitude of the other Powers with a view to remonstrating against the Russian claim if it finds that it may rely upon support in such a protest.

I am informed by the German Embassy that its Government has not made any remonstrance in this matter; whether it intends to do so I have not yet been able to learn.

I have therefore the honor to request that the Department instruct me what action, if any, it desires me to take in regard to this question.

I have [etc.]

W. W. Rockhill.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

Law extending the Maritime Customs area.

Law approved by the Council of Empire and by the Imperial Duma, and supremely confirmed, concerning the extension of the maritime customs area.

To interpret in the following manner the fourth paragraph of the supplement to paragraph 2 of the Customs Regulations (Collection of Laws, volume VI, Edition of 1904):

1. The surface of the water for twelve marine miles from extreme low-water mark from the seacoasts of the Russian Empire, whether mainland or islands, is recognized as the Marine Customs area, within the limits of which every vessel, whether Russian or foreign, is subject to supervision by those Russian authorities in whose charge is the guarding of the frontiers of the Empire.

The President of the Council of Empire,
M. AKIMOFF.

So be it.[1]

At LIVADIA
December 10[2], 1909.

Countersigned: Imperial Secretary,
MAKAROFF.

File No. 861.0145/2.

Memorandum of the Solicitor's office of the Department of State.

[Memorandum.]

OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 28, 1910.

MUNICIPAL SEIZURES BEYOND THE THREE-MILE LIMIT.

The American Ambassador at St. Petersburg reports that the Emperor has approved a law promulgated January 1/14, 1910, whereby the area of supervision by Russian customs authorities has been extended twelve marine miles from low-water mark. Inasmuch as enforcement of this law may lead to seizures of American vessels beyond the ordinary limit of territorial waters, it is necessary to examine the question whether such seizures would be consistent with rules of international law.

The British "Hovering Act" of 1734 assumed for certain revenue purposes a jurisdiction of four leagues from the coast by prohibiting foreign goods from being transshipped within that distance without payment of duties. Boyd says this act has long since been repealed and the present legislation distinguishes as to extent of jurisdiction claimed for revenue purposes between British ships and foreign ships. There is no longer any authority under British law to visit foreign vessels beyond the three-mile limit. (Boyd's Wheaton, 241). Hall, however, states that within 4 leagues any customs officer may board and demand the manifest of any ship. (Hall, For. Juris. 243.)

The United States in 1797 passed a similar law (probably suggested by the British Act) which has been incorporated in Revised Statutes, section 2760, which reads as follows:

> They [officers of the revenue cutters] shall go on board all vessels which arrive within the United States or within four leagues of the coast thereof, if bound for the United States, and search and examine the same, and every part

---

[1] "So be it" on the original is written in His Imperial Majesty's own hand. (Note by the Minister.)

[2] December 23, 1909, new style.

thereof, and shall demand, receive, and certify the manifests required to be on board certain vessels, shall affix and put proper fastenings on the hatches and other communications with hold of any vessel, and shall remain on board such vessel until they arrive at the port or place of their destination.

The fact that the territorial limits have been in some cases fixed by treaty (for example, Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, 1848, Art. V), or changes suggested by that method (1 Moore, 732), would seem to show how definite and fixed nations regard the three-mile limit of territorial waters. The question of municipal seizure on high seas appears to be left open by the conventions of The Hague Conferences and the London Naval Conference. As indicating the attitude of the political department of the American Government, the following expressions of Secretaries of State may be given:

Mr. Fish, Secretary of State, wrote to the British Minister in 1875, in regard to the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and the act of Congress on revenue seizures, that:

> We have always understood and asserted that, pursuant to public law, no nation can rightfully claim jurisdiction at sea beyond a marine league from its coast. * * *
>
> It is believed, however, that in carrying into effect the authority conferred by the act of Congress referred to, no vessel is boarded, if boarded at all, except such a one as, upon being hailed, may have answered that she was bound to a port of the United States. At all events, although the act of Congress was passed in the infancy of this Government, there is no known instance of any complaint on the part of a foreign Government of the trespass by a commander of a revenue cutter upon the rights of its flag under the law of nations. (1 Moore, 731.)

In 1879, Secretary of State Evarts instructed Mr. Foster, American Minister to Mexico, that—

> An attack by Mexican officials on merchant vessels of the United States, when distant more than three miles from the Mexican coast, on the ground of breach of revenue laws, is an international offense, which is not cured by a decree in favor of the assailants, collusively or corruptly maintained in a Mexican court. (1 Moore, 731.)

Secretary of State Evarts in 1881, writing to the Minister to Spain concerning the visitation and firing upon four American vessels near the Island of Cuba in 1880, said:

> This Government must adhere to the three-mile rule as the jurisdictional limit, and the cases of visitation without that line seem not to be excused or excusable under that rule.
>
> This Government frankly and fully accepts the disclaimer of the Government of His Majesty that any intention of discourtesy existed in these proceedings. It insists, however, on the importance of a clear understanding of the jurisdictional limit. It insists, likewise, on the distinction between the verification (according to the usual procedure of revenue cruisers), within a reasonable range of approach of vessels seeking Spanish ports in the due pursuit of trade therewith, and the arrest by armed force, without the jurisdictional three-mile limit, of vessels not bound to Spanish ports. (1 Moore, 732.)

The validity of seizures under the above and similar municipal acts has been the subject of comment by various writers on international law. Mr. Dana in his notes to his edition of Wheaton says:

> Doubtless States have made laws for revenue purposes touching acts done beyond territorial waters, but it will not be found that, in later times, the right to make seizures beyond such waters has been insisted upon against the remonstrance of foreign States, or that a clear and unequivocal judicial precedent now stands sustaining such seizures when the question of jurisdiction has been presented.

He criticises the statute of the United States, which, he says—

> does not authorize a seizure of a foreign vessel when beyond the territorial jurisdiction. The statute may well be construed to mean only that a foreign vessel, coming to an American port, and there seized for a violation of revenue regulations committed out of the jurisdiction of the United States, may be confiscated; but that, to complete the forfeiture, it is essential that the vessel shall be bound to and shall come within the territory of the United States after the prohibited act. The act done beyond the jurisdiction is assumed to be part of an attempt to violate the revenue laws within the jurisdiction. * * * If the foreign vessels have been boarded and seized on the high seas, and have been adjudged guilty, and their Governments have not objected, it is probably either because they were not appealed to or have acquiesced in the particular instance from motives of comity.

After reviewing the cases Church v. Hubbart, 2 Cranch, 187 and 234; Rose v. Himely, 4 Cranch, 241; Hudson v. Guestier, 4 Cranch, 293, 6 Cranch, 281; The Louis, 2 Dods. 245, Dana concludes:

> It may be said that the principle is settled that municipal seizures can not be made for any purpose beyond territorial waters, that is, beyond the marine league.

These and other cases will be briefly reviewed:

Church v. Hubbart (1804), 2 Cranch, 187, appears to be the earliest American case. The plaintiff took out two policies of insurance on the cargo of the Aurora, bound on a voyage from New York to Portuguese ports in Brazil. In one policy was the exception "not liable for seizure by Portuguese for illicit trade," and in the other, "insurers do not take risk of illicit trade with the Portuguese." The Aurora cleared from New York for the Cape of Good Hope, but went directly to Rio de Janeiro, where she remained fifteen days, and openly sold $700 worth of goods. Thence she went to Pará on the Brazilian coast, falling in on the way with a schooner. Both anchored four or five leagues from land, off the mouth of the Pará river, and in Pará bay. A longboat was put off to speak a boat inshore for the purpose of securing a pilot to carry the two vessels up the river, in order that they might get wood and water, and, if permitted, sell their cargo. Shortly afterward the captain went aboard the schooner and sailed in towards the shore, and brought to, by two shots, a Portuguese schooner and compelled her master to come aboard, but he was later taken ashore in a longboat. The crew of this boat were imprisoned upon shore, and two days later three armed boats came out from Pará and seized the Aurora and her companion and imprisoned the crews for attempting to trade in violation of the Portuguese laws prohibiting foreigners from trading with Portuguese colonists. These laws do not state any certain distance from shore within which they apply. Action was brought by the plaintiff to recover on the policy of insurance for the loss of his cargo. Held that no recovery was due because of the exception expressed in the policies, and, it would seem, because the application of the Portuguese law beyond the three-mile limit is not contrary to international law. The court admitted that illicit trade was such only as was contrary to some law. Chief Justice Marshall in delivering his opinion said:

> * * * A nation has a right to prohibit any commerce with its colonies. Any attempt to violate the laws made to protect this right is an injury to itself which it may prevent, and it has a right to use the means necessary for its prevention. These means do not appear to be limited within any certain marked boundaries, which remain the same at all times and in all situations. If they > are such as unnecessarily to vex and harass foreign lawful commerce, foreign nations will resist their exercise. If they are such as are reasonable and necessary to secure their laws from violation, they will be submitted to.

>
> In different seas and on different coasts a wider or more contracted range in which to exercise the vigilance of the government will be assented to (2 Cranch, 234).

Of this decision Mr. Dana said:

> It is true that Chief Justice Marshall (in Church v. Hubbart) admitted the right of a nation to secure itself against intended violations of its laws by seizures made within reasonable limits, as to which, he said, nations must exercise comity and concession, and the exact extent of which was not settled; and in the case before the court the four leagues were not treated as rendering the seizure illegal. This remark must now be treated as an unwarranted admission. The result of the decision is that the court did not undertake to pronounce judicially, in a suit on a private contract, that a seizure of an American vessel, made at four leagues by a foreign power, was void and a mere trespass.

Rose v. Himely, 4 Cranch, 241, was the case of the American ship Sarah, which after trading at several ports of Santo Domingo sailed with a cargo purchased there for the United States. At ten leagues from the Santo Domingo coast she was seized by a French privateer (February 23, 1804) and taken to Barracoa, a Spanish port in Cuba. There she and her cargo were sold by the captors (March 18, 1804) before condemnation, but under the authority of the French "Agent of Santo Domingo," and the greater part of the cargo was bought by the master of an American vessel, transshipped, and taken to Charleston, South Carolina. The plaintiff, Rose, supercargo of Sarah, libeled the cargo in the United States on behalf of the original owner. After sufficient time had elapsed to have heard of these libel proceedings, the French captors began proceedings in the Santo Domingo court, which entered a decree of condemnation (about July 15, 1804), on the ground of trading with Santo Domingo contrary to an arret of March 1, 1804, forbidding trade with Santo Domingo ports, except the port of Santo Domingo, and providing for the seizure of "generally every vessel * * * found at a less distance than two leagues from the coast." Held, restoration to Rose (that is, decision of Santo Domingo court reversed) by opinion of five judges: two judges, including Chief Justice Marshall, on the ground that it was a seizure under a municipal law, which has effect only within the territory of the sovereign, and not on the high seas as in war; hence possession thus gained by the captor is unlawful, and is therefore possession by the captor alone, and not by the sovereign, and such illegal possession by the captor confers no jurisdiction on the court of the sovereign in Santo Domingo to condemn the property lying in another country; three judges, on the ground that the vessel, crew and supercargo never having been brought within the jurisdiction of the Santo Domingo court or the dominion of the sovereign, that court never had jurisdiction and its sentence is to be disregarded. Two justices dissented. No point is made in the decision of the fact that the arret was issued after the date of seizure, and no mention appears to be made either in the argument or opinion of the case of Church v. Hubbart, supra.

Hudson v. Guestier, 1808, 4 Cranch, 293, was similar to the case of Rose v Himely, except that the seizure of the vessel Sea Flower was made within the territorial jurisdiction of Santo Domingo and carried into a Spanish port of Cuba. While lying there, proceedings were regularly begun in the French court at Guadaloupe, which condemned both cargo and vessel. Held by a majority of the judges, including Chief Justice Marshall, that the decision of the circuit court below for the plaintiff should be reversed (that is, no restoration for the claimant, and the decision of the Guadaloupe court upheld) on the ground that the seizure being made within territorial jurisdiction was indisputably a valid seizure and vested lawful possession in the sovereign (not in the captor, as in Rose v. Himely), and on the ground that while the sovereign has possession of the res the sentence of his court can be executed; hence this possession is an essential fact on which the jurisdiction of the court depends. The court added that while the sovereign has possession the courts of the country where the res is taken have no authority to decide the cause or divest the authority of the sovereign's courts, at least unless there be such delay in proceeding to condemnation as to justify the opinion that no such proceedings were intended, and thus convert a seizure into a trespass. Two judges dissented from this opinion on the ground that the vessel must be brought into a port of the captor's court before the court of that country had jurisdiction.

The same case came before the United States Supreme Court again (6 Cranch, 281) after a new trial in the lower court, and the question was thus stated in the words of J. Livingston delivering the opinion:

> Considering it, then, as settled that the French tribunal had jurisdiction of property seized under a municipal regulation, within the territorial jurisdiction of the Government of Santo Domingo, it only remains for me to say whether it will make any difference if, as now appears to have been the case, the vessel were taken on the high seas, or more than two leagues from the coast.

Held by the majority of the judges that the decision of the circuit court for defendant be affirmed (that is, no restitution to the claimant, and the decision of the Guadaloupe court upheld), on the ground that the sovereign acquired lawful possession through the seizure by the captor though made on the high seas, or in the words of the court:

> If the res can be proceeded against when not in the possession or under the control of the court (as decided in Hudson v. Guestier, 4 Cranch, 293), I am not able to perceive how it can be material whether the capture were made within or beyond the jurisdictional limits of France, or in the exercise of a belligerent or municipal right. By a seizure on the high seas she interfered with the jurisdiction of no other nation, the authority of each being there concurrent. It would seem also that if jurisdiction be at all permitted where the thing is elsewhere, the court exercising it must necessarily decide, and that ultimately, or subject only to the review of a superior tribunal of its own state, whether in the particular case she had jurisdiction, if any objection be made to it. * * * Even if the reasons of his judgment (judge of Guadaloupe court) should not appear satisfactory, it would be no reason for a foreign court to review his proceedings, or not to consider his sentence as conclusive on the property. (6 Cranch, 284–285.)

One judge, Chief Justice Marshall, dissented, it would seem, on the ground that the sovereign had no lawful possession because the ship was taken on the high seas. He observed:

> that he had supposed that the former opinion delivered in these cases upon this point (Rose v. Himely) had been concurred in by four judges, but in this he was mistaken.

The opinion was concurred in by one judge. He was still of the opinion that the construction then given was correct. * * *
However, the principle of that case (Rose v. Himely) is now overruled.

In the face of this statement of Chief Justice Marshall, Dana says, "the judges differed in stating the principle of this case and of Rose v. Himely, and the report leaves the difference somewhat obscure."

Williams v. Armroyd, 1813, 7 Cranch, 423. The schooner Fortitude, owned by the plaintiff, an American citizen, while on a trading voyage from New London, Connecticut, to Martinico, a British colony, during the war between France and England was seized on high seas by a French privateer for trading with the enemy contrary to the French decree (Milan decree) and taken to St. Martins (French) to await trial. Later the prize master left St. Martins for Guadaloupe with the ship's papers on the pretense of beginning proceedings. Two weeks later she and her cargo were sold by order of the Governor of St. Martins. Part of the cargo was then transshipped and taken to Philadelphia, consigned to the defendant. Three weeks after the sale the Guadaloupe court condemned both ship and cargo for trading contrary to the Milan decree. The plaintiff libeled the Governor upon arrival in the United States. Held, no restoration, on the ground that the sentence of a competent court in rem is conclusive and passes an absolute change of property. No court of coordinate jurisdiction (as a court of another country) can examine the sentence, consequently its conformity to public or municipal law cannot be inquired into by such court. Hudson v. Guestier, it was said, fully established this principle.

It was contended that the sentence of the Guadaloupe court did not change the property because: (1) The sale was made before the decree of the court, and thus possession passed over to the purchaser, but the court held that the purchaser held possession through and for the captor, and the sentence reverted back to time of capture and affirmed it. (2) Because the Milan decree was contrary to international law, but the court held that it cannot revise the sentence under the decree, even if erroneous or if Congress had said without more that the decree was a violation of international law. The conclusion of the court seemed to be that the sentence of the Guadaloupe court bound the property concerned, whatever might be the opinion of coordinate courts as to the sentence or as to the laws under which it was rendered.

Le Louis, 1817, 2 Dods., 210. This was a French-owned ship with a French register pass, etc., on a voyage from Martinique to Africa, which was captured ten or twelve leagues off of Cape Mesurada, Africa, by a British cutter for carrying on slave trade. The crew resisted capture, some sailors on both sides being killed. An act of the British Parliament enabled the governors of colonies to authorize ships to seize and prosecute vessels engaged in the slave trade or found on or near the coast of Africa and within the limits of any of the colonies. (51 George 3 C., 23.) The captor took the vessel to Sierra Leone, where the admiralty court condemned both vessel and cargo. Held (Sir William Scott), restoration, on the ground that there was no law of France forbidding slave trade at the time of the capture; that the treaty between England and France did not forbid it; that the British statute of 51 George 3 applied only to British ships and British subjects, for a nation has a right to enforce its laws only so far as it does not interfere with the rights of others; that if there was a French law it could not be enforced by England without a treaty; and that slave trading is not a crime under international law. The court assumed the fact of resistance and of jurisdiction of the lower court, though neither was perfectly shown, and also assumed that the ship had a "contingent intention" to trade in slaves, as she had on board manacles, platforms, large quantities of stores, etc.

Dana, however, says "the arrest was held unjustifiable because made in time of peace for a violation of municipal law beyond territorial waters."

In re Cooper, 1891, 143 U. S. 473. The British schooner Sayward while sealing in the Behring Sea, seventeen miles from land, was seized by an American revenue cutter and taken to Sitka, Alaska, and libeled and condemned for the violation of Revised Statutes 1956, which prohibited killing seals within the limits of Alaskan territory. The 477 sealskins on board were also condemned. The answer of the claimants before the lower court denied that the ship was sealing within Alaskan territorial waters, and the case came before the United States Supreme Court on an application for a writ of prohibition to restrain the United States Supreme Court in Alaska from enforcing its decree of forfeiture and condemnation. Held, application refused on the ground that the courts are bound by the action of Congress or the Executive within the limits of the Constitution or laws; that the courts are given jurisdiction by Revised Statutes 1954, 1956, 734, and 563, section 3 of the act of March 2, 1889 (25 Stats. 1009), and the treaty with Russia of 1867; that from the record of the lower court it does not appear that the seizure was made outside of the three-mile limit, so the legal inference is that it was made within the limit; that the master raised no question of jurisdiction in the lower court; and that, inasmuch as the lower court had power to inquire into its jurisdiction, its maintenance of same involved the conclusion necessary to sustain it. Hence upon the face of the libel, the facts found below, and the final decree, the district court clearly had jurisdiction. The petitioner had a remedy by appeal from that decree which is rendered of no effect because of his neglect to have included in the findings the exact locality of the seizure.

The Sylvia Handy, 1891, 143 U. S. 513. This was a case of libel in the United States district court in Alaska against this ship for sealing in the Behring Sea in violation of Revised Statutes, section 1956, for which she was seized by a United States revenue cutter. The district court decreed forfeiture of ship, tackle, etc., and 1,679 sealskins on board. Motion in arrest of judgment was overruled, and an appeal taken to the United States Supreme Court. Held, the decree of the district court affirmed on the ground of in re Cooper (143 U. S. 472).

I do not find that this case came before the Behring Sea Claims Commission, but the case of the Sayward was presented to that commission. The Paris tribunal of arbitration which sat under the treaty of 1892 between the United States and Great Britain, held in effect that the United States had no jurisdiction in the Behring Sea beyond the ordinary three-mile limit, and had no right to protection of property in the fur seals frequenting the islands of the United States in the Behring Sea when such seals are found outside the three-mile limit. With the point of jurisdiction thus decided the question of the damages for seizures of British sealing vessels was decided by another commission under the treaty of 1896. This commission awarded the amount of compensation to be paid to Great Britain on behalf of the owners, master, officers and crew of the Sayward, at a total of $20,262.

To summarize the above cases, it may be said that in Church v. Hubbart, Chief Justice Marshall in effect held that the facts made out a case of illicit trade within the exception in the policy, so that there could be no recovery for loss of ship resulting from such illicit trade. This, however, is quite a different thing from saying that the seizure of the ship was legal or illegal. The trade may have been illegal whether the seizure was legal or illegal. The exceptions in the policy do not qualify the word "seizure." If the trade was illicit, it does not appear whether it was illicit from what was done beyond or within the three-mile limit, hence it is difficult to see how this case either upholds or denounces municipal seizure beyond the three-mile limit. The case of Rose v. Himely is not a strong one as the grounds of the decision were not concurred in by a majority of the judges. Hudson v. Guestier, decided on the same day as Rose v. Himely, is not in point, for then the seizure was considered as made within territorial waters. When this case came up again, however, the seizure was considered as made upon the high seas, and the court held that the jurisdiction of the Guadaloupe court was not affected by seizure on the high seas, and that, anyway, the Guadaloupe court was the one to determine its own jurisdiction and may have done so in this case, and its decision could not be reviewed by a coordinate court. But to hold that a court has jurisdiction of a case is not to hold that the decision of such court as to the legality of the seizure is correct. (See Dana's similar conclusions.) This view of the United States Supreme Court is significant, however, in showing how foreign judgments in cases of municipal seizures on the high seas are considered when the foreign court has jurisdiction and acts fairly. In Williams v. Armroyd, the court practically followed Hudson v. Guestier, and held that the sentence of a competent foreign court in rem is conclusive. The case of Le Louis is a case in point, being a seizure on the high seas for a supposed violation of a British law, but Sir William Scott held that the British law applied only to British ships, and British subjects, and for this and other reasons restored the French ship. The cases in re Cooper and Sylvia Handy are also cases in point where the United States District Court in Alaska condemned British vessels for violation of municipal law on the high seas. This court and the Supreme Court were bound by the municipal law as would have been Sir William Scott in Le Louis had the offender been a British subject. (See Regina v. Heyn, 13 Cox C. C. 403; Conception Bay case, 2 App. Cas. 394.) The decision of the Arbitral Tribunals, however, reversed in effect the cases of in re Cooper and Sylvia Handy, and no doubt many others which never got to the United States Supreme Court. The case of Marianna Flora, 11 Wheat. 1, has not been mentioned, as it was later considered in Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 1, as a case of seizure jure belli.

Thus it would seem that the question whether municipal seizures beyond the three-mile limit are legal has been decided affirmatively by the municipal courts, bound by municipal law, and negatively by international tribunals governed by international law. This last was the general view contended for by Chief Justice Marshall in the earlier cases above reviewed.

L. H. W. [WOOLSEY].

NOTE.—In the North Atlantic Coast Fisheries Arbitration, Great Britain did not contend that she had jurisdiction beyond the three-mile limit outside of "bays." This is shown on page 25 of the British countercase where it is stated that the action of the British brig Jaseur, in seizing an American vessel on the high seas, "could not be justified." Great Britain contended, however, that she had jurisdiction in bays beyond the three-mile limit, and that seizures made in such bays, but beyond three miles from the shore, were legal, not because they were made on the high seas for violation of the municipal law, but because they were made in territorial waters for violation of treaty rights. Mr. Cartwright states that inasmuch as the United States wished to show that Great Britain had not asserted jurisdiction in bays beyond the three-mile limit, seizures in such localities were not exhaustively treated in the United States case.

The main cases, however, cited by either country are three in number.

The Bay of Fundy case was a seizure of the American vessel Washington, 10 miles from the shore of the bay, for fishing in violation of the British-American treaty of 1818. The question was whether this was fishing within "three miles of the coasts, bays etc." An award was granted to the claimants. (Claims Commission 1853, Moore Arb. 4342.)

The Argus case was a seizure of the American vessel Argus 28 miles from land, and not in any bay, by a British ship, for fishing in violation of the same treaty of 1818. An award was made to the claimants because, being 28 miles from shore, there was no violation of the treaty of 1818. (Claims Commission 1853, Moore Arb. 4344.)

The Moray Firth case, referred to at the beginning in Mr. Warren's argument for the United States, is a recent Scottish case which is not readily available. This appears, however, to be the case reprinted in American Journal of International Law, 526. In this case a Norwegian boat was seized 5 miles from shore in Moray Firth, a bay whose mouth is 13 miles wide, and the master fined 50 pounds, for trawling in violation of a Scottish act and regulations thereunder, forbidding trawling in this firth. The court held it was bound by municipal statutes; that therefore this case became a question of construction of the statute; that the statute covered not only the firth but aliens fishing therein.

L. H. W.

File No. 861.0145/3.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 452.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, January 16, 1911.

SIR: Referring to my No. 363 of September 30 last, with which I transmitted the law of December 10/23, 1909, extending the area of supervision by the Russian Customs authorities to 12 miles from low-water mark, I have the honor to report further that the British Ambassador has recently discussed with the Minister for Foreign Affairs the unwillingness of his Government to acquiesce in the claim to jurisdiction over marginal waters beyond the three-mile limit: Mr. Sazonoff promised to consider the remonstrance of the British Government, but has not yet made any further communication on the subject. The Japanese Embassy also addressed to the Foreign Office, during the latter part of December, a note to the effect that the Japanese Government adheres to the accepted rule of international law fixing at three marine miles the limit of territorial jurisdiction over marginal waters.

The disposition of the Russian Government to establish a twelve-mile limit for other purposes than those of customs supervision is indicated by a project of law elaborated for presentation to the Duma by the Chief Administration of Land and Agriculture (or Minister of Agriculture): in the Government Messenger of December 24/January 6 appeared an announcement (of which a translation is inclosed[1]) that this project contemplates, among other things, prohibiting foreigners from carrying on fishery or other marine industries in the waters of the Government of Archangel, the prohibited area including all the White Sea to the line between Cape Kanin and Cape Sviatoi (Holy Cape) and all other marginal waters to a distance of twelve miles from shore. There is reason to suppose that this bill, if enacted, will incur the energetic protest of the British Government against the extension of territorial jurisdiction by the enlargement of the three-mile limit and by the closing of the White Sea.

I have [etc.]

W. W. ROCKHILL.

File No. 861.0145/2.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 135.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 21, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 363, of September 30 last, reporting concerning the Russian law extending the area of supervision by the Russian customs authorities to twelve marine miles from low-water mark.

You will inform yourself thoroughly on the nature and extent of the jurisdiction assumed under the Russian law and report fully to the Department especially as to the operation of the law upon American shipping. Meanwhile you will discreetly call the matter to the attention of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and state that with reference to the general operation of the law over the marginal seas beyond the generally recognized three mile limit and particularly as affecting American commerce, the United States is constrained to reserve all rights of whatever nature.

---

[1] Not printed.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 861.0145/4.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

American Embassy,
No. 466.] St. Petersburg, February 13, 1911.

Sir: Replying to the Department's No. 135 of January 21 in reference to the despatch No. 363 of September 30 last in which I reported concerning the Russian law extending to twelve miles from low-water mark the area of supervision by the Russian customs authorities. I have the honor to report that in conversation with the Minister for Foreign Affairs to-day I took occasion to discuss this question and to read to him that portion of the instruction in which it is stated that "with reference to the general operation of the law over the marginal seas beyond the generally recognized three-mile limit and particularly as affecting American commerce, the United States is constrained to reserve all rights of whatever nature." Mr. Sazonoff at the same time promised me a full reply to a memorandum which I then left with him, asking information as to the nature and extent of the jurisdiction assumed under the law in question.

In discussing with me this matter and the correlated question raised by the proposal to exclude foreigners from fishing within twelve miles from the shores of Archangel Government (reported in my No. 452 of January 16), Mr. Sazonoff took the view that territorial jurisdiction over marginal seas is based on the theory of control from the land, and that the delimitation of this area of control at twelve miles now corresponds more nearly with actual conditions than does the three-mile limit which represented the effective range of cannon at the time when this limitation of control over the seas was recognized as a principle of international law.

I enclose herewith a summary[1] of an editorial article in the Novoye Vremya of the 11th instant, which embodies what I take to be the official Russian view of this question.

With reference to the proposed closure of the White Sea to foreign fishermen, I would note Mr. Sazonoff's statement that this measure is necessitated by the insufficiency of fish in those waters, and is directed primarily against the competition of Norwegian fishermen.

I have [etc.]

W. W. Rockhill.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 861.0145/5.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
No. 148.] Washington, March 11, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 466 of the 13th ultimo reporting further concerning the Russian law extending to twelve miles from low-water mark the area of supervision by the Russian customs authorities.

The Department awaits the reply promised to you by the Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs and your comments thereon.

I am [etc.]

ALVEY A. ADEE.

File No. 861.0145/6.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 506.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, March 28, 1911.

SIR: In reply to the Department's instruction No. 148 of the 11th instant, concerning the Russian law extending to twelve miles from low-water mark the area of supervision by the Russian customs authorities, I have the honor to state that the only information on the subject which the Minister for Foreign Affairs has so far been able to give me was another copy of the Law of December 10/23, 1909 (forwarded with my despatch No. 363 of September 30, 1910).

I have been unable to secure copies of the notes exchanged by the Russian and British Governments on this subject, which is still under discussion, though I had already asked that they be shown for your confidential information.

I have [etc.]

W. W. ROCKHILL.

File No. 861.0145/6.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 157.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 21, 1911.

SIR: The Department has received your No. 506 of the 28th ultimo, in regard to the Russian law [etc.]

The Department awaits the reply promised by the Minister for Foreign Affairs, referred to in your despatch of February 13, 1911, and any further information concerning this matter which you are able to obtain.

I am [etc.]

For Mr. Knox:
HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 861.0145/7.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 558.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, May 16, 1911.

SIR: In acknowledging the Department's instruction No. 157 of the 21 ultimo, in reference to the Russian law extending to twelve miles from low-water mark the area of supervision by the Russian customs authorities, I have the honor to state that I have been able to gain little further information on the subject. The Duma Committee has unanimously adopted the Government's text of the bill, as well as that of the bill for the protection of the fisheries in the seas of the Government of Archangel (See my Nos. 452 of January 16, and 466 of February 13, last.) As the Duma is to adjourn on June 28, however, the bills will doubtless not be reported to that body or acted upon in the present session.

In a recent conversation the British Ambassador informed me that the question is now under discussion of bringing the whole subject, (not only of the twelve-mile limit, but of the fisheries also) before an international conference.

I have [etc.]

W. W. Rockhill.

File No. 861.0145/7.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 168.]

Department of State,
Washington, June 6, 1911.

Sir: I acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 558, of May 16, in further reference to the proposal of the Russian Government to secure the passage through the Duma of a law extending to twelve miles from low-water mark the area of the territorial waters which shall be supervised by the Russian customs authorities.

You are requested to keep the Department advised of any further developments connected with this matter.

I am [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 861.0145/8.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 592.]

American Embassy,
St. Petersburg, June 21, 1911.

Sir: In continuation of my despatch No. 558 of May 16 last and in compliance with the Department's instruction No. 168 of June 6, I beg to state that since the date of my despatch above mentioned the bill extending the area of Russian territorial waters to twelve miles from low-water mark along the Pacific coast of the Empire has passed the Duma and the Council of Empire, and only awaits the approval of the Emperor.

As regards the extension of the area of territorial waters along the coast of European Russia, I am informed by the British Chargé d'Affaires that his Government has not yet reached any definite conclusions in its discussions of the matter with the Russian Government. The President of the Council of Ministers, with whom he recently spoke on the subject, seemed disposed to agree, in principle, to the submission of the question, in a limited form, to a conference, but not otherwise.

I cannot learn that any of the other diplomatic representatives are taking any part whatsoever in the discussion of this matter with the Russian Government.

I have [etc.]

W. W. ROCKHILL.

File No. 861.0145/8.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

No. 186.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 18, 1911.

SIR: I acknowledge the receipt of Ambassador Rockhill's despatch No. 592, of June 21, in further reference to the policy of the Russian Government to extend to twelve miles the limits of Russian territorial waters. Careful note has been made of your statements as to the steps already taken in this direction.

The Embassy is requested to keep the Department informed of future developments in this matter.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 861.0145/9.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 641.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, July 21, 1911.

SIR: With reference to this Embassy's dispatch No. 592 of June 21 last, and to previous despatches on the subject of the law extending the area of Russian territorial waters to twelve marine miles from low-water mark along the Pacific coast of the Empire, I have the honor herewith to forward (with translation) Law No. 1066 of the "Collection of Laws and Dispositions of the Government," establishing the regulations for sea-fishing in the Maritime Government-Generalship.

I have [etc.]

POST WHEELER.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

Law establishing rules for sea-fishing.

No. 1066. Concerning the establishment of rules for sea-fishing industries in the Maritime Governor-Generalship.

A law approved by the Council of Empire and the Imperial Duma for establishing rules for sea-fishing industries in the Maritime Governor-Generalship:

I. As change and supplement to the existing rules, to establish the attached rules for sea-fishing industries in the Maritime Governor-Generalship.

II. The rules contained in Division 1 to be put into operation six months after notification of the same to the Imperial Japanese Government, in accordance with Article IX of the Fishing Convention between Russia and Japan, imperially ratified July 13, 1907.

The President of the Council of Empire,
M. AKIMOFF.

So be it.[1]

PETERHOFF, May 29, 1911.[2]

Countersigned: Imperial Secretary,
MAKAROFF.

---

[1] "So be it" on the original is written in His Imperial Majesty's own hand. (Note by the Chargé d'Affaires.)

[2] June 11, 1911, new style.

Rules for sea-fishing industries in the Maritime Governor-Generalship.

[Extract of the portions of the text relating to extent of territorial waters.]

DIVISION 1.—General Regulations.

1. Where the extent of the seashore radius is not defined by special international enactments or treaties, the present rules cover the coastal sea to a distance of three geographical miles (=12.02 marine miles=20.87 versts), counting from the line of the lowest ebb-tide, or from the extremity of the coastal standing ice.

The present rules do not cover the Amur estuary from a line connecting Cape Lazareff on the mainland to Cape Pogobi on the island of Saghalin, to a line connecting Cape Perovskiy on the mainland with the northern tributaries to the Baikal Gulf on the island of Saghalin.

2. The carrying on of sea-fishing industries is permitted (that is, the catching of fish and their preparation) on sites defined for this purpose, which constitute special governmental quit-rent locations, and also from trading-vessels.

The trading sites, consisting of a defined area, shall be leased either: (1) for the catching and preparation of fish, with the right of fishing in the waters adjacent to the shore over a surface of the width of one marine mile; or (2) only for the preparation of fish, without the right of fishing.

Outside the limits of one marine mile from the shore the fishing shall be carried on from vessels with an arrangement of special permits.

The Chief Manager of Land Works and Agriculture, in agreement with the Maritime Governor-General, has the right to declare, for a definite time, separate rayons of the coastal waters as closed altogether to fishing, or to separate phases of fishing (catching fish or their preparation), and also to establish periods when fishing is not allowed.

File No. 861.0145/9a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 59.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 19, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the despatch No. 452 of January 16, 1911, in which your predecessor forwarded a translation of a project of law introduced into the Duma by the Chief Administration of Land and Agriculture which contemplated the extension of the area of Russian control over fisheries to a distance of twelve miles from the shores of the Archangel Government, as well as over the whole of the White Sea, and to his despatch No. 592 of June 21, 1911, reporting the passage of such a project of law by the Duma and the Council of Empire, the Department has to bring to your attention an item which appeared in the American newspapers of December 13 last to the effect that as a result of protests by the interested Powers "Russia has abandoned her claim to introduce a twelve-mile limit in the waters of the White Sea." In view of this statement, it is desired that you report upon the present status of the Russian Government's proposals to extend its jurisdiction, for the purposes of the control of fisheries, over the whole of the White Sea, and to a limit of twelve miles over marginal seas.

It is also desired that you should endeavor circumspectly to ascertain and report to the Department whether any protest has been made by the interested Powers against the similar extension of the area of control over the marginal waters of the Maritime Governor-Generalship as provided by the law of May 29/June 11, 1911, of which a translation was forwarded in the Embassy's No. 641 of July 21st last.

I am [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 861.0145/10.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 173.] AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, February 3, 1912.

SIR: Referring to your instruction No. 59 of January 19, 1912, I have the honor to report as follows:

My predecessor did not report, as therein stated, in his despatch of June 21, 1911, that the Duma and the Council of Empire had passed any project of law in connection with an extension of the control of fisheries to a twelve-mile limit on the shores of the Archangel Government and the White Sea. His despatch referred only to the Pacific coast.

The whole matter is most complicated and confusing, but conferences with the British and Japanese Embassies and with the Secretary of Foreign Affairs have helped me to a clearer understanding of the question.

Russia proposes ultimately to extend her control in every way to a distance of twelve miles from all her coasts bordering on the ocean. This has not yet been fully accomplished, but only in part. The question naturally groups itself into three divisions:

1. The exercise of customs authority to a distance of twelve miles from all her coasts on the open sea.

This law was approved by the Emperor December 10/23, 1909, promulgated January 1/14, 1910, and is now in force. As yet, so far as can be ascertained, no case calling for special international protest has occurred under it.

2. The extension of Russian jurisdiction over all open-sea fisheries on the Pacific coasts within twelve miles of the lands of the Russian Empire.

This law was passed May 29/June 11, 1911, and went into force December 25/January 7, last.

3. The law extending jurisdiction over fisheries conducted in the White Sea and within twelve miles of the Archangel Government was reported favorably by the Committee to the Duma last June, but has not yet been passed. It lies on the table and it is reported that English influence is responsible for the delay in its passage.

England has formally protested against all three of these laws in particular and against the attitude of Russia in general in regard to the extension of jurisdiction from three miles to twelve. Not being, however, specially interested in the Pacific Coast fisheries, England has confined vigorous action to the Archangel and White Sea fisheries, where her interests are large. England hopes to be able to get this proposed law postponed long enough to permit the matter to be presented before the next Hague Conference in 1915. The President of the Duma has assured the British Ambassador that the project can not be reached by the present Duma, and M. Sazonov practically admitted the same thing to me.

Japan also has protested in general against the whole proposition of extension of jurisdiction to twelve miles from shore in the open sea, but she has confined her vigorous action to the fisheries in the Pacific, where her direct interests are enormous. The annual Japanese catch of fish in what are now claimed to be Russian waters is valued in gross by the Japanese Embassy at 80,000,000 roubles.

Japan contends that the section of these laws dealing with Pacific fisheries is not only in violation of international law, but is also a violation of the spirit of the existing Russo-Japanese Fishery Agreement.

Two Japanese delegates representing the fishing fleet of Japan are now here seeking amelioration of present conditions.

The Japanese Embassy filed a formal note of protest on October 31 last in regard to Russia's action in the Pacific Fisheries, but as yet has received no answer.

The item mentioned by you from the American press of December 13 in regard to the abandonment by Russia of this policy is an error.

On the contrary, M. Sazonov in a long interview last night assured me that Russia proposed to maintain the twelve-mile limit as a permanent policy, though he hinted that it might be modified in detail, and frankly stated that Russia had agreed to hold conversations with the representatives of Japan and of England, especially on the points in which the two countries were respectively interested.

Russia contends that the three-mile limit is obsolete. The distance of three miles having been set as the conventional range of a cannon, it is claimed that with the extension of the range of modern ordnance the limit of jurisdiction should be increased to correspond.

M. Sazonov stated further that though this matter is not in his own department, but, being a matter of territorial jurisdiction, is being handled by the Department of Land and Agriculture, he thought nevertheless he could assure me now that Russia would not under any circumstances consent to refer such a question to The Hague tribunal.

Upon my venturing to suggest that grave complications might arise, especially in case of war, unless there was a common agreement among all the nations, at least as to some common limit of jurisdiction on the open sea, in case the three-mile limit is abandoned, he stated that Russia regarded this question in general as one of domestic (interior) legislation. He added that though the Russian Government is quite willing to discuss the matter, any modification must be taken by Russia's own act of volition and not by the decree of any outside tribunal.

I have to thank Mr. Frederick Sterling, Third Secretary, for valuable collaboration in this report.

I have [etc.]

CURTIS GUILD.

File No. 850d.00/175.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 179.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, February 9, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose the original and translation of a note sent me by the Minister of Foreign Affairs in regard to my inquiries in connection with Spitzbergen.

You will notice that in the closing sentence my despatch No. 173 of February 3rd, in regard to the Russian attitude on the extension of jurisdiction on the open sea to twelve miles, is confirmed.

I have [etc.]

CURTIS GUILD.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Ambassador.

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
St. Petersburg, January 25/February 7, 1912.

MR. AMBASSADOR: Your excellency has expressed the desire to be informed on the present situation in regard to Spitzbergen, and also on the project of law extending the zone of jurisdiction over the fisheries in the waters of the Archangel Government to 12 marine miles.

I have the honor, therefore, to inform you that in accordance with an understanding which has just been effected between the three Powers of the North, the Governments which have taken part in the Conference sitting at Christiania this January will communicate to the Norwegian Government their observations on the project of the convention elaborated by this Conference. The Norwegian Government on its side, having received these observations, will not fail to remit to the Governments which have received the original project of the Spitzbergen Convention the texts of the convention and of the arrangement which have just been elaborated. These Governments will be invited to examine them and asked to send their replies in due time to the three Powers of the North in order that the latter may exchange views in regard to these replies before the final invitation to the conference which the Norwegian Government proposes to convoke in the near future, if possible in June of the current year.

As regards the jurisdiction over the fisheries in the waters of the Archangel Government, the project relating to it is still being studied by one of the Committees of the Duma of the Empire, and it is difficult at this time to fix the date on which it will be submitted to the examination of the Duma in full sitting.

Please accept [etc.]

SAZONOFF.

File No. 861.0145/12.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 231.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, April 13, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to report that a telegram from Tokyo to the Russian papers stated on April 10 that, in view of the approaching opening of the fishing season, the Japanese press was protesting against the extension by Russia of its control over the fisheries in the Pacific to a twelve-mile limit from the shore.

A full report on this subject was forwarded to the Department in the Embassy's dispatch No. 173, of February 3 last. Thinking, however, that the Department might desire to learn any possible further developments, the First Secretary of the Embassy, Mr. Wilson, called by my direction at the Japanese Embassy and reports that there has been practically no change in the situation since that date and nothing to cause any special protest on the part of the Japanese press, except that the approach of the fishing season rather brought the matter to public attention.

The Embassy informed Mr. Wilson that no reply had been received to its formal note of protest against Russian action in the Pacific fisheries, presented to the Russian Foreign Office on October 31, 1911, and that therefore a few days ago the Ambassador took up the matter verbally with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, suggesting to him the conclusion of some sort of modus vivendi to cover the present fishing season.

M. Sazonow made no formal reply to this proposition, but the Ambassador gathered from his remarks that the Russian Government would make no concessions and intended to hold to its original plan of extending its control to the twelve-mile limit.

At present the matter rests at this point, and the Japanese Government, while ready and anxious to arrange some modus vivendi to cover the present fishing season, is not hopeful of a prompt or favorable acceptance of its proposal.

I have [etc.]

CURTIS GUILD.

File No. 861.0145/13.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 257.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, May 15, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the Embassy's despatch No. 231 of April 13 last on the subject of the extension of Russian jurisdiction to twelve marine miles in the Sea of Okhotsk, I have the honor to report that I was informed by a member of the Japanese Embassy to day that no change has occurred in the situation during the last month.

The Japanese Embassy is still carrying on pourparlers with the Russian Foreign Office with the end of at least obtaining a modus vivendi between the two Governments which will tide over the question until the present fishing season is passed. As the season begins almost at once the situation is causing anxiety and my informant considers that there will be continual conflicts between the Japanese fishermen and the Russian authorities if some sort of agreement is not immediately reached. The Japanese Government is therefore pressing the matter with energy.

My informant further stated that the report which appeared in the London Times of May 5, i. e., that the question is soon to be arbitrated at The Hague and that Japanese cruisers have been sent to the fishing grounds, is without foundation. His Government would be glad to have the matter decided by The Hague Tribunal, but to this Russia has not yet assented.

I have [etc.]

CHARLES S. WILSON.

File No. 861.0145/14.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 313.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, July 19, 1912.

SIR: Referring to previous correspondence on the subject of the extension of the area of territorial waters to twelve miles by the Russian Government, I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy of a note which I have been able to procure—a note from the Russian Imperial Ministry of Foreign Affairs in reply to the protest entered by Japan against this extension in the Pacific Ocean. While this note is not of recent date, having been sent to the Japanese Embassy a year ago last March, it may prove of interest to the Department.

I have [etc.]

CHARLES S. WILSON.

[Inclosure.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the Japanese Ambassador to Russia.

In reply to the note verbale of ———— relative to the limits of customs surveillance along the Russian coasts the Imperial Ministry of Foreign Affairs has the honor to draw the attention of the Imperial Embassy of Japan to the fact that in modern international law there exists no generally accepted rule concerning the limits of territorial waters within which sovereign state authority may be exercised.

The question has been given widely different solutions either by international treaties or the municipal laws of a state, and very often in an unequal manner for the various protected interests (customs regulations, fisheries, criminal or civil jurisdiction, sanitary observation, etc.).

Thus an examination of the laws dealing with the question shows that a great many States in Europe and America exercise undisputed jurisdiction within limits that exceed the so-called ordinary zone of three nautical miles.

Sections 2760, 2867, and 3067 of the Revised Statutes of the United States of America, for instance, fix the limit of the jurisdiction of American customs officers at 4 marine leagues (12 nautical miles), exactly the distance set by the new Russian law of 1909.

The jurisdiction of British officers in all customs and quarantine cases also covers (under Article XXIII of chap. 35 of the British Act 9 Geo. II; Article XII of chap. 80 of Acts 39 and 40 Geo. III; and Article I of chap. 47 of Act 24 Geo. III) a 4 marine-league zone.

Finally, under the law of March 27, 1817, the customs marine zone of France reaches out 2 myriameters from the coast.

Taking into consideration the above-cited provisions of laws against which no State appears to have protested, together with the fact that Russia is not bound by any international treaty fixing the 3-mile zone for the territorial waters and that therefore its area cannot be measured from the viewpoint of international law except by the range of the cannons on the coast (which now even exceed the 12-nautical-mile limit) the Imperial Government is unable to admit that the Russian law of December 10, 1909, conflicts with international law.

Lastly, the Imperial Ministry deems it its duty to recall to the Japanese Embassy's memory that the Institute of International Law (whose authority on such questions is unquestionable) did not hesitate to declare (as far back as 17 years ago, when it met at Paris, in 1894) that the "usually adopted" distance of three miles was absolutely insufficient. Fully concurring in that view, the Netherlands Government soon thereafter (1895) took the initiative of an international conference (unfortunately never going beyond the stage of being contemplated) which was to give special attention to the question of territorial waters and accurately define the law common to all States, the lack of which the Imperial Government is not the last to deplore.

It might perhaps be possible, should all the States interested therein arrive at an agreement thereon, to include that question, of such importance to international life, in the program of the approaching Third Peace Conference that is to meet at The Hague about 1915.

File No. 861.0145/15.

The American Chargé d'Affaires to the Secretary of State.

No. 367.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, September 10, 1912.

Referring to previous correspondence between the Department and the Embassy on the subject of the extension of Russian jurisdiction to 12 marine miles in the Sea of Okhotsk, I have the honor to report that, in reply to inquiries, I have been informed by a member of the Japanese Embassy, that notes on the subject are still being exchanged between the two Governments.

Early in the summer Russia finally agreed to modify the application of this law, under certain conditions, though what these conditions were the Japanese Embassy naturally refused to state. This proposal the Embassy refused about a month ago, by a note, to which the Russian Government has not yet replied.

Up to the present time no Japanese fishermen have been arrested, nor suffered any embarrassment, and the law has not been rigidly enforced, nor, in the opinion of the Japanese Embassy, will be, until a definite understanding is reached between the two Governments.

In conversation with a member of the British Embassy, which is kept pretty fully informed by the Japanese Embassy as to the progress of the matter, I was told that probably neither Russia nor Japan were inclined just at present to press the question.

I further gathered that this was to some extent connected with the understanding which the Russian and Japanese Governments seemed desirous to reach in regard to all questions in dispute between them.

I have [etc.]

Charles S. Wilson.

SALVADOR.

POLITICAL DISTURBANCES—ATTITUDE OF THE UNITED STATES.

File No. 816.00/144a.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister to Guatemala.[1]

No. 116.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 12, 1911.

SIR: In September last the Government of the United States received information that the President of Guatemala, having previously given secret aid to the Manuel Bonilla revolutionist movement against the Dávila Government in Honduras, was actively supporting General Bonilla for the presidency of that country under an agreement by which, after the elections of October 29 in Honduras, the two of them would undertake to lend assistance in the subversion of the Governments of Salvador and Nicaragua by disaffected elements in those two countries, the ultimate aim being, it is alleged, to place Estrada Cabrera in a dominating position in those Republics.

Thereafter the Department received corroborative information that Prudencio Alfaro, a Salvadoran revolutionist, was in Guatemala, near the capital, in frequent communication with Estrada Cabrera; that Guatemalan troops were being mobilized on the Salvadoran frontier; that cart roads were being constructed and telegraph and telephone offices opened at strategic points along the border for the entry of Salvadoran emigrados from Guatemala and Honduras; that unusually large shipments of military supplies were being received; that mules and elements of war were being sent from Chiquimula, in Guatemala, to Ocotepeque, in Honduras; that certain vessels, notably the Emma and Siren, used in the recent revolution against the Dávila Government, were being overhauled and put into commission by Guatemala and Honduras, respectively; that complaints were being made by Guatemala and Honduras of violation by Salvador of the Washington Conventions for the purpose, on the complainants' part, of securing the arrest of Honduran emigrados in Salvador who might otherwise interfere with the plans of Estrada Cabrera and Bonilla; and, finally, that other incidents, unimportant in themselves, if taken in connection with the above matters indicated the existence of a well-laid plan for a joint attack from Guatemalan and Honduran territory against the Government of Salvador, which, as far as the Department knows, is giving a peaceful and orderly administration of affairs in that Republic satisfactory to the majority of its people.

This Government has also received, from time to time, information of countermovements to bring about the subversion of the Governments of Guatemala and Honduras, respectively, and the Department has accordingly taken such precautions in aid of the constituted Government in those two Republics as seemed necessary to secure proper observance and enforcement of the so-called neutrality statutes of the United States and, in addition thereto, for the purpose of carrying out the spirit of the Washington conventions in which this Government has a deep interest although not a signatory thereof, it has exercised its good offices, on the request of the Government of Guatemala and the other signatories, in an impartial manner in bringing to the attention of the Governments concerned the charges of violation of the conventions, and has informally suggested the advisability of submitting their various contentions to the Ceneral American Court of Justice at Cartago.

---

[1] Copies sent to the Legations at San José, Tegucigalpa, Managua, and San Salvador.

Reports have now reached the Department that the consistent record of this Government in respect of the recognition of constituted authority in Guatemala, the exercise of its good offices on behalf of Guatemala in the maintenance of the neutrality provisions of the Washington conventions, and its oft-expressed friendship for the people of Guatemala have been taken advantage of so as to create a totally false impression that the United States is in sympathy with Estrada Cabrera, if not secretly supporting him, in his alleged designs against the other Governments of Central America.

The Department has not the means, even if it had the inclination, to determine the merits of the charges made by Guatemala and Honduras against Salvador and the countercharges preferred by the latter. In order, however, that there may be no misconception in Central America or elsewhere, and no misunderstanding by the signatories of the Washington conventions of the strictly impartial attitude of the United States, the Department has in contemplation, in the event the hostile movement against the Government of Salvador does not cease, the giving of publicity to all the information on the subject at its disposal, together with an official announcement of this Government's policy.

You are instructed to present the matter in this sense to President Estrada Cabrera.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

File No. 816.00/146.

The American Minister to Guatemala to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 197.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Guatemala, January 2, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, on the 25th ultimo, of your instruction No. 116, of the 12th ultimo, relative to the alleged activities of the President of Guatemala in connection with a plan for the subversion of the existing Government of Salvador, in which I was directed to present the matter in the sense indicated to President Estrada Cabrera.

My reception by the President took place on the 29th ultimo. In order to avoid the possibility in the future of any asseverations that the Department's position had been misunderstood I prepared an aide-mémoire which I handed to the President, and of which I have the honor to inclose a copy. This was accompanied by an unofficial translation into Spanish, of which I also have the honor to inclose a copy, in order that the President might examine it without delay.

After reading the Spanish text with apparent attention the President stated that he awaited the outcome without anxiety (espero tranquilo) and would take up the points made in order. I hereupon suggested that if he had no objection he should furnish me with some form of written statement in order that I might communicate to my Government exactly that which he wished. He replied that he thanked me for this courtesy, as it would allow him time to put his remarks in proper form, but that he desired as well to reply to my aide-mémoire at once.

I took this course in the hope that the President's written statement might be more useful to the Department than a mere report of a conversation, the accuracy of which might be questioned.

The President spoke for some time, the substance of his remarks being contained in the inclosed copy of a memorandum of conversation.[1]

The President's memorandum, accompanied by an English translation, is also inclosed herewith. * * *

I have [etc.]

R. S. Reynolds Hitt.

[Inclosure 1.—Aide Mémoire.]

The American Minister to the President of Guatemala.

The American Minister had the honor to inform His Excellency the President of Guatemala that the former had received instructions from his Government to make certain communications to His Excellency. The communications in question are as follows:

In September last the Government of the United States received information that the President of Guatemala, having previously given secret aid to the Manuel Bonilla revolutionists movement against the Dávila Government in Honduras, was actively supporting General Bonilla for the presidency of that country under an agreement by which, after the elections of October 29 in Honduras, the two statesmen would undertake to lend assistance in the subversion of the Governments of Salvador and Nicaragua by disaffected elements in those two countries, the ultimate aim being, it is alleged, to place the President of Guatemala in a dominating position in those Republics.

Thereafter the Department of State at Washington received corroborative information that Prudencio Alfaro, a Salvadoran revolutionist, was in Guatemala near the capital in frequent communication with the President of Guatemala; that Guatemalan troops were being mobilized on the Salvadoran frontier; that cart roads were being constructed and telegraph and telephone offices opened at strategic points along the border for the entry of Salvadoran emigrados from Guatemala and Honduras; that unusually large shipments of military supplies were being received; that mules and elements of war were being sent from Chiquimula in Guatemala to Ocotepeque in Honduras; that certain vessels notably the Emma and Siren, used in the recent revolution against the Dávila Government, were being overhauled and put into commission by Guatemala and Honduras, respectively; that complaints were being made by Guatemala and Honduras of violation by Salvador of the Washington Conventions for the purpose on the complainants' part of securing the arrest of Honduran emigrados in Salvador who might otherwise interfere with the plans of the President of Guatemala and General Manuel Bonilla; and, finally, that other incidents, unimportant in themselves, if taken in connection with the above matters indicated the existence of a well-laid plan for a joint attack from Guatemalan and Honduran territory against the Government of Salvador, which as far as the State Department knows is giving a peaceful and orderly administration of affairs in that Republic satisfactory to the majority of its people.

---

[1] Not printed.

The Government of the United States has also received from time to time, information of counter movements to bring about the subversion of the Governments of Guatemala and Honduras, respectively, and the Department of State has accordingly taken such precautions in aid of the constituted Governments in those two Republics as seemed necessary to secure a proper observance and enforcement of the so-called neutrality statutes of the United States and in addition thereto, for the purpose of carrying out the spirit of the Washington Conventions in which the Government of the United States has a deep interest although not a signatory thereof, it has exercised its good offices on the request of the Government of Guatemala and the other signatories in an impartial manner in bringing to the attention of the Governments concerned the charges of violation of the Conventions, and has informally suggested the advisability of submitting their various contentions to the Central American Court of Justice at Cartago.

Reports have now reached the Department of State at Washington that the consistent record of the Government of the United States in respect of the recognition of constituted authority in Guatemala, the exercise of its good offices on behalf of Guatemala in the maintenance of the neutrality provisions of the Washington Conventions, and its oft expressed friendship for the people of Guatemala have been taken advantage of so as to create a totally false impression that the United States is in sympathy with the President of Guatemala, if not secretly supporting him, in his alleged designs against the other Governments of Central America.

The Department of State has not the means, even if it had the inclination, to determine the merits of the charges made by Guatemala and Honduras against Salvador and the countercharges preferred by the latter. In order, however, that there may be no misconception in Central America or elsewhere and no misunderstanding by the signatories of the Washington Conventions, of the strictly impartial attitude of the United States, the Department of State has in contemplation, in the event the hostile movement against the Government of Salvador does not cease, the giving of publicity to all the information on the subject at its disposal, together with an official announcement of the policy of the Government of the United States.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Guatemala, December 29, 1911.

[Inclosure 2.—Memorandum.—Translation.]

The President of Guatemala to the American Minister.

The President of Guatemala has given due consideration and attention to the memorandum dated the 29th of the present month which his excellency the Minister of the United States of America was pleased to hand to him, and in reply, taking up in order the points contained in the said document, states:

The Government of Guatemala does not conceal the fact that it viewed with pleasure the candidacy of Gen. Manuel Bonilla for the presidency of Honduras, believing that, on account of the prestige which he enjoys among his compatriots, the return to power of this leader may bring to an end the state of anarchy which reigned in Honduras, thus suppressing the dangers, entailed by this abnormal situation, to the peace of Central America, and especially of Guatemala, its immediate neighbor, with which country its frontiers are extensive.

The Government of Guatemala does deny, in the most absolute manner, that any agreement tending to the subversion of order or to provoking changes in the administration in the bordering Republic existed between its head and the leader of the Honduran revolution. The Government is obliged to confine itself to this comprehensive denial until the existence of the alleged agreement can be shown to exist in some tangible form, or at least until the interested parties can show the existence of valid motives which might induce an orderly government, such as that of Guatemala, to take part in a movement certain to bring about a conflagration in Central America.

The unfounded allegation that such proceedings had as an object the placing of the President of Guatemala in a dominant position in Central America falls to the ground when the international conduct which he has observed throughout all his administration is taken into consideration, and in view of the fact that there has not existed in Central America a factor for order and peace more decided and more constant than the Government over which he presides.

It is completely false that Prudencio Alfaro has been in this Republic, and still more, in the event that that were possible, that he could have been in frequent communication with the President of Guatemala. Neither is Alfaro a friend of my Government, nor would it in any case have supplied him with the elements to attack the established order in Salvador, an order which the Government of Guatemala respects and considers as emanating from the popular will.

The charges that roads have been repaired, that telegraph and telephone lines have been established, and that the elements of war which were necessary for the maintenance of order in the country have been collected, seem to be and are strange; this has not been limited in particular to the Departments bordering on Salvador, as may be shown at any time, nor does it constitute a motive for suspicion on the part of any country; it is the result of that condition of progress and welfare which happily, thanks to peace, the Republic has attained during the past years, and involves the exercise of rights of sovereignty which, as long as they are not directed against anyone through hostile motives, there is no right or reason to censure. In Salvador, for example, military institutions are being improved, instructors are being brought from Europe, the army is being disciplined and perfected, all the arms which the country needs are being acquired, and the Government of Guatemala, instead of complaining of this worthy progress, applauds it and rejoices therein with that sincerity and good will with which it would view the progress and prosperity of a brother.

Besides the patrols which are ordinarily maintained to preserve order on the frontier, where smugglers and ordinary criminals find refuge, owing to its nature, the Government of Guatemala has not moved a single man toward Salvador. The President of Guatemala would be greatly pleased, in order to have this assertion fully proved, if one of the honorable consular representatives of the United States would visit those regions, in order that he may be convinced by ocular proof of the lack of foundation for the gratuitous charges which are made in this respect.

It is deplorable that even the most natural acts, such as the repairing of the ship Emma, should be willfully misconstrued and an importance attributed to them which they do not possess; but it is even worse when it is imputed that we are in possession of vessels, such as the Siren, of which we have no cognizance.

In that which refers to the emigrados, the Government of Guatemala has evinced its good faith in the fulfillment of the Washington conventions to such an extent that when a few months ago the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Salvador asked by telegraph for the concentration of certain of his compatriots, resident on the Guatemala frontier, they were immediately brought to the capital, notwithstanding the fact that these persons were proprietors of plantations in that district, the result of which was, as may be proved, an expression to us of effusive thanks of the Government of Dr. Araujo. If the Government of Honduras has not obtained from the Government of Salvador the same results under analogous conditions, this is not the affair of Guatemala.

The good will of the Government of Guatemala toward that of Salvador has not been confined to this incident alone. We have even, at her request, suppressed the sale of liquors which existed in the border zone, in order to avoid the existence of conditions that might lead to disorder; nor did the Guatemalan administration stop to consider that this measure might bring, as it has brought, great losses to the public treasury.

In the memorandum to which this one refers the allusion was made to well-laid plans for a joint attack from Guatemala and Honduras against the Government of Salvador. In this respect the President of Guatemala can only express the wish that concrete evidence be furnished, a reasonable indication that such a combination has existed or does exist, as otherwise, against unfounded assurances, the only course left open is that which is now taken, namely, categorical denial.

The Government of Guatemala expresses its gratitude that the Government of the United States of America, although not a signatory to the Washington conventions, has zealously watched over their observance, maintaining the strictest neutrality as to the Central American internal questions and interposing its good offices to the end that such difficulties as may have arisen between the Governments of the Isthmus be submitted to the Central American Court of Justice, established at Cartago, and furthermore states with pleasure that the Government of Guatemala has been and will continue to be the faithful supporter of these conventions, wherein it sees with reason the basis for concord and harmony between the nations of Central America, and adds that whatever suggestions may have been made to it to weaken, not alone the treaties but institutions derived therefrom, have been and will always be unavailing and fruitless.

Ambitious persons without license, enemies of every system of order and industry, have circulated reports that the Government of Guatemala intends to bring about by force the union of Central America. To destroy such a ridiculous charge the President of Guatemala here recalls the fact that his delegates to the Washington convention, faithfully interpreting his instructions, maintained that the union could not and ought not to be realized except with the mutual consent of the interested peoples, for the very reason that it was the supreme aspiration of Central American patriotism, and that when the momentary clouds were dissipated this great benefit could be obtained by the union of interests and the fusing of ideals.

The cordiality of the relations which happily exist between the United of America and the Republic of Guatemala, and which the President of this last nation endeavors carefully to cultivate and to strengthen, has aroused in certain elements, hostile to the Government of Guatemala, the most profound hatred, which has found echo in the Mexican press and in that of the various sections of Central America by the publication of malicious articles, wherein it is endeavored to give the impression that the Guatemalan President boasted of the friendship of the United States as a means of realizing his selfish and illegal plans. Nothing could be more false and malevolent, although, indeed, the Government of Guatemala takes pleasure in maintaining the closest bonds with the great and powerful American people, following in this regard its historical antecedents and its present earnest desires; yet it will never take advantage of those bonds and sympathies as a shield or mask to justify or explain unlawful acts or reprehensible purposes. The recognized probity and rectitude of the Government of Guatemala and the very high consideration which it professes toward the noble and friendly nation which has given to the people of Guatemala so many and such oft-repeated proofs of consideration and friendship disproves this.

This memorandum would not be complete if it did not establish the fact that the persons who so evilly impose on the good faith of the Government of Salvador, whose sincerity the Government of Guatemala never doubts, are unquestionably enemies of both administrations, since they hinder the good understanding between friendly countries and create suspicion and mistrust, which state of affairs can only bring profit to the disturbers of the peace in the most unhappy event, which will not arrive, that some day peace and concord, which should reign between both countries, be broken.

The President of Guatemala expects without anxiety that deeds, infinitely more eloquent and persuasive than words, will in the near future convince the President of Salvador that instead of having in the Government of Guatemala a hostile and adverse force he may count upon it for everything that contributes to peace, progress, and the happiness of the peoples who have confided to him their destinies.

GUATEMALA, December 30, 1911.

File No. 816.00/153.

The American Minister to Salvador to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, January 7, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of an instruction which the Department addressed on the 12th ultimo to the American Minister at Guatemala on the subject of President Estrada Cabrera's activities in the internal political affairs of the neighboring republics, the Department adding in its instruction to me that the action contemplated by the Department and spoken of in the concluding paragraph of its instruction to the American Minister at Guatemala is dependent on whether or not the hostile movement by Guatemala against the Government of Salvador ceases, and directing me to keep the Department promptly advised as to such movement. I am therefore availing myself of the first outgoing mail to render a report upon the situation in question.

On the 1st ultimo I received a telegram from the American Minister at Guatemala informing me that the Guatemalan Minister for Foreign Affairs had written to him saying that the rumor of mobilization toward the Salvadoran frontier is entirely false, and that the Government of Guatemala has not considered such action. The before-mentioned note of the Guatemalan Minister for Foreign Affairs was evidently in response to an inquiry addressed to him by Minister Hitt asking if there was any objection to informing him of the object of the recent military activities on the southern frontiers, as a possible deterrent to Estrada Cabrera's intrigues.

At the time of the receipt of Minister Hitt's telegram of the 1st ultimo, containing the denial of the Guatemalan Minister for Foreign Affairs of the mobilization of troops along the Salvadoran frontier, I considered it of sufficient importance to bring the subject matter of the said telegram to the attention of the Salvadoran Government, which I did informally in a conversation with Dr. Castro Ramírez, the Minister for Foreign Affairs. * * *

On the 3d instant, in a conversation with President Araujo at the presidential mansion, the Minister for Foreign Affairs also being present, I took occasion to inquire about conditions on the Guatemalan frontier, when the President informed me that the Government of Guatemala, instead of having withdrawn from the frontier any of the troops which had been concentrated there during the past five or six months, had increased the number to about 4,000 men, which, the President added, was equal to the entire strength of the Salvadoran Army. * * *

On retiring from the presidential mansion I asked if the Minister for Foreign Affairs would not have the kindness to prepare and hand me a memorandum of the most salient points of the conversation that had taken place between himself, President Araujo and me, which he gladly consented to do, and I inclose herewith a copy and translation of this memorandum.

I have [etc.]

WILLIAM HEIMKE.

[Inclosure.—Memorandum.—Translation.]

The Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

I.

There exists in all Central America a strong desire for peace, as the only means of promoting the progress and fraternity of these peoples. Weary of fratricidal struggles they desire, under the protection of the law, to develop their energies and activities for the common good, without the existence among them of deep hatreds which prevent their living in harmony. But, unfortunately, that desire of the peoples finds itself frustrated by the malevolent and perfidious activity of the President of Guatemala, Licenciado Estrada Cabrera, who, not satisfied with holding his country subject to a hard despotism, in the most absolute misery, with great loss of prestige at home and abroad, delights in keeping Central America in constant unrest, fomenting revolts and revolutions in the neighboring countries when the Governments do not submit to his odious tutelage nor second his antipatriotic designs. He is, therefore, the sole disturbing element in Central America, who does not permit the other countries to live in peace, because he endeavors to maintain an odious hegemony which honorable governments and peoples will never concede to him.

II.

Since having aided General Bonilla in his revolution against the Government of General Dávila, he has established in Honduras a sort of branch of the Government of Guatemala; for it is patent and notorious that he exercises absolute control over the Government of Dr. Bertrand, interfering in the public administration of that country in a direct manner. He caused the appointment of comandante de armas in Tegucigalpa to be given to the Guatemalan General Monterrosa, who has an absolute power, and recently he caused to be named as Minister of War Dr. Francisco Mejía, after this person was present at the congress of newspaper men held in Guatemala, where he was in the service of Estrada Cabrera. He has also sent other military men of importance, and continues to despatch elements of war across the frontier of Honduras, especially by way of Chiquimula.

III.

He keeps the Government of Honduras in perpetual unrest, both because the principal elements of society and hundreds of people of the laboring classes emigrate from their country, fleeing from that tutelage of Guatemala, and because he has made President Bertrand and Gen. Manuel Bonilla believe that Salvador will foment a revolution against Honduras, supporting the emigrados; with the result, by this last means, that Honduras is a center of menaces toward Salvador.

In fact, the Government of Honduras has numerous forces in the Departments of Choluteca, Valle, La Esperanza, and Ocotepeque ready to invade Salvador when Estrada Cabrera considers it convenient for his plans of domination.

IV.

Salvador, on the contrary, concerns itself only with maintaining a lawful government and promoting progress in all its manifestations. It desires peace with all Central America and succeeds in maintaining fraternal relations with the brother Governments. It is animated with noble wishes for the tranquillity of Honduras, and, in fact, has made great efforts to watch and concentrate the numerous Honduran emigrados, who number many thousands, and who have been successfully prevented from carrying out their projected revolts.

V.

The Chargé d'Affaires of Honduras, Dr. Manuel J. Vargas, who has just returned from Tegucigalpa, declares that Gen. Manuel Bonilla, on account of gratitude, is on the side of Estrada Cabrera, and that he will have to make common cause with him under all circumstances.

VI.

An honorable person who has just returned from Guatemala states that he talked with President Estrada Cabrera, and that the latter said "that he did not like President Araujo because he did not tolerate that any other ruler should acquire greater prestige than he, and that he would soon have to rectify this."

VII.

For all these reasons the menace continues, and it is only by bringing about the disappearance of this center of inquietude that Central America may enter into complete peace.

Costa Rica and Nicaragua are in perfect accord with Salvador, since Estrada Cabrera is attempting to disturb Nicaragua also, supporting a revolution headed by Zelayist elements, among whom are Dr. Julian Irias, Mr. José Gámez, and Gen. Nicasio Vásquez. The first two are in Costa Rica and the last enters and leaves the presidential mansion of Guatemala with all confidence. The Government of Salvador obtained possession of correspondence and cipher keys of theirs in this sense.

VIII.

Estrada Cabrera is maintaining on the frontier of Salvador 4,000 men under arms, and he has made the Government of Honduras believe that Doctor Araujo is disaffected toward it in order to keep that Government under his subjection.

IX.

The arms which the Government of Guatemala has given to that of Honduras and to which reference is made in No. II were transferred at the end of December, to say nothing of the previous deliveries.

San Salvador, January 4, 1912.

File No. 816.00/145.

The American Minister to Salvador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
San Salvador, January 10, 1912—2 p. m.

The President of Salvador has requested me to telegraph the Department that in consequence of Estrada Cabrera's increased military activities along the frontier the situation is becoming graver every day and that an invasion of Salvador from Guatemala and an outbreak of hostilities may be looked for at any time. The Minister for Foreign Affairs has just informed me that the Government of Salvador is in receipt of telegrams saying that every person desiring to cross into Guatemala from Salvador is turned back by order of the President of Guatemala; that Baron von Merck, accompanied by an aide-de-camp, who are officers on the staff of the President of Guatemala, have just crossed the frontier en route to this city bearing an important communication from Estrada Cabrera to President Araujo.

Heimke.

File No. 816.00/143.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister to Salvador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, January 11, 1912—12 noon.

Your January 10, 2 p. m. Repeat it to American Legation Guatemala.

Knox.

File No. 816.00/145.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister to Guatemala.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, January 11, 1912—12 noon.

When you have received the telegram of January 10, 2 p. m., from the American Minister to Salvador, you will immediately take up this matter with the President of Guatemala, vigorously impressing upon him the absolute necessity of putting a stop to this hostile movement against Salvador, in utter disregard of the Washington conventions.

Knox.

File No. 816.00/155

The American Minister to Salvador to the Secretary of State.

American Legation,
San Salvador, January 11, 1912.

Sir: Referring to my despatch of the 7th instant, and also to my telegram of yesterday, 2 p. m., I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of telegrams and letters[1] addressed to President Araujo by departmental commanders stationed along the frontier, which copies the President has sent to me for my information and for submission to the Department of State in further proof of the continued and increased military activities of the President of Guatemala directed against the Republic of Salvador. I also inclose a translation of these letters and telegrams, which show that along the frontier Guatemalan officials, by the orders of their superiors, prohibit anyone from Salvador to cross the border into Guatemala; that Dr. Prudencio Alfaro, with Salvadoran political emigrados, is at a point near the frontier, on Guatemalan soil, ready to invade Salvador; that President Estrada Cabrera halts at nothing to disturb the peace of this country; that the Guatemalan General Cuellar has gone to Ocotepeque, Honduras, to confer with the Honduran General Arita regarding the operations that are to be put into effect after Gen. Manuel Bonilla has assumed the presidency of Honduras on the 1st of February next; that Estrada Cabrera will establish a headquarters at Santa Barbara, Honduras, as a base of operations, with which object there are being constructed wagon roads from the frontier of Guatemala to Santa Barbara, to be used in the transportation of the necessary elements of war for delivery to General Barahona and Dr. Alfaro, both of whom are disaffected Salvadorans and leaders of Salvadoran political emigrados; that the telegraph lines used by Guatemala in the last war between that country and Salvador are being reestablished; that General Aritas has asserted that Estrada Cabrera has offered him a ministry on the realization of the Central American union; that Estrada Cabrera has made a similar offer "to the commandant at Santa Rosa, through the medium of the commandant at Santa Barbara, Rafael Cobar, a Guatemalan, who a short time ago was in Santa Rosa conferring with or, rather, giving orders to Reina from his master, Estrada Cabrera"; that spies have been sent to Salvador from Guatemala, some of whom are women; that there is a movement of many people from various directions to Ocotepeque, Honduras, most of whom are partisans of Dr. Alfaro and friends; that on the 3d instant 200 armed men entered Ocotepeque from Guatemala; and, finally, that active recruiting of men for the army against Salvador, and their departure for the southern frontier, is now a daily occurrence in Guatemala.

---

[1] Not printed.

President Araujo, accompanied by Dr. Castro Ramírez, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, called upon me this afternoon in order, as he said, to speak with me personally concerning the situation on the Guatemalan-Salvadoran frontier and to tell me that he is in hourly receipt of telegrams in substance similar to those of which he has sent me copies.

During the conversation with President Araujo I asked him to tell me the possible reason, if any, which Estrado Cabrera could have for his bellicose attitude toward the Republic of Salvador, and he replied that his Government had never, at any time, given the President of Guatemala the slightest reason for his strange actions, but that it is known that Estrada Cabrera's plan is to proclaim himself dictator, or president, of all Central America, and to accomplish this Estrada Cabrera aims to subjugate the Republic of Salvador in order that he may be in control of these Republics (since he has already entered into arrangements with Gen. Manual Bonilla to acquire control over Honduras at an appropriate time after Bonilla has assumed the presidency of that country). Then, after the conquest of Salvador, Estrada Cabrera's intention is to vanquish Costa Rica, which he counts upon to join the union necessarily and without resistance, as that country is a nonmilitary State; and after that Nicaragua would also be forced into the union. President Araujo added that if Estrada Cabrera thought that in this grotesque manner he could bring about a union of the Central American Republics he was greatly mistaken, and that as the result of such an attempt there would rest upon his shoulders the responsibility for the most sanguinary conflict that these already unhappy countries have ever seen, since there is not a man, woman, or child in Central America who would submit to the rule of Estrada Cabrera, a man who is terrorizing every corner of these countries and who is looked upon as being infinitely more unscrupulous and unprincipled than ex-President Zelaya. This, then, the President added, is the plan of Estrada Cabrara—to satisfy a morbid and a blind personal ambition in order to constitute himself the only ruler over entire Central America, by whatever means and at whatever cost. Continuing, President Araujo stated to me that he did not stand in fear of an attack on Salvador by the forces of Guatemala; that, if necessary, he could mobilize 28,000 troops within 48 hours, and that Salvador would surely vanquish Guatemala in a contest at arms; that in about 20 days there would arrive here from Germany a large consignment of arms and ammunition, valued at $100,000 gold, although Salvador was not actually lacking in elements of war; and the President concluded by saying that his heart's desire was the peace of Central America, law and order, and the possession of the respect of the Government of the United States, whose moral support, in the event of a war with Guatemala, he hoped would not be withheld, as he felt that Salvador was being unjustifiably forced into such a conflict. I assured the President that the greatest wish of the Government of the United States was to see the peoples of Central America live in perfect harmony with one another. He replied that he had had abundant evidence of this fact and that he had every faith in the disinterestedness of our Government toward all Central America, but that harmony could never be realized so long as the malign power of Estrada Cabrera prevailed, since his intrigues were deep, far reaching, and never ending. The President also said, as an additional proof of the treachery and deception of Estrada Cabrera, that at this moment, while the President of Guatemala is spending thousands upon thousands of dollars in arming Dr. Prudencio Alfaro and his disaffected followers, the Salvadoran political emigrados in the territory of Guatemala, extraordinary and exceptional honors are being showered upon the special envoy who was sent to Guatemala to render the thanks of the Government of Salvador for Guatemala's special mission to the centennial celebration at this capital in the early part of last November. President Araujo qualified these inconsistencies as the refinement of absolute perfidy and duplicity on the part of Estrada Cabrera.

I have [etc.]

WILLIAM HEIMKE.

File No. 816.00/147.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister to Guatemala.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 12, 1912—4 p. m.

The Minister of Salvador informs the Department that Lino A. Barahona and Prudencio Alfaro are fomenting a revolution on Guatemalan soil against Salvador, and that Alfaro is at Jalpatagua. You will immediately convey this information to the President of Guatemala.

KNOX.

File No. 816.00/147.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister to Honduras.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 12, 1912—4 p. m.

The Department learns that revolutionary activities are at present in progress in Guatemala under Generals Prudencio Alfaro and Lino A. Barahona, and that President Bonilla is cooperating with the President of Guatemala. Immediately bring this to the attention of the Government of Honduras and urge strict observance of the Washington conventions.

KNOX.

File No. 816.00/156.

The American Minister to Guatemala to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 206.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Guatemala, January 16, 1912.

SIR: With reference to your telegram of January 11, 12 noon, and Mr. Heimkè's telegram repeating to me his telegram to the Department of January 10, 2 p. m., I have the honor to inform you that I immediately endeavored to see the Salvadoran Chargé d'Affaires, Dr. Lima, in order to ascertain whether he possessed any supplementary information on the subject before asking an interview of the President of Guatemala.

In the afternoon I received a telephone message from the Minister for Foreign Affairs, who desired to see me and with whom I made an appointment for the following morning, the 13th instant, at 10 o'clock.

Dr. Toledo Herrarte had been sent by the President * * * to reiterate in the most forcible manner the assurances previously given by the President that no hostile preparations against Salvador existed. The Minister stated, in addition to the denials as to military preparations, that nothing could be more unfortunate at this moment than these unfounded accusations of bellicose intentions, as they greatly embarrassed the President in his negotiations for the financial rehabilitation of the country, to which he was devoting his best efforts and hoped soon to reach a solution.

The Minister adverted to the President's request, contained in his memorandum,[1] that an American consular officer might by personal inspection satisfy himself of the absence of all unusual military preparation along the Salvadoran frontier. I pointed out that a consular officer could scarcely be considered to be a competent judge of military questions, whereupon the military attaché of this Legation was suggested. I replied that I was not willing to assume for this Legation the responsibility of determining whether the alleged military preparations did or did not exist; that it seemed to me a question of convincing the President of Salvador of a matter of fact and that if Salvadorans were given facilities for making an inspection I should be willing, with your approval, to have the military attaché and a consular official accompany them, it being clearly understood that their report should be confined to a statement of the conditions found to exist at the various points at the moment the inspection was made and that there should be only one report, to be signed by all, with such reservations as individual members cared to add. The Minister immediately stated that his Government would afford every facility to such an informal party, relying upon the personal character of its members to remove the anxiety of the President of Salvador, and that he would consider himself indebted to this Legation if it could arrange the matter. I stated that I would suggest it to the Salvadoran Chargé d'Affaires.

---

[1] The inclosure in the Minister's dispatch of January 2, ante.

After this interview I saw the Chargé d'Affaires of Salvador and communicated to him the substance of my telegraphic instructions and, further, allowed him to read my aide-mémoire and the President's memorandum in reply, which accompanied my despatch of the 2d instant. Dr. Lima stated that all the Salvadoran emigrados were concentrated in this capital, that he knew of no hostile preparations along the frontier adjoining Salvador, and that he did not believe that the information which seemed to have reached Dr. Araujo was correct. I explained to him the proposal for an inspection of the frontier, which he stated that he considered an excellent plan for dispelling the apparently false ideas entertained at San Salvador, and said that he would telegraph his Government to request authority to accept it.

I thereupon sent you my telegram dated January 13, 4 p. m.,[1] and requested an interview with the President, which was immediately accorded at 4 o'clock. The President had been advised of the conversation which took place during my interview with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and I informed him that the Salvadoran Chargé d'Affaires had telegraphed his Government for authority to send the party of inspection along the border. The President renewed his previous statements as to the absence of all unusual activity in this locality or any hostile actions against the Government of Dr. Araujo. Your telegram of January 12, 4 p. m., having meanwhile reached me, I communicated its contents to the President, who stated that he would telegraph at once with a view to securing the arrest and conduct to this capital of Alonzo (there does not appear to be any political character of the name of Lino A.) Barahona and Prudencio Alfaro, adding that he desired me to note that he would despatch for this purpose a patrol of 40 men, and that he hoped I would bear witness to its character in case this were misunderstood by Salvador.

With regard to the moves against Salvador, my impression is that reports reached here during the centennial celebrations in San Salvador which led President Estrada Cabera to believe that a movement for a Central American union, in which Salvador would take the prominent part, was not an impossibility, and there is evidence that he collected a large number of men which he would doubtless have used in the event of any plan for union which did not reckon upon him as an essential factor; it, however, seems probable that the complaints of Salvador and the subsequent developments have caused him to withdraw everything in excess of the normal military preparations along the frontier, which would explain his urgent requests that the frontier be inspected to prove the truth and good faith of his assurances in this sense.

---

[1] Not printed.

It has seemed to me throughout this matter of attacks against Salvador that if President Estrada Cabrera was working to subvert the Government of that country he would do so either by promoting a revolutionary movement or sending aid into Honduras, where it is here thought that General Bonilla will do whatever President Estrada Cabrera wishes, in either of which cases he would be in a position to pretend that he had had nothing to do with the matter, a course which would manifestly be closed to him if a direct invasion took place.

I mention the foregoing impressions with reserve, as the Department is aware of the extreme difficulty of securing in this capital reliable information as to the activities of the President when he desires to conceal them.

I have [etc.]

R. S. REYNOLDS HITT.

File No. 816.00/148.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister to Guatemala.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 16, 1912—4 p. m.

The Department learns from the Minister of Salvador that Guatemalan troops are leaving the frontier in large numbers and that Salvador believes it unnecessary to send two representatives to accompany the Military Attaché of your Legation to the frontier.

The Department, however, sees no objection to the Attaché going over the ground if he could obtain reliable valuable information.

KNOX.

File No. 816.00/158.

The American Minister to Honduras to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 75.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, January 17, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to report that upon receipt on the afternoon of the 13th instant of your telegram of the 12th instant, 4 p. m., in regard to the revolutionary activities of Dr. Prudencio Alfaro and Gen. Luis Alonzo Barahona against the neighboring Republic of El Salvador and the cooperation of the President of Guatemala and of Gen. Manuel Bonilla with them, the contents thereof were at once embodied in a note to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of this Government, of which I inclose a copy. This note was delivered the next morning to the Minister at his house. On the following morning, that of the 15th instant, I received a reply from the Minister for Foreign Affairs to my note, of which I inclose a copy and translation. * * *

I have [etc.]

CHARLES D. WHITE.

[Inclosure 1.]

The American Minister to the Honduran Minister for Foreign Affairs.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, January 13, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: The Minister of Salvador in Washington has informed the Department of State of the Government of the United States that Gen. Prudencio Alfaro and Gen. L. A. Barahona have begun revolutionary operations in Guatemala and that they are receiving the cooperation of Gen. Manuel Bonilla, President-elect of Honduras, and of the President of Guatemala. Under instructions I have the honor to bring this matter to the attention of your excellency's Government, and, in so doing, to urge upon it strict observance of the conventions signed at Washington in 1907, to which Honduras is a party.

I avail [etc.]

CHARLES D. WHITE.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

The Honduran Minister for Foreign Affairs to the American Minister.

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Tegucigalpa, January 15, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your courteous note, dated the 13th instant, in which you advise this Department [etc.]

In reply I have the honor to inform your excellency that the statement made by the Minister of El Salvador in Washington to the Department of State of the United States is not true, because President Bertrand, as well as the President-elect, General Bonilla, have fulfilled and continue to fulfill faithfully the obligations established for Honduras in the conventions mentioned; so much so that in respect of the concrete case with which we are occupied there is no one who, even by facts that constitute presumption, can make my Government responsible, I do not say by omission, even by negligence in the fulfillment of its obligations.

My Government is completely ignorant of what is the present residence of Dr. Alfaro, or what are his activities or intentions for revolution in the sister Republic of El Salvador; but, on the other hand, it can give assurance that General Barahona has for several months been, and is, living with his family quietly in the city of San Pedro Sula, capital of the Department of Cortes, a section which is very distant from the Salvadoran frontier, which he will not cross in the quality of a revolutionist, because if any machinations should be plotted in the sense indicated it would not pass unnoticed by my Government, and my Government would not permit it.

I assure [etc.]

RAF'L ALVARADO M.

The American Minister to Honduras to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Tegucigalpa, January 18, 1912—4 p. m.

The following telegram received this morning by the Minister for Foreign Affairs from the Chargé d'Affaires of Honduras in Salvador and I have been requested to bring it to your attention:

[Translation.]

I addressed a note to-day to the Foreign Office to the effect that my Government has received notice through various channels that Colonel Jacinto Velásquez, accompanied by other emigrados, is on the Salvadoran frontier enlisting men, organizing groups soldiers, purchasing elements of war, with the object of invading Honduras February first; that in Agua Blanca jurisdiction, Concepcion, Oriente, there are groups ready to invade; that Ochoa Velásquez is at Jucuapa encouraging and sustaining emigrados in hope revolution against Honduras and in violation of article 16, treaty of peace and amity, subscribed Washington. I deem it expedient to indicate to your excellency that chiefs and leaders Honduras emigration resident this Republic are Generals Gutiérrez, Valladares, Cariab, Zúñiga; Colonels Mejía, Ramírez, Bulner, Jacinto Velásquez, Sierra, Amaya, and Dr. Ochoa Velásquez. In accordance with instructions of my Government I denounce movement [of] chiefs and leaders indicated and, making use of right authorized by article cited, respectfully request Government of your excellency to order immediate concentration this capital.

MANUEL J. VARGAS.

WHITE.

File No. 816.00/157.

The American Minister to Salvador to the Secretary of State.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, January 19, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the Department's telegram of the 16th instant, 4 p. m.,[1] asking if the President of Salvador would furnish me copies of telegrams proving the withdrawal of Guatemalan troops from the Guatemalan-Salvadoran frontier, and also referring to my telegram of the 17th instant, 2 p. m.,[1] advising the Department that at my informal request the Minister for Foreign Affairs had promised to furnish me copies of the before-mentioned telegrams, and adding that I would forward the same as soon as I had had them copied and translated, I now have the honor to inclose herewith a copy and translation of three of the telegrams in question.[1]

The telegram of Colonel Santos, from Chalchuapa, dated the 13th instant, addressed to the President of Salvador, says "that the troops of Estrada Cabrera are abandoning the provisional barracks which they had near the frontier, and that they are now allowing people to pass from there, and vice versa."

The telegram of General Cristales, from Ahuachapan, informs the President "that the Guatemalan forces which were on the frontier are concentrating and that all remains quiet."

The telegram of Colonel Colocho, from Metapan, dated the 14th instant, advises the President that "the Guatemalan troops are abandoning the positions which they had on the frontier, there remaining only some squads of a few soldiers pursuing smugglers and malefactors."

The Minister for Foreign Affairs informed me that President Araujo had received many other telegrams from the frontier during the 13th and 14th instant referring to the change of conditions there for the better, but that the three telegrams which are inclosed herewith are the only ones that state specifically that the Guatemalan troops were being withdrawn from the Guatemalan-Salvadoran frontier.

I have been informed by both President Araujo and Minister for Foreign Affairs Castro Ramírez that conditions on the northern frontier are now perfectly tranquil, and that no further trouble there is apprehended for the present, at least.

I have [etc.]

WILLIAM HEIMKE.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 816.00/169.

The American Minister to Guatemala to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 208.]

American Legation,
Guatemala, January 23, 1912.

Sir: In continuation of my despatch No. 206, of the 16th instant, and with reference to your telegram of January 16, 4 p. m., which reached me the following morning, I have the honor to inform you that I immediately communicated the substance of the first paragraph of the latter to the Salvadoran Chargé d'Affaires, who had already received similar advices from his Government; and subsequently to the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

With respect to the second paragraph of your above-mentioned telegram, I decided, after consultation with the military attaché, that it would be better that the latter should not go over the Salvador frontier. The considerations which led me to this view were that, whatever the previous conditions may have been, it was evident from President Estrada Cabrera's memorandum, which accompanied my despatch No. 197, of the 2d instant, that he considered all traces of military preparations, if any had existed, could be removed before the inspection could take place, and that if the military attaché of this Legation confirmed the absence of military preparations this would be merely playing into the hands of the President of Guatemala.

After the receipt of the President's memorandum, referred to above, I consulted with the military attaché as to the possible results of an inspection of the frontier, and was informed by Major Clark that if serious military preparations had been made it would be impossible to conceal the fact from a trained observer. This, however, would not apply to the mere presence of the barefooted soldiery of the country, whose needs are almost nil, although there would be a possibility of gathering some information from residents as to their presence or absence in unusually great numbers.

I have [etc.]

R. S. Reynolds Hitt.

File No. 816.00.

The American Minister to Salvador to the Secretary of State.

No. 213.]

American Legation,
San Salvador, January 27, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inclose herewith a copy and translation of three memoranda[1] handed to me by the Chargé d'Affaires of Honduras at this capital, dated the 25th, 26th, and 27th instant, relative to the disappearance from San Salvador, on the 22d instant, of Gen. Dionisio Gutiérrez, head of the Honduran political emigrados in this country, who, accompanied by Gens. Jesús Jeremías Zúñiga and José María Valladares, had proceeded to Sensuntepeque, a frontier town in Salvador, with the object of invading Honduras.

My telegram to the Department of the 25th instant, 8 a. m.,[1] reporting the disappearance from this city of the before-mentioned revolutionary leaders, was based on the Chargé's memorandum of the 25th instant, and my telegram of the 26th instant, 2 p. m., advising the Department of the recapture of Gens. Gutiérrez and Zúñiga, was based on the Chargé's memorandum of that date, and also upon a telephone conversation with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, who had called me up for the purpose of acquainting me with the capture of these men.

---

[1] Not printed.

The third memorandum of the Honduran Chargé d'Affaires states that Gens. Gutiérrez and Zúñiga, duly guarded, had left San Vicente for this city at 5 o'clock this morning; that Gen. Valladares, whose disappearance constitutes a serious danger to the peace of Honduras, has not yet been captured; that in order to put down completely this chimerical attempt at revolution it devolves upon President Araujo to cause Gen. Valladares to be captured, and that the Chargé has been informed by President Manuel Bonilla, from Tegucigalpa, that Honduras has not been invaded by the emigrados on this occasion, and that the most absolute calm reigns in that country.

I have [etc.],

William Heimke.

VISIT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO SALVADOR.[1]

File No. 033.1100 K77/10.

The Minister of Costa Rica in Charge of the Legation of Salvador to the Acting Secretary of State.

Legation of Salvador,
Washington, February 14, 1912.

My Dear Mr. Secretary: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, this afternoon, of your esteemed letter dated yesterday[2] in which you were pleased to inform me that [etc.].

In answer thereto it affords me great pleasure to say that the Government and people of Salvador appreciate in all its importance the happy thought of His Excellency the President and will receive with the deepest gratification the honor of the visit of his excellency the Secretary of State. I am sure that he will have opportunity to notice how highly they regard the happy and cordial traditional amity which it has been and is the aim of Salvador to cultivate with the United States.

On Monday, the 12th instant, I called at the Department and left word that I will be very glad if I can be of any service in connection with Secretary Knox's trip, and I hope to be informed of the precise date when he will arrive in Salvador.

With many thanks for your courtesy, I am [etc.],

J. B. Calvo.

---

[1] This subject is officially treated by the Government of Salvador in the "Libro Rosado de El Salvador" (Pink Book of Salvador) or "Boletín" of the Ministerio de Relaciones Exteriores, Vol. IV, No. 3, for March, 1912, pp. 161-168, transmitted to the Department by the American Minister with his dispatch of July 24, 1912 (not printed).

[2] The identic note printed under Panama: "Visit of the Secretary of State to the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea," p. 1240.

File No. 033.1100 K77/71.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 4, 1912.

The Secretary of State and his party will arrive March 10 at Acajutla, will remain at San Salvador the 11th and 12th, and will leave on the 13th for San José, Guatemala.

WILSON.

Speech of His Excellency Don Manuel Araujo, President of Salvador, welcoming Mr. Knox at San Salvador, March 11, 1912.

[Translation.]

YOUR EXCELLENCY: In the name of the people of Salvador and of the Government over which I preside I extend a most cordial welcome to your excellency. Your presence here, at this time, will establish an epoch of note in the history of Central America. You bear to us on your visit of courtesy the good will of a great nation, one of the most powerful peoples of the world. We acknowledge your visit as an act of regard, and I, especially, at this moment, feel the spirit of the American, the Latin and the Indian stirring upon my lips to enable me to render a complete testimony of affection to your great nation, your Government, and to your excellency. Your country exhibits before the world, as a great and sovereign nation, the glowing example of the liberty and wisdom of your privileged race, forming an attractive and enviable standard for all other peoples. We, though constituted as small nationalities, possess the nobility and loftiness of purpose engendered by honor and faith in our destinies; and your excellency may feel assured that in Salvador, as throughout all Central America, there burns brightly, exceeding brightly, that noble ambition which is the objective point of all cultured peoples to occupy a prominent position in the concert of the civilized and free nations of the globe. Welcome, most honored Mr. Secretary, as also your distinguished family and your brilliant suite. It is our desire that the time spent by you in this section of Central America may be agreeable, and that the benefits of this visit may, at no distant day, flower into the peace, liberty, and progress of our country's ensign.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

EXCELLENCY: I come to your country not in the capacity of a diplomatic representative but by the direction of the President of the United States as the bearer of a message of friendship and good will from the American people, and I desire to express to Your Excellency my appreciation of the cordial and enthusiastic welcome accorded me by the officials of your Government and the people of Salvador.

It is the earnest desire of the President and people of the United States that the mutual relations between our two countries should continue to become even more intimate and cordial than they fortunately are to-day. I earnestly hope that Your Excellency and the people of Salvador may continue to enjoy that happiness and prosperity which Providence up to the present time has so bounteously accorded you and them.

Speech of His Excellency Dr. Manuel Castro Ramírez, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Salvador, at a banquet given in honor of Mr. Knox at the National Palace, San Salvador, March 11, 1912.

[Translation.]

GENTLEMEN: Invested with the high character of Secretary of State of the Government of the United States of North America, the eminent jurisconsult and statesman His Excellency Philander C. Knox is now visiting us, the bearer of the messages of friendship and sympathy which the powerful Government of the White House sends us through the medium of its most distinguished representative.

A cause of veritable satisfaction is the visit of him who comes preceded by so conspicuous renown, for it involves the generous and noble idea that new bonds of friendship well understood must continue to bind these Governments closer together and because this is a happy occasion to evidence to our illustrious guest the pacific and progressive evolution which is going on in Salvador, thanks to the highly patriotic spirit of the Government presided over by Dr. Araujo and to the wisdom and high ideals of the Salvadoran nation, which in its internal political construction embraces lofty principles of liberty and order, and of peace and intimate communion with the sister nations of the Isthmus, under the symbolic ægis of its democratic institutions.

Salvador, like all the countries of Central America, has a great example to imitate in the American people, both for their untiring spirit of advancement in all spheres of human life and for their constant and gigantic industry, which has placed them on the pinnacle of greatness; or, rather, for their eminently republican doctrines, which have been sustained and vouched for by characters of the type of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, and Lincoln, who are the stars that shine by the side of others in the political sky of that marvelous center of modern civilization. Salvador, in a salutary communication of ideas, will have much to avail itself of and learn from the people who disseminate civilization by the currents of their material and intellectual culture, who owe their immense evolution to the well advanced and admirably defined progress of liberty and law: like a compass which marks a changeless route for the people who follow fruitful ideals in the realization of their immortal destinies in the immense trajectory of the centuries.

The Government of Salvador expects, as a pleasing reality, that the visit with which His Excellency Mr. Knox honors us so exceedingly to-day will have beneficial and practical results from the rapprochement and concord of both peoples and Governments, which will open a new era in international friendship, as his courteous visit is in the nature of a frank refutation of the unfounded prejudices of those who have not had the fortunate opportunity, as we have, of hearing and admiring the most noble ideas of peace and friendship which he presents to us, ideas of which His Excellency the North American Secretary of State is the distinguished bearer, coming, with his words of fraternity and his honoring presence, on a mission of courtesy, bearing in one hand the olive branch of peace and in the other the heraldic emblem of the noble and just friendship of the American Government and people, who do us this high honor of sending us fraternal messages through the medium of their highest representative.

Let us drink, gentlemen, to the glories of the American people; to His Excellency President Taft; to the most worthy Secretary of State, Mr. Knox; to his most distinguished lady and brilliant suite—and on raising our glasses in their praise let us raise also our hearts, which burn with the sacred flame of pure patriotism, thus responding with frank cordiality to the homage which His Excellency the Secretary of State of the great Republic pays us by his visit.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

MR. PRESIDENT, MR. SECRETARY OF STATE, LADIES, AND GENTLEMEN:

It is with the feeling of sincere gratitude that I desire, on my own behalf and on the part of the people and Government of the United States, to express thanks for the courteous and cordial hospitality you have so generously lavished upon me and upon my family.

It is indeed a pleasure for me, Mr. President, to come from my countrymen as the bearer of a message of their good will and friendship to the people of Salvador.

Although the smallest of all the American republics, Salvador has much of which it may justly feel proud. Early among the Central American republics to proclaim its independence and to embark in the struggle for national emancipation, Salvador has always given to the world a wholesome example as a peace-loving and industrious people. With its dense population and small area its people have found it advantageous and even necessary to seek new fields of occupation and are gradually spreading into the neighboring republics, there to engage in the pursuit of agriculture, and lands theretofore unproductive promptly respond to the sturdy and capable hand of the enterprising Salvadoran who has gone peacefully to promote their industrial conquest.

Salvador is the only sovereign nation of the Northern Continent of the Western Hemisphere which does not border on both oceans, and the opening of the Panama Canal will shorten by some 10,000 miles the journey by water between Acajutla and New York, which should naturally be one of the chief markets for Salvadoran products. The United States is not only the greatest producing nation but likewise is the greatest consuming nation of the world, and as soon as the products of Central America, by being popularized in the United States, becomes sufficiently known, and the facilities for transporting them thither are made adaquate, the trade with our Caribbean neighbors will grow and develop to an enormous extent.

The people of the United States have been too ignorant of our southern neighbors, their vast, undeveloped resources, and the measures they have taken to open themselves to the world.

If we are to enjoy with them the satisfactions of international friendship, the advantages of international trade, and the blessings of peace we must give more consideration to the means by which these advantages are brought about. Friendship and peace are indeed the common, if not inevitable, consequences of commercial intercourse and result from reciprocal dependence of countries upon each other's products, sympathies, and assistance.

I have heretofore elsewhere in my journey spoken of the possibilities of greater reciprocal helpfulness between the United States and the other American republics. This might take the form, in part, of more generous measures of commercial reciprocity between them. This, it seems, would be a natural expression of their mutual interdependence. In speaking, some two years ago, of the spirit and purpose of American diplomacy I then expressed the hope that the commerce between the United States and its southern neighbors, which makes so powerfully for friendship, might be adjusted on a more reciprocal basis.

The total annual trade of the Central American states, not including Panama, with the United States now amounts to something like $22,500,000. An idea as to what extent this commerce is capable of development and expansion may be obtained by recalling for a moment what has taken place with regard to the commerce of Mexico, whose close relations with the United States have so materially contributed to the rapid development of an enormous volume of trade.

Picture, then, the possibilities of these Central American republics and pause for a moment to consider that Salvador, in proportion to its area, produces more by far than any of its neighbors, and some faint idea may then be obtained of the magic to be worked by the closer intercourse between them and the United States.

By far the most active sphere of American diplomacy to-day is that of our relations with the twenty other republics of the Western Hemisphere. Most of these republics are passing through an evolution similar to our own—that of the peopling and developing of vast areas and the attempt to perfect republican government under similar institutions. Now that so many of the republics to the south of us have achieved government as stable, as enlightened, and as responsible as our own, it becomes more and more incumbent upon the citizens of the United States to know and appreciate them.

Nothing could have gratified me more than the sentiment the Minister for Foreign Affairs has just expressed when he said: The Government of Salvador expects, as a pleasing reality, that my visit to-day will have beneficial and practical results for the rapprochement and concord of both peoples and Governments, which will open a new era in international friendship and is in the nature of a frank refutation of unfounded prejudices. It is, indeed, the supreme purpose of my visit to show that upon our part there is no justification or substantial reason for prejudice or misunderstanding between the people of the United States and the people of Central America. What we both sorely need is that the truth about Central America and Central Americans and of their high civilization and lofty purpose and graceful and dignified hospitality should reach the United States through unpolluted sources and that the truth as to the motives and friendliness of the Government of the United States should reach you without wicked perversion. Then, indeed, would our countries and our peoples be unhampered in our advancement in the paths of rectitude and trustful confidence to higher levels of welfare and beneficial association. By such advances the stature of equality tends gradually to become as real as the equality of sovereignty and to reach the high level of stability, justice, and moderation and mutual responsibility which now happily characterize the relations between Salvador and the United States.

With its beautiful and health-giving mountain ranges, fertile and productive valleys, dense and labor-loving population dedicated to peaceful pursuits, Salvador presents, Mr. President, a spectacle which irresistibly merits the admiration of every foreigner whose good fortune it may be to touch these shores and justifiably inspires with pride the heart of every true son of Salvador.

File No. 033.1100 K77/139.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Extract.]

No. 221.] AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, March 16, 1912.

SIR: Referring to the Department's telegram of the 4th instant, I have the honor to render the following report on the reception and entertainment of the Secretary of State during his sojourn in Salvador:

On the afternoon of the 9th instant a special commission of Government officials, headed by the Minister for Foreign Affairs and accompanied by a committee of prominent citizens with their wives and daughters, which party I also accompanied, went in a special train to the port of Acajutla to meet and greet the Secretary of State.

At 9.30 o'clock a. m. on the 10th instant the U. S. S. Maryland arrived in the waters of Acajutla, and after dropping anchor exchanged with a land battery of Salvadoran artillery a national salute of 21 guns. At 1 o'clock of the same day the Secretary, together with the persons accompanying him, disembarked, and as his launch approached the pier a salute of 19 guns was fired in his honor by the Salvadoran battery on shore. When the Secretary and his party had landed and after I had presented Mr. Knox to Doctor Castro Ramírez, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, a band of the Salvadoran Government played the American national anthem; and after the Minister for Foreign Affairs had presented to the Secretary of State the Salvadoran officials and the ladies and the other gentlemen forming the commission and committee for the reception of the Secretary and his party, our train started for this capital, where we arrived at 4.20 p. m. At the railway station here the Secretary of State was welcomed to Salvador in the name of the President of the Republic by Mr. Rafael Guirola Duke, Minister of Finance and Public Credit, and by a second commission of high Government officials of the society of this capital: and after a repetition of the American national anthem, the Secretary, together with his family and suite, was escorted in automobiles and Government carriages through a double file of military from the railway station to the center of the city, to the residence of Deputy don Carlos Meléndez, which had been placed at the exclusive disposal of Secretary Knox and his official family of ten persons and where a detachment of cadets of the Polytechnic School was in attendance upon the Secretary day and night as a guard of honor.

At 10 o'clock on the morning of the 11th instant the Secretary of State was received in public audience by the President of the Republic at the National Palace in the presence of the Cabinet, other high Government officials, and members of the Diplomatic and Consular Corps; and after the exchange between the Secretary and President Araujo of the brief discourses usual on such occasions, Doctor Castro Ramírez, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, presented to the Secretary of State the members of the Judiciary, of the National Assembly, of the Diplomatic and Consular Corps, and of the municipality.

From 4 to 6 p. m. of this same day I had the honor and the pleasure of tendering to the Secretary of State and Mrs. Knox a reception and garden party at this Legation, for which I had issued formal invitations and which was attended by the President of the Republic and his family, by Cabinet officers, members of the Diplomatic and Consular bodies, and by high officials of the Government in the legislative and judicial branches, and besides, as said by the Diario de El Salvador, "all that San Salvador has of select, elegant, and cultured society had complete representation among both ladies and gentlemen."

At 7.30 o'clock there was given by the Ministry for Foreign Affairs a state banquet at the National Palace in honor of the Secretary of State, which was attended by 120 persons and at which banquet there were exchanged between Dr. Castro Ramírez, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and the Secretary of State, notable discourses.

At 10 o'clock on the morning of the 12th instant there was tendered to the Secretary of State by the Salvadoran Minister of War, a military review at the Campo de Marte lasting two hours, which was also attended by the President of the Republic and his family, and by about two thousand other spectators; and at 9 o'clock p. m. of the same day the program of the festivities arranged for the entertainment of the Secretary of State during his visit to Salvador terminated with a grand ball given in his honor and in that of Mrs. Knox by the President of the Republic, in the Casino Salvadoreño, and I may say that it has rarely fallen to my lot to witness a more beautiful ball than this.

At 8.45 a. m. of the 13th instant the Secretary of State with his suite, and accompanied by the Minister for Foreign Affairs and the same ladies and gentlemen who formed the commission that had escorted him from the coast to this capital, departed in a special train for Acajutla, President Araujo with his wife and daughter, and also members of the Cabinet, and other high officials of the Government being at the railway station of this city to bid the Secretary and his party goodbye. We arrived at Acajutla at about noon, and upon the kind invitation of the Secretary the above-named commission boarded the U. S. S. Maryland and partook of a delightful luncheon. When the Secretary of State left Salvadoran soil a salute of 19 guns was fired in his honor by the Salvadoran land battery. At 3 o'clock the commission bade farewell to the Secretary of State and Mrs. Knox, as well as to the members of his party, and came ashore.

During the nights of the 10th, 11th, and 12th instant all Government edifices were splendidly illuminated and presented an aspect most imposing and pleasing.

From my observation, I do not hesitate to say that during his stay in Salvador the Secretary of State was the recipient of very many manifestations of respectful homage and of every courtesy at the hands of all who had the good fortune to meet him; and since he has gone I have heard in social as well as in official circles none but expressions of the extreme pleasure which his presence among us had brought, and of profound regrets at his departure.

I have [etc.]

William Heimke.

File No. 033.1100 K77/168.

The President of Salvador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

Executive Mansion,
San Salvador, April 22, 1912.

I congratulate you on the brilliant success of official visit to Central America and other countries which you honored with your presence. Salvador cherishes pleasant memories of you, your estimable family, and distinguished suite. I wish you well being and prosperity.

President Araujo.

File No. 033.1100 K77/168.

The Secretary of State to the President of Salvador.

[Telegram.]

Department of State,
Washington, April 23, 1912.

For Mrs. Knox and myself I thank you for your courteous telegram of congratulation and assure you that I shall always remember kindness of yourself and the people of Salvador during my visit.

P. C. Knox.

File No. 701.1611/26.

The Minister of Salvador to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

Legation of Salvador,
Washington, April 25, 1912.

Excellency: I have the honor to inform your excellency that, under a resolution of my Government dated March 18 last, I have been appointed Envoy Extraordinary on Special Mission with the duty of offering to your Government its feeling of profound gratitude for the cordial visit with which your excellency honored us.

In so informing your excellency, I beg you to learn from the President the day and hour when he will be pleased to receive me; at the same time I beg leave to enclose a copy of the remarks I shall have the honor to deliver on that occasion.

With assurances [etc.]

F. Mejía.

File No. 701.1611/26.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Minister of Salvador.

Department of State,
Washington, May 8, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 25th ultimo in which you request the designation of a time when the President will receive you as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary on Special Mission for the purpose of conveying to the President the expression of the gratitude of the Government of Salvador for the visit of the Secretary of State to that country, and to inform you that the President has been pleased to designate Friday, the 10th instant, at 2.35 o'clock p. m., as the day and hour when he will receive you for this purpose.

Mr. Chandler Hale, the Third Assistant Secretary of State, will meet you at the White House and present you to the President in your special capacity.

Accept [etc.]

Huntington Wilson,

File No. 701.1611/28.

Remarks of the Minister of Salvador, on Special Mission, when received by the President in Special Audience, May 10, 1912.

Mr. President: I have been honored by my Government with the high office of Envoy Extraordinary on Special Mission to express to you in its name and that of the Salvadoran people, and especially that of the President of the Republic, their profoundly grateful acknowledgement of the cordial visit with which they have been honored in your name by the Honorable Secretary of State, Philander C. Knox.

I am now discharging that pleasant duty, Sir, and in so doing I cherish the hope that you will see therein a sincere token of the high regard in which we hold you and our ardent desire that the good and cordial relations happily existing between Salvador and this great Republic may continue unalterable.

The Honorable Secretary of State's visit to my country, Sir, has been appreciated to its full value by my Government, and there is no doubt that its beneficent results will be felt. The noble mission that took him thither, his frank declarations and disinterested views, in conjunction with the eminent personal gifts of so distinguished and high a personage could not but produce a pleasing impression and excite our sympathy with your enlightened Government.

I conclude, Mr. President, in placing in your hands the autograph letter of President Araujo and I express in his name, in that of the Salvadoran people, and in my own, wishes for your personal happiness and the prosperity of this great people.

File No. 033.1611/1.

The President of Salvador to the President.

[Translation.—The original was delivered by the Minister on May 10.]

NATIONAL PALACE,
San Salvador, March 18, 1912.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: The honoring visit of courtesy made in the early days of this month by his excellency the Secretary of State of your great nation, Mr. Philander C. Knox, in the name of your enlightened Government of which that statesman forms part, and the words of frank and true friendship he spoke to us on that most auspicious occasion in Your Excellency's name, have largely contributed to the strengthening of the good relations existing between Salvador and the United States of North America, and, desiring to voice the sentiments of gratitude by which my Government and the Salvadoran people are animated, I have decided to commission Señor Don Frederico Mejía, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, so that he will appear on a Special Mission before Your Excellency to utter those sentiments.

This happy occasion affords me the welcome satisfaction of assuring Your Excellency of the homage of the most distinguished consideration with which I subscribe myself

Your true and good friend,

MANUEL E. ARAUJO.

File No. 701.1611/28.

Reply of the President.

MR. MINISTER: In sending the Secretary of State on a visit to the countries of Central America I was animated entirely by a desire to show to those countries the friendliness and good will of the United States toward them. It is especially gratifying to me that the Government of Salvador's appreciation of this friendly purpose has been such as to induce it to make acknowledgment thereof by a Special Mission.

Secretary Knox did not fail upon his return to make me acquainted with the cordial welcome and generous hospitality extended to him by the President, the officials and the people of Salvador. We are deeply impressed with the honor done him and our thanks are due to one and all for the warmth of the reception accorded to him. It is my hope that Mr. Knox's visit will do much toward a closer union and a better understanding between the two Governments and peoples. I shall at an early day make due acknowledgment of President Araujo's letter, but I ask you to be so good as to make known, in the meantime, to the Government and people of Salvador our profound appreciation of their courteous treatment of Secretary Knox, evidencing, as I doubt not it does, not only a recognition of his personal merits, but a desire as well for that fraternity of relations which it is your wish and mine to promote.

I thank you for your good wishes.

File No. 033.1611/1.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister.

No. 106.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 28, 1912.

SIR: I enclose, with office copy, a letter by which the President acknowledges the letter, dated March 18 last, from the Constitutional President of Salvador expressing his appreciation of the recent visit of the Secretary of State to Salvador.

You will forward the copy to the Foreign Office and deliver the original in the manner most agreeable to His Excellency.

I am [etc.]

P. C. KNOX.

[Inclosure.]

The President to the President of Salvador.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, June 1, 1912.

GREAT AND GOOD FRIEND: I have received from the hands of Señor Don Federico Mejia Your Excellency's letter of the 18th of March last, in which you express your appreciation of the recent visit of Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State of the United States of America, to your capital.

I cordially reciprocate the sentiments of friendship and good will which you in the name of the Salvadoran people conveyed to me and I assure you of the best wishes of the people of the United States for the prosperity of Salvador.

Your Good Friend,

WM. H. TAFT.

File No. 033.1100 K77/219b.

The Secretary of State to the American Chargé d'Affaires.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 3, 1912.

SIR: I have received from His Excellency, Señor Don Manuel E. Araujo, President of El Salvador, a handsome volume entitled: "Album del Centenario" in memory of the one hundredth anniversary of the beginning of the war of independence of El Salvador and the other Republics of Central America.[1]

You will avail yourself of an early opportunity to express in person to His Excellency, President Araujo, my thanks for this valuable work, so interesting and instructive, which has served to recall to me with pleasure my recent visit to El Salvador and the other republics of Central America.

I am [etc.],

P. C. KNOX.

---

[1] The "Pink Book of Salvador," containing an account of the Secretary's visit (File No. 716.000).

File No. 816.015.

THE COAT OF ARMS AND THE FLAG OF SALVADOR.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

No. 260.]

AMERICAN LEGATION,
San Salvador, August 24, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a decree of the National Legislative Assembly which was passed on the 17th of May, 1912, and published in the Diario Oficial of the 20th of that month, prescribing a new coat of arms for the flag of Salvador, which new insignia will begin to be adopted on the 15th of September next. I also enclose a translation of this decree.

It was only a few days ago that the jury which was to decide upon the form to be adopted for the new coat of arms rendered its finding, and yesterday the Minister for Foreign Affairs transmitted to me with a note (a copy and translation of which I enclose), a number of copies of the coat of arms and models of the flag of Salvador, together with a description of the new national insignia, a copy and translation of which description, as well as of the coat of arms and the models of the flag, also acompany this despatch.

I have [etc.]

WM. HEIMKE.

[Inclosure 1.—Translation.]

Decree.

The National Legislative Assembly of the Republic of Salvador, in the exercise of the powers conferred upon it by Section 16a of Article 67 of the Constitution, and at the initiative of the Chief Executive,

Decrees:

Article 1. The adoption for the Republic of Salvador of the coat of arms and flag of Central America decreed by the National Constituent Assembly of the United Provinces of Central America, on August 21, 1823, with the modifications hereinafter expressed.

Consequently:

1st. The coat of arms of Salvador shall be an equilateral triangle. At its base shall appear the ridge of five volcanoes, placed on land which appears to be watered by both seas; in the upper section a rainbow which covers them; below the rainbow the liberty cap shedding light; and, in the form of a semicircle within its rays, the legend: "September 15, 1821." Encircling the triangle shall be written in letters of gold, "Republic of Salvador in Central America." and at the base of the triangle: "God, Union and Liberty."[1]

2d. This coat of arms shall be placed in all the ports and public offices.

3d. The Great Seal of the Nation, that of the secretariat of the National Assembly, and of the agents of the Government and tribunals of justice shall have the same coat of arms.

4th. The national flag for the ports and vessels shall consist of three horizontal bands, the upper and lower ones blue and the middle band white, in which middle band shall be shown the coat of arms already described. In pennants the bands shall be placed perpendicularly in the order mentioned. The same flag shall be used by Government envoys to foreign countries. On merchant vessels flags and pennants shall not have the coat of arms, and in the central band shall be written in letters of silver "God, Union and Liberty".

5th. The flags and standards of military corps shall be arranged in the manner named in the previous number. The bands shall always be horizontal; in the central one shall be designed the coat of arms; in the upper band shall be written the words "God, Union and Liberty", and in the lower band the class and number of each corps. On those of the infantry and artillery corps both inscriptions shall be in letters of gold and on those of the cavalry corps in letters of silver.

---

[1] The word "and" does not appear in the coat of arms.

Article 2. The Decree of April 28, 1865, is repealed.

Article 3. This Decree shall have the force of law after September 15 of the current year.

Given in the Chamber of Sessions of the Legislative Power, National Palace, San Salvador, May 17, 1912.

F. VAQUERO, President.

JUAN MENA,
1st Secretary.
R. QUINTANILLA,
2d Secretary.

NATIONAL PALACE,
San Salvador, May 27, 1912.

Let it be executed.

MANUEL E. ARAUJO.

[Inclosure 2.—Translation.]

Description of the national insignia.[1]

INFANTRY STANDARD.

Length 1 m. 45 cm. Stripes 30 cm. each.

It will consist of three stripes, the upper and lower ones blue, and the central one, on which will be designed the coat of arms, white. The coat of arms will be in the center of the standard. In the upper stripe will be written in letters of gold the words: Dios, Unión y Libertad (God, Union and Liberty), and in the lower the class by number of each corps.

STANDARD FOR MOUNTED ARMS.

Length 60 cm. Stripes 15 cm. each.

It will consist of three vertical stripes, the right and left ones blue, and the central one, on which will be designed the coat of arms, white. In the upper part will be written the words: Dios, Unión y Libertad, and in the lower the class by number of each corps, in letters of silver for the cavalry and of gold for the artillery. The coat of arms shall be in the center of the standard.

FLAGS FOR VESSELS.

Length 1 m. 70 cm. Stripes 30 cm. each.

It will consist of three stripes, the upper and lower blue, and the central one, on which shall be designed the coat of arms, white. Flags and pennants on merchant vessels will not carry the coat of arms, and in the central stripe will be written in letters of silver the words: Dios, Unión y Libertad.

Government envoys to foreign countries will use this flag.

FLAGS TO BE RAISED (OVER BUILDINGS).

Length 2 m. 30 cm. Stripes 60 cm. each.

It will consist of three horizontal stripes, the upper and lower blue, and the central one white.

---

[1] Transmitted to the American Minister by the Minister for Foreign Affairs, August 23, 1912.

TURKEY.

WAR BETWEEN TURKEY AND MONTENEGRO, SERBIA, BULGARIA AND GREECE.—PROTECTION OF AMERICAN INTERESTS.—GOOD OFFICES OF NEUTRAL POWERS.

File No. 767.70/16.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.—Extracts.]

American Embassy.
Constantinople, October 8, 1912.

The Chargé d'Affaires of Montenegro to-day presented a declaration of war to the Turkish Government, which has ordered immediate offensive action.

Rockhill.

File No. 767.70/24.

American Embassy,
Constantinople, October 10, 1912.

The Ambassadors of the European Powers to-day delivered to the Minister for Foreign Affairs a joint note.

Rockhill.

File No. 767.70/26.

American Embassy,
Constantinople, October 14, 1912.

The reply of the Turkish Government to the joint note of the Ambassadors says that the necessity for reforms in European Turkey had already been recognized, and that the Turkish Government expects to apply them without foreign interference: that if attempts at reform heretofore made have failed it is due to the disturbing machinations of agitators whose object is apparent: that the Turkish Government is grateful for the friendly intention of the Powers and will associate itself with them to avert conflict, and firmly intends to execute the law of 1880, although it doubts the binding force of Article 23 of the Treaty of Berlin when many other articles thereof have been carried out against the treaty's letter and spirit. The reply further says that it would be unjust to impute to the constitutional administration the faults of the old régime.

The Bulgarian Minister to-day delivered a note giving Bulgaria's peace terms: autonomy of the three Macedonian provinces; Swiss or Belgian governors general; elective provincial assemblies; gendarmerie; free education; milice; the application to be intrusted to Christians and Moslems in equal number in a superior council under supervision of the great Powers and the Balkan States through their representatives at Constantinople; these reforms to be put in force within six months and demobilization ordered as proofs of assent.

Rockhill.

File No. 767.70/33.

The American Minister to Roumania to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

American Legation,
Bucharest, October 18, 1912.

To-day Servia declared war with Turkey.

Jackson.

File No. 767.70/35.

American Legation,
Bucharest, October 18, 1912.

War with Turkey declared by Bulgaria.

Jackson.

File No. 767.70/37.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Constantinople, October 18, 1912.

War with Turkey declared to-day by Greece. The Ministers of Greece, Bulgaria, and Turkey have departed.

Rockhill.

File No. 767.70/44.

The Chargé d'Affaires of Greece to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

No. 4676.]

Greek Legation,
Washington, October 18, 1912.

Mr. Secretary of State: Pursuant to orders from my Government, I have the honor to bring the following information to your excellency's notice:

The anarchy which is reigning in Turkey and which is so deeply disturbing the repose and security of the neighboring countries having become aggravated recently, the great Powers have deemed it necessary to take into hand the accomplishment of the reforms provided in article 23 of the Treaty of Berlin; in response to this most recent expression of the collective will of Europe, the Sublime Porte resorted to a procedure which has served it more than once; it declared that it would enforce important reforms both in Turkey in Europe and in the provinces of Asia, but that it does not believe that any foreign interference in the enforcement will be beneficial to the reforms. This promise of the Ottoman Government to enforce serious reforms itself met everywhere that distrust of which Count Andrassy spoke in his note of September 30, 1875; one of the chief causes of this distrust, which the former Chancellor of Austria-Hungary rightly said was deeply rooted, must be sought in the fact that more than one measure announced in the recent rescripts of the Sultan has been proclaimed without the lot of the Christians being appreciably improved thereby, and for 37 years events have abundantly demonstrated the correctness of this judgment. Therefore, the Royal Governments of Bulgaria, Greece, and Servia, being unable to tolerate any longer the sufferings of their countrymen in Turkey and a situation big with dangers for the future, had decided to ask an efficient supervision for the preparation and accomplishment of the only radical reforms capable of improving the miserable lot of the Christians, and the pacification of the peninsula of the Balkans. This last attempt, the moderateness of which stands in contrast to the provocative attitude of Turkey, which had without serious cause mobilized against the Balkan States, having failed, and the rupture of diplomatic relations having been ordered by the Sublime Porte, the Royal Governments of Bulgaria, Greece, and Servia found themselves obliged, to their great regret, to resort to the force of arms.

Greece being therefore in a state of war with Turkey, addresses to her a formal declaration in accordance with article 1 of the convention on the opening of hostilities of October 17, 1907. The purpose which she is pursuing in declaring war coincides with the interests of all civilized peoples, for the foreigners residing in the provinces whose permanent pacification is the object of the war can not help benefiting by this pacification under a reign of order, freedom, and progress. The interests of the citizens of all countries are sure to be protected, while material prosperity and intellectual development are certain to be the object of constant and enlightened solicitude. Therefore, the Royal Government believes that it may count on the sympathies of friendly nations, and it makes an urgent appeal to the Government of the United States not to refuse it its benevolent neutrality in the arduous task it has just assumed.

Please accept [etc.]

L. L. Caftanzoglu.

File No. 767.70/41.

The American Minister to Roumania to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Bucharest, October 21, 1912.

An urgent appeal to the United States not to refuse its benevolent neutrality has just been made by the Government of Bulgaria.

Jackson.

File No. 767.70/41.

The Secretary of State to the American Minister to Roumania.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

Department of State,
Washington, October 30, 1912.

The request of Bulgaria conveyed in your telegram of the 21st is being considered. The Department's decision will be sent you by telegraph. Meanwhile you may say, if pressed for a reply, that this Government has not thus far found it necessary to make any further or more formal declaration of neutrality, in view of the comprehensive provisions of the Neutrality Act: see Revised Statutes, sections 5281 to 5291, both inclusive.

KNOX.

File No. 767.70/73.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, October 31, 1912.

It is rumored that the Bulgarian army is rapidly approaching Constantinople. In anticipation of a possible serious defeat of the Turkish army, and the consequent danger of this city with the routed troops thrown back upon it unprotected by military and police (nearly all of whom are at the front) from looting and violence, even massacres, it was to-day resolved at a meeting of the Diplomatic Corps:

1. That strong representations be made in the name of the Corps by its Dean, urging that all necessary protective measures be taken to insure the safety of the lives and property of foreign residents.
2. That the members of the Corps recommend to their Governments the presence of foreign war vessels as the only measure, in their opinion, likely to insure safety of life and property of foreigners; that they further recommend a conference of their Governments to this end; that meanwhile the Dean secure permission for the passage of such vessels through the Straits and the Bosphorus.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/75.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 1, 1912.

The Government has already taken certain steps for the safety of the city in pursuance of the representations made by the Diplomatic Corps.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/78.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 4, 1912.

At request of Diplomatic Corps permission was granted yesterday for passage of warships to protect foreign life and property.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/83.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 4, 1912.

The Turkish Government has asked for intervention of the Powers.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 367.11/7B.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 4, 1912.

The conditions at Constantinople described in your telegram of October 31 are naturally creating anxiety here. It is assumed that you would, if occasion arise, find it possible to arrange for extension by the naval forces of the friendly neutral Powers of adequate protection of such American citizens as can not be accommodated on the [station ship] Scorpion. There is no available American vessel nearer than our own shores.

ADEE.

File No. 367.11/8.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 5, 1912—2 p. m.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs assures me that adequate protection will be given our schools at Scutari and Robert College. I am investigating, through the captain of the Scorpion the measures taken by the Turkish authorities; if necessary I shall add to the protection with some of our sailors. The pupils in the schools, mostly of Greek and Bulgarian nationalities, are under the protection of Russia and France. The Americans have all been told where to take refuge in case of need. I hope to be able to protect them, but if necessary I will ask aid of neutral vessels. I consider it prudent to keep all Americans living in the outskirts as long as possible in Robert College. As we have no ships here I am not consulted by my colleagues, who have conferred as to plans for their own use.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/90.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 5, 1912.—7 p. m.

All of the Powers save one have accepted mediation and the Minister for Foreign Affairs believes that if mediation be made immediately it will prevent the possibility of the violence and anarchy that would result in case of a Turkish defeat and the disorderly entry of troops into the city. He therefore requested me to ask you to instruct our representatives at the capitals of the allied Powers in the interest of humanity to urge cessation of hostilities immediately.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 367.11/8.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 6, 1912.

Would announcement of intended despatch of an American war vessel strengthen your hands in facilitating adequate protection of American citizens and their interests? It would probably take a month for any vessel of our Navy to reach Turkish waters. If you deem it advisable to send one, what type of ship would you suggest? What destination?

ADEE.

File No. 367.11/12.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 7, 1912.

The measures I was taking when I sent my telegram of November 5, 2 p. m., have been substantially carried out and appear adequate, in conjunction with further possibility of refuge on British vessels here in case of need which my British colleague informs me can be given. Highly improbable duration of situation as long as a month. Six neutral vessels will arrive to-morrow; more later. City quiet. Unnecessary to announce intended despatch of an American war vessel.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/103.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 8, 1912.

Yesterday the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and later the Grand Vizier, told the Ambassadors of the five Powers that the Sultan had decided to remain in Constantinople but disclaims all responsibilty for the safety of its inhabitants if the Bulgarians capture it. These communications were reported by the Ambassadors to their Governments in identic terms, without recommendations.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 367.11/28A.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Secretary of the Navy.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 8, 1912.

I have the honor, in pursuance of instructions that I have received from the President, to request you to be good enough to despatch two vessels with the least possible delay to the ports of Beirut and Smyrna to protect or to give refuge to American citizens in case of antiforeign outbreaks there, subject, however, to any supplemental requests the American Embassy at Constantinople may make.

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

Approved.
WM. H. TAFT.

File No. 867.11/15A.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to France.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 8, 1912.

Hand to Minister for Foreign Affairs a letter substantially as follows:

"The Government of the United States, concerned over the possibility of chaotic conditions perhaps involving violence to foreigners and the safety of Americans in Turkey where large numbers of them are engaged in educational and missionary work, will despatch as soon as possible two naval vessels to the Mediterranean to proceed to Beirut and Smyrna, subject to change of orders by the American Embassy at Constantinople. The Government of the United States hopes that it will thus be able to share to some extent in any needed relief of foreigners in case of dangerous developments. My Government instructs me meanwhile to inquire whether it will be agreeable to your excellency's Government to issue to its Embassy at Constantinople and to the commanders of any ships that it may have in Turkish waters, such instructions as will insure protection to American citizens in Turkey in accordance with the dispositions deemed necessary by the Embassies at Constantinople, for the execution of which my Government must rely upon the Powers most intimately concerned with the political situation in the Near East.

The above instruction is sent also to London, Vienna, Rome, Berlin, and St. Petersburg, and is quoted to the Ambassador at Constantinople, who is instructed to confer with his colleagues with a view to securing in connection with the measures taken by the other Powers the fullest protection possible for Americans in the Ottoman Empire; and to telegraph to American consular officers in the Ottoman Empire, if the grounds for apprehension warrant that action, to warn American citizens of any real danger and inform them of measures taken.

WILSON.

File No. 367.11/41A.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 9, 1912.

Armored cruisers Tennessee and Montana sail November 12 at latest. Will arrive Smyrna about November 29 and Beirut about December 1, respectively.

WILSON.

File No. 367.11/16.

The American Ambassador to Great Britain to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
London, November 9, 1912.

The Under Secretary in charge of Near Eastern affairs says that the British Embassy was instructed November 6 to extend protection in their discretion to Americans; he took note of your request of November 8 that commanders of British vessels in Turkish waters receive similar instructions.

REID.

File No. 367.11/17.

The American Chargé d'Affaires at Vienna to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Vienna, November 9, 1912.

The Acting Minister for Foreign Affairs assures me that his Government will gladly instruct its Embassy at Constantinople in the sense of your telegram of November 8.

FRAZIER.

File No. 367.11/18.

The American Ambassador to Russia to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
St. Petersburg, November 9, 1912.

A letter presented as directed in your November 8. A formal answer will follow. Minister for Foreign Affairs meantime says Russian officers have instructions to protect all foreigners in Turkey including Americans.

GUILD.

File No. 367.11/20.

The American Ambassador to Italy to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Rome, November 10, 1912.

Minister for Foreign Affairs very cordially promised immediate telegram in the sense of your telegram of November 8.

O'BRIEN.

File No. 367.11/19.

The American Ambassador to Germany to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Berlin, November 10, 1912.

German Government cheerfully acquiesced in desire expressed in Department's telegram November 8 and appropriate instructions have been wired to Embassy at Constantinople including commanders of vessels and consuls.

LEISHMAN.

File No. 367.11/16.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to Great Britain.[1]

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 11, 1912.

Convey to Minister for Foreign Affairs the gratification of this Government upon learning that its desires had been anticipated by the British Government in relation to protection of Americans at Constantinople.

KNOX.

File No. 367.11/28.

The American Ambassador to Great Britain to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
London, November 11, 1912.

The British Ambassador at Constantinople reports to the Foreign Office that arrangements have been made to accommodate bona fide American citizens at Constantinople in case of need on board H. M. S. Weymouth; protection at other ports is now being arranged for, and would be extended, as Sir Edward Grey understands, in conjunction with other Powers.

REID.

File No. 367.11/39A.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 11, 1912.

Treasury Department is holding at Port Said, subject to your Embassy's recommendations, the revenue cutter Unalga, to whose commander you will telegraph directly your decision in view of situation in Turkey.

---

[1] The same to the American Ambassador to Russia. (File No. 367.11/18.)

WILSON.

File No. 767.70/107.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 11, 1912.

Although six days have elapsed since the request for mediation the European Powers have not informed Turkey whether or not they accept or have taken steps to accept mediation, or have communicated with the Balkan States. The Minister for Foreign Affairs said to me to-day that if Europe fail him he may withdraw the request, and asked me whether in that case the United States would use its good offices to ascertain some basis for direct negotiations with the Allies—the advisability of which direct action I had suggested to him as a purely personal opinion. I replied that I could not forecast my Government's attitude, but that he might inquire through his Ambassador at Washington. I desire instructions in case of a renewal of this subject in conversation with the Minister.

The forces already here seem quite adequate to meet any emergency, about 2,000 men on the various vessels here.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 367.11/27.

The American Ambassador to France to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Paris, November 11, 1912.

Your November 8. Instructions in accordance therewith have been sent by the French Government.

HERRICK.

File No. 367.11/27.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador to France.[1]

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 12, 1912.

Make appropriate expression to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of this Government's appreciation of his assurances concerning protection in case of need to be extended to Americans in Turkey.

KNOX.

---

[1] Repeated from Paris to Vienna, Berlin, and Rome.

File No. 367.11/40.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Embassy,
Constantinople, November 12, 1912.

I have informed Unalga's commander that his services will not be required in Turkish waters.

Rockhill.

File No. 367.11/40.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

Department of State,
Washington, November 13, 1912.

Unalga will remain available at Port Said at least until arrival of a cruiser at Beirut.

For the Secretary:
Adee.

File No. 767.70/107.

Department of State,
Washington, November 13, 1912.

Your November 11. See telegram of October 4, 5 p. m., 1911,[1] by which you were instructed that it would be desirable to avert any formal request for the mediation of the United States between Turkey and Italy. I refer you to this telegram for guidance in the present situation and may add that to me it seems impossible that this Government should undertake, with any hope of service to the belligerents or of credit to itself, to mediate or to offer its good offices for the adjustment of questions that have so long been the particular solicitude of European diplomacy, questions that once more seem impossible of such a settlement as would satisfy the irreconcilable claims of the several interested Powers, who, even in the face of the grave risks of the present crisis, have found themselves unable to relinquish them.

Knox.

File No. 367.11/55.

The Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

Navy Department,
Washington, November 16, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to inform the Department of State that the U. S. S. Brutus, a naval auxiliary, will leave Norfolk, Va., about November 20th, or shortly thereafter, for Smyrna, Turkey, with coal and supplies for naval vessels in the vicinity. The Brutus will call at Gibralter en route.

Respectfully yours,

Geo. von L. Meyer.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 767.70/126.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 17, 1912.

The Dean of the Diplomatic Corps has just gone to advise the Minister for Foreign Affairs that, in view of the failure of the Turkish Government to state its opinion on the subject within the time agreed upon, the Diplomatic Corps has decided to land about 2,000 men tomorrow to protect the Embassies and Legations.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/145.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 20, 1912.

The Turkish Government was informed yesterday by the Russian Ambassador that Bulgaria is willing to discuss suspension of hostilities and peace terms. The Turkish and Bulgarian commanders will meet to-day.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/147.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 21, 1912.

The Allied Powers demand, as a further condition for the suspension of hostilities, the surrender of Janina and Durazzo. It is believed here that these very severe terms will not be accepted. The delegates will probably meet to-day. The Diplomatic Corps has been asked to return the land forces to the ships, but has decided to keep them on shore and will so inform the Government.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 367.11/29.

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador.

No. 201.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 21, 1912.

SIR: I enclose herewith, for your information and for the files of the Embassy, a copy of a letter[1] from the Navy Department, dated November 9, reporting that, at the request of the State Department, that war vessels be sent to Smyrna and Beirut, the armored cruisers Tennessee and Montana were ordered to prepare for the cruise and sail as soon as possible. The letter adds that the commander of the squadron has been directed to get into communication with the Embassy and to be guided by its suggestions as far as practicable.

I am [etc.],

P. C. KNOX.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 367.11/77.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

No. 326.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, November 21, 1912.

SIR: Supplementing my despatch of yesterday[1] concerning the arrangements made for the protection of the foreign residents of Constantinople and their interests, I have the honor herewith to transmit a list[1] of the forces landed from the neutral war vessels now in the harbor in accordance with the decision of the Diplomatic Body, on the morning of the 18th instant. About 2,500 men have been debarked with some 26 guns.

I have [etc.]

W. W. ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/190.

The Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of State.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, December 4, 1912.

SIR: I have the honor to quote for the information of the Department of State the following extract from a cablegram dated December 4, 1912, received from the Commanding Officer of the U. S. S. Scorpion at Constantinople, Turkey:

"Yesterday men reembarked."

Respectfully yours,

G. VON L. MEYER.

File No. 767.70/178.

The American Ambassador to the Secretary of State.

[Telegrams.—Paraphrases.—Extracts.]

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, December 4, 1912.

An armistice was concluded yesterday,

ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/187.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, December 6, 1912.

It is believed that the peace conference will be held in London.

ROCKHILL.

File No. 767.70/188.

AMERICAN LEGATION,
Constantinople, December 8, 1912.

Turkey's delegates to the peace conference at London will leave here December 10.

ROCKHILL.

---

[1] Not printed.

File No. 367.11/103.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Constantinople, December 31, 1912.

The Consul at Saloniki has now accounted for the safety of all Americans in his district.

ROCKHILL.

VENEZUELA.

VISIT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO VENEZUELA.

File No. 033.1100 K77/221.

The Minister of Venezuela to the Assistant Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF VENEZUELA,
Washington, February 14, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. WILSON: I have read with the greatest interest your obliging and welcome note of yesterday[1] by which you impart to me the good news that by direction of His Excellency the President of United States the honorable Secretary of State, Mr. Knox, will visit Venezuela [etc.].

The idea is most praiseworthy and it affords me very great pleasure to inform you that I have received cablegrams from the President of Venezuela, General Gómez, and the Ministry of Foreign Relations instructing me to express to the Department of State the delight with which the announcement of the visit was received in Venezuela.

The President of Venezuela, as well as the whole Government, and the city of Caracas, are even now making preparations to receive their distinguished guest with all the regard and attentions that are due to him.

I beg you to inform His Excellency the President of the United States and the Honorable Mr. Knox.

Wishing to know in due time the exact date of the Secretary of State's visit to Venezuela, and also wishing that he may stay in Venezuela as many days as possible, which will give my country great satisfaction,

I renew to you [etc.]

F. EZEQUIEL ROJAS.

File No. 033.1100 K77/98a.

The Acting Secretary of State to the American Minister.

[Telegram.—Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 12, 1912.

The Secretary and party will arrive at La Guaira March 22 and proceed the same day to Caracas. They will depart via Puerto Cabello March 25.

WILSON.

---

[1] The identic letter printed under Panama: "Visit of the Secretary of State to the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea," p. 1240.

Speech of Dr. Márquez Bustillos, Governor of the Federal District, at the Municipal Council, Independence Hall, Caracas, March 23, 1912, in welcoming Mr. Knox.

EXCELLENCY: The municipality and the people of Caracas, in the name of whom I, as Governor of the Federal District, have the honor to address you, feel great and singular pleasure in welcoming you to this spot, a place of cherished remembrances in the struggles which form our political history. In you we greet the illustrious statesman who brings us as a pledge of friendship words from the country of the immortal Washington, he who was, and with justice is called, "the first in peace, the first in war, the first in the hearts of his countrymen."

While thanking your excellency for the honor you confer upon us by your visit to the Government and to the municipality of the Federal District, we pray for your personal happiness and for that of all the persons of your distinguished party, and hope that the impressions which you take away upon parting may be pleasant and lasting.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

EXCELLENCY: I had not known until I entered this hall, sacred not only to the liberty of Venezuela but to all of Latin America, that the great honor was to be done to me of permitting me to speak in this distinguished presence. It would be a cold heart that would not throb with the highest emotions standing in this sacred place. This noble scene, depicted upon canvas in the background, is a reenactment of one in our own history that is sacred to every American, be he a North or South American, because, after all, we were but a short time before you in our aspirations for liberty and in our declaration of independence. Your excellency has been kind enough to wish that my sojourn among you should be pleasant. I am frank to say that in the short time that we have been upon your hospitable soil one act of kindness has crowded another act of kindness so rapidly that one's vocabulary of gratitude and appreciation is inadequate to meet such a splendid ovation. I wish to proceed from this hall, dedicated to the holy cause of liberty, with my suite to the adjacent park and there lay, as an evidence of the appreciation of the American Government and the American people, a wreath at the foot of Bolívar, the great Liberator of the South.

Remarks of Mr. Knox upon placing a wreath at the foot of the statue of Bolívar in Caracas, Venezuela, March 23, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: In the name of the people and of the President of the United States I beg to lay this token of appreciation, respect, and veneration at the foot of the statue of the great Venezuelan Liberator.

[Remarks of Mr. Matos, Minister for Foreign Affairs, were extempore and not taken.]

Speech of His Excellency Don Manuel A. Matos, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Venezuela, at a banquet given to Mr. Knox at Miraflores, March 24, 1912.

MR. MINISTER: I comply with the instructions of the President of the Republic to tell you that your presence amongst us is regarded with the greatest satisfaction by the Government and people of Venezuela. Upon selecting you to visit these countries in its name your Government has furnished fresh evidence of the friendly interest which they inspire, tending thus to strengthen the bonds which bind us to the country of Washington and Lincoln.

Your visit, Mr. Minister, must further serve to make better known in your country the conditions of vitality of our own, thus accentuating sentiments of mutual respect and consideration and developing at the same time on a larger scale our commercial relations. It is a further step in the fruitful work of Pan-Americanism which our Liberator sought to accomplish in his beautiful conception of the Congress of Panama and which the United States is supplementing with a perseverance worthy of the genius of your noble race.

A principal factor of this union of the peoples of America so necessary to the high aims of human progress will be the opening of the Panama Canal, which will not only bring nearer the East and the West, uniting the two oceans, but which will also draw closer together the republics of South and Central America and the great Republic of the north, giving a new and vigorous impulse to civilization resulting from the interchange of the products and ideas of all the regions of the world.

Venezuela, being situated on the route to Europe, will be one of the nations most benefited by that colossal work of American endeavor from which we perceive a new element of progress which will permit us to develop further the sources of our natural wealth and to better show our characteristics of nationality on the American union.

Mr. Minister, the blood of your compatriots watered the foundations of Venezuelan independence and the recognition of our country has been perpetuated in monuments which you will have occasion to see at Maracay and Puerto Cabello. This is a further cause for the regard of the Venezuelan people for the American people, a regard which we have no doubt must be strengthened as a result of your visit because of the high authority and representation with which you are invested and because of your remarkable merits as a statesman.

Gentlemen, in the name of the President of the Republic, I invite you to drink to the prosperity of the American people, to the happiness of their President, His Excellency Mr. Taft, and to the hope that His Excellency Mr. Knox and his honored family, during their brief stay amongst us, may have reason only to be truly pleased and that they may take from our country as pleasing and lasting impressions as we shall have to retain of them.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN: It is indeed fortunate for me that the burdens and responsibilities of the office I hold are tempered by the enjoyment of privileges and advantages which would not otherwise have been within my reach. Not the least of these is the opportunity now vouchsafed to me of coming among you, my fellow countrymen of the Western World, with a message of fraternal good will from the Government and people of the northern Republic. I prize this privilege beyond measure, and the more so as in this historic land, favored by nature to be the fitting cradle of the new birth of occidental empire under the proud Castilian banner of its first explorers, I feel myself among friends. The obstacles of distance, of diverse ancestral origin, and of dissimilar language disappear with the warmth of your greeting. The Saxon North and the Hispanic South meet as associates in the common cause of progress and peace, alike devoted to the common duty of promoting the good will and the mutual confidence and esteem which draw the democratic commonwealths of America into relations of true brotherhood.

The auspicious occasion of my present visit is the proximate opening of the great canal. This stupendous work, the dream of centuries, since Balboa first trod the solitudes of Darien, is far more than a commercial enterprise. It is a great humanitarian achievement, fraught with endless possibilities of good for all the nations of the continent. It opens an avenue by which the peoples of the eastern and western coasts of the northern and southern continents are brought into closer relation. The barrier of ages becomes the highway of the future, not for the devastating advance of conquering hosts but for the beneficial movement of progress and development, in which Venezuela can not but take an important part. The diversion of a vast share of the commerce of Europe and America to the new channel must necessarily bring benefit to the neighboring countries. The already intimate intercourse of my country with yours can not retrograde. The volume of incoming and outgoing commerce between Venezuela and the United States is now relatively larger than that between Venezuela and any other nation. Good will and mutual confidence will make it actually larger. It is to the interest of Venezuela that it should increase. The augmentation of the exports of a vast and as yet but partly developed country like yours is a stimulus to the expanding development of its natural resources and the growth of economic prosperity. The increase of its imports is the natural reflex action due to domestic prosperity. It is, indeed, an index of national well-being. Moreover, advancement of home interests makes for the material and moral uplifting of the country and is the surest step to the firm assurance of domestic peace and stable government, which all good citizens desire and for which they should strive whole-heartedly.

In coming to you with an earnest message of peace and good will, I am especially mindful of the historical fact that the political and traditional sympathies of the United States and Venezuela are in singularly close accord. If we have our Washington, you have your Bolívar, happily styled by Henry Clay as the Washington of the South, who bore upon his breast during his life the miniature of Washington, presented to him through Lafayette in 1825, more proudly than he wore the insignia of rank, a sentiment you have respected and recorded upon the imperishable and noble statue erected to Bolívar's memory. Bolívar was the pioneer in the noble work of upbuilding, in the northern region of South America, a free commonwealth like ours of the North; and I can not forget that the vast territory which Bolívar liberated embraced the broad reaches of the Caribbean and the Pacific, including the very Isthmus through which we are now, as appointed agents for the benefit of all the Americas and of all the nations of the earth, opening a world highway. Bolívar, his noble work achieved, regarded the isthmian barrier with regretful eyes, feeling in his great heart a keen longing for the accomplishment of the century-old dream of Latin America that the Atlantic and Pacific might in time be joined by a pathway through the land whose freedom he had won. It was one of the objects brought before the Pan-American Congress of Panama in 1826, but the intelligent, although fruitless and perhaps premature, efforts of your great Liberator failed to mold the project into practical shape. Let us believe that the spirits of Bolívar and Washington are sharing our mutual felicitations over the approaching realization of the unparalleled task, and inspiring us all, Venezuelans and Americans alike, with the glad resolve to know each other better, to strengthen the ties of mutual confidence that happily exist between us, and to give lasting expression to that sentiment of disinterested helpfulness which moves the two peoples to live in amity and essential harmony, each rejoicing when more of peace, of prosperity, of happiness, and of security comes into the life of its brother people.

Farewell speech of Mr. Knox to His Excellency Don Juan Vicente Gómez, President of Venezuela, March 25, 1912.

Mr. President: In saying good-by to you I wish to repeat that which we have tried to say to you again and again and which we feel most sincerely and deeply, and that is that you have our profound gratitude for all of the acts of kindly courtesy and hospitality that you have shown us since we have been in your Republic, and we shall carry home with us everlasting recollections of satisfaction, pleasure, enjoyment, and profitable observation. For my entire party I wish to emphasize the depth of our appreciation.

I have been asked especially, Mr. President, by the representatives of the American press who have accompanied us upon this journey to say to you for them, and with as much sincerity as I have endeavored to express my own feelings, that they rest under the deepest debt of gratitude not only for the comforts, recreations, and pleasures you have given to them, but for the particularly personal touch that you have given to every courteous act of hospitality of which they have been the recipients.

I will say good-by, and I hope to have the pleasure of seeing you again.

Address of welcome of Señor Don Santiago González Guinán, President of the State of Carabobo, delivered at Valencia, March 25, 1912, by the Comandante in the name of the State Executive.

Your Excellency: It would have been a pleasure to the government of the State and also to the people of Valencia to present its respects and demonstrate its sympathy with you by a feast of greater splendor, but your rapid transit through the city scarcely affords us sufficient time to offer this glass of champagne in the station park and without other ornaments than nature's green foliage and the blue dome of a tropical sky, and this is possible only through the consent of your excellency to stop a moment in spite of your limited time.

In thus affording me, through your courtesy, the opportunity of carrying out in this way the part of the program assigned to me by the Government of Venezuela in connection with your visit, I take occasion, moved both by my personal feelings and the natural impulse of the moment, to impress upon your mind the sincerity with which I drink to the welfare of your wife, the lasting memory of your trip, the reciprocal cordiality of Presidents Gómez and Taft, and, lastly, to your great country, which as a unique instance in history has attained to a conquest of rights without shedding of blood and which, in the midst of the wonderful development of its civilization, fully meets the aspirations of the human race in the unparalleled progress of its democratic institutions. Your excellency's health.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

Mr. Comandante: No program of entertainment that you might have devised for me, and I know how well Venezuelans do devise their programs of hospitality, could have made a deeper impression upon me than the one I see before me, namely, the sight of so many strong men and so many beautiful ladies. You have voiced a wish that my visit in Venezuela should have been a pleasant one. We have not only had days and hours of pleasure, but one pleasure has crowded another so rapidly that it is almost literally true that every moment of time that we have spent in your beautiful country has found us to be the recipients of the most kindly hospitality, of the best of good cheer not only from your officials and those who may have been designated by the Government to extend to me a welcome, representing as I do the people of the United States, but I am glad to say that I have been able to read in the faces, and looking into the eyes of all the people of Venezuela, a welcome which I shall never forget.

I beg to propose the health, the happiness, the peace, and the prosperity of the Republic of Venezuela and its generous, hospitable, and kindly people.

Speech of Señor Don José Felipe Arcay, Collector of Customs at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, March 25, 1912.

Your Excellency, Ladies and Gentlemen: While greeting you in the name of the National Government which I represent, in my own, and in that of the high public officials who accompany me, it is most pleasing to say that the honor you confer upon us by your visit is a source of true satisfaction which we duly appreciate, not only because we consider it a special demonstration of sincere friendship for our Republic, but also because it is the first time that an American Secretary of State has visited our country bearing with him true ideas of American unity, strengthening and making more friendly, if possible, the cordial relations existing between your Republic and ours.

The sincere welcome you have received and the demonstrations of deference of which you have been the object by the Chief Magistrate of the nation, by all the important persons of his Government, and by the people in general, are unmistakable proofs that we have been impressed with your visit, which greatly honors us. We are certain that with your clear judgment you will be able to appreciate the progressive advance which our industries, our agriculture, and in general all the branches constituting our territorial riches are making under an era of peace wisely founded and maintained by the modest and equally patriotic citizen who guides the destinies of the Republic, General Juan Vicente Gómez.

You have been able to observe, despite the briefness of your stay among us, the good will which animates the Chief Magistrate of the country toward all that tends to its aggrandizement, and in effect he is taking measures to the end that the proximate opening of the Panama Canal will find Venezuela in a truly prosperous condition, so that we may advance our great commercial interests.

We drink, therefore, to the country of Washington and to its worthy representative.

Reply of Mr. Knox.

Mr. Collector: It will be a pleasing message, sir, that I will be enabled to carry to the President and people of the United States as the result of my visit to Venezuela. President Taft conceived in his mind that because of the early opening of the Panama Canal the relations of the United States to our neighbors on the littoral of the Caribbean Sea must necessarily be closer and more intimate. He believed that if he would send to you that officer of the Government of the United States who is charged with the duty and responsibility of our relations with foreign governments, the more intimate, direct, and personal acquaintance would be an advantage not only to us but he hoped also to them: and when I return I can cheerfully say to the President, and through him to the people of the United States, that in the great Republic of Venezuela from the moment my foot first touched its shores until the moment when I said to you my last farewell there has been nothing but kindness and hospitality, not only upon the part of the people but upon the part of your President, to whom you have referred, and who has been kindness itself to us all.

File No. 033.1100 K77/131.

The President of Venezuela to the President.

[Telegram.—Translation.]

Maracay, Venezuela, March 25, 1912.

Great has been my gratification and that of the Venezuelan people in receiving the visit of Mr. Knox, who bears to you my most sincere wishes for the happiness of the American nation and for your personal welfare.

President Gómez.

File No. 038.1100 K77/128.

The Minister of Venezuela to the Acting Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF VENEZUELA,
Washington, March 26, 1912.

SIR: It affords me pleasure to enclose in this note a copy of the cablegram I have received from the Minister for Foreign Relations of Venezuela, and I beg you to have that copy laid before His Excellency the President of the United States.

At the same time I cordially felicitate myself and the American Government on the very happy impression made on my country by the Honorable Mr. Knox's visit and the mutual benefits that will no doubt flow from it.

I gladly [etc.]

F. EZEQUIEL ROJAS.

[Inclosure.]

The Minister for Foreign Relations to the Minister of Venezuela.

We have just taken leave of Secretary Knox. You will say to President Taft that Mr. Knox leaves with us pleasurable impressions and that it is our wish that our relations with that great nation may grow more and more cordial.

MATOS.

File No. 038.1100 K77.

The President to the President of Venezuela.

[Telegram.]

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, April 1, 1912.

I am delighted to learn that Secretary Knox was received with such marked cordiality in Venezuela and to assure Your Excellency of my fervent hopes for your continued prosperity and that of Venezuela.

WM. H. TAFT.

File No. 038.1100 K77/128.

The Acting Secretary of State to the Minister of Venezuela.

No. 39.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, April 3, 1912.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 26th ultimo, transmitting a copy of a cablegram from the Minister for Foreign Affairs in regard to the visit to Venezuela of the Secretary of State, and requesting that it be laid before the President.

In reply I beg to say that I have taken pleasure in conveying the communication of Señor Matos to its high destination.

Thanking you for your note and its enclosure, and with cordial reciprocation of the friendly expressions which they contain,

I avail [etc.]

HUNTINGTON WILSON.

File No. 033.1100 K77/166.

The Minister of Venezuela to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF VENEZUELA,
Washington, April 18, 1912.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to offer to your excellency my congratulations on the sentiments of American fraternity which inspired your recent visit to some of the countries on our continent and especially on the very good impression created in Venezuela by your excellency's visit.

The pleasant remembrance of that visit will ever be treasured in my country as a new bond of friendship that must strengthen more and more the cordial relations existing between the Venezuelan nation and the great Republic of the United States.

I avail myself [etc.]

F. EZEQUIEL ROJAS.

File No. 711.31/100.

Message of the President of Venezuela to the Congress at the opening of its ordinary session, April 19, 1912.

[Extract.]

Recently we were visited by Mr. Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State of the United States of America. He came as a representative of the First Magistrate of that great Republic. We received him with cordiality and sincere affection, and with a solemnity befitting the high office with which he was invested. The Government of Venezuela and all the social, political, and industrial bodies gave to this visit the importance which distinguished it.

For my part, I must declare that I have never entertained the slightest suspicion regarding the sovereignty of Venezuela. In the history of our relations with the great Republic of the North I find sincerity and benevolent collaboration; so that the visit of His Excellency Mr. Knox, on the eve of the inauguration of the Panama Canal, destined to draw toward the central part of America the mighty commercial current of the world, I consider as a cordial tightening of these important relations.

File No. 711.31/101.

Speech of the President of the Chamber of Deputies at the opening of the ordinary session, April 19, 1912.

[Extract.]

Among these official labors are most in evidence the sumptuous festivities of our Centenary of Independence, a solemn declaration to the world of the deep feeling common to the people and Government, neither of which fears but on the contrary both hoping much from the rapprochement with other countries and the most liberal interchange with all the nations of the world.

The most expressive accentuation of this sentiment has been the cordial reception extended to that illustrious statesman, Mr. Knox, Secretary of State of the great northern sister Republic. He must have felt, in the very home of Venezuela, in the midst of the freest hospitality, that the idea of nationality lives and thrives in the soul of the nation.

File No. 033.1100 K77/166.

The Secretary of State to the Minister of Venezuela.

Department of State,
Washington, April 25, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 18th instant in which you offer your congratulations to me on the sentiments of American fraternity which inspired my recent visit to certain of the Latin-American countries, and especially the good impression created thereby in Venezuela.

Thanking you for your courteous note, I have the honor to say that the cordial reception I met with in your country will always be most agreeably recalled by me and it cannot fail to promote the good relations between the two Governments which we both sincerely desire to be strengthened.

Accept [etc.]

P. C. Knox.

File No. 033.1100 K77/180.

The American Minister to the Secretary of State.

[Telegram.—Paraphrase.]

American Legation,
Caracas, April 27, 1912.

In the annual message of the President to the Congress, delivered to-day, is a most cordial reference to your visit here and to the relations of the two countries. It was enthusiastically received.

Northcott.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCES AND CONGRESSES HELD IN THE UNITED STATES.

NINTH INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS CONFERENCE.

Held at Washington, D. C., May 7–17, 1912.

[Report of the proceedings filed in the Bureau of Rolls and Library, Department of State.]

TWELFTH INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF NAVIGATION.

Held at Philadelphia, Pa., May 23, 1912.

[Report of proceedings filed in the Library of Congress, TC 5 15, 1912f.]

EIGHTH INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF APPLIED CHEMISTRY.

Held at Washington, D. C. and New York, N. Y., September 4–13, 1912.

[Report of proceedings filed in the Library of the Bureau of Chemistry, Department of Agriculture.]

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON MINE EXPLOSIONS.

Held in connection with the above Congress at Pittsburgh, Pa., September 14, 1912.

[For report of proceedings see Bulletin No. 82, Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior.]

NINTH INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF HYGIENE AND DEMOGRAPHY.

Held at Washington, D. C., September 16–October 5, 1912.

[For report of proceedings see U. S. Bureau of Education Bulletin 1913, No. 18, Whole No. 528.]

INDEX.

A.

Page.

- Accession to the throne of— 333-335
  - Denmark: of King Christian X 333-335
  - Japan: of Emperor Yoshihito 634-642
  - Luxemburg: of Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide 702-705
- Accession. See also Presidents.
- Adverse possession of a port renders nugatory a decree of closure 902
- Agreements. See Treaties.
- Agricultural credits xiv-xv
- Alsop claim xxiii
- American Army officers designated to reorganize the Liberian frontier force 662-667
- American banks needed in foreign countries xxvi
- American capital, value of, to Central America 589
- American citizens—
  - employed by foreign governments—
    - Mexico: discrimination against railroad employés 910-924
    - Nicaragua: appointed excise expert 1081-1082
    - Peru: appointed sanitary engineers 1280-1286
  - enlistment in foreign service 815, 818-820
  - title to land belonging to, in Chosen 642-647
  - See Protection of American life and property in foreign countries.
- American Conference, Third International (1906) 18
- American diplomacy x, xxvii, 558, 571, 586, 589
  - See also Monroe doctrine.
- American flag, display of, by consular officers 903-905
- American international law. See Brazil.
- American newspapers needed in foreign countries xxvi
- American protégés. See Morocco.
- American Public Health Service xxvi
- American trade. See United States: trade.
- Amiable compositeur, King George V as, in settlement of the Alsop claim xxv
- Ammunition. See munitions of war.
- Anglo-Liberian frontier disturbances 652-662
- Apprehension in the United States of fugitives from justice of foreign countries 6
- Arbitration:
  - China—Novel arbitration provisions of the opium convention 203, 218
  - Cuba—
    - fundamental features of the insurrectionary claims in relation to arbitration, pointed out by the United States 285, 288
    - text of draft agreement to arbitrate the "insurrectionary claims" of France, Germany and Great Britain 291-293
    - proposal of France, Germany and Great Britain to arbitrate with Cuba certain insurrectionary claims of their nationals arising prior to 1898 276-293
  - Dominican Republic—boundary dispute with Haiti 380-387
  - Ecuador—Guayaquil & Quito Ry. Co. v. Ecuador; appointment of arbitrators by the United States and by Ecuador 412-422, 421, 422
  - France. See Cuba.
  - Germany. See Cuba.
  - Great Britain—
    - special agreement for arbitartion of pecuniary claims outstanding between Great Britain and the United States 494
    - See also Cuba and Guatemala.
  - Guatemala—proposal of Great Britain to arbitrate financial arrangements with Guatemala 500-511
  - Honduras—proposals concerning arbitration of the Honduran debt and loan agreement 593, 615 et seq.
  - Mexico—Chamizal boundary 706
  - Panama—elections, United States as arbitrator of 1141, 1133-1165
  - Peru—Landreau v. Peru xxiv

Page.

- Argentina:
  - apprehension of fugitives from justice of foreign countries 6
  - mediator between Ecuador and Peru xi
  - relations with the United States xxiii
  - See also Germany: Wireless telegraph convention; and Paraguay, 1267 et seq.
- Arms:
  - baggage, treated as .... 888 et seq.
  - definition 759, 771
  - exportation from the United States to Mexico 737, 739–742, 744, 753
  - importation to Mexico by foreigners, conditions required 877–878
- Army. See United States Army, and American Army officers.
- Army officers sent from Brazil to study in the United States xxv
- Arrangements. See Treaties.
- Arrest. See Fugitives, and Detention.
- Artistic property, protection of 175
- Assault on American citizens in Panama 1250–1261
- Assault on American diplomatic officer in Cuba 268–276
- Asylum, requests for and rights of 173–174, 393, 860–861, 924–926
- Austria-Hungary:
  - copyright convention between the United States and Hungary; text 7
  - good offices in behalf of the United States during Balkan war 1347
  - See also Germany: Wireless telegraph convention; and Turkey.

B.

- Bahia Honda, release of rights of the United States at xxv
- Balkan States. See Turkey.
- Beirut, American interests at xx
- Belgium:
  - removal of discrimination against American lubricating oils 9
  - See also Germany: Wireless telegraph convention.
- Belligerency:
  - recognition of 737, 741, 856
  - state of, in Mexico 729–730, 737, 744
  - rights, belligerent, of the United States in relation to the Panama Canal... 486
  - See also Mexico: Belligerency.
- Blockade:
  - must be effective to be entitled to respect 902
  - routing of mails 736
- Bolivia:
  - good offices of the United States xi
  - See also Peru.
- Bombardment endangering innocent foreigners protested against by the United States 853–863
- Bonds:
  - Central American 588
  - Chinese 87
  - Dominican 564, 588
  - Guatemalan .... xxv, 500
  - Honduran .... xxvi, 574
  - Liberian .... xxi, 667
  - Nicaraguan .... xxvi, 1071
- Boundary disputes between—
  - Bolivia and Peru 1279
  - Dominican Republic and Haiti; arbitration proceedings..... xxiv, xxv, 380–387
  - Liberia and France 683, 687, 689–691, 700
  - Liberia and Great Britain 652–662
  - Mexico and the United States 706
- Brazil:
  - American international law; report of the United States delegates to International Commission of Jurists at Rio de Janeiro 18–43
  - Army officers sent to the United States to study xxiii
  - mediator between Ecuador and Peru xi
  - message of the President 18
  - See also Germany: Wireless telegraph convention; and Paraguay, 1267 et seq.
- Bulgaria:
  - war with Turkey xx
  - See also Germany: Wireless telegraph convention; and Turkey.

C.

Page.

- Canal:
  - Panama 467–489, 557, 588, 589, 1167–1206
  - proposed Nicaraguan 556, 1095–1099
- Canals, interoceanic, treaties pertaining to .... 482 et seq.
- Canal Zone officers sent to Guayaquil to recommend sanitation plan XXIII
- Caribbean Sea XII
- Carnegie Endowment for International Peace 2
- Central America XII
- Central America and the Washington conventions of 1907 519
- Central American Peace Conference of 1912 628
- Chamizal boundary dispute with Mexico .... XIX, 706
- Champlain celebration. See France.
- Chemistry, Eighth International Congress of 1365
- Chile:
  - Alsop claim XXIII
  - good offices of the United States XI
  - permission of Congress to a United States Army officer to accept service under a foreign government 44
  - See also Germany: Wireless telegraph convention.
- China:
  - adoption of a national flag 181
  - arrangement between the United States and France for reciprocal protection in China of literary and artistic property 175–178
  - asylum requested at the American Legation and the consulate at Foochow; temporary refuge offered 173–174
  - claims of American citizens against China; joint procedure of the Powers for presentation of claims 171–173
  - copyrights, American, infringement of 176
  - good offices of the United States XI
  - Hukuang railway XI
  - indemnity payments 159–160
  - International Opium Conference 182–224
  - international plan for defense of foreign settlements under the protocol of 1901 161–171
  - loan negotiations; conclusion of the Hukuang Railway loan; correspondence concerning proposed currency-reform, industrial-development and reorganization loans; current-expense advances .... XI, XXII, 87–159
  - open-door and concerted-action policies of the United States .... XI, XXII
  - provisional republican government: de facto relations of the United States with .... XXI–XXII
  - registration of the property of foreigners in China 178–180
  - reservations made by Japan, Russia, and Great Britain of rights claimed in Manchuria, Mongolia, Tibet, and elsewhere .... 50–86 passim
  - revolution; abdication of the Manchu rulers; establishment of a provisional republican government; concerted action of the Powers; correspondence concerning recognition of the Republic of China .... XXI, 46–86
  - search of foreign merchant vessels by rebel forces for contraband of war. 174–175
  - treaty pledges of reform XI
- Chinese exclusion act cited 528–530, 534, 928
- Chinese subjects, protection of, in Ecuador and in Mexico by American diplomatic and consular officers 434–438, 926–929
- Chosen. See Japan.
- Chronological list of papers in this volume XXIX
- Circulars:
  - death of Vice President James S. Sherman 5
  - interchange of professors and students among the universities of American States 2
  - invitation to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition to be held at San Francisco, Calif., in 1915 4
  - territorial integrity of American States 1
- Citizenship:
  - in relation to inheritance (interpretation of treaty with Denmark) 330
  - See American citizens, and treaties; naturalization.
  - See also Haiti: Abrogation of the right of Syrians to trade, etc.

Claims against: Page.
  China: Joint procedure of the powers for presentation of claims against China 171–173
  Colombia: Gonzalo Ramos Ruiz v. the United States 225–226
  Cuba: "Insurrectionary claims" of France, Germany, and Great Britain, arising prior to 1898 276–293
  Ecuador: Guayaquil & Quito Ry. Co. v. Ecuador 412
  Great Britain 494
  Guatemala 500
  Haiti 521–522
  Honduras 549
  Liberia 652
  Mexico—
    damages to American citizens arising from revolutionary disturbances 929–986; see also 708, 720, 722, 724–725 resolution of Congress to investigate 966–968
      report of the claims commission appointed by the War Department, in pursuance of the joint resolution of Congress 969–981
    Mexican court of claims 930
  Nicaragua 1071
  Peru: Landreau v. Peru XXIV
  United States 494
Closure of port. See Ports.
Coastwise trade. See Great Britain: Panama Canal tolls.
Coat of arms of Salvador 1339–1340
Cocaine. See China: International Opium Conference.
Collateral inheritance tax 323–332
Colombia:
  claim of Gonzalo Ramos Ruiz v. the United States 225–226
  message of the President 225
  Monroe doctrine, memorandum on the, by the Colombian Minister to Great Britain 1 relations with the United States XI
Colorado River negotiations with Mexico XVIII
Commerce:
  act to regulate; amended by Panama Canal act 473 et seq, 488
  Mexican condition and regulations of 736, 742
Commission of Jurists, International 18
Common carriers. See Great Britain: Panama Canal tolls.
Conferences and congresses, international:
  Chemistry, Applied; Eighth Congress 1365
  Hygiene and Demography; Ninth Congress 1365
  Jurists, report of the United States delegates to the International Commission of, at Rio de Janeiro 18–43
  Mine explosions conference 1365
  Navigation; Twelfth Congress 1365
  Opium Conference 182–224
  Red Cross, Ninth Conference 1365
Confiscation of mail by Mexican authorities 777, 781, 792
Confiscatory taxes charged by:
  Mexico on oil products 827
  Mexican de facto authorities 907–910
Congresses, international. See Conferences and Congresses, international.
Constantinople, arrangements for protection of foreign residents in, during Balkan war. See Turkey.
Constitutional guaranties suspended in Mexico 820, 828
Constitutions:
  China: Provisional Constitution; adopted March 10, 1912 46
  Nicaragua 993–1011; text, 997–1011
Consul, American:
  protection of Chinese in Mexico by 926–929 refused recognition by de facto authorities in Mexico 781, 787–788, 792, 795 rights and duties of consuls 739–740, 988
Consular jurisdiction; disposition of effects of deceased persons 494–497
Consular officer, German, as receiver of Liberian customs 667–701
Consular registration of title to land in Chosen 642–647
Consulate, display of American flag over a 903–905

Page.
Consultative claims commission of Mexico 934
Contraband of war 729–730
  search of foreign merchant vessels for 174–175
Conventions. See Treaties.
Copyright:
  arrangement between the United States and France 175–178 convention between the United States and Hungary; text 7 convention between the United States and Japan; reference 177
Costa Rica:
  boundary dispute with Panama xi
  message of the President 227 naturalization convention between the United States and Costa Rica; text 227–229 visit of the Secretary of State to Costa Rica 229–235
  See also Nicaragua, 1012 et seq, 1037–1040, 1047; Salvador: Political disturbances.
Courts, prize 902
Court of Claims. See Claims: Mexico.
Court-martial, power of, over foreign nationals 987–992
Crossing the Mexican border by United States troops; crossing of Mexican troops into the United States 725, 726, 727
Cuba:
  assault upon the American Chargé d'Affaires 268–276 claims, insurrectionary, arising prior to 1898; proposal of France, Germany and Great Britain to arbitrate 276–293 naval station at Guantanamo 293–297 text of agreement between the United States and Cuba for the enlargement of the Guantanamo naval station and relinquishment of the Bahia Honda station, concluded December 27, 1912 295–297 negro uprising; attitude of the United States; protection of foreign colonies xxv, 242–268 raising of the wreck of the U. S. S. Maine 304–309
  Platt Amendment and the treaty with Cuba containing it invoked by Cuba as warranting intervention of the United States in settlement of the "insurrectionary claims" 281; see also 310, 312, 591
  Veteranista agitation; attitude of the United States 236–242 visit of the Secretary of State to Cuba 297–303
  Zapata Swamp concession 309–322
Customs:
  Dominican Republic: reestablishment of customs administration by the United States xxv, 367 et seq.
  Liberia: customs receivership 667–701
  Russia: customs regulations 1287
Customs tariffs:
  instances of pledge of, to secure loan 591
  instances of treaty obligations not to change 590, 595
Cyrenaica, sovereignty of Italy over 632

D.

Damages to American citizens in Mexico, claims for 929–986; see also 708, 720, 722, 724–725
Damages, reservation of rights of reclamation for, during an insurrection 250
Danish-American National Park in Jutland, Denmark 335–338
De facto government:
  attitude of the United States during uprising at Vera Cruz 854 definition of, by General Orozco 795–796 exequatur issued by 795–796 taxation of foreigners by 907–910
Denmark:
  death of King Frederik VIII and accession of King Christian X 333–335 imposition in the United States of an inheritance tax on non-resident Danish heirs; application of Art. VII of the treaty of 1826 between Denmark and the United States 323–332 presentation of a park to the Danish Government by American citizens of Danish descent 335–338
  See also Germany: wireless telegraph convention.

Page.

- Detention in the United States:
  - fugitives from justice of foreign countries 6
  - Mexican insurrectionists 848–849
- Diplomatic officer, assault upon 268–276
- Discrimination against:
  - American citizens employed on Mexican railways 910–924
  - American lubricating oils 9–17
- Dominican Republic:
  - arbitration of the boundary dispute between the Dominican Republic and Haiti. good offices of the United States .... 380–387; 349–363 passim
  - customs administration reestablished by a special commission sent by the United States XXIV
  - customs arrangements with Italy, Spain and Germany 586
  - customs provisions of the convention with the United States 589
  - financial affairs 372–380
  - message of the President 339–340
  - Political affairs: border warfare with Haiti; maintenance of the status quo; insurrection; resignation of President Victoria; election of President Adolfo Nouel; good offices of the United States 340–380
  - revenue arrangements of 559, 571, 585
  - visit of the Secretary of State to the 387–390
- Drugs, habit-forming. See China: International Opium Conference.

E.

- Ecuador:
  - attacks on Chinese citizens; good offices of the United States 434–438
  - boundary dispute with Peru XI
  - claims of the Guayaquil & Quito Railway Co. v. Ecuador; attitude of the United States; proposal to arbitrate .... XXIII, 396–400, 402; 412–422
  - financial affairs 401
  - political affairs: insurrection; closure of ports; request for asylum; attitude of the United States; inauguration of President Plaza 391–411
  - sanitation of Guayaquil; proposal by Ecuador of a convention with the United States; visit to Guayaquil of a United States inspection commission 422–434
- Educational relations of the United States with Latin-American countries 2–4
- Elections in Panama supervised by the United States .... XXV, 1133–1165
- Enlisting of American citizens in foreign service, within the United States 815, 818–820
- Escort of American troops for Mexican troops passing over American soil .... 888 et seq.
- Exchange of notes, character of, in wireless telegraph negotiations with Panama 1221
- Exclusion act:
  - protest by a foreign government against; attitude of the United States. See Haiti: Abrogation of the right of Syrians, etc.
  - waiver of, in behalf of Chinese subjects in Mexico granted temporary refuge by American diplomatic and consular officers 926–929
- Execution of judgments and letters rogatory 18, 40
- Exemption of vessels in the coastwise trade of the United States from payment of Panama Canal tolls. See Great Britain: Panama Canal tolls.
- Expositions:
  - Panama-Pacific 4
  - Tokyo, abandonment of 647–648
- Extradition conventions:
  - between the United States and Honduras; text 619
  - draft of, by International Commission of Jurists 37–39
- Extradition of Mexican officers from the United States 847, 850
- Extraterritorial obligation of the United States in regard to its nationals in disturbed foreign territory 741–742
- Extraterritorial rights:
  - of the United States in Tripoli and Cyrenaica 632–633
  - unaffected by blockade unless effective 902

F.

- Firing across the boundary line by Mexican troops 878–888
- Fisheries:
  - North Atlantic coast, arbitration agreement: text 489–494
  - 3-mile limit for control of, determination of 492, 1287–1309

Page.

- Flag:
  - display of a national, right of ... 903–905
  - National—
    - China ... 181
    - Salvador ... 1339–1340
- Foreign claims. See Claims.
- Foreign concessionnaires in Panama. See Panama: "Railroad concessions, etc."
- Foreign residents and settlements, arrangements for protection of:
  - China ... 161–171
  - Cuba ... 242–268, 268–274
  - Ecuador ... 391 et seq.; 434
  - Haiti ... 523–540
  - Libya ... 632–633
  - Mexico. See Mexico: Protection, etc.
  - Morocco ... 987–992
  - Nicaragua ... 1012–1070
  - Panama ... 1250–1264
  - Turkey ... 1341–1354
- Foreign trade of the United States ... xvi, xxvi–xxvii
- France:
  - arrangement between the United States and France for reciprocal protection in China of literary and artistic property ... 175–178
  - claims against Cuba ... 276–293
  - good offices in behalf of the United States during Balkan War ... 1347 et seq.
  - Liberia—
    - boundary, Franco-Liberian ... 683, 687, 689–691, 700
    - customs receivership ... 667–701
    - loan ... 650–652
  - presentation by France to the United States of a bust of "La France" at the Champlain celebration ... 439–443
  - See also China: International Opium Convention; Germany: Wireless Telegraph Convention: Morocco: Relations of American protégés to French authorities.
- Fugitives from justice, United States not able to render effective assistance to foreign governments in apprehending ... 6
- Fur seals arbitration with Great Britain ... xvii

G.

- German consular officer as receiver of customs in Liberia, status of ... 667–701
- Germany:
  - claims against Cuba ... 276–293
  - good offices in behalf of the United States during Balkan War ... 1347 et seq.
  - Liberia—
    - customs receivership ... 667–701
    - loan ... 650–652
  - wireless telegraph convention between the United States and other powers; text ... 444–466
  - See also China: International Opium Convention.
- Grand Duchess Mârie Adelaide of Luxemburg: accession and speech from the throne ... 702
- Grand Duke William Alexander of Luxemburg, death of ... 702
- Grants made by treaties ... 1223–1224
- Great Britain:
  - arbitration with the United States—
    - fur seals ... xvii
    - North Atlantic fisheries (see below) ... xviii, 489–491
    - pecuniary claims ... xvii, 494
  - claims against Cuba ... 276–293
  - death of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, American Ambassador to Great Britain ... 497–499
  - good offices in behalf of the United States during Balkan War ... 1347 et seq.
  - good offices of British Consul in behalf of American protégés at Fez ... 987–992
  - good offices of the United States requested by Great Britain as to—
    - Guatemala ... 500–510
    - Nicaragua ... 1035, 1040

- Great Britain—Continued.
  - Liberia— Page.
    - boundary ... 649, 652–662
    - customs receivership ... 667–701
    - loan ... 650–652
  - North Atlantic coast fisheries arbitration; agreement between the United States and Great Britain adopting with certain modifications the rules and method of procedure recommended in the award of September 7, 1910; text ... 489–494
  - Panama Canal tolls; exemption of vessels in the coastwise trade of the United States from payment of tolls, and other features of the Panama Canal act of August 24, 1912; objections thereto of the British Government ... 467–489
  - Sierra Leone-Liberia boundary ... 649, 652–662
  - wreck of the British vessel Titanic; consular disposition of effects of the deceased; recognition of the services of Capt. Rostron ... 494–497
  - See also China: Revolution, Chinese loan, International plan for defense, International Opium Convention; Germany: Wireless telegraph convention; Russia.
- Greece:
  - War with Turkey ... xx, 1341–1354
  - See also Germany: Wireless telegraph convention.
- Guantánamo, United States naval station at ... xxv, 293–297
- Guatemala:
  - charges against President Estrada Cabrera ... 1012 et seq., 1317
  - financial affairs; demand of Great Britain for restitution of the coffee revenues; proposal of a new bond issue; good offices of the United States ... xxv, 500–511, 559
  - visit of the Secretary of State to Guatemala ... 511–520
- Guayaquil, sanitation of ... xxiii, 422–434
- Guayaquil & Quito Ry. Co., claims of, against Ecuador ... xxiii, 412–422

H.

- Habeas corpus, writ of, refused in the case of Gen. Mena, of Nicaragua, by the Supreme Court of the Canal Zone ... 1065–1069
- Hague Convention of 1907, referred to ... 502
- Hague convention "respecting the rights and duties of neutral powers and persons in case of war on land"; reference ... 741
- Hague Tribunal ... 489–494
- Haiti:
  - abrogation of the right of Syrians to trade in Haiti; rights of American citizens of Syrian birth ... 522, 523–541
  - boundary dispute with Dominican Republic ... xi, xxiv, 340–380, 380–387, 523
  - death of President Leconte and recognition of President Auguste ... 547–548
  - international commission for collection of foreign claims against ... 521–522
  - message of the President ... 521
  - report of the Minister for Foreign Affairs ... 521
  - visit of the Secretary of State to Haiti ... 541–547
- Heroin (see Opium convention) ... 199, 215
- Honduras:
  - Bonilla, Gen. Manuel; relations with President Estrada Cabrera of Guatemala. See Salvador: "Political disturbances."
  - customs arrangements with Great Britain ... 586
  - extradition convention with the United States; text ... 619
  - financial affairs—
    - proposed loan convention between Honduras and the United States; proposed loans contracts; good offices of the United States; arbitration proposal ... xxvi, 549–619
    - manifesto of the Honduran Congress upon rejecting the loan convention 577
    - communication of the Secretary of State to various Senators concerning the loan convention, inclosing a copy of the Secretary's address on "The Monroe Doctrine" ... 1082–1092
  - good offices of the United States ... xi
  - neutrality of ... 549, 557, 558, 572, 594
  - visit of the Secretary of State to Honduras ... 624–631
  - See also Salvador: "Political disturbances"; see also Nicaragua.

Page.
Hukuang Railway loan, conclusion of 87–88
Hungary, copyright convention between the United States and 7–8
  See also Germany: Wireless telegraph convention.
Hygiene and Demography, Ninth International Congress of 1365

I.

Imperial Valley negotiations with Mexico xviii
Indemnity payments by—
  China 159 160
  Mexico 708, 929–986
Indian hemp, control of use of 195, 208
Inheritance tax imposed in the United States on nonresident Danish heirs 323–332
Internal-revenue act of October 1, 1890; reasons for amending .... 183 et seq.
International commission for collection of foreign claims against Haiti 521–522
International Commission of Jurists; meeting at Rio de Janeiro .... xix, 18 et seq.
International conferences and congresses held in the United States:
  Ninth International Red Cross Conference 1365
  Twelfth International Congress of Navigation 1365
  Eighth International Congress of Applied Chemistry 1365
  International Conference on Mine Explosions 1365
  Ninth International Congress of Hygiene and Demography 1365
  See also China: International Opium Conference; and Brazil: American international law, etc.
International conventions and treaties. See Treaties, international, by subject.
International exposition at Tokyo, abandonment of 647–648
International law:
  American international law—report of United States delegates to the International Commission of Jurists at Rio de Janeiro 18–43 draft on extradition 37 draft on execution of judgments and letters rogatory 40 exclusion acts, right to protest against. See Haiti: Abrogation of the right of Syrians, etc.
  execution of judgments and letters rogatory 18, 40
  extradition 18, 37, 619–624
  grants made by treaties 1223–1224
  inheritance tax imposed in the United States on nonresident Danish heirs 323–332 jurisdiction: American protégés triable only by an American tribunal 987–992 letters rogatory 40 prize court 902 rights implied by treaty terms .... 1224 et seq.
  sovereignty. See Sovereignty.
  search of foreign merchant vessels 174 seizure of vessels 902 territorial waters; three-mile limit extended by Russia to 12 miles for customs purposes and control of fisheries 1287–1309, 1289 treaties, construction of 1221–1228
  See also "arms," "belligerency," "claims," "commercial regulations," "de facto government," "enlistment in foreign service," "mails," "neutrality," "neutralization," "postal regulations," "rights of foreigners."
International money orders in Mexico 773
International plan for defense of foreign settlements in China under the protocol of 1901 161–171
Interstate Commerce Act: references .... 473, 478 et seq., 488 et seq.
Interstate Commerce Commission; jurisdiction extended by Panama Canal act .... 473 et seq.
Intervention of the United States in probate proceedings in the District Court of Iowa, setting up the treaty of 1826 between the United States and Denmark 327–332
Intervention:
  by creditor nations 559, 586, 593 landing forces to protect life and property of resident nationals is not intervention 248–251, 261, 263

Intervention—Continued.
- of the United States in— Page.
  - Central America .... xii, xiii, 588
  - Cuba—
    - conditions requiring .... xxv, 254, 255, 261, 315
    - request of Cuba for, in regard to "insurrectionary claims" 281
    - remarks by the President of Cuba 312, 316
  - Mexico .... xiv, 707, 720, 735–736, 738, 747, 800, 804, 811, 824, 852, 854
  - Nicaragua xxvi
  - Panama 1133, 1137, 1138, 1139–1141, 1145–1165
- of the Powers in the war between Turkey and Montenegro, Serbia, Bulgaria, and Greece. See Turkey.

Iquitos, sanitation of .... xxiv, 1280–1286

Italy:
- good offices in behalf of the United States during Balkan war .... 1347 et seq.
- termination of the war between Italy and Turkey; sovereignty of Italy over Libya; extraterritorial rights of the United States .... xix–xx, 632–633.
- See also China: International opium convention; Germany: Wireless telegraph convention.

J.

Japan:
- abandonment of the proposed international exposition at Tokyo 647–648
- death of Emperor Mutsuhito; accession to the throne of Emperor Yoshihito .... xxii, 634–642
- land laws of Chosen; validity of consular registration of title 642–647
- treaty, fur seal, with the United States xvii
- trade with the United States xvii
- See also China: 46 et seq.; 87 et seq.; 182 et seq. Germany, 444. Russia, 1287 et seq.

Jurisdiction:
- American protégés triable only by an American tribunal 987–992
- consular 494–497
- Interstate Commerce Commission .... 473 et seq.
- United States; neutrality statutes 741–742, 744
- territorial waters .... 1289 et seq.

Jurists, International Commission of .... xix, 18

K.

King Christian X of Denmark, accession of 333–335

King Frederik VIII of Denmark, death of 333

King George V as amiable compositeur in settlement of the Alsop claim xxv

Korea (Chosen). See Japan.

L.

La France, presentation to the United States of a bust of 439–443

Land laws of Chosen. See Japan.

Landreau, John Celestine, arbitration of claim against Peru of; good offices of the United States xxiv

Latin America, relations of the United States to .... xi, xii–xiv, xviii–xix, xxiii–xxvi, 1–4, 555 et seq.; 586 et seq.; 1082–1092

Liberia:
- Anglo-Liberian boundary 652–662
- financial affairs; conclusion of the refunding loan of 1912, to refund the registered external and internal debt of Liberia as of Dec. 31, 1910; constitution of the customs receivership, ... xxi, 650–652, 667–701
- Franco-Liberian boundary 683, 687, 689–691, 700
- good offices of the United States .... xxi, 650, 652–662, 667–701
- Message of the President 649–652
- Reorganization of the Liberian frontier force under American officers .... xxi, 652, 662–667
- Sierra Leone boundary disturbances 649, 652–662

Libya, sovereignty of Italy over 632

Literary property, protection of 175

Loans:
- China 87–159
- Guatemala 500–511
- Honduras 549–619

Loans—Continued. Page.
Liberia 667–701
Nicaragua 1071–1105
Luxemburg: death of the Grand Duke William Alexander and ascension to the throne of the Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide 702–705

M.

Mails, routing of, through a port in the hands of insurgents not prohibited; mails not deliverable to a consul; foreign postmaster or consul can not handle mails in United States territory 736
Maine, raising of the wreck of the 304–309
Marine Hospital Service. See Peru: "Sanitation of Iquitos," .... 1281 et seq.
Maritime law:
  municipal seizures beyond the three-mile limit .... 1289 et seq.
  Twelfth International Congress of Navigation 1365
Measures to prevent firing across the boundary line by Mexican troops 878–888
Measures taken by Americans in Mexico to protect themselves. See this item under Mexico.
Measures to protect Americans in Constantinople. See Turkey.
Mediation of the United States, Argentina, and Brazil between Ecuador and Peru XI
Mediation of the United States requested by Cuba in regard to the "insurrectionary claims" (q. v.) 281
Mediation of the Powers in the war between Turkey and Montenegro, Serbia, Bulgaria, and Greece. See Turkey.
Merchant vessels. See Great Britain: Panama Canal tolls.
Merchant vessels, search of foreign, by rebel forces for contraband of war .. 174–175
Merchant marine, need of the United States for a XXVI
Messages of the President of the United States:
  Annual .... VII–XXVII
  Special—
    Honduras—
      January 26, 1911, transmitting to the Senate a loan convention between the United States and Honduras 555–560
      June 28, 1911, urging upon the Senate the ratification of the loan conventions with Honduras and Nicaragua 1076–1077
    Nicaragua—
      June 7, 1911, transmitting to the Senate a loan convention between the United States and Nicaragua 1072–1074
      June 28, 1911, urging upon the Senate the ratification of the loan conventions with Nicaragua and Honduras 1076–1077
      July 15, 1911, suggesting to the Senate certain amendments to the loan convention 1077–1078 opium—
      January 11, 1911, transmitting to the Senate a report of the Secretary of State giving reasons for amending the opium-exclusion act of February 9, 1909, and reviewing the history of the anti-opium movement 182–183
      May 31, 1912, transmitting to Congress a communication from the Secretary of State, covering the report of the American delegation to the International Opium Conference held at The Hague, December 1, 1911, to January 23, 1912 204–205
    Panama Canal—
      December 21, 1911, extract pertaining to the Panama Canal from the message to Congress on the financial condition of the Treasury, etc 467–469
      August 19, 1912, suggesting to Congress the passage of a joint resolution reciting that the canal act shall not be deemed to impair the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and providing for trying its provisions before the Supreme Court .... 479, footnote
      August 24, 1912, memorandum submitted to Congress accompanying the Panama canal act 475–480
Messages of the Presidents of:
  Colombia 225
  Costa Rica 227
  Dominican Republic 339

Messages of the Presidents of—Continued. Page.
  Haiti 521
  Liberia 649
  Mexico 706
Mexico:
  American citizens in Mexico, legal rights of 746
  American flag, display of, over consulate 903–905 ammunition. See "arms".
  anti-American feeling 809–810, 813, 826, 831, 870 arbitration of Chamizal boundary dispute 706 arms—
    definition 759
    exportation from the United States to Mexico 737, 739–742, 744
    importation to Mexico by foreigners, conditions required 877–878
  See also "Munitions of war."
  asylum for Felix Díaz; definition of the right of asylum and that of temporary refuge 860–861, 924–926
  belligerency—
    recognition of 737, 741, 856
    state of 729, 730, 737, 741, 744
  Beltran, Gen 858 et seq.
  blockade in relation to routing of mails 736 blockade of Vera Cruz 902 bombardment endangering foreigners protected against by the United States 853–863 boundary dispute; Chamizal tract 706
  Campa, General 729, 847, 849, 850, 880, 881, 882
  Chamizal boundary dispute xix, 706
  Chinese subjects 926–929
  claims of American citizens against Mexico for damages arising from revolutionary disturbances 929–986; also 708, 720, 722, 724–725 commerce in insurgent territory 736, 742 confiscation of mails by Mexican authorities 777, 781, 792 confiscatory taxation of foreigners by de facto authorities 907–910 confiscatory taxes on oil products 827 constitutional guaranties, suspension of 820, 828 consulate, display of flag over American 903–905 consuls, American—refused recognition by Orozco authorities 781, 787–788, 792, 795 protection of Chinese by 926–929 consultative claims commission 930, 934
  contraband of war 729–730
  damages to American citizens, claims for 929–986; 708, 720, 722, 724–725 crossing the border by troops 725, 726, 727, 888–900 de facto authorities, taxation of foreigners by 907–910 de facto government, definition of 795–796, 854
  De la Barra, F. L 768, 776 detention in the United States of Mexican insurrectionists 848–849
  Díaz, Felix 848, 853 et seq., 877, 924–925 enlisting of American citizens in Mexican service, within the United States 815, 818–820 exequatur issued by a de facto government 795–796
  extradition of Mexican officers from the United States 847, 850
  extraterritorial obligation of the United States in regard to its nationals in disturbed territory 741–742 firing across the border. See "Measures to prevent firing, etc."
  Hague convention respecting the rights and duties of neutrals 741
  Huerta, General 814, 824, 848, 849, 851
  Imperial Valley and Colorado River negotiations xx indemnities for damages to American citizens 708 international law (q. v.).
  intervention of the United States 707, 720, 735–736, 738, 747, 800, 804, 811, 824, 852, 854 mails, routing of, through a port in the hands of insurgents 736 measures taken by Americans in Mexico to protect themselves 739–740, 742–743, 747, 751, 754–756, 758, 762, 766, 770, 772, 773–777, 782, 789, 808–809, 840, 877–878 measures to prevent firing across the boundary line by Mexican troops 878–883

Mexico—Continued. Page.
  messages of President Madero.... 706–708, 772 munitions of war, prohibition of exportation; joint resolution of Congress of Mar. 14, 1912.... 745 See above, "arms".
  neutrality. See separate entries under "Neutrality."
  note of Apr. 15, 1912, from the Department of State to the Mexican Government relative to Mexican responsibility for American lives and property, etc.... 787–788 (instruction), 790, 791, 792–793 (the response of Mexico), 794–795 (complete text of the American note), 797, 808, 809 (revised note).
  note of Sept. 15, 1912, from the Department of State to the Mexican Government.... 842–846; and response, 871–877
  Obregón, President of Congress.... 757
  Orozco, General.... 780 781, 795, 799, 807, 809, 813, 814, 824, 825, 849, 852, 876, 908
  Pino Suárez.... 848
  "Plan of San Luis Potosi".... 710–711
  "Plan of Tacubaya".... 710–711 policy of the United States in protecting American citizens in Mexico.... 720, 722, 724 725, 727, 731–735, 737-739, 747, 779 780, 787 and 794 (note of Apr. 15, 1912), 798, 802 803, 805, 806, 808–809, 811-812, 813, 815, 816, 817–818, 821–824, 825–828, 832–837, 842–846 (note of Sept. 15, 1912), 847–849, 853, 854, 857–871, 878-888, 888-900, 901 903, 907–910, 917, 921–924, 925, 926 929, 929–986 (claims)
    See also "Measures taken by Americans, etc."
  political affairs; revolution; measures taken by the United States to prevent breach of neutrality laws and to protect American life and property in Mexico.... 708–878 ports, closure of.... 736, 742, 900–903
  postal regulations in insurgent territory.... 736 press censorship.... 762, 766–767, 770, 773, 777, 779 presentation of a statue of George Washington to Mexico by American citizens.... 905–907 protection by the United States of American life and property.... 746, 857, 863–866, 869, 877–878
    See "Note of Apr. 15, 1912," and "Note of Sept. 15, 1912"; see also "Measures taken by Americans, etc."
  protection by the United States of foreigners in Mexico.... 806, 854, 855, 864–867, 871 protection of British and French subjects by their Governments.... 802, 804 railroads, discrimination against American employees on.... 910–924 recruiting in the United States.... 714, 744, 815, 818–820 retaliatory murder protested against.... 788, 792
  Reyes revolution.... 713, 876
  Rojas, General.... 729
  Salazar, General.... 728
  San Luis Potosí, plan of.... 710–711 siege, declaration of state of.... 746
  sovereignty. See Sovereignty.
  Tacubaya, plan of.... 710–711 taxation of foreigners.... 907–910 temporary refuge. See entries under "Temporary refuge."
  troops permitted to pass over American soil.... 888 et seq.
  Vásquez Gómez.... 723, 727–729, 743, 771, 809
  Vera Cruz, uprising under Felix Díaz at.... 853 et seq., 900–903
  Villa, General.... 729, 814, 851
  Washington, presentation to Mexico of a statue of.... 905–907
  Washington conventions of 1907.... 549, 557, 572
  wireless telegraph convention. See Germany.
  Zapata, General.... 723, 811–812, 851, 876
Mine explosions, international conference on.... 1365
Monaco. See Germany: Wireless telegraph convention.
Monroe doctrine.... x, xii; 1, 470–471, 559, 582, 588 letter from the Secretary of State to various Senators transmitting his address before the New York State Bar Association, Jan. 19, 1912, on "The Monroe Doctrine and some incidental obligations in the zone of the Caribbean".... 1082–1092
  (See also speeches by the Secretary of State in various Latin-American countries; indexed under "Visit of the Secretary, etc.")

Page.
Montenegro: War with Turkey ... xx, 1341–1354
Morocco:
  Legation of the United States in Tangier, reference to ... xxi relation of American protégés to the French authorities at Fez; good offices of the British Consul in the case of Mohammed ben Lehsen el Filaly ... 987–992
Morphine. See China: International Opium Conference.
Most-favored-nation treatment in relation to the Panama Canal ... 476 et seq.
Munitions of war:
  proclamation of the joint resolution of Congress prohibiting export of ... 745 exceptions ... 747–761, 765–766, 768, 770, 775, 781–783, 790, 791, 799, 801, 807–808, 813, 855, 862 prohibition of landing munitions of war at a port held by insurgents ... 900–903
  See also Arms.

N.

Naturalization:
  Abrogation of the right of Syrians to trade in Haiti ... 523–541
Naturalization conventions between the United States and—
  Costa Rica; text ... 227–229
  Nicaragua; texts ... 1105–1107, 1107–1109
Naval station at Guantanamo ... xxv, 293–297
Navigation, Twelfth International Congress of ... 1365
Navy Department. See Cuba: "Naval station at Guantanamo," and "Raising of the wreck of the U. S. S. Maine."
  See Panama: "Wireless telegraph installation, etc."
Negro uprising in Cuba, attitude of the United States; protection of foreign colonies ... 242–268
Netherlands. See China: International Opium Convention; Germany: Wireless telegraph convention.
Neutrality:
  act, neutrality ... 1344
  arrest and detention of Mexican insurgents under section 14 of the United States Penal Code ... 848, 850 asylum, rights of ... 924–926 attitude of the United States during uprising of Felix Díaz at Vera Cruz ... 854 belligerency. See "Belligerency."
  closure by a sovereign power of a port held by an enemy, conditions required for ... 902 crossing of American troops into Mexico ... 880 distinction between enforcement of neutrality statutes of the United States and observance of the rules of international neutrality, on the one hand and, on the other, activities amounting to cooperation with a foreign government in putting down rebellion ... 709 distinction between the international laws involved and the neutrality statutes of the United States ... 741 exportation of arms. See "Arms."
  firing across the boundary line by Mexican troops ... 878–888
  Honduras, neutrality of ... 549, 558
  Panama Canal, neutralization of ... 476 et seq.
  permission for Mexican troops to pass over American soil ... 888–900
  recruiting in the United States for a foreign service ... 741, 815–816, 818–820 temporary refuge, rights of ... 924–926 temporary refuge granted to Chinese by American diplomatic and consular officers in Mexico ... 926–929
  United States, neutrality of ... xi–xiv, xx, xxii, xxiv, 632, 1313, 1341
  Neutralization of interoceanic canals ... 484
Nicaragua:
  arrest and detention of General Mena ... 1053–1071
  canal project ... 1095–1099
  Chamorro, General Emiliano ... 1012 et seq.
    letter to the Department of State ... 1017, claims commission, protection of, by the United States ... 1036
  Constitution of Nicaragua, promulgated January 12, 1912 ... 993–1011; text, 997–1011 customshouses, protection of, by the United States ... 1036

Page.

- Nicaragua—Continued.
  - Dawson agreements of 1910, breach of 1012–1071, 1013–1015, 1020–1022, 1024
  - election of Adolfo Díaz to the presidency ..... 1016, 1063 et seq.
  - Estrada, General J. J ..... 1014 et seq.
  - Financial affairs—loan convention between Nicaragua and the United States submitted to the Senate of the United States and ratified by Nicaragua; loans to Nicaragua by American bankers; good offices of the United States ..... XIV, 589, 1071–1105
  - measures taken by the United States for the protection of foreigners 1012–1071
  - Mena, General 1012–1071
  - naturalization conventions with the United States; text 1105–1109
  - policy of the United States—
    - officially stated 1043–1044, 1048
    - address by the Secretary of State before the New York State Bar Association on "The Monroe doctrine" 1082–1092
    - speeches in Nicaragua 1114–1117, 1020–1122
  - political affairs—revolutionary plots; the Mena insurrection; breach of the Dawson agreements and of the Washington conventions; measures taken by the United States for protecting life and property of foreigners; arrest and detention of Mena; election by direct popular vote of Adolfo Díaz as constitutional President from January 1, 1913 1012–1071
  - relief of famine; good offices of the United States ..... XIII, 1127–1132
  - rump Assembly of Aug. 3, 1912 1034
  - Solórzano, Fernando ..... 1015 et seq.
  - visit of the Secretary of State 1, 1109–1127
  - Washington conventions of 1907 1012–1071
  - See also Salvador: "Political disturbances."
- North Atlantic fisheries settlement with Great Britain ..... XVIII; text, 489–494
- Norway. See Germany: wireless telegraph convention.
- Notes. See Exchange of notes.

O.

- Oils, American lubricating (see Belgium) 9
- Opium Conference, International (Dec. 1, 1911–Jan. 23, 1912) ..... XIX, 182–224
  - Report of the delegates of the United States, dated May 15, 1912 207–221
  - Opium convention signed at The Hague Jan. 23, 1912; text 196–204
  - Opium-exclusion act of Feb. 9, 1909, report of the Secretary of State giving reasons for amendment of 183–187
- Ottoman Government. See Turkey.

P.

- Panama:
  - assault on American citizens 1250–1261
  - boundary dispute with Costa Rica XI
  - canal tolls 467–489
  - immigration law cited 530
  - elections, supervision by the United States of ..... XXV, 1133–1165
  - police dismissed at request of the United States 1250–1261
    - reinstated 1261–1264
  - policy of the United States in relation to railroad concessions 1171–1185, 1200
  - presidency of Rodolfo Chiarí 1135
    - of Porras 1165
  - railroad concessions to foreigners and their relation to the canal; attitude of the United States 1167–1206
  - tariff relations with the United States 599
  - Visit of the Secretary of State to the Republics of Central America and the Caribbean Sea 2, 1240–1250
  - wireless telegraph installation in Panama; treaty rights of the United States 1206–1240
- Panama Canal:
  - influence of ..... XXVII, 581, 588, 589
  - Monroe doctrine ..... XII, XIV, 581, 588, 589
  - railroad concessions in their relation to the canal 1167–1206
  - relation to Central American conditions 581, 588, 589
  - sovereignty over 486

Panama Canal—Continued. Page.
tolls: exemption of vessels in the coastwise trade of the United States from payment of tolls, and other features of the Panama Canal Act of Aug. 24, 1912; objections thereto of the British Government 467–489
See also Visit of the Secretary of State, etc.; Nicaragua: canal project.
Panama Canal Act: text of sections pertaining to tolls 471–475 references 467–489
Panama Canal Commission, relation to proposed sanitation of Guayaquil 426, 430
Panama Canal Zone, relation thereto of proposed sanitation of Guayaquil 426, 430
Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco in 1915 4
Pan American Union, conclusion of a supplementary agreement relating to the time of meeting of the International Commission of Jurists 19
Paraguay: Political affairs; insurrection of February–March, 1911; coup d'état of July, 1911; various insurrections of 1911 and 1912; presidential successions of Gondra, Jara, Rojas, Peña, Navero, and Schaerer; recognition of President Schaerer by the United States 1265–1278
Pecuniary claims arbitration with Great Britain XVII
Peru:
boundary dispute with—
Bolivia 1279
Ecuador XI
claim of Landreau, arbitration of XXIV sanitation of Iquitos; employment of American engineers; good offices of the United States .... XXIV, 1280–1286 Persia. See China: International Opium convention; Germany; Wireless telegraph convention.
Philippine Islands in relation to the opium traffic .... 183 et seq.
Platt Amendment, invocation of 281, 310, 312, 591
Police:
control of the Panaman police by the United States 1145–1165, 1250–1264
reorganization of Liberian police under United States officers 662–666 Policy of the United States in—
Latin America. See "Monroe doctrine"; "Visit of the Secretary of State"; Panama: "Railroad concessions," 1171–1185, 1200. See, in general, entries under the various Latin-American countries, and Messages of the President.
Mexico. See this item under Mexico.
Ports, closure of 392–394, 736, 742, 900–903
Portugal. See China: International Opium convention; Germany: Wireless telegraph convention.
Postal Union, Universal 195
Postal regulations in insurgent territory 736
Presentation by France to the United States of a bust of "La France" at the Champlain celebration 439–443
Presentation of a park to the Danish Government by American citizens of Danish descent 335–338
Presentation of a statue of George Washington to Mexico by American citizens 905–907
President of the United States:
annual message .... VII–XXVII
special messages. See Messages of the President.
as Honorary President at the dedication of the Danish-American National Park 337
Presidents of:
Brazil: Message of President Marshal Hermes R. da Fonseca, to the Congress 18
China—
Sun Yat Sen as Provisional President 46, 60
Yuan Shih Kai as Provisional President 46, 66, 75
Colombia: Message of President Restrepo to the Congress 225
Costa Rica: Message of President Jiménez to the Congress 227 speech of welcome to the Secretary of State 231
Cuba: reception of the Secretary of State by President Gómez .... 298 et seq.
Dominican Republic—
Victoria, Eladio—
message to Congress 339
reception of the Secretary of State .... 389 et seq.
resignation 372, 375, 376
Nouel, Archbishop Adolfo: election of 376–377

Page.

- Presidents of—Continued.
  - Ecuador—
    - Alfaro, Eloy; resignation of ... 391
    - Estrada, Emilio; death of ... 391
    - Montero, General; provisional government of ... 391 et seq.
    - Freile Zaldumbide, provisional government of ... 394 et seq.
    - Marin, Doctor: president ad interim ... 404–405
    - Plaza, General: first term, 401; election and inauguration in 1912, 409–410; recognition by the United States ... 411–412
  - Guatemala: reception of the Secretary of State by President Estrada Cabrera, 513–514, 519; charges against President Estrada Cabrera ... 1012 et seq., 1317
  - Haiti—
    - Leconte, Jean Jacques: message to the Congress, 521; death ... 547
    - Auguste, Tancrède: recognition by the United States ... 547–548
  - Honduras: reception of the Secretary of State by President Bonilla ... 630–631
  - Liberia: message of President Howard to the Legislature ... 649
  - Mexico: messages of President Madero to the Congress ... 706
  - Nicaragua—
    - Estrada, J. J.; coup d'état of, 1014; resignation ... 1014
    - Díaz, Adolfo; provisional presidency, 1014; election ... 1016, 1063 et seq.
  - Panama—
    - Chiarí, Rodolfo; provisional presidency of, 1135; reception of the Secretary of State ... 1247–1249
    - Porras, Dr. Belisario; election and inauguration of ... 1165
  - Paraguay—
    - Gondra ... 1265–1276
    - Jara ... 1265–1275
    - Rojas ... 1270–1273
    - Peña ... 1273
    - Navero ... 1272–1275
    - Schaerer, 1265–1278; recognition of President Schaerer by the United States ... 1277–1278
    - list of presidents, 1870–1911 ... 1272
  - Salvador: reception of the Secretary of State by President Araújo ... 1329 et seq.
  - Venezuela: reception of the Secretary of State by President Gómez ... 1355 et seq.
- Press censorship in Mexico ... 762, 766–767, 770, 773, 777, 779
- Prize court, adjudication of seizure of vessels running a blockade ... 902
- Property:
  - treaty restrictions of the right of ... 1224 et seq.
  - See China: Arrangement between the United States and France, etc.; see also Protection of American life and property in foreign countries.
- Protection of American life and property in foreign countries:
  - Central America ... XII–XIV, 586
  - China ... 46–80, 161–173, 175–178
  - Cuba ... XXV, 242–268, 245–246, 248–267, 268–276
  - Ecuador ... 392–408, 412–422
  - Haiti ... 523–541
  - Mexico:
    - by the United States Government, 746, 857, 863–866, 869, 877–878; and see, under Mexico: "note of Apr. 15, 1912"; "note of Sept. 15, 1912"; and "policy of the United States, etc."
    - by the cooperation of American residents with the authorities ... 739–740, 742–743, 747, 751, 754–756, 758, 762, 766, 770, 772–777, 782, 789, 808–809, 840, 877–878
  - Morocco: protection of American semsars by the British Consul ... 987–992
  - Panama ... 1250–1264
  - Spitzbergen ... XX, 1305–1306
  - Turkey: by friendly neutral powers during Turco-Balkan war ... XX, 1341–1354
- Protection by the United States of life and property of foreigners in—
  - Cuba ... 242–268
  - Ecuador ... 434–438
  - Mexico ... 806, 854, 855, 864–867, 871, 926–929
  - Nicaragua ... 1012–1071
- Protection of British and French subjects in Mexico by British and French vessels ... 802, 804
- Protection of literary and artistic property in China; arrangement between the United States and France ... 175–178
- Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. See Peru: "Sanitation of Iquitos."

R.

Railroads: Page.
- Mexico: discrimination against American employees 910–924
- Panama: railroad concessions to foreigners and their relation to the Canal 1167–1206
- United States: regulation of, by Interstate Commerce act 478

Receivers, British, French, and German consuls as, of Liberian customs 667–701

Reciprocity concessions, list of .... 595 et seq.

Recognition by the United States of new governments in—
- China 61, 62, 69, 70, 75, 77, 78, 81–86
- Denmark 333–335
- Dominican Republic 375–377
- Ecuador 411–412
- Haiti 547–548
- Japan 634–642
- Luxemburg 702–705
- Nicaragua 1063–1067
- Panama 1165–1166
- Paraguay 1274–1278

Recognition by the United States of sovereignty of Italy over Tripoli, Cyrenaica, and Libya 632

Recruiting in the United States for a foreign service 714, 744, 815, 818–820

Red Cross, American:
- Nicaragua: relief of famine .... xiii, 1109–1126
- Ninth International Conference 1365
- Turkey: relief given in Turco-Balkan war xx

Registration of property of foreigners in China 178–180

Registry of foreign-built vessels .... 478 et seq.

Reid, Mr. Whitelaw, death of the American Ambassador 497–499

Retaliatory murder by Mexican authorities protested against by the United States 788, 792

Revenue Act of Aug. 27, 1894, referred to in Panama Canal Act 474

Revolutions:
- China 46–86
- Cuba 236–268
- Dominican Republic 340–380
- Mexico 708–878
- Nicaragua 1012–1071
- Paraguay 1265–1278
- Salvador 1287–1309

Rights implied by terms of treaty .... 1224 et seq.

Rostron, Captain Arthur Henry, recognition of the services of 496–497

Roumania. See Germany: wireless telegraph convention.

Russia:
- extension by Russia of the 3-mile limit of territorial waters to 12 miles for customs purposes and control of fisheries 1287–1309
- good offices in behalf of the United States during Balkan war .... 1347 et seq.
- See China: International Opium Convention; Germany: wireless telegraph convention.

S.

Salvador:
- political disturbances; attitude of the United States 1310–1328
- visit of the Secretary of State 1328–1338
- the coat of arms and the flag of Salvador 1339–1340
- effect on Salvador of Honduran relations with the United States 593
- offer of financial assistance to Honduras and Nicaragua 618
- See also Nicaragua: 1012 et seq; 1037–1040, 1042, 1046–1050, 1067.

Sanitation of—
- Guayaquil, Ecuador .... xxiii, 422–434
- Iquitos, Peru .... xxiv, 1280–1286

Scorpion, U. S. S. stationnaire at Constantinople xx

Search of foreign merchant vessels by rebel forces for contraband of war 174–175

Secretary of State, visit of the, to the countries of Central America and the Caribbean Sea:
- Costa Rica 226–235
- Cuba 297–303
- Dominican Republic 387–390

Secretary of State, visit of the, to the countries of Central America and the Caribbean Sea—Continued.
Page.
- Guatemala 511–520
- Haiti 541–547
- Honduras 624–631
- Nicaragua 1109–1127
- Panama 1240–1250
- Salvador 1323–1339
- Venezuela 1355–1364

Seizure of vessels. See Russia, 1288 et seq.
Self-preservation, treaty restrictions of the right of 1224 et seq.
Serbia: war with Turkey xx, 1341–1354
Sherman Antitrust Act 474, 479, 488
Sherman, Vice President James S., death of 5
Siam. See China: International Opium Convention.
Siege, state of 746
Sierra Leone. See Liberia.
Smuggling of munitions of war 753
Smyrna, American interests at xx
South America, relations of the United States with the nations of xxiii
See also Monroe doctrine; Policy of the United States; and United States: relations with, etc.

Sovereignty:
- closure of port by a sovereign power, conditions required for 902
- infringed by recruiting for a foreign service 815–816, 818–820
- Italy, recognition by the United States of the sovereignty of, over Cyrenaica and Libya 632
- Panama Canal 486
- treaty restrictions of the rights of sovereignty, property, or self-preservation; opinion of the Solicitor 1224 et seq.
- territorial waters, provisions of Revised Statutes of the United States in relation to customs regulations 1287

Spain. See Germany: wireless telegraph convention.
Speech from the throne by the Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide of Luxemburg 706
Spitzbergen, protection of American interests in xx, 1305–1303
State and Federal authorities, cooperation of, in relation to the revolution in Mexico 888 et seq.
Statue of "La France" presented by France to the United States 439–443
Statue of Washington presented to Mexico 905–907
Students' Congress, Third International, at Lima xxiv
Submarines ordered by Peru in the United States xxiv
Subsidy of shipping. See Great Britain: Panama Canal tolls.
Sweden. See Germany: wireless telegraph convention.
Syrians in Haiti 522, 523–541

T.

Tacna-Arica dispute between Chile and Peru xi

Tariff:
- tariff conventions, list of 595–600
- minimum tariff extended and subsequent trade discrimination (see Belgium) 9, 12
- reductions in Dominican Republic 564, 592
- admission without duty of shipbuilding materials 478 et seq.

Taxation:
- collateral inheritance tax imposed in the United States on nonresident Danish heirs 323–332
- confiscatory taxation of foreigners by insurrectionary forces exercising de facto authority 907–910
- confiscatory taxation by Mexico on oil products 827

Telegraph. See Wireless telegraph.

Temporary refuge:
- offered to the mandarins and the Manchu rulers by American diplomatic and consular officers 173–174
- granted to Chinese subjects by American diplomatic and consular officers in Mexico 926–929
- rights of 924–926

Page.
Territorial integrity of American States (circular)........ 1
Territorial waters extended by Russia to twelve miles for customs purposes and control of fisheries........ 1287–1309
The Hague. See Hague.
Third Pan American Conference........ xix
Titanic, wreck of the........ 494–497
Title:
  registration of title to property of foreigners in China........ 178–180 consular registration in Chosen........ 642–647
Tolls. See Panama Canal.
Trade:
  Central America, total annual trade of the United States with........ 1332
  oils, American lubricating (see Belgium)........ 9 rights in Haiti of American citizens of Syrian birth........ 522, 523–541
  United States: general remarks........ x, xii, xv–xvii, xxvi coastwise. See Panama Canal.
Trade and commerce, Act to protect, of July 2, 1890; reference in the Panama Canal Act........ 474
Trade-marks, protection of, in China; reference........ 177
Treasury Department. See Peru: "Sanitation of Iquitos," 1281 et seq.
Treaties[1]: by country[2]—
  Austria-Hungary. See Hungary.
  Bolivia and Peru: protocol relating to boundary dispute, reference........ 1279
  Costa Rica and the United States: naturalization; text........ 227–229
  Cuba with France, Germany and Great Britain: draft agreement to arbitrate insurrectionary claims against Cuba; text........ 291–293
  Cuba and the United States: agreement of Dec. 27, 1912, amending agreements of 1903, relating to Bahía Honda and Guantánamo naval stations; text........ 295–297
  Denmark and United States: inheritance tax; interpretation of article 7 of treaty of 1826........ 323–333
  Dominican Republic and Haiti: citation of treaty of 1874........ 371
  Dominican Republic and United States: customs revenues convention of 1907 referred to........ 367, 368, 372
  Ecuador and the United States: sanitation of Guayaquil; proposed bases for a convention........ 422–434; text, 424
  France and the United States: arrangement for the reciprocal protection in China of literary and artistic property; correspondence and texts........ 175–178
  France, Germany and Great Britain with Cuba: draft agreement to arbitrate insurrectionary claims against Cuba; text........ 291–293
  Germany, France and Great Britain with Cuba: draft agreement to arbitrate insurrectionary claims against Cuba; text........ 291–293
  Great Britain and Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua (1859 and 1860); reference........ 556
  Great Britain and Liberia: Sierra Leone-Liberia (Kanre-Lahun) boundary agreement referred to........ 654 et seq.
  Great Britain and the United States—boundary waters treaty (1909); cited........ 483–484
    claims, outstanding pecuniary; memorandum of confirmation (Apr. 26, 1912) of special agreement for arbitration; reference... xvii, 494
    North Atlantic coast fisheries agreement of July 20, 1912, adopting with certain modifications the rules and methods of procedure recommended in the award of Sept. 7, 1910; text........ 489–494 fisheries convention of 1818 referred to........ 490, 1297
    Clayton-Bulwer treaty (1850); cited........ 482–487, 556
    Hay-Pauncefote treaty (1901); cited........ 482–486
    treaty of Washington (1871); cited........ 484
  Great Britain, France, and Germany with Cuba: draft agreement to arbitrate insurrectionary claims against Cuba; text........ 291–293
  Guatemala and Great Britain (1859 and 1860); reference........ 556
  Haiti and Dominican Republic, citation of treaty of 1874........ 371
  Honduras and Great Britain (1859 and 1860); reference........ 556

---

[1] Including agreements, arrangements, and understandings.
[2] See also, post, "Treaties: by subject" and "Treaties, international: by subject."

Treaties: by country—Continued.

Page.

- Honduras and the United States—
  - extradition; text ... 619–624
  - loan: text of proposed loan convention ... xxviii, 560–562
- Hungary and the United States: copyright convention of January 30, 1912; text ... 7–8
- Italy and Turkey: peace: notice of signing treaty of October 18, 1912 ... 632
- Liberia and Great Britain: Sierra Leone-Liberia (Kanre-Lahun) boundary agreement referred to ... 654 et seq.
- Mexico and the United States: treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (1848); reference ... 1290
- Nicaragua and Great Britain (1859 and 1860); reference ... 556
- Nicaragua and United States—
  - loan convention, proposed; text ... 1074–1076
  - naturalization; texts ... 1105–1107, 1107–1109
- Panama and the United States—
  - understanding concerning wireless telegraph installations; correspondence ... 1206–1240
  - convention for the construction of a ship canal (1903); cited ... 1221 et seq.
- Peru and Bolivia: protocol relating to boundary dispute; reference ... 1279
- Russia and the United States: convention ceding Alaska (1867); referred to ... 1295
- Turkey and Italy: peace; notice of signing the treaty of October 18, 1912 ... 632
- United States and Costa Rica: naturalization; text ... 227–229
- United States and Cuba: agreement of December 27, 1912, amending agreements of 1903 relating to Bahia Honda and Guantanamo naval stations; text ... 295–297
- United States and Denmark: inheritance tax; interpretation of article 7 of treaty of 1826 ... 323–332
- United States and Dominican Republic: customs revenues convention of 1907 referred to ... 367, 368, 372
- United States and Ecuador: sanitation of Guayaquil; proposed bases for a convention ... 422–434; text, 424
- United States and France: arrangement for the reciprocal protection in China of literary and artistic property; correspondence and texts .. 175–178
- United States and Great Britain—
  - boundary waters treaty (1909); cited ... 483–484
  - claims, outstanding pecuniary; memorandum of confirmation (Apr. 26, 1912) of special agreement for arbitration; reference ... xvii, 494
  - fisheries: North Atlantic coast fisheries, agreement of July 20, 1912, adopting with certain modifications the rules and method of procedure recommended in the award of September 7, 1910; text ... 489–494
  - fisheries convention of 1818 referred to ... 490, 1297
  - Clayton-Bulwer treaty (1850); cited ... 482–487, 556
  - Hay-Pauncefote treaty (1901); cited ... 482–486
  - treaty of Washington (1871); cited ... 484
- United States and Honduras—
  - extradition; text ... 619–624
  - loan convention, text of proposed ... xxviii, 560–562
- United States and Hungary: copyright convention of January 30, 1912; text ... 7–8
- United States and Mexico: treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (1848); reference ... 1290
- United States and Nicaragua—
  - loan convention; text ... 1074–1075
  - naturalization; texts ... 1105–1107, 1107–1109
- United States and Panama—
  - understanding respecting wireless telegraph installations ... 1206–1240
  - convention for the construction of a ship canal (1903); cited ... 1221 et seq.
- United States and Russia: convention ceding Alaska (1867); referred to ... 1295
- United States and various countries: tariff: citations of instances of governments obligating themselves respecting tariff changes ... 590–600

- Treaties: by subject—
  - arbitration. See "claims, outstanding pecuniary," and "claims, insurrectionary."
  - boundary— Page.
    - Bolivia and Peru: protocol appointing commission; reference......... 1279
    - Great Britain and Liberia: special agreement relating to the Kanre-Lahun (Sierra Leone-Liberia) boundary; concluded in January, 1912, reference... 654 et seq.
  - boundary waters—
    - United States and Great Britain—
      - treaty of 1909; cited.. 483–484
      - treaty of Washington (1871); cited............................... 484
  - canal, Panama—
    - Great Britain with Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua; reference... 556
    - Clayton-Bulwer treaty referred to........................... 482–487, 556
    - Hay-Pauncefote treaty referred to.................................. 482–486
  - canal, Suez, convention of 1888; references 482, 484, 485
  - claims, insurrectionary, Cuba with France, Germany, and Great Britain, Britain; draft agreement to arbitrate.............................. 291–293
  - claims, outstanding pecuniary—United States and Great Britain: special agreement to arbitrate; confirmed April 26, 1912, by exchange of notes; reference .... XVII, 494
  - copyright—
    - United States and Hungary; convention of January 30, 1912; text..... 7–8
    - See also Protection in China of literary and artistic property.
  - customs revenues, United States and Dominican Republic; convention tion of 1907 referred to................................ 340–380, 367, 368, 372
  - customs. See Tariff.
  - extradition—
    - draft on extradition, submitted to the International Commission of Jurists at Rio de Janeiro; text 37–39
    - United States and Honduras; text.................................. 619–624
  - financial. See Loans.
  - fisheries—
    - United States and Great Britain—
      - North Atlantic Coast fisheries agreement of July 20, 1912, adopting with certain modifications the rules and method of procedure recommended in the award of September 7, 1910; text.. 489–494
      - "Convention respecting fisheries, etc." (1818); reference........ 490
  - friendship, commerce and navigation: United States and Denmark; treaty of 1826; invocation of article 7 (taxes), 323–332; interpretation by District Court of Iowa.. 329–330
  - inheritance tax. See Friendship, commerce and navigation.
  - loans—
    - United States and Honduras; text of proposed convention.......... 560–562
    - United States and Nicaragua; text of proposed convention 1074–1075
  - naturalization—
    - United States and Costa Rica; convention of June 10, 1911; text... 227–229
    - United States and Nicaragua; conventions of December 7, 1908, and June 17, 1911; texts........................... 1105–1107, 1107–1109
  - naval stations at Bahia Honda and Guantanamo: United States and Cuba; reference, XXV; text of agreement, signed December 27, 1912, amending agreements of February 16–23 and July 2, 1903............ 295–297
  - peace, Italy and Turkey; notice of signing the treaty of October 18, 1912..... 632
  - protection, reciprocal, in China, of literary and artistic property; arrangement between the United States and France for; correspondence and texts.. 175–178
  - reciprocity. See Tariff.
  - sanitation of Guayaquil, United States and Ecuador; proposed bases for a convention .... 422–434; text, 424
  - sovereignty—
    - Great Britain with Guatemala, Honduras, and Nicaragua; reference. 556
    - Haiti and Dominican Republic; citation of treaty of 1874............ 371
  - tariff—
    - United States with various countries; citations of instances of governments obligating themselves respecting tariff changes............ 590–600
    - instances of treaty obligations not to change customs tariffs........ 590, 595

- Treaties: by subject—Continued.
  - territorial waters— Page.
    - instances of treaty provisions relating to territorial limits of municipal authority .... 1289 et seq.
    - United States and Great Britain; convention respecting fisheries, boundary, etc. (1818) referred to 1297
    - United States and Russia; convention ceding Alaska (1867) referred to 1295
  - wireless telegraph—
    - United States and Panama; understanding respecting wireless telegraph installations 1206–1240
    - United States and Panama; treaty of 1903 cited .... 1221 et seq.
- Treaties, international: by subject—
  - China; final protocol of 1901 invoked in defense of foreign settlements. 161–171
  - claims; "Convention respecting the limitation of the employment of force for the recovery of contract debts" (Second Hague Conventions; Oct. 18, 1907); reference 502
  - Fur-seal Convention of July 7, 1911, between the United States, Great Britain, Russia, and Japan; reference XVII
  - Hague Conventions of 1907; references—
    - limitation of the employment of force for the recovery of contract tract debts 502
    - rights and duties of neutral powers and persons in war on land 741
  - International Commission of Jurists, convention for establishing an; concluded by the Third International American Conference August 23, 1906; references .... XXI, 18 et seq.
  - neutrality, "Convention respecting the rights and duties of neutral powers and persons in war on land" (Second Hague Conventions; October 18, 1907); reference 741
  - opium, morphine, and cocaine—
    - international opium convention signed at The Hague January 23, 1912; text 196–204
    - protocol de clôture of the International Opium Conference, January 23, 1912; reference, XXI; text 193–196
  - peace and amity, Central American States. The "Washington conventions of 1907;" reference to the "General treaty of peace and amity concluded at the Central American Peace Conference of 1907, between Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Salvador".. 549, 557, 558, 572, 594
  - tariff, various countries; lists of treaties relating to changes of tariffs.... 590–600
  - telegraph; extract from the International Telegraph Convention signed at St. Petersburg July 10/22, 1875 465–466
  - telegraph. See also Wireless telegraph.
  - territorial waters, 1287; London Naval Conference referred to 1290
  - Turco-Balkan war; application of the Treaty of Berlin (1878) 1341
  - wireless telegraph; texts of the convention, supplementary agreement, final protocol, and service regulations, with supplement to article 38 thereof, signed at Berlin November 3, 1906, and proclaimed May 25, 1912 444–465
    - See also Telegraph.
- Treaties, international—
  - novel provisions for signing and ratifying and providing for arbitration.... 202–203, 217–219
  - construction of, 330; opinion of the Solicitor as to the proper form of negotiations with Panama relative to wireless telegraph installation in view of the Panama Canal treaty of 1903 1221–1233
- Tripoli, sovereignty of Italy over 632
- Troops, Mexican, permitted to pass over American soil 888–900
- Turkey:
  - war with Italy; neutrality of the United States .... XXI–XXII, 632–633
  - war between Turkey and Montenegro, Serbia, Bulgaria, and Greece; protection of American interests; good offices of neutral powers... XXII, 1341–1354
  - See also Germany: wireless telegraph convention.
- Understanding between the United States and Panama concerning wireless telegraph installations 1206–1240
- United States:
  - agricultural credits XIV
  - American citizens. See "Protection of American life and property."

United States—Continued.

- arbitration— Page.
  - general policy; references to Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru xi
  - Cuba 285, 288
  - Dominican Republic ..... 380 et seq.
  - Ecuador ..... 412 et seq.
  - Great Britain—
    - fisheries, North Atlantic coast; reference, xviii; text of agreement 489–494
    - pecuniary claims ..... xvii, 494
  - Guatemala ..... 502 et seq.
  - Haiti ..... 380 et seq.
  - Honduras ..... 549 et seq.
  - Mexico 706
  - Peru xxiv
- Army officer permitted by Congress to accept service under a foreign government 44
- arrangement with France 175–178
- asylum requested at American legations 173–174, 393, 860–861, 924–926
- United States: Chamizal dispute with Mexico ..... xix, 706
- Colorado River, negotiations with Mexico xviii
- consular corps, merit system in ix
- conventions between the United States and other countries. See Treaties.
- cooperation of the Federal Government with certain States in relation to the revolution in Mexico ..... 888 et seq.
- copyright (q. v.).
- customs officers, authority of, in territorial waters 1287
- Department of State—
  - consular corps ix
  - diplomatic corps ix
  - embassies and legations x
  - reorganization of viii
- diplomatic corps, merit system in ix
- foreign policy; general statement as to Latin America 1
- See also Policy of the United States, etc.
- foreign relations; general statements ..... vii, xxvii
- good offices—
  - Argentina and Bolivia xi
  - Central America. See Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Salvador.
  - Central American and Caribbean countries xii
  - Chile and Peru xi
  - China, loans ..... xi, xxii, 87–159
  - China, protection of Chinese citizens in Ecuador 434–438
  - Cuba, offer of assistance in preparing for arbitration of "insurrectionary claims" 288–289
  - Dominican Republic and Haiti ..... xi, xxiv, 340–387
  - Ecuador—
    - arbitration of claim of Guayaquil & Quito Ry. Co. v. Ecuador 412–422
    - Guayaquil, sanitation of ..... xxiii, 422 et seq.
    - protection of Chinese citizens 434–438
  - Great Britain—
    - Anglo-Liberian frontier dispute 652–662
    - British consul general in Nicaragua, safe conduct of 1035
  - Guatemala 500–511
  - Haiti ..... xi, xxiv, 340–387, 523–541
  - Honduras ..... xi, 549–619
  - Liberia xxi
  - Liberia—
    - Anglo-Liberian boundary dispute 649, 652–662
    - reorganization of the Liberian frontier force under American officers 662–667
  - Liberian loan 650–652, 667–701
  - Nicaragua ..... xi, xii–xiii, 1012–1104
  - Panama ..... xxv, 1133 et seq.
  - Peru ..... xxiv, 1280–1286

Page.

United States—Continued.
- Imperial Valley negotiations with Mexico ... xviii
- International Commission of Jurists, participation in meeting of ... xix
- Latin America, territorial integrity of ... 1
- legation at Tangier ... xxi
- mediation of Argentina, Brazil, and the United States between Peru and Ecuador ... xi
- mediation between Dominican Republic and Haiti ... xxiv
- Monroe doctrine (q. v.).
- neutrality of. See Neutrality.
- neutrality—
  - war between Italy and Turkey ... xx, 632
  - war between Turkey and the Balkan States ... xx, 1341
- neutrality laws; application in Central America ... xiii
- nonintervention policy—
  - Chile and Peru ... xi
  - Mexico. (See Mexico: "Intervention.")
  - See also Policy of the United States, etc.
- opium conference, participation in ... xix, 182–224
- Panama Canal (q. v.)
- recognition of foreign governments. See Recognition by the United States, etc.
- Reid, Mr. Whitelaw, death of, American Ambassador to Great Britain .. 497–499
- relations with—
  - Argentina ... xxiii, 6
  - Austria-Hungary ... 7
  - Belgium ... 9–17
  - Bolivia ... 1279
  - Brazil ... xxiii, 18–43
  - Central America ... xii–xiv, xxvi, and the entries under Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, and Salvador.
  - Chile ... xxiii, 44
  - China ... xi–xii, 46–224
  - Colombia ... xi, 225–226
  - Costa Rica ... 227–235, 589; see also Salvador: "Political disturbances"
  - Cuba ... xxv, 236–322, 344
  - Denmark ... 323–338
  - Dominican Republic ... xxiv, 339–390, 559, 589
  - Ecuador ... 391–438
  - European powers ... 1351
  - France ... 175–178, 439–443
  - Great Britain ... xxv, 46–159, 276–293, 467–499, 500–511, 531 et seq., 652–667, 987 et seq., 1341 et seq.
  - Guatemala ... xxv, 500–520, 559, 589, 1310 et seq.
  - Haiti ... xxiv, 340–386, 521–547
  - Honduras ... xxvi, 549–631, 1310 et seq.
  - Hungary ... 7–8
  - Italy ... 632–633
  - Ecuador ... xxiii, 391–438
  - Latin America xii–xiv, xviii, xix, xxiii–xxvi; 1, 2–4; 555–560; and the entries under the several Latin American countries. See also "Monroe Doctrine," "Visit of the Secretary of State, etc." "Policy of the United States."
  - Luxemburg ... 702–705
  - Mexico ... xiii, xiv, xviii, xix, 706–986
  - Nicaragua ... xii–xiv, xxvi, 560, 589, 1012–1132, 1043, 1071–1132, 1310 et seq.
  - Panama ... xii, xiv, xxv, 467–489, 599–607, 1133–1264
  - Paraguay ... 1265–1278
  - Peru ... xxiv, 1279–1286
  - Russia ... xxii, 46–159, 1287–1309
  - Salvador ... xii–xiii, 589, 1310–1340
  - Turkey ... xix–xx, 523–541, 1341–1354
  - Venezuela ... xxiii–xxiv, 1355–1364

Reports: Geofroy v. Riggs, 133 U. S. ... 258, 271

Revised Statutes, sections 2760, 2867, and 3067 cited in relation to authority of customs officers ... 1287

Page.

- United States—Continued.
  - Students' Congress, United States delegates sent to Third International, xxiv
  - tariff—
    - law of 1909, sec 2, xv
    - maximun and minimun provisions, xv–xvi
    - most-favored-nation treatment of, xvi
    - recommendations of the President, xvi
  - trade, general observations, vii, x, xv, xvi–xvii, 581
  - treaties. See Treaties.
  - visit of Secretary Knox to Central American and Caribbean countries, xiii, 229, 297, 387, 511, 541, 624, 1109, 1328, 1355
- Universal Postal Union in relation to transmission of habit-forming drugs, 195
- Universities; interchange of professors and students in the American States, 2
- Uruguay, xxiv
  - See also Paraguay; Germany.
- Venezuela:
  - claims under the Washington protocols, payment of, xxiv
  - visit of the Secretary of State to Venezuela, 1355–1364
- Vera Cruz, closure of port of, 900–903
- Veteranista agitation in Cuba; attitude of the United States, 236–242
- Visit of the Secretary of State to—
  - Costa Rica, 229–235
  - Cuba, 297–303
  - Dominican Republic, 387–390
  - Guatemala, 511–520
  - Haiti, 541–547
  - Honduras, 624–631
  - Nicaragua, 1109–1127
  - Panama, 1240–1250
  - Salvador, 1328–1338
  - Venezuela, 1355–1364
- Wireless telegraph:
  - international convention; texts, 444–466
  - treaty rights of the United States in Panama, 1206–1240
- War:
  - materials. See Arms.
  - territorial waters, 1287–1309, 1305
- Wars between—
  - Italy and Turkey, 632
  - Turkey and Montenegro, Serbia, Bulgaria, and Greece, 1341–1354
- War Department. See Mexico: American claims, 969 et seq; see also Peru: "Sanitation of Iquitos," 1281 et seq.
- Washington conventions of 1907, 549, 557, 558, 572, 594, 1310
- Washington, statue of, presented to Mexico by Americans, 905–907
- Zapata swamp concession in Cuba, 309–322

○